<sup>6</sup> "Quick Fitting" is a Rhode Island corporation and is the defendant in 13-33 and the plaintiff in 13-56.

and a motion seeking a finding of spoliation brought by Quick Fitting. All of the motions have been referred to me, some for determination, some for report and recommendation. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(A)-(B).

This report and recommendation addresses four of the pending summary judgment motions.<sup>7</sup> Its principal focus is on the Wai Feng parties' motion for summary judgment challenging Count IV of Quick Fitting's 13-33 counterclaim and Count I of Quick Fitting's 13-56 complaint. 13-56 ECF No. 255.<sup>8</sup> This motion [*6] calls into question the legal enforceability of three categories of challenged clauses contained in the three agreements<sup>9</sup> between various of the parties — a "Liquidated Damages/Contract Penalty" clause, several non-compete clauses and several non-solicitation/confidentiality clauses. For the reasons that follow, I recommend that the Court grant this aspect of the motion because all the challenged clauses are unenforceable as a matter of law. This motion also challenges the sufficiency of Quick Fitting's evidence of breach, including whether it has presented enough to prove damages. I recommend that the Court deny this aspect of the motion because I find that the evidence is adequate for a trial regarding whether there was a breach of the unchallenged restrictive covenants in the Agreements, including whether Quick Fitting is entitled to actual or nominal damages based on any such breach.

The other three summary judgment motions addressed in the report and recommendation challenge the viability of Quick Fitting's claims against Andrew Yung in Count IX of the 13-56 complaint (13-56 ECF NO. 256) and against EFF LLC in all Counts of the 13-56 complaint (13-56 ECF No. 257), as well as the [*7] viability of Quick Fitting's claims in Counts II through VIII, X and XI in the 13-56 complaint (13-56 ECF No. 254). For the reasons that follow, I recommend that Andrew Yung's motion be denied, that EFF LLC's motion be granted and that judgment should enter in favor of the Wai Feng parties and against Quick Fitting as to the state law claims of defamation and fraud and misrepresentation, but be denied as to the claims based on the Rhode Island Uniform Trade Secrets Act (R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-41-1, et seq.), as well as the related claim of civil conspiracy, and be denied as to the claim for injunctive relief.

I. BACKGROUND<sup>10</sup>

---

<sup>7</sup> Not addressed in this report and recommendation is the Wai Feng parties' motion for judgment with respect to unpaid invoices for goods sold and delivered in excess of $400,000, as well as Quick Fitting's claims in 13-56 and counterclaims in 13-33 alleging that it was damaged because the goods covered by the invoices were unmerchantable and did not conform to the parties' agreement. ECF No. 180; 13-56 ECF No. 254. Nor does it address Quick Fitting's cross-motion for summary judgment based on its argument that, due to the Wai Feng parties' inter-company transfers and operational switch from Wai Feng Trading to EFF Inc., neither Wai Feng Trading, which issued the invoices, nor EFF Manufactory, which manufactured the product to fill the purchase orders and shipped the product to Quick Fitting, is entitled to recover. 13-56 ECF No. 259. These matters will be addressed in a separate report and recommendation. In addition, the various motions to strike and for a spoliation finding will be addressed separately.

<sup>8</sup> This motion was filed only in 13-56, instead of 13-33. However, it also challenges the counterclaim in 13-33.

<sup>9</sup> The first of the three agreements in issue is the 2010 License and Supply Agreement ("2010 License/Supply Agreement"). WF Ex. 4. The second is the 2011 Non-Disclosure Agreement ("2011 NDA"). WF Ex. 9. The third is the 2011 License Agreement with Terms of Confidentiality, Non-Disclosure, and Non-Competition ("2011 License Agreement"). WF Ex. 11. Collectively, they are referred to as the "Agreements."

<sup>10</sup> Throughout this report and recommendation, with pin cites to numbered paragraphs or page numbers as appropriate, the Court has used the following protocol for short hand references to the factual record. For citations to the facts and evidence marshaled by the Wai Feng parties, the following convention is used:

- WF SUF # 1.... ECF No. 172;
- WF SUF # 2.... ECF No. 176;
- WF SDF # 1.... ECF No. 175; and
- WF Ex.... ECF No. 172-1 to 172-45.

A. The Industry

This case is focused [*8] on the manufacture and sale of highly engineered plumbing parts and components by entities competing in the plumbing industry; the product in issue is known by the generic term, "push-fit." Push-fit refers to a plumbing technology that allows for the permanent connection of plumbing pipes and fittings simply by pushing them together by hand without the need for soldering or other heat. QF SUF # 1 ¶ 4. The forging, manufacturing, assembly and testing of push-fit requires precise tooling and material standards to be developed and used by the manufacturer. Crompton Aff. # 2 ¶ 35. Plumbing products that can be connected using push-fit are manufactured from metal (such as copper) or synthetic raw materials by an array of manufacturers pursuant to an array of designs; some are sold unbranded and some are branded with a mark and manufactured pursuant to a particular design. WF SUF # 1 ¶ 45; QF SUF # 1 ¶ 4. For example, Mueller Industries ("Mueller") contracted with Quick Fitting for Quick Fitting to supply it with its private label brand name ProLine products, while Quick Fitting ordered ProLine products to be manufactured for Mueller by, inter alia, the Wai Feng parties. Crompton Aff. # [*9] 2 ¶ 55; QF SUF # 3 ¶ 70. Other push-fit brands include Shark Bite and Gator Bite, both of which are manufactured pursuant to product designs that are not the intellectual property of Quick Fitting. WF SUF # 1 ¶ 45. To be sold in the United States, all plumbing products, including push-fit, must conform to local, state and federal regulations, as well as various industry standards and certifications. Crompton Aff. # 2 ¶¶ 40-41.

B. The Wai Feng Parties

Andrew and Jacky Yung are brothers who are originally from China and now live in Ontario, Canada. QF SUF # 1 ¶ 6. Together with their father, Jimmy Yung, they own and operate a network of companies in China, Canada and the United States (namely, Massachusetts) that are engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling and distributing a wide range of plumbing parts and components. Id. ¶¶ 7-8. Their Canadian companies — Wai Mao, acting as the importer, and Wai Feng Trading, acting as the seller and distributor — are engaged in importing, selling and distributing in North America. WF SUF # 1 ¶ 4. At some point in 2011, Wai Feng Trading's operations and employees were shifted to EFF Inc., except that Wai Feng Trading continued the activities [*10] related to this

---

The Wai Feng parties' supporting affidavits are among their exhibits and therefore are not separately listed. For citation to the facts and evidence presented by Quick Fitting, the following convention is used:

- QF SUF # 1.... ECF No. 173;
- QF SUF # 2.... ECF No. 259-3 (13-56);
- QF SUF # 3.... ECF No. 189-1;
- QF SDF # 1.... ECF No. 177;
- QF SDF # 2.... ECF No. 189-4;
- QF SDF # 3.... ECF No. 210-1;
- QF Ex. # 1.... ECF No. 178-1 to 178-32;
- QF Ex. # 2.... ECF No. 259-4 to 259-31 (13-56);
- QF Ex. # 3.... ECF Nos. 190-1 to 192-20, 196-1;
- Crompton Aff. # 1.... ECF. No. 259-2 (13-56);
- Crompton Aff. # 2.... ECF No. 189-2; and
- Ochoa Aff....ECF No. 189-3.

Quick Fitting's affidavits were not among its exhibits and are cited by the name of the affiant.

litigation, principally the issuing of invoices and the collection of payment, as well as the maintenance of bank and accounting operations to perform those functions.<sup>11</sup> QF SUF # 3 ¶ 8.

Originally, the Wai Feng parties' manufacturing was done at CCWFBV, a factory of a Chinese-based company owned by an uncle of Andrew and Jacky Yung. A trade name, W&F Manufacturing, was used to refer to the venture comprising Wai Mao, Wai Feng Trading and CCWFBV. WF SUF # 1 ¶ 5. At some point between 2008 and 2011, manufacturing shifted from the uncle's factory to EFF Manufactory, a Chinese factory owned and operated by Andrew Yung.<sup>12</sup> Id. ¶¶ 6-7. Through EFF Manufactory, the Wai Feng parties manufacture a wide range of plumbing products, including products made from both copper and polyvinyl chloride ("PVC"). In addition, EFF Manufactory purchases components for its plumbing products, such as the retaining and release rings that were made by Cixi Welday. Prior to entering the contractual relationship with Quick Fitting, none of the Wai Feng parties had manufactured or sold push-fit products. QF SUF # 1 ¶ 9.

C. Quick Fitting

Quick Fitting is a Rhode Island company that specializes in the [*11] design, manufacture and distribution of push-fit plumbing fittings and valves made of copper or PVC. QF SUF # 1 ¶¶ 1, 3-4. These are manufactured using design features, materials, sourcing and methods of manufacture that constitute Quick Fitting's intellectual property. QF SUF # 1 ¶ 5. According to the first affidavit signed by David Crompton, President and Chief Executive Officer ("CEO") of Quick Fitting, its push-fit products are sold "nationally," Crompton Aff. # 1 ¶ 19, while Crompton's second affidavit asserts that Quick Fitting sells "throughout North America." Crompton Aff. # 2 ¶¶ 2, 40. Although Quick Fitting has not alleged in these cases that any of its patents were infringed, it claims to have patented certain features of its push-fit product line and strives to protect as trade secrets other features, as well as the material, sourcing and methods of manufacture of its push-fit products. QF SUF # 1 ¶ 5. It is unclear whether the push-fit products in issue that were manufactured by the Wai Feng parties and sold to Quick Fitting all included design features protected by patent or as trade secrets. Compare WF Ex. 23 at 2-3 (Ochoa testifies that all Quick Fitting push-fit products [*12] are patent-protected), with WF Ex. 4 at 1 (2010 License/Supply Agreement states that not all push-fit to be manufactured for Quick Fitting would incorporate Quick Fitting's intellectual property). Quick Fitting's push-fit products are manufactured by various entities (including several manufacturers based in China) with which Quick Fitting has entered into supply agreements requiring manufacture pursuant to Quick Fitting's confidential specifications. WF SUF # 1 ¶ 13. Quick Fitting does not claim to own the exclusive right to manufacture and sell push-fit products. Id. ¶ 45. Quick Fitting's push-fit products compete with other push-fit and plumbing products sold in the United States and North America. WF Ex. 8 at 27.

D. The Buy-Sell Relationship

---

<sup>11</sup> In his declaration, Andrew Yung averred that the Wai Feng parties created EFF Inc. to take over the business of Wai Feng Trading, and that the 2011 NDA was crafted to reflect the change. WF SUF # 1 ¶¶ 14-15. While Quick Fitting disputes the link to the 2011 NDA, it is not disputed that, at least as to the Quick Fitting business, Wai Feng Trading continued as the operative entity. WF Ex. 2 ¶ 13; WF SUF # 1 ¶ 15.

<sup>12</sup> The date of the switch is hotly disputed. Quick Fitting's Crompton avers that he was told by Andrew Yung that manufacturing for Quick Fitting initially would be done at CCWFBV and that he was shown a different factory from what he understood was CCWFBV's factory when he came to observe the operations of EFF Manufactory. Crompton Aff. # 2 ¶¶ 7, 9, 13. Crompton is adamant that EFF Manufactory did not take over manufacturing from CCWFBV until April 2011. Id. ¶¶ 12-13. The Wai Feng parties are equally vehement that they terminated the manufacturing relationship with CCWFBV in 2008, before their first contact with Quick Fitting, and that all manufacturing for Quick Fitting was done at EFF Manufactory. WF SUF # 1 ¶ 6. The date matters to the extent that, if Quick Fitting is right, its proprietary designs were provided to CCWFBV so it could (and did) manufacture product to be sold to Quick Fitting, while if the Wai Feng parties are right, CCWFBV never had access to Quick Fitting's proprietary information because all manufacturing was done by EFF Manufactory.

In late 2009 or early 2010, Crompton of Quick Fitting and Andrew Yung of the Wai Feng parties met at a trade show and began to discuss setting up a supply relationship whereby the Wai Feng parties would manufacture push-fit products to Quick Fitting's specifications for sale to Quick Fitting, which would resell to its customers. QF Ex. #3 E at 10. These discussions resulted in the formation of a business relationship that began in February 2010 [*13] and ended in July 2012. In addition to the three Agreements, the array of purchase orders and invoices limn the supply relationship.

During the period from February 2010 until July 2012, pursuant to purchase orders issued by Quick Fitting to "W&F" or to EFF Manufactory, push-fit products manufactured to Quick Fitting's specifications were delivered to Quick Fitting for resale to its customers. WF SUF # 1 ¶¶ 63-67; QF Ex. # 3 N (ECF No. 196-1). Upon the acceptance of the delivered product,<sup>13</sup> invoices were sent to Quick Fitting either by EFF Manufactory or by Wai Feng Trading, which Quick Fitting paid as agreed through October 2011. WF SUF # 1 ¶¶ 61-63. Quick Fitting partially paid an invoice dated October 5, 2011, made an advance payment in March 2012 of $45,000, and then, in July 2012, stopped paying entirely. It is undisputed that Quick Fitting continued to accept push-fit product for which Wai Feng Trading invoiced Quick Fitting a total of $432,611.47, but for which Quick Fitting did not pay. WF SUF # 1 ¶ 72; QF Ex. # 3 EEE. It is also undisputed that Quick Fitting sold most of this product to its customers, although it claims that some of it had to be repaired or cleaned before it [*14] could be sold and some had to be redirected for sale in geographic regions that had not yet mandated that all plumbing parts must be lead-free; a small portion (20,699 items) was quarantined, allegedly because the items were unsalvageable. WF SUF # 1 ¶¶ 70, 71, 73; WF Ex. 1.

Based on the non-payment of these invoices, the Wai Feng parties initiated this litigation in Canada in August 2012.

II. STANDARD OF REVIEW

Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 56, summary judgment is appropriate if the pleadings, the discovery, disclosure materials and any affidavits show that there is "no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Taylor v. Am. Chemistry Council, 576 F.3d 16, 24 \(1st Cir. 2009\); Commercial Union Ins. Co. v. Pesante, 459 F.3d 34, 37 \(1st Cir. 2006\) (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(c\)). A fact is material only if it possesses the capacity to sway the outcome of the litigation; a dispute is genuine if the evidence about the fact is such that a reasonable jury could resolve the point in favor of the non-moving party. Estrada v. Rhode Island, 594 F.3d 56, 62 \(1st Cir. 2010\). The evidence must be in a form that permits the court to conclude that it will be admissible at trial. See Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323-24, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 \(1986\); see also Rivera-Rivera v. Medina & Medina, Inc., 898 F.3d 77, 89 \(1st Cir. 2018\) ("Hearsay evidence, inadmissible at trial, cannot be considered on a motion for summary judgment.") (alteration omitted). There are no trial-worthy issues unless there is competent [*15] evidence to enable a finding favorable to the nonmoving party. Goldman v. First Nat'l Bank of Bos., 985 F.2d 1113, 1116 \(1st Cir. 1993\).

In ruling on a motion for summary judgment, the court must examine the record evidence in the light most favorable to, and drawing all reasonable inferences in favor of, the nonmoving party. Mu v. Omni Hotels Mgmt. Corp., 882 F.3d 1, 5-6 \(1st Cir. 2018\), review denied, 885 F.3d 52 (1st Cir. 2018). The court must examine "whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to a jury . . . or whether it is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law." Nortel Networks Inc. v. Foundry Networks, Inc., Civil Action No. 01-CV-10442-DPW, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28064, 2003 WL 26476584, at \*5 \(D. Mass. Mar. 24, 2003\) (quoting Paragon Podiatry Lab. v. KLM Labs., 984 F.2d 1182, 1185 \(Fed. Cir. 1993\)). However, if the non-movant is the party with the burden of proof and relies on pyramids of inferences upon inferences, summary judgment is appropriate. See Tyrrell v. Dobbs Inv. Co., 337 F.2d 761, 765 \(10th Cir. 1964\); see also Bendis v. Alexander & Alexander, Inc., 67 F.3d 312 \(10th Cir. 1995\) (citing Tyrrell); Jones v. Bales, 58 F.R.D. 453, 465 \(N.D. Ga. 1972\), aff'd, 480 F.2d 805 (5th Cir. 1973) (same).

---

<sup>13</sup> Some items — a small number per the Wai Feng parties, a large number per Quick Fitting — were rejected and returned. WF SUF # 1 ¶¶ 64-68; QF SDF #1 ¶ 46. The Wai Feng parties do not seek payment for these items.

Because these are diversity cases, Rhode Island law provides the substantive rules of decision. See Erie R.R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188 \(1938\).

III. MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT CHALLENGING ENFORCEABILITY OF CERTAIN RESTRICTIVE CLAUSES

A. The Three Agreements

All of the three Agreements in issue were drafted by Quick Fitting.<sup>14</sup> All were signed by Andrew Yung with no alteration of terms due to negotiation, including no correction corresponding to what the Wai Feng parties now contend [*16] were drafting errors in naming the wrong entities as parties in the first two Agreements. WF SUF # 1 ¶¶ 10, 16-20. All three call for the application of Rhode Island law; two of the three require that any disputes must be litigated in Rhode Island. WF Ex. 4 ¶ 7; WF Ex. 9 ¶ 7; WF Ex. 11 ¶¶ 5.11-5.12.

1. 2010 License/Supply Agreement

Effective as of February 16, 2010, the first of the three Agreements is the 2010 License and Supply Agreement. WF Ex. 4. It names "Quick Fitting" as "Licensor." The identity of the counter-parties, defined as "Licensee," has been, and continues to be, disputed. E.g., Quick Fitting, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 131452, 2015 WL 5719503, at \*2. Briefly, the Agreement recites that it is between Quick Fitting and "W&F Manufacturing"; the latter is "comprised of three divisions" — Wai Mao, Wai Feng Trading and CCWFBV. Id. As Quick Fitting's original verified complaint in 13-56 confirms and as the Court has held, the parties understood that "W&F Manufacturing" was not a company, but simply a trade name used by the Wai Feng parties — "just a name to tell our customer that we have these companies, like that we work with these companies." Id.; see ECF No. 132 at 3, 11-13 (finding W&F Manufacturing "is not an entity").

The three "divisions" [*17] were three separate entities. See Quick Fitting, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 131452, 2015 WL 5719503, at \*2. While Wai Mao and Wai Feng Trading are properly named (as each was to play a critical role in the business relationship as importer and distributor respectively), the Wai Feng parties contend that the naming of CCWFBV was an error committed by Quick Fitting's attorneys that was not noticed by Andrew Yung when he signed the document.<sup>15</sup> Id. According to the Wai Feng parties, prior to 2010, they had abandoned their venture with CCWFBV, which had been manufacturing for them. Instead, all manufacturing (including all manufacturing of product ordered by Quick Fitting) was done at EFF Manufactory, which should have been named in the 2010 License/Supply Agreement. WF Ex. 1 ¶¶ 11-13. Quick Fitting concedes that it drafted the document, but insists that it was told by Andrew Yung that manufacturing was to be done at CCWFBV, which it was, Quick Fitting claims, until April 2011 when it finally shifted to the Wai Feng parties' new manufacturing entity, EFF Manufactory. QF SDF # 1 ¶¶ 6, 18-19 & 60; Crompton Aff. # 1 ¶ 4; see WF SUF # 1 ¶ 59; QF SDF # 1 ¶ 59.<sup>16</sup> To avoid confusion, the disputed "Licensee[s]" in the 2010 License/Supply Agreement will be referred to as [*18] the "2010 WF Contracting parties."

<sup>14</sup> The third of the three, the 2011 License Agreement, provides that construction of the language against the drafter is waived. WF Ex. 11 ¶ 5.18.

<sup>15</sup> Andrew Yung signed the 2010 License/Supply Agreement without authorization to execute agreements on behalf of CCWFBV. Because he signed the 2010 License/Supply Agreement on behalf of an entity for which he lacked authority to sign, and because the Agreement subjects signatories to the jurisdiction of this Court, Andrew Yung's defense of lack of personal jurisdiction was overruled, making him a party to 13-56 in his personal capacity. Quick Fitting, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 131452, 2015 WL 5719503, at \*7. Andrew Yung's separate summary judgment motion challenging his joinder is addressed infra.

<sup>16</sup> See n.12 supra.

The portion of the 2010 License/Supply Agreement that addresses the supply relationship contemplates that the 2010 WF Contracting parties will manufacture, and Quick Fitting "will purchase," certain "Finished Products," which are listed on Schedule 1 as consisting of "[a]ll sizes and variations" of push-fit fittings, valves, controls, supply line, retail packaged products and accessories, as well as "PEX barb fittings." WF Ex. 4 at 1, 8 (Schedule 1). Importantly, the 2010 License/Supply Agreement expressly provides that the Finished Products "may, or may not include . . . intellectual property of [Quick Fitting]." Id. at 1. Nevertheless, all Finished Products were to be manufactured "for exclusive distribution by Quick Fitting." Id. The 2010 License/Supply Agreement does not address the price of the Finished Products nor does it reference payment or delivery terms. It does require that the Finished Products must comply with applicable laws, regulations, specified testing standards and certifications and must be free of defects, dirt, spotting or discoloration. Id. ¶ 4(b, d). The 2010 WF Contracting parties were obliged to replace non-compliant [*19] products. Id. ¶ 4(d).

In the provisions of the Agreement addressing the licensing arrangement, the 2010 License/Supply Agreement provides that Quick Fitting has intellectual property (including patents, and related concepts, processes and inventions) that it may in its sole discretion provide to the 2010 WF Contracting parties in connection with the manufacture of certain of the "Finished Products." Id. at 1. The Finished Products that incorporate the designs and other intellectual property of Quick Fitting are the "Licensed Product." Id. The license permits the 2010 WF Contracting parties to use its push-fit patents in connection with the manufacture of Finished Products "containing the Licensed Product." Id. at 1, ¶ 1. Ancillary to the license, the 2010 License/Supply Agreement contains certain unchallenged restrictions on the use and disclosure of the information provided by Quick Fitting. In so doing, it distinguishes information that is not proprietary to Quick Fitting from "proprietary and confidential" information. Id. ¶ 3. As defined, "Information" is anything provided by Quick Fitting to the 2010 WF Contracting parties, whether or not proprietary; the 2010 WF Contracting parties are barred [*20] from using Information except to manufacture and distribute Finished Products for sale to Quick Fitting. Id. at 1, ¶ 3, 4(b). Only when Quick Fitting provides Information to the 2010 WF Contracting parties that is "designated in writing as being proprietary and confidential," are the 2010 WF Contracting parties also barred from disclosing such Information to any third party. Id. ¶ 3. Excluded from these limits on use and disclosure is any information that is publicly available or that was already known by, was in the possession of, or had been developed by the 2010 WF Contracting parties. Id. ¶ 3.

In addition to the exclusivity provision barring the 2010 WF Contracting parties from selling the Finished Products to any entity other than Quick Fitting, Id. ¶ 4(b), the Agreement also has a clause stating that Quick Fitting "agrees to purchase the Licensed Product described in the attached Purchase Schedule only from [the 2010 WF Contracting parties]." Id. ¶ 4(c). Despite this clause, throughout the period of the parties' course of dealing, Quick Fitting consistently purchased push-fit from a wide array of suppliers. WF SUF # 1 ¶¶ 12-13. Further, this arguable exclusivity clause relates only to [*21] "Licensed Product," rather than "Finished Product"; moreover, the clause references an "attached Purchase Schedule," yet the Agreement does not have an attachment so labeled.<sup>17</sup>

The termination clause (¶ 5) in the body of the 2010 License/Supply Agreement provides that it continues until terminated; termination without cause requires 120 days' notice, but termination with cause needs only thirty days' notice; and the Agreement may be immediately terminated by a breach of the duties to manufacture to specification or to manufacture exclusively for Quick Fitting.<sup>18</sup> WF Ex. 4 ¶ 5(a-d). Post-termination, the license lapses and all use of Information provided by Quick Fitting (whether or not proprietary) must stop. Id. ¶ 6.

<sup>17</sup> An identical clause came under review in another one of the cases currently pending in this District in which Quick Fitting relies on restrictive covenants in an agreement to avoid the accusation by a Chinese supplier that Quick Fitting had failed to pay for manufactured product. Quick Fitting, Inc. v. Zhejiang Xingxin Aite Copper Mrg., Co., C.A. No. 11-463WES. In that case, the Court found the clause to be ambiguous in the context of a discovery dispute. Text Order of Dec. 27, 2016 (finding "apparent ambiguity" of "exclusivity obligation"). See also Yuhuan Jinquan Copper Co., Ltd v. Quick Fitting, C.A. No. 14-243WES.

<sup>18</sup> The parties dispute when and how the 2010 License/Supply Agreement was terminated. The Wai Feng parties contend that they terminated it for cause (based on Quick Fitting's breach) through notice given by their Canadian solicitor on December 7, 2012. ECF No. 223 at 5; ECF No. 223-1 at 1. Quick Fitting disputes the effectiveness of the Wai Feng parties' letter, claiming that it was not written by the right entities. ECF No. 228 at 7-8. For its part, Quick Fitting now contends that the 2010

The Wai Feng parties do not challenge the validity of any of the restrictive clauses described above. "Schedule 2," which appears on the last page of the 2010 License/Supply Agreement, is a different story. Id. at 9.

While undisputedly part of the Agreement,<sup>19</sup> Schedule 2 is unsigned and is not referenced as an attachment in the body of the 2010 License/Supply Agreement. [*22] It is titled "Purchase Volume and Contract Term" and appears to establish the minimum purchase volumes that Quick Fitting must buy, with the duty imposed on Quick Fitting to "update volume demands on a quarterly basis to assist the Licensee in production planning and performance." Id. The record does not reveal whether Quick Fitting complied with this duty.

Consistent with the disconnect between Schedule 2 and the rest of the Agreement, Schedule 2 contradicts the body of the 2010 License/Supply Agreement in several key respects. First, contradicting the ambiguous mutual exclusivity provision in ¶ 4(c), Schedule 2 expressly specifies that exclusivity is unilateral in that the 2010 WF Contracting parties are bound by exclusivity but Quick Fitting is not. Id. at 9 ("Licensor manufactures on its own and through its other contract suppliers."). Second, Schedule 2 establishes a completely different term for the length of the relationship: rather than open-ended duration, subject to termination on notice, Schedule 2 provides for a term of "a forty-eight (48) month period" from the date of execution. Id. Third, Schedule 2 contains two clauses on non-competition and non-solicitation/ confidentiality, [*23] both of which are starkly different from the protections baked into the body of the 2010 License/Supply Agreement. These two clauses are the only ones in the 2010 License/Supply Agreement that are challenged by the Wai Feng parties.

The non-competition clause in Schedule 2 provides that the 2010 WF Contracting parties "may not compete with [Quick Fitting], directly or indirectly in any market [Quick Fitting] may serve[,] as well as that the 2010 WF Contracting parties "may not manufacture directly or through a third party any push-fit (push connect) fittings for any party outside of [Quick Fitting]." Id. The non-competition clause has no time or geographic limit; nor is it restricted to push-fit products that incorporate Quick Fitting's proprietary or non-proprietary information; nor is it limited to push-fit products, as Quick Fitting "may serve" other plumbing parts or component markets.

Schedule 2's confidentiality/non-solicitation clause is also sweeping. It provides that the 2010 WF Contracting parties "may never contact, either directly or indirectly, any customer or potential customer of [Quick Fitting], whether indicated below,<sup>20</sup> or unknown to [the 2010 WF Contracting parties], [*24] for any purpose." Id. This clause is unlimited in time, geography and subject matter scope. Because it is undisputed that the Wai Feng parties were established as manufacturers and sellers of plumbing products before they entered into the Quick Fitting relationship, see WF SUF # 1 ¶¶ 3-4, this confidentiality clause prohibits them from contacting even their own customers.

The severance clause in ¶ 9(f) of body of the 2010 License/Supply Agreement provides that, "[s]hould all or any portion of any provision of this Agreement be held unenforceable or invalid for any reason, the remaining portions or provisions shall be unaffected." WF Ex. 4 ¶ 9(f).

License/Supply Agreement was terminated by operation of law in May 2011, when the parties entered into two new agreements, the 2011 NDA and License Agreement. This proposition is contradicted by Crompton's Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6) testimony that the 2011 Agreements were signed to add the name of EFF Manufactory, which had become the manufacturing arm of the Wai Feng parties, and that, otherwise the 2010 Agreement continued: "So the manufacturing arm's name had changed while everything else hadn't. So everything else stayed in place, and we created a new agreement surrounding the new manufacturing name." ECF No. 206-5 at 12.

<sup>19</sup> The Wai Feng parties do not challenge the authenticity of Schedule 2 as part of the 2010 License/Supply Agreement, although they do challenge the enforceability of some of its content.

<sup>20</sup> Nothing is "indicated below," leaving this phrase of the confidentiality clause meaningless. Quick Fitting has admitted that it never provided the Wai Feng Parties with a list of customers or even prospective customers to which this prohibition would apply. WF SUF # 1 ¶ 82. In his Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6) deposition, when Crompton was asked whether Quick Fitting ever provided this list of the customers covered by this prohibition, he testified: "I don't know why we would. We would never have been required to. That would have never been anything we would have done with them. They were precluded from selling push fit, period, whether it was customers or not." ECF No. 206-7 at 2; see n.22 infra.

2. 2011 NDA

Fifteen months into the parties' relationship, on May 4, 2011, the 2011 NDA was executed. WF Ex. 9. The second of the three Agreements, it neither confers a license nor is a supply agreement, but simply imposes non-disclosure obligations. Like the 2010 License/Supply Agreement, there is confusion regarding what entity was meant to be the proper party on the Wai Feng parties' side. Briefly, it names EFF LLC, the Massachusetts entity that had little to do with the relationship with Quick Fitting; the Wai Feng parties say it [*25] should have named EFF Inc.; while Crompton testified that it should have been "a new company, 'EFF,' that was located in 'Toronto and in China' and that the new company would be taking over the manufacturing operations formerly handled by the 'W&F Manufacturing' factory."<sup>21</sup> Crompton Aff. # 2 ¶¶ 12-13.

The substance of the 2011 NDA is also limited. In scope, it operates solely to protect confidential information ("Information") that was provided by Quick Fitting to the counter-party (whoever it might be) about its push-fit products for the sole purpose of procuring cost estimates for specified components. WF Ex. 9 ¶ I(B). For Information to be protected by the 2011 NDA, Quick Fitting could, but was not obligated, to label it as confidential. Id. ¶ I(3). The 2011 NDA barred the recipient from disclosing Information or using it to compete against Quick Fitting. Id. ¶ I(1).

Only one clause in the 2011 NDA is challenged as overbroad and unenforceable. It is an outright ban on any "contact, communicat[ion] or negotiat[ion] with any competitor, supplier, customer or prospect" of Quick Fitting; this clause has no time or geographic limit and no direct relationship to the protection of the confidential [*26] information covered by the 2011 NDA. Id. ¶ I(1)(h). Unlike the analogous clause in the 2010 License/Supply Agreement, the 2011 NDA does require that the identity of the companies with which contact is forever prohibited must be "readily known[ or] disclosed by Quick Fitting or made known to the Recipient by any communication" from Quick Fitting.<sup>22</sup> Id.

The 2011 NDA arguably survived only three weeks in that it is expressly "supercede[d] and replace[d]" by the 2011 License Agreement. WF Ex. 11 ¶ 1.2. It is silent regarding the effect of a judicial finding that any of its terms are invalid or unenforceable.

3. 2011 License Agreement

Three weeks later, on May 31, 2011, the third agreement, the 2011 License Agreement, was executed. This one correctly names EFF Manufactory as the counter-party. Unlike the 2010 License/Supply Agreement, but like the 2011 NDA, the 2011 License Agreement is not a supply agreement.<sup>23</sup> Rather, it simply licenses EFF Manufactory to receive Quick Fitting's intellectual property<sup>24</sup> regarding its push-fit line of products "exclusively for the purpose of providing cost estimates and business proposals for the manufacture and supply of certain products and component parts [*27] of products in the hope that Quick Fitting will purchase said products and components [sic] parts from [EFF Manufactory]." WF Ex. 11 at 1. It also provides a non-exclusive license to EFF Manufactory to use listed patents, trademarks, and drawings and similar materials belonging to Quick Fitting for "the manufacture and supply . . . to Quick Fitting." Id. ¶ 3.1. It leaves Quick Fitting free to license any other entity. Id. ¶ 3.2. It does not oblige Quick Fitting to place any orders: "Quick Fitting makes no representation that it will enter into a relationship; and is under no obligation to enter into any further agreement." Id. ¶ 5.2. Although many of its terms are keyed to "termination," the 2011 License Agreement has no termination clause; under Rhode Island law, this means that it is terminable at will on reasonable notice. See Chapman v. Vendresca, 426 A.2d 262, 264 n.2 (R.I. 1981) ("when contract does not specify time within which notice of termination must be given, terminating party has reasonable time") (citing Coopersmith v. Isherwood, 219 Md. 455, 150 A.2d 243, 247-48 (Md. 1959)).

<sup>21</sup> The Court has previously addressed the confusion over which EFF entity is named in the 2011 NDA. *Quick Fitting, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 131452, 2015 WL 5719503, at *3* (naming of EFF LLC in 2011 NDA "appears to be wrong . . . EFF LLC apparently has nothing to do with the business arrangement with Quick Fitting.").

<sup>22</sup> It is undisputed that Quick Fitting never provided any of the Wai Feng parties with a list of entities it considered to be covered by this contact ban. WF SUF # 1 ¶ 82. Quick Fitting counters that it regularly communicated with the Wai Feng parties regarding the identity at least of its "customers, markets, and marketing efforts," QF SDF # 1 ¶ 82, although it makes no mention of who is in the class of "competitor [or] supplier," or how the counter-party to the 2011 NDA would have known what entities were its competitors and suppliers. WF Ex. 9 ¶ I(1)(h); see n.20 supra.

<sup>23</sup> Although EFF Manufactory is identified in the preamble to the Agreement as the "Supplier," and although Quick Fitting's briefs repeatedly refer to the 2011 License Agreement as a "supply" agreement, e.g., ECF No. 193 at 5 ("2011 License and Supply Agreement") (emphasis added), it is a license agreement with restrictive covenants that contemplates the possibility of a supply relationship, but expressly eschews forming one. WF Ex. 11 ¶ 5.2.

The 2011 License Agreement contains a lengthy Section II, which deals with EFF Manufactory's treatment of Quick Fitting's "confidential information," as defined in ¶ 1.3. WF Ex. 11 ¶¶ 2.1-2.8. The Wai [*28] Feng parties do not challenge any of the clauses contained in Section II, which bar any disclosure or use of the confidential information, except as necessary to manufacture push-fit to be sold to Quick Fitting. Section IV of the 2011 License Agreement is headed "Terms of Non-Competition." Id. ¶¶ 4.1-4.7. Its first two clauses focus on the confidential intellectual property covered by the Agreement, preventing EFF Manufactory from using it to "compete with, defame, hinder, or cause harm" to Quick Fitting. Id. ¶ 4.1. They also prevent EFF Manufactory from selling products "utilizing" the confidential information covered by the Agreement to any party other than Quick Fitting as directed by Quick Fitting. Id. ¶¶ 4.1-4.2. The Wai Feng parties do not challenge these two clauses either. Rather, the motion is focused on three of the remaining clauses, which appear in Section IV.

The first challenged clause is at ¶ 4.6 and titled, "Liquidated Damages/Contract Penalty." It provides that any breach of any clause in the non-competition section of the Agreement shall result in a contract penalty of $500,000, in addition to any damages Quick Fitting is able to prove. Id. ¶ 4.6. During his Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6) deposition, [*29] Crompton testified that he did not know how the amount in the "Liquidated Damages/Contract Penalty" clause was determined, except that the amount was chosen to be "punitive." WF Ex. 8 at 29-30. After the Wai Feng parties' challenge to this clause was filed, Crompton executed his second affidavit, in which he averred to a changed understanding that the clause reflected an estimate of business losses. Crompton Aff. # 2 ¶¶ 15, 33-37.

The second challenged clause is the non-compete in ¶ 4.3. WF Ex. 11 ¶ 4.3. It permanently bans EFF Manufactory from ever, "directly or indirectly through others, compet[ing] with Quick Fitting in the design, manufacture, supply, sale, or distribution of push-fit connection valves, fittings, supply line or controls." Id. Infinite in duration and worldwide in geographic scope, ¶ 4.3 is not limited to push-fit products incorporating either Quick Fitting's intellectual property or its non-proprietary information — it effectively bars EFF Manufactory from ever entering any push-fit market anywhere, including from manufacturing pursuant to the specifications of another owner of push-fit designs, as well as from developing its own push-fit designs. In his Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6) deposition, [*30] Crompton described his view of the non-competition clause:

It would be my understanding that [the Wai Feng parties] were precluded from selling anything related to push fit products to any potential customers or competitors in North America, period.

WF SUF # 1 ¶ 75 (citing WF Ex. 17 at 7-8).<sup>25</sup>

<sup>24</sup> The 2011 License Agreement defines the covered intellectual property as "all information provided by Quick Fitting to [EFF Manufactory] . . . pertaining to Quick Fitting quick connection valves, fitting and controls," as well as to its designs, product development, customers, prospects, costs, and financial information. WF Ex. 11 ¶ 1.3. It also includes the identities of customers and prospective customers of Quick Fitting "at any time." Id. It does not include information that is generally publicly available or information that was provided to EFF Manufactory by a third party or information that was independently developed by EFF Manufactory. Id. ¶¶ 1.3-1.5.

<sup>25</sup> No limitation to North America appears in the Agreement. While Quick Fitting has not argued that its restrictive clauses should be interpreted as limited to North America based on this testimony, the Court notes that it could not, in that a party cannot retroactively make the terms of the non-compete provision palatable by now asserting that it did not plan on enforcing the Third is the challenged non-solicitation/confidentiality clause in ¶ 4.4. WF Ex. 11 ¶ 4.4. Unlike the other challenged restraints, it is limited in duration to three years following the termination of the 2011 License Agreement. Id. During that three-year period, EFF Manufactory is barred from any contact or communication with any "customer or prospective customer of Quick Fitting" or with the representatives of such entities, including (but not limited to) any known to be such by EFF Manufactory. Id. And, if any such "Prohibited Party" or its representative should contact EFF Manufactory, EFF Manufactory must not respond but must forward such communication to Quick Fitting. Id. ¶ 4.5. This ban on all communication and contact is not limited as to subject matter.

The 2011 License Agreement includes a provision that mandates how a court should proceed in the event that [*31] any of the clauses are held invalid or unenforceable: "such invalidity shall not affect the validity or operation of any other provision and such invalid provision shall be deemed to be severed from the Agreement." Id. ¶ 5.21.

B. Law and Analysis Applicable to Enforceability of Restrictive Clauses

When contract language is clear and unambiguous, summary judgment is an appropriate vehicle for resolving contract interpretation disputes. See Mallane v. Holyoke Mut. Ins. Co., 658 A.2d 18, 20 (R.I. 1995); Elliott v. S.D. Warren Co., 134 F.3d 1, 9 (1st Cir. 1998). "Contract interpretation, including whether any ambiguities exist in the disputed contractual terms, is generally a question of law for the [c]ourt." Doe v. W. New England Univ., 228 F. Supp. 3d 154, 170 (D. Mass. 2017); see Rotelli v. Catanzaro, 686 A.2d 91, 94 (R.I. 1996); Kelly v. Tillotson-Pearson, Inc., 840 F. Supp. 935, 944 (D.R.I. 1994) (quoting In re Navigation Tech. Corp., 880 F.2d 1491, 1495 (1st Cir. 1989)). When a clause is clear and unambiguous on its face, the role of the court is to enforce it as written. Kelly, 840 F. Supp. at 944 (quoting Aetna Casualty & Sur. Co. v. Graziano, 587 A.2d 916, 917 (R.I. 1991)). "In determining whether or not a particular contract is ambiguous, the court should read the contract 'in its entirety, giving words their plain, ordinary, and usual meaning.'" T.G. Plastics Trading Co. Inc. v. Toray Plastics (Am.), Inc., 958 F. Supp. 2d 315, 321-22 (D.R.I. 2013) (quoting Haviland v. Simmons, 45 A.3d 1246, 1258 (R.I. 2012)). "[A] contract is ambiguous only when it is reasonably and clearly susceptible of more than one interpretation." Rotelli, 686 A.2d at 94.

If an ambiguity is found and the extrinsic evidence of the intent of the parties is factually disputed, summary judgment is inappropriate and the proper construction of the contract is a question of fact for the fact finder. Toray, 958 F. Supp. 2d at 322; see OfficeMax Inc. v. Sousa, 773 F. Supp. 2d 190, 216 (D. Me. 2011) (court [*32] "may look to extrinsic evidence of the intent of the parties") (quoting Villas by the Sea Owners Ass'n v. Garrity, 2000 ME 48, 748 A.2d 457, 461 (Me. 2000)). However, even if a contract is ambiguous, when there are no facts in dispute, the interpretation of a contract is a question of law for the court. OfficeMax Inc., 773 F. Supp. 2d at 216. "The preferable approach is to interpret a contract in a manner which will give effect to all of its provisions," and "where two clauses of an agreement appear to be in direct conflict, it is the duty of the court to reconcile the two clauses to give effect to the whole of the instrument." Jadwin v. Cty. of Kern, 610 F. Supp. 2d 1129, 1191 (E.D. Cal. 2009) (quoting In re Steven A., 15 Cal. App. 4th 754, 771, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 576 (1993); In re Marriage of Whitney, 71 Cal. App. 3d 179, 182, 139 Cal. Rptr. 324 (1977)).

1. "Liquidated Damages/Contract Penalty" Clause

The clause challenged as an improper penalty is titled "Liquidated Damages/Contract Penalty," and set out in ¶ 4.6 of the 2011 License Agreement. In full, it provides:

Liquidated Damages/Contract Penalty. Supplier acknowledges and agrees that any violation or breach of this Non-Competition section of this Agreement: (i) shall result in a contract penalty against supplier in an amount provision as it is written; the acceptance of such a position would effectively allow clauses that violate public policy to flourish until confronted by the prospect of litigation and the reality of unenforceability. See Webster Ins., Inc. v. Levine, No. X06CV074016194S, 2009 Conn. Super. LEXIS 3431, 2009 WL 5698072, at *3 (Conn. Super. Ct. Apr. 29, 2009).

---

not less than five-hundred-thousand dollars and zero cents ($500,000) (the "Contract Penalty"), payable to Quick Fitting within thirty (30) days after invoicing of this amount to Supplier; (ii) that Quick Fitting is authorized to withhold all [*33] or any portion of the Contract Penalty from any payments otherwise due to Supplier until such Contract Penalty is fully paid; and (iii) that the Contract Penalty amount shall be in addition to and shall not reduce the amount of actual damages Quick Fitting is able to prove for any breach or violation of this or any other section of this Agreement.

WF Ex. 11 ¶ 4.6. It appears only in the third of the three Agreements, in which EFF Manufactory is the only party for the Wai Feng parties. Id. The content of ¶ 4.6 is not ambiguous — it crisply and clearly provides that EFF Manufactory must pay a "contract penalty" of $500,000 in the event of any violation or breach of any of the clauses in Section IV of the Agreement. The Section IV clauses<sup>26</sup> include: (1) the ban on using Quick Fitting's confidential information to compete with Quick Fitting (¶ 4.1); (2) the ban on making push-fit with Quick Fitting designs for sale to third parties (¶ 4.2); (3) the absolute ban on ever competing with Quick Fitting by designing, manufacturing or selling any push-fit product (without regard to whether any Quick Fitting confidential information is used) anywhere in the world (¶ 4.3); and (4) the absolute ban [*34] on any communication regarding any topic with any customer or prospective customer of Quick Fitting (who may well be pre-existing customers of the Wai Feng parties) for three years following the termination of the Agreement (¶ 4.4). The "Liquidated Damages/Contract Penalty" clause also absolves Quick Fitting from paying what it owes EFF Manufactory until the "Contract Penalty" is paid in full. Id. ¶ 4.6. Confirming that it is not in lieu of damages, ¶ 4.6 provides that "the Contract Penalty amount shall be in addition to and shall not reduce the amount of actual damages Quick Fitting is able to prove for any breach or violation of this or any other section of this Agreement." Id.

During Quick Fitting's October 27, 2015, Fed. R. Civ. P. 30\(b\)\(6\) deposition, Crompton testified that he did not know how the amount in the Liquidated Damages/Contract Penalty clause was determined. WF Ex. 8 at 28-29. He stated, "I can't speak to that[,] and offered, "[i]t was put in there to be punitive to really thwart them, deter them from doing it." Id. at 28-30 ("the number is picked as a deterrent") (emphasis added). Crompton directly contradicted this Fed. R. Civ. P. 30\(b\)\(6\) testimony in his second affidavit, which was filed with Quick Fitting's opposition [*35] to the motion challenging the clause as an unenforceable penalty. In this changed testimony, he avers that the penalty actually represented an "estimate of our loss of business or loss of business profitability over time" that Quick Fitting would incur if one of its contracting manufacturers breached its contractual obligations, as well as the cost of finding a new manufacturer. Crompton Aff. # 2 ¶¶ 15, 33-37. Crompton's second affidavit alters his earlier description of the clause as merely punitive, asserting, "[a]ny reference to the word 'punitive' in deposition testimony was intended to reflect my expectation that the amount would be significant enough to offset the aspects of harm and costs described here, which we anticipated but found difficult to estimate." Id. ¶ 37.

Rhode Island law distinguishes contractual penalties from liquidated damages. The former are unenforceable as a matter of public policy, while the latter may be enforceable if the harm caused by the breach is difficult to estimate and the amount fixed is a reasonable forecast of actual harm. See ADP Marshall, Inc. v. Noresco, LLC, 710 F. Supp. 2d 197, 234-35 \(D.R.I. 2010\) (citing Howarth v. Feeney, P.C. No. 86-3543, 1992 R.I. Super. LEXIS 18, 1992 WL 813502, at \*3 n.2 \(R.I. Super. Jan. 15, 1992\)) ("a sum of money . . . to be forfeited in case of breach, may be either a penalty or liquidated damages"), [*36] amended, No. C.A. No. 80-265, 1992 R.I. Super. LEXIS 19, 1992 WL 813534 \(R.I. Super. Mar. 17, 1992\); Psaty & Fuhrman v. Hous. Auth. of City of Providence, 76 R.I. 87, 68 A.2d 32, 38-39 \(R.I. 1949\) (if contract for liquidated damages amounts to imposition of penalty, it is unenforceable; "we consider the provision for liquidated damages . . . as coercive in nature and therefore in substance the imposition of a penalty"). To differentiate a true liquidated damages clause from an unenforceable contract penalty, Rhode Island courts rely on three criteria: first, the injury caused by the breach must be difficult accurately to estimate; second, the parties must intend to provide for damages rather than a penalty; and third, the sum stipulated must be a reasonable pre-estimate of the loss. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. R.I. Elec. Protective Co., No. 78-1761, 1979 WL 200238, at \*1 \(R.I. Super. Jan. 5, 1979\). Reinforcing the importance of this judicially-created policy, the Rhode Island legislature adopted the same principle when it enacted the Rhode Island Uniform Commercial Code. See R.I. Gen. Laws § 6A-2-718 ("[d]amages for breach by either party may be liquidated in the agreement but only at an amount which is reasonable in light of the anticipated or actual harm caused by the breach"). To be enforceable, the purpose of the clause must be to compensate for loss, not to punish. Allstate Interiors & Exteriors, Inc. v. Stonestreet Constr., LLC, 907 F. Supp. 2d 216, 247 \(D.R.I. 2012\). The label placed on the clause by the drafter is not dispositive — a self-described liquidated damages clause must be condemned if it [*37] is punitive in effect. Omni-Combined W.E., LLC v. 20/20 Commc'nns, Inc., No. PB 10-2530, 2012 R.I. Super. LEXIS 78, 2012 WL 1957733, at \*4 \(R.I. Super. May 18, 2012\) (accelerated rent clauses are enforceable if "they do not constitute a penalty").

---

<sup>26</sup> Two of these Section IV clauses (¶¶ 4.3 and 4.4) are challenged as unenforceable. The remainder are not challenged.

Courts in other states applying the same principles have declined to enforce a fixed penalty because such a set sum can have no rational relationship to anticipated actual damages. Willard Packaging Co. v. Javier, 169 Md. App. 109, 899 A. 2d 940, 955-56 \(Md. Ct. Spec. App. 2006\) (fixed sum penalty — $50,000 — is unenforceable); see XCO Intern. Inc. v. Pac. Scientific Co., 369 F.3d 998, 1004 \(7th Cir. 2004\) (if sanction is fixed and outsized, such as "$500,000, period," it is highly likely to be prohibited a penalty). A fixed sum is particularly vulnerable to condemnation as a penalty if the same sanction for breach of varying provisions in an agreement is imposed without regard to the differing injury that each breach might inflict. Monsanto Co. v. McFarling, 363 F.3d 1336, 1346 \(Fed. Cir. 2004\) (applying Missouri law and stating, "[t]his fixed rule of Missouri contract law is not unusual. Variations on this anti-one-size rule are applied in a number of jurisdictions"); United States v. J.C. Martin Lumber Co., 246 F.2d 58, 62 \(5th Cir. 1957\) (applying Mississippi law and labeling a contractual damages clause a penalty because it provided for double payment and "without discrimination, provides the same penalty for leaving marked trees uncut as for cutting unmarked tress, and, as to trees injured through carelessness, [*38] provides the same penalty without regard to the extent in each case of the injury").

Another important characteristic of an unenforceable penalty is the ability of the non-breaching party to recover both the so-called liquidated damages, as well as actual damages resulting from the breach. See Nat'l Fitness Ctr., Inc. v. Atlanta Fitness, Inc., 902 F. Supp. 2d 1098, 1108-09 \(E.D. Tenn. 2012\) (where "liquidated damages" in license agreement is fixed sum that does not supplant other available remedies, it acts as a penalty and may not be enforced); Webster Ins., 2009 Conn. Super. LEXIS 3431, 2009 WL 5698072, at \*2 ("contract provision that authorizes the non-breaching party to recover both actual damages and all revenues earned as a result of the breach constitutes an invalid penalty, unenforceable as a matter of public policy"). And if a liquidated damages provision is "designed to coerce performance by punishing default[]," any doubt as to its character must be resolved by finding it to be an unenforceable penalty. Captain D's, LLC v. Arif Enters., Inc. No. 3:09-00809, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129242, 2010 WL 5060289, at \*9 \(M.D. Tenn. Dec. 6, 2010\) (quoting Guesthouse Int'l Franchise Sys., Inc. v. British Am. Props. MacArthur Inn, LLC, No. 3:07-0814, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8570, 2009 WL 278214, at \*9-10 \(M.D. Tenn. Feb. 5, 2009\)).

The validity of a liquidated damages clause is a pure question of law for the court. See Clark-Fitzpatrick, Inc./Franki Found. v. Gill, 652 A.2d 440, 443 \(R.I. 1994\) ("Contract interpretation is a question of law; it is only when contract terms are ambiguous [*39] that construction of terms becomes a question of fact."); Wholey Boiler Works v. Lewis, 45 R.I. 441, 123 A. 595, 598 \(R.I. 1924\) ("The question whether a deposit or other payment is to be regarded as a penalty or liquidated damages is to be decided upon consideration of the provisions of the whole agreement, in view of the circumstances of each case; and the intention of the parties as thus disclosed is the decisive test."); see also Olcott Intern. & Co. v. Micro Data Base Sys., Inc., 793 N.E. 2d 1063, 1077 \(Ct. App. Ind. 2003\) ("the question whether a liquidated damages clause is valid, or whether it constitutes an unenforceable penalty, is a pure question of law for the court"). The party challenging the enforceability of a liquidated damages clause has the burden of proving that it is a penalty. Honey Dew Assocs. v. M & K Food Corp., 241 F.3d 23, 27 \(1st Cir. 2001\).

Applying these principles to the 2011 License Agreement is an easy task in light of the clarity of ¶ 4.6. Apart from the heading, Quick Fitting has drafted the operative clause such that it unambiguously amounts to a penalty. For starters, the $500,000 consequence is an outsized sum, XCO Intern. Inc., 369 F.3d at 1004, which is expressly defined as a "Contract Penalty," in that the clause expressly recites that "any violation or breach . . . shall result in a contract penalty . . . in an amount not less than [$500,000]." WF Ex. 11 ¶ 4.6. It clearly operates as a penalty because it [*40] is a fixed one-size-fits-all consequence applied for breach of an array of non-competition clauses, Monsanto Co., 363 F.3d at 1346, to be imposed without regard to whether the harm caused by a breach is substantial or mild, XCO Intern. Inc., 369 F.3d at 1004. Also pellucid is that it is not intended as an estimate of hard-to-calculate damages. To the contrary, ¶ 4.6 expressly provides that "the Contract Penalty amount shall be in addition to and shall not reduce the amount of actual damages Quick Fitting is able to prove for any breach or violation of this or any other section of this Agreement." WF Ex. 11 ¶ 4.6 (emphasis added). The clause's imposition of a penalty that also permits recovery of actual damages is further reason why it must be condemned as an outright penalty. See Psaty, 68 A.2d at 39; Nat'l Fitness Ctr., Inc., 902 F. Supp. 2d at 1108-09. Accordingly, in reliance on the plain and unambiguous text of ¶ 4.6, I find that Quick Fitting attempted to impose a draconian penalty contrary to the public policy of Rhode Island, so that this Court should hold that ¶ 4.6 is unenforceable.

A lingering issue is whether the ambiguity in the heading — "Liquidated Damages/Contract Penalty" — somehow saves the day. This heading seems to be an attempt by the drafter to straddle the fence between liquidated damages and penalty, [*41] while actually crafting text that is unambiguously a penalty. There are several problems with this proposition. First, Quick Fitting has not asserted this argument; indeed, it does not contend that any aspect of ¶ 4.6 is ambiguous. Second, traditional principles of construction stipulate that headings cannot alter the plain meaning of the text. See Bhd. of R. R. Trainmen v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 331 U.S. 519, 527-28, 67 S. Ct. 1387, 91 L. Ed. 1646 \(1947\) ("[H]eadings and titles are not meant to take the place of the detailed provisions of the text. Nor are they necessarily designed to be a reference guide or a synopsis."); Lyons v. Ga.-Pac. Corp. Salaried Emps. Ret. Plan, 221 F.3d 1235, 1246 \(11th Cir. 2000\) ("reliance upon headings to determine the meaning of a statute is not a favored method of statutory construction"); see also Navarro-Ayala v. Hernandez-Colon, 951 F.2d 1325, 1352 \(1st Cir. 1991\) (no individual provision, even a heading, should be interpreted in isolation from its context within the document as a whole). Third, Rhode Island cases teach that the court interpreting such a clause must look beyond labels to substance and condemn those that have the effect of a penalty despite an attempt to hide the penalty in the raiment of liquidated damages. See, e.g., Allstate Interiors & Exteriors, Inc., 907 F. Supp. 2d at 247-48 (with no damages, liquidated damages clause punitive in effect and unenforceable); Howarth, 1992 R.I. Super. LEXIS 18, 1992 WL 813502, at \*3 (otherwise valid liquidated damages clause becomes punitive and unenforceable if it imposes [*42] damages when none were incurred); cf. Applied Elastomerics, Inc. v. Z-Man Fishing Prods., Inc., 521 F. Supp. 2d 1031, 1044-45 \(N.D. Cal. 2007\) (applying California law, whether contract uses label "penalty" or "liquidated damages" is not determinative; court must interpret clause based on substance); see also Omni-Combined W.E., LLC, 2012 R.I. Super. LEXIS 78, 2012 WL 1957733, at \*7-8 (lease acceleration clause under examination at summary judgment found not to be punitive in effect and therefore enforceable).

To save ¶ 4.6, Quick Fitting asks the Court to focus on Crompton's testimony in his second affidavit, which contradicts his Fed. R. Civ. P. 30\(b\)\(6\) testimony on the same topic. Without explaining why unambiguous contract language should be interpreted by reference to extrinsic evidence, Quick Fitting argues that the Court should find that it crafted ¶ 4.6 because the harm flowing from a breach would be difficult to quantify and that $500,000 is reasonable because it approximates the costs of bringing a new supplier up to speed.<sup>27</sup>

This extrinsic evidence argument is unavailing. A threshold problem is that Quick Fitting has not even argued that ¶ 4.6 is ambiguous, which it must be for the Court to consider such extrinsic evidence of what the parties intended. Toray, 958 F. Supp. 2d at 322. And this penalty clause is simply not ambiguous; therefore, the Court must interpret the Agreement's words (chosen by Quick [*43] Fitting) and cannot rely on Crompton's extrinsic evidence of intent contrary to the meaning of the words. In any event, if the Court were inclined to consider any extrinsic evidence, the operative testimony would be Crompton's answers during his Fed. R. Civ. P. 30\(b\)\(6\) deposition that $500,000 was selected to be punitive and that, otherwise, Crompton has no information suggesting any relationship to actual damages. The averments in the clearly contradictory affidavit later submitted to avoid summary judgment, with no satisfactory explanation for why the testimony was changed, should be disregarded as a sham. A.J. Amer Agency, Inc. v. Astonish Results, LLC, C.A. No. 12-351 S, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 94324, 2014 WL 3496964, at \*12-13 \(D.R.I. July 11, 2014\) (contradictory portions of affidavit may be treated as sham and disregarded at summary judgment). So even if the Court did look beyond the Agreement's words, the cognizable extrinsic evidence confirms that this clause is a paradigmatic penalty intended to be an in terrorem spur to compliance, and not as a fair estimate of damages. It is well-settled contract law that courts do not give their imprimatur to such arrangements. Priebe & Sons v. United States, 332 U.S. 407, 413, 68 S. Ct. 123, 92 L. Ed. 32, 109 Ct. Cl. 870 (1947).

---

<sup>27</sup> This argument ignores that ¶ 4.6 is embedded in an Agreement that explicitly provides that Quick Fitting was not obligated to purchase any product or to establish EFF Manufactory as a supplier. WF Ex. 11 at 1, ¶ 5.2.

Based on the foregoing, I recommend the Court find that ¶ 4.6 [*44] of the 2011 License Agreement ("Liquidated Damages/Contract Penalty") is unenforceable and deem it severed from the Agreement.<sup>28</sup>

2. Non-competition Clauses

The Wai Feng parties challenge two non-competition clauses in Schedule 2 of the 2010 License/Supply Agreement. They provide:

[2010 WF Contracting parties] will only manufacture fittings for [Quick Fitting] exclusively and may not enter into any agreement to manufacture push fit fittings for any other company.

...

[2010 WF Contracting parties] may not compete with [Quick Fitting], directly or indirectly in any market [Quick Fitting] may serve. [2010 WF Contracting Parties] may not manufacture directly or through a third party, any push fit (push connect) fittings for any party outside of [Quick Fitting].

WF Ex. 4 at 9. These clauses lack any limits with respect to time and geography. In scope, they broadly apply not just to the push-fit products manufactured using Quick Fitting's information (whether or not proprietary) but to any push-fit product, including push-fit developed independently by the Wai Feng parties and push-fit manufactured to the specifications of a design developed by a third party unrelated to Quick Fitting. The second of the two clauses goes [*45] beyond push-fit and beyond direct competition with Quick Fitting, barring the 2010 WF Contracting parties from competing in any market Quick Fitting "may serve," arguably barring the Wai Feng parties from competing in any plumbing product market anywhere in the world, effectively putting them out of business.

The Wai Feng parties also challenge the enforceability of one non-competition clause in the 2011 License Agreement. The challenged 2011 clause provides:

Due to the nature of the Confidential Information and [EFF Manufactory's] unique access to it, [EFF Manufactory] agrees that it shall not, during the term of this Agreement or at any time thereafter, either directly or indirectly through others, compete with Quick Fitting in the design, manufacture, supply, sale, or distribution of push-fit connection valves, fittings, supply line or controls.

WF Ex. 11 ¶ 4.3. Like the challenged clauses from the 2010 License/Supply Agreement, ¶ 4.3 has no temporal or geographic limits and sweeps in all push-fit products without regard to whether any Quick Fitting information — proprietary or not — was used to develop them. Id.

The Rhode Island Supreme Court has long enforced the principle that covenants [*46] not to compete are disfavored and subject to strict judicial scrutiny. Cranston Print Works Co. v. Pothier, 848 A.2d 213, 219-20 (R.I. 2004). When considering the validity of a noncompetition agreement, the crucial issue is reasonableness, and that test is dependent upon the particular circumstances surrounding the agreement. Durapin, Inc. v. Am. Prods., Inc., 559 A.2d 1051, 1053 (R.I. 1989). Rhode Island courts enforce such provisions if the party seeking to enforce the non-competition clause can demonstrate that the restriction is ancillary to an otherwise valid transaction or relationship, and that "the contract is reasonable and does not extend beyond what is apparently necessary for the protection of those in whose favor it runs." Cranston Print Works Co., 848 A.2d at 220 & n.2; see also Macro Niche Software, Inc. v. 4 Imaging Solutions, L.L.C., Civil Action No. H-12-2293, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 194512, 2013 WL 12140417, at *6 (S.D. Tex. Dec. 18, 2013) (covenant not to compete is enforceable if ancillary to enforceable agreement and "contains limitations as to time, geographical area, and scope of activity to be restrained that are reasonable and do not impose a greater restraint than is necessary to protect the goodwill or other business interest of the promisee").

---

<sup>28</sup> Based on this recommendation, I do not address the Wai Feng parties' alternative argument that Quick Fitting never sent the contractually mandated "invoice" and therefore the $500,000 penalty is not yet due.

To aid in this analysis, the Rhode Island Supreme Court has adopted the principles set out in the Restatement (Second) Contracts,<sup>29</sup> which require courts to examine what [*47] is necessary to protect the specific interest contained in the "valid transaction or relationship" to which the restraint is ancillary. Home Gas Corp. of Mass. v. DeBlois Oil Co., 691 F. Supp. 567, 572-73 (D.R.I. 1987); see R. J. Carbone Co. v. Regan, 582 F. Supp. 2d 220, 225 (D.R.I. 2008). In interpreting such a clause in the licensing context, the important public policy interest favoring robust competition must guide the Court's analysis. See R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-36-2 (purpose of Rhode Island antitrust law to "promote the unhampered growth of commerce and industry throughout the state by prohibiting unreasonable restraints of trade and monopolistic practices, inasmuch as these have the effect of hampering, preventing, or decreasing competition"); Max Garellick, Inc. v. Leonardo, 105 R.I. 142, 250 A.2d 354, 357 (R.I. 1969) (restrictive covenant may not be "contrary to public policy"); see also Crye Precision LLC v. Bennettsville Printing, 15-cv-00221(FB)(RER), 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 159072, 2017 WL 4325817, at *8 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 27, 2017) ("Courts analyze restrictive covenants in commercial contracts, such as license agreements, 'under a simple rule of reason, balancing the competing public policies in favor of robust competition and freedom to contract.'"); Columbia Ribbon & Carbon Mfg. Co. v. A-1-A Corp., 369 N.E.2d 4, 6, 42 N.Y.2d 496, 398 N.Y.S.2d 1004 (N.Y. 1977) (When "broad-sweeping language is unrestrained by any limitations keyed to uniqueness, trade secrets, confidentiality or even competitive unfairness[, i]t does no more than baldly restrain competition. This it may not [*48] do. . . . [O]n its face the covenant is too broad to be enforced as written."). Thus, while "protecting a business's confidential information and goodwill — such as the special relationship its sales force has developed with customers — may qualify as a legitimate interest," BlueZ4 Corp. v. Macari, No. KC 2016-1087, 2017 R.I. Super. LEXIS 96, 2017 WL 2620125, at *3 (R.I. Super. June 13, 2017) (citing Astro-Med, Inc. v. Nihon Kohden Am., Inc., 591 F.3d 1, 17 (1st Cir. 2009)), "the desire to be free from competition, by itself, is not a protectable interest." Durapin, 559 A.2d at 1057; see Home Gas, 691 F. Supp. at 573-74 ("There is no purpose for the provision other than an anti-competitive purpose, and, it is therefore invalid.").

The reasonableness of a restrictive covenant is a question of law to be determined by the judge. Durapin, 559 A.2d at 1053. While not per se unenforceable, the lack of temporal and geographic limitations in a non-compete are particularly concerning. Cranston Print Works Co., 848 A.2d at 220 (lack of geographic limit enforceable only if business to which restraint is ancillary is international in character; lack of temporal limit unreasonable if duration longer than necessary to protect legitimate commercial interest in protecting confidential information and trade secrets); see Max Garellick, 250 A.2d at 356-57 ("The rule, now generally received, has been recognized in this State, that contract in restraint of trade are not necessarily void by reason of universality of time, . . . nor of space . . . , but they depend upon the reasonableness of the restrictions under the conditions of each case.") (ellipses in original).

<sup>29</sup> These provide:

(1) A promise to refrain from competition that imposes a restraint that is ancillary to an otherwise valid transaction or relationship is unreasonably in restraint of trade if

- (a) the restraint is greater than is needed to protect the promisee's legitimate interest, or
- (b) the promisee's need is outweighed by the hardship to the promisor and the likely injury to the public.

(2) Promises imposing restraints that are ancillary to a valid transaction or relationship include the following:

- (a) a promise by the seller of a business not to compete with the buyer in such a way as to injure the value of the business sold;
- (b) a promise by an employee or other agent not to [*49] compete with his employer or other principal;
- (c) a promise by a partner not to compete with the partnership.

The application of these principles here requires the Court first to focus on the protectable interest arising from the nature of the transactions between Quick Fitting and the Wai Feng parties. The arrangement contained in the 2010 License/Supply Agreement is [*50] a true license and supply relationship; it establishes that Quick Fitting would provide access to its proprietary and non-proprietary information, which the WF Contracting parties would use to manufacture push-fit for sale only to Quick Fitting, which committed to purchase. WF Ex. 4. By contrast, the challenged non-compete clauses in the 2011 License Agreement are ancillary to an arrangement that is more narrow in that it merely licenses EFF Manufactory to have access to Quick Fitting's confidential information to provide "cost estimates and business proposals . . . in the hope that Quick Fitting will purchase." WF Ex. 11 at 1. Nevertheless, collectively, the "valid transaction or relationship" embodied in these Agreements gives rise to significant and legitimate protectable interests. Thus, Quick Fitting certainly has an interest in protecting itself from competition facilitated by use of the information it provided to the Wai Feng parties; similarly, Quick Fitting has a legitimate interest in ensuring that its customers are not stolen by a supplier who cuts it out, particularly by using its information (whether confidential or not) to sell to the customer directly. In his 30(b)(6) [*51] deposition, Crompton identified this as key to what he considered to be Quick Fitting's legitimate protectable interest:

If you just run a clean line — if you want to go off and build your own push fit business . . . and do it on your own, be my guest. Go invest in it, do whatever you want . . . If you want to compete with us, that's okay, too.

But if you want to do business with us, don't try to go around us.

WF Ex. 8 at 29-30.

Importantly, the non-compete restrictions that the Wai Feng parties have not challenged are precisely tailored to protect these legitimate interests in that they ban the sale of push-fit manufactured with any information acquired from Quick Fitting (whether or not proprietary) to any entity other than Quick Fitting, they ban the use of Quick Fitting's information (whether or not proprietary) except to manufacture for sale to Quick Fitting, and they ban the use of Quick Fitting's proprietary information to compete with, defame or cause damage to Quick Fitting. WF Ex. 4 at 1 & ¶¶ 3, 6; WF Ex. 11 ¶ 4.1. Thus, the core interest identified by Crompton is already served by the unchallenged clauses in that they contractually bar the Wai Feng parties from ever using [*52] Quick Fitting's information (whether or not proprietary) to go around Quick Fitting and sell directly to its customers or to compete with Quick Fitting, at the same time that they do not bar the Wai Feng parties from competing in push-fit based on designs, manufacturing methods, suppliers and customers developed without using any Quick Fitting information.

The challenged clauses in the 2010 License/Supply Agreement are very different from the unchallenged ones. Worldwide in reach and temporally unlimited, the first of the two bans the Wai Feng parties from ever making or selling any push-fit — even if the hypothetical, future product is manufactured using information totally unrelated to the Information in which Quick Fitting has a protectable interest and is sold outside of North America. The second bans the 2010 WF Contracting parties from ever competing with Quick Fitting "in any market [it] may serve," anywhere in the world. WF Ex. 4 at 9. Similarly, the challenged non-compete in ¶ 4.3 of the 2011 License Agreement bars EFF Manufactory from ever making or selling any push-fit products anywhere in the world. Read in light of the "the conditions of [the] case," Max Garelick, 250 A.2d at 357, including the protections [*53] already provided by the unchallenged clauses, the lack of geographic or temporal limitations in these clauses, coupled with the utter lack of any "limitations keyed to uniqueness, trade secrets, confidentiality or even competitive unfairness," Columbia Ribbon & Carbon Mfg. Co., 369 N.E.2d at 6, renders the challenged clauses little more than a naked restraint on competition. Durapin, 559 A.2d at 1057; see Home Gas, 691 F. Supp. at 573-74 (solely "anti-competitive purpose" in restrictive covenant is not proper). As the court held in Columbia Ribbon & Carbon Mfg. Co., "t]his [they] may not do." 369 N.E.2d at 6.

Base on the foregoing, I find that the challenged non-competition clauses in the 2010 License/Supply Agreement and the 2011 License Agreement are not "ancillary to an otherwise valid transaction or relationship," and that they "extend beyond what is apparently necessary for the protection of those in whose favor it runs." Cranston Print Works Co., 848 A.2d at 219-20. Accordingly, I recommend that the Court hold that all three are unenforceable as written. See id.; Durapin, 559 A.2d at 1057-58.

One loose end remains: whether, guided by Durapin, the Court should find that these clauses can or should be equitably modified to what is necessary to protect Quick Fitting's legitimate interests. Since the Rhode Island

Supreme Court abrogated the so-called "blue pencil" rule, [*54] it has consistently held that such modification is an equity-based job for the trial judge. Cranston Print Works Co., 848 A.2d at 221 ("hearing justice to decide on remand" with "a free hand to take a 'blue pencil,' if necessary, to draw in any reasonable limitations on such covenants that it concludes are overbroad"); Durapin, 559 A.2d at 1059 ("court" to use equitable power to modify covenant to what "is reasonably necessary to protect a promisee's legitimate interests"). For the restrictive clause in the 2011 License Agreement, the answer is easy — the Agreement contractually prohibits equitable modification, mandating that any unenforceable clause shall be "deemed to be severed from the Agreement." WF Ex. 11 ¶ 5.21. As to the 2010 License/Supply Agreement, animated by the sufficiency of the protective force of the unchallenged restrictive covenants, I do not recommend equitable modification because it is not necessary.<sup>30</sup> The unchallenged non-compete clauses already fully protect Quick Fitting's legitimate interests in preventing what they allege is the Wai Feng parties' wrongful conduct. Accordingly, there is no need for the Court to use equitable power to modify. Durapin, Inc., 559 A.2d at 1059 (unless promisor has jeopardized proprietary rights protected by challenged clause, [*55] "there is no need for the court to exercise its equity powers to modify and enforce an unreasonable noncompetition provision").

Based on the foregoing, I recommend that the Court grant summary judgment in favor of the Wai Feng parties with respect to the challenged non-compete clauses in the 2010 License/ Supply Agreement and the 2011 License Agreement, finding that all of them are unenforceable as a matter of law.

3. Non-solicitation/Confidentiality Clauses

The challenged non-solicitation/confidentiality clauses appear in all three Agreements. Like the non-compete clauses, the challenged clauses supplement confidentiality and non-solicitation clauses that the Wai Feng parties have not challenged.

The unchallenged clauses may be briefly summarized. First, the 2010 License/Supply Agreement protects the information that Quick Fitting "designate[s] in writing as being proprietary and confidential," WF Ex. 4 ¶ 3, by barring the 2010 WF Contracting parties from disclosing the confidential portion of the information to any third party, id., while after termination of the Agreement, the 2010 WF Contracting parties are forever barred from using any of the information. Id. ¶ 3, 6. Similarly, the 2011 NDA includes strict prohibitions [*56] on use and disclosure of Quick Fitting's "trade secret, confidential and proprietary information." WF Ex. 9 ¶ I(A, C, 1(a-g)). And the 2011 License Agreement has an entire section devoted to the protection of confidential information, which bars EFF Manufactory from using Quick Fitting's confidential information except as contemplated by the Agreement and requires EFF Manufactory to safeguard and maintain the information's confidential nature. WF Ex. 11 at 1-2.

The challenged clause in Schedule 2 of the 2010 License/Supply Agreement provides:

[2010 WF Contracting parties] may never contact either directly or indirectly, any customer or potential customer of [Quick Fitting] whether indicated below, or unknown to [the 2010 WF Contracting Parties] for any purpose.

WF Ex. 4 at 9. No customers or potential customers are "indicated below." This clause bars the 2010 WF Contracting parties from ever having contact with any customer or potential customer of Quick Fitting, whether or not the entity is known to have a prospective or existing relationship with Quick Fitting. Id. The clause persists in perpetuity and has no limits either as to topic of the contact or the geographic venue of the other [*57] party. The challenged non-solicitation clause in ¶ I(1)(h) of the 2011 NDA is broader:

<sup>30</sup> The Court observes that, in the extensive briefing of this motion, Quick Fitting dedicated hardly more than one sentence to the so-called "blue-pencil" rule and did not argue for equitable modification. ECF No. 193 at 22-23. Therefore, if the Court were inclined to consider equitable modification, I alternatively recommend that it stay its equitable hand because of Quick Fitting's waiver of the issue. Vargas-Colón v. Fundación Damas, Inc., 864 F.3d 14, 24 (1st Cir. 2017) (argument not developed in brief need not be considered); see Landrau—Romero v. Banco Popular De Puerto Rico, 212 F.3d 607, 612 (1st Cir. 2000) (holding that by failing to sufficiently raise an argument at summary judgment, party has waived it); FERC v. Silkman, 177 F. Supp. 3d 683, 696 (D. Mass. 2016) ("[I]ssues which are not raised at an appropriate time may be deemed waived by the reviewing tribunal.").

[EFF LLC] may never contact, communicate or negotiate with any competitor, supplier, customer or prospect of Quick Fitting Inc, which readily known, has been disclosed by Quick Fitting or made known to [EFF LLC] by any communication from Quick Fitting. . . . Further, [EFF LLC] is required to keep all customer, prospect and supplier information secret at all times and may not communicate with, or provide information to, any third party without the written agreement from Quick Fitting.

WF Ex. 9 ¶ I(1)(h). This clause forever bars EFF LLC (or whatever entity may be the counter-party) from ever having any contact or communication with "any competitor, supplier, customer or prospect" of Quick Fitting. Finally, the challenged non-solicitation clause in the 2011 License Agreement appears in ¶ 4.4; it provides:

In addition to the permanent prohibitions against using Quick Fitting's Confidential Information Supplier shall not, during the term of this Agreement and for a period of thirty-sixty [sic] (36) months after the termination of this Agreement, contact, communicate with, or negotiate or conduct business [*58] with any customer or prospective customer of Quick Fitting or any Representative of such customer or prospective customer (a "Prohibited Party"), or with any person or entity that Supplier or any of its Representatives knows or reasonably should know is a customer or prospective customer of Quick Fitting, regardless of the geographic location of such Prohibited Party or its business.

WF Ex. 11 ¶ 4.4 (emphasis in original). This three-year ban on any communication or even contact between EFF Manufactory and any customer or prospective customer of Quick Fitting is without any limit either as to the topic of the communication or as to the geographic location of the other party to the communication. Id.

All three of the challenged non-solicitation clauses are ostensibly breached by a mere contact between any of the Wai Feng parties with any entity that Quick Fitting considers to be its prospective customer, competitor or supplier, without regard to (1) the topic of the contact, (2) who initiates the contact and (3) the geographic location of the other party to the contact. Two of the three Agreements (the 2010 License/Supply and 2011 License Agreements) can be breached even though the Wai [*59] Feng parties do not know what entities Quick Fitting considers to be covered by the prohibition. Two of the three clauses use the term "never," making clear that there is no time limit on either clause. And although the 2011 License Agreement clause persists for three years following the termination of the Agreement,<sup>31</sup> Quick Fitting has proffered no evidence to buttress its need for three years of such extraordinary protection.

Quick Fitting's legitimate interests in protecting its confidential information and in preventing the Wai Feng parties from selling Quick Fitting's push-fit products to its known customers are already protected by the unchallenged restrictive clauses. Accordingly, I find none of the challenged restraints is reasonably necessary for the protection of those interests. Cranston Print Works Co., 848 A.2d at 219-20; Durapin, 559 A.2d at 1053. Further, these clauses are so draconian that they effectively bar the Wai Feng parties from competing in any aspect of the plumbing industry because they are barred even from contacting their own customers. I find that the clauses are hopelessly overbroad, contrary to public policy and unenforceable as drafted. Cranston Print Works Co., 848 A.2d at 219-20. I therefore recommend that the Court grant summary judgment in favor of the Wai [*60] Feng parties as to each of them as written.<sup>32</sup>

IV. MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT CHALLENGING SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE OF BREACH OF ENFORCEABLE PROVISIONS IN AGREEMENTS

---

<sup>31</sup> Under the Wai Feng parties' theory of termination, the 2011 License Agreement ended in December 2015. See ECF No. 223 at 5-6.

<sup>32</sup> In light of the mandate in the 2011 License Agreement that unenforceable clauses must be severed (WF Ex. 11 ¶ 5.21) and because Quick Fitting's legitimate interests are well protected by the unchallenged clauses, I find equitable modification is not necessary and do not recommend it.

A. Factual Background Related to Evidence of Breach

During the lengthy discovery period permitted in these cases, Quick Fitting was able to uncover evidence from which a fact finder could infer that Andrew Yung, acting on behalf of some of the Wai Feng parties, including EFF Manufactory, Wai Feng Trading and EFF Inc., and potentially in concert with Cixi Welday, was eager to, and actively tried to, leverage the relationship developed with Quick Fitting, including EFF Manufactory's ability to manufacture push-fit acceptable to Quick Fitting's downstream customers (such as Lowe's), in order to develop and sell a different (non-Quick Fitting) push-fit product line once the relationship with Quick Fitting ended. For example, Andrew Yung used a sample of an item EFF Manufactory had made for Quick Fitting in a late 2012/2013 attempt to sell push-fit to Watts Water Technologies, Inc. ("Watts"); the discussion included requests for quotes by reference to the actual items EFF Manufactory had been making for Quick Fitting, although both [*61] Watts and Andrew Yung claim that the focus was on Watts placing orders for a push-fit product still to be developed.<sup>33</sup> Similarly, in 2013, there were discussions with the Bow Group ("Bow") about the possibility of developing a push-fit product line.<sup>34</sup> The evidence also fairly permits the inference that the wily buyer from Quick Fitting's important customer, Mueller (through which Quick Fitting's products were sold to Lowe's), initiated indirect communications with Andrew Yung and EFF Manufactory, which Mueller used against Quick Fitting to avoid a price increase.<sup>35</sup>

---

<sup>33</sup> Watts had been a ten-year-long customer of the Wai Feng parties when the push-fit discussions in issue began in October 2012 (months after the termination of the Quick Fitting relationship). WF Ex. 18 at 2-3. The evidence establishes that, over several months in 2013, Watts solicited EFF Manufactory for quotes on what Watts described either as "quick fit fittings" or by reference to Quick Fitting product names or numbers. QF Exs. # 3 UU, VV, WW. Andrew Yung brought a sample push-fit item to a meeting with Watts, which had been manufactured for Quick Fitting. QF Ex. # 3 WW at 28-31. The participants in these discussions claim they were focused on a plastic push-fit design to be developed on Watts's specifications and designs. WF Ex. 18 at 6-7. Watts never proceeded with the business. Id.

<sup>34</sup> In 2013, well after the Quick Fitting/Wai Feng parties' relationship ended, John Biduk, a representative of the Bow Group visited a facility of the Wai Feng parties and spoke with Andrew Yung, who "volunteered" that he was "in the process of developing a product line" of metal push-fit plumbing products. QF Ex. #3 AAA at 3. Biduk told Andrew that Bow would be interested once the products were ready — "call me when you have all your ducks lined up." Id. at 4. Biduk also visited Bow's existing supplier, Cixi Welday; he testified to a hearsay statement that Cixi Welday and EFF Manufactory were collaborating on development of a push-fit product line. Id. at 4. The Bow Group never placed any orders with the Wai Feng parties. Id. at 13.

<sup>35</sup> Paul Bell, the Mueller buyer, testified that after contracting to purchase Chinese-manufactured push-fit from Quick Fitting, Mueller was able to land the mega-retailer, Lowe's, as a customer. QF Ex. #3 OO at 12-13. In 2011, Bell and his Chinese assistant, Lisia Wang, toured China. One of the stops Wang arranged was at EFF Manufactory, where Bell observed the manufacturing of Quick Fitting push-fit to be sold to Mueller. Because Bell was "in the process of building a relationship and business with Quick Fitting[.]" he talked with Andrew Yung about the product. Id. at 31. According to Bell, Andrew was "very proud of the fact that he was making the Quick Fitting product" and acknowledged that EFF Manufactory was "under contract, that they were in a, a contract with [Quick Fitting]." Id. at 31-33. While Bell wondered if EFF Manufactory would sell push-fit to Mueller directly, he knew Quick Fitting "was protected, and from either a legal standpoint . . . [Crompton's] product was protected from either a, a legal side, a contract, or patent protection," in addition to the exclusivity restrictions in Mueller's own three-year agreement with Quick Fitting. Id. "[B]ecause [he] did not want to be obvious," id. at 32, Bell had Mueller's attorneys investigate Quick Fitting's patents "to understand if we could get around them if we were so inclined," id. at 46, and he asked Wang to get pricing information and find out if EFF Manufactory would sell directly. Id. at 31-33, 38 & 72-73. His goal was to explore getting lower prices, "price test[ing]," which he did "all the time." Id. at 73. He never communicated directly with Andrew Yung or with any of the Wai Feng parties regarding this inquiry. Id. at 87. Rather, all communication (if there was any) was through a non-testifying declarant (Wang); Quick Fitting and the Wai Feng parties have submitted inconsistent hearsay declarations regarding Wang's account of the facts. Compare QF Ex. # 3 OO at 39-44, with WF Ex. 16. Ultimately, Bell testified that he received a price list; based on his review of whatever it really was, he was satisfied that the prices Mueller was being charged by Quick Fitting were "reasonable." Id. at 47, 83, 98. Mueller continued to buy push-fit from Quick Fitting at increasing volumes, although Quick Fitting claims it was not able to increase Mueller's prices. ECF No. 206-7 at 4-5; QF Ex. # 3 OO at 69-70, 97; Crompton Aff. # 2 ¶¶ 23-24.

The fair implication from these facts is not that Andrew was proposing to sell the same push-fit products that EFF Manufactory was already making with Quick Fitting's confidential drawings and know-how, but rather that he was seeking a new customer for whom a new push-fit product would be developed. The evidence further suggests that, in the six and a half years since the Quick Fitting relationship ended, these efforts have not come to fruition — perhaps because of a pull-back due to the pendency of this case, perhaps because no customer was willing to commit to placing an order, the Wai Feng parties, whether [*62] acting alone or in a venture with Cixi Welday, have not actually sold any push-fit, including in the North American market in which Quick Fitting competes. Confirming this proposition is the reality that the evidence establishes only efforts to launch a push-fit product line in 2013 and 2014; since then, nothing. That is, Quick Fitting has not presented a scintilla of proof of any efforts to sell push fit since 2014; nor has it presented any proof of actual sales of push-fit products at any time, in North America, or anywhere else in the world, by any of the Wai Feng parties or by Cixi Welday. But see QF Ex. # 3 OO at 53-61.<sup>36</sup>

Quick Fitting argues that a fact finder might also draw far more sinister inferences from this evidence. For example, it relies on the Wang hearsay to draw the inference that the Wai Feng parties used their access to its confidential drawing and other secrets to try to cut it out and sell directly to Mueller Industries, although the effort, if it happened, amounted to nothing.<sup>37</sup> Quick Fitting also seeks to show that its confidential drawings and know-how have been redeployed in a venture with Cixi Welday, the Chinese manufacturer owned by Andrew Yung's cousin, which is now poised [*63] to enter the push-fit market.<sup>38</sup> Similarly, it claims that its evidence would permit a fact finder to conclude that CCWFBV was manufacturing push-fit for it early in the relationship with the Wai Feng parties,<sup>39</sup> that CCWFBV thus came into possession of its confidential drawings, and that CCWFBV has offered push-fit for sale on

<sup>36</sup> The closest to an actual sale occurred in July 2012, just as the Wai Fang parties' relationship with Quick Fitting was ending. Mueller's Bell testified about a chart (QF Ex. # 3 PP) prepared at Mueller analyzing pricing for PEX products (which are not push-fit) from several suppliers, including EFF Manufactory. QF Ex. # 3 OO at 52-53. Bell did not prepare the chart and did not know the source of the pricing information in it. Although the focus of the chart was PEX, two of the items (of over 150) for which a price is shown for EFF Manufactory were push-fit products of the type sold to Mueller by Quick Fitting, although Bell insisted he considered them to be "tied specifically to the PEX program, . . . not tied to a push-fit program." Id. at 53. The evidence does not reveal whether either of the two items was actually sold to Mueller.

<sup>37</sup> See n.35 supra. According to Crompton, sometime in 2012, he received a call from Mueller's Bell, who told him, "[w]e have pricing from one of your factories and they're claiming they can sell us directly [sic], they're not impeded by any contract or agreement." ECF No. 206-7 at 4. Bell told Crompton he had gotten pricing proposals to sell directly not only from EFF Manufactory, but also from two of Quick Fitting's other Chinese suppliers (Xxat and Jinquan). Id. at 3. To salvage the Mueller relationship, Quick Fitting executives traveled to Mueller, apparently in 2013. Crompton Aff. # 2 ¶ 22; QF Ex. # 3 SS; see QF Ex. # 3 OO at 82-83. Quick Fitting retained Mueller as a customer and increased the volume of the business. QF Ex. # 3 OO at 69-70. Notably, Quick Fitting ended up in litigation with all three of the Chinese suppliers accused by Bell. See n.17 supra.

<sup>38</sup> Quick Fitting claims that Cixi Welday was provided with push-fit drawings in order to manufacture plastic components for the finished products sold to Quick Fitting. Crompton Aff. # 2 ¶¶ 26-27; QF Ex. # 3 W at 33-35. Such an arrangement appears to have been contemplated by the 2011 License Agreement. WF Ex. 11 ¶¶ 1.5, 2.2. Nevertheless, Quick Fitting now argues that it constitutes a breach. For a later period, in 2013, there is testimony that the Wai Feng parties and Cixi Welday were collaborating to develop a line of push-fit products. See n.34 supra; QF Ex. # 3 AAA at 4. Later still, in 2014, Crompton saw Andrew Yung at the Cixi Welday trade show booth where there were push-fit samples on display, as well as a product sheet with photographs of push fit products. Crompton Aff. # 2 ¶ 28; QF Ex. # 3 NN. Relatedly, Quick Fitting proffers the expert opinion of its Vice President of Engineering, Libardo Ochoa, who claims he examined two unauthenticated items — a photograph and a drawing — ostensibly submitted in 2013 by Cixi Welday for certification of two push-fit products. Ochoa Aff. ¶¶ 7-9. The Wai Feng parties have moved both to strike the Ochoa Affidavit incorporating this opinion and to exclude the Ochoa expert opinion. ECF Nos. 182 & 205. The motions are under advisement.

<sup>39</sup> Quick Fitting has proffered circumstantial evidence that CCWFBV was the manufacturer. In their briefs, the Wai Feng parties argue persuasively that every such fragment is readily explained away. At bottom, the best evidence of the charge that CCWFBV was the manufacturer for the first year of the relationship is the slim reed of its naming in the 2010 License/Supply Agreement that Andrew Yung signed.

Alibaba (based on an unauthenticated screen shot of the Alibaba website) — all of which permits the inference that CCWFBV used Quick Fitting's confidential information.<sup>40</sup>

For their part, the Wai Feng parties deny that they have ever disclosed Quick Fitting's confidential information to any other company, including CCWFBV and Cixi Welday (except as authorized to manufacture components for Quick Fitting); they deny that they have ever sold products manufactured using Quick Fitting's technology to any other company; they deny that they have manufactured or distributed push-fit products for any company other than Quick Fitting; and they deny that the prices EFF Manufactory charged Quick Fitting were protected confidential information prohibited from disclosure to Mueller. WF SUF # 1 ¶¶ 23, 24, 28, 83-84. Pointing to Crompton's Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6) testimony, the [*64] Wai Feng parties contend that Quick Fitting is bound by his admission that it has no facts that prove or permit the inference that the Wai Feng parties wrongly provided Cixi Welday or CCWFBV with Quick Fitting's proprietary information or that the Wai Feng parties transferred Quick Fitting's protected information to any entity that used it to make and sell push-fit products.

The Wai Feng parties ask the Court to find that, with no evidence of any push-fit sales, Quick Fitting has failed to produce any evidence that it has been damaged, which is a mandatory element of its breach of contract claims. Id. ¶¶ 41-44, 46-51. At bottom, they ask the Court to scrutinize Quick Fitting's mountain of evidence and to conclude that it fails to "present[] a sufficient disagreement to require submission to a jury or [that] it is so one-sided that [they] must prevail as a matter of law." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 251-52, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986).

B. Law and Analysis of Sufficiency of Evidence of Breach

Before turning to whether Quick Fitting's factual proffer is sufficient to permit a fact finder to conclude that the Wai Feng parties breached any of the unchallenged restrictive clauses in the three Agreements, I pause briefly for a reprise of what the unchallenged [*65] clauses provide. First is the 2010 License/Supply Agreement's ban on the 2010 WF Contracting parties selling push-fit products manufactured using information provided by Quick Fitting (whether or not proprietary) to any entity except Quick Fitting, WF Ex. 4 at 1 & ¶ 3, and the requirement that, after termination of the Agreement, all use of Quick Fitting's information (whether or not proprietary) must cease, with Quick Fitting retaining the right to purchase any remaining inventory and with the residual right to freely sell off what is left vested in the 2010 WF Contracting parties. Id. ¶ 6. The 2011 NDA provides that Quick Fitting's intellectual property may not be used "to compete, advertise, manufacturer, sell, distribute, import or export Quick Fitting's proprietary information or a similar product; without the expressed written permission of Quick Fitting Inc[.]" WF Ex. 9 ¶ I(1)(d), and that Quick Fitting's "proprietary information may not be used to compete with, defame or cause damage to Quick Fitting Inc." Id. ¶ I (1)(h). Similarly, ¶ 4.1 of the 2011 License Agreement bars EFF Manufactory, during the term of the Agreement, from using Quick Fitting's confidential and proprietary [*66] information and trade secrets to "compete with, defame, hinder, or cause harm to Quick Fitting." WF Ex. 11 ¶ 4.1.

To make out a viable claim for breach of these contractual restrictions, Quick Fitting, as the party alleging the breach, bears the burden of proving the amount of damages it has suffered with a reasonable degree of certainty. Toray, 958 F. Supp. 2d at 325. The Court should not deny recovery because damages are difficult to ascertain, as long as they can be proven with reasonable certainty. Id.; see *Wurman v. Hodosh, C.A. No. CV 16-202 WES, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83025, 2018 WL 3254475, at *3 (D.R.I. May 17, 2018)* ("In Rhode Island, . . . breach-of-contract . . . claims require — as a threshold element — sufficiently certain damages."). To save a case from summary judgment, the claimant must advance a model or "a formula by which to compute . . . damages" to be presented to the jury. Fogarty v. Palumbo, 163 A.3d 526, 538 (R.I. 2017). However, the law of Rhode Island also recognizes that nominal damages may be awarded to a party who can prove breach — but not damages — with sufficient certainty. A.J. Amer Agency, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 94324, 2014 WL 3496964, at *34 ("[An] unexcused failure to perform a contract is a legal wrong. An action will therefore lie for the breach although it causes no injury. Nominal damages may then be awarded.") (citing [*67] 4 Williston on Contracts § 64:6 (4th ed. 2014)); Nestle Food Co. v. Miller, 836 F. Supp. 69, 78 (D.R.I. 1993) (nominal damages for breach of non-compete may be recovered if link to lost business is speculative); see Acuity Brands, Inc. v. Bickley, Civil Action No. 13-366-DLB-REW, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 64894, 2017 WL 1426800, at *16-19 (E.D. Ky. Mar. 31, 2017) (summary judgment denied for breach of non-compete despite no proof of actual damages because nominal damages are available); but see O'Coin v. Woonsocket Inst. Tr. Co., 535 A.2d 1263, 1266 (R.I. 1988) (when action sounds in contract, nominal damages do not lie, absent egregious circumstances).

---

<sup>40</sup> The evidence of push-fit sales over Alibaba either by CCWFBV or the Wai Feng parties is less than paper-thin. Quick Fitting proffers an unauthenticated screen shot purportedly showing CCWFBV offering push-fit for sale through the Alibaba website. QF Ex. # 3 QQQ. It also relies on a set of unauthenticated inquiries sent in 2014 through the Alibaba website to the Wai Feng parties from various locations in the world (e.g., India, Zimbabwe) asking for quotes on push-fit products. QF Ex. # 3 BBB. After being pressed at the hearing about these exhibits, Quick Fitting conceded in its post-hearing brief that they prove nothing beyond "context and background to Mr. Crompton's state of mind." ECF No. 228 at 7.

Despite years of aggressive discovery, Quick Fitting has failed to prove that the Wai Feng parties have ever sold a push-fit product — whether or not the item included Quick Fitting's intellectual property — to any entity other than Quick Fitting itself. This proof deficit is the more significant in light of Crompton's acknowledgement, during his 2015 Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6) depositions, that, to establish that Quick Fitting's proprietary information was improperly used, it would be "necessary to examine the . . . products to confirm that they're based on Quick Fitting Technology." WF Ex. 8 at 13; see WF Ex. 17 at 15-16 (Quick Fitting has not "concluded that . . . [Cixi] Welday push fit products are based on Quick Fitting's designs or specifications" because it does not yet "have [*68] samples" of such product being sold). Yet, when discovery closed two years after Crompton gave that testimony, as far as the summary judgment record reveals, Quick Fitting failed to uncover any such evidence. What it instead found is a series of incidents fraught with fact issues, albeit not with significant (or perhaps any) damages.

The incident with the most (relatively speaking) damage heft involves Quick Fitting's good customer, Mueller; it occurred in 2011, before the relationship between the Wai Feng parties and Quick Fitting began to sour; and it relies heavily on Wang's purported information. With no testimony from Wang regarding whom she really talked to, what was really said, what she really gave Bell and from whom she really got it, the obvious inference compelled by this incident is that a wily buyer (Bell) plotted to get enough information about the prices charged by Quick Fitting's Chinese suppliers to achieve Mueller's goal of preventing Quick Fitting from increasing the prices it was charging Mueller.

However, other inferences are also permissible. For example, a reasonable jury could find that someone from the Wai Feng parties provided Mueller with enough information [*69] regarding the prices they were charging Quick Fitting to allow Mueller to analyze Quick Fitting's costs and that the parties had agreed that such pricing information was confidential under the 2011 License Agreement,<sup>41</sup> so that disclosure to Mueller breached an enforceable duty of non-disclosure. It is also possible that a jury could find that the Wai Feng parties responded to Mueller's overture by proposing to cut out Quick Fitting and sell its push-fit products to Mueller directly. Such a finding would amount to a serious — though feckless in that Mueller did not bite — breach of all three Agreements that cuts to the core of Quick Fitting's protectable and legitimate interest in preventing its suppliers from using its intellectual property to steal its customers. However, without Wang's testimony to fill the proof gap,<sup>42</sup> it is difficult to see how Quick Fitting will prove that the Wai Feng parties really made an offer to sell, which they vehemently deny; nor is this proposition credible when examined in light of Bell's testimony that Andrew Yung told Bell that the Wai Feng parties were under contract with Quick Fitting.<sup>43</sup> Nevertheless, when the hearsay is ignored, Quick Fitting still has [*70] non-speculative (albeit de minimis) evidence of damages arising from this incident based on the expenses associated with a trip to Mueller to smooth over the relationship in February 2013. Crompton Aff. # 2 ¶ 22; QF Ex. # 3 SS.

<sup>41</sup> The 2011 License Agreement is ambiguous regarding whether the price Quick Fitting was charged by the Wai Feng parties was confidential. Compare WF Ex. 11 ¶ 1.3 ("Confidential Information" includes "costs, and financial information," as well as customer "payment information"; prices charged by Wai Feng parties not expressly mentioned), with id. ¶ 1.4 ("Confidential Information" does not include information "developed" by EFF Manufactory).

<sup>42</sup> This is not a case where Wang's hearsay declaration that Andrew Yung said the Wai Feng parties would sell to Mueller directly, as described by Bell, has indicia of trustworthiness sufficient to meet Fed. R. Evid. 807, particularly where it is contradicted by Wang's other hearsay declaration, WF Ex. 16, and is inconsistent with the admissible declarations of Andrew Yung described by Bell. QF Ex. # 3 OO at 31-33 ("[Andrew Yung] was very proud of the fact that he was making push-fit for Quick Fitting."); id. at 33 ("that [the Wai Feng parties] were a partner with Quick Fitting, that they were under contract").

The other Mueller incident occurred in July 2012 as the parties' relationship was crumbling. Quick Fitting has evidence that the Wai Feng parties allegedly included two push-fit items on the tail end of a proposal that they supposedly sent to Mueller with prices for over one hundred PEX items. Mueller's Bell testified that the two pieces were items Mueller was buying from Quick Fitting, but also stated, "[t]hese all represent PEX, traditional PEX products." QF Ex. # 3 OO at 60-61; see id. at 53 ("This is tied specifically to the PEX program, not speci-, not tied to a push-fit program."). As with the 2011 alleged solicitation, Mueller did not place an order for push-fit (or PEX) with the Wai Feng parties, so Quick Fitting has no lost profits, nor has it proffered any other actual damage evidence other than, arguably, the 2013 Mueller trip to repair the relationship. Nevertheless, a jury could find that the Wai Feng parties solicited Mueller to purchase two push-fit [*71] items in July 2012 and that the timing permits the inference that these were products made using Quick Fitting's know-how. The lack of actual damages is not fatal because nominal damages are available as a remedy.

Also sufficient to proceed is the allegation that in 2013 and 2014, the Wai Feng parties began a collaboration with Cixi Welday to develop a line of push-fit products using Quick Fitting's confidential drawings. Even if the Court excludes the troublesome Ochoa affidavit, see Ochoa Aff., Quick Fitting's admissible evidence is enough for this allegation to be trial-worthy.<sup>44</sup> As for damages, despite the lack of evidence of any sales by Cixi Welday, Quick Fitting may contend that the loss of control over its intellectual property inflicts an unquantifiable loss for which nominal damages are available. See Acuity Brands, Inc., 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 64894, 2017 WL 1426800, at *17-18 (nominal damages recoverable for breach of non-compete with only attenuated evidence of loss).

The final incident that has enough heft to be presented to a fact finder involves Watts. A jury could draw the inference that Quick Fitting's confidential information was being used in the Wai Feng parties' 2012-2013 sales effort with Watts based on the terminology used in the email communications, [*72] despite the failure of the Watts witness to so testify. Relatedly, the Wai Feng parties' admission that they used a left-over Quick Fitting push-fit item as a sample during the sales pitch raises a fact issue on whether this was an improper disclosure or use of Quick Fitting's intellectual property. As with its other claims, Quick Fitting's apparent inability to show actual damage from the sales pitch made to Watts does not remove the right to recover nominal damages.

Rule 56 requires the Court to look at issues through a broad lens and accept legitimate inferences that a reasonable juror might draw from the totality of the evidence. Viewed through that lens, I find that there is enough here for these claims to survive summary judgment and recommend that the motion be denied to the extent that it challenges the sufficiency of the evidence of breach.<sup>45</sup>

V. MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT CHALLENGING JOINDER OF EFF LLC IN 13-56

---

<sup>43</sup> See n.35 supra.

<sup>44</sup> This evidence includes Cixi Welday's pre-2013 lack of experience in metal manufacturing, the close relationship between Cixi Welday's principal and Andrew Yung, Cixi Welday's involvement with supplying components for the Quick Fitting push-fit products manufactured by EFF Manufactory and the timing of the announcement of a venture for Cixi Welday to offer metal push-fit.

<sup>45</sup> One loose end: the Wai Feng parties have argued that the exclusivity clause in the 2010 License/Supply Agreement, WF Ex. 4 ¶ 4(c), was undisputedly breached by Quick Fitting's purchase of push-fit from other vendors and that this prior breach voided all of the contractual obligations imposed on the Wai Feng parties so that judgment should enter in their favor. Having found that this exclusivity clause is ambiguous, see n.17 supra, I do not recommend that the Court enter judgment on this basis.

It is undisputed that the 2011 NDA named the wrong EFF entity. Instead of EFF Inc., as the Wai Feng parties claim was intended, or EFF Manufactory, as Quick Fitting's Crompton appears to suggest,<sup>46</sup> the 2011 NDA names EFF LLC, which is a Massachusetts company partially owned [*73] by Andrew and Jacky Yung that had almost nothing to do with the relationship with Quick Fitting, except for incidental involvement of its employees in occasional product shipments and pick-ups and performing similar errands. WF SUF # 1 ¶ 17; QF SDF # 1¶ 17. The address of the counter-party that is hand-written into the 2011 NDA is that of EFF Inc., in Canada, not EFF LLC, which is in Walpole, Massachusetts. WF SUF # 1 ¶ 16. There is no evidence that any person acting on behalf of EFF LLC was ever intended to be, or was, the "Recipient" of trade secrets, which is required to trigger the protection of the 2011 NDA.<sup>47</sup> Nor is there evidence that Quick Fitting understood that EFF LLC had the capacity to "provide estimates for the cost of specific components," which is the stated purpose of the 2011 NDA. WF Ex. 9 ¶ I(B). Nor is there a scintilla of evidence that any actionable conduct was engaged in by any person acting on EFF LLC's behalf. It is undisputed that EFF LLC has never sold push-fit products and has never sold anything to Quick Fitting. WF SUF # 1 ¶¶ 148, 160.

Prior to the summary judgment phase, the Court found, and Quick Fitting acquiesced by silence to the proposition, that [*74] EFF LLC was named by mistake; nevertheless, Quick Fitting was coy about what name it understood should have been inserted. Quick Fitting, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 131452, 2015 WL 5719503, at \*3 (naming of EFF LLC in 2011 NDA "appears to be wrong. . . . The Yungs say it was a mutual mistake to name [EFF LLC] when [EFF Inc.] was intended by both, while Quick Fitting does not clearly take a position on the issue."). Now, despite its burden at summary judgment, Quick Fitting still does not argue that EFF LLC was the correct party to the 2011 NDA. Rather, it contends that the Court should keep EFF LLC in the case because some EFF entity was a party to the 2011 NDA and a fact finder may ignore the separate corporate existence of all EFF entities, so that any EFF entity is a proper party. Relatedly, Quick Fitting contends that EFF LLC's summary judgment motion should be denied because intellectual property sent to persons acting for EFF Manufactory, Wai Mao, Wai Feng Trading or EFF Inc. must be deemed to have been sent to EFF LLC since "the lines of distinction between Andrew Yung and the Yung entities were essentially non-existent." 13-56 ECF No. 271 at 11. However, other than some EFF entities' employees using the same email domain name, Quick Fitting has [*75] presented nothing material to support a veil-piercing theory that the Court has already rejected.<sup>48</sup> See Lothrop v. N. Am. Air Charter, Inc., 95 F. Supp. 3d

<sup>46</sup> Crompton's second affidavit is consistent either with the Wai Feng parties' contention that EFF Inc. was intended to be the counter-party or with the proposition that the 2011 NDA was intended to name EFF Manufactory. Crompton Aff. # 2 ¶¶ 12-13. Crompton averred that he forwarded the 2011 NDA for execution to Andrew Yung because he had been told in early 2011 that a Canadian entity called "EFF" was being formed to take over the "manufacturing operations formerly handled by the 'W&F Manufacturing' factory." Id. Crompton's averments rule out EFF LLC as the proper party. QF SDF # 1 ¶ 18.

<sup>47</sup> To overcome this lack of evidence, Quick Fitting points to the inadvertent use of the EFF LLC logo on some emails from Andrew Yung and to the use of the EFF LLC name on an email from a Canadian-based employee, both involving matters related to the Quick Fitting relationship. QF SUF # 3 ¶¶ 40-56. However, there is no suggestion that Quick Fitting was ever lead to believe it was dealing with EFF LLC or that Andrew Yung or the Canadian-based employee were actually acting for EFF LLC. See WF SUF # 1 ¶¶ 163, 165.

<sup>48</sup> This Court has previously considered and declined to accept Quick Fitting's veil-piercing theory:

Whether considering the law of Rhode Island, where "courts are loath to act like Vlad the Impaler," Doe v. Gelineau, 732 A.2d 43, 44 \(R.I. 1999\), or the law of Canada, China or Massachusetts, courts are universally hesitant to disregard independent corporate structure and typically require clear evidence to justify doing so. Russell v. Enter. Rent-A-Car Co. of R.I., 160 F. Supp. 2d 239, 250-51 \(D.R.I. 2001\). Quick Fitting has not only failed to present clear and convincing evidence, but has not even established prima facie proof of any of the markers that lead courts to ignore the separate existence of the corporate entity. Specifically, it has offered no evidence of the use of a sham entity, of undercapitalization, of the lack of corporate records, of insolvency, or of the improper use of the corporate form by dominant shareholders.

Quick Fitting, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 131452, 2015 WL 5719503, at \*10 (footnotes omitted). While the Wai Feng parties have reinforced the factual record establishing the separate corporate existence of EFF LLC, WF SUF # 1 ¶¶ 143-157, Quick Fitting has added nothing material to the summary judgment record to fill the hole already found by the Court. QF SDF # 1 ¶¶ 149-151, 90, 102 \(D. Mass. 2015\) (same email domain and sharing of resources and employees by corporations with common owners not enough for veil-piercing).

EFF LLC's summary judgment motion (13-56 ECF No. 257) should be granted. The Wai Feng parties persuasively assert, and Quick Fitting does not colorably dispute, that whoever handwrote EFF LLC's name in the space at the head of the 2011 NDA made [*76] a mistake. Therefore, while the fact finder could twist like a pretzel in attempting to solve the puzzle of which EFF entity was meant to be in the 2011 NDA, it is beyond cavil that the naming of EFF LLC was a mutual mistake appropriate for reformation at the summary judgment phase. OneBeacon Am. Ins. Co. v. Travelers Indem. Co. of Ill., 465 F.3d 38, 45-46 (1st Cir. 2006) (when there is "full, clear, and decisive proof of mistake," proper for court to reform contract). With EFF LLC reformed out of the 2011 NDA and finding no other basis on which a fact finder conceivably could impose liability on it, I recommend that summary judgment enter in its favor and that it be eliminated as a defendant in the 13-56 case.

An important coda regarding EFF LLC. As the work on these motions was nearing conclusion, the Court focused — sua sponte — on the undisputed facts stating that EFF LLC is named as a limited liability company whose "owners" include an individual named Ron Roberts, as well as that Roberts allegedly "lives" in Rhode Island. WF SUF ¶ 143; 13-56 ECF No. 135 ¶¶ 29-31; see Quick Fitting, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 131452, 2015 WL 5719503, at \*4 ("Ronald Roberts, a Rhode Island resident"). Since Quick Fitting filed 13-56 in this Court, it has been clear that the Court's power to exercise subject matter jurisdiction over the case is based on diversity [*77] of citizenship pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1332\(a\). 13-56 ECF No. 135 ¶ 57. Assuming EFF LLC is really constituted as a limited liability company, it is well settled that its citizenship for purposes of diversity jurisdiction is derived not from its state of incorporation, but from the citizenship of its members, who are the owners. Pramco, LLC ex rel. CFSC Consortium, LLC v. San Juan Bay Marina, Inc., 435 F.3d 51, 54-55 (1st Cir. 2006) ("citizenship of a limited liability company is determined by the citizenship of all of its members"). While residency in a state does not necessarily equate to citizenship in the state for purposes of diversity jurisdiction, they often end up conflating. See Lundquist v. Precision Valley Aviation, Inc., 946 F.2d 8, 10 (1st Cir. 1991) ("[T]he relevant standard is 'citizenship,' i.e., 'domicile,' not mere residence; a party may reside in more than one state but can be domiciled, for diversity purposes, in only one."). Therefore, it is possible — indeed likely — that, like Quick Fitting, EFF LLC is also a citizen of Rhode Island because one of its members, Roberts, is a Rhode Island citizen. And if both Quick Fitting and EFF LLC are Rhode Island citizens, then EFF LLC's joinder, which was initiated after the case had been pending for well over a year, 13-56 ECF No. 59, requires this Court to consider whether it defeats diversity jurisdiction, requiring [*78] 13-56 to be dismissed. Pramco, 435 F.3d at 52-54.

This state of affairs derives from an unfortunately common error. Quick Fitting's pleading that initiated the joinder of EFF LLC in 13-56 wrongly assumed that EFF LLC's citizenship is based on its state of "incorporation"; the Wai Feng parties acquiesced in the error. See 13-56 ECF Nos. 59 ¶¶ 34-35 & 74 ¶ 57. When the parties make such an error, the discovery of a potentially fatal jurisdictional defect is sometimes not made until the court has plunged deeply into the facts and issues. See, e.g., D.B. Zwirn Special Opportunities Fund, L.P. v. Mehrotra, 661 F.3d 124, 125 (1st Cir. 2011) (no inquiry about citizenship of partners of limited partnership until appeal); Pramco, 435 F.3d at 52-54 (no consideration of citizenship of members of limited liability company from initiation of action in 1999 until raised on appeal in 2005); Am. Fiber & Finishing, Inc. v. Tyco Healthcare Grp., LP, 362 F.3d 136, 138 (1st Cir. 2004) (change of party from corporation to limited partnership should have raised red flag but two years of discovery, summary judgment and appeal passed before diversity questioned); Augustyniak Ins. Grp., Inc. v. Astonish Results, L.P., CA No. 11-464S, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36451, 2013 WL 998770, at *13 n.10 (D.R.I. Mar. 13, 2013) ("The failure of parties and the district court to focus early on whether there is diversity jurisdiction is like a bad penny that keeps turning up in cases with a party that is either a limited liability company or a limited partnership."). That is what has happened here [*79] — the Court's discovery was not made until after its work on these motions was nearing conclusion. As a result, as of this writing, the parties have not had an opportunity to 154; see Baker v. LivaNova PLC, 210 F. Supp. 3d 642, 646 (M.D. Pa. 2016) (use of common logos and email domains not enough to pierce corporate veil). Quick Fitting's veil-piercing facts remain insufficient to meet any of Gelineau factors.

---

chime in on the Court's discovery. Therefore, before the Court takes any action with respect to this jurisdictional issue, they must be afforded that opportunity.<sup>49</sup>

If further briefing by the parties leads the Court to determine that Roberts is a diversity-busting citizen of Rhode Island, the Court nevertheless may maintain jurisdiction over 13-56 through the mechanism in Fed. R. Civ. P. 21, which provides that "[o]n motion or on its own, the court may at any time, on just terms, add or drop a party." "[I]t is well settled that Rule 21 invests district courts with authority to allow a dispensable nondiverse party to be dropped at any time, even after judgment has been rendered." Newman-Green, Inc. v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 832, 109 S. Ct. 2218, 104 L. Ed. 2d 893 \(1989\). A court may drop a dispensable and nondiverse party under Fed. R. Civ. P. 21 to cure 28 U.S.C. § 1332\(a\) jurisdictional defects. See Casas Office Machs., Inc. v. Mita Copystar Am., Inc., 42 F.3d 668, 675 \(1st Cir. 1994\) ("[F]ederal courts of appeals have the authority — like that given to the district courts in Fed. R. Civ. P. 21 — to dismiss dispensable, nondiverse parties to cure defects in diversity jurisdiction.") (emphasis in original); [\[\*80\] Aurora Loan Servs., LCC v. Dream House Mortg. Corp., C.A. No. 07-00441-ML, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 117840, 2009 WL 4884530, at \*2 \(D.R.I. Dec. 17, 2009\)](#) (citing Casas Office Machs., 42 F.3d at 675). This is consistent with the "fundamental" and "well-established" responsibility of courts to "take jurisdiction in order to determine jurisdiction." See Leroux v. Lomas & Nettleton Co., 626 F. Supp. 962, 965, n.4 \(D. Mass. 1986\) (rejecting argument that "absent diversity, [the] Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the entire proceeding and, therefore, it cannot properly assert jurisdiction over a part," namely a Fed. R. Civ. P. 41\(a\)\(1\) notice of dismissal "to cure a jurisdictional defect") (emphasis in original) (citing United States v. United Mine Workers of Am., 330 U.S. 258, 67 S. Ct. 677, 91 L. Ed. 884 \(1947\)).

Ruling on dismissal of a dispensable, nondiverse party is made by reference to the Fed. R. Civ. P. 19\(b\) standard — whether the action "in equity and good conscience" can fairly proceed without the party in question or whether the action "should be dismissed." Fed. R. Civ. P. 19,<sup>50</sup> see Hearts With Haiti, Inc. v. Kendrick, 192 F. Supp. 3d 181, 206 \(D. Me. 2016\) ("Rule 21 looks to Rule 19 for guidance on whether a litigant is dispensable."), aff'd, 856 F.3d 1 \(1st Cir. 2017\) (Souter, J., sitting by designation). In this instance, the analysis above, which leads to the conclusion that the Court should enter summary judgment in EFF LLC's favor, may be repurposed to support the conclusion that EFF LLC is a dispensable party the Court can drop to maintain jurisdiction over the case. Cf. Payroll Mgmt. Inc. v. Lexington Ins. Co., Case No. 3:10CV471/MCR/CJK, 2014 WL 12759759, at \*2-3 \(N.D. Fla. Dec. 29, 2014\)

<sup>49</sup> When the discovery of this possible jurisdictional defect was made, the Court considered whether to halt work and ask the parties to brief the issue of the citizenship of EFF LLC and its impact on subject matter jurisdiction. That option was not chosen because most of the issues covered in this report and recommendation are pending in both 13-33 and 13-56 so the resulting delay would further protract the progress of 13-33 towards trial, and because of the option to dismiss EFF LLC pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 21 discussed infra. Instead, with the uncertainty regarding jurisdiction over 13-56 an open question, I have flagged the problem and otherwise laid out my recommendations to give the parties the opportunity to address subject matter jurisdiction in their objections or otherwise as the District Court determines is most appropriate.

<sup>50</sup> Rule 19\(b\) provides:

[T]he court must determine whether, in equity and good conscience, the action should proceed among the existing parties or should be dismissed. The factors for the court to consider include:

- (1) the extent to which a judgment rendered in the person's absence might prejudice that person or the existing parties;
- (2) the extent to which any prejudice could be lessened or avoided by:
  - (A) protective provisions in the judgment;
  - (B) shaping the relief; or
  - (C) other measures;
- (3) whether a judgment rendered in the person's absence would be adequate; and
- (4) whether the plaintiff would have an adequate remedy if the action were dismissed for nonjoinder.

(curing a diversity jurisdiction defect [*81] via Rule 21 dismissal of a dispensable party because it lacked "a real and substantial stake" in the case and other parties "would not be prejudiced"), aff'd, 815 F.3d 1293, 1298-99 \(11th Cir. 2016\) (per curiam). Dismissing EFF LLC on these grounds aligns with the Court's duty to ensure the Rules are "construed, administered, and employed . . . to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action and proceeding." Fed. R. Civ. P. 1.

Based on the foregoing, I recommend entering summary judgment in favor of EFF LLC because the undisputed facts establish that its naming in the 2011 NDA was a mutual [*82] mistake and because Quick Fitting spotlights no other trial-worthy facts undergirding a viable theory for its joinder. Alternatively, if further factual development confirms that EFF LLC is a limited liability company and that one of its members is a citizen of Rhode Island, so that its joinder destroys the Court's diversity jurisdiction over 13-56, for the same reasons, I recommend that the Court find that EFF LLC is a dispensable party in 13-56 and dismiss it pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 21 to cure the jurisdictional defect.

VI. MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT CHALLENGING JOINDER OF ANDREW YUNG IN 13-56

Andrew Yung is joined in his individual capacity as a party in Count IX of the 13-56 complaint; his argument that the Court lacks personal jurisdiction over him was overruled by Quick Fitting, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 131452, 2015 WL 5719503, at \*6-7 n.10, which held that his signature on the 2010 License/Supply Agreement extended his exposure to all of Quick Fitting's claims against him. If a fact finder credits any of Quick Fitting's factual theories as discussed above, there is ample direct and inferential evidence that Andrew Yung is the individual who was at the center of the action. Similarly, if the state law trade secret claim is credited, Andrew Yung is the actor who is pivotal. [*83] Accordingly, to the extent that Quick Fitting's claims targeting Andrew Yung survive summary judgment, as I recommend that they do, I also recommend that Andrew Yung's motion for summary judgment be denied.

VII. MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT CHALLENGING OTHER CLAIMS

The final summary judgment motion addressed in this report and recommendation challenges the viability of Quick Fitting's state law tort claims, which are asserted in its 13-56 complaint as Counts II-IV and X-XI — misappropriation of trade secrets, fraud/misrepresentation, business defamation, civil conspiracy and injunctive relief<sup>51</sup> ECF No. 254.

A. Misappropriation of Trade Secrets

The Rhode Island Uniform Trade Secrets Act ("Trade Secrets Act" or "Act") provides for injunctive relief and recovery of money damages for the misappropriation of a trade secret disclosed or used without consent after it was acquired under circumstances giving rise to a duty to maintain secrecy or limit its use. R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-41-1, et seq. Damages can include both the actual loss caused by the misappropriation and the unjust enrichment that is not taken into account in computing actual loss. R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-41-3. In lieu of damages measured by any other methods, the damages caused by misappropriation [*84] may be measured by imposition of liability for a reasonable royalty based on the misappropriator's unauthorized disclosure or use of a trade secret. A "trade secret" is defined as "information, including a formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that . . . (i) [d]erives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known to, and not being readily ascertainable by proper means by, other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use; and (ii) [i]s the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy." R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-41-1\(4\).

---

<sup>51</sup> The Court disposes only of part of this motion in this report and recommendation. In addition to the tort claims listed in the text, the motion also attacks the viability of Quick Fitting's claims that the push-fit products that it accepted but failed to pay for were nonconforming, defective or negligently manufactured. That aspect of the motion will be addressed in a separate report and recommendation. See n.7 supra.

For summary judgment purposes, the Court is satisfied that, as averred by Crompton in his second affidavit, Crompton Aff. #2 ¶¶ 3-4, a fact finder could conclude that Quick Fitting's confidential drawings and specifications amount to trade secrets under the Act.<sup>52</sup> See Alifax Holding SpA v. Alcor Sci., Inc., Civil Action No. 14-440 S, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 131455, 2015 WL 5714727, at \*3-4 \(D.R.I. Sept. 29, 2015\) (under Trade Secrets Act, it is enough to allege that email messages and product drawings were marked as confidential); Baris v. Steinlage, No. C.A. 99-1302, 2003 R.I. Super. LEXIS 154, 2003 WL 23195568, at \*23-24 \(R.I. Super. Dec. 12, 2003\) (trade secrets include information that does not exist in the public [*85] domain, is subject to reasonable efforts to maintain its secrecy, and would be economically valuable to a competitor). Further, while the Wai Feng parties have identified what unquestionably are serious deficiencies with Quick Fitting's Trade Secrets Act claim,<sup>53</sup> there nevertheless is enough for the claim to proceed past summary judgment, particularly where the Act contemplates the availability of injunctive relief for an "[a]ctual or threatened misappropriation," R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-41-2\(a\), without regard to whether use of the misappropriated secret caused "actual loss" or "unjust enrichment." R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-41-3\(a\). Based on the facts from which a reasonable juror could find that the Wai Feng entities improperly allowed Quick Fitting's trade secrets to come into the possession of Cixi Welday for the purpose of developing a metal push-fit product line, I find that there is enough for a fact finder to grapple with this claim and recommend that summary judgment be denied on Count II of the 13-56 complaint.

B. Fraud and Misrepresentation

To establish a prima facie case of common law fraud in Rhode Island, "the plaintiff must prove that the defendant 'made a false representation intending thereby to induce plaintiff to rely thereon,' and [*86] that the plaintiff justifiably relied thereon to his or her damage." A.J. Amer Agency, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 94324, 2014 WL 3496964, at \*14; Women's Dev. Corp. v. City of Central Falls, 764 A.2d 151, 160 \(R.I. 2001\) (quoting Travers v. Spidell, 682 A.2d 471, 472-73 \(R.I. 1996\)). Liability for fraud cannot attach unless the misrepresentation was intentionally made with intent to deceive. Fleet Nat'l Bank v. Anchor Media Television, Inc., 45 F.3d 546, 554-55 \(1st Cir. 1995\) (listing cases). Whether the claim is fraud or negligent misrepresentation, the plaintiff must specifically plead and prove with particularity the "time, place and content of [the] alleged false representation[.]" Hayduk v. Lanna, 775 F.2d 441, 444 \(1st Cir. 1985\); see N. Am. Catholic Educ. Programming Found., Inc. v. Cardinale, 567 F.3d 8, 15 \(1st Cir. 2009\).

The common law torts involving deceit differ from a claim for breach of contract in that they impose liability on a person who "fraudulently" makes a "misrepresentation" to another who justifiably relies upon that misrepresentation and experiences "pecuniary loss[.]" Dura Pharms., Inc. v. Broudo, 544 U.S. 336, 343-44, 125 S. Ct. 1627, 161 L. Ed. 2d 577 \(2005\). That is, these torts require proof of actual economic loss. Id. (citing Pasley v. Freeman, 3 T.R. 51, 65, 100 Eng. Rep. 450, 457 \(1789\) (if "no injury is occasioned by the lie, it is not actionable: but if it be attended with a damage, it then becomes the subject of an action"); see Shaulis v. Nordstrom, Inc., 865 F.3d 1, 15 \(1st Cir. 2017\) ("[U]nder Massachusetts law, a claim for fraudulent misrepresentation requires a pecuniary loss."). Critical for purposes of these cases, the plaintiff "must have suffered substantial damage," not simply nominal damages, before "the cause of action can arise." [*87] Dura Pharms., 544 U.S. at 344 (citing W. Keeton, D. Dobbs, R. Keeton, & D. Owen, Prosser and Keeton on Law of Torts § 110, p. 765 (5th ed. 1984)). Rhode Island law embraces these principles. See Becker v. Independence Bank, 305 F. Supp. 3d 351, 358 \(D.R.I. 2018\) (citing to the Rhode Island Supreme Court in stating "[d]etrimental reliance[ ]" is an "element[ ] a plaintiff must prove[ ]" in fraud and misrepresentation claims). "[I]n an action for deceit based on false representations, a plaintiff must show, not only that false representations have been made by the defendant to the plaintiff, but that, acting in reliance upon such false representations the plaintiff has been injured." Dunn & McCarthy v. Bishop, 90 A. 1073, 1073 \(R.I. 1914\) (per curiam) (plaintiff "not entitled to recover" because "the plaintiff's injury resulting from the defendant's deceit is entirely contingent and uncertain"); see Dow Badische Co. v. Wasserman, No. C.A. 73-175, 1976 WL 181972, at \*5 (R.I. Super. Mar. 18, 1976) (citing Dunn for this proposition); see also Farmer v. Lynch, 67 A. 449, 449 \(R.I. 1907\) (per curiam) ("It does not appear that the plaintiff suffered any damage by reason of the deceit. In this view the other questions become unimportant.").

<sup>52</sup> With a record replete with references to the confidential nature of Quick Fitting's drawings and ambiguity as to whether any or all are disclosed in a patent, the Wai Feng parties' argument that a patent-protected drawing is not a trade secret functions as a red herring.

<sup>53</sup> For example, any sharing of the trade secrets among CCWFBV, EFF Manufactory or Cixi Welday, as necessary for the purpose of manufacturing the push-fit products for sale to Quick Fitting, does not amount to misappropriation as the term is defined by the Trade Secrets Act. R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-41-1\(2\). Nor does Quick Fitting's claim that the Wai Feng parties breached their contractual duty of non-disclosure by allowing Mueller's buyer to get access to Quick Fitting's prices; the prices that the Wai Feng parties charged Quick Fitting are not a trade secret under the Trade Secrets Act because they were not "acquired" or "derived" from another entity. R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-41-1\(2\)\(ii\)\(B\)\(II-III\). And even if Quick Fitting can prove that Cixi Welday really used a Quick Fitting drawing to design a product, with no evidence that such a product was ever sold, it is questionable whether there is enough for a fact finder to conclude that there has been "actual loss" or "unjust enrichment," as the Trade Secrets Act requires for recovery of damages. R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-41-3.

To buttress its claim of a false representation, Quick Fitting relies on a hotly contested averment from Crompton: that Andrew Yung told him the manufacturing of push-fit pursuant to the 2010 License/Supply [*88] Agreement would be done at CCWFBV and that Andrew was an owner of that entity. Crompton Aff. # 2 ¶¶ 7-8. Quick Fitting contends that it relied on this intentionally false information in accepting Andrew Yung's signature as binding CCWFBV to the restrictive covenants incorporated into the 2010 License/Supply Agreement. While Quick Fitting has produced no evidence to suggest that confidential information was ever sent directly to CCWFBV, WF SUF # 1 ¶¶ 42-44, it has proffered enough to create a factual dispute regarding whether any manufacturing was actually done at CCWFBV. See n.39 supra. If a fact finder concludes that some manufacturing was done at CCWFBV, it is a fair inference that Quick Fitting's technology must have been provided to CCWFBV by someone or it could not have manufactured push-fit to Quick Fitting's specifications. Further, a reasonable juror could find detrimental reliance by Quick Fitting on Andrew Yung's intentionally false representation that he was an owner of CCWFBV in that Quick Fitting accepted Andrew's signature of the 2010 License/Supply Agreement as sufficient to bind CCWFBV to its terms.

This leads to the claim's fatal flaw — the utter lack of proof of any [*89] actual economic injury. See Dura Pharms., 544 U.S. at 343-44 ("[T]he common law has long insisted that a plaintiff in such a case show not only that had he known the truth he would not have acted but also that he suffered actual economic loss.") (emphasis added); Dunn, 90 A. at 1073. Quick Fitting has failed to produce even a scintilla of evidence tending to establish that its intellectual property was wrongly used or disclosed because CCWFBV was (as Quick Fitting claims) manufacturing and shipping push-fit products to it during 2010 and 2011, pursuant to an understanding, if not a binding contract. Moreover, Quick Fitting has failed to marshal even a scintilla of proof that CCWFBV ever used Quick Fitting's trade secrets so as to inflict economic injury on Quick Fitting. Based on that deficit, I recommend that summary judgment enter against Quick Fitting on Count III (fraud and misrepresentation) of its 13-56 complaint.

C. Defamation

Mueller's Bell authenticated a July 2012 email written by the non-testifying declarant Wang to Bell, her superior, in which she reported that Andrew Yung told her EFF Manufactory had stopped doing business with Quick Fitting because it had failed to pay for "a order worthy 500K$[sic]" and that Andrew was [*90] initiating litigation.<sup>54</sup> QF Ex. # 3 QQ at 1. Bell testified that the information had no impact on Mueller's business with Quick Fitting. QF Ex. # 3 OO at 69. Quick Fitting relies on the arguable hearsay in this email as the only evidence underpinning its state law claim of defamation.

---

<sup>54</sup> The email also mentioned a similar complaint from another Chinese supplier claiming it too had not been paid by Quick Fitting. QF Ex. # 3 QQ at 1.

To establish a claim for defamation, Quick Fitting must show (1) the utterance of a false and defamatory statement concerning another; (2) an unprivileged communication to a third party; (3) fault amounting to at least negligence; and (4) damages. Cullen v. Auclair, 809 A.2d 1107, 1110 (R.I. 2002) (per curiam) (quoting Nassa v. Hook-SupeRx, Inc., 790 A.2d 368, 373 n.10 (R.I. 2002)). A statement normally is not actionable unless it contains an objectively verifiable assertion. Levinsky's, Inc. v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 127 F.3d 122, 127-28 (1st Cir. 1997); see Haynes v. Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., 8 F.3d 1222, 1227 (7th Cir. 1993) ("A statement of fact is not shielded from an action for defamation by being prefaced with the words 'in my opinion,' but if it is plain that the speaker is expressing a subjective view, an interpretation, a theory, conjecture, or surmise, rather than claiming to be in possession of objectively verifiable facts, the statement is not actionable."). "The First Amendment 'overlays' state defamation law[.]" *RainSoft v. MacFarland, C.A. No. 15-432 WES, 350 F. Supp. 3d 49, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 170470, 2018 WL 4696737, at *4 (D.R.I. Sept. 30, 2018)* (quoting Sindi v. El-Moslimany, 896 F.3d 1, 13 (1st Cir. 2018)). "[A]n opinion whose factual basis is expressed and (substantially) [*91] true is protected speech." *2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 170470, [WL] at *5* (citing Restatement (Second) of Torts § 566 (Am. Law Inst. 1977)). "[S]tatements count as substantially true if they are, in fact, true, but too even if they admit of '[m]inor inaccuracies[,] . . . so long as the substance, the gist, the sting, of the libelous charge be justified.'" *2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 170470, [WL] at *6* (quoting Masson v. New Yorker Magazine, Inc., 501 U.S. 496, 517, 111 S. Ct. 2419, 115 L. Ed. 2d 447 (1991)). As the plaintiff in a defamation action, Quick Fitting carries a substantial burden. Alves v. Hometown Newspapers, Inc., 857 A. 2d 743, 750-51 (R.I. 2004). Quick Fitting argues that the actionable statement amounted to unspoken innuendo that Quick Fitting was on shaky financial footing.

Quick Fitting's effort founders on the first and fourth elements — the undisputed truth of the actionable portions of the utterance and the absence of damage. As memorialized in the Wang email, Andrew Yung allegedly stated that he had stopped business with Quick Fitting "as QF did not pay him for a order worthy 500k[sic]," he had "already started the legal process," and that Quick Fitting was critical of the Wai Feng parties' delivery and quality. QF Ex. # 3 QQ at 1; ECF No. 191-15 at 99-101. Every objectively verifiable fact in this statement is true. That is, it is undisputed that, in July 2012, the Wai Feng parties broke off their relationship with Quick Fitting based on non-payment [*92] of between $400,000 and $500,000 and were about to initiate litigation, which they did on August 2, 2012. Considering its legal claim that the Wai Feng parties delivered defective goods, Quick Fitting cannot dispute that it has been critical of the Wai Feng parties' delivery and quality. 13-56 ECF No. 135 at 45. The balance of the statement is non-actionable, amounting to Andrew Yung's opinion that he had been cooperative, but that Quick Fitting "tried all the possible way [sic] to reduce payment using all kinds of excuse[s]." QF Ex. # 3 QQ at 1. At the same time, from other sources, Mueller also learned that other Chinese suppliers of Quick Fitting were making similar claims. Yet, Bell testified that none of this information had any impact on Mueller's business relationship with Quick Fitting. QF Ex. # 3 OO at 69.

True statements coupled with an opinion that caused no damage do not amount to actionable defamation. See *RainSoft, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 170470, 2018 WL 4696737, at *4-8*. I recommend that the Court enter summary judgment against Quick Fitting with respect to Count IV of the 13-56 complaint.

D. Civil Conspiracy

To prove a civil conspiracy, a plaintiff must show evidence of an unlawful enterprise. Read & Lundy, Inc. v. Washington Tr. Co. of Westerly, 840 A.2d 1099, 1102 (R.I. 2004). Under Rhode Island law, civil conspiracy is not [*93] an independent basis of liability. Guilbeault v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 84 F. Supp. 2d 263, 268-69 (D.R.I. 2000). Absent an underlying tort or predicate wrongful act, conspiracy is not recognized as an independent cause of action. *Murphy v. Central Falls Det. Facility Corp., No. C.A. 14-203 S, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 56723, 2015 WL 1969178, at *14 n.10 (D.R.I. Apr. 30, 2015)*. In order for a predicate wrongful act to result in the imposition of liability for civil conspiracy, there must be specific intent to do something illegal or tortious. Fleet Nat'l Bank v. Anchor Media Television, Inc., 831 F. Supp. 16, 45 (D.R.I. 1993), aff'd, 45 F.3d 546 (1st Cir. 1995). In light of my recommendation that summary judgment be denied as to Quick Fitting's claims arising under the Trade Secrets Act, which is premised on intentional misappropriation of trade secrets, I also recommend that summary judgment be denied with respect to the derivative civil conspiracy claim in Count X of the 13-56 complaint.

E. Injunctive Relief

I recommend that summary judgment be denied with respect to Quick Fitting's claim for injunctive relief in Count XI of the 13-56 complaint. As long as the breach of contract and Trade Secrets Act claims continue, the claim for injunctive relief should remain pending. See WF Ex. 4 ¶ 7(a) (injunction relief available for breach of 2010 License/Supply Agreement); WF Ex. 9 ¶ I(6) (injunction relief [*94] available for breach of 2011 NDA); WF Ex. 11 ¶ 5.10.

VIII. CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing, I make the following recommendations. I recommend granting in part and denying in part the Wai Feng parties' summary judgment motion taking aim at (a) Count IV of Quick Fitting's counterclaims in 13-33, (b) Count I of Quick Fitting's operative complaint in 13-56 and (c) the sufficiency of the evidence Quick Fitting presents on those alleged breaches of contract. 13-56 ECF No. 255. I find the motion should be granted as to aspects (a) and (b) but denied as to (c). I further recommend that the Court deny Andrew Yung's summary judgment motion challenging Quick Fitting's Count IX in 13-56. 13-56 ECF No. 256. I further recommend granting EFF LLC's motion for summary judgment (13-56 ECF No. 257), or, if necessary as described above, dropping EFF LLC under Fed. R. Civ. P. 21. The final summary judgment motion addressed in this opinion is the Wai Feng parties' challenge to certain state law claims Quick Fitting advances in 13-56, which I find should be granted in part and denied in part. 13-56 ECF No. 254. I recommend granting the motion as to fraud/misrepresentation (Count III) and defamation (Count IV) and denying [*95] it as to misappropriation of trade secrets (Count II), civil conspiracy (Count X) and injunctive relief (Count XI).

Any objection to this report and recommendation must be specific and must be served and filed with the Clerk of the Court within fourteen (14) days after its service on the objecting party. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(2); DRI LR Cv 72(d). Failure to file specific objections in a timely manner constitutes waiver of the right to review by the district judge and the right to appeal the Court's decision. See United States v. Lugo Guerrero, 524 F.3d 5, 14 (1st Cir. 2008); Park Motor Mart, Inc. v. Ford Motor Co., 616 F.2d 603, 605 (1st Cir. 1980).

/s/ Patricia A. Sullivan

PATRICIA A. SULLIVAN

United States Magistrate Judge

December 17, 2018

Innovation Ventures, LLC v. Custom Nutrition Labs, LLC

United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit

August 3, 2018, Argued; December 20, 2018, Decided; December 20, 2018, Filed

File Name: 18a0278p.06

Nos. 17-1734/1771/1911

Reporter

912 F.3d 316 *; 2018 U.S. App. LEXIS 35917 **; 2018 FED App. 0278P (6th Cir.) ***

17-1734 & 17-1771, INNOVATION VENTURES, LLC, a Michigan limited liability company, Plaintiff-Appellant/Cross-Appellee, v. CUSTOM NUTRITION LABORATORIES, LLC, Defendant, NUTRITION SCIENCE LABORATORIES, LLC, a Texas limited liability company; ALAN JONES, Defendants-Appellees/Cross-Appellants.17-1911, INNOVATION VENTURES, LLC, a Michigan limited liability company, Plaintiff-Appellant, v. NUTRITION SCIENCE LABORATORIES, LLC, a Texas limited liability company; ALAN JONES; L.O.D.C. GROUP LIMITED; L.O.D.C. INCORPORATED, Defendants-Appellees.

Subsequent History: Rehearing denied by Innovation Ventures, LLC v. Jones, 2019 U.S. App. LEXIS 2623 \(6th Cir., Jan. 24, 2019\)

Stay denied by Innovation Ventures, LLC v. Jones, 2019 U.S. App. LEXIS 4311 \(6th Cir., Feb. 12, 2019\)

Prior History: [*1] Appeal from the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan at Flint. No. 4:12-cv-13850; 4:16-cv-11179—Terrence George Berg, District Judge.

Innovation Ventures, LLC v. Custom Nutrition Labs., LLC, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 137037 \(E.D. Mich., Sept. 29, 2014\)

Innovation Ventures, LLC v. Custom Nutrition Labs., LLC, 256 F. Supp. 3d 696, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 89544 \(E.D. Mich., June 12, 2017\)

Innovation Ventures, L.L.C. v. Custom Nutrition Labs., L.L.C., 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129946 \(E.D. Mich., Sept. 28, 2015\)

Core Terms

---

Innovation, settlement agreement, district court, parties, Custom, damages, Manufacturing, energy, Choline, personal jurisdiction, Secondary, nominal damages, lost profits, cases, royalty, laches, restrictive covenant, stipulations, antitrust, signature, courts, shots, leading case, calculation, noncompete, incorporates, Appeals, waived, estimated, counterclaim

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review

HN1 Appeals, Appellate Jurisdiction

An appellate court may review jurisdictional objections in any order.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Appellate Jurisdiction > Final Judgment Rule

HN2 Appellate Jurisdiction, Final Judgment Rule

Appellate courts have jurisdiction to hear appeals from all final decisions of the district courts. 28 U.S.C.S. § 1291. A decision is final for the purposes of § 1291 if it ends the litigation on the merits and leaves nothing for the court to do but execute the judgment. This firm finality principle is designed to guard against piecemeal appeals. There is also a long-standing rule that a party may not appeal a judgment to which it consented. Satisfaction of that rule is a requirement of § 1291.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Appellate Jurisdiction > Final Judgment Rule

HN3 Appellate Jurisdiction, Final Judgment Rule

There is an important exception to the rule prohibiting appeals from judgments to which the appellant consented. An appeal is permissible when solicitation of the formal dismissal was designed only to expedite review of an order which had in effect dismissed appellants' complaint.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Appellate Jurisdiction > Final Judgment Rule

HN4 Appellate Jurisdiction, Final Judgment Rule

There two important limits on the application of Raceway Props., Inc. v. Emprise Corp. First, parties may not appeal claims that were dismissed without prejudice. Second, if a party seeks to come within the Raceway exception, she should make her intention known to the court and opposing parties. While it is possible for a party to consent to a judgment and still preserve his right to appeal, he must reserve that right unequivocally, as it will not be presumed.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Appellate Jurisdiction > Final Judgment Rule

HN5 Appellate Jurisdiction, Final Judgment Rule

A conditional dismissal of unresolved claims or issues, in which the party reserves the right to reinstate those claims or issues does not create finality.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Reviewability of Lower Court Decisions > Adverse Determinations

HN6 Reviewability of Lower Court Decisions, Adverse Determinations

When a district court enters judgment against a plaintiff on some claims and the plaintiff voluntarily relinquishes the claims that remain, this appellate court will not penalize the plaintiff by dismissing his or her appeal.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Reviewability of Lower Court Decisions

**HN7** Appeals, Reviewability of Lower Court Decisions

Courts have consistently allowed plaintiffs who were awarded nominal damages to appeal despite technically winning their suit. The logic underpinning these cases is obvious: It is a rare defendant indeed who would pay to appeal a case in which she lost a trivial amount of money. A rule forbidding a plaintiff to appeal an award of nominal damages would, in the vast majority of suits awarding nominal damages, be a rule barring any appeal at all.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Reviewability of Lower Court Decisions > Preservation for Review

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

**HN8** Reviewability of Lower Court Decisions, Preservation for Review

The plaintiff is the master of her complaint and may choose the remedies she wishes to request. A plaintiff should not be forced to pursue every court-conceived theory to preserve her right to appeal.

Civil Procedure > ... > In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction > In Personam Actions > Challenges

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > De Novo Review

Civil Procedure > ... > Responses > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Motions to Dismiss

**HN9** In Personam Actions, Challenges

When personal jurisdiction is at issue, it must be settled before reaching the merits of the case. An appellate court reviews questions of personal jurisdiction de novo. Unlike subject-matter and appellate jurisdiction, objections to personal jurisdiction can be and frequently are waived: In the typical waiver scenario, a defendant waives its personal jurisdiction defense if submissions, appearances and filings give the plaintiff a reasonable expectation that the defendant will defend the suit on the merits or cause the court to go to some effort that would be wasted if personal jurisdiction is later found lacking. Similarly, if a defendant makes a motion under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(2\) to \(5\) but does not raise lack of personal jurisdiction, any objection is waived by operation of Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(h\)\(1\).

Civil Procedure > Pleading & Practice > Motion Practice

**HN10** Pleading & Practice, Motion Practice

An objection is not "available" within the meaning of Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(g\)\(2\) when the objection is futile in the sense that the law bars the district court from adopting it to dismiss.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > De Novo Review

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Amendment of Pleadings > Relation Back

**HN11** Standards of Review, De Novo Review

An appellate court reviews de novo the district court's conclusion that allegations in an amended pleading do not relate back to the original pleading. An amendment relates back to the date of the original pleading if the amendment asserts a claim or defense that arose out of the conduct, transaction, or occurrence set out—or attempted to be set out—in the original pleading. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15\(c\)\(1\)\(B\). When applying this standard, courts ask whether the party asserting the statute of limitations defense had been placed on notice that he could be called to answer for the allegations in the amended pleading.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > Sherman Act

**HN12** [blue icon] Sherman Act, Claims

An antitrust claim must allege an antitrust injury.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > De Novo Review

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation

Governments > Courts > Judicial Precedent

Civil Procedure > Preliminary Considerations > Federal & State Interrelationships > Erie Doctrine

**HN13** [blue icon] Standards of Review, De Novo Review

In Michigan, contract interpretation is a question of law and therefore subject to de novo review. A federal court looks to the final decisions of Michigan's highest court, and if there is no decision directly on point, then the federal court must make an Erie guess to determine how that court, if presented with the issue, would resolve it. In making that guess, intermediate appellate decisions are viewed as persuasive unless it is shown that the state's highest court would decide the issue differently. Federal courts are also bound by their own published precedent interpreting Michigan law, except where the decisions have subsequently been called into question by Michigan courts.

Contracts Law > Statute of Frauds > Requirements > Performance

Contracts Law > Statute of Frauds > Requirements > Writings

Contracts Law > Statute of Frauds > Requirements > Signatures

**HN14** [blue icon] Requirements, Performance

The Michigan statute of frauds provides that any contract that, by its terms, is not to be performed within 1 year is void unless it is in writing and signed with an authorized signature by the party to be charged with the agreement. Mich. Comp. Laws. § 566.132\(1\).

Business & Corporate Law > ... > Corporate Governance > Directors & Officers > Management Duties & Liabilities

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Intent

Evidence > Inferences & Presumptions > Presumptions > Rebuttal of Presumptions

HN15 [ ] Directors & Officers, Management Duties & Liabilities

Michigan courts have explained that, when contracting parties wish to ensure that a corporate officer is bound in both an individual and an official capacity, the nearly universal practice is that the officer signs twice—once as an officer and again as an individual. When the signatory signed only once, Michigan courts apply normal contract law principles to discern the parties' intent. Michigan courts presume that when appropriate words added to the signature of the individual indicated that he signed on behalf of the corporation in the representative capacity designated, the individual is not bound in his personal capacity. But that presumption may be rebutted: Where anything on the face of the paper suggests a doubt as to the party bound, or the character in which any of the signers had acted in affixing his name, testimony may be admitted between the original parties to show the true intent.

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Intent

HN16 [ ] Contract Interpretation, Intent

Under Texas law, it is uniformly held that an unsigned paper may be incorporated by reference in the paper signed by the person sought to be charged. The language used is not important provided the document signed by the defendant plainly refers to another writing. The referenced document may be incorporated in whole or in part, depending on the referring language used. The primary concern of the court is to ascertain the true intentions of the parties as expressed in the instrument, and courts should examine and consider the entire writing in an effort to harmonize and give effect to all the provisions of the contract so that none will be rendered meaningless.

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Intent

HN17 [ ] Contract Interpretation, Intent

Plainly referring to a document requires more than merely mentioning the document. The language in the signed document must show the parties intended for the other document to become part of the agreement.

Civil Procedure > Trials > Jury Trials > Province of Court & Jury

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Ambiguities & Contra Proferentem

HN18 [ ] Jury Trials, Province of Court & Jury

The meaning of an ambiguous contract is a question of fact that must be decided by the jury. This principle applies with equal strength in the context of noncompete agreements.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Appellate Jurisdiction > Final Judgment Rule

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Appellate Jurisdiction > Interlocutory Orders

HN19 [ ] Appellate Jurisdiction, Final Judgment Rule

There is simply no rule or case law that requires litigants to move for reconsideration of an interlocutory ruling in order to avoid waiving a challenge to that ruling on appeal of a final decision.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Per Se Violations

HN20 [blue icon] Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason, Per Se Violations

The doctrine of per se violations applies only if a restraint clearly and unquestionably falls within one of the handful of categories that have been collectively deemed per se anticompetitive. The classic examples are naked, horizontal restraints pertaining to prices or territories.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Per Se Violations

HN21 [blue icon] Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason, Per Se Violations

Horizontality alone does not necessarily justify invocation of the per se rule. Applying the rule of reason is the default position and can be applied to horizontal restraints as well if they do not fit into existing categories of per se violations.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Cartels & Horizontal Restraints > Sherman Act

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > Allocation

HN22 [blue icon] Cartels & Horizontal Restraints, Sherman Act

The burden of showing the existence of an unreasonable restraint on trade lies with defendants.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Affirmative Defenses > Laches

HN23 [blue icon] Affirmative Defenses, Laches

Michigan law provides that the doctrine of laches is triggered by the plaintiff's failure to do something that should have been done under the circumstances or failure to claim or enforce a right at the proper time. However, the doctrine is only applicable in cases in which there is an unexcused or unexplained delay in commencing an action and a corresponding change of material condition that results in prejudice to a party.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Affirmative Defenses > Laches

HN24 [blue icon] Affirmative Defenses, Laches

Michigan courts presume that when a claim is brought within the statute of limitations, as this claim undisputedly was, the doctrine of laches does not apply.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Affirmative Defenses > Laches

HN25 [ ] Affirmative Defenses, Laches

The application of laches can shorten, but never lengthen, the analogous period of limitations. Thus, laches may bar a legal claim even if the statutory period of limitations has not yet expired.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Affirmative Defenses > Laches

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Affirmative Defenses > Unclean Hands

HN26 [ ] Affirmative Defenses, Laches

Under Michigan law, a party with unclean hands may not assert the equitable defense of laches. The unclean hands doctrine allows a court to deny equitable relief when the party applying for such relief is guilty of conduct involving fraud, deceit, unconscionability, or bad faith related to the matter at issue to the detriment of the other party. In determining whether a party comes before a court with clean hands, the primary factor to be considered is whether the party sought to mislead or deceive the other party.

Contracts Law > ... > Measurement of Damages > Foreseeable Damages > Lost Profits

HN27 [ ] Foreseeable Damages, Lost Profits

Under Michigan law, lost profits resulting from a breach of contract may be considered by a jury in determining damages. Permitting juries to estimate lost profits comports with the underlying principle of Michigan law that when, from the nature of the case, the amount of the damages can not be estimated with certainty, or only a part of them can be so estimated, we can see no objection to placing before the jury all the facts and circumstances of the case, having any tendency to show damages, or their probable amount; so as to enable them to make the most intelligible and probable estimate which the nature of the case will permit. While lost profits must be proven with a reasonable degree of certainty and cannot be based solely on conjecture and speculation, the law permits some level of uncertainty to be resolved by the trier of fact.

Contracts Law > ... > Damages > Measurement of Damages > Foreseeable Damages

HN28 [ ] Measurement of Damages, Foreseeable Damages

Reasonable royalties are an accepted method of calculating damages in patent infringement and misappropriation of trade secret cases. 35 U.S.C.S. § 284; Mich. Comp. Laws § 445.1904.

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Intent

HN29 [ ] Contract Interpretation, Intent

Michigan courts, like their Texas counterparts, distinguish between contractual terms that merely mention another document and those that are made for the purpose of making such writing a part of the contract. In so doing, courts must look for the party's intent within the contract.

Counsel: ARGUED: John J. Bursch, BURSCH LAW PLLC, Caledonia, Michigan, for Innovations Ventures.

Baxter W. Banowsky, BANOWSKY & LEVINE, P.C., Dallas, Texas, for Nutrition Science Laboratories, Alan Jones, and L.O.D.C.

ON BRIEF: John J. Bursch, BURSCH LAW PLLC, Caledonia, Michigan, Matthew T. Nelson, WARNER NORCROSS & JUDD LLP, Grand Rapids, Michigan, E. Powell Miller, Martha J. Olijnyk, THE MILLER LAW FIRM, P.C., Rochester, Michigan, for Innovations Ventures.

Baxter W. Banowsky, BANOWSKY & LEVINE, P.C., Dallas, Texas, for Nutrition Science Laboratories, Alan Jones, and L.O.D.C.

Judges: Before: SILER, GRIFFIN, and STRANCH, Circuit Judges.

Opinion by: JANE B. STRANCH

Opinion

---

[*323] [***2] JANE B. STRANCH, Circuit Judge. Some years ago, Plaintiff Innovation Ventures (Innovation), manufacturer of 5-Hour Energy, settled a lawsuit with the now-defunct Custom Nutrition Laboratories (Custom Nutrition) by entering into a noncompete agreement. When Nutrition Science Laboratories (NSL) subsequently purchased Custom Nutrition's assets, it did not abide by the restrictive covenants [**2] in that noncompete agreement. Innovation [*324] initially sued Custom Nutrition; NSL; and Alan Jones, an officer of both Custom Nutrition and NSL, and later added a suit against a related company, Lily of the Desert (collectively, Defendants). After protracted litigation, Innovation was awarded nominal damages for its core breach of contract claim. For the reasons explained below, we AFFIRM in part, REVERSE in part, and REMAND to the district court for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

I. BACKGROUND

A. Factual History

The story of the parties' business relationship and its subsequent deterioration is lengthy and complex, and many of its details are hotly disputed. The district court ably described the relevant events in some detail in one of its summary judgment orders. See Innovation Ventures, LLC v. Custom Nutrition Labs., LLC (Innovation Ventures II), No. 12-13850, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129946, 2015 WL 5679879, at *1-7 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 28, 2015). The following is a summary of the critical facts.

[***3] 1. Breakdown of the Manufacturing Relationship

Plaintiff Innovation is the maker and distributor of 5-Hour Energy, a well-known "energy shot." In 2004, when Innovation was doing business as Living Essentials, it contracted with Custom Nutrition to manufacture and package 5-Hour Energy. Defendant Alan Jones was the President and CEO of Custom Nutrition at the [**3] time and had previously manufactured a two-ounce energy shot called "Shotz." When Living Essentials ended the business relationship some years later—abruptly and unfairly, according to Defendants—Custom Nutrition had a surplus of ingredients and packaging. Jones used the surplus to continue manufacturing 5-Hour Energy for an unspecified amount of time after the relationship ended. Jones averred that his use of the surplus was mitigation of damages protected by the Uniform Commercial Code.

The companies then sued one another, with each claiming that the other had breached the contract, stolen trade secrets or intellectual property, and committed assorted torts. The protracted litigation came to an end almost two years later when, according to Jones, Custom Nutrition was on the verge of bankruptcy. The companies then entered into the Settlement Agreement that is at the center of this litigation.

The Agreement contains an admission that Custom Nutrition and Jones "wrongfully manufactured" products bearing the 5-Hour Energy label, provides that Living Essentials owns the 5-Hour Energy formula, and forbids Custom Nutrition from manufacturing any new "Energy Liquid" that "contain[s] anything [**4] in the Choline Family." According to Innovation, ingesting choline and related substances improves focus, and including them in the 5-Hour Energy recipe was a critical innovation. In return for these restrictions and admissions, Living Essentials paid Custom Nutrition $1.85 million. Specific provisions of the Settlement Agreement are discussed in more detail below.

2. NSL Purchases Custom Nutrition's Assets

In the words of the district court, Custom Nutrition was "in a precarious financial condition," and the cash infusion was insufficient "to enable the company to regain its financial footing." Innovation Ventures II, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129946, 2015 WL 5679879, at \*4. Jones therefore spoke with Don Lovelace, owner of Lily of the Desert, about the possibility of Lily acquiring Custom Nutrition. [**4] Lovelace [*325] instead agreed to purchase Custom Nutrition's assets and formed a new corporation, Defendant NSL, which entered into an Asset Purchase Agreement with Custom Nutrition.

The Asset Purchase Agreement provides that NSL acquires Custom Nutrition's listed assets but is not "responsible for any liabilities, liens, security interests, claims, obligations, or encumbrances" of Custom Nutrition except for those listed on an attached schedule—principally, debt Custom [**5] Nutrition owed to a bank. The Asset Purchase Agreement includes one reference to the Settlement Agreement: "[T]he formula for energy drinks manufactured by [Custom Nutrition] and certain related trademark and copyright matters are limited by the settlement agreement between [Custom Nutrition] and Living Essentials."

After the execution of the Asset Purchase Agreement, NSL went into the energy shot business. Jones became an employee of Lily and represented himself as President of NSL. NSL marketed itself as a continuation of Custom Nutrition and took on Custom Nutrition's old orders and customers. Over the next few years, NSL produced and distributed energy shots containing choline citrate, choline bitartrate, betaine, and alpha glycerolphosphorylcholine (alpha GPC). The first two substances are listed in the Choline Family definition in the Settlement Agreement; the latter two are, according to Innovation, chemical equivalents to choline covered by the definition's catch-all clause.

B. Proceedings Below

1. Lead Case (Nos. 17-1734/1771)

Innovation sued Custom Nutrition,<sup>1</sup> NSL, and Jones for breaching the Settlement Agreement and for tortious interference. Proceedings in the district court [**6] were protracted.

After rejecting two motions to dismiss raising objections to personal jurisdiction, the district court addressed whether NSL had violated the Choline Family restrictions. It granted partial summary judgment to Innovation based on Defendants' admitted production of energy shots containing choline bitartrate and choline citrate. See Innovation Ventures, LLC v. Custom Nutrition Labs., LLC \(Innovation Ventures I\), No. 12-13850, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 137037, 2014 WL 4829582, at \*3 \(E.D. Mich. Sept. 29, 2014\). The court concluded that whether betaine and alpha GPC (which Defendants also admitted to using) were included in the catch-all clause in the Choline Family definition was ambiguous as a matter of law. See [2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 137037, \[WL\] at \*2-3](#). A jury trial was convened to determine whether the two ingredients were included in the clause's scope; the jury concluded that both were.

---

<sup>1</sup> Custom Nutrition did not respond, and default was entered.

The district court then turned to issues related to liability under the Settlement Agreement. The court concluded that: (1) NSL was bound by the Choline Family restrictions in the Settlement Agreement by virtue of their incorporation into the Asset Purchase Agreement, see *Innovation Ventures II, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129946, 2015 WL 5679879, at *16-19*; (2) Jones was bound by the Settlement Agreement because he signed it, see *2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129946, [WL] at *20-21*; and (3) the twenty-year duration of the Settlement Agreement was unreasonable under Michigan law, necessitating reformation of the [**7] contract to last only three years, see *2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129946, [WL] at *24-25*.

After another round of briefing, the district court turned to the remaining issues, concluding that: (1) Innovation was not entitled to summary judgment as to liability on its main breach of contract claim because NSL's affirmative defense of laches [*326] raised factual disputes, see Innovation Ventures, LLC v. Custom Nutrition Labs., LLC (Innovation Ventures III), 256 F. Supp. 3d 696, 704 (E.D. Mich. 2017); and (2) Innovation's three proposed methodologies for calculating damages were impermissible, although Innovation could "still recover lost profits under a non-patent-infringement specific method of calculation," see id. at 710-12 & n.8.

That order was handed down about one month before the final jury trial was scheduled to begin. According to Innovation, the order left it "without any theory of actual damages to present to the jury, leaving only the theory of nominal damages" on which it could recover with regard to its primary claim. Count III, alleging that Jones breached the Settlement Agreement by cooperating with adverse parties, had yet to be resolved. See id. at 715. The parties therefore entered four stipulations "[f]or the purpose of expediting appeal of the previous orders and judgment":

- [***6] 1. The parties stipulate to the dismissal of Count III of Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint [**8] with prejudice pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 41(a)(1).
- 2. The parties stipulate that the meaning of "any successful order" as used in Section 20 of the Settlement Agreement does not encompass a judgment or order for nominal damages.<sup>2</sup>
- 3. The parties stipulate that, if awarded, nominal damages are $1.
- 4. The parties stipulate that nominal damages in the amount of $1 do not constitute sufficient prejudice to support the affirmative defense of laches under Michigan law.

The parties submitted a proposed judgment awarding nominal damages to Innovation. Counsel for both parties signed the proposed judgment, indicating that it was "Approved as to Form Only and Preserving All Rights of Appeal."

The district court had reservations about this resolution, explaining that it was "not certain that entering this proposed judgment will actually preserve" either party's right to appeal. It nonetheless entered judgment in Innovation's favor on Count I and awarded nominal damages. Innovation appealed, and NSL cross-appealed.

2. Secondary Case (No. 17-1911)

As the Lead Case was proceeding in the district court, Innovation brought a new suit against NSL, adding a new defendant: Lily of the Desert. According to the complaint, discovery in the Lead [**9] Case revealed that Lily was also liable under the Settlement Agreement because of its relationship with NSL. Innovation brought the Secondary Case to prevent NSL from "play[ing] shell games to avoid liability and any potential judgment." All claims in the Secondary Case relate to the same nucleus of fact as in the Lead Case, and Innovation concedes that the claims in the Secondary Case "rise or fall with the rulings in the lead case."

All parties agreed the judgment in the Lead Case rendered the claims in the Secondary Case "effectively moot," so the district court entered judgment in favor of Defendants. *Innovation Ventures, LLC v. Nutrition Sci. Labs., LLC (Innovation Ventures IV), No. 16-11179, [***7] 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 211640, 2017 WL 4553429, at *1-2 (E.D. Mich. July 17, [*327] 2017)*. Innovation appealed. The two cases were consolidated on appeal.

---

<sup>2</sup>Section 20 of the Settlement Agreement provides that a party seeking to enforce the Agreement "shall be entitled to its attorney's fees upon obtaining any successful order against the Party against whom such enforcement is sought."

II. ANALYSIS

A. Jurisdiction

Defendants raise two jurisdictional objections: lack of appellate jurisdiction and lack of personal jurisdiction over both Jones and NSL. HN1 We may review jurisdictional objections in any order. See Ruhrgas AG v. Marathon Oil Co., 526 U.S. 574, 578, 119 S. Ct. 1563, 143 L. Ed. 2d 760 \(1999\) (explaining that "there is no unyielding jurisdictional hierarchy" as between subject-matter and personal jurisdiction).

1. Appellate Jurisdiction

Defendants argue that the judgment pursuant to stipulations [\[\*\*10\]](#) in the Lead Case was not a final appealable decision for purposes of 28 U.S.C. § 1291.<sup>3</sup>

Defendants did not raise this argument before the district court. To the contrary, when the district court questioned Defendants' counsel—the same counsel representing them on appeal—about whether the stipulations could result in a "final resolution," counsel responded that "there is Sixth Circuit case law for the proposition that a plaintiff can dismiss with prejudice the remaining claims if they feel that the main thrust of their case has been already decided" and that "the Sixth Circuit does actually authorize a procedure just very much like this in order to finalize a case, resolve all the issues, and make it ripe for appeal." The inconsistency between the representations made to the district court and those included in the motion to dismiss is concerning but does not change our approach to the jurisdictional question at hand. We must satisfy ourselves that appellate jurisdiction exists even when neither party raises the issue. See Bd. of Trs. of Plumbers, Local Union No. 392 v. Humbert, 884 F.3d 624, 625 \(6th Cir. 2018\).

HN2 Appellate courts have jurisdiction to hear "appeals from all final decisions of the district courts." 28 U.S.C. § 1291. A decision is final for the purposes of § 1291 if it "ends the litigation [\[\*\*8\]](#) on the [\[\*\*11\]](#) merits and leaves nothing for the court to do but execute the judgment." Catlin v. United States, 324 U.S. 229, 233, 65 S. Ct. 631, 89 L. Ed. 911 \(1945\). This "firm finality principle [is] designed to guard against piecemeal appeals." Microsoft Corp. v. Baker, 137 S. Ct. 1702, 1707, 198 L. Ed. 2d 132 \(2017\). There is also a long-standing rule that a party may not appeal a judgment to which it consented. See United States v. Babbitt, 104 U.S. 767, 768, 26 L. Ed. 921, 17 Ct. Cl. 431 \(1881\); Scholl v. Belmont Oil Corp., 327 F.2d 697, 700 \(6th Cir. 1964\). Satisfaction of that rule is a requirement of § 1291. See Raceway Props., Inc. v. Emprise Corp., 613 F.2d 656, 657 \(6th Cir. 1980\) (per curiam). We therefore must determine whether this judgment entered pursuant to stipulations comports with § 1291's requirements.

a. The Raceway Standard

HN3 There is an important exception to the rule prohibiting appeals from judgments to which the appellant consented. As we explained in Raceway Properties, an appeal is permissible when "solicitation of the formal dismissal was designed only to expedite review of an order which had in effect dismissed appellants' complaint." Id. (citing United States v. Procter & Gamble Co., 356 U.S. 677, 78 S. Ct. 983, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1077 \(1958\)).

Procter & Gamble, the Supreme Court decision upon which Raceway relied, was an antitrust case in which the Government had refused to produce a grand jury transcript. 356 U.S. at 678-79. On the Government's suggestion, the district court entered an order providing that, if the Government did not produce the transcript by a particular date, the case would be dismissed. Id. at 679. The case was subsequently dismissed and appealed [\[\*\*12\]](#) to the

---

<sup>3</sup> Defendants have not moved to dismiss the appeal in the Secondary Case, although they argue that that appeal is frivolous and that Innovation should be sanctioned for pursuing it. Appellate jurisdiction in the Secondary Case is not in doubt. The judgment in the Secondary Case was entered on the basis of preclusion, not pursuant to stipulations.

Supreme Court, where Procter & Gamble argued that the appeal should be dismissed because "a plaintiff who has voluntarily dismissed his complaint may not sue out a writ of error." Id. at 680. The Court explained that rule "ha[d] no application here" because "[w]hen the Government proposed dismissal for failure to obey, it had lost on the merits and was only seeking an expeditious review." Id. at 680-81. The Supreme Court distinguished between consenting to the substance of a judgment and consenting to its form: "The plaintiffs did not consent to a judgment against them, but only that, if there was to be such a judgment, it should be final in form instead of interlocutory, so that they might come to this court without further delay." Id. at 681 (quoting Thomsen v. Cayser, 243 U.S. 66, 83, 37 S. Ct. 353, 61 L. Ed. 597 (1917)).

[***9] In Raceway, we held that expeditious review could be sought in this manner in contexts other than discovery disputes. Raceway, also an antitrust suit, involved a partial summary judgment decision that had defined the market at issue:

Appellants took issue with the district court's determination of the relevant market. Appellants informed the court they believed the court's order effectively terminated the lawsuit since they were not prepared to and could not [**13] proceed with evidence regarding the relevant market outlined by the court. The appellants requested a formal order of dismissal so that they could proceed with an appeal challenging the district court's ruling on the scope of the relevant market. Such an order was entered and this appeal followed.

613 F.2d at 657. We permitted the appeal on the grounds quoted above: "[S]olicitation of the formal dismissal was designed only to expedite review of an order which had in effect dismissed appellants' complaint." Id.

The Raceway rule subsequently found purchase. Thus, for example, we heard an appeal pursuant to Raceway when a plaintiff sought voluntary dismissal of her suit after the district court "had dismissed finally the only viable claim which she had advanced" even though the court "offered to hear her suit to the degree that it sounded in negligence." Bogorad v. Eli Lilly & Co., 768 F.2d 93, 94 (6th Cir. 1985); see also Sandul v. Larion, 52 F.3d 326 (Table) [published in full-text format at 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 8636], 1995 WL 216919 (6th Cir. Apr. 11, 1995). By contrast, Raceway's requirements were not satisfied when a plaintiff consented to dismissal with prejudice after denial of his motion to remand to state court; we explained that the statute of limitations and failure to exhaust defenses that the plaintiff argued would have doomed his federal claim had not been fully aired and might have [**14] been decided in his favor. Laczay v. Ross Adhesives, Div. of Conros Corp., 855 F.2d 351, 355 (6th Cir. 1988). As recently as four years ago, we considered an appeal of final stipulations entered pursuant to Raceway without even pausing to consider whether § 1291 was satisfied. See Ram Int'l, Inc. v. ADT Sec. Servs., 555 F. App'x 493, 496-97 (6th Cir. 2014).

[*329] Other circuits cite Raceway with approval. See, e.g., Helm Fin. Corp. v. MNVA R.R., Inc., 212 F.3d 1076, 1080 (8th Cir. 2000); Trevino-Barton v. Pittsburgh Nat'l Bank, 919 F.2d 874, 878 (3d Cir. 1990); Empire Volkswagen, Inc. v. World-Wide Volkswagen Corp., 814 F.2d 90, 94 (2d Cir. 1987). Wright & Miller cites Empire Volkswagen (a Second Circuit case which in turn relied on Raceway) as an example of a good approach to the problem of voluntary or [***10] invited dismissals. See 15A Charles Alan Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure: Jurisdiction and Related Matters § 3914.8 (2d ed. Supp. 2018) ("There is much to be said for a rule that routinely permits a plaintiff to manufacture finality by abandoning all remaining parts of a case but that forbids any attempt at recapture.").

We have, however, staked out HN4 two important limits on the application of Raceway. First, parties may not appeal claims that were dismissed without prejudice. Libbey-Owens-Ford Co. v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield Mut. of Ohio, 982 F.2d 1031, 1034 (6th Cir. 1993). Second, if a party seeks to come within the Raceway exception, she should make "her intention known to the court and opposing parties." Laczay, 855 F.2d at 354. "While it is possible for a party to consent to a judgment and still preserve his right to appeal, he must reserve that right unequivocally, as it [**15] will not be presumed." Id. (quoting Coughlin v. Regan, 768 F.2d 468, 470 (1st Cir. 1985)).

b. The Status of Raceway in Light of Microsoft

Defendants point out that Raceway and accompanying circuit precedent must be interpreted in light of the recent Supreme Court decision in *Microsoft Corp. v. Baker*, 137 S. Ct. 1702, 198 L. Ed. 2d 132 \(2017\). Microsoft involved an appeal by plaintiffs who had been denied class-action certification and *Rule 23\(f\)* permission to appeal that denial. *Id. at 1706*. Instead of pursuing their individual claims to final judgment, plaintiffs voluntarily dismissed their claims with prejudice but "reserved the right to revive their claims" in case of remand. *Id. at 1706-07*.

The Supreme Court held that this type of voluntary dismissal did not satisfy the finality requirement of *§ 1291*. *Id. at 1707*. The Court was centrally concerned with the possibility that the plaintiffs' tactic would severely undermine the "careful calibration" of *Rule 23\(f\)*. *Id. at 1714-15*. Microsoft also explained that the finality requirement would be transformed into a "pretty puny" rule if plaintiffs could unilaterally transform interlocutory orders into final ones "simply by dismissing their claims with prejudice—subject, no less, to the right to 'revive' those claims." *Id. at 1715* (citation omitted). In a footnote, Microsoft distinguished Procter & Gamble because "that case—a civil antitrust [**16] enforcement action—involved neither class-action certification nor the sort of dismissal tactic at issue here." *Id. at 1715 n.11*.

[**11] We have discussed Microsoft in only one published case. In Board of Trustees of Plumbers, Local Union No. 392 v. Humbert, the district court held at summary judgment that two of the three defendant companies were bound by a collective bargaining agreement. *884 F.3d at 625*. The plaintiff union and the two bound companies then entered a "Stipulated Judgment Order" providing for approximately $45,000 in damages. Id. The order stated that it was entered "for the sole purpose of proceeding with the appeal" and that "none of the parties are waiving any rights or arguments in any subsequent proceedings, . . . including but not limited to the amount of the damages to which the Plaintiffs are entitled to recover." Id. (brackets [*330] omitted). We held that the order was not final for purposes of *§ 1291* because it "does not even conclusively resolve the single issue that it purports to resolve—namely, Local 392's damages arising between January 2010 and August 2011—because the Order specifically reserves the parties' right to litigate 'the amount of the damages.'" *Id. at 626*; see also *Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. v. Allstate Ins. Co.*, 735 F. App'x 208, 210 \(6th Cir. 2018\) (dismissing an appeal pursuant [**17] to Microsoft and Humbert because "Wells Fargo has demanded an indeterminate amount of damages from Allstate, and the district court has to settle on an amount before we will hear an appeal").

Microsoft and Humbert are centrally concerned with the principle, helpfully articulated in *Page Plus of Atlanta, Inc. v. Owl Wireless, LLC*, 733 F.3d 658, 659 \(6th Cir. 2013\), that *HN5* a "conditional dismissal of unresolved claims [or issues], in which the party reserves the right to reinstate those claims [or issues]" does not create finality. But appeals pursuant to Raceway do not necessarily invoke the specter of reviving claims or subsidiary issues upon remand. Many Raceway cases involve an entirely different set of circumstances from those discussed in Microsoft, Humbert, and Page Plus. For example, a Raceway dismissal may simply allow parties to stipulate to issues or theories that they are electing not to pursue—as, for example, was the case in Bogorad, where the plaintiff voluntarily dismissed her suit rather than accept the court's offer to consider her case as one sounding in negligence. *768 F.2d at 94*. It would be perverse indeed if we required a plaintiff to pursue a theory that she did not consider meritorious simply to preserve her right to appeal. And that proposition does not run [**18] afoul of the rule against conditional resolution: Should the plaintiff win remand, she would be barred from changing her mind and electing to pursue a negligence theory after all.

[**12] Importantly, the bases on which the Supreme Court distinguished Procter & Gamble apply equally to Bogorad and the instant case. Neither involves class-action certification, and neither involves a plaintiff unilaterally dismissing undecided claims subject to a right to revive. See *Microsoft*, 137 S. Ct. at 1715 n.11. So although Microsoft may have limited Raceway's scope, it did not abrogate Raceway's operation.

c. Applying Raceway to the Present Case

The remaining question, then, is whether the purported Raceway dismissal in this case falls within permissible boundaries.

In the aftermath of the summary judgment order, liability as to Innovation's main claim was undecided due to the factual disputes relating to Defendants' laches defense. See Innovation Ventures III, 256 F. Supp. 3d at 704. Damages had yet to be determined. Although the court had ruled out Innovation's proposed methodologies, it took care to explain that Innovation could "still recover lost profits" by submitting facts and circumstances to the jury that would allow for a reasonable estimate of the amount. See id. at 710-12 & n.8. A factual [**19] dispute also remained on Count III, a secondary claim alleging that Jones had breached the Settlement Agreement by cooperating with adverse parties. See id. at 715. Despite these open questions, the parties agreed that only one outcome was possible: judgment in favor of Innovation for nominal damages.

The parties' logic was this. With regard to Innovation's core breach of contract claim, the district court had refused permission to present to the jury any of the damages evidence that Innovation had prepared. [*331] With less than a month until trial and discovery and expert report deadlines long past, Innovation saw no feasible way to implement the district court's suggestion to "place before the jury all of the facts and circumstances that tend to prove the probable amount" of lost profits. Id. at 711 n.8. Injunctive relief was likewise impossible; the district court had reformed the Settlement Agreement to last only three years, all of which had already elapsed. See id. at 706 n.5 (clarifying, in 2017, that the restrictive covenants began running in 2009). Only nominal damages remained.

That minimal recovery in turn decided the remaining issues. The only way that Innovation could receive attorney's fees was via the Settlement [**20] Agreement, which provided that [***13] a party seeking to enforce that Agreement "shall be entitled to its attorney's fees upon obtaining any successful order against the Party against whom such enforcement is sought." Innovation was willing to concede that an award of nominal damages was not "successful." Likewise, Defendants' only remaining defense to liability on the breach of contract claim was laches, which is triggered only if there is a showing of prejudice. Township of Yankee Springs v. Fox, 264 Mich. App. 604, 692 N.W.2d 728, 734 \(Mich. Ct. App. 2004\) (per curiam). Defendants were willing to concede that a judgment of nominal damages did not amount to prejudice. As for the lingering Count III, Innovation stipulated to its dismissal with prejudice.

As we turn to our Raceway analysis, the first point to be made clear is that Innovation's stipulated dismissal of Count III does not impact the calculus. Count III was dismissed with prejudice, as is required for a Raceway appeal. See Libbey-Owens-Ford Co., 982 F.2d at 1034. HN6[<sup>1</sup>] When a district court enters judgment against a plaintiff on some claims and the plaintiff voluntarily relinquishes the claims that remain, "this Court will not penalize the plaintiff by dismissing his or her appeal." Hicks v. NLO, Inc., 825 F.2d 118, 120 \(6th Cir. 1987\) (per curiam); see also Page Plus, 733 F.3d at 661 (distinguishing the permissible voluntary dismissal in Hicks [**21] from the impermissible conditional dismissal at issue in that case).

Second, it is irrelevant that Innovation won an award of nominal damages. We HN7[<sup>1</sup>] have consistently allowed plaintiffs who were awarded nominal damages to appeal despite technically winning their suit. See, e.g., Pembaur v. City of Cincinnati, 882 F.2d 1101, 1102 \(6th Cir. 1989\); Hilliard v. Williams, 516 F.2d 1344, 1345 \(6th Cir. 1975\), vacated on other grounds, 424 U.S. 961, 96 S. Ct. 1453, 47 L. Ed. 2d 729 \(1976\); United States v. Gordin, 9 F.2d 394, 394-95 \(6th Cir. 1925\); Mosher v. Joyce, 51 F. 441, 444, 1892 Dec. Comm'r Pat. 579 \(6th Cir. 1892\). The logic underpinning these cases is obvious: It is a rare defendant indeed who would pay to appeal a case in which she lost a trivial amount of money. A rule forbidding a plaintiff to appeal an award of nominal damages would, in the vast majority of suits awarding nominal damages, be a rule barring any appeal at all.

Third, like the plaintiff in Bogorad who was not required to pursue a negligence theory, Innovation is not required to pursue theories it has not prepared and does not wish to pursue. HN8[<sup>1</sup>] The plaintiff is the master of her complaint and may choose the remedies she wishes to request. See Smith v. Nationwide Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co., 505 F.3d 401, 407 \(6th Cir. 2007\). Raceway [***14] itself involved a plaintiff with a similar evidentiary dilemma to that faced by Innovation. Subsequent to the summary judgment ruling, "[a]ppellants informed the court they believed the court's order effectively terminated the [*332] lawsuit since they were not prepared to and could [**22] not proceed with evidence regarding the relevant market outlined by the court." 613 F.2d at 657. A plaintiff should not be forced to pursue every court-conceived theory to preserve her right to appeal.

Fourth, unlike in Humbert and Microsoft, the stipulations at issue in this case do not "specifically reserve[] the parties' right to litigate" the very issues that they purport to resolve. Humbert, 884 F.3d at 626; see also Microsoft, 137 S. Ct. at 1706-07. There must be some mechanism in place for parties to resolve outstanding issues in the wake of a summary judgment order without necessarily proceeding to trial on each one. See Brown v. Cinemark USA, Inc., 876 F.3d 1199, 1201 (9th Cir. 2017) (order) ("The resolution of the present case was not a unilateral dismissal of claims, but a mutual settlement for consideration reached by both parties which expressly preserved certain claims for appeal."); Downey v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 266 F.3d 675, 682 (7th Cir. 2001) ("Parties often stipulate to issues such as damages once the district court resolves liability, but an agreement on a specific issue differs from asking the court to enter judgment, which winds up the case itself."). On remand, none of the stipulated issues will be open for debate: Count III will not spring back to life, and nominal damages will not support an award of attorney's fees or constitute prejudice for purposes [**23] of laches.

Finally, Innovation's intention to appeal pursuant to Raceway was "known to the court and opposing parties." Laczay, 855 F.2d at 354. The first line of the stipulations indicated that they were being entered into "[f]or the purpose of expediting appeal of the previous orders and judgment in this case." At a status conference, Innovation explained to the district court that "what we're trying to accomplish here with the stipulations, is to resolve the liability and all the remaining issues, and then the parties can choose, you know, what they are going to take up on appeal."

For all these reasons, this appeal fits within the boundaries of Raceway and Microsoft, and jurisdiction is proper under § 1291. Defendants' motion to dismiss is therefore denied. Going forward, Innovation "may contest, and we will consider, only those portions of [the] [***15] district court's orders in Innovation I, II, and III] decided adversely to [it]." Empire Volkswagen, 814 F.2d at 94. The same is true, of course, of the cross-appellants.

2. Personal Jurisdiction

Defendants make their second jurisdictional argument in their cross-appeal. There, they "conditionally seek review" of the district court's personal jurisdiction determinations if—but only if—we rule that the [**24] Settlement Agreement may be enforced for more than three years or that Innovation can present its damages evidence.

HN9 When personal jurisdiction is at issue, it must be settled before reaching the merits of the case. Bird v. Parsons, 289 F.3d 865, 872-73 (6th Cir. 2002). We review questions of personal jurisdiction de novo. Stone Surgical, LLC v. Stryker Corp., 858 F.3d 383, 388 (6th Cir. 2017).

Unlike subject-matter and appellate jurisdiction, objections to personal jurisdiction can be and frequently are waived:

In the typical waiver scenario, a defendant waives its personal jurisdiction defense if submissions, appearances and filings give the plaintiff a reasonable expectation that the defendant will defend the suit on the merits or cause the court to go to some effort that would be [*333] wasted if personal jurisdiction is later found lacking.

Means v. U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, 836 F.3d 643, 648 (6th Cir. 2016) (alterations, citation, and internal quotation marks omitted). Similarly, if a defendant makes a motion under Rule 12(b)(2) to (5) but does not raise lack of personal jurisdiction, any objection is waived by operation of Rule 12(h)(1). Id. at 648-49.

In the Secondary Case, NSL filed a motion to dismiss "pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(2) and (6)," but neglected to make any argument under Rule 12(b)(2)—that is, to personal jurisdiction. By failing to object to personal jurisdiction in its initial Rule 12 motion, NSL waived the defense. See Means, 836 F.3d at 648-49.

NSL argues that its failure [**25] to raise personal jurisdiction was excused because the defense was not "available" at the time NSL made its Rule 12 motion. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(g)(2). We will accept for purposes of argument the Federal Circuit's rule that HN10 an objection is not "available" within the meaning of Rule 12(g)(2) when the objection "is futile in the sense that the [***16] law bars the district court from adopting it to dismiss." In re Micron Tech., Inc., 875 F.3d 1091, 1097 (Fed. Cir. 2017). NSL argues that a personal jurisdiction objection was futile because the district court made clear in hearings that the rulings in the Lead Case—presumably including those rulings related to personal jurisdiction—controlled in the Secondary Case as well. But the hearing in which the district court expressed that position took place approximately six months after NSL filed its motion to dismiss. So at the time the Rule 12 motion was made, Defendants did not know it was futile. Indeed, the inclusion of Rule 12\(b\)\(2\)—dismissal for lack of personal jurisdiction—in the motion's header, if not its substance, acknowledges the possibility that it could be raised. NSL's objection to personal jurisdiction was therefore waived in the Secondary Case.

In the Lead Case, by contrast, Defendants filed the Rule 12 motions that would ordinarily suffice to preserve the objection [\[\*\*26\]](#) to personal jurisdiction. On appeal, however, they challenge the district court's conclusion as to personal jurisdiction if and only if we reverse those findings by the district court that favored them. Defendants cite no authority for the proposition that it is possible to consent to jurisdiction only on the condition that the court finds in its favor, and we are aware of none. Defendants consented to this court's jurisdiction so long as we found in their favor and so waived the objection.

Because the decision below was final for purposes of § 1291 and because the objection to lack of personal jurisdiction was waived in both the Lead and the Secondary Cases, we proceed to the merits of the case.

B. Defendants' Dismissed Antitrust Claim

We begin with an issue that logically precedes the primary issues on appeal: Defendants' challenge to the district court's dismissal of their antitrust counterclaim as barred by the statute of limitations. Defendants argue that their counterclaim relates back to their original counterclaim.

HN11 [↑] We review de novo the district court's conclusion that allegations in an amended pleading do not relate back to the original pleading. United States ex rel. Bledsoe v. Cnty. Health Sys., Inc., 501 F.3d 493, 516 (6th Cir. 2007). An amendment relates back to the date [\[\*\*27\]](#) of [\[\*\*\*17\]](#) the original pleading if "the amendment asserts a claim or defense that arose out of the conduct, transaction, or occurrence set [\[\*334\]](#) out—or attempted to be set out—in the original pleading." Fed. R. Civ. P. 15\(c\)\(1\)\(B\). When applying this standard, we "ask[] whether the party asserting the statute of limitations defense had been placed on notice that he could be called to answer for the allegations in the amended pleading." Bledsoe, 501 F.3d at 516.

Count III of Defendants' original counterclaim, titled "Declaration that Settlement Agreement is an Illegal Restraint on Trade," alleges that the Choline Family restrictions in the Settlement Agreement are unenforceable because they are "nothing more than an agreement to limit competition." Defendants, without citing any Rule 15 caselaw, argue that the phrase "restraint on trade" and the accompanying factual allegations were "sufficient to place Innovation on notice that its anti-competitive behavior would be at issue in this case." But HN12 [↑] an antitrust claim must allege an antitrust injury. See Bassett v. NCAA, 528 F.3d 426, 432 (6th Cir. 2008). The factual allegations in the second amended counterclaim that might establish an antitrust injury—allegations related to Innovation's history of monopolistic and anticompetitive behavior—were absent from [\[\*\*28\]](#) the original and first amended counterclaims. In the absence of any reference to antitrust law or the Sherman Act, or any description of an antitrust injury, Innovation was not "on notice that [it] could be called to answer for" an antitrust violation. Bledsoe, 501 F.3d at 516.

Because we agree with the district court that the antitrust counterclaim did not relate back to the original counterclaim, we affirm the dismissal of this counterclaim.

C. Interpreting the Settlement Agreement

We next consider a set of arguments challenging the district court's interpretations of the Settlement Agreement. The parties challenge the district court's conclusions that: (1) Jones is bound by the Settlement Agreement in his personal capacity, see Innovation Ventures II, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129946, 2015 WL 5679879, at *20-21; (2)

NSL is bound by the restrictive covenant provisions in § 5.c of the Settlement Agreement by virtue of their incorporation into the Asset Purchase Agreement, see 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129946, WL at \*16-19; (3) the catch-all clause in the Choline Family definition is ambiguous as a matter of law, see Innovation Ventures I, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 137037, 2014 WL 4829582, at \*2; and (4) the duration of the restrictive [***18] covenant provision is unreasonable as written and so must be reformed from twenty years to three, see Innovation Ventures II, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129946, 2015 WL 5679879, at \*22-24. We consider the arguments in this order.

The parties do not dispute that the Settlement [**29] Agreement must be interpreted according to Michigan law.HN13 "In Michigan, contract interpretation is a question of law and therefore subject to de novo review." Solo v. UPS Co., 819 F.3d 788, 794 \(6th Cir. 2016\). "[W]e look to the final decisions of [Michigan's] highest court, and if there is no decision directly on point, then we must make an Erie guess to determine how that court, if presented with the issue, would resolve it." Conlin v. Mortg. Elec. Registration Sys., Inc., 714 F.3d 355, 358-59 \(6th Cir. 2013\). In making that guess, intermediate appellate decisions are "viewed as persuasive unless it is shown that the state's highest court would decide the issue differently." Id. at 359 (quoting Savedoff v. Access Grp., Inc., 524 F.3d 754, 762 \(6th Cir. 2008\)). We are also bound by our own published precedent interpreting Michigan law, except where our decisions have subsequently been called into question by Michigan courts. See Rutherford v. Columbia Gas, 575 F.3d 616, 619 \(6th Cir. 2009\).

[*335] 1. Whether Jones Is Bound

Defendants argue that the Settlement Agreement does not bind Defendant Jones in his personal capacity.

Innovation's first response is that Jones admitted at trial that he is a party to the Settlement Agreement and so is estopped from contesting it now. Jones was asked, "Well, you are a party—and you are a party to the settlement agreement, right? You are a CNL party." He responded, "Right." Jones is not an attorney. His statement is more [**30] properly viewed as a concession that he is listed as a CNL party in the text of the Settlement Agreement than as an admission that he is bound in his personal capacity. We therefore turn to the merits of the capacity issue.

HN14 The Michigan statute of frauds provides that any contract that, "by its terms, is not to be performed within 1 year" is void unless it is "in writing and signed with an authorized signature by the party to be charged with the agreement." Mich. Comp. Laws. § 566.132\(1\). The [***19] restrictive covenants in the Settlement Agreement last "the same length of time that an issued patent would provide protection"—that is, 20 years. See 35 U.S.C. § 154\(a\)\(2\). By operation of the statute of frauds, then, the Settlement Agreement may not be enforced against any party who did not sign it.

Jones signed the Agreement, but he did so only once and labeled his signature "President and CEO." The relevant portion of the signature page appears as follows:

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, each Party has executed this Agreement.

CUSTOM NUTRITION LABORATORIES, LLC
FOR ITSELF AND ALL OF THE CNL PARTIES

By:

PRINTED NAME: Alan Jones

ITS: President & CEO

DATE: August 17th, 2009

Jones did not sign the Agreement anywhere else, although he did initial each page. The Agreement defines the referenced "CNL Parties" to include Custom Nutrition; its heirs, affiliates, successors, assigns, and so on; and its officers and employees, "including, without limitation, Alan Jones." [**31]

HN15 Michigan courts have explained that, when contracting parties wish to ensure that a corporate officer is bound in both an individual and an official capacity, "the nearly universal practice is that the officer signs twice—once as an officer and again as an individual." Livonia Bldg. Materials Co. v. Harrison Constr. Co., 276 Mich. App. 514, 742 N.W.2d 140, 146 (Mich. Ct. App. 2007) (per curiam) (quoting Geresy v. Dommert, No. 243468, 2004 Mich. App. LEXIS 1397, 2004 WL 1222991, at *5 (Mich. Ct. App. June 3, 2004) (per curiam)). Following that practice strongly supports a conclusion that the signatory is bound in both capacities. See, e.g., Lexon Ins. Co. v. Naser, 781 F.3d 335, 340-41 (6th Cir. 2015) (citing Livonia and concluding that an individual who signed a contract once as CEO and once with his social security [*336] number was bound in his individual capacity). That practice was not followed here.

[***20] When the signatory signed only once, Michigan courts apply normal contract law principles to discern the parties' intent. Michigan courts presume that when "appropriate words added to the signature of [the individual] indicated that he signed on behalf of the corporation in the representative capacity designated," the individual is not bound in his personal capacity. Wright v. Drury Petroleum Corp., 229 Mich. 542, 201 N.W. 484, 485 (Mich. 1924). But that presumption may be rebutted: "Where anything on the face of the paper suggests a doubt as to the party bound, or the character in which any of the signers had acted in affixing his name, testimony [**32] may be admitted between the original parties to show the true intent." Armstrong v. Andrews, 109 Mich. 537, 67 N.W. 567, 568 (Mich. 1896) (citation omitted).

Past cases provide useful examples of how courts applying Michigan law analyze a single signature. In Livonia, the individual signed one time, he labeled his signature "President," and the space for a guarantor was left blank. 742 N.W.2d at 146. The Michigan Court of Appeals concluded that the "signature on the document was a corporate signature and that [the signatory] did not personally guarantee" the debts at issue. Id. In Andersons, Inc. v. Horton Farms, Inc., we applied Michigan law to decide the capacity in which Horton, the president of the eponymous defendant company, had signed nine contracts. 166 F.3d 308, 315-16 (6th Cir. 1998). We determined that five of the contracts "unambiguously show[] that the parties intended to bind Mr. Horton only in his corporate capacity" because they were signed "Rodney Horton, Pres.," were addressed to Horton Farms, Inc., and listed Horton Farms as the customer on every page. Id. at 316. But four contracts were "signed simply 'Rodney Horton,'" which created ambiguity that could be resolved only by considering parol evidence. Id.

Employees Only, Inc. v. Provenzano, No. 296575, 2011 Mich. App. LEXIS 819, 2011 WL 1687626 (Mich. Ct. App. May 3, 2011) (per curiam), provides a rare example of a case in which a Michigan court was willing [**33] to partially disregard a corporate label attached to a signature. There, the contract explicitly stated that "officers shall be personally liable for amounts not paid under this Agreement," but it was "undisputed that the contract was signed by [the corporation] through Provenzano in his representative capacity." *2011 Mich. App. LEXIS 819, [WL] at *4*. The Michigan Court of Appeals concluded that, because "the signature blocks in the Agreement provide no place for additional signatures for individuals to signal they accept personal liability apart from the corporation, which [***21] explicitly conflicts with the previously cited provisions that call for such liability," the contract was ambiguous and summary disposition was inappropriate. Id.

Perhaps the most helpful example is a recent Michigan case involving very similar facts to the case at hand, including one of the same parties. There, as here, Innovation had entered into a contract containing noncompete provisions that "purport[ed] to bind the employees of defendant." Innovation Ventures, LLC v. Liquid Mfg., LLC (Liquid Mfg. I), No. 315519, 2014 Mich. App. LEXIS 2058, 2014 WL 5408963, at *1, 6 (Mich. Ct. App. Oct. 23, 2014) (per curiam). The Michigan Court of Appeals made quick work of the argument that the individual defendant was personally liable, citing Livonia and explaining that the defendant had signed "in his capacity [**34] as a corporate officer, and not as an individual." *2014 Mich. App. LEXIS 2058, [WL] at *6*. When that case was appealed to the Michigan Supreme Court and partially overturned, this holding was left undisturbed: "Since the plaintiff has not challenged [*337] the Court of Appeals' holding [that Paisley is not individually liable], we do not upset its decision. Paisley is not individually liable because he signed the Agreement in his capacity as a corporate officer." Innovation Ventures, LLC v. Liquid Mfg., LLC (Liquid Mfg. II), 499 Mich. 491, 885 N.W.2d 861, 867 n.6 (Mich. 2016).

In this case, Jones's signature is labeled "President and CEO." Both Livonia, 742 N.W.2d at 146, and Andersons, 166 F.3d at 316, make clear that the label attached to a signature is strong evidence of the capacity in which a contract was signed. The Settlement Agreement mentions Jones by name, and the signature block provides that Jones signs "for [Custom Nutrition] and all of the CNL Parties." However, unlike the contract in Employees Only, this Agreement is centrally concerned with business negotiations and does not explicitly provide for personal liability. See 2011 Mich. App. LEXIS 819, 2011 WL 1687626, at \*4. Thus, as in Liquid Manufacturing I, which decided this precise issue when interpreting a noncompete contract being enforced by this precise plaintiff, we cannot conclude, as a matter of law, that the Agreement binds Jones in his individual capacity.

We therefore [**35] reverse the district court's holding on this issue and conclude that the Settlement Agreement does not bind Jones in his personal capacity.

[***22] 2. Whether NSL Is Bound

NSL was not a party to the Settlement Agreement and so would not ordinarily be bound by its terms. The district court concluded, however, that § 5.c of the Settlement Agreement—containing the Choline Family restrictions—was incorporated by reference into the Asset Purchase Agreement between Custom Nutrition and NSL, such that the restrictive covenants bind NSL. Innovation Ventures II, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129946, 2015 WL 5679879, at \*16-19. Defendants challenge that incorporation decision.

The Asset Purchase Agreement contains a Texas choice of law provision, and the parties do not dispute that Texas law governs the incorporation inquiry. HN16 Under Texas law, "[i]t is uniformly held that an unsigned paper may be incorporated by reference in the paper signed by the person sought to be charged. The language used is not important provided the document signed by the defendant plainly refers to another writing." Owen v. Hendricks, 433 S.W.2d 164, 166 \(Tex. 1968\). The referenced document may be incorporated in whole or in part, depending on the referring language used. See Bob Montgomery Chevrolet, Inc. v. Dent Zone Cos., 409 S.W.3d 181, 189 \(Tex. App. 2013\). "[T]he primary concern of the court is to ascertain the true intentions of the parties as [**36] expressed in the instrument," and "courts should examine and consider the entire writing in an effort to harmonize and give effect to all the provisions of the contract so that none will be rendered meaningless." In re C&H News Co., 133 S.W.3d 642, 645 \(Tex. App. 2003\).

Section 4.2(r) of the Asset Purchase Agreement provides that "the formula for energy drinks manufactured by [Custom Nutrition] and certain related trademark and copyright matters are limited by the settlement agreement between [Custom Nutrition] and Living Essentials and the related consent judgments contained in Schedule 4.2(h)." Schedule 4.2(h) lists, under the header "Settled," that NSL entered into a "Settlement Agreement and Consent Judgment" with Innovation. The parties dispute whether § 4.2(r) "plainly refers" to the Settlement Agreement. Owen, 433 S.W.2d at 166. HN17 "Plainly referring to a document requires more than merely mentioning the document. The language [*338] in the signed document must show the parties intended for the other document to become part of the agreement." Bob Montgomery Chevrolet, 409 S.W.3d at 189 (citation omitted).

[**23] Two Texas cases illustrate the difference between "merely mentioning" and "plainly referring." In Bob Montgomery Chevrolet, a car dealership signed a one-page application that stated that "[a]dditional benefits, qualifications [**37] and details" related to the program were available at a particular website. Id. at 184-85. Terms on that website included a six-month minimum term, a Texas choice-of-law provision, and a Texas forum-selection clause. Id. at 185. The Texas Court of Appeals concluded that the contractual language did not "plainly refer" to the additional online terms as part of the parties' agreement, but rather "indicates that the internet document contained informative material only, not binding terms and conditions intended to be part of the parties' contract." Id. at 190. By contrast, in C&H News Co., the same court was called upon to interpret a one-page arbitration agreement providing that the employee "agreed to submit all claims or disputes between [the employer and the employee] to binding arbitration as provided in the Handbook." 133 S.W.3d at 646. The Texas Court of Appeals had no trouble concluding that "the agreement incorporates, by reference, portions of the employee handbook into the agreement"—in particular, the section labeled "Mutual Arbitration Policy/Procedures." Id.

The acknowledgment in the Asset Purchase Agreement that NSL's rights to the formula were "limited by the settlement agreement" cannot reasonably be read to indicate [**38] that the Settlement Agreement "contain[s] informative material only." Bob Montgomery Chevrolet, 409 S.W.3d at 190. Unlike Bob Montgomery's boilerplate, nonspecific reference to "additional" details, § 4.2(r) is a tailored description of intellectual property rights in a negotiated contract between sophisticated, counseled parties.

As to the portion of the Settlement Agreement that this language incorporates, we agree with the district court that § 4.2(r) incorporates the Choline Family restrictions in § 5.c specifically. These restrictive covenants directly and meaningfully impact "the formula for energy drinks manufactured by [Custom Nutrition]" because they explain what ingredients Custom Nutrition's formula cannot include. In addition, the parties to the Settlement Agreement signaled the importance of the restrictive covenants by allocating $1.8 million of the $1.85 million settlement to that section. It would be illogical to conclude that one of the same [***24] parties overlooked the existence of that key section only a few months after the Settlement Agreement was executed.

Defendants' main counterargument is that other sections of the Asset Purchase Agreement limit the obligations that NSL incurred on behalf of Custom Nutrition. They point to, for [**39] example, § 1.2, which provides that NSL is not responsible for "any liabilities, obligations, or costs resulting from any claim or lawsuit," except for those described in § 1.3—which does not include the Settlement Agreement. Defendants are correct that the language of § 4.2(r) should, if possible, be read to "harmonize" with the limitations on liability found elsewhere in the Agreement. C&H News, 133 S.W.3d at 645. But those limitations should not be read to render § 4.2(r) a nullity; rather, § 4.2(r) should be read as an exception to the limitations. In other words, boilerplate denunciations of obligations do not trump § 4.2(r)'s specific reference to the "limit[]" on the "formula for energy drinks."

We therefore affirm the district court's conclusion that NSL is bound by § 5.c of [*339] the Settlement Agreement by virtue of its incorporation into the Asset Purchase Agreement. As a result, we do not reach Innovation's conditional argument that, if NSL is not bound by the Settlement Agreement, the tortious interference claim should be reinstated.

3. Ambiguity of the Catch-All Clause

Defendants next challenge the district court's conclusion that whether betaine and alpha GPC are covered by the catch-all clause in the Choline Family definition (which prohibits use of listed chemicals' "equivalents [**40] in all forms, derivatives, constituents, and synthetic equivalents or substitutes") is ambiguous as a matter of law.

Defendants argue that the district court failed to construe the catch-all clause narrowly and against the party seeking restraint, as is required by Michigan law in contracts involving noncompete agreements. Neither proposition requires a court to unilaterally disregard reasonable readings of a noncompete agreement. To the contrary, HN18↑ "the meaning of an ambiguous contract is a question of fact that must be decided by the jury." Klapp v. United Ins. Grp. Agency, Inc., 468 Mich. 659, 663 N.W.2d 447, 453-54 (Mich. 2003). This principle applies with equal strength in the context of noncompete agreements. See, e.g., Bar's Prods. Inc. v. Bars Prods. Int'l Inc., ***251 662 F. App'x 400, 406-08 (6th Cir. 2016); Pitsch Holding Co. v. Pitsch Enters., Inc., No. 315800, 2014 Mich. App. LEXIS 1453, 2014 WL 3887186, at *4-5 (Mich. Ct. App. Aug. 7, 2014) (per curiam). We find no error in the district court's conclusion that the catch-all clause was ambiguous.

4. Enforceability and Reformation of the Settlement Agreement

We now reach the first of Innovation's arguments on appeal: that the district court erred when it reformed the Settlement Agreement's restrictive covenants to last only three years instead of the original twenty. According to Innovation, the district court should have applied a different test, the "rule of reason."

Defendants argue that Innovation [**41] waived its rule-of-reason argument as well as any objection to the three-year reformed duration of the agreement. Both arguments are incorrect. Innovation consistently argued that the district court should apply the rule of reason. When a new Michigan Supreme Court case on the issue was decided, Innovation cited the new decision repeatedly for propositions directly related to the rule-of-reason analysis. Innovation was not obliged to also move for reconsideration. See Walker v. Abbott Labs., 340 F.3d 471, 475 (7th Cir. 2003) (HN19[] "There is simply no rule or case law that requires litigants to move for reconsideration of an interlocutory ruling in order to avoid waiving a challenge to that ruling on appeal of a final decision.").

As to the purported concession about the duration of the reformed Agreement, the exchange with the district court was as follows:

THE COURT: . . . I know you told me that there were various reasons that you believe that the 20-year time limit was reasonable . . . . But as I asked Mr. Banowsky, do you agree that if the Court believed or found that that was too long and that it wasn't reasonable, that the next step would be to reform the contract in some way?

MS. OLIJNYK: That would be appropriate, Your Honor, yes. . . .

[**42] THE COURT: What do you think would be a reasonable amount of time?

[*340] MS. OLIJNYK: Three to six years . . . .

[***26] Though this concession might implicate a challenge to whether three years is an appropriate reformed duration, it does not waive the argument that the underlying premise is incorrect. We therefore consider the merits of Innovation's rule-of-reason argument.

a. Standards Governing Noncompete Agreements

The district court analyzed the restrictive covenants in the Settlement Agreement under the standard laid out in Mich. Comp. Laws § 445.774a\(1\), which governs noncompete agreements in the employment context. Innovation Ventures II, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129946, 2015 WL 5679879, at \*22. The court acknowledged the apparent discrepancy in applying an employment statute outside the employment context but explained that Michigan courts had used the framework in precisely that fashion. Id. For this proposition, the court cited a recent decision of a Michigan appellate court, Liquid Manufacturing I, 2014 Mich. App. LEXIS 2058, 2014 WL 5408963, at \*5, and a Sixth Circuit case, Certified Restoration, 511 F.3d at 546.

After the district court issued its decision, the Michigan Supreme Court reversed Liquid Manufacturing I, explaining that the statute governing employment noncompete agreements "does not address the proper framework for evaluating a noncompete agreement between businesses." Liquid Mfg. II, 885 N.W.2d at 873. The Court instructed [**43] that in the business-to-business context, a different statute governs and instructs courts to "give due deference to interpretations given by the federal courts to comparable antitrust statutes, including, without limitation, the doctrine of per se violations and the rule of reason." Id. at 874 (quoting Mich. Comp. Laws § 445.784\(2\)). The Court clarified that Coates v. Bastian Bros., Inc., 276 Mich. App. 498, 741 N.W.2d 539 \(Mich. Ct. App. 2007\), a case on which both the district court's decision and our decision in Certified Restoration had relied, was not "instructive" because it arose in the employment context. Id. at 873-74. The Court then remanded the case "to the trial court to consider whether the noncompete provisions . . . were reasonable under the proper standard." Id. at 874 n.18.

Liquid Manufacturing II makes clear that business-to-business noncompete agreements like the one at issue here must be "evaluated under the rule of reason," not by analogy to employment noncompete agreements that do not "address the proper framework." Id. at 873, 874.

[***27] Defendants argue against applying Liquid Manufacturing II's straightforward guidance, claiming the case is inapplicable because Innovation seeks to enforce the Settlement Agreement against an individual and a corporation that was not a party to the original agreement. But in Liquid Manufacturing II [**44] itself, the plaintiffs sought enforcement against individuals who were party to the agreement. Id. at 875. And as we have already explained, see supra Part III.C.2, § 5.c of the Settlement Agreement is binding against NSL, whether or not NSL was originally a party to it.

Defendants also argue that even applying federal common law, the Settlement Agreement should be analyzed under the per se rule rather than the rule of reason. Liquid Manufacturing II does contemplate situations that apply "the doctrine of per se violations." Id. at 874 (quoting Mich. Comp. Laws § 445.784(2)). That HN20 [↑] doctrine, however, applies "only if a restraint clearly and unquestionably falls within one of the handful of categories that have been collectively deemed per se anticompetitive." [*341] Food Lion, LLC v. Dean Foods Co. (In re Se. Milk Antitrust Litig.), 739 F.3d 262, 273 (6th Cir. 2014) (quoting Expert Masonry, Inc. v. Boone County, 440 F.3d 336, 343-44 (6th Cir. 2006)). "The classic examples are naked, horizontal restraints pertaining to prices or territories." La. Wholesale Drug Co. v. Hoechst Marion Roussel, Inc. (In re Cardizem CD Antitrust Litig.), 332 F.3d 896, 907 (6th Cir. 2003).

We will assume that the Settlement Agreement is a horizontal restraint because it "involve[s] an agreement[] among competitors at the same level of competition to restrain trade." Crane & Shovel Sales Corp. v. Bucyrus-Erie Co., 854 F.2d 802, 805 (6th Cir. 1988). But HN21 [↑] horizontality alone does not necessarily justify invocation of the per se rule. "[A]pplying the rule of reason is the default position and can be applied to horizontal restraints as well if they [**45] do not fit into existing categories of per se violations." Se. Milk Antitrust, 739 F.3d at 273. These restrictive covenants do not fix prices or allocate territory, Cardizem CD Antitrust, 332 F.3d at 907, and Defendants have not made any other argument to explain why they necessarily fit into any other category of per se violation. Because the restrictive covenants do not "clearly and unquestionably fall[]" within the delineated categories of per se impermissible restraints, Se. Milk Antitrust, 739 F.3d at 273, application of a per se rule is not appropriate here.

[***28] b. Burden of Proof

Proper application of the rule of reason begins with determining which party has the burden of proof. Each party claims the burden lies with the other.

Prior to Liquid Manufacturing II, Michigan law was clear that "[t]he burden of demonstrating the validity of the agreement is on the party seeking enforcement." Coates, 741 N.W.2d at 545. Because Michigan courts were "reluctant to enforce [noncompete] contracts as being against the policy of the public in encouraging business competition," Stoia v. Miskinis, 298 Mich. 105, 298 N.W. 469, 474 (Mich. 1941), it stood to reason that a party seeking to enforce a noncompete agreement bore a heavier burden than a party enforcing a run-of-the-mill contract in which enforceability is presumed.

Though that likely remains the case for employment noncompete agreements, [**46] Liquid Manufacturing II upset that consensus with regard to noncompete agreements between businesses. The Michigan Supreme Court explained that Coates, the case the district court relied on and one the Defendants rely on now, is not "instructive" in the business-to-business context. 885 N.W.2d at 873-74. Instead, Liquid Manufacturing II approvingly cited Perceptron, Inc. v. Sensor Adaptive Machines, Inc., 221 F.3d 913 (6th Cir. 2000). 885 N.W. 2d at 874. In Perceptron, we explained that a defendant who contested enforcement of a noncompete agreement on the grounds that it was not a reasonable restraint on competition "was required to show a contract, combination, or conspiracy that affected interstate commerce and unreasonably restrained trade." 221 F.3d at 918. In other words, a defendant invoking the rule of reason as a defense to a breach of contract claim bore the burden of demonstrating that the restraint was invalid. By distinguishing Coates and citing Perceptron with approval, the Michigan Supreme Court indicated that the party alleging the restraint on trade bears the burden to show that a noncompete agreement between businesses is unreasonable.

The rule of reason provides the proper standard under which the restrictive covenants [*342] should be evaluated, and HN22 [↑] the burden of showing the existence of an unreasonable [**47] restraint on trade lies with Defendants. But on appeal, neither party has fully briefed application of the rule-of-reason test. This fact-intensive determination falls within the district court's area of expertise [***29] and is better resolved there in the first instance. We remand the Lead Case so that the parties may provide the detailed record information necessary for the court to apply the rule-of-reason framework. See Papas v. Buchwald Capital Advisors, LLC (In re Greektown

Holdings, LLC, 728 F.3d 567, 570 (6th Cir. 2013) (remanding where certain issues had "not been adequately briefed and argued by the parties and were not addressed below").

c. Impact on the Secondary Case

As Innovation concedes, the claims in the Secondary Case are essentially duplicative of those in the Lead Case. Below, both parties agreed that the resolution of the Lead Case rendered the Secondary Case "effectively moot" and so necessitated its dismissal. Innovation Ventures IV, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 211640, 2017 WL 4553429, at *1. Innovation then appealed to protect against the eventuality that the district court's decisions in the Lead Case might be reversed—as we have now done.

We have allowed such a protective appeal in the past. See Dykstra v. Wayland Ford, Inc., 134 F. App'x 911, 917 (6th Cir. 2005) (consolidating two appeals where the second case had been determined on the basis of the first's preclusive effect, and reversing the second after concluding [**48] that the first had erred). The Supreme Court has criticized a litigant who failed to pursue this course. See Reed v. Allen, 286 U.S. 191, 198, 52 S. Ct. 532, 76 L. Ed. 1054 (1932) ("If respondent, in addition to appealing from the decree, had appealed from the judgment, the appellate court, having both cases before it, might have afforded a remedy."). Wright & Miller approves the tactic, explaining that the unfortunate result of a second judgment becoming conclusive despite relying on a prior judgment that is subsequently reversed "should always be avoided, whether by delaying further proceedings in the second action pending conclusion of the appeal in the first action [or] by a protective appeal in the second action that is held open pending determination of the appeal in the first action." 18A Wright & Miller, supra, § 4433. Innovation's protective appeal is therefore well taken and, contrary to Defendants' urging, sanctions are not appropriate.

Defendants urge that we could dismiss portions of the Secondary Case on independent grounds related to the applicable statutes of limitations. But the statute-of-limitations arguments were not considered by the district court, which decided the Secondary Case entirely on the basis [***30] of the Lead Case's preclusive effect. Because we reverse [**49] and remand the Lead Case, we likewise remand the Secondary Case.

D. Laches

We turn next to the issues that will determine the course of the suit upon remand: the availability of a laches defense and the propriety of Innovation's three proposed damages methodologies. Because both issues were decided below and were fully briefed and argued on appeal, we consider them here.

Innovation argues that it should have been granted summary judgment as to liability on its breach of contract claim because Defendants' laches defense—the only remaining barrier to judgment in its favor—fails as a matter of law. HN23 [↑] Michigan law provides that [t]he doctrine of laches is triggered by the plaintiff's failure to do something that should have been done under the [*343] circumstances or failure to claim or enforce a right at the proper time. However, the doctrine is only applicable in cases in which there is an unexcused or unexplained delay in commencing an action and a corresponding change of material condition that results in prejudice to a party.

Dep't of Envtl. Quality v. Gomez, 318 Mich. App. 1, 896 N.W.2d 39, 53 (Mich. Ct. App. 2016) (citations and internal quotation marks omitted).

HN24 [↑] Michigan courts presume that when a claim is brought within the statute of limitations, as this claim undisputedly was, the [**50] doctrine of laches does not apply. The Michigan Supreme Court has summarily disposed of a laches defense on the basis that, "because [the plaintiff] filed this case within the six-year period of limitation, any delay in the filing of the complaint was presumptively reasonable, and the doctrine of laches is simply inapplicable." Mich. Educ. Emps. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Morris, 460 Mich. 180, 596 N.W.2d 142, 152 (Mich. 1999); see also City of Wyandotte v. Consol. Rail Corp., 262 F.3d 581, 589 (6th Cir. 2001).

But more recent Michigan cases have considered the interplay of laches and statutes of limitations and explained when the presumption of reasonableness can be rebutted. The Michigan Court of Appeals held in Tenneco Inc. v. Amerisure Mutual Insurance Co. that HN25 "[t]he application of laches can shorten, but never lengthen, the analogous period of limitations. . . . Thus, laches may bar a legal claim even if the statutory period of limitations has not yet [***31] expired." 281 Mich. App. 429, 761 N.W.2d 846, 864 \(Mich. Ct. App. 2008\); see also Gomez, 896 N.W.2d at 54 ("[C]ourts may apply the doctrine of laches to bar actions at law even when the period of limitations established by the Legislature has not expired."). Defendants' laches defense is therefore not necessarily barred merely because the case was brought within the statute of limitations.

Turning to the merits, the parties dispute whether there was "an unexcused or unexplained delay [**51] in commencing" this suit. Gomez, 896 N.W.2d at 53. On the one hand, in September 2012, less than two weeks after this suit was filed, an Innovation officer stated that Innovation had "[r]ecently" discovered that NSL was using Choline Family ingredients. On the other hand, Innovation knew that Custom Nutrition was manufacturing at least one energy shot containing Choline Family ingredients ("Rock On") when the Settlement Agreement was executed; Rock On is the first product listed in the Agreement's appendix. Because NSL manufactured Rock On from its inception in 2009, this creates a dispute of material fact. A jury could reasonably infer that Innovation knew or should have known that NSL was manufacturing shots containing Choline Family ingredients almost three years before it filed suit.

A jury might also conclude that NSL was prejudiced by the delay, see Gomez, 896 N.W.2d at 53, because the liability that NSL faced increased with each violative energy shot sold and so with each day that Innovation delayed filing suit. Of course, NSL's decision to continue manufacturing shots containing Choline Family ingredients after the suit was filed could counsel against a finding of prejudice, because a jury could infer from that course of [**52] conduct that NSL would have run up the same potential damages regardless of when Innovation sued. But the available evidence does not require that conclusion. As the district court summarized it, "the entire point of Defendants' argument is that they would have reacted differently because they could have designed the products differently from the outset." Innovation I\*344 Ventures III, 256 F. Supp. 3d at 704. Here, too, there is a dispute of material fact. The district court, therefore, did not err in deciding to submit these subsidiary factual disputes to a jury before making its ultimate determination on Defendants' laches defense.

Finally, Innovation invokes the unclean hands doctrine. HN26 Under Michigan law, "[a] party with unclean hands may not assert the equitable defense of laches." Attorney Gen. v. PowerPick [\[\*\*\*321\] Club, 287 Mich. App. 13, 783 N.W.2d 515, 536 \(Mich. Ct. App. 2010\)](#). The unclean hands doctrine allows a court to deny equitable relief when "the party applying for such relief is guilty of conduct involving fraud, deceit, unconscionability, or bad faith related to the matter at issue to the detriment of the other party." Cyber Sols. Int'l, LLC v. Pro Mktg. Sales, Inc., 634 F. App'x 557, 567 \(6th Cir. 2016\) (quoting Performance Unlimited, Inc. v. Questar Publishers, Inc., 52 F.3d 1373, 1383 \(6th Cir. 1995\)). "In determining whether [a party] come[s] before this Court with clean hands, the primary factor to be considered is whether the [party] sought to mislead or deceive [**53] the other party." Stachnik v. Winkel, 394 Mich. 375, 230 N.W.2d 529, 534 \(Mich. 1975\). Defendants did not fraudulently induce Innovation to enter into the Settlement Agreement. Defendants subsequently breached the Agreement, but they had a good faith legal argument that they were not bound by the Agreement's terms. There is no evidence that Defendants misled Innovation about which energy shots they manufactured or what ingredients those energy shots contained. Innovation has failed to identify Michigan precedent supporting applying the unclean hands doctrine in these circumstances.

We affirm the district court's conclusion that disputes of material fact exist related to the issue of laches.

E. Damages Calculation Methodologies

Innovation proposed three ways to calculate its damages: estimated lost profits based on Innovation's market share, an estimated reasonable royalty, and disgorgement. The district court determined that all three methods were impermissible but left open the possibility that Innovation could "still recover lost profits under a non-patent-infringement specific method of calculation." Innovation Ventures III, 256 F. Supp. 3d at 710-12 & n.8. Innovation instead allowed judgment to be entered in its favor for only nominal damages and thereby waived any damages theory other than the [**54] three presented before the district court. Innovation may recover damages only if we determine that one or more of these three theories is viable.

[***33] 1. Market-Share Based Calculation of Lost Profits

Innovation argues that it should be allowed to present to the jury an estimate of lost profits calculated by multiplying the number of units Defendants sold by Innovation's market share. This model essentially assumes that, if Defendants had not made these impermissible sales, Innovation, which sells 85% of the energy shots on the market, would have made 85% of those sales. The district court rejected this calculation as exclusive to patent cases. Id. at 710-11.

HN27 Under Michigan law, "[l]ost profits resulting from a breach of contract may be considered by a jury in determining damages." Eastland Partners LP v. Village Green Mgmt. Co. (In re Brown), 342 F.3d 620, 632 (6th Cir. 2003) (citing Lorenz Supply Co. v. Am. Standard, Inc., 100 Mich. App. 600, 300 N.W.2d 335, 340 (Mich. Ct. App. 1980)). Permitting juries to estimate lost [*345] profits comports with the underlying principle of Michigan law that when, from the nature of the case, the amount of the damages can not be estimated with certainty, or only a part of them can be so estimated, we can see no objection to placing before the jury all the facts and circumstances of the case, having any tendency to show damages, or their probable amount; so as to enable [**55] them to make the most intelligible and probable estimate which the nature of the case will permit.

Health Call v. Atrium Home & Health Care Servs., 268 Mich. App. 83, 706 N.W.2d 843, 856 (Mich. Ct. App. 2005) (quoting Allison v. Chandler, 11 Mich. 542, 555-56 (1863)). While "lost profits must be proven with a reasonable degree of certainty and cannot be based solely on conjecture and speculation," In re Brown, 342 F.3d at 632, "the law permits some level of uncertainty to be resolved by the trier of fact," Health Call, 706 N.W.2d at 856. See also 24 Richard A. Lord, Williston on Contracts § 64:10 (4th ed. Supp. 2018) (describing the shift from the historic practice of forbidding the award of lost profits as remote or speculative to the current practice of allowing for estimated lost profits to avoid the iniquity of depriving the plaintiff of any recovery).

At least one Michigan court has determined that testimony related to market share can help quantify lost profits with sufficient certainty. See Fabbrini Family Foods, Inc. v. United Canning Corp., 90 Mich. App. 80, 280 N.W.2d 877, 880 (Mich. Ct. App. 1979) (per curiam) (explaining that an accountant's proof of lost profits was sufficiently concrete where he described the overall dip in [***34] gross profits and explained "that the corporation's share of the market dropped from 85% to 55%"); see also Lakestates Workplace Sols., Inc. v. Spradlin (In re Spradlin), Nos. 98-20611/2065, 2000 Bankr. LEXIS 1968, at *18 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. May 15, 2000) (citing Fabbrini to support the conclusion that "[l]ost profits can be quantified based [**56] on loss of market share"); Jill M. Wheaton, Proving and Defending Commercial Damages Claims, in Michigan Law of Damages and Other Remedies 301, 307 (Barbara A. Patek et al. eds., 3d. ed. Supp. 2014). To be sure, using loss of market share alongside other data to quantify lost profits is not the same as relying entirely on a stagnant market share for the same task. But forbidding the submission of market-share based estimates to a jury as a matter of law runs afoul of Fabbrini and impermissibly limits the scope of the jury's inquiry.

We conclude here only that this theory of relief is available for Innovation to pursue. Upon remand, Innovation may introduce testimony that uses market share to quantify its lost profits. Defendants may then submit rebuttal evidence concerning the weaknesses of this specific calculation. Only then can the determination be made whether all the evidence proves the amount of lost profits "with a reasonable degree of certainty." In re Brown, 342 F.3d at 632.

2. Reasonable Royalty

Innovation next argues that it should be permitted to present the jury with evidence of damages based on a calculated reasonable royalty.

[HN28] Reasonable royalties are an accepted method of calculating damages in patent [**57] infringement and misappropriation of trade secret cases. See 35 U.S.C. § 284 ("[T]he court shall award the claimant damages adequate to compensate for the [patent] infringement, but in no event less than a reasonable royalty for the use made of the invention by the infringer . . . ."); Mich. Comp. Laws § 445.1904 ("[T]he damages caused by misappropriation [of trade secrets] may be measured by imposition [*346] of liability for a reasonable royalty . . . ."). Innovation does not, however, cite any Michigan cases, federal cases applying Michigan law, or even secondary sources that contemplate using a reasonable royalty to calculate damages in breach of contract cases.

[***35] Instead, Innovation points to a handful of out-of-state and out-of-circuit cases. We begin with the lone appellate case in Innovation's list, Celeritas Technologies, Ltd. v. Rockwell International Corp., 150 F.3d 1354 \(Fed. Cir. 1998\). In Celeritas, a patent holder "in the business of licensing its technology" met with a manufacturer to demonstrate its proprietary technology. Id. at 1356, 1359. The parties entered into a non-disclosure agreement (NDA) covering the subject matter of the meeting. Id. at 1357. The manufacturer decided not to license the technology and, instead, "assigned the same engineers who had learned of Celeritas's technology under the NDA to work on" a project to develop [**58] the same technology. Id. Celeritas sued for breach of the NDA, misappropriation of trade secrets, and patent infringement. Id. The jury awarded the same damages figure on both the patent and contract claims, calculated based on a hypothetical license fee. Id. On appeal, the patent was deemed invalid because it had been anticipated by a published article. Id. at 1361. But the Federal Circuit determined that Celeritas could nonetheless recover a reasonable royalty as damages for the manufacturer's breach of the NDA: "To compensate Celeritas for the breach, the jury properly determined the license fee Rockwell would have paid had it not breached the agreement." Id. at 1359.

In this case, unlike in Celeritas, there are no patent infringement or misappropriation claims. The Settlement Agreement was not part of licensing negotiations. And, as Innovation's own expert stated in his report, "Innovation Ventures has no history of licensing its intellectual property to any competitor." So even assuming Michigan law might allow for assessment of royalty-based damages in certain, unusual breach of contract cases, the circumstances that rendered that assessment reasonable in Celeritas are not present here.

The remaining [**59] cases—all from out-of-circuit district courts, and largely unpublished—are similarly inapposite. In some, the contract claim was paired with a misappropriation or patent infringement claim, so the court simply allowed the use of the reasonable royalty methodology across both types of claims, or after one had been dismissed. See Veritas Operating Corp. v. Microsoft Corp., No. C06-0703, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 112135, 2008 WL 7404617, at \*2-3 \(W.D. Wash. Feb. 26, 2008\); Dethmers Mfg. Co. v. Automatic Equip. Mfg. Co., 73 F. Supp. 2d 997, 999, 1007-08 \(N.D. Iowa 1999\). In others, the experts worked from established royalty rates between the parties. See Loftness Specialized Farm Equip., Inc. v. Twiestmeyer, No. CV 11-1506, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 135019, 2017 [***36] WL 3668757, at \*8 \(D. Minn. Aug. 23, 2017\) (allowing expert testimony that a royalty rate between two and five percent was reasonable where the parties had previously agreed upon a two-percent royalty, see Loftness Specialized Farm Equip., Inc. v. Twiestmeyer, 818 F.3d 356, 359 \(8th Cir. 2016\)); Agrigenetics, Inc. v. Pioneer Hi-Bred Int'l, Inc., No. 1:08-CV-802, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 120003, 2010 WL 4683936, at \*4 \(S.D. Ind. Nov. 10, 2010\) (permitting expert testimony that focused exclusively on the "established royalty").<sup>4</sup>

[*347] In sum, no controlling authority from either this court or any Michigan court holds that damages in the form of a reasonable royalty may be assessed in a breach of contract case. Even the non-binding authority depended on circumstances not present here. An estimated reasonable royalty is not an appropriate theory for proof of damages in this [**60] case.

<sup>4</sup> The remaining case holds only that "[l]ost profits and reasonable royalties are specific allegations of damage that are sufficient to satisfy the requirement to plead actual and appreciable damages under California breach of contract law." Benedict v. Hewlett-Packard Co., No. 13-CV-00119, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7331, 2014 WL 234218, at \*5 \(N.D. Cal. Jan. 21, 2014\) (internal quotation marks omitted). Even if it were relevant to our determination about Michigan law, this case does not reach the issue of whether a jury can base its damages calculation on a reasonable royalty.

3. Disgorgement

Finally, Innovation argues that, pursuant to § 5.d of the Settlement Agreement, it should be allowed to seek disgorgement of Defendants' proceeds from selling energy shots that violated the Choline Family restrictions. We therefore must decide whether Defendant NSL is bound by § 5.d because it is incorporated by reference into either § 5.c of the Settlement Agreement (which, for the reasons explained above, see Part II.C.2, binds NSL) or the Asset Purchase Agreement (to which NSL is a party).<sup>5</sup>

First, we ask whether § 5.c.i incorporates § 5.d. HN29 Michigan courts, like their Texas counterparts, distinguish between contractual terms that merely "mention" another document and those that are "made for the purpose of making such writing a part of the contract." Forge v. Smith, 458 Mich. 198, 580 N.W.2d 876, 881 & n.21 \(Mich. 1998\) (citation omitted). In so doing, courts "must look for the party's intent within the contract." *Id. at 881*.

[**37] The Choline Family restrictions are found in § 5.c.i of the Settlement Agreement. The key sentence provides that "[n]o Energy Liquid shall contain anything in the Choline Family (defined below) (subject to the Sell-Through Period described in Subsection 5.d. below)." The cross-referenced subsection, § 5.d, titled "Sell-Through Period," has two key [**61] terms. First, it provides for three- and six-month grace periods in which Custom Nutrition can continue to produce and sell, respectively, energy shots containing Choline Family ingredients. Second, it provides for damages: "Remedy for violation is injunctive relief and disgorgement of proceeds plus provable damages, attorneys' fees and indemnification for each such violation."

No Michigan cases have been cited involving the situation where one clause of a contract incorporates another clause by reference. Even if we assume that clause-by-clause incorporation is possible, § 5.c.i refers to the "Sell-Through Period described in Subsection 5.d" (emphasis added) rather than § 5.d in its entirety. The limited reference points more naturally to the grace period in § 5.d than to its damages language.

We turn next to Innovation's argument that the Asset Purchase Agreement incorporates § 5.d. Innovation asserts, without analysis or citation, that "[s]ince §5.d. (setting forth the formula-restriction grace period and remedies for breach) is part and parcel of §5.c.i., there is no way to isolate §5.c. from §5.d." We disagree. Section 5.c describes the prohibited conduct, and § 5.d describes the resulting penalty; these two provisions are logically [**62] distinct. The Asset Purchase Agreement describes limitations on "the formula for energy drinks," which, as explained above, most naturally refers to the ingredient-specific [*348] restrictive covenants in § 5.c that would change the formula itself. The proposed remedy, on the other hand, does not "limit[] the formula.

We therefore affirm the district court's conclusion that Innovation may not seek disgorgement of Defendants' proceeds.

[**38] III. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Defendants' motion to dismiss is DENIED; the district court's conclusions as to personal jurisdiction, Defendants' antitrust counterclaim, whether NSL is bound by the Settlement Agreement, the ambiguity of the catch-all clause, laches, reasonable royalty, and disgorgement are AFFIRMED; and the district court's conclusions as to whether Jones is bound by the Settlement Agreement, the enforceability and reformation of the restrictive covenant, and lost profits are REVERSED. The district court's dismissal of the Secondary Case based on preclusion is therefore also REVERSED. We REMAND both the Lead and the Secondary Case for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

<sup>5</sup> For the reasons explained above, see supra Part II.C.1, the Settlement Agreement does not bind Defendant Jones in his personal capacity. Because Innovation does not argue that the Asset Purchase Agreement binds Jones in his personal capacity, Innovation may not seek disgorgement from Jones.

---

End of Document

Sonterra Capital Master Fund, Ltd. v. Barclays Bank PLC

United States District Court for the Southern District of New York

December 21, 2018, Decided; December 21, 2018, Filed

15-CV-3538 (VSB)

Reporter

366 F. Supp. 3d 516 *; 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 215143 **; 2019-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P80,629; 2018 WL 6725387

SONTERRA CAPITAL MASTER FUND, LTD., RICHARD DENNIS, FRONTPOINT EUROPEAN FUND L.P., on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated, Plaintiffs, -against- BARCLAYS BANK PLC, COOPERATIEVE CENTRALE RAIFFEISEN-BOERENLEENBANK B.A., DEUTSCHE BANK AG, LLOYDS BANKING GROUP PLC, THE ROYAL BANK OF SCOTLAND PLC, UBS AG, JOHN DOE NOS. 1-50, BARCLAYS CAPITAL, INC., Defendants.

Subsequent History: Reconsideration denied by, Motion denied by, Dismissed by Sonterra Capital Master Fund, Ltd. v. Barclays Bank PLC, 403 F. Supp. 3d 257, 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 138966, 2019 WL 3858620 \(S.D.N.Y., Aug. 16, 2019\)

Motion granted by, Class certification granted by Sonterra Capital Master Fund, Ltd. v. Barclays Bank PLC, 2023 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 95908 \(S.D.N.Y., June 1, 2023\)

Prior History: Sonterra Capital Master Fund Ltd. v. Credit Suisse Grp. AG, 277 F. Supp. 3d 521, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 156425, 2017 WL 4250480 \(S.D.N.Y., Sept. 25, 2017\)

Core Terms

---

manipulation, allegations, antitrust, Defendants', trading, Plaintiffs', derivatives, transactions, prices, personal jurisdiction, unjust enrichment, conspiracy, domestic, banks, motion to dismiss, quotation, damages, marks, contracts, settlements, artificial, Forwards, contacts, swap, interest rate, Sherman Act, extraterritorial, commerce, statute of limitations, courts

Counsel: [**\[\*\*1\]** For Plaintiffs and Proposed Interim Class Counsel: Christian Levis, Geoffrey Milbank Horn, Raymond Peter Girnys, Vincent Briganti, Peter Dexter St. Phillip, Jr., Sitso W. Bediako, Lee Jason Lefkowitz, Lowey Dannenberg, P.C., White Plains, New York; Benjamin Martin Jaccarino, Christopher Lovell, Lovell Stewart Halebian Jacobson LLP, New York, NY.](#)

For Plaintiff Richard Dennis: James Anthony Diehl, Akin Gump Strauss Hauer & Feld LLP (NYC), New York, New York.

For Defendants Barclays Bank PLC and Barclays Capital, Inc.: Jonathan David Schiller, Amos Emory Friedland, Leigh Mager Nathanson, Boies, Schiller & Flexner LLP, New York, New York; Michael Brille, Melissa Brooke Felder Zappala, Boies, Schiller & Flexner LLP, Washington, District of Columbia; David Harold Braff, Yvonne Susan Quinn, Jeffrey T. Scott, Matthew Joseph Porpora, Sullivan & Cromwell LLP, New York, New York.

For Defendant Cooperatieve Rabobank U.A.: David Robert Gelfand, Jonathan Ohring, Mark David Villaverde, Sean Miles Murphy, Milbank, Tweed, Hadley & McCloy LLP, New York, New York; Melanie Westover Yanez, Milbank, Tweed, Hadley & McCloy LLP, Washington, District of Columbia.

For Defendant Deutsche Bank AG: Aidan John Synott, [**\[\*\*2\]** Elizabeth M. Sacksteder, Moses Silverman, Elizabeth Justine Grossman, Michael Joseph Biondi, Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison LLP, New York, New York.](#)

For Defendant Lloyds Banking Group Plc, Lisa Jean Fried, Benjamin Andrew Fleming, Kevin Timothy Baumann, Marc Joel Gottridge, Hogan Lovells US LLP, New York, New York.

For Defendant The Royal Bank of Scotland PLC: David Sapir Lesser, Fraser Lee Hunter, Jr., Jamie Stephen Dycus, Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale and Dorr LLP, New York, New York.

For Defendant UBS AG: Eric Jonathan Stock, Jefferson Eliot Bell, Lawrence Jay Zweifach, Mark Adam Kirsch, Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, LLP, New York, New York.

Judges: Vernon S. Broderick, United States District Judge.

Opinion by: Vernon S. Broderick

Opinion

---

[*529] OPINION & ORDER

VERNON S. BRODERICK, United States District Judge:

Plaintiffs Sonterra Capital Master Fund, Ltd. ("Sonterra"), FrontPoint European Fund L.P. ("FrontPoint"), and Richard Dennis ("Dennis") bring this putative class action against Defendants Barclays Bank PLC ("Barclays"), Cooperatieve Rabobank U.A. (f/k/a Cooperatieve Centrale Raiffeisen-Boerenleenbank B.A.) ("Rabobank"), Deutsche Bank AG ("Deutsche Bank"), Lloyds Banking Group Plc ("Lloyds"), The Royal Bank of [*3] Scotland PLC ("RBS"), and UBS AG ("UBS") (collectively, the "Foreign Defendants"), and Barclays Capital, Inc. ("BCI," and, together with the Foreign Defendants, "Defendants"). The Consolidated Amended Complaint ("CAC") brings claims (1) under the Sherman Antitrust Act ("Sherman Act"), 15 U.S.C. § 1, et seq., (2) under the Commodity Exchange Act ("CEA"), 7 U.S.C. § 1, et seq., (3) under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"), 18 U.S.C. § 1961, et seq., and (4) asserts common-law claims of breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing and unjust enrichment.

Defendants move to dismiss the CAC for lack of subject matter jurisdiction and for failure to state a claim under Rules 12(b)(1) and 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The Foreign Defendants also move to dismiss the claims against them for lack of personal jurisdiction under Rule 12(b)(2). For the reasons that follow, the motion to dismiss is GRANTED in part and DENIED in part. The motion is DENIED with regard to Plaintiff FrontPoint's Sherman Act claims and unjust enrichment claim against Defendant UBS; the motion is otherwise GRANTED.

I. Factual Background<sup>1</sup>

A. Overview

This case is one of several civil cases filed in this District alleging that certain banks manipulated and fixed prices of the [*530] London Interbank [*4] Offered Rate ("LIBOR"), submitted them to the British Bankers' Association ("BBA"), and thereby made artificial submissions over a period of years, which allegedly harmed Plaintiffs as purchasers or sellers of financial instruments they claim were in some way connected to LIBOR. LIBOR is an interest rate benchmark used in financial markets around the world and intended to reflect the competitive conditions of the London interbank money market. (CAC ¶¶ 6-7.) LIBOR is calculated by averaging a number of submitting banks' estimates of their own respective costs of borrowing money in the London interbank market in several currencies and for a number of maturities (or "tenors") per currency. (Id. ¶¶ 116-17.) It is administered by the BBA, "the leading trade association for the United Kingdom banking and financial services sector." (Id. ¶¶ 91, 92.) It is published daily and used to price, benchmark, and/or settle interest rate derivatives traded over-the-counter and on public exchanges, including interest rate swaps, forward rate agreements, foreign exchange forwards, and futures contracts. (Id. ¶¶ 8, 121.)

---

<sup>1</sup> The following factual summary is drawn from the allegations in the CAC, (Doc. 95), which I presume to be true for purposes of this motion, see Kassner v. 2nd Ave. Delicatessen Inc., 496 F.3d 229, 237 (2d Cir. 2007). My references to these allegations should not be construed as a finding as to their veracity, and I make no such findings.

During the relevant time period, the BBA published LIBOR rates for ten different currencies, [**5]<sup>2</sup> including the British Pound Sterling, based upon interest rate quotas that panel banks submit. (Id. ¶¶ 7, 103-07.) Defendants in this case were BBA panel banks that controlled the British Pound Sterling LIBOR ("Sterling LIBOR") during the class period. (Id. ¶¶ 101, 109, 116.) Other actions filed in this District involve the U.S. Dollar,<sup>3</sup> Japanese Yen,<sup>4</sup> and Swiss Franc<sup>5</sup> LIBOR. The financial instruments used by Plaintiffs in this action were foreign exchange ("FX") forward contracts, interest rate swaps, and FX futures contracts traded on the Chicago [*531] Mercantile Exchange ("CME"). (See id. ¶¶ 37-39.)

To set Sterling LIBOR, the BBA asks the panel banks to answer independently the following question on every banking day in London: "At what rate could you borrow [Sterling], were you to do so by asking for and then accepting inter-bank offers in a reasonable market size, just prior to 11:00 a.m.?" (Id. ¶ 101.) The panel members each submit answers reflecting the rate of interest offered on loans for 15 different maturities, or tenors. (Id. ¶ 116.) Pursuant to BBA guidelines, each panel bank's answer at each tenor is supposed to reflect actual competitive market rates. (Id. ¶ 109.) Each panel bank submits its rates electronically to Thomson Reuters, "as administrator of the LIBOR fixing," including the Sterling LIBOR. (Id. ¶ 117.) After all the submissions are received, the quotes in each tenor are ranked. (See id.) The Sterling LIBOR is then calculated for each tenor by averaging the middle 50% of submissions. (Id.) Because there were sixteen members of the Sterling LIBOR contributing panel, this meant that Thomson Reuters used the middle eight submissions, after discarding the top and [**7] bottom quartiles. (Id. ¶ 101.) "This average rate becomes the daily official Sterling LIBOR for that particular tenor and is distributed

<sup>2</sup> See In re LIBOR-Based Fin. Instruments Antitrust Litig. \("LIBOR I"\), 935 F. Supp. 2d 666, 678 (S.D.N.Y. 2013), vacated and remanded sub nom. Gelboim v. Bank of Am. Corp., 823 F.3d 759 (2d Cir. 2016).

<sup>3</sup> Judge Buchwald has issued seven decisions in the U.S. Dollar LIBOR multi-district litigation: LIBOR I, 935 F. Supp. 2d 666; In re LIBOR-Based Fin. Instruments Antitrust Litig. \("LIBOR II"\), 962 F. Supp. 2d 606 (S.D.N.Y. 2013); In re LIBOR-Based Fin. Instruments Antitrust Litig. \("LIBOR III"\), 27 F. Supp. 3d 447 (S.D.N.Y. 2014); In re LIBOR-Based Fin. Instruments Antitrust Litig. \("LIBOR IV"\), No. 11 MDL 2262 (NRB), 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 147561, 2015 WL 6243526 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 4, 2015, as amended Oct. 20, 2015); In re LIBOR-Based Fin. Instruments Antitrust Litig. \("LIBOR V"\), No. 11 MDL 2262 (NRB), 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 149629, 2015 WL 6696407 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 3, 2015); In re LIBOR-Based Fin. Instruments Antitrust Litig. \("LIBOR VI"\), No. 11 MDL 2262 (NRB), 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175929, 2016 WL 7378980 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 20, 2016, as amended Feb. 2, 2017); In re LIBOR-Based Fin. Instruments Antitrust Litig. \("LIBOR VII"\), 299 F. Supp. 3d 430 (S.D.N.Y. 2018). Judges Gardephe and Preska have also issued opinions pertaining to the U.S. Dollar LIBOR. See 7 W. 57th St. Realty Co. v. Citigroup, Inc., 314 F. Supp. 3d 497 (S.D.N.Y. 2018); 7 W. 57th St. Realty Co., LLC v. CitiGroup, Inc., No. 13 Civ. 981 (PGG), 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44031, 2015 WL 1514539 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2015); Mayfield v. British Bankers' Ass'n, No. 14-CV-4735, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 184818, 2014 WL 10449597 (S.D.N.Y. July 22, 2014).

<sup>4</sup> Laydon v. Mizuho Bank, Ltd. \("Laydon I"\), No. 12-cv-3419 (GBD), 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46368, 2014 WL 1280464 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 28, 2014); Laydon v. Mizuho Bank, Ltd. \("Laydon II"\), No. 12-cv-3419 (GBD), 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44005, 2015 WL 1499185 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2015); Laydon v. Mizuho Bank, Ltd. \("Laydon III"\), No. 12-cv-3419 (GBD), 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44007, 2015 WL 1515358 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2015); Laydon v. Mizuho Bank, Ltd. \("Laydon IV"\), No. 12-cv-3419 (GBD), 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44126, 2015 WL 1515487 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2015); Laydon v. Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi UFJ, Ltd. \("Laydon V"\), No. 12 Civ. 3419 (GBD), 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 38270, 2017 WL 1093288 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 10, 2017) [**6]; Laydon v. Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi UFJ, Ltd. \("Laydon VI"\), No. 12 Civ. 3419 (GBD), 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 38271, 2017 WL 1113080 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 10, 2017).

<sup>5</sup> Sonterra Capital Master Fund Ltd. v. Credit Suisse Grp. AG, 277 F. Supp. 3d 521 (S.D.N.Y. 2017).

electronically to the market, including within the United States, through Thomson Reuters and Bloomberg among other financial services platforms." (Id. ¶ 117.) Thomson Reuters also publishes each member bank's submissions, including those that were in the top and bottom quartiles. (Id. ¶ 101.)

Nearly $100 trillion in Sterling LIBOR-based derivatives were traded within the United States from January 1, 2005 through December 31, 2010 (the "Class Period"). (Id. ¶¶ 1, 95.) During this time, Defendants also maintained operations within the United States from which they "transacted in a full range of interest rate derivatives products, including those based upon Sterling LIBOR." (Id. ¶ 96.) They "competed against one another and others in the United States in the sales of financial services and products, including sales of interest rate swaps, forward rate agreements, foreign exchange forwards, and other financial products in which the price or payments were based upon the Sterling LIBOR." (Id. ¶ 98.) They also competed in the futures markets, including [**8] the Sterling futures contracts traded on the London International Financial Futures and Options Exchange ("LIFFE"), and British pound futures contracts traded on the CME. (Id. ¶¶ 39, 98.)

B. Defendants' Alleged Conduct

Barclays, Deutsche Bank, Lloyds, Rabobank, RBS, and UBS were among the members of the sixteen-bank Contributor Panel for Sterling LIBOR during the putative Class Period.<sup>6</sup> (Id. ¶¶ 11, 118.) Plaintiffs allege that each member bank over that period "coordinated their Sterling LIBOR submissions and manipulative trading practices to fix the prices of Sterling LIBOR-based derivatives for their financial benefit." (Id. ¶ 125.) According to the CAC, "Defendants' derivatives traders frequently [*532] used electronic communications, including instant messages and chat rooms, to share information regarding their Sterling LIBOR-based derivatives positions and to request Sterling LIBOR submissions that would manipulate and fix the prices of those derivatives at artificial levels for their financial benefit." (Id. ¶ 126.) Those communications allegedly took place internally as well as "externally (among Sterling LIBOR-based derivatives traders and submitters located at different, supposedly [**9] competing, Sterling LIBOR contributor banks)." (Id. ¶ 127.) "During the Class Period, Defendants entered into a series of agreements designed to create profit or limit liabilities amongst themselves by coordinating the manipulation of Sterling LIBOR and the prices of Sterling LIBOR-based derivatives, by conspiring to, inter alia, make false submissions to the BBA designed to artificially suppress, inflate, maintain, or otherwise alter Sterling LIBOR." (Id. ¶ 238.) Defendants have entered into various settlements and non-prosecution agreements with government regulators, such as the Department of Justice ("DOJ"), Commodity Futures Trading Commission ("CFTC"), and United Kingdom Financial Conduct Authority ("FCA"), in connection with LIBOR manipulation related to various currencies. (See id. ¶¶ 13-25.)<sup>7</sup>

C. Plaintiffs' Alleged Injuries

Plaintiff Sonterra is an investment fund that traded in Sterling foreign exchange forwards ("Sterling FX Forwards") on unspecified dates. (Id. ¶ 37.) An FX forward is "[a] transaction that solely involves the exchange of two different currencies on a specific future date at a fixed rate agreed upon on the inception of the contract covering the exchange." [**10] (Id. ¶ 121(e).) Sonterra characterizes its forwards as "Sterling LIBOR-based derivatives," (id. ¶ 37), because the "cost of buying or selling Sterling under a foreign exchange forward is determined using a formula that incorporates Sterling LIBOR," (id. ¶ 206). "The calculation involves taking the 'spot price' of Sterling for immediate delivery, and adjusting it to account for the 'cost of carry,' i.e., the amount of interest paid or received on Sterling deposits, for the duration of the agreement. Sterling LIBOR, the benchmark rate for Sterling deposits, is used in this formula to calculate the cost of carrying Sterling over the duration of the foreign exchange forward." (Id.)

---

<sup>6</sup> Lloyds, a holding company, was apparently not a member of the BBA's Sterling LIBOR Contributor Panel but its subsidiary, Lloyds Bank plc (formerly, Lloyds TSB Bank plc), was a member throughout the Class Period; in January 2009, Lloyds acquired HBOS plc, whose subsidiary was a member of the Panel through February 6, 2009. Similarly, BCI is a subsidiary of Barclays, (CAC ¶ 44), and was not a member of the Sterling LIBOR Contributor Panel. (See Defs.' SMJ Br. 7 n.6.) "Defs.' SMJ Br." refers to Memorandum of Law in Support of Defendants' Motion to Dismiss the Consolidated Amended Complaint for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction and Failure to State a Claim. (Doc. 100.)

<sup>7</sup> An index of links to the Foreign Defendants' publicly available regulatory settlements, which are incorporated by reference into the CAC, is located at Appendix A to the Foreign Defendants' Reply Memorandum of Law in Further Support of Foreign Defendants' Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction. (Doc. 120-1.)

Plaintiff Dennis is an individual trader who participated in transactions in Sterling foreign exchange futures contracts ("Sterling FX Futures") on the CME on one occasion—May 11, 2010. (Id. ¶¶ 39, 214.) A "CME British pound futures contract is an agreement to buy or sell £62,500, in terms of U.S. Dollars, on some future date." (Id. ¶ 212.) Prices of CME Sterling FX Futures are determined using "the same calculation used to determine the price of" Sterling FX Forwards, but CME Sterling FX Futures are traded on [**11] the exchange according to standardized terms. (Id. ¶ 212.) On May 11, 2010, Dennis entered into a "long position" in CME Sterling FX Futures and, two days later, "liquidated that position," at a loss of approximately $38,000. (Id. ¶ 214.)

Plaintiff FrontPoint is a Delaware limited partnership with its principal place of business in Greenwich, Connecticut. (Id. ¶ 38.) FrontPoint claims to have entered into "Sterling LIBOR-based swaps" with UBS on three occasions in 2007—October [*533] 17, 2007, November 22, 2007, and November 29, 2007—with payments ceasing on those swaps in 2008. (Id. ¶¶ 209, 211.) These swaps were entered into in accordance with an International Swaps and Derivatives Association, Inc. ("ISDA") Master Agreement dated May 1, 2007.<sup>8</sup> (Id. ¶ 29.) "A swap is an over-the-counter Sterling LIBOR-based derivative in which two parties exchange the obligation to make [a] series of payments based on some underlying principal amount for a set period of time." (Id. ¶ 208.) FrontPoint only transacted business with Defendant UBS. (See id. ¶ 211.)

II. Procedural History

Plaintiff Sonterra filed its complaint on May 6, 2015, (Doc. 1), and amended it on July 24, 2015, (Doc. 18). Defendants requested [**12] a pre-motion conference to discuss their proposed motion to dismiss. (Doc. 48.) The pre-motion conference was held on October 19, 2015, during which I granted the parties' request to submit separate briefing on the question of whether this Court lacks personal jurisdiction, as distinct from their briefing on whether to dismiss on other grounds, and set a motion schedule. (Doc. 61.)

On February 16, 2016, I granted Plaintiffs' motion to consolidate the Sonterra action, Sonterra Capital Master Fund, Ltd. v. Barclays Bank PLC, Case No. 15-cv-3538, with a similar case brought by Plaintiffs FrontPoint and Dennis, FrontPoint European Fund, L.P. v. Barclays Bank plc, No. 16-cv-464, and dismissed Defendants' motion to dismiss with leave to renew after the filing of a consolidated amended complaint. (Doc. 91.) Plaintiffs filed the CAC on February 25, 2016. (Doc. 95.) The CAC asserted federal claims under Section 1 of the Sherman Act (First and Second Claims for Relief), the CEA (Third, Fourth, and Fifth Claims for Relief), RICO (Sixth and Seventh Claims for Relief), as well as state law claims for unjust enrichment and violation of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing (Eighth and Ninth [**13] Claims for Relief).

On April 11, 2016, Defendants moved to dismiss the CAC, (Doc. 99), and filed two briefs in support—one brief addressing the question of personal jurisdiction and the other brief addressing Defendants' remaining arguments, (Docs. 100, 103).<sup>9</sup> Plaintiffs filed their oppositions, (Docs. 114, 116); and Defendants filed their reply briefs, (Docs. 120, 121). The parties also filed various declarations with exhibits in support of their positions. (Docs. 101, 102, 104-10, 115.) I have since received the parties' letters of supplemental authority addressing recent decisions of the

<sup>8</sup> An ISDA Master Agreement is a standardized form agreement published by the ISDA, used to provide certain legal and credit protections for parties entering into over-the-counter derivatives transactions, including swaps and forward rate agreements. (CAC ¶ 29 n.25.)

<sup>9</sup> Only the Foreign Defendants move to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction; Defendant BCI does not challenge the Court's personal jurisdiction over it. (See Defs.' PJX Br. 1 n.1.) "Defs.' PJX Br." refers to the Memorandum of Law in Support of Foreign Defendants' Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction. (Doc. 103.)

Supreme Court and Second Circuit, as well as other cases in the Southern District of New York. (Docs. 119, 123-25, 131-33, 135-38, 142, 143, 154-56, 160, 163, 169, 170, 175-83, 188.) Oral argument on the motion was held on August 4, 2017.<sup>10</sup>

[*534] III. Legal Standards

A. Rule 12(b)(6)

To survive a motion to dismiss under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\), "a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to 'state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.'" *Ashcroft v. Iqbal*, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 \(2009\) (quoting *Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly*, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 \(2007\)). A claim will have "facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is [**14] liable for the misconduct alleged." Id. This standard demands "more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully." Id. "Plausibility . . . depends on a host of considerations: the full factual picture presented by the complaint, the particular cause of action and its elements, and the existence of alternative explanations so obvious that they render plaintiff's inferences unreasonable." *L-7 Designs, Inc. v. Old Navy, LLC*, 647 F.3d 419, 430 \(2d Cir. 2011\).

In considering a motion to dismiss, a court must accept as true all well-pleaded facts alleged in the complaint and must draw all reasonable inferences in the plaintiff's favor. See *Kassner*, 496 F.3d at 237. A complaint need not make "detailed factual allegations," but it must contain more than mere "labels and conclusions" or "a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action." *Iqbal*, 556 U.S. at 678 (internal quotation marks omitted). Although all allegations contained in the complaint are assumed to be true, this tenet is "inapplicable to legal conclusions." Id. A complaint is "deemed to include any written instrument attached to it as an exhibit or any statements or documents incorporated in it by reference." *Chambers v. Time Warner, Inc.*, 282 F.3d 147, 152 \(2d Cir. 2002\) (quoting *Int'l Audiotext Network, Inc. v. Am. Tel. & Tel. Co.*, 62 F.3d 69, 72 \(2d Cir. 1995\)).

B. Rule 12(b)(2)

When a defendant moves for dismissal for lack of personal jurisdiction pursuant to Rule 12\(b\)\(2\), the plaintiff [**15] bears the burden of demonstrating that the court has jurisdiction over the defendant. *Kernan v. Kurz-Hastings, Inc.*, 175 F.3d 236, 240 \(2d Cir. 1999\). On a motion under Rule 12\(b\)\(2\), when the issue of personal jurisdiction "is decided initially on the pleadings and without discovery, the plaintiff need show only a prima facie case." *Volkswagenwerk Aktiengesellschaft v. Beech Aircraft Corp.*, 751 F.2d 117, 120 \(2d Cir. 1984\). A plaintiff "can make this showing through [her] own affidavits and supporting materials[] containing an averment of facts that, if credited . . . would suffice to establish jurisdiction over the defendant." *Whitaker v. Am. Telecasting Inc.*, 261 F.3d 196, 208 \(2d Cir. 2001\) (internal citations and quotation marks omitted). Thus, a court may consider materials outside the pleadings when deciding a motion dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction. *Hsin Ten Enter. USA, Inc. v. Clark Enters.*, 138 F. Supp. 2d 449, 452 \(S.D.N.Y. 2000\). [*535] IV. Article III Standing <sup>10</sup> Following oral argument, Plaintiffs submitted a letter indicating their intent to move to substitute an entity named Fund Liquidation Holdings, LLC ("FLH") as assignee and attorney-in-fact for Plaintiffs Sonterra and FrontPoint. (Doc. 171, at 1.) Plaintiffs had learned that both Sonterra and FrontPoint ceased operations no later than 2012; however, before winding down, both assigned certain rights to FLH, including the right to recover any amounts payable on their assets, as well as the right to commence suit in Sonterra's and FrontPoint's names. (Id. at 1-2.) Plaintiffs contend that the substitution of FLH for Sonterra and FrontPoint would not affect any of the substantive factual or legal allegations in the CAC, (Id. at 2); Defendants disagree, (Doc. 172). Because I conclude that Sonterra's claims fail for reasons other than their lack of capacity to sue, Plaintiffs' request for leave to file a motion to substitute for Plaintiff Sonterra is denied as moot. Plaintiff shall submit any motion to substitute Plaintiff FrontPoint in accordance with my instructions below.

As an initial matter, Defendants argue that Plaintiffs Sonterra and Dennis lack standing under Article III of the Constitution.<sup>11</sup> (Defs.' SMJ Br. 11-13.) Article III standing is "the threshold question in every federal case, determining the power of the court to entertain the suit." Ross v. Bank of Am., N.A.(USA), 524 F.3d 217, 222 (2d Cir. 2008) (quoting Denney v. Deutsche Bank AG, 443 F.3d 253, 263 (2d Cir. 2006)). To satisfy the requirements of Article III standing, a plaintiff must establish three elements:

(1) the plaintiff must have suffered an injury in fact, i.e., an invasion of a legally protected interest which is (a) concrete and particularized and (b) actual or imminent, not [**16] conjectural or hypothetical; (2) there must be a causal connection between the injury and the conduct complained of; and (3) it must be likely, as opposed to merely speculative, that the injury will be redressed by a favorable decision.

Nat'l Org. for Marriage, Inc. v. Walsh, 714 F.3d 682, 688 (2d Cir. 2013) (internal quotation marks omitted).

"In considering a Rule 12(b)(1) motion, all facts alleged in the complaint are taken as true and all reasonable inferences drawn in Plaintiffs' favor." Ross v. Bank of AM., N.A. (In re Currency Conversion Fee Antitrust Litig.), Nos. M 21-95, 05 Civ. 7116 (WHP), 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6747, 2009 WL 151168, at *2 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 21, 2009). "Dismissal is inappropriate unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts which would entitle him or her to relief." Id. (quoting Raila v. United States, 355 F.3d 118, 119 (2d Cir. 2004)).

Defendants argue that neither Sonterra nor Dennis alleges facts showing that the Sterling LIBOR manipulation plausibly affected the financial products they traded in—Sterling FX Forwards and CME Sterling FX Futures—and have thus failed to allege injury in fact. (Defs.' SMJ Br. 11.) An FX forward is "an agreement to buy or sell a certain amount of one currency, e.g., Sterling, in terms of another, e.g. U.S. Dollars, on some future date." (CAC ¶ 206.) Sterling FX Futures are the same as Sterling FX Forwards "except that [Sterling FX Forwards] [**17] are not traded on an exchange and thus [are] not subject to the standardized terms specified by the CME." (Id. ¶ 212.) Plaintiffs allege that "[t]he cost of buying or selling Sterling under a foreign exchange forward is determined using a formula that incorporates Sterling LIBOR." (Id. ¶ 206.) The CAC describes this "formula":

The calculation involves taking the "spot price" [what it costs today] of Sterling for immediate delivery, and adjusting it to account for the "cost of carry," i.e., the amount of interest paid or received on Sterling deposits, for the duration of the agreement. Sterling LIBOR, the benchmark rate for Sterling deposits, is used in this formula to calculate the cost of carrying Sterling over the duration of the foreign exchange forward. As a result a manipulation of Sterling LIBOR renders the cost of buying or selling Sterling under a foreign exchange forward artificial.

(Id.) I find that these non-conclusory allegations about the relationship between Sterling LIBOR and the Sterling FX Futures and FX Forwards are sufficient to establish—for the purpose of determining whether there is constitutional standing—[*536] that any LIBOR manipulation had an effect on the price of [**18] Plaintiffs' transactions. See Sullivan v. Barclays PLC, No. 13-cv-2811 (PKC), 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at *9-10 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 21, 2017) (finding that plaintiffs who transacted in CME Euro currency futures and FX forwards had standing to challenge Euribor manipulation because industry-based formula incorporated Euribor into those transactions). "That sort of 'paid too much' or 'received too little' harm is classic economic injury-in-fact." Alaska Elec. Pension Fund v. Bank of Am. Corp., 175 F. Supp. 3d 44, 53 (S.D.N.Y. 2016). Indeed, in Gelboim v. Bank of America Corp., 823 F.3d 759 (2d Cir. 2016), although constitutional standing was not in question, the Circuit noted in dicta that it was "easily satisfied by appellants' pleading that they were harmed by receiving lower returns on LIBOR-denominated instruments as a result of defendants' manipulation of LIBOR." Id. at 770. Given the Circuit's observations in Gelboim, I find that the allegations in the CAC that Plaintiffs received lower returns because of Defendants' manipulation of Sterling LIBOR support a finding of Article III standing.

Defendants point to Sonterra Capital Master Fund, Ltd. v. UBS AG, No. 15-cv-5844-GBD-HBP, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 38252, 2017 WL 1091983 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 10, 2017), in which Judge Daniels concluded that FX forwards are not indexed or priced by reference to the Euroyen TIBOR or Yen LIBOR, and therefore the connection between the two is too attenuated and speculative to support standing. (See 3/17/17 [**19] Ltr.)<sup>12</sup> However, Judge Daniels noted that plaintiffs there were unable to establish "that the Yen LIBOR rate is definitively used to price foreign exchange forwards." Sonterra Capital Master Fund, Ltd. v. UBS AG, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 38252, 2017 WL 1091983, at \*2. While there appears to be a serious factual question as to the extent to which Plaintiffs' FX forwards took Sterling LIBOR into account and what impact it had on Plaintiffs' investments, I concur with Judge Castel that "[t]he Court cannot resolve these conflicting factual assertions at the pleading stage." Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at \*9. Therefore, I find that Plaintiffs have Article III standing to pursue their claims.

---

<sup>11</sup> Defendants do not argue that Plaintiff FrontPoint lacks Article III standing. (See Defs.' SMJ Br. 11-13.)

V. Discussion

Defendants move to dismiss for failure to state a claim, and the Foreign Defendants also move to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction. Although personal jurisdiction is a threshold inquiry, and ordinarily addressed prior to the merits of substantive claims, "that practice is prudential and does not reflect a restriction on the power of the courts to address legal issues." ONY, Inc. v. Cornerstone Therapeutics, Inc., 720 F.3d 490, 498 n.6 \(2d Cir. 2013\). Because only the Foreign Defendants move for lack of personal jurisdiction, and since the jurisdictional question relies in part on the underlying claims and plausible scope of the conspiracy, see LIBOR VI, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175929, 2016 WL 7378980, at \*3, I will address the personal jurisdiction questions [**20] last, see Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at \*11 (addressing defendants' 12\(b\)\(6\) motion before personal jurisdiction because personal jurisdiction arguments turned in part on substance of 12\(b\)\(6\) motion).

A. Statute of Limitations<sup>13</sup>

Defendants argue that Plaintiffs' Sherman Act, CEA, and RICO claims are [*537] all untimely under their respective statutes of limitations. (Defs.' SMJ Br. 25-26 (Sherman Act); 27-31 (CEA); 46-47 (RICO).) As discussed in detail below, because I find that certain of Plaintiffs' claims are tolled by the doctrine of fraudulent concealment, Plaintiffs' claims—with the exception of their CEA claims against Defendants Barclays, UBS, and RBS—are not barred by their respective statute of limitations.

1. Applicable Law

a. Antitrust Claims

The statute of limitations for antitrust claims is four years from the date of accrual. 15 U.S.C. § 15b. The limitations period begins to run "as soon as there is injury to competition." Johnson v. Nyack Hosp., 86 F.3d 8, 11 \(2d Cir. 1996\).

In an alleged price-fixing conspiracy, each overt act that is part of the violation and that injures the plaintiff starts the statutory period running again, regardless of the plaintiff's knowledge of the alleged illegality at much earlier times. Plaintiffs may only recover damages based on acts falling within [**21] the statutory period, and not based on previous acts.

<sup>12</sup> "3/17/17 Ltr." refers to Defendants' letter dated March 17, 2017. (Doc. 136.)

<sup>13</sup> "In deciding a motion to dismiss on statute of limitations grounds, 'a district court may take judicial notice of media reports, state court complaints, and regulatory filings' as long as 'the court does not take judicial notice of the documents for the truth of the matters asserted in them, but rather to establish that the matters had been publicly asserted.'" 7 W. 57th St. Realty Co., 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44031, 2015 WL 1514539, at \*23 n.8 (quoting Staehr v. Hartford Fin. Servs. Grp., Inc., 547 F.3d 406, 424 \(2d Cir. 2008\)).

Mered Irrigation Dist. v. Barclays Bank PLC, 165 F. Supp. 3d 122, 134-35 (S.D.N.Y. 2016) (citations and internal quotation marks omitted); see also Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 401 U.S. 321, 338, 91 S. Ct. 795, 28 L. Ed. 2d 77 (1971).

b. RICO Claims

RICO claims are subject to a four-year statute of limitations. Koch v. Christie's Int'l PLC, 699 F.3d 141, 148 (2d Cir. 2012). "As a general matter, 'the limitations period does not begin to run until a plaintiff has actual or inquiry notice of the injury.'" Id. at 150-51 (quoting In re Merrill Lynch Ltd. P'ships Litig., 154 F.3d 56, 60 (2d Cir. 1998)).

Inquiry notice—often called "storm warnings" in the securities context—gives rise to a duty of inquiry "when the circumstances would suggest to an investor of ordinary intelligence the probability that she has been defrauded." In such circumstances, the imputation of knowledge will be timed in one of two ways: (i) "if the investor makes no inquiry once the duty arises, knowledge will be imputed as of the date the duty arose"; and (ii) if some inquiry is made, "we will impute knowledge of what an investor in the exercise of reasonable diligence should have discovered concerning the fraud, and in such cases the limitations period begins to run from the date such inquiry should have revealed the fraud."

Koch, 699 F.3d at 151 (quoting Lentell v. Merrill Lynch & Co., 396 F.3d 161, 168 (2d Cir. 2005)). "Storm warnings' need not detail every aspect of the alleged fraudulent scheme: 'An investor does not have to have notice of the entire fraud [**22] being perpetrated to be on inquiry notice.'" Staehr, 547 F.3d at 427 (quoting Dodds v. Cigna Sec., Inc., 12 F.3d 346, 352 (2d Cir. 1993)). "Rather, a totality-of-the-circumstances analysis applies." Id. Whether a plaintiff was on inquiry notice is "analyzed under an objective standard," and may be "resolved as a matter of law." Id.

c. CEA Claims

An action brought under the CEA "shall be brought not later than two years after the date the cause of action [*538] arises." 7 U.S.C. § 25(c). "Because the CEA does not define when a cause of action accrues, courts apply a discovery accrual rule wherein discovery of the injury, not discovery of the other elements of a claim, is what starts the clock." In re London Silver Fixing, Ltd., Antitrust Litig. ("In re Silver"), 213 F. Supp. 3d 530, 573 (S.D.N.Y. 2016) (quoting Koch, 699 F.3d at 148-49). "Applying the corollary doctrine of 'inquiry notice,' a court must 'ask at what point the circumstances were such that they would suggest to a person of ordinary intelligence the probability that she has been defrauded.'" LIBOR III, 27 F. Supp. 3d at 471 (quoting LIBOR I, 935 F. Supp. 2d at 698); see also Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at *26 ("The limitations period begins to run when a plaintiff is placed on inquiry notice of the alleged wrongdoing through facts that 'suggest to a person of ordinary intelligence' that the CEA has been violated." (quoting Benfield v. Mocatta Metals Corp., 26 F.3d 19, 22 (2d Cir. 1994))); In re Silver, 213 F. Supp. 3d at 573 (comparing inquiry notice in the CEA context to storm warnings [**23] in the securities context).

d. Doctrine of Fraudulent Concealment

"Under federal common law, a statute of limitations may be tolled due to the defendant's fraudulent concealment if the plaintiff establishes that: (1) the defendant wrongfully concealed material facts relating to defendant's wrongdoing; (2) the concealment prevented plaintiff's discovery of the nature of the claim within the limitations period; and (3) plaintiff exercised due diligence in pursuing the discovery of the claim during the period plaintiff seeks to have tolled." Koch, 699 F.3d at 157 (quoting Corcoran v. N.Y. Power Auth., 202 F.3d 530, 543 (2d Cir. 1999)). The rationale behind the doctrine "is to prevent a defendant from 'concealing a fraud, or committing a fraud in a manner that it concealed itself until such time as the party committing the fraud could plead the statute of limitations to protect it.'" State of N.Y. v. Hendrickson Bros., 840 F.2d 1065, 1083 (2d Cir. 1988) (quoting Bailey v. Glover, 88 U.S. (21 Wall.) 342, 349, 22 L. Ed. 636 (1874)).

The first prong is met where "the nature of the wrong itself" is self-concealing." Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at *27 (quoting Nat'l Grp. for Commc'n & Computers Ltd. v. Lucent Techs. Inc., 420 F. Supp. 2d 253, 267 n.20 (S.D.N.Y. 2006)); see also Levy v. BASF Metals Ltd., No. 1:15-cv-7317-GHW, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 89098, 2017 WL 2533501, at *8 (S.D.N.Y. June 9, 2017). Allegations of price-fixing conspiracies are often considered inherently self-concealing. See Merced, 165 F. Supp. 3d at 135 ("Allegations of price-fixing conspiracies in violation of antitrust law constitute the type of unlawful activity that is inherently self-concealing."); [**24] In re Nine W. Shoes Antitrust Litig., 80 F. Supp. 2d 181, 193 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) ("[S]ince . . . price-fixing conspiracies are deemed self-concealing, a plaintiff is not required to show defendants took independent affirmative steps to conceal their conduct.").

"A claim for fraudulent concealment must be pled with particularity, in accordance with the heightened pleading standards of Rule 9(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure." Merced, 165 F. Supp. 3d at 135. However, "because resolution of a claim of fraudulent concealment is intimately bound up with the facts of the case, it often cannot be decided at the motion to dismiss stage." In re Commodity Exch., Inc., 213 F. Supp. 3d 631, 675 (S.D.N.Y. 2016) (internal quotation marks omitted).

2. Application

Sonterra's initial complaint was filed on May 6, 2015. FrontPoint and Dennis's [*539] complaint was filed on January 21, 2016. The conduct at issue is alleged to have occurred during the Class Period—January 1, 2005 through December 31, 2010. (CAC ¶ 217.) Although Plaintiffs may have been aware of the identities of the panel members, they claim not to have known which of the panel members participated in the conspiracy, and thus lacked notice of their claims, until the Government settlements became public: Barclays on June 27, 2012, (id. ¶ 46), UBS on December 18, 2012, (id. ¶ 17 n.8), RBS on February 6, 2013, (id. ¶ 73), Rabobank on October 29, 2013, (id. ¶ 20 [**25] n.15), Lloyds on July 28, 2014, (id. ¶ 22 n.20), and Deutsche Bank on April 23, 2015, (id. ¶ 13 n.2). Therefore, Plaintiffs concede that their CEA claims against Barclays, UBS, and RBS are time-barred under the applicable two-year statute of limitations, (Pls.' SMJ Opp. 47 n.36)<sup>14</sup>, but argue that their remaining CEA claims against Rabobank, Deutsch Bank, and Lloyds, as well as their antitrust and RICO claims against all Defendants, are tolled by the doctrine of fraudulent concealment.

Defendants argue that Plaintiffs were on notice of their claims as early as May 2008. (Defs.' SMJ Br. 25-30, 46-47.) As support for their argument, Defendants identify and include a number of surveys, articles, and reports (the "2008 press reports") that they assert placed Plaintiffs on inquiry notice in 2008. (See Gottridge Decl. Exs. A-H.)<sup>15</sup> These same materials have been discussed by a number of other courts in this District examining the issue of inquiry notice. As comprehensively summarized by Judge Furman, the 2008 press reports conveyed the following information:

On April 10, 2008, strategists at Citigroup published a report comparing LIBOR to other interest rate measures and concluding that "LIBOR may [**26] underestimate actual interbank lending costs" by twenty to thirty basis points (or twenty to thirty hundredths of a percentage point). The strategists explained:

"The most obvious explanation for LIBOR being set so low is the prevailing fear of being perceived as a weak hand in this fragile market environment. If a bank is not held to transact at its posted LIBOR level, there is little incentive for it to post a rate that is more reflective of real lending levels, let alone one that is higher than its competitors. Because all LIBOR postings are publicly disclosed, any bank posting a high LIBOR level runs the risk of being perceived as needing funding. With markets in such a [*540] fragile state, this kind of perception could have dangerous consequences."

<sup>14</sup> "Pls.' SMJ Opp." refers to Plaintiffs' Memorandum of Law in Opposition to Defendants' Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction and Failure to State a Claim. (Doc. 116.)

<sup>15</sup> "Gottridge Decl." refers to the Declaration of Marc J. Gottridge, dated April 11, 2016. (Doc. 101.) Those surveys, articles and reports include the following: a survey published by Factiva, dated June 19, 2008, titled *Market Participants Doubt Libor Rates Reflect [**30] Market Rates*, (Ex. A); an article published by the Financial Times, dated April 21, 2008, titled Doubts over Libor Widen, (Ex. B); an article published by Bloomberg, dated April 16, 2008, titled Bankers Group Reviews Libor amid Manipulation Concern, (Ex. C); an article published by the Wall Street Journal, dated April 16, 2008, titled Libor Fog: Bankers Cast Doubt on Key Rate amid Crisis, (Ex. D); an article published by the Wall Street Journal, dated April 18, 2008, titled Libor Surges After Scrutiny Does, Too, (Ex. E); an article published by the Wall Street Journal, dated April 17, 2008, titled British Bankers Group Steps Up Review of Widely Used Libor, (Ex. F); an article published by Factiva, dated April 16, 2008, titled BBA Libor Review Will Look for Past Misquoting from Banks, (Ex. G); and a research report, dated April 10, 2008, titled Special Topic: Is LIBOR Broken?, (Ex. H).

Six days later, the Wall Street Journal published an article citing the Citigroup report and warning that "one of the most important barometers of the world's financial health could be sending false signals." The article reported that the BBA, which oversees LIBOR, was conducting an investigation into potential problems with the rate.

Two more articles in the Wall Street Journal followed in quick succession. The following day, April 17, 2008, the [*27] Journal reported that the BBA had "fast-tracked its inquiry into the accuracy of the rate." The Journal noted that the BBA's announcement "came as more traders and bankers expressed concerns about" the validity of LIBOR. And on April 18, 2008, the Journal reported a "sudden jump in the dollar-denominated London interbank offered rate, or LIBOR," in the wake of the announcement that the BBA was accelerating its inquiry into the rate's accuracy. The article reiterated "concerns among bankers that the LIBOR panel banks were not reporting the high rates they were paying for short-term loans for fear of appearing desperate for cash."

Nor was the Wall Street Journal the only news outlet reporting on concerns surrounding LIBOR. On April 21, 2008, the Financial Times reported that "the credibility of Libor as a measure is declining." In particular, the Times explained that, as the paper had "first revealed" in 2007, "bankers have been questioning the way Libor is compiled ever since the credit turmoil first erupted." On May 16, 2008, Reuters published an article discussing "problems with Libor," and noting that "recent concern had focused particularly on the dollar Libor index and worries that [*28] some banks were understating how much they had to pay to borrow money in order to avoid being labeled desperate for cash and, as a result, vulnerable to solvency rumors." And on May 29, 2008, Bloomberg published an article, the first line of which stated: "Banks routinely misstated borrowing costs to the British Bankers' Association to avoid the perception they faced difficulty raising funds as credit markets seized up, said Tim Bond, a strategist at Barclay Capital."

Amidst growing concern about LIBOR's reliability, the Wall Street Journal conducted its own study. Its results—published in a May 29, 2008 article—revealed that "in the first four months of 2008, the three-month and six-month dollar Libor rates were about a quarter percentage point lower than" the Journal's analysis suggested they should have been. The data showed, further, that "after banks adjusted their Libor rates following news of the BBA review in mid-April, the difference between the reported rates and what rates should have been shrunk to about 0.15 percentage point." Three experts, the Journal reported, approved of its methodology. By May 29, 2008, then, there were at least seven articles in major publications [*29] reporting that there was substantial evidence to support the conclusion that LIBOR was artificially low and had been so for some time.

BPP III., LLC v. Royal Bank of Scot. Grp., PLC, No. 13 Civ. 0638\(JMF\), 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 161761, 2013 WL 6003701, at \*7-8 \(S.D.N.Y. Nov. 13, 2013\) (citations omitted), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 603 F. App'x 57 \(2d Cir. 2015\) (summary order); see also LIBOR I, 935 F. Supp. 2d at 700-03 (describing same articles). Applying Pennsylvania's discovery rule, Judge Furman concluded that these articles were sufficient storm warnings to raise the possibility that the US-dollar LIBOR was not a legitimate and reliable [*541] market-based interest rate; therefore, the plaintiffs were not reasonably unaware of their injury. BPP III., LLC v. 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 161761, 2013 WL 6003701, at \*6-7. The Second Circuit reversed in a summary order, stating that the district court erroneously held plaintiffs to too high a standard of proof at the motion to dismiss stage by requiring plaintiffs to exhibit reasonable diligence in not discovering their injury in response to the storm warnings. See 603 F. App'x at 59. Because plaintiffs were "not required to plead, in a complaint, facts sufficient to overcome an affirmative defense," the Second Circuit concluded that the record was insufficient to show that the plaintiffs had not exercised reasonable diligence. See id. at 59 (internal quotation marks omitted).

On remand, Judge Furman concluded that the plaintiffs were judicially estopped from bringing LIBOR-based fraud claims because they failed to list them in their schedule of assets in a prior bankruptcy proceeding. See BPP III.,

LLC v. Royal Bank of Scot. Grp., PLC, No. 13-CV-638 \(JMF\), 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 141824, 2015 WL 6143702, at \*9 \(S.D.N.Y. Oct. 19, 2015\). The Second Circuit affirmed and, relying on Fifth Circuit law, held that the 2008 press reports were sufficient to "suggest that [the plaintiffs] may have [had] a possible cause of action." BPP III., LLC v. Royal Bank of Scot. Grp., PLC, 859 F.3d 188, 193 & n.3 \(2d Cir. 2017\) (quoting In re Coastal Plains, Inc., 179 F.3d 197, 210 \(5th Cir. 1999\)). In a footnote, the Court reconciled its decisions as follows:

In the previous appeal in this case, we stated that the district court had acted too hastily in concluding, based in part on these newspaper reports, that BPP should have been aware of its potential LIBOR-fraud claims. In that appeal, however, we considered a different question under a different body of law. \*\*31 The issue was whether BPP had sufficient inquiry notice under the relevant Pennsylvania statute of limitations. That question turned on when the plaintiff reasonably should have known that he had been injured and that his injury had been caused by another party's conduct. In this appeal, controlled by Fifth Circuit bankruptcy precedents, the question is whether the debtor has enough information prior to confirmation to suggest that it may have a possible cause of action. The tests are different, and a bankruptcy debtor in the Fifth Circuit could be required to list a cause of action in its schedule of assets even though the same debtor would not be deemed to have inquiry notice of his injury for purposes of the Pennsylvania statute of limitations.

Id. at 193 n.3 (citations and internal quotation marks omitted).

The Second Circuit's recent decision in Charles Schwab Corp. v. Bank of America Corp., 883 F.3d 68 \(2d Cir. 2018\), also addressed the significance of the 2008 press reports. In that case, the Circuit—albeit applying California law—reversed the district court's determination that the plaintiff was on inquiry notice based on reports published by May 29, 2008. See id. at 96-98. The Second Circuit's decision rested, in part, on California law, under which press reports are not \*\*32 sufficient to put a plaintiff on inquiry notice "where there is no evidence that the plaintiff was aware of the reporting in question." Id. at 97. The Circuit further stated that even if Schwab were aware of news articles that raised the possibility that LIBOR had been at artificial levels since August 2007, it is not certain that any of Schwab's claims would be time-barred. The BBA responded to the negative press reporting by assuring investors and journalists that its own investigation had confirmed the accuracy of LIBOR. \*\*542 It is plausible that Schwab reasonably relied on those assurances, thus delaying the start of the limitations period.

Id. at 98 (citing BPP III., LLC, 603 F. App'x at 59). "The Second Circuit's analysis strongly suggests that, even if the news articles published on or about May 29, 2008 are sufficient to place a plaintiff on inquiry notice, the statute of limitations would be tolled under the doctrine of fraudulent concealment where a plaintiff plausibly alleges that it relied on the BBA's assurances that LIBOR was accurate." 7 W. 57th St. Realty Co., 314 F. Supp. 3d at 518.

Here, Plaintiffs' allegations clear the first hurdle of the fraudulent concealment test because the nature of LIBOR submissions is inherently secretive, and therefore collusion related to such \*\*33 submissions is self-concealing. See Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at \*27. As to the second factor, Plaintiffs adequately allege that they remained ignorant of the alleged scheme until a point within the relevant statutes of limitations—when the Government settlements became public. (See CAC ¶ 20 n.15 (Rabobank on October 29, 2013); id. ¶ 22 n.20 (Lloyds on July 28, 2014); id. ¶ 13 n.2 (Deutsche Bank on April 23, 2015).)

With regard to the third element—whether Plaintiffs exercised due diligence in pursuing the discovery of the claim during the period they seek to have tolled—Defendants argue that the 2008 press reports put Plaintiffs on inquiry notice of a cause of action prior to the Government settlements, thereby triggering the need for diligence. As an initial matter, the 2008 press reports did not explicitly suggest that panel banks were manipulating Sterling LIBOR, which distinguishes this case from the U.S.-dollar LIBOR decisions that tolled the statute of limitations notwithstanding those same reports. Further, it is unclear that the 2008 press reports should have alerted Plaintiffs to their various claims, as those reports may not have provided Plaintiffs with a basis to allege a cognizable theory of liability \*\*34 against each specific Defendant. See Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at \*28 (rejecting defendants' argument that "October 2011 press reports about possible Euribor manipulation should have alerted plaintiffs to their claims" because "those early reports did not provide plaintiffs with information sufficient to identify each defendant or a good-faith basis to allege a cognizable theory of liability"). Indeed, Plaintiffs claim not to have known which panel members participated in the conspiracy until the Government settlements became public.

Moreover, even if the 2008 press reports were sufficient to place Plaintiffs on inquiry notice, "the statute of limitations would be tolled under the doctrine of fraudulent concealment where [P]laintiff plausibly alleges that it relied on the BBA's assurances that LIBOR was accurate." 7 W. 57th St. Realty Co., 314 F. Supp. 3d at 518; see also Schwab, 883 F.3d at 97-98. Although Plaintiffs' due diligence allegations are thin, the CAC alleges that Defendants' agreements to manipulate Sterling LIBOR were "intentionally self-concealing" and that through the BBA, Defendants were representing that their Sterling LIBOR quotes were accurate. (See, e.g., CAC ¶ 230.) I therefore find that Plaintiffs have adequately alleged fraudulent concealment, and at the pleading [**35] stage, I need not determine the precise contours of the applicable tolling period. See In re Commodity Exch., Inc., 213 F. Supp. 3d at 676. Accordingly, Plaintiffs' antitrust and RICO claims against all Defendants and CEA claims against Rabobank, Deutsche Bank, and Lloyds are not barred by their applicable statutes of limitations.

B. Antitrust Claims

The Consolidated Amended Complaint asserts two antitrust claims under Section 1 of the Sherman Act: [*543] First, that Defendants conspired with each other and with brokers to make false Sterling LIBOR submissions; and second, that Defendants conspired through trading strategies to affect other banks' Sterling LIBOR submissions. In addition to the statute of limitations arguments addressed above, see supra Part V.A, Defendants argue that these claims should be dismissed because (1) Plaintiffs lack antitrust standing; (2) the claims are barred by the Foreign Trade Antitrust Improvements Act of 1982 ("FTAIA"), 15 U.S.C. § 6a; and (3) the CAC fails to plausibly allege an antitrust conspiracy.

1. Antitrust Standing<sup>16</sup>

Defendants primarily argue that Plaintiffs lack antitrust standing because (1) Plaintiffs do not allege they [**36] were customers or competitors of Defendants (with one exception), and (2) Plaintiffs' injury is too speculative to allow them to be "efficient enforcers" of the antitrust laws. (Defs.' SMJ Br. 16-19.) As discussed below, I find that Plaintiffs Sonterra and Dennis lack antitrust standing, but find that Plaintiff FrontPoint has antitrust standing to pursue its claims against Defendant UBS.

a. Applicable Law

Section 4 of the Clayton Act provides in relevant part that "any person who shall be injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws may sue . . . in any district court of the United States in the district in which the defendant resides or is found or has an agent, without respect to the amount in controversy, and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained, and the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee." 15 U.S.C. § 15(a). This language has been interpreted in this Circuit to mean that a plaintiff alleging antitrust claims must establish antitrust standing in addition to constitutional standing under Article III. See In re Aluminum Warehousing Antitrust Litig., 833 F.3d 151, 157 (2d Cir. 2016). "Harm to the antitrust plaintiff is sufficient to satisfy the constitutional standing requirement of injury in fact, but the court [**37] must make a further determination whether the plaintiff is a proper party to bring a private antitrust action." Gelboim, 823 F.3d at 770 (quoting AGC, 459 U.S. at 535 n.31).

<sup>16</sup> Plaintiffs argue that dismissal on this basis is premature, as the CAC alleges that Plaintiffs were damaged by the conduct alleged. (Pls.' SMJ Opp. 15-16.) However, standing is a threshold issue. See Associated Gen. Contractors of Cal., Inc. v. Cal. State Council of Carpenters ("AGC"), 459 U.S. 519, 103 S. Ct. 897, 74 L. Ed. 2d 723 (1983); Gatt Commc'n, Inc. v. PMC Assocs., L.L.C., 711 F.3d 68, 75 (2d Cir. 2013) ("Antitrust standing is a threshold, pleading-stage inquiry and when a complaint by its terms fails to establish this requirement we must dismiss it as a matter of law." (quoting NicSand, Inc. v. 3M Co., 507 F.3d 442, 450 (6th Cir. 2007)). Therefore, it is appropriate to consider the issue at this stage of the case.

To adequately plead antitrust standing, a plaintiff must plausibly allege that (1) it suffered an antitrust injury, meaning injury "of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful," and (2) it is an acceptable plaintiff to pursue the alleged antitrust violations, in satisfaction of the "efficient enforcer" factors. Gordon v. Amadeus IT Grp., S.A., 194 F. Supp. 3d 236, 246 \(S.D.N.Y. 2016\) (quoting Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489, 97 S. Ct. 690, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701 \(1977\); AGC, 459 U.S. at 538-45; see also Gelboim, 823 F.3d at 778; Aluminum Warehousing, 833 F.3d at 157.

[*544] b. Application: Antitrust Injury

As an initial matter, the CAC alleges that Defendants engaged in a horizontal price-fixing scheme, which is a per se antitrust violation. See Gelboim, 823 F.3d at 771. As in Gelboim, Plaintiffs allege that the banks colluded to manipulate the Sterling LIBOR, and thereby increased the cost to buyers of various LIBOR-based instruments. (See CAC ¶¶ 13-25, 126-42). "Generally, when consumers, because of a conspiracy, must pay prices that no longer reflect ordinary market conditions, they suffer 'injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful.'" Gelboim, 823 F.3d at 772 (quoting Brunswick, 429 U.S. at 489). The CAC therefore [*38] adequately pleads antitrust injury based on the price-fixing's effect on the prices for LIBOR-based financial instruments. "No further showing of actual adverse effect in the marketplace is necessary. This attribute separates evaluation of per se violations—which are presumed illegal—from rule of reason violations, which demand appraisal of the marketplace consequences that flow from a particular violation." Id.

Prior to the Second Circuit's decision in Gelboim, Defendants argued that Plaintiffs failed to allege antitrust injury, relying on Judge Buchwald's conclusion in LIBOR I that, because LIBOR-setting is a cooperative rather than competitive process, the alleged conduct cannot be the source of an antitrust injury. (Defs.' SMJ Br 14-15.) Gelboim rejected Judge Buchwald's antitrust injury analysis and held that manipulating LIBOR is a per se violation of antitrust laws that causes antitrust injury to anyone who transacted in financial instruments with prices influenced by that rate. See 823 F.3d at 771. Here, the CAC alleges that the financial instruments purchased by Plaintiffs were priced, benchmarked, or settled based on Sterling LIBOR. In light of Gelboim, Plaintiffs have clearly sufficiently [*39] alleged that they have suffered an antitrust injury in the form of higher prices flowing from the alleged corruption of the rate-setting process. Accordingly, Plaintiffs have adequately alleged antitrust injury.

c. Application: Efficient Enforcer of the Antitrust Laws

"The four efficient enforcer factors are: (1) the 'directness or indirectness of the asserted injury,' which requires evaluation of the 'chain of causation' linking appellants' asserted injury and the Banks' alleged price-fixing; (2) the 'existence of more direct victims of the alleged conspiracy'; (3) the extent to which appellants' damages claim is 'highly speculative'; and (4) the importance of avoiding 'either the risk of duplicate recoveries on the one hand, or the danger of complex apportionment of damages on the other.'" Id. at 778 (quoting AGC, 459 U.S. at 540-45). "Courts sometimes weigh a fifth consideration: 'whether the putative plaintiff is a proper party to perform the office of a private attorney general and thereby vindicate the public interest in antitrust enforcement.'" Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at \*15 (quoting Gatt, 711 F.3d at 80). "A determination of standing in an individual antitrust case is a fact-specific exercise involving a fact-intensive inquiry." In re Platinum & Palladium Antitrust Litig. \("Platinum"\), No. 1:14-cv-9391-GHW, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46624, 2017 WL 1169626, at \*20 \(S.D.N.Y. Mar. 28, 2017\) [*40] (citing AGC, 459 U.S. at 536-37).

i. Causation

The first factor addresses the "directness or indirectness of the asserted injury," which "requires evaluation of the 'chain of causation' linking [plaintiff's] asserted injury and the [defendants'] alleged [*545] price-fixing." Gelboim, 823 F.3d at 778 (quoting AGC, 459 U.S. at 540). "The antitrust laws do not require a plaintiff to have purchased directly from a defendant in order to have antitrust standing." Platinum, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46624, 2017 WL 1169626, at \*20 (quoting In re Foreign Exch. Benchmark Rates Antitrust Litig. \("FOREX"\), No. 13 Civ. 7789 \(LGS\), 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128237, 2016 WL 5108131, at *9 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 20, 2016)). However, whether Plaintiffs dealt directly or indirectly with Defendants, as well as the scope of the relevant market, are both relevant to the issue of causation. See Gelboim, 823 F.3d at 778. The Second Circuit in Gelboim expressed concern over "umbrella standing"—a plaintiff injured by dealing with a non-defendant by virtue of a defendant's raising of prices in the market as a whole. Id. Gelboim acknowledged a circuit split concerning whether umbrella purchasers have antitrust standing but declined to adopt a position. Id. at 778-79; see also Platinum, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46624, 2017 WL 1169626, at *22. The court in Gelboim noted that while "there appears to be no difference in the injury alleged by those who dealt in LIBOR-denominated instruments, whether . . . directly or indirectly [**41] with the Banks," the Banks appeared to "control only a small percentage of the ultimate identified market." Gelboim, 823 F.3d at 779. The Second Circuit cautioned that "[r]equiring the Banks to pay treble damages to every plaintiff who ended up on the wrong side of an independent LIBOR-denominated derivative swap would, . . . not only bankrupt 16 of the world's most important financial institutions, but also vastly extend the potential scope of antitrust liability in myriad markets where derivative instruments have proliferated." Id.

The concern with so-called umbrella purchasers is that "significant intervening causative factors, most notably, the independent pricing decisions of non-conspiring retailers, attenuate the causal connection between the violation and the injury." LIBOR VI, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175929, 2016 WL 7378980, at *15 (internal quotation marks omitted). For that reason, courts in this District have "[drawn] a line between plaintiffs who transacted directly with defendants and those who did not" because "the 'independent decision' of contracting parties to incorporate LIBOR 'breaks the chain of causation between defendants' actions and a plaintiff's injury.'" Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at *17 (quoting LIBOR VI, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175929, 2016 WL 7378980, at *16); see also FOREX, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128237, 2016 WL 5108131, at *7; Platinum, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46624, 2017 WL 1169626, at *22. Courts have been "able to draw that line in part by acknowledging [**42] that 'plaintiffs who did not purchase directly from defendants continue to face the same hurdle: they made their own decisions to incorporate LIBOR into their transactions, over which defendants had no control, in which defendants had no input, and from which defendants did not profit.'" Platinum, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46624, 2017 WL 1169626, at *22 (quoting LIBOR VI, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175929, 2016 WL 7378980, at *16).

Here, Plaintiffs Sonterra and Dennis assert exactly the sort of "umbrella claims" that the Circuit viewed with skepticism, since their claims are based solely on financial transactions with third-parties, and not with Defendants. See FrontPoint Asian Event Driven Fund, L.P. v. Citibank, N.A., 16 Civ. 5263 (AKH), 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 171999, 2018 WL 4830087, at *5-6 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 4, 2018) (dismissing Sonterra's antitrust claims because "Sonterra's transactions with third-parties [were] insufficient to give it antitrust standing to sue [the defendants]"). Moreover, the relationship between Sterling LIBOR—on the one hand—and Sonterra's Sterling FX Forwards and Dennis's Sterling FX Futures—on the other—while enough to confer Article III standing, supra Part IV, is more attenuated than the relationship between LIBOR and the "LIBOR-denominated" [*546] transactions in Gelboim, see 823 F.3d at 779; indeed, the FX Forwards of Sonterra and the FX Futures of Dennis incorporated LIBOR only implicitly [**43] through a complex formula involving numerous other causal factors. These sort of "vaguely defined links," AGC, 459 U.S. at 540, suggest that the causal relationship is too indirect to support the causation element of the efficient enforcer prong for antitrust standing, see Laydon I, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46368, 2014 WL 1280464, at *9; 7 W. 57th St. Realty Co., 314 F. Supp. 3d at 512-14.

Because Plaintiff FrontPoint is alleged to have dealt with Defendant UBS directly, its claims do not suffer from the same causation problems. (See CAC ¶ 38.)

ii. Existence of More Direct Victims

Whether a plaintiff is a consumer or competitor is relevant to the second factor, but not dispositive. See Gelboim, 823 F.3d at 779. Like the plaintiffs in Gelboim, "one peculiar feature of this case is that remote victims (who acquired LIBOR-based instruments from any of thousands of non-defendant banks) would be injured to the same extent and in the same way as direct customers of the Banks." Id. Accordingly, I give the existence of more direct victims "diminished weight" in determining whether Plaintiffs are efficient enforcers of the antitrust laws. Id.; see also LIBOR VI, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175929, 2016 WL 7378980, at *17; Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at *18.

iii. Speculative Damages

"[H]ighly speculative damages is a sign that a given plaintiff is an inefficient engine of enforcement." Gelboim, 823 F.3d at 779. While "some degree of uncertainty stems from the nature of [**44] antitrust law" and is permitted, plaintiffs must be able to allege that they could arrive at a just and reasonable estimate of damages. Id.; see also Platinum, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46624, 2017 WL 1169626, at \*23 (stating that plaintiffs "carry the burden of coming forward with a just and reasonable estimate of damages" (internal quotation marks omitted)). "As with most antitrust cases, to establish damages, Plaintiffs will have to offer a reliable 'but-for' world. At a minimum, that 'but-for' world will require Plaintiffs to establish (1) what an alternative Fix Price would have been absent collusion, and (2) the behavior of [defendants] absent a Fix Price affected by collusion." Id. (citations omitted). "Whether damages calculations will be too speculative and, therefore, unreliable, depends on 'the nature and complexity of the alleged antitrust violation.'" Id. (quoting Gelboim, 823 F.3d at 779).

Gelboim noted the "unusual challenges" that are also present in this case: "The disputed transactions were done at rates that were negotiated, notwithstanding that the negotiated component was the increment above LIBOR. And the market for money is worldwide, with competitors offering various increments above LIBOR, or rates pegged to other benchmarks, or rates set without reference [**45] to any benchmark at all." 823 F.3d at 780. In evaluating whether damages are unduly speculative in price-fixing cases, considerations include (1) the extent to which the damages claim is conclusory in nature; (2) whether the injury is "so far down the chain of causation from defendants' actions that it would be impossible to untangle the impact of the fixed price from the impact of intervening market decisions," which relates to the causation factor; (3) whether external market factors affected the "relationship between the fixed price and the price that the plaintiffs ultimately paid;" and (4) whether "the non-fixed components of a transaction were heavily negotiated between the parties in relation to the fixed component." LIBOR VI, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175929, 2016 WL 7378980, at \*17-18 (citations omitted).

[*547] In LIBOR VI, Judge Buchwald found "highly negotiated transactions," such as interest rate swaps,<sup>17</sup> to be the kind of transactions that "absorb[] the effects of LIBOR suppression." Id. at \*20. Similarly, Plaintiff Sonterra's Sterling FX Forwards are also the sort of highly negotiated contracts that incorporate numerous considerations as to make the effect of Sterling LIBOR manipulation highly speculative. This factor weighs against finding antitrust standing for Sonterra. [**46]

With respect to futures contracts purchased on an exchange, such as those purchased by Plaintiff Dennis, Judge Buchwald found that [t]he mathematical relationship between LIBOR and the settlement price of Eurodollar futures contracts does not address the relationship, if any, between LIBOR and the trading price of . . . futures contracts (that is, the price at which . . . futures contracts were bought and sold prior to settlement). The trading price reflects the market's prediction for what the price will be at settlement, which could be years away—not what LIBOR is at the present moment.

[2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175929, \[WL\] at \*21](#). Judge Buchwald concluded that the effect of LIBOR on the trading price could only be established if the trading price and settlement price were closely related. Id. She found that the Exchange-based plaintiffs had not sufficiently pled a close relationship between the LIBOR and trading prices, and that damages based on an impact of LIBOR manipulation on the futures trading prices was speculative. [2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175929, \[WL\] at \*22-23](#). The only Exchange-based claims that survived were those of plaintiffs who, "before the suppression period started, shorted contracts that were held to settlement during the suppression period," as they could [**47] "rely on an unmanipulated selling price as well as a settlement price demonstrably impacted by LIBOR suppression." [2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175929, \[WL\] at 23](#).

<sup>17</sup> An interest rate swap is an instrument in which "two parties agree to exchange interest rate cash flows, based on a specified notional amount from a fixed rate to a floating rate (or vice-versa) or from one floating rate to another." LIBOR VI, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175929, 2016 WL 7378980, at \*19.

Defendants point out that Plaintiff Dennis does not allege that he held any of his futures contracts to settlement. (1/6/17 Ltr. at 4.)<sup>18</sup> Dennis also fails to allege sufficient detail about his transactions to explain how his damages could be calculated. (Id.) This factor weighs against finding antitrust standing for Dennis. In addition, there is no direct relationship between Sterling LIBOR and the price of the products purchased by Plaintiffs Sonterra and Dennis, and Plaintiffs fail to allege sufficient details concerning how Defendants' alleged manipulation of Sterling LIBOR caused damages. Specifically, Plaintiffs state, in a conclusory fashion, that "[g]iven the mathematical and formulaic nature of the Sterling LIBOR and the Sterling LIBOR-based derivatives, the amount of injury to Plaintiffs and Class on each Sterling LIBOR-based derivative instrument may be mathematically ascertained and computed." (See CAC ¶ 114.) The CAC, however, does not contain any allegations that demonstrate how the amount of injury can be "mathematically ascertained and computed," and the [*48] allegations in the CAC are too vague to plausibly allege damages. Moreover, as discussed above, the price of the products purchased by Sonterra and Dennis was not determined based upon Sterling LIBOR; rather, Sterling LIBOR was part of a formula to calculate the cost of carrying Sterling over the duration of the foreign exchange forward or futures contract. (See id. ¶¶ 206, 212.)

[*548] iv. Duplicative Recovery and Complex Damage Apportionment

The final factor "reflects a 'strong interest in keeping the scope of complex antitrust trials within judicially manageable limits.'" LIBOR VI, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175929, 2016 WL 7378980, at \*23 (quoting AGC, 459 U.S. at 543). It traditionally concerns "the prospect of different groups of plaintiffs attempting to recover for the same exact injury." Id. The Circuit in Gelboim expressed concern over the fact that the conduct at issue in that case was the subject of numerous government and regulatory investigations and cases, as well as ongoing proceedings in several other countries. 823 F.3d at 780. "Some of those government initiatives may seek damages on behalf of victims, and for apportionment among them. Others may seek fines, injunctions, disgorgement, and other remedies known to United States courts and foreign jurisdictions. It is wholly unclear [*49] on this record how issues of duplicate recovery and damage apportionment can be assessed." Id.

However, at this stage, "there has been no showing that certain plaintiffs have been made whole through the receipt of restitution payments made to governments." LIBOR VI, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175929, 2016 WL 7378980, at \*23. The situation here is analogous to LIBOR VI. Should duplicate recoveries or apportionment issues become an issue in the future, any restitution payments would be considered to avoid duplicative recovery. Id.; see also Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at \*20 ("This Court also concludes that government enforcement actions have not been shown to risk duplicative recovery in this case.").

***

Based on the foregoing factors, I find that only Plaintiff FrontPoint has antitrust standing, and only with respect to its Sherman Act claims against Defendant UBS. Unlike Plaintiffs Dennis and Sonterra, FrontPoint transacted directly with UBS and can point to specific transactions on specific dates, which obviates concerns about damage calculations and speculative damages. The remaining claims involve transactions with non-defendant third-parties—whose "independent decision[s]" to incorporate Sterling LIBOR into their transactions "breaks the chain of causation between [D]efendants' [*50] actions and [Plaintiffs'] injury," LIBOR VI, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175929, 2016 WL 7378980, at \*17 (internal quotation marks omitted)—and damages that are speculative.

2. The FTAIA

Defendants also argue that Plaintiffs' Sherman Act claims are barred by FTAIA, (Defs.' SMJ Br. 19-21), which provides that the Sherman Act:

---

<sup>18</sup> "1/6/17 Ltr." refers to Defendants' letter dated January 6, 2017. (Doc. 131.)

shall not apply to conduct involving trade or commerce (other than import trade or import commerce) with foreign nations unless--

- (1) such conduct has a direct, substantial, and reasonably foreseeable effect--
- (A) on trade or commerce which is not trade or commerce with foreign nations, or on import trade or import commerce with foreign nations; or
- (B) on export trade or export commerce with foreign nations, of a person engaged in such trade or commerce in the United States; and

(2) such effect gives rise to a claim under the provisions of sections 1 to 7 of this title, other than this section.

15 U.S.C. § 6a. "This technical language initially lays down a general rule placing all (nonimport) activity involving foreign commerce outside the Sherman Act's reach. It then brings such conduct back within the Sherman Act's reach provided that the conduct both (1) sufficiently affects [*549] American commerce, i.e., it has a 'direct, substantial, and reasonably foreseeable effect' [**51] on American domestic, import, or (certain) export commerce, and (2) has an effect of a kind that antitrust law considers harmful, i.e., the 'effect' must 'give rise to a Sherman Act claim.'" F. Hoffmann-La Roche Ltd. v. Empagran S.A., 542 U.S. 155, 162, 124 S. Ct. 2359, 159 L. Ed. 2d 226 (2004) (quoting §§ 6a(1), (2)); accord Lotes Co. v. Hon Hai Precision Indus. Co., 753 F.3d 395, 398 (2d Cir. 2014). "The FTAIA permits a plaintiff to bring Sherman Act claims 'involving trade or commerce with foreign nations,' provided that defendants' conduct has a 'reasonably proximate causal nexus' to an antitrust injury in the United States." Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at *21 (quoting Lotes, 753 F.3d at 405). "The requirements of the FTAIA go to the merits of an antitrust claim rather than to subject matter jurisdiction." Id.

Defendants argue that Plaintiffs fail to allege that the foreign conduct had a "reasonably proximate" effect within the United States. (Defs.' SMJ Br. 19-21.) I disagree. The foreign conduct alleged here easily falls within the FTAIA exception for having "adversely affect[ed] domestic commerce, imports to the United States, or exporting activities of one engaged in such activities within the United States." Precision Assocs., Inc. v. Panalpina World Transp., \(Holding\) Ltd., No. CV-08-42 \(JG\)\(VP\), 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 177023, 2013 WL 6481195, at *23 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 20, 2013) (quoting F. Hoffmann-La Roche, 542 U.S. at 161). The CAC alleges that Defendants manipulated Sterling LIBOR, which caused injury with regard to transactions carried [**52] out in financial instruments with prices influenced by that manipulated rate. Specifically, Plaintiffs allege that the financial instruments purchased by Plaintiffs—U.S. corporations and individuals—were priced, benchmarked, or settled based on Sterling LIBOR. This is the type of injury the Sherman Act is meant to address. See F. Hoffmann-La Roche, 542 U.S. at 165 ("[O]ur courts have long held that application of our antitrust laws to foreign anticompetitive conduct is nonetheless reasonable, and hence consistent with principles of prescriptive comity, insofar as they reflect a legislative effort to redress domestic antitrust injury that foreign anticompetitive conduct has caused."); see also Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at *22 (holding that similar claims were not barred by FTAIA). Therefore, Plaintiffs have adequately alleged a domestic antitrust injury caused by Defendants' foreign anticompetitive conduct, and Defendants' motion to dismiss based on the FTAIA is therefore denied.

3. Antitrust Conspiracy

Plaintiffs' First Claim for Relief alleges that Defendants conspired to restrain trade by making false submissions to the BBA designed to artificially suppress, inflate, maintain, or otherwise alter Sterling LIBOR. (CAC ¶¶ 234-44.) The Second Claim for [**53] Relief alleges that Defendants conspired to manipulate derivative prices. (Id. ¶¶ 245-52.) Defendants argue that, for both claims, Plaintiffs fail to either (1) assert direct evidence that Defendants entered into an agreement in violation of the antitrust laws, or (2) present circumstantial facts supporting the inference that a conspiracy existed. (Defs.' SMJ Br. 21-25.)

a. Applicable Law

Section 1 of the Sherman Act makes unlawful "[e]very contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States." 15 U.S.C. § 1. "Price-fixing 'conspiracies concentrate the power to set prices among the conspirators, including the power to control [*550] the market and to fix arbitrary and unreasonable prices."<sup>19</sup> Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at \*23 (quoting United States v. Apple, Inc., 791 F.3d 290, 326 (2d Cir. 2015)). "[A]ny conspiracy 'formed for the purpose and with the effect of raising, depressing, fixing, pegging, or stabilizing the price of a commodity is illegal per se,' and the precise 'machinery employed is immaterial.'" Apple, 791 F.3d at 327 (quoting United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 310 U.S. 150, 223, 60 S. Ct. 811, 84 L. Ed. 1129 \(1940\)).

At the pleading stage, a plaintiff "need not show that its allegations suggesting an agreement are more likely than not true or that they rule out the possibility of independent action, as would be required at later [**54] litigation stages such as a defense motion for summary judgment, or a trial." Anderson News, L.L.C. v. Am. Media, Inc., 680 F.3d 162, 184 \(2d Cir. 2012\) (citations omitted). "Rather, 'because plausibility is a standard lower than probability, a given set of actions may well be subject to diverging interpretations, each of which is plausible. The choice between two plausible inferences that may be drawn from factual allegations is not a choice to be made by the court on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion.'" Gelboim, 823 F.3d at 781 (quoting Anderson News, 680 F.3d at 184-85). "Skepticism of a conspiracy's existence is insufficient to warrant dismissal; a well-pleaded complaint may proceed even if it strikes a savvy judge that actual proof of those facts is improbable, and that a recovery is very remote and unlikely.'" Id. (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556).

To establish a Section 1 conspiracy, "proof of joint or concerted action is required; proof of unilateral action does not suffice." Gelboim, 823 F.3d at 781 (quoting Anderson News, 680 F.3d at 183). "Circumstances must reveal a unity of purpose or a common design and understanding, or a meeting of minds in an unlawful arrangement." Id. Mere "parallel conduct" does not suffice. Id. Because "conspiracies are rarely evidenced by explicit agreements," however, a conspiracy "nearly always must be proven through inferences that may fairly be drawn from the behavior of the alleged [**55] conspirators." Id. "The line separating conspiracy from parallelism is indistinct, but may be crossed with allegations of interdependent conduct, accompanied by circumstantial evidence and plus factors." Id. (internal quotation marks omitted). Those illustrative, non-exhaustive "plus factors" are "(1) a common motive to conspire; (2) evidence that shows that the parallel acts were against the apparent individual economic self-interest of the alleged conspirators; and (3) evidence of a high level of interfirm communications." Id. (internal quotation marks omitted). "[A]t the motion-to-dismiss stage, appellants must only put forth sufficient factual matter to plausibly suggest an inference of conspiracy, even if the facts are susceptible to an equally likely interpretation." Id. at 782 (citation omitted).

b. Application

With these principles in mind, I find that Plaintiffs adequately allege an antitrust conspiracy.<sup>19</sup> The CAC alleges that Defendants collusively shared information to coordinate their Sterling LIBOR submissions and engaged in manipulative trading practices to fix the prices of Sterling LIBOR-based derivatives for their collective financial benefit. (CAC ¶ 125.) It [*551] alleges that collusive [**56] communications occurred "among Sterling LIBOR-based derivative traders and submitters located at different, supposedly competing, Sterling LIBOR contributor banks," and in messages "relayed between Defendants by various . . . inter-dealer brokers." (Id. ¶ 127.) With respect to UBS, Plaintiffs rely on regulatory settlements between them and the DOJ, CFTC, and other regulators, which brought charges against UBS for LIBOR manipulation. (Id. ¶¶ 5, 11-12.) The settlements describe collusive conduct intended to manipulate the LIBOR. (See id. ¶¶ 17-19, 120(e).)

For instance, Plaintiffs cite to UBS's non-prosecution agreement with DOJ, in which UBS admitted to manipulating and colluding to manipulate with other Contributor Panel banks LIBOR submissions with respect to other currencies. (CAC ¶¶ 17-19; see also UBS DOJ SOF at ¶¶ 21-22 (describing conduct as to Yen LIBOR and Euroyen

---

<sup>19</sup> Because I find that Plaintiff FrontPoint is the only efficient enforcer of any antitrust claims against Defendants, see supra Part V.B.1, I need only address the extent to which FrontPoint has alleged an antitrust conspiracy against UBS.

TIBOR).<sup>20</sup> With respect to Sterling, UBS communicated internally with its Sterling derivatives traders to manipulate the Sterling LIBOR. (CAC ¶¶ 17-19; UBS DOJ SOF at ¶¶ 77-82.) Plaintiffs also point to the CFTC's findings that UBS made knowingly false submissions to rate-fixing panels to benefit its derivatives [**57] trading positions or the derivatives trading positions of other banks in attempts to manipulate Yen, Swiss Franc, Sterling and Euro LIBOR and Euribor, and, periodically, Euroyen TIBOR.

(CAC ¶ 120(e) (quoting UBS CFTC Agmt. at 2);<sup>21</sup> see also UBS CFTC Agmt. at 2 ("UBS, through certain derivatives traders, also colluded with traders at other banks and coordinated with interdealer brokers in its attempts to manipulate Yen LIBOR and Euroyen TIBOR."))

Defendants argue that Plaintiffs have not alleged any communication between or among the Defendants regarding Sterling LIBOR to support their conspiracy claim, and instead only point to intrafirm communications. However, while direct communications among conspirators are relevant, they are not necessary. Accordingly, Defendants' motion to dismiss for failure to allege an antitrust conspiracy is denied.

C. Commodity Exchange Act (CEA)

The CAC assert three causes of action of under the CEA. (CAC ¶¶ 253-64.) However, Plaintiffs Sonterra and FrontPoint abandoned their claims under the CEA, (Pls.' SMJ Opp. 32 n.24); therefore, I only address Plaintiff Dennis's claims under the CEA. Defendants argue that Dennis (1) lacks standing to pursue his claims and (2) fails to [**58] adequately allege specific intent to manipulate the price of Sterling FX Futures. (Defs.' SMJ Br. 31-45.)

1. Applicable Law

The CEA prohibits any person from "manipulat[ing] or attempt[ing] to manipulate the price of any commodity in interstate commerce." 7 U.S.C. § 13\(a\)\(2\); see also In re Amaranth Nat. Gas Commodities Litig., 730 F.3d 170, 173 \(2d Cir. 2013\). "While the CEA itself does not define the term, a court will find manipulation where '(1) Defendants possessed an [**552] ability to influence market prices; (2) an artificial price existed; (3) Defendants caused the artificial prices; and (4) Defendants specifically intended to cause the artificial price.'" Id. at 173 (quoting Hershey v. Energy Transfer Partners, L.P., 610 F.3d 239, 247 \(5th Cir. 2010\)).

To plead the element of specific intent, also known as scienter, a plaintiff must allege that defendants "acted (or failed to act) with the purpose or conscious object of causing or effecting a price or price trend in the market that did not reflect the legitimate forces of supply and demand." Platinum, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46624, 2017 WL 1169626, at \*32 (quoting U.S. Commodity Futures Trading Comm'n v. Wilson, 27 F. Supp. 3d 517, 532 \(S.D.N.Y. 2014\)). It is insufficient to show a mere "generalized intent to obtain trading profits 'which could be imputed to any corporation with a large market presence in any commodity market.'" Wilson, 27 F. Supp. 3d at 532-33 (quoting In re Crude Oil Commodity Litig., No. 06 CIV. 6677, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47902, 2007 WL 1946553, at \*8 \(S.D.N.Y. June 28, 2007\)). To establish "specific intent to cause a market distortion," a plaintiff can allege facts either "(1) showing that the defendants [**59] had both motive and opportunity to commit the fraud or (2) constituting strong circumstantial evidence of conscious misbehavior or recklessness." Platinum, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46624, 2017 WL 1169626, at \*32 (quoting In re Amaranth Nat. Gas Commodities Litig., 587 F. Supp. 2d 513, 530 \(S.D.N.Y. 2008\)). The factual allegations in the complaint must "give rise to a strong inference of scienter." LIBOR III, 27 F. Supp. 3d at 468 (internal quotation marks omitted).

<sup>20</sup> "UBS DOJ SOF" refers to DOJ Non-Prosecution Agreement and Appendix A Statement of Facts with UBS AG (Dec. 18, 2012), available at <https://www.justice.gov/iso/opa/resources/6942012121911725320624.pdf>.

<sup>21</sup> "UBS CFTC Agmt." refers to CFTC Order Instituting Proceedings Pursuant to Sections 6\(c\) and 6\(d\) of the Commodity Exchange Act Making Findings and Imposing Remedial Sanctions against UBS AG and UBS Securities Japan Co., Ltd., CFTC Docket No. 13-09 (Dec. 19, 2012), available at <http://www.cftc.gov/idc/groups/public/@lrenforcementactions/documents/legalpleading/enfubsorder121912.pdf>.

2. Application

a. CEA Standing

Section 22(a)(1) of the CEA creates an exclusive private right of action "available to any person who sustains loss as a result of any alleged violation" of the CEA. 7 U.S.C. § 25(a)(2). "To have standing under Section 22, a private plaintiff must fall into one of four categories" set forth in Section 22(a)(1). Loginovskaya v. Batratchenko, 936 F. Supp. 2d 357, 365 (S.D.N.Y. 2013), aff'd, 764 F.3d 266 (2d Cir. 2014). Plaintiff Dennis invokes Section 22(a)(1)(D) of the CEA, which conveys standing to any person "who purchased or sold a [futures contract] or swap if the violation constitutes . . . (ii) a manipulation of the price of any such contract." 7 U.S.C. § 25(a)(1)(D); see *Platinum, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46624, 2017 WL 1169626, at *28*. He argues that Defendants manipulated the prices of his Sterling futures contracts. (Pls.' SMJ Opp. 32.)

Defendants argue that Plaintiff Dennis lacks standing because he fails to plausibly allege that Defendants manipulated the prices of his FX Futures contracts because their prices are not pegged to Sterling LIBOR. (Defs.' SMJ Br. 39.) This is essentially the same argument as discussed above in the context of antitrust [**60] standing—that there is no plausible relationship between Dennis's FX Futures and the alleged Sterling LIBOR manipulation to adequately allege an injury. Thus, for the reasons stated above, supra Part V.B.1.b, I find that Dennis has adequately pled that the Sterling LIBOR manipulation had an effect on futures contracts for the purposes of CEA standing. A CME futures contract is an agreement to buy or sell £62,500, in U.S. Dollars, on some future date. (CAC ¶ 212.) The cost of buying or selling Sterling on that future date is determined by a formula that incorporates Sterling LIBOR to adjust the spot price of Sterling to account for the amount of interest paid or received over the duration of the agreement. (Id.) A change in the Sterling LIBOR thus affects the price of the contract, at least for the purpose of CEA standing.

[*553] Defendants also argue that Dennis lacks standing under the CEA because he has not pled actual damages, a requirement for CEA standing. (Defs.' SMJ Br. 40-42.) "As several courts in this district have held, however, where plaintiffs allege that they transacted 'at artificial prices, injury may be presumed.'" *Platinum, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46624, 2017 WL 1169626, at *28* (quoting In re Amaranth Nat. Gas Commodities Litig., 269 F.R.D. 366, 380 (S.D.N.Y. 2010)); see also In re Crude Oil Commodity Futures Litig., 913 F. Supp. 2d 41, 59-61 (S.D.N.Y. 2012). Therefore, I find that Dennis has adequately [**61] pled actual damages for standing under the CEA.

In addition, Defendants argue that Dennis lacks standing because he pleads only one specific futures transaction on two dates during the Class Period, but does not allege that Sterling LIBOR was artificial on those dates. (Defs.' SMJ Reply 18.)<sup>22</sup> They rely on LIBOR II, in which Judge Buchwald held that certain plaintiffs had failed to allege the requisite actual damages by failing to plead that they transacted in Eurodollar futures contracts on days in which the prices of such contracts were artificial as a result of trader-based manipulation of the LIBOR. See LIBOR II, 962 F. Supp. 2d at 620-21. However, Judge Buchwald expressly distinguished between plaintiffs' "trader-based manipulation theory" and their "persistent suppression theory," the latter of which did not require plaintiffs to plead a connection between specific trading days and days of LIBOR manipulation. Id. at 621-22; see also *Platinum, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46624, 2017 WL 1169626, at *29* (discussing LIBOR II's distinction between trader-based manipulation and persistent suppression). Dennis alleges just such a "persistent suppression theory." The CAC alleges that Dennis engaged in U.S.-based transactions for CME British pound futures contracts during the period in which Defendants [**62] were engaged in their ongoing scheme. (CAC ¶ 214.) The allegations that Defendants' persistent conduct rendered the Sterling LIBOR artificial throughout the Class Period is sufficient to plausibly allege that Dennis's damages were caused by the alleged Sterling LIBOR manipulation. See Platinum, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46624, 2017 WL 1169626, at \*29; LIBOR II, 962 F. Supp. 2d at 621-22.

---

<sup>22</sup> "Defs.' SMJ Reply" refers to Defendants' Reply Memorandum of Law in Further Support of Defendants' Motion to Dismiss the Consolidated Amended Complaint for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction and Failure to State a Claim. (Doc. 121.)

Accordingly, Dennis has standing to pursue his CEA claims. However, Dennis must still overcome an additional hurdle to pursue his claims: the element of specific intent.

b. Specific Intent

With regard to specific intent, Dennis pleads no facts indicating, much less giving rise to a "strong inference," LIBOR III, 27 F. Supp. 3d at 468, that Defendants' conduct with respect to Sterling LIBOR was intended to manipulate the prices of any particular financial instrument at issue in this case. Plaintiffs' generalized contention that "Defendants, as some of the largest dealers in the Sterling LIBOR-based derivatives market, all shared a common motive to increase profits through manipulation," (Pls.' SMJ Opp. 35), offers no basis to draw a "strong inference" of intent to manipulate Sterling FX Futures contracts—instruments that are not even tied to the benchmark Defendants allegedly manipulated. See Hershey, 610 F.3d at 249 (no specific intent where effect on certain [**63] futures contracts was "merely an unintended consequence of the Defendants' manipulative trading"). Indeed, "[s]uch a generalized motive, one which could be imputed to any corporation [*554] with a large market presence in any commodity market, is insufficient to show intent." In re Crude Oil Commodity Litig., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47902, 2007 WL 1946553, at \*8.

Nor do Plaintiffs adequately allege conscious misbehavior or recklessness with respect to the price of Dennis's FX Futures. Plaintiffs point to the various Government settlements as evidence of purported conscious misbehavior or reckless. Nothing in Defendants' settlements with regulators, however, reflects any intent by any Defendant to cause artificial pricing of the financial instruments purchased by Dennis in particular (as opposed to Sterling LIBOR in general). In In re Commodity Exchange, Inc., Silver Futures & Options Trading Litigation, the court emphasized that the complaint lacked "reference to specific communications between the defendants about any specific plan to cause artificial prices or an artificial price trend in the silver futures market." No. 11 Md. 2213\(RPP\), 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 181487, 2012 WL 6700236, at \*11 \(S.D.N.Y. Dec. 21, 2012\). The same is true here as to the Sterling FX forwards, futures, and interest swaps markets. Accordingly, the CAC fails to adequately allege specific intent on [**64] the part of Defendants, and Plaintiff Dennis's CEA claim is dismissed.

Plaintiff Dennis's principal-agent liability and aiding and abetting claims under the CEA must also fail. Both types of claims are viable only where an underlying primary violation of the CEA can survive a motion to dismiss. See In re Commodity Exch., Inc. Silver Futures & Options Trading Litig., 560 F. App'x 84, 87 \(2d Cir. 2014\) (summary order) ("As plaintiffs failed to allege a CEA violation, their aiding and abetting claim was properly dismissed as well."); In re Amaranth Nat. Gas Commodities Litig., 730 F.3d at 183 ("[A]iding and abetting requires knowledge of the primary violation and an intent to assist it . . . ."). Plaintiff Dennis fails to allege a primary CEA violation for the reasons discussed above, so his principal-agent liability and aiding and abetting claims must be dismissed as well.

D. RICO

The CAC also asserts claims under RICO. Defendants argue that (1) Plaintiffs lack RICO standing, (2) the claims are impermissibly extraterritorial, and (3) Plaintiffs fail to plead the elements of a RICO violation or conspiracy. (Defs.' SMJ Br. 46-52.) I agree with Defendants that Plaintiffs fail to overcome the presumption against extraterritoriality; therefore, I do not reach Defendants' remaining arguments.

1. Applicable Law

RICO makes it "unlawful for any person employed [**65] by or associated with any enterprise engaged in, or the activities of which affect, interstate or foreign commerce, to conduct or participate, directly or indirectly, in the conduct of such enterprise's affairs through a pattern of racketeering activity or collection of unlawful debt." 18 U.S.C. § 1962\(c\). Section 1964\(c\) confers a private right of action to "[a]ny person injured in his business or property by reason of" such a violation. Id. § 1964(c). "To establish a violation of § 1962(c), . . . a plaintiff must show that a person engaged in '(1) conduct (2) of an enterprise (3) through a pattern (4) of racketeering activity.'" Cruz v. FXDirectDealer, LLC, 720 F.3d 115, 120 (2d Cir. 2013) (quoting DeFalco v. Bernas, 244 F.3d 286, 305 (2d Cir. 2001)). "Racketeering activity" "encompass[es] dozens of state and federal offenses, known in RICO parlance as predicates. These predicates include any act indictable under specified federal statutes, as well as certain crimes chargeable under state law." RJR Nabisco, Inc. v. European Cmty., 136 L*5551 S. Ct. 2090, 2096, 195 L. Ed. 2d 476 (2016) (internal citations and quotation marks omitted).

The Supreme Court in RJR Nabisco, Inc. v. European Community ("RJR"), established that private claims under RICO must overcome a presumption against extraterritoriality. Id. at 2100-02. A private plaintiff seeking extraterritorial application of RICO is subject to considerations that do not apply to criminal prosecutions [**66] under the statute, and must specifically allege a domestic injury. Id. at 2106. In examining the extraterritorial reach of § 1962(c), the Supreme Court recently held that, in order for a private plaintiff to plausibly allege a claim for extraterritorial application of RICO, Congress must have intended that the underlying predicate statute have extraterritorial reach and that the plaintiff have suffered a domestic injury. Id. at 2101-02, 2106; see also Bascuñan v. Elsaca, No. 15-cv-2009 (GBD), 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 133664, 2016 WL 5475998, at *3-4 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2016), rev'd in part, vacated in part on other grounds, 874 F.3d 806 (2d Cir. 2017).

In this Circuit, "the wire fraud statute does not have extraterritorial application and may not serve as a predicate act for a RICO claim premised on foreign-based activities." Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at *32-33; see also European Cmty. v. RJR Nabisco, Inc. ("European Community"), 764 F.3d 129, 140-41 (2d Cir. 2014) ("We conclude that the references to foreign commerce in [the wire fraud statute], do not indicate a congressional intent that the statute[] apply extraterritorially."), rev'd and remanded on other grounds, 136 S. Ct. 2090, 195 L. Ed. 2d 476; Petróleos Mexicanos v. SK Eng'g & Constr. Co., 572 F. App'x 60, 61 (2d Cir. 2014) (summary order) ("[W]ire fraud cannot serve as such an extraterritorial predicate."). According to the Supreme Court, "[i]f the statute is not extraterritorial, then . . . we determine whether the case involves a domestic application of the [**67] statute, and we do this by looking to the statute's 'focus.' If the conduct relevant to the statute's focus occurred in the United States, then the case involves a permissible domestic application even if other conduct occurred abroad; but if the conduct relevant to the focus occurred in a foreign country, then the case involves an impermissible extraterritorial application regardless of any other conduct that occurred in U.S. territory." RJR, 136 S. Ct. at 2101.

There is some ambiguity in this Circuit as to the "focus" of the wire fraud statute. See Elsevier, Inc. v. Grossman, 199 F. Supp. 3d 768, 784 (S.D.N.Y. 2016) ("It is not entirely clear what sort of domestic conduct is 'relevant' to this statutory focus."); United States v. Gasperini, No. 16-CR-441 (NGG), 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84116, 2017 WL 2399693, at *7-8 (E.D.N.Y. June 1, 2017) (explaining that some courts focus on the "wires" while others focus on the "fraud," and ultimately concluding that the wire fraud statute's focus is "the fraudulent scheme"). Nor is it entirely clear what level of domestic conduct is required. See Morrison v. Nat'l Austl. Bank Ltd., 561 U.S. 247, 266, 130 S. Ct. 2869, 177 L. Ed. 2d 535 (2010) (presumption against extraterritoriality applies even where "some domestic activity is involved in [a] case"); European Community, 764 F.3d at 142 n.14 ("We need not decide whether domestic conduct satisfying fewer than all of the statute's essential elements could constitute a violation of such a statute."); Worldwide Directories, S.A. de C.V. v. Yahoo! Inc., No. 14-cv-7349 (AJN), 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44265, 2016 WL 1298987, at *9-10 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2016) [**68] ("The Second Circuit has not determined precisely how much domestic conduct need be alleged to sustain the application of the [wire fraud] statute[] . . . ."). In a recent summary order [**556] (after its decision in European Community, but prior to the Supreme Court's decision), the Second Circuit considered whether a wire fraud scheme had sufficient connections with the United States to warrant domestic, rather than extraterritorial, application of RICO. Petróleos Mexicanos, 572 F. App'x at 61. In Petróleos Mexicanos, the foreign defendants had obtained financing in the United States and transmitted seven false invoices for over $159 million to a trust in New York, and payment was made through that New York trust; but "[t]he activities involved in the alleged scheme—falsifying the invoices, the bribes, the approval of the false invoices—took place outside of the United States." See id.; Petróleos Mexicanos v. SK Eng'g & Constr. Co., No. 12 Civ. 9070, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 107222, 2013 WL 3936191, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. July 30, 2013), aff'd, 572 F. App'x 60. The Second Circuit concluded that the domestic contacts were insufficient to support a RICO claim. 572 F. App'x at

61. In contrast, in European Community, plaintiffs "clearly" alleged sufficient domestic conduct to sustain the application of RICO where defendants allegedly "hatched schemes to defraud in the United States," "used [**69] the U.S. mails and wires in furtherance of those schemes and with the intent to do so," and "traveled from and to the United States in furtherance of their schemes." 764 F.3d at 141-42.

Thus, "[s]imply alleging that some domestic conduct occurred cannot support a claim of domestic application." Petróleos Mexicanos, 572 F. App'x at 61 (quoting Norex Petroleum Ltd. v. Access Indus., Inc., 631 F.3d 29, 32-33 \(2d Cir. 2010\)). An intent to use the U.S. wires to further a wire fraud is insufficient; "if the domestic conduct alleged is peripheral to the overall scheme, and the scheme is not directed to or from the United States, it does not matter that the defendant intentionally used U.S. wires in furtherance of a fraudulent scheme." Worldwide Directories, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44265, 2016 WL 1298987, at \*10 (citing Petróleos Mexicanos, 572 F. App'x at 61) (concluding that the alleged domestic conduct, revising and drafting draft opinions, was "fundamentally minor and peripheral in comparison to the core allegations of the complaint: that the [defendants] bribed, pressured, and intimidated members of the Mexican judiciary in pursuit of a favorable verdict").

2. Application

Plaintiffs assert RICO and RICO conspiracy claims against Defendants based on predicate acts allegedly in violation of the wire fraud statute, 18 U.S.C. § 1343. Plaintiffs do not argue that the wire fraud statute has extraterritorial application; rather, Plaintiffs argue that their [**70] RICO claims arise from domestic violations of the wire fraud statute. (Pls.' SMJ Opp. 40-42.) In support, Plaintiffs cite to the following allegations in the CAC: (1) Defendants used U.S. wires to deliver false Sterling LIBOR submissions into the United States by Thomson Reuters, (CAC ¶ 33); (2) Deutsche Bank engaged in "Monday Risk Calls," in which traders in New York, London, Tokyo, and Frankfurt discussed with a supervisor their trading positions and strategies in relation to LIBOR rates," and received directives "promoting manipulation . . . , collusion, and other improper conduct" from this supervisor, (CAC ¶ 58); (3) Defendant RBS transacted in Sterling LIBOR-based derivatives with counterparties in the United States, (id. ¶ 71); (4) "at least one senior UBS manager in its Stamford, Connecticut headquarters directly manipulated UBS's LIBOR submissions," and "directed UBS LIBOR submitters to similarly manipulate LIBOR submissions," (id. ¶ 85); (5) Defendants Barclays, UBS, RBS, and Deutsche Bank engaged in LIBOR-based transactions from within the United States during [*557] the Class Period, (id. ¶¶ 93-94, 96); (6) Defendant Deutsche Bank's conduct "originated from within its Global [**71] Finance and Foreign Exchange ('GFFX') business unit," which "extended to GFFX desks abroad including in New York," (id. ¶ 14); (7) in a settlement with the New York State Department of Financial Services, Deutsche Bank admitted that its New York Branch manipulated the Sterling LIBOR, (id. ¶¶ 53, 55); and (8) Defendant RBS employs traders responsible for trading LIBOR-based instruments in New York, (id. ¶ 69).

These allegations fall short of demonstrating that the acts of wire fraud in this case were domestic in nature. Instead, it is clear that the scheme was principally foreign in nature and only incidentally touched the United States. See Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at \*33-34 (concluding that allegations of similar conduct were "organized outside of the United States through a European trade association," and that "[t]he use of United States wires was, at most, incidental"); Laydon IV, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44126, 2015 WL 1515487, at \*8-9 (concluding that plaintiffs could not pursue RICO claims "based on the alleged actions of foreign and international institutions that submitted false information to the BBA and [Japanese Bankers Association], located in London and Tokyo, respectively"). As the Second Circuit observed in Petróleos, "[s]imply alleging that some domestic conduct occurred [**72] cannot support a claim of domestic application" of RICO. Petróleos Mexicanos, 572 F. App'x at 61.

Accordingly, the CAC fails to allege that the acts of wire fraud in this case were domestic in nature. Because I find that the wire fraud statute does not have extraterritorial application and that Plaintiffs have failed to allege acts of domestic wire fraud, I do not reach Defendants' remaining arguments. Plaintiffs' RICO claims are therefore dismissed.<sup>23</sup>

E. Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

Plaintiff FrontPoint asserts a claim against one Defendant, UBS, for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. (CAC ¶¶ 314-19.) FrontPoint's claim arises from three swap transactions that it allegedly entered into with UBS in October and November 2007. (Id. ¶ 29.) Defendants argue that FrontPoint's claim is barred by the applicable six-year statute of limitations. (Defs.' SMJ Br. 54-55.) I agree.

"Under New York law, 'a covenant of good faith and fair dealing in the course of contract performance' is 'implicit in all contracts.'" LIBOR II, 962 F. Supp. 2d at 631-32 (quoting Dalton v. Educ. Testing Serv., 87 N.Y.2d 384, 389, 663 N.E.2d 289, 639 N.Y.S.2d 977 (1995)). Claims for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing must be brought within six [**73] years. N.Y. C.P.L.R. § 213(2); see Klein v. City of New York, No. 10 Civ. 9568 PAE JLC, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 125375, 2011 WL 5248169, at *9 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 28, 2011), report and recommendation adopted by 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21617, 2012 WL 546786 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 21, 2012). FrontPoint filed its complaint on January 21, 2016, more than eight years after its swap transactions of October and November 2007. (CAC ¶ 211; Dennis v. Barclays Bank plc, No. 16-cv-464, Doc. 1.) FrontPoint argues that the claim is timely because it relates back to the filing of the earlier complaint by Sonterra on May 6, 2015. (Pls.' SMJ Opp. 54 n.43.) However, [*558] the earlier complaint did not assert breach of implied covenant claims and, even if it did, they would have still been untimely. See In re Bear Stearns Cos. Secs., Derivative, and ERISA Litig., 995 F. Supp. 2d 291, 303 (S.D.N.Y. 2014). Moreover, to the extent FrontPoint relies on its counsel's June 3, 2016 declaration that "FrontPoint executed Sterling LIBOR-based derivatives trades . . . until at least December 17, 2010 with UBS," (Lefkowitz Decl. ¶ 9; Pls.' SMJ Opp. 54),<sup>24</sup> it is extrinsic to the CAC—no such allegations are asserted in the CAC—and therefore outside the scope of the pleadings, see Friedl v. City of New York, 210 F.3d 79, 83-84 (2d Cir. 2000).

F. Unjust Enrichment

Plaintiffs' only remaining state law claim against Defendants is for unjust enrichment. "To prevail on a claim for unjust enrichment in New York, a plaintiff [**74] must establish 1) that the defendant benefitted; 2) at the plaintiff's expense; and 3) that 'equity and good conscience require' restitution." Kaye v. Grossman, 202 F.3d 611, 616 (2d Cir. 2000) (quoting Dolmetta v. Uintah Nat'l Corp., 712 F.2d 15, 20 (2d Cir. 1983))). A "specific and direct benefit" is necessary to support an unjust enrichment claim. Id. (citing Wolf v. Nat'l Council of Young Isr., 264 A.D.2d 416, 694 N.Y.S.2d 424, 426 (2d Dep't 1999)). "[W]hile a plaintiff need not be in privity with the defendant to state a claim for unjust enrichment,' there must exist a relationship or connection between the parties that is not 'too attenuated.'" Georgia Malone & Co. v. Rieder, 19 N.Y.3d 511, 516, 973 N.E.2d 743, 950 N.Y.S.2d 333 (2012) (quoting Sperry v. Crompton Corp., 8 N.Y.3d 204, 215-16, 863 N.E.2d 1012, 831 N.Y.S.2d 760 (2007))). "Although the nature of the relationship required to establish an unjust enrichment claim has not been clearly defined, the relationship is 'too attenuated' if the parties were not connected in a manner that 'could have caused reliance or inducement,' or if they 'simply had no dealings with each other.'" Marks v. Energy Materials Corp., No. 1:14-cv-8965-GHW, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 75320, 2015 WL 3616973, at *6 (S.D.N.Y. June 9, 2015) (quoting Mandarin Trading Ltd. v. Wildenstein, 16 N.Y.3d 173, 182, 944 N.E.2d 1104, 919 N.Y.S.2d 465 (2011); Georgia Malone, 19 N.Y.3d at 517-18).

<sup>23</sup> Plaintiffs' RICO conspiracy claim "must necessarily fail" where, as here, Plaintiffs fail to plausibly allege a substantive RICO violation. See Jerome M. Sobel & Co. v. Fleck, No. 03 Civ. 1041 RMB GWG, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21362, 2003 WL 22839799, at *13 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 1, 2003), report and recommendation adopted by 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 219, 2004 WL 48877 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 8, 2004).

<sup>24</sup> "Lefkowitz Decl." refers to the Declaration of Lee J. Lefkowitz in Support of Plaintiffs' Memorandum of Law in Opposition to Defendants' Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction, dated June 3, 2016. (Doc. 115.)

Defendants argue that the CAC asserts claims of unjust enrichment by Plaintiffs against all Defendants; however, it does not allege that any of Defendants had any direct contractual relationship with Plaintiffs Sonterra and Dennis. (Defs.' SMJ Br. 53.) Therefore, Plaintiffs Sonterra's and Dennis's unjust enrichment claims must be dismissed. See Laydon I, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46368, 2014 WL 1280464, at *13-14 (finding insufficient [**75] conclusory assertions that banks financially benefited from LIBOR manipulation which injured plaintiff, and dismissing unjust enrichment claim); LIBOR I, 935 F. Supp. 2d at 737 ("[T]he relationship between plaintiffs and defendants, to the extent that there was any relationship, is surely too attenuated to support an unjust enrichment claim."); cf. Sperry, 8 N.Y.3d at 215-16.

Plaintiffs do allege, however, that Defendant UBS had a direct contractual relationship with Plaintiff FrontPoint. The CAC alleges that FrontPoint "engaged in U.S.-based swap transactions" with UBS on October 17, November 22, and November 29, 2007. (CAC ¶ 211.) "FrontPoint [**59] entered into swap transactions with UBS AG, agreeing to make monthly interest rate payments on one-month Sterling LIBOR until December 2008, in exchange for receiving payments based on the return of certain shares traded on the London Stock Exchange." (Id.) "As a result of Defendants' manipulative conduct, FrontPoint was damaged and suffered legal injury when it paid more and/or received in payments less than it otherwise should have under these swap contracts." (Id.) Contrary to Defendants' assertions, (Defs.' SMJ Br. 53), I find that these allegations are sufficiently specific to plausibly allege [**76] that UBS benefited at FrontPoint's expense.

To the extent that Defendants argue Plaintiffs' claims are untimely, my previous analysis of Defendants' fraudulent concealment of their activities governs. Accordingly, Defendants' motion to dismiss Plaintiffs Sonterra's and Dennis's unjust enrichment claims, as well as Plaintiff FrontPoint's unjust enrichment claim against all Defendants other than UBS, is granted. Defendants' motion to dismiss Plaintiff FrontPoint's unjust enrichment claim against UBS is denied.<sup>25</sup>

G. Allegations of BCI's Involvement

Defendants also argue that Plaintiffs have failed to allege that Defendant BCI had any actual involvement in the conduct in question. (Defs.' SMJ Br. 55.) I agree.

"Group pleading, by which allegations are made against families of affiliated entities[,] is simply insufficient to withstand review on a motion to dismiss." Concord Assocs., L.P. v. Entm't Props. Tr., No. 12 Civ. 1667(ER), 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 186964, 2014 WL 1396524, at *24 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 9, 2014); see also In re Digital Music Antitrust Litig., 812 F. Supp. 2d 390, 417 (S.D.N.Y. 2011) (allegations of "direct involvement of the Parent Companies by way of generic references to 'defendants'" were insufficient).

With regard to BCI, Plaintiffs' claims consist solely of the generic group allegations that courts routinely dismiss. The CAC defines "Barclays" to refer only to London-based Barclays Bank [**77] PLC, (CAC ¶ 11), so Plaintiffs cannot argue that allegations of conduct by "Barclays" implicate the separate BCI entity. By contrast, the only allegation involving BCI is that "BCI actively engaged in trading, including derivative trading, in LIBOR and Euribor-based currencies, from New York." (Id. ¶ 44.) The mere fact that BCI was a party to Barclays' regulatory settlements, which were the result of negotiations and not adjudication, is not a basis for imputing specific conduct to BCI. See LIBOR II, 962 F. Supp. 2d at 614; In re Platinum & Palladium Commodities Litig., 828 F. Supp. 2d 588, 594 (S.D.N.Y. 2011).

Accordingly, Plaintiffs' claims against BCI are dismissed.

<sup>25</sup> To the extent Defendants argue that FrontPoint's unjust enrichment claim against UBS is duplicative of FrontPoint's breach of implied covenant claim, (Defs.' SMJ Reply 24), their argument is moot because I find that FrontPoint's implied covenant claim is untimely. See supra Part V.E.

H. Personal Jurisdiction

The Foreign Defendants—Barclays, Rabobank, Lloyds, RBS, Deutsche Bank, and UBS—also move to dismiss the CAC for lack of personal jurisdiction pursuant to Rule 12\(b\)\(2\). Among the claims against the Foreign Defendants, I concluded above that the CAC adequately alleges that they conspired to fix the Sterling LIBOR in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act, and that Plaintiff FrontPoint can be an efficient enforcer of those claims against Defendant UBS. See supra Part V.B. [*560] Plaintiff FrontPoint has also adequately alleged an unjust enrichment claim against Defendant UBS. See supra Part V.F. In light of the above holdings, I turn to the [**78] question of whether Plaintiffs have established personal jurisdiction over Defendant UBS such that Plaintiff FrontPoint can pursue these remaining claims.<sup>26</sup>

Each Foreign Defendant is incorporated and headquartered in a foreign country. Plaintiffs concede that the Foreign Defendants are not "at home" in New York such that they would be subject to general jurisdiction. (Pls.' PJX Opp. 26 n.24.)<sup>27</sup> Instead, they argue first that certain of the Foreign Defendants consented to jurisdiction either by virtue of registering their offices under New York banking laws or through agreements with FrontPoint, and second, that this Court has specific jurisdiction over the Foreign Defendants based on their contacts with the United States. I address each argument in turn.

1. Consent to Jurisdiction

a. Defendants Rabobank, Deutsche Bank, RBS, and Barclays did not consent to jurisdiction

Plaintiffs argue that Rabobank, Deutsche Bank, RBS, and Barclays are subject to general jurisdiction by virtue of registering their offices under New York Banking Law § 200. (Pls.' PJX Opp. 22-23.) "Parties can consent to personal jurisdiction through forum-selection clauses in contractual agreements." D.H. Blair & Co. v. Gottdiener, 462 F.3d 95, 103 \(2d Cir. 2006\). Here, Plaintiffs assert that Defendants Rabobank, [**79] Deutsche Bank, RBS, and Barclays consented to general jurisdiction by registering under New York Banking Law § 200, which required them each to appoint the Superintendent of the New York State Department of Financial Services ("NYDFS") as their agent for service of process for "a cause of action arising out of a transaction with [their] New York agency or agencies or branch or branches." N.Y. Banking Law § 200\(3\). However, "[t]he plain language of [\[§ 200\(3\)\]](#) limits any consent to personal jurisdiction by registered banks to specific personal jurisdiction." 7 W. 57th St. Realty Co., 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44031, 2015 WL 1514539, at \*11; see also In re Foreign Exch. Benchmark Rates Antitrust Litig. \("In re FOREX"\), No. 13 Civ. 7789 \(LGS\), 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44219, 2016 WL 1268267, at \*2 \(S.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2016\) ("By the terms of [\[§ 200\(3\)\]](#), any consent to jurisdiction by virtue of . . . registration with the NYDFS is not general jurisdiction over all claims, but instead is limited to claims arising out of transactions with the . . . Defendants' New York agencies or branches.").

In an attempt to avoid the plain language of § 200\(3\), Plaintiffs rely in their opposition on § 200-b\(2\), (Pls.' PJX Opp. 23), which provides that an action "against a foreign banking corporation may be maintained by . . . a non-resident in the following cases only: (a) where the action is brought to recover damages for the breach of a contract made or to be performed [**80] within this state, or relating to property situated within this state at the time of the making of the contract; (b) where the subject matter of the litigation is situated within this state; (c) where the cause of action arose within this state, [*561] except where the object of the action or special proceeding is to affect the title of real property situated outside this state; (d) where the action or special proceeding is based on a liability for acts done within this state by a foreign banking corporation; (e) where the defendant is a foreign banking corporation doing business in this state." N.Y. Banking Law § 200-b\(2\).

<sup>26</sup> Although, as discussed above, Plaintiffs' claims against the Foreign Defendants—with the exception of Defendant UBS—fail on the merits, I nonetheless address Plaintiffs' argument as to whether Defendants Rabobank, Deutsche Bank, RBS, and Barclays consented to jurisdiction.

<sup>27</sup> "Pls.' PJX Opp." refers to Plaintiffs' Memorandum of Law in Opposition to Defendants' Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction. (Doc. 114.)

Contrary to Plaintiffs' assertion, § 200-b\(2\) does not confer personal jurisdiction. The New York Court of Appeals has interpreted § 200-b to "confer subject matter jurisdiction and not personal jurisdiction." In re FOREX, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44219, 2016 WL 1268267, at \*2 (citing Indosuez Int'l Fin. B.V. v. Nat'l Reserve Bank, 98 N.Y.2d 238, 774 N.E.2d 696, 702, 746 N.Y.S.2d 631 \(N.Y. 2002\)).

Plaintiffs also argue that § 200-b is the "Banking Law analogue to N.Y. Bus. Corp. Law § 1314," that cases discussing whether jurisdiction is conferred by virtue of registration under § 1314 are therefore instructive, and that New York Banking Law § 200-b must be interpreted similarly. (Pls.' PJX Opp. 23-24.) Putting to the side whether these decisions continue to be viable post-Daimler AG v. Bauman, 571 U.S. 117, 134 S. Ct. 746, 187 L. Ed. 2d 624 \(2014\), see Brown v. Lockheed Martin Corp., 814 F.3d 619, 640-41 \(2d Cir. 2016\); Famulari v. Whirlpool Corp., No. 16 CV 944 \(VB\), 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8265, 2017 WL 2470844, at \*4 \(S.D.N.Y. June 7, 2017\), the New York Business Corporation Law does not share the same limiting language [**81] as the New York Banking Law, see N.Y. Bus. Corp. Law § 1304\(a\)\(6\) (requiring a foreign corporation to designate the Secretary of State "as its agent upon whom process against it may be served," in order to do business in the state). Therefore, I find those cases to be inapposite.

Even assuming either provision conferred general jurisdiction, such an interpretation would appear to "implicate Due Process and other constitutional concerns." Brown, 814 F.3d at 626. "If mere registration and the accompanying appointment of an in-state agent—without an express consent to general jurisdiction—nonetheless sufficed to confer general jurisdiction by implicit consent, every corporation would be subject to general jurisdiction in every state in which it registered, and Daimler's ruling would be robbed of meaning by a back-door thief." Id. at 640; see also Motorola Credit Corp. v. Uzan, 132 F. Supp. 3d 518, 521 \(S.D.N.Y. 2015\) (holding that registration with NYDFS under New York Banking Law § 200 "is not constitutionally sufficient to establish general jurisdiction"). Such a result is not supported by the case law or common sense.

Accordingly, Defendants Rabobank, Deutsche Bank, RBS, and Barclays did not consent to general jurisdiction by virtue of registering under the New York Banking Law.

b. Defendant UBS did not consent to jurisdiction in the ISDA Master [**82] Agreements with FrontPoint

Defendant UBS entered into "ISDA Master Agreements" with FrontPoint. (Lefkowitz Decl. Exs. 2, 3.) Plaintiffs argue that, in doing so, UBS consented to jurisdiction in New York. (Pls.' PJX Opp. 9.) However, the relevant provision in the ISDA Master Agreements merely consents to jurisdiction "[w]ith respect to any suit, action or proceedings relating to this Agreement." (See Lefkowitz Decl. Ex. 3, ¶ 13(b).) These terms expressly limit the parties' consent to claims "relating to this Agreement." The language does not extend to consent to jurisdiction as to any dispute between the parties. See Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at \*38-39 (concluding that such ISDA Master Agreements did not establish consent to jurisdiction for claims unrelated to the agreements).

[*562] Accordingly, Defendant UBS did not consent to general jurisdiction by virtue of the ISDA Master Agreements.

2. Specific Jurisdiction

a. Applicable Law

"In contrast to general, all-purpose jurisdiction, specific jurisdiction is confined to adjudication of issues deriving from, or connected with, the very controversy that establishes jurisdiction." Goodyear Dunlop Tires Operations, S.A. v. Brown, 564 U.S. 915, 919, 131 S. Ct. 2846, 180 L. Ed. 2d 796 \(2011\) (internal quotation marks omitted); accord Walden v. Fiore, 571 U.S. 277, 283-84, 134 S. Ct. 1115, 188 L. Ed. 2d 12 \(2014\) ("[S]pecific jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant focuses [**83] on the relationship among the defendant, the forum, and the litigation." (internal quotation marks omitted)). Specific jurisdiction "depends on an affiliation between the forum and the underlying controversy, principally, activity or an occurrence that takes place in the forum." Goodyear, 564 U.S. at 919 (internal quotation marks omitted). A plaintiff asserting specific personal jurisdiction "must establish the court's jurisdiction with respect to each claim asserted." Sunward Elecs., Inc. v. McDonald, 362 F.3d 17, 24 \(2d Cir. 2004\).

The exercise of specific jurisdiction requires a two-step analysis. See, e.g., Licci ex rel. Licci v. Lebanese Canadian Bank, SAL, 732 F.3d 161, 170 \(2d Cir. 2013\). First, courts "evaluate the quality and nature of the defendant's contacts with the forum . . . under a totality of the circumstances test." Id. (internal quotation marks omitted). Second, if the defendant purposefully established minimum contacts with the forum, the court must be satisfied that exercising jurisdiction comports with due process pursuant to "traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice." Int'l Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310, 316, 66 S. Ct. 154, 90 L. Ed. 95 \(1945\); see also Walden, 571 U.S. at 284 ("For a State to exercise jurisdiction consistent with due process, the defendant's suit-related conduct must create a substantial connection with the forum State.").

To determine whether there are sufficient minimum contacts, "[t]he crucial [**84] question is whether the defendant has 'purposefully availed itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum State, thus invoking the benefits and protections of its laws, such that the defendant should reasonably anticipate being haled into court there.'" Best Van Lines, Inc. v. Walker, 490 F.3d 239, 242-43 \(2d Cir. 2007\) (quoting Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S. 462, 474-75, 105 S. Ct. 2174, 85 L. Ed. 2d 528 \(1985\)). It is "insufficient to rely on a defendant's 'random, fortuitous, or attenuated contacts' or on the 'unilateral activity' of a plaintiff" with the forum to establish specific jurisdiction. Walden, 571 U.S. at 286 (quoting Burger King, 471 U.S. at 475).

A foreign defendant may be subject to specific jurisdiction where the relevant conduct took place entirely outside the forum but that contact had "in-forum effects harmful to the plaintiff." Licci, 732 F.3d at 173. "[W]ith regard to the effects test, the defendant must 'expressly aim' his conduct at the United States." Waldman v. Palestine Liberation Org., 835 F.3d 317, 337 \(2d Cir. 2016\) (quoting Licci, 732 F.3d at 173), cert. denied sub nom. Sokolow v. Palestine Liberation Org., 138 S. Ct. 1438, 200 L. Ed. 2d 716 \(2018\); see also In re Terrorist Attacks on Sept. 11, 2001, 714 F.3d 659, 674 \(2d Cir. 2013\). It is not enough that certain effects be foreseeable. See Waldman, 835 F.3d at 337 (finding no jurisdiction over terrorists who harmed Americans [*563] in Israel because they did not intend to target United States citizens).

In addition, even if a defendant has minimum contacts with the forum, the exercise of jurisdiction must still be consistent with due [**85] process, such that it does "not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice." Int'l Shoe, 326 U.S. at 316 (internal quotation marks omitted). Relevant considerations include "(1) the burden that the exercise of jurisdiction will impose on the defendant; (2) the interests of the forum state in adjudicating the case; (3) the plaintiff's interest in obtaining convenient and effective relief; (4) the interstate judicial system's interest in obtaining the most efficient resolution of the controversy; and (5) the shared interest of the states in furthering substantive social policies." Metro. Life Ins. Co. v. Robertson-Ceco Corp., 84 F.3d 560, 568 \(2d Cir. 1996\).

b. Application

Here, Plaintiffs' surviving claims arise under the Sherman Act and New York law. With respect to the federal claims under the Sherman Act, nationwide service of process is permissible. See 15 U.S.C. § 22. When a civil case arises under federal law and a federal statute authorizes nationwide service of process, courts often consider "contacts with the United States as a whole" as the "relevant contacts for determining personal jurisdiction." Platinum, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46624, 2017 WL 1169626, at \*40 (internal quotation marks omitted).<sup>28</sup> "The rationale underlying

---

<sup>28</sup> Defendants' assert that "Plaintiffs have not sufficiently alleged . . . that the Clayton Act's venue provisions are satisfied such that its jurisdictional provisions may apply at all." (Defs.' PJX Br. 27 n.32.) Plaintiffs did not address this assertion in their opposition brief, (see generally, Pls.' PJX Opp.), perhaps because Defendants made the assertion in a footnote and "[a]rguments which appear in footnotes are generally deemed to have been waived[.]" see In re Crude Oil Commodity Litigation, No. 06 Civ. 6677\(NRB\), 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 66208, 2007 WL 2589482, at \*3 \(S.D.N.Y. Sept. 7, 2007\). Defendants do not elaborate on this conclusory statement or provide any argument in support of it. (Defs. PJC Br. 27 n.32.) At any rate, Plaintiffs this national contacts approach is that when the national sovereign is applying national law, the relevant contacts [**86] are the contacts between the defendant and the sovereign's nation." LIBOR IV, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 147561, 2015 WL 6243526, at \*23 (internal quotation marks omitted).

While the Second Circuit has "not yet decided" whether to adopt the nationwide contacts test, it has observed that several other circuits have held that "when a civil case arises under federal law and a federal statute authorizes nationwide service of process, the relevant contacts for determining personal jurisdiction are contacts with the United States as a whole." Gucci Am., Inc. v. Bank of China, 768 F.3d 122, 142 n.21 \(2d Cir. 2014\). Further, "several courts in this [D]istrict addressing federal claims with national service of process—including claims based on alleged LIBOR manipulation—have applied the 'national contacts' test." Sonterra Capital Master Fund Ltd. v. Credit Suisse Grp. AG, 277 F. Supp. 3d at 589 (collecting cases); see also LIBOR IV, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 147561, 2015 WL 6243526, at \*23 & n.39 (noting that "[c]ourts in this Circuit commonly hold" that the minimum contacts test should consider nationwide contacts and that nothing in recent Supreme Court opinions such as Daimler, 571 U.S. 117, 15641 134 S. Ct. 746, 187 L. Ed. 2d 624, and Walden, 571 U.S. 277, 134 S. Ct. 1115, 188 L. Ed. 2d 12, "so much as hints that the national contacts rule might be unconstitutional where it is supported by a federal statute"). Therefore, with respect to the remaining federal claims—i.e., Plaintiff FrontPoint's Sherman Act claims against Defendant UBS—I assume for the purposes of this [**87] motion that the relevant contacts are UBS's contacts with the United States as a whole.

With respect to the remaining state law claims—i.e., Plaintiff FrontPoint's unjust enrichment claim against UBS—the personal jurisdiction analysis involves the application of New York's long-arm statute, N.Y. C.P.L.R. § 302, and the constitutional due process inquiry, which examines whether the defendants had sufficient minimum contacts with New York, as opposed to the United States as a whole. Whitaker, 261 F.3d at 208. Under New York's long-arm statute, "the party's conduct in New York cannot be unrelated to the lawsuit; rather, 'there must be a substantial nexus between the business and the cause of action.'" Clopay Plastic Prods. Co. v. Excelsior Packaging Grp., Inc., No. 12-CV-5262 \(JPO\), 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128011, 2014 WL 4473352, at \*4 \(S.D.N.Y. Sept. 11, 2014\) (quoting Grand River Enters. Six Nations, Ltd. v. Pryor, 425 F.3d 158, 166 \(2d Cir. 2005\)).

i. Specific Jurisdiction: Sherman Act Claims

Applying the nationwide contacts test to Plaintiff FrontPoint's claims under the Sherman Act, I find that Plaintiffs have alleged facts sufficient to establish personal jurisdiction over Defendant UBS.

UBS is a Swiss banking and financial services company headquartered in Zurich and Basel, Switzerland, and was a member of the BBA LIBOR Panel Bank for Sterling LIBOR throughout the Class Period. (CAC ¶ 7.) The CAC alleges various facts related to UBS's presence in the United States. [**88] (See Pls.' PJX Opp. 5 (collecting allegations in the CAC).) UBS was a reporting bank for the Federal Reserve Bank of New York's ("FRBNY") surveys on the over-the-counter interest rate derivatives and foreign exchange market. The FRBNY surveys indicated that the Sterling foreign exchange and interest rate derivatives market was the fourth largest interest rate derivatives market in the United States. (CAC ¶¶ 94-95; see also Lefkowitz Decl. Exs. 32-33.) FrontPoint traded directly with UBS in the alleged manipulated products pursuant to the ISDA Master Agreements. UBS operated an interest rate derivatives trading desk in Connecticut. (CAC ¶ 81.) Traders at that desk acted as submitters or made requests to submit false Sterling LIBOR rates to harm Plaintiffs and the Class and benefit UBS's trading positions. (Id. ¶¶ 81-84.) This United States presence, however, "is relevant only insofar as it has a nexus to the misconduct underlying plaintiffs' claims." Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at \*44.

Foreign Defendants argue that Plaintiffs' allegations suffer from the same defects as the allegations in Sullivan. (3/14/17 Ltr.)<sup>29</sup> In Sullivan, under similar—but not identical—circumstances, the court found that Plaintiffs failed to have at least arguably alleged that venue is proper because they allege that UBS is found or "transacts business" in New York. 15 U.S.C. § 22 (a suit may be brought under the Clayton Act "in any district wherein [a defendant] may be found or transacts business"); (CAC ¶ 79 ("UBS maintains branches and representative offices in several U.S. states, including . . . New York. UBS's U.S. headquarters are located in New York and Stamford, Connecticut.")).

---

<sup>29</sup> "3/14/17 Ltr." refers to Defendants' letter filed on March 14, 2017. (Doc. 135.)

allege [**89] minimum contacts between UBS and the United States sufficient to confer specific jurisdiction. Sullivan, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, 2017 WL 685570, at *44. However, the Sullivan court described, in a hypothetical, allegations that would be necessary to satisfy the minimum-contacts prong of the specific jurisdiction test. Specifically, Judge Castel stated that if the complaint had alleged "that a United State[s] branch employed traders [*565] who requested artificial Euribor rates" or "pointed to directives from United States management that facilitated or encouraged the scheme, such allegations would likely reflect suit-related conduct with a substantial connection to the forum." 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25756, [WL] at *45; see also LIBOR IV, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 107225, 2015 WL 4634541, at *26 ("[I]n principle, we would uphold jurisdiction in the forum containing the office from which a defendant determined, or transmitted, a false LIBOR submission.") These allegations are similar to some of the allegations in the CAC related to UBS and Frontpoint.

Foreign Defendants argue that "Plaintiffs have failed to plausibly allege that Foreign Defendants engaged in manipulative conduct relating to Sterling LIBOR in the forum." (3/14/17 Ltr. 2.) With regard to Defendant UBS, this argument ignores Paragraph 85 of the CAC, which alleges that "[a]t least one senior [**90] UBS manager in its Stamford, Connecticut headquarters directly manipulated UBS's LIBOR submissions," and that the manager "directed UBS LIBOR submitters to manipulate LIBOR submissions across all currencies, including Sterling LIBOR." (CAC ¶ 85 (citing UBS CFTC Agmt. 48<sup>30</sup> ).) This is the type of allegation that Judge Castel found lacking in the Sullivan complaint. Plaintiffs allege, by reference to documentary evidence, the involvement of a United States-based UBS employee in LIBOR manipulation. This conduct, which allegedly occurred in the forum, is alleged to have caused, in part, the harm suffered by Plaintiff FrontPoint as a result of Defendant UBS's Sherman Act violations, which is "suit-related conduct" that creates a "substantial connection" with the forum. See Walden, 571 U.S. at 284. I find that Plaintiffs have adequately—albeit just barely—alleged a nexus between Defendant UBS's presence in the United States and Defendant UBS's alleged violations of the Sherman Act, which supports the exercise of specific personal jurisdiction with regard to Plaintiff FrontPoint's Sherman Act claims against Defendant UBS.

Having found that Defendant UBS "purposefully availed itself of the privilege of doing [**91] business in the forum and could foresee being haled into court there," I must consider whether the assertion of personal jurisdiction would comport with fair play and substantial justice. Licci, 732 F.3d at 170 (internal quotation marks omitted). Applying the five factors the Supreme Court has identified, I find that it is appropriate to exercise jurisdiction over Defendant UBS. The CAC adequately alleges that Defendant UBS has a "substantial presence" in the United States, with one of its United States headquarters located in New York. (CAC ¶¶ 78-79.) Requiring Defendant UBS to answer to allegations in the United States, and specifically in New York, will not impose an unreasonable burden. This is consistent [*566] with the rulings of other courts in this district. See, e.g., Sonterra Capital Master Fund Ltd. v. Credit Suisse Grp. AG, 277 F. Supp. 3d at 598 (having found that Defendant UBS purposefully established minimum contacts with the forum, the inquiry into "whether the assertion of personal jurisdiction would comport with fair play and substantial justice . . . need not detain us for long," because UBS was "alleged to be among the world's largest financial institutions and to maintain a substantial and ongoing presence in the forum" (internal quotation marks omitted)).<sup>31</sup>

<sup>30</sup> The page of the UBS/CFTC agreement cited by Plaintiffs in support of Paragraph 85 discusses the manipulation of both U.S. Dollar LIBOR submissions and of LIBOR submissions generally. In other words, the UBS/CFTC agreement does not specifically state that Stamford-based UBS manager manipulated Sterling LIBOR. Therefore, based on this ambiguity, it is not entirely clear that the Stamford-based UBS manager manipulated Sterling LIBOR, as opposed to Dollar LIBOR or LIBOR in some other currency. Because I am considering a motion to dismiss, I must accept the allegations in the CAC as true and draw all inferences in Plaintiffs' favor. Therefore, I resolve this ambiguity in Plaintiffs' favor, and draw the reasonable inference that when the agreement references "LIBOR submissions" without specifying a currency, Sterling LIBOR submissions are included in those references.

<sup>31</sup> Once minimum contacts with the forum have been established, "the burden shifts to the defendant to show that the exercise of jurisdiction would nonetheless be so unreasonable as to offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice." LIBOR IV, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 147561, 2015 WL 6243526, at *28 (citing Asahi Metal Indus. Co. v. Superior Court of Cal., Solano Cty., 480 U.S. 102, 113, 107 S. Ct. 1026, 94 L. Ed. 2d 92 (1987)). The defendant must "present a compelling case that the presence

Accordingly, [**92] this Court has jurisdiction over Plaintiff FrontPoint's Sherman Act claims against Defendant UBS.

ii. Specific Jurisdiction: Unjust Enrichment Claim

Plaintiff FrontPoint's unjust enrichment claim against Defendant UBS involves conduct alleged to have taken place in Connecticut, not New York. Therefore the unjust enrichment claim does not meet the standard of New York's long-arm statute, see N.Y. C.P.L.R. § 302 (listing tortious acts within New York as a basis for jurisdiction), and cannot serve as a basis for jurisdiction. However, where, as here, a federal statute authorizes nationwide service of process, and the federal and state claims "derive from a common nucleus of operative fact," see United Mine Workers of Am. v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 725, 86 S. Ct. 1130, 16 L. Ed. 2d 218 \(1966\), a district court "may assert personal jurisdiction over the parties to the related state law claims even if personal jurisdiction is not otherwise available," IUE AFL-CIO Pension Fund v. Herrmann, 9 F.3d 1049, 1056 \(2d Cir. 1993\); see also In re Packaged Seafood Prods. Antitrust Litig., Case No. 15-MD-2670 JLS \(MDD\), 338 F. Supp. 3d 1118, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 151394, 2018 WL 4222506, at \*32 \(S.D. Cal. Sept. 5, 2018\) (finding that the court had jurisdiction over a state law claim because it arose out of a common nucleus of operative facts with a Sherman Act claim). It is undisputed that Plaintiff FrontPoint's unjust enrichment claim and its Sherman Act claims against Defendant UBS rely on the same [**93] set of operative facts.

Having found that Plaintiffs have made a prima facie showing that this Court has personal jurisdiction over Plaintiff FrontPoint's Sherman Act claims against Defendant UBS, and that the Sherman Act claims have a "nucleus of pertinent facts in common" with the unjust enrichment claim, it is appropriate to exercise pendent personal jurisdiction. See Hargrave v. Oki Nursery, Inc., 646 F.2d 716, 719 \(2d Cir. 1980\).

Accordingly, this Court has jurisdiction over Plaintiff FrontPoint's unjust enrichment claim against Defendant UBS.

I. *Jurisdictional Discovery

In the alternative, Plaintiffs seek jurisdictional discovery. (Pls.' PJX Opp. 28-29.) My dismissal on the merits of all of Plaintiffs' [*567] claims, except for Plaintiff FrontPoint's Sherman Act claims and unjust enrichment claim against Defendant UBS, and my decision to exercise personal jurisdiction over Defendant UBS for those specific claims render Plaintiffs' request for jurisdictional discovery moot.

Accordingly, Plaintiffs' request for jurisdictional discovery is denied.

VI. *Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, Defendants' motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction is DENIED. Defendants' motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) for failure to state a claim is GRANTED as to [**94] all claims against Defendant BCI. Defendants' motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) is also GRANTED as to Plaintiffs' CEA claims, RICO claims, and state-law claim of breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, as well as to Plaintiffs Sonterra's and Dennis's Sherman Act claims and unjust enrichment claim against all Defendants, and Plaintiff FrontPoint's Sherman Act claims and unjust enrichment claim against all Defendants except UBS.

Because Plaintiffs have made out a prima facie case of personal jurisdiction over Defendant UBS with regard to Plaintiff FrontPoint's Sherman Act claims and unjust enrichment claim against Defendant UBS, the Foreign of some other considerations would render jurisdiction unreasonable." Burger King, 471 U.S. at 477. Defendants' only argument that the exercise of personal jurisdiction would be unreasonable is that they "had no suit-related connections with the forum." (See Defs.' PJX Br. 28-29.) This is merely a statement that the first requirement for specific personal jurisdiction has not been met. Defendants fail to meet their burden because they do not point to any evidence that the exercise of personal jurisdiction would be unreasonable as to UBS or any other Defendant.

---

Defendants' motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction is DENIED as to those claims. Plaintiffs' request for jurisdictional discovery is DENIED. In light of this Opinion & Order, Plaintiffs shall file any motion to substitute pursuant to Rule 17\(a\)\(3\), limited in scope to the surviving claims, no later than January 21, 2019; Defendants' response shall be due no later than February 20, 2019; Plaintiffs' reply shall be due no later than February 27, 2019.

The Clerk of Court is respectfully directed to terminate the pending motion.

SO ORDERED.

Dated: [**95] December 21, 2018

New York, New York

/s/ Vernon S. Broderick

Vernon S. Broderick

United States District Judge

---

End of Document

TMT Mgmt. Grp., LLC v. U.S Bank Nat'l Ass'n

Minnesota District Court, County of Dakota, First Judicial District

December 21, 2018, Decided; December 21, 2018, Filed

File No. 19HA-CV-16-991

Reporter

2018 Minn. Dist. LEXIS 88 *

TMT Management Group, LLC, Plaintiff, v. U.S Bank National Association, Wilbur Tate, III, Jacob vanBrandwijk, Richard Hartnack, United Credit Recovery, LLC, and Leonard Potillo, Defendants.

Subsequent History: Affirmed by TMT Mgmt. Grp., LLC v. U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 940 N.W.2d 239, 2020 Minn. App. LEXIS 37, 2020 WL 610458 \(Minn. Ct. App., Feb. 10, 2020\)

Core Terms

---

portfolio, bid, summary judgment, argues, targeting, alleges, intentional misrepresentation, alleged misrepresentation, purchasing, misrepresentation, two-agency, antitrust, dollar, sales, genuine issue of material fact, programming, unjust enrichment, vanBrandwijk, promise, email, right of first refusal, promissory estoppel, out-of-pocket, conspiracy, considers, contracts, parties, grant summary judgment, punitive damages, public policy

Judges: [*1] Martha M. Simonett, Judge of District Court.

Opinion by: Martha M. Simonett

Opinion

---

ORDER GRANTING SUMMARY JUDGMENT

The above-entitled matter came on before the undersigned on October 25, 2018 at the Dakota County Judicial Center, Hastings, Minnesota, for hearing on Defendants U.S. Bank National Association and Jacob vanBrandwijk's (collectively the U.S. Bank Defendants) motions for sanctions and summary judgment, as well as Plaintiff TMT Management Group, LLC's (TMT) motion for partial summary judgment. Daniel Rasmus, Esq., Rolf Fiebiger, Esq., and Michael Weidner, Esq. appeared on behalf of TMT. Brooks Poley, Esq., Justin Jenkins, Esq., Karne Newburn, Esq., and Reid Golden, Esq. appeared on behalf of the U.S. Bank Defendants.

The summary judgment motions are addressed herein; the U.S. Bank Defendants' motion for sanctions is addressed by separate Order filed today as well.

Based upon all of the files, records, and proceedings herein, the Court makes the following:

STATEMENT OF UNDISPUTED FACTS

1. A Demand Deposit Account ("DDA") is a traditional consumer checking account. When DDA account balances become negative as a result of overdrafts and fees, the account holder becomes indebted to the bank. To offset [*2] losses from delinquent DDA, banks sometimes sell portfolios of DDA debt to third-parties. (SAC, ¶¶ 17-19.)

2. Typically, such portfolios are sold for pennies on the dollar, based on the debt's face value. (Id., ¶ 21.) The value of DDA generally decreases with each attempt made to collect the debt from the consumer. (Id., ¶ 22.) In the industry, "zero-agency" DDA means the debt has never been subjected to collection efforts by an outside collection agency; "one-agency" means there has been only one attempt to collect the debt by an outside collection agency; and so on with "two-agency" or "three-agency" debt. (Id.)

3. U.S. Bank sold DDA Portfolios from 2006 to 2012 out of its "Recovery" division, located in Cincinnati, Ohio. (See Affidavit of Brooks Poley in Support of U.S. Bank's Motion for Summary Judgment ("Poley Aff."), Ex. 8; Ex. 9, U.S. Bank Dep., Lorenzo at 49:20-22.)

4. Defendant Wilbur Tate, III ("Tate") administered U.S. Bank's DDA portfolio sales until he resigned in January of 2011. (Id., Ex. 10, Tate Dep. 286:12-20.) U.S. Bank replaced Tate with Vincent Lorenzo ("Lorenzo") two months later, in April 2011. (Id., Ex. 11, Lorenzo Dep. 29:4-8, Ex. 12). At all relevant times, Kirk [*3] Villaloboz ("Villaloboz") oversaw Tate (and later, Lorenzo), while Jacob vanBrandwijk ("vanBrandwijk") oversaw Villaloboz.

5. TMT is a debt purchasing company created in 2008 and located in Burnsville, Minnesota. (Poley Aff., Ex. 13.) Its principals, Mark Bugni ("Bugni") and Thomas Lieberman ("Lieberman"), also owned a now-defunct debt collection company, Weinerman & Associates, LLC ("Weinerman"). (Id., Ex. 14, Bugni Dep. at 15:17-22, 34:17-35:21.) Prior to 2011, neither Weinerman nor TMT had ever purchased a DDA portfolio directly from a bank, including U.S. Bank. (Id., Ex. 15, 2017 TMT Dep. at 37:19-38:4; 38:15-18; 67:24:-68:8.)

6. TMT has withdrawn its claims for violation of the Deceptive Trade Practices Act (Count 4) and breach of an alleged March 17, 2011 forward flow agreement (Count 7(a)). (Declaration of Dan Rasmus in Opposition to U.S. Bank's Motion for Summary Judgment ("Rasmus 2nd Deck"), at 5.)

7. Count I of TMT's Second Amended Complaint alleges the existence of an antitrust conspiracy between U.S. Bank and United Credit Recovery ("UCR"). TMT contends that this alleged U.S. Bank/UCR agreement was intended to, and did, preclude all prospective purchasers (other than UCR) [*4] from buying U.S. Bank DDA portfolios from 2009 through July 2011. (E.g., SAC, ¶¶ 169, 189, 195, 200, 205, 206, 213; Poley Aff., Ex. 31, 2018 TMT Dep. at 45:21-25, 48:25-49:5, 112:7-11, 129:1-7; id., Ex. 68, at ¶¶ 11-13, 17, 21-24, 27.) TMT seeks to recover lost profits for all five of these portfolio sales, claiming U.S. Bank should have sold each portfolio to TMT. (Poley Aff., Ex. 7 at 24.)

8. Wilbur Tate, a former U.S. Bank employee, received kickback payments or bribes from UCR and its principal, Potillo, in exchange for confidential information and preferential treatment in connection with U.S. Bank's DDA sales from 2007 until Tate's resignation from the bank in January 2011.

9. The indictments provide the background of information that TMT claims evidences the antitrust conspiracy. Federal authorities in Florida charged Potillo with defrauding UCR's customers (second-tier debt purchasers), by falsely representing to them that the less valuable two-agency DDA debt UCR purchased and resold from U.S. Bank and Wells Fargo was actually more valuable zero-agency DDA debt. (See Poley Aff. Exs. 1, 2 at 5.) Federal authorities did not accuse U.S. Bank of any wrongdoing. (Id. at 6.) Tate [*5] was not charged or convicted in connection with Potillo's scheme but did plead guilty to an unrelated bribery scheme by federal authorities in Connecticut. (Id., Exs. 3, 4.) Tate was ordered to repay U.S. Bank over $1 million in restitution for the damage he caused the bank. (Id., Exs. 5, 6.)

10. On or about January 31, 2011, Tate resigned from U.S. Bank. (Poley Aff., Ex. 10, Tate Dep. 286:12-20.) Three weeks later, on February 18, 2011, U.S. Bank and UCR executed a purchase agreement which included a "forward flow" provision, whereby U.S. Bank agreed to sell UCR all of its 2011 DDA for specified prices. (Poley Aff., Ex. 19 at 2603.) This forward flow provision allowed either party to cancel with 30 days' notice. (Id.)

11. On March 16, 2011, Bugni, Lieberman, and their local banker, Todd Loosbrock ("Loosbrock"), met with Kirk Villaloboz ("Villaloboz") in a preliminary "meet-and-greet" session to discuss TMT's desire to purchase U.S. Bank's DDA on a "forward flow" basis. (SAC, ¶ 47.) In particular, TMT came to this meeting to pitch a two-year forward flow contract to Villaloboz. (Poley Aff., Ex. 15, 2017 TMT Dep. at 114:5-13; Ex. 21 at 000533.) No agreement was reached at this meeting. [*6] (Id., Ex. 15 at 114:20-21.)

12. Five days after the March 16, 2011 meeting on March 21, 2011, Leiferman sent Villaloboz an email inquiring into the status of U.S. Bank's internal deliberations regarding TMT's desire for a five-year forward flow agreement for the sale of DDA. (Id., Ex. 24.) Leiferman stated in this email that it "would like to" have a five-year contract in place, and asked Villaloboz if such a contract could realistically be "captured." (Id.)

13. On March 28, 2011, U.S. Bank expressly rejected TMT's proposal for a five-year contract. (Id., Ex. 15 at 123:20-124:1; see also id., Ex. 22.)

14. On April 15, 2011, Bugni and Lieberman traveled to Cincinnati to meet with Villaloboz and Loosbrock discuss their interest in purchasing DDA portfolios from U.S. Bank. (E.g., SAC, ¶ 53; Poley Aff., Ex. 15 at 132:6-19; Ex. 30 at 003774.)

15. No agreement was reached at the April 15, 2011 meeting. (E.g., SAC, ¶ 55; Poley Aff. Exs. 18 at 175:21-176:4; Ex. 15 at 145:5-25; Ex. 34.)

16. U.S. Bank encouraged TMT to participate in future auctions for the purchase of DDA which would resume upon the expiration or cancellation of the UCR forward-flow agreement. (Poley Aff. Exs. 36, 38.)

17. U.S. Bank [*7] sold UCR the May 2011 Portfolio for the price recited in the U.S. Bank/UCR forward flow contract. (Id.; see also id., Ex. 40.)

18. On May 11, 2011, Villaloboz sent an email to Bugni and Lieberman informing them that U.S. Bank only sold, and would continue to only sell, DDA that had been worked by two agencies and that they should take that fact into consideration when calculating the value of U.S. Bank's DDA. (Id., Ex. 36 at 1.)

19. Forty-six minutes later, Bugni sent Loosbrock a draft response to Villaloboz's email acknowledging that he knew that U.S. Bank's DDA portfolios contained only two-agency DDA. (Id., Ex. 37.) Bugni also stated that he was still willing to offer U.S. Bank the same price for these portfolios, even though their two-agency status "devalue[d]" them. (Id.)

20. In connection with the July 2011 Portfolio, TMT acknowledged that U.S. Bank was advertising its DDA portfolios as two-agency grade. (Id., Ex. 15, 2017 TMTDep. at 193:21-194:8; see also id., Ex. 49.)

21. U.S. Bank canceled the U.S. Bank/UCR forward flow contract by letter dated June 7, 2011. (Poley Aff., Ex. 41.) When it did so, U.S. Bank granted UCR a "right of first refusal" on the next DDA portfolio sold in [*8] July 2011. (Id.) A party with a right of first refusal is permitted to know, after bidding closes, what the highest bid was, and is allowed to exceed the otherwise-winning bid should that party so choose.

22. On July 11, 2011, Weinerman submitted a bid of $0,045 for the July 2011 Portfolio. (Poley Aff., Ex. 42.) U.S. Bank informed Weinerman that this bid was insufficient. (Id., Ex. 43.) That same day, TMT submitted a bid for $0.0525. (Id., Ex. 44 at 2.) Leiferman then sent an email to Lorenzo asking for confirmation that its bid had been received.

23. Shortly thereafter, Lorenzo sent a reply email to Leiferman which confirmed that TMT's bid was received and stated, "Kirk [Villaloboz] explained you are aware ... that a company ... has the opportunity of first right of refusal." (Id., Ex. 45, at 1.)

24. Later that day, Lorenzo informed Leiferman that UCR had exercised its right of first refusal to "meet and exceed [TMT's] bid." (Id., Ex. 44 at 1.) Leiferman questioned why UCR was permitted to exceed TMT's bid. (Id.) Lorenzo reminded Leiferman that UCR had a right of first refusal. (Id.)

25. Two days later, Bugni, acting on behalf of Weinerman, responded by stating that "[w]hile we were disappointed [*9] to hear that the 3rd quarter DDA portfolio had a 'First Right of Refusal Clause' we do understand that US Bank honors their contractual commitments." (Id., Ex. 46.) Bugni also proposed a five quarter forward flow contract with U.S. Bank. (Id.) U.S. Bank did not agree to that proposal but did grant TMT its own right of first refusal for the upcoming September 2011 Portfolio. (Id., Ex. 15 at 253:24-255:6.)

26. On August 26, 2011, U.S. Bank announced the sale of the September 2011 Portfolio though an email to prospective bidders, including TMT, disclosing that the DDA files had been "recall[ed] from agencies prior to this offering." (See id., Ex. 50 at 1.) This disclosure conveyed that the September 2011 Portfolio had been subjected to collection attempts by no less than two outside collection agencies. (Id., Ex. 15 at 227:10-228:24.)

27. There were two files attached to this announcement email: (1) the "Sale File," which contained detailed, sensitive information about the DDA accounts and the individual account debtors within the portfolio, and (2) the Declarations, which provided general descriptive information about the accounts but which contained no sensitive information. (Poley Aff., [*10] Ex. 11, Lorenzo Dep. 190:17-22; 194:17-195:1.) Because the Sale File contained sensitive personal information it was password-protected. (Id., 190:18-20.) The Declarations, which contained no sensitive information, were not password-protected. (Id., Ex. 11, 190:20-22; 194:24-195:1.)

28. The Declarations made a number of disclosures regarding the September 2011 Portfolio, including the following statement: "The accounts were placed with a primary agency for 4 months. The accounts were then placed with a secondary agency for 5 months. All accounts have been recalled from agencies." (Id., Ex. 51.) TMT admitted that it "couldn't have mistaken" this disclosure to mean anything other than that the September 2011 Portfolio contained two-agency DDA. (Id., Ex. 15, at 231:9-20.)

29. On September 19, 2011, TMT placed its bid for U.S. Bank's September 2011 Portfolio. (Poley Aff., Ex. 56.) TMT executed the purchase agreement for the September 2011 Portfolio on September 30, 2011. (Id., Ex. 57.)

30. On September 22, 2011, U.S. Bank sent TMT a "seller survey" which made various additional disclosures regarding the September 2011 Portfolio. (Poley Aff., Ex. 58.)

31. A seller survey is a document resulting [*11] from various bidders' questions posed to U.S. Bank, as the seller of the DDA portfolio, regarding the DDA being sold. (Id., Ex. 65, U.S. Bank Dep. at 54:2-16.)

32. The seller survey included, inter alia, various questions regarding collection activity on the DDA contained in the September 2011 Portfolio. (Poley Aff., Ex. 58 at 01962.) In response to the question "[w]hat agencies were utilized [for collections]," U.S. Bank responded by stating "River and Bonded for Primes, Apelles for Seconds," indicating the debt had been worked by primary and secondary outside agencies (i.e., was "two agency"). (Id.)

33. On September 22, 2011, TMT advised U.S. Bank that it couldn't locate the Declarations document U.S. Bank had furnished three weeks prior. (Id., Ex. 59 at TMT4635.) U.S. Bank provided the Declarations to TMT less than one hour later. (Id.) TMT acknowledged receipt that same day. (Id. at TMT4634.)

34. On September 29, 2011, TMT requested that U.S. Bank draft a letter for TMT to distribute to its customer base stating that U.S. Bank had always sold two-agency DDA. (Id., Ex. 60.)

35. TMT funded the September 2011 Portfolio on October 3, 2011. (Id., Ex. 15 at 275:4-11; 290:18-22; see also [*12] id., at 271:7-10.)

36. The next and last DDA portfolio U.S. Bank sold was in March 2012. (Poley Aff., Ex. 8.)

37. UCR bid "in excess of $0,045" for the July 2011 Portfolio, offering $0.0526. (Poley Aff., Ex. 62 at USB_0000771; Ex. 72.)

38. UCR likewise bid in excess of $.045 on the September 2011 Portfolio, offering $.051. (Id., Ex. 63.)

39. On May 8, 2013, Bugni and Leiferman met with Kent Stone, a U.S. Bank vice chairman; Christina Froehlich; and Anthony McGill. (SAC ¶ 112.) Although TMT alleges that it reached an agreement for the purchase of DDA from U.S. Bank at this meeting, several of the terms of such agreement were not finalized and remained uncertain, such as price.

40. As set forth in separate Order of the Court, TMT is precluded from introducing evidence of any oral statements made by the U.S. Bank Defendants.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

1. Noting TMT's voluntary withdrawal of these claims, TMT's claims for violation of the Deceptive Trade Practices Act (Count 4) and breach of the alleged March 17, 2011 forward flow agreement (Count 7(a)) are hereby dismissed.
2. There are no genuine issues of material fact that preclude granting summary judgment to the U.S. Bank Defendants on all remaining [*13] Counts in the Second Amended Complaint, and the U.S. Bank Defendants are entitled to summary judgment thereon.
3. TMT's motion for partial summary judgment is denied. Based upon the foregoing Findings of Fact, Conclusions of Law, and attached Memorandum, the Court makes the following:

ORDER

1. TMT's claims for violation of the Deceptive Trade Practices Act (Count 4) and breach of the alleged March 17, 2011 forward flow agreement (Count 7(a)) are dismissed.
2. The U.S. Bank Defendants' motion for summary judgment on the all remaining Counts in the Second Amended Complaint is granted.
3. TMT's Second Amended Complaint is dismissed with prejudice.
4. Dakota County Court Administration will send a copy of this Order to both parties and attorneys of record, and upon that delivery, service shall be deemed proper.
5. The attached Memorandum is hereby incorporated by reference.

LET JUDGMENT BE ENTERED ACCORDINGLY.

Dated: December 24, 2018

BY THE COURT:

/s/ Martha M. Simonett

Martha M. Simonett

Judge of District Court

Judgment

I hereby certify that the foregoing order constitutes the Judgment of this Court.

Dated: Dec 24 2018, 8:38 am

Heidi Carstensen

Court Administrator, Dakota County, MN

Deputy

/s/ [Signature] [*14]

MEMORANDUM

Summary Judgment Standard

Pursuant to Rule 56 of the Minnesota Rules of Civil Procedure, summary judgment is appropriate "if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue of material fact and that either party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Minn. R. Civ. P. 56.03. Although a summary judgment proceeding "is intended to secure a just, speedy, and inexpensive disposition, it is not designed as a substitute for trial where there are issues to be determined." Vieths v. Thorp Finance Co., 305 Minn. 522, 525, 232 N.W.2d 776, 778 \(Minn. 1975\). "The function of the court on a motion for summary judgment is not to resolve issues of fact but to determine whether they exist." Anderson v. Mikel Drilling Co., 257 Minn. 487, 494, 102 N.W.2d 293, 299 \(Minn. 1960\). Because summary judgment is a "blunt instrument," it should not be employed unless it is clear that no material issue of fact is involved and it is not necessary to inquire further into facts that might clarify the application of law. Donnay v. Boulware, 275 Minn. 37, 144 N.W.2d 711, 716 \(Minn. 1966\).

A fact is "material," for purposes of a summary judgment motion, if its resolution will affect the outcome of the case. Bebo v. Delander, 632 N.W.2d 732 \(Minn. Ct. App. 2001\) rev. denied (Minn. Oct. 16, 2001). If there is any doubt as to whether a genuine issue of material fact exists, that doubt must be resolved in favor of finding that one does. Jonathan v. Kvaal, 403 N. W.2d 256 \(Minn. Ct. App. 1987\). The moving party [*15] has the burden of demonstrating the absence of any genuine issues of material fact, and the Court "must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party." W.J.L. v. Bugge, 573 N.W.2d 677, 680 \(Minn. 1998\).

Once the moving party has made out a prima facie case that it is entitled to summary judgment, the burden shifts to the nonmoving party, who "must come forward with affirmative evidence sufficient to create a genuine issue of material fact." Musicland Group, Inc. v. Ceridian Corp., 508 N.W.2d 524, 531 \(Minn. Ct. App. 1993\). In doing so, the nonmoving party must do more than rely on "unverified and conclusionary allegations in his pleading or by postulating evidence which might be developed at trial." Rosvall v. Provost, 279 Minn. 119, 124, 155 N.W.2d 900, 904 \(Minn. 1968\). If the court then decides that reasonable persons could draw different conclusions on how the issue should be resolved, then summary judgment is not appropriate and the matter should proceed to trial. However, "[s]ummary judgment is not to be avoided simply because there is some metaphysical doubt as to a factual issue." Bob Useldinger & Sons, Inc. v. Hangsleben, 505 N.W.2d 323, 328 \(Minn. 1993\) (citing Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242 at 247-50, 106 S.Ct. 2505 at 2509-11, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 \(1986\)). Indeed, "[m]ere speculation, without some concrete evidence, is not enough to avoid summary judgment." Id.

In the present matter, the U.S. Bank Defendants move for summary judgment on the following remaining claims: (1) antitrust violation (Count 1), (2) intentional [*16] misrepresentation (fraud) (Count 5), (3) negligent misrepresentation (Count 6), (4) Breach of contract (Count 7(b)), (5) promissory estoppel (Count 8), (6) unjust enrichment (Count 9), (7) respondeat superior (Count 10), (8) civil conspiracy (Count 11). TMT moves for partial summary judgment on its claim for an antitrust violation (Count 1).

Antitrust Violation (Count 1)

The Court first considers Count 1 of TMT's Second Amended Complaint which asserts an antitrust violation claim against U.S. Bank.<sup>1</sup> TMT alleges that U.S. Bank violated Minn.Stat. § 325D.53, subd. 1\(3\), Minnesota's "refusal to deal" statute, which provides:

Without limiting section 325D.51 [describing an unreasonable restraint of trade or commerce], the following shall be deemed to restrain trade or commerce unreasonably and are unlawful:

(3) A contract, combination, or conspiracy between two or more persons refusing to deal with another person, except a refusal to deal by associations, trading boards, or exchanges when predicated upon a failure to comply with rules of membership.

Only two Minnesota cases address and govern consideration of "refusal to deal" claims, Minn.-Iowa Television Co. v. Watonwan TV. Imp. Ass'n, 294 N.W.2d 297 (Minn. 1980) and Hough Transit, Ltd. v. Nat'l Farmers Org., 472 N.W.2d 358 (Minn. Ct. App. 1991). In Watonwan, an allegedly anticompetitive agreement between a television station, [*17] KAAL, and a re-broadcasting service, Watonwan, was challenged as a refusal to deal. The agreement provision at issue prohibited Watonwan from carrying any network programming that duplicated KAAL's network programming. 294 N.W.2d at 301. When Watonwan breached the provision by carrying another station's, KSTP's, duplicate programming, KAAL sued. Id. at 302. Watonwan sought to invalidate the non-duplication provision of the agreement, arguing that it constituted a refusal to deal with KSTP in violation of Minn.Stat. § 325.8015, subd. 1\(3\) (1978).<sup>2</sup> The Minnesota Supreme Court concluded that the provision did not constitute a refusal to deal under the statute, observing that:

For a number of reasons, the provision here is unlike the type of agreement classified as a refusal to deal. First, the contract does not refer to KSTP but only to any station carrying ABC network programming. Second, the contract does not prohibit the broadcasting of KSTP's programming but only of ABC programming carried by KSTP; local programming, such as nonnetwork shows, sports events or news programs would not be precluded. Third, the contract does not actually prohibit the ABC programming as such, as it is still broadcast using KAAL's signal. Finally, the contract does [*18] not preclude KSTP or other stations from broadcasting in the county by using facilities other than Watonwan's.

Id. at 307. Thus, because the contract did not "target" KTSP for exclusion from the marketplace, the provision at issue was not a "refusal to deal" with KSTP under Minnesota law, and because KSTP had access to the market, notwithstanding the agreement provision at issue, there was no statutory violation.

In Hough, a driver entered into a contract to haul all of a farming co-op's milk, effectively preventing all other milk haulers from servicing the co-op. 472 N.W.2d at 359. A competing milk hauler sued the co-op, claiming that the co-op violated Minn.Stat. § 325D.53, subd. 1\(3\) by refusing to deal with the competitor. Id. at 360. The Minnesota Court of Appeals rejected this argument, holding that the agreement at issue did not constitute a refusal to deal in violation of the statute. Id. at 361. In reaching this conclusion, the Court of Appeals focused on the same two factors identified in Watonwan, targeting and market foreclosure, stating:

Although that contract effectively is a refusal to deal with [the competitor], it also is a refusal to deal with every other milk hauler as well. Nothing in the record indicates there was a concerted effort between [*19] the co-op and the driver to refuse to deal specifically with [competitor]. See Watonwan, 294 N.W.2d at 307 (contract not a refusal to deal because it did not refer to a specific third party). The contract also did not prevent [the competitor] from hauling for other dairy farmers. See id. Finally, the contract at issue had no significant anticompetitive-effect because it actually added a competitor to the milk hauling business. Under these circumstances, the co-op/driver contract is not the type of agreement which can be called a per se illegal refusal to deal.

<sup>1</sup> The Court notes that TMT alleges several violations of state antitrust laws in its Second Amended Complaint but has since limited Count 1 to allege only a "refusal to deal" claim. (Poley Aff., Ex. 31, 2018 TMT Dep. at 40:16 - 24; 43:22-45:6.)

<sup>2</sup> Minn.Stat. § 325.8015, subd. 1\(3\) has since been renumbered to Minn.Stat. § 325D.53, subd. 1\(3\), the statutory provision currently at issue.

Id.

Thus, the foundational requirements indicate that agreements whereby two parties deal solely with each other and exclude everyone else are not refusals to deal and agreements that do not foreclose the plaintiff from the relevant market are likewise not refusals to deal. In opposition, TMT first argues that it is not required to demonstrate that it was "targeted" by contracts at issue between U.S. Bank and UCR to support its antitrust claim. It argues that this case is distinguishable from both Watonwan and Hough because those cases dealt with exclusive dealing contracts where no criminal conspiracy existed. TMT argues that the targeting concept was introduced [*20] by the Minnesota Supreme Court as an exception that was read into the antitrust statute as a means to salvage what the Court considered to be economically and socially acceptable conduct exemplified by exclusive buying and selling arrangements. It contends that the exception should not be applied universally and without careful consideration, especially in this case where the facts differ so dramatically from Watonwan and Hough, given the criminal conspiracy that existed between U.S. Bank and UCR/Potillo.

TMT warns that this Court should apply the targeting exception cautiously and very narrowly. As a matter of policy, it argues that the Court can and should conclude the targeting provision, which is not present in the statute itself, should not be used to protect criminal conspiracies, like the one in this case. It further argues that, in other words, just because the Minnesota Supreme Court created the targeting exception, this does not mean that this Court must extend the rule to protect U.S. Bank's allegedly illegal, criminal conduct that is neither economically nor socially acceptable.

Similarly, TMT requests that, to the extent that it is required to show targeting, the Court create [*21] a public policy exception for situations where a criminal conspiracy exists. It argues that application of the targeting requirement in the instant case would function to protect U.S. Bank's allegedly illegal, criminal conduct that is neither economically nor socially acceptable and thus would undermine good public policy. In response, U.S. Bank argues that existing law does not support TMT's position. It points out that there is nothing in Watonwan or Hough that specifically states, or even implies, that there may be a public policy limitation on the targeting requirement. It further notes that it is well-settled in Minnesota that antitrust law does not concern itself with the good faith, or lack thereof, of an antitrust defendant, citing Am. Amusement Co. v. Ludwig, 82 F.Supp. 265, 267 (D. Minn. 1949). Thus, it reasons that any alleged bribery on the part of a former U.S. Bank employee is irrelevant to the instant motion.

It is well-settled that "[t]he public policy of a state is for the legislature to determine and not the courts." Mattson v. Flynn, 216 Minn. 354, 13 N.W.2d 11, 16 (Minn. 1944). See also In re Clarification of an Appropriate Unit, 880 N.W.2d 383, 390 (Minn. 2016). "After all, all laws implicate some public policy ... and we can hardly enunciate a rule that says that we know an actionable public-policy violation when we see it." Dukowitz v. Hannon Sec. Servs., 841 N.W.2d 147, 152 (Minn. 2014) (citations [*22] and internal quotations omitted). Moreover, courts are generally reluctant to find public policy exemptions where doing so would require a departure from well-settled legal principles. See id. As U.S. Bank Defendants point out, it is long-established that antitrust law does not concern itself with the good faith, or lack thereof, of an antitrust defendant. Am. Amusement Co., 82 F.Supp. at 267. To the contrary, "[t]he prohibitions of the [antitrust laws] cannot be evaded by good motives." Paramount Famous Lasky Corp. v. United States, 282 U.S. 30, 44, 51 S. Ct. 42, 75 L. Ed. 145 (1930) (citations omitted). Instead, antitrust law principles condemn the actions of defendants who act in good faith as harshly as those that do not. See, e.g., Prof. Real Estate Investors, Inc. v. Columbia Pictures Indus., Inc., 508 U.S. 49, 60, 113 S. Ct. 1920, 123 L. Ed. 2d 611 (1993). Thus, there is no general public policy that creates antitrust liability for those acting in bad faith in situations where liability would not otherwise exist.

The Court agrees with U.S. Bank's arguments on this point. The Court is unable to find support in law for TMT's position that good public policy requires that the Court not analyze targeting or market foreclosure in this instance. Moreover, the Court finds TMT's arguments unsupported by any authorities, given that, as previously indicated, targeting and market foreclosure were central concepts in the Court's analysis into [*23] whether the contracts at issue were per se illegal as refusals to deal under Minn.Stat. § 325D.53 in both Watonwan and Hough. See 294 N.W.2d at 307; 472 N.W.2d at 361.

In this case, U.S. Bank argues that it has made a prima facie case that it is entitled to summary judgment on the antitrust violation claim as the facts show that TMT was neither targeted nor denied access to the market by the agreements at issue. With regard to targeting, U.S. Bank argues that available evidence demonstrates that the contractual arrangements between U.S. Bank and UCR impacted all other DDA purchasers, excluding them from purchasing U.S. Bank's DDA portfolios. It points out that the written contracts between U.S. Bank and UCR make no mention of TMT or otherwise suggest that the parties' intent was to specifically target TMT.

TMT, on the other hand, argues that a genuine issue of material fact exists as to whether it was targeted by U.S. Bank and UCR's forward flow agreement and subsequent right of first refusal in favor of UCR for the purchase of U.S. Bank's DDA portfolios. It contends that the record can be read to show that as TMT became more aggressive in its efforts to purchase DDA, it became the main threat to Tate and Potillo's conspiratorial activities [*24] and the focus of action by Tate and others at U.S. Bank. It points out that Tate did not return several of Bugni's phone calls after learning of TMT's interest in purchasing DDA from U.S. Bank and that the December 2010 DDA portfolio was withdrawn after TMT continually expressed interest in buying it. Additionally, it notes that contracts regarding DDA sales between U.S. Bank and UCR were put into place in contradiction to TMT's understanding that no DDA deals were being considered by U.S. Bank and that TMT was unable to purchase the May 2011 and July 2011 because of U.S. Bank and UCR's agreements.<sup>3</sup>

It is the Court's view that none of these points, taken as true, shows that a genuine issue of material fact exists as to whether the agreements between U.S. Bank and UCR constitute a refusal to deal with TMT. It is clear that TMT wanted to purchase DDA from U.S. Bank long before it was first able to in September 2011. However, like in Hough, the Court is unable to find support in the record for TMT's contention that it was thwarted from purchasing DDA from U.S. Bank before September 2011 as a result of a concerted effort by U.S. Bank and UCR specifically aimed at TMT. Instead, it appears [*25] that agreements between U.S. Bank and UCR were meant to benefit those entities. Additionally, the Court is unable to find evidence in the record demonstrating that these agreements somehow prevented TMT from purchasing DDA from other entities during the relevant time period and thus cannot say that TMT was foreclosed from the DDA market prior to purchasing the September 2011 DDA portfolio from U.S. Bank.

Given the undisputed facts showing that the contracts between U.S. Bank and UCR had the effect of excluding everyone other than UCR from purchasing DDA portfolios, the Court enters judgment for U.S. Bank on Count 1.

Intentional Misrepresentation (Fraud) (Count 5)

The Court next considers Count 5 of TMT's Second Amended Complaint which asserts a claim for intentional misrepresentation (fraud) against the U.S. Bank Defendants. To prevail on its claim, TMT must prove:

- (1) there was a false representation by a party of a past or existing material fact susceptible of knowledge; (2) made with knowledge of the falsity of the representation or made as of the party's own knowledge without knowing whether it was true or false; (3) with the intention to induce another to act in reliance thereon; [*26] (4) that the representation caused the other party to act in reliance thereon; and (5) that the party suffer[ed] pecuniary damage as a result of the reliance.

See HoytProps., Inc. v. Prod. Res. Group, L.L.C., 736 N.W.2d 313, 318 (Minn. 2007).

TMT's allegations fall into three general categories: 1) alleged misrepresentations relating to DDA portfolio sales occurring prior to September 2011, (2) alleged misrepresentations relating to the September 2011 DDA portfolio sale, and 3) alleged misrepresentations relating to the March 2012 DDA portfolio sale. The Court will address each in turn.

---

<sup>3</sup> UCR purchased the May 2011 portfolio pursuant to the forward flow agreement and the July 2011 portfolio in accordance with its right of first refusal.

First, TMT alleges that the U.S. Bank Defendants made a number of misrepresentations regarding DDA portfolio sales occurring prior to September 2011. In essence, TMT alleges that the U.S. Bank Defendants created a number of artificial barriers which prevented TMT from purchasing DDA from U.S. Bank prior to September 2011, including, but not limited to, falsely representing to TMT (1) that its bid for the September 2010 DDA portfolio sale was not allowed because U.S. Bank did not have a Non-Disclosure Agreement (NDA) for TMT on file (SAC ¶ 242), (2) that TMT would be permitted to bid on future U.S. Bank DDA portfolios at various times prior to September 2011 (SAC ¶¶ 247, 249), (3) [*27] that DDA portfolios were sold through an open bid process (SAC ¶ 249), and (4) that TMT did not win the July 2011 DDA auction because UCR had chosen to exercise its right of first refusal to meet or exceed TMT's bid and purchase the July 2011 DDA portfolio. (SAC ¶¶ 246, 260.) TMT argues that it was harmed by these alleged misrepresentations because it was prevented from purchasing DDA from U.S. Bank and therefore was prevented from being able to re-sell the DDA portfolios to third parties, resulting in lost profits. (SAC ¶ 259.)

Here, it is the Court's conclusion that TMT's intentional misrepresentation claim with respect to DDA sales occurring prior to September 2011 fails as a matter of law because (1) many of the alleged misrepresentations were, in fact, not misrepresentations, and (2) Minnesota's out-of-pocket rule precludes recovery on the allegations that remain in dispute. As an initial matter, several of these alleged misrepresentations—including that U.S. Bank required an NDA for a prospective bidder to participate in its DDA auctions and that TMT was unable to participate in the September 2010 DDA auction because it did not have an NDA on file and that TMT was unable to purchase [*28] the July 2011 DDA portfolio because UCR had chosen to exercise its right of first refusal for the purchase of that portfolio—were, in fact, true. (See Poley Aff., Ex. 15, 2017 TMT Dep., at 71:20 - 72:2; 110:3 - 23, and 189:6 - 21.) TMT cannot recover on a claim for intentional misrepresentation based upon true statements. See *TCI Bus. Capital v. Five Star Am. Die Casting, L.L.C.*, 890 N.W.2d 423, 432 \(Minn. Ct. App. 2017\). Nor can it recover for statements of intention made by the U.S. Bank Defendants absent an intent to deceive. See *Proulx v. Hirsch Bros. Inc.*, 279 Minn. 157, 155 N.W.2d 907, 911-12 \(Minn. 1968\).

With respect to those allegations that remain in dispute, it is the Court's conclusion that TMT's intentional misrepresentation claim fails as a matter of law due to the out-of-pocket rule. In Minnesota, damages in intentional misrepresentation claims like that set forth by TMT "are the difference between the actual value of the property received and the price paid for the property, along with any special damages naturally and proximately caused by the fraud prior to its discovery, including expenses incurred in mitigating the damages." *B.F. Goodrich v. Masabi Tire Co., Inc.*, 430 N.W.2d 180, 182 \(Minn. 1988\). "[T]he out-of-pocket rule assumes that plaintiff received something from defendant that was less than what plaintiff anticipated receiving." *Nelson v. Am. Fam. Mutual Ins. Co.*, 262 F.Supp.3d 835, 861 \(D. Minn. 2017\) (citations and internal quotations omitted). "Under this rule it is not [*29] a question of what the plaintiff might have gained through the transaction but what was lost by reason of defendant's deception." *Lewis v. Citizens Agency of Madelia, Inc.*, 306 Minn. 194, 235 N.W.2d 831, 835 \(Minn. 1975\) (citations omitted). "Exceptions to the out-of-pocket rule have been allowed only where the defendant's misrepresentation prevents the plaintiff from taking measures to protect the value of property he already owned." Id. (citations omitted).

TMT argues that the out-of-pocket rule does not preclude its recovery because another exception to the general rule applies here. TMT points to cases like Jensen v. Peterson, where Minnesota Courts have been "flexible in the past where the strict application of an out of pocket damage rule would fail to do substantial justice." *264 N.W.2d 139, 143 \(Minn. 1978\)*. In those cases, Courts have determined that a plaintiff may recover for economic injury that is the direct and natural consequence of having acted in reliance on the alleged misrepresentation. See *Lewis*, 235 N.W.2d at 836. TMT argues this exception applies, allowing it to recover for profits it allegedly lost due to its inability to purchase DDA from U.S. Bank before September 2011.

Here, the Court agrees with the U.S. Bank Defendants' argument that TMT is precluded from recovering on its intentional misrepresentation [*30] claim with respect to alleged misrepresentations regarding DDA portfolio sales occurring prior to September 2011 by the out-of-pocket rule as there is nothing in the record showing that TMT paid anything to U.S. Bank, or received anything from U.S. Bank, prior to September 2011. Accordingly, TMT suffered no out-of-pocket losses. Similarly, none of U.S. Bank's alleged misrepresentations prior to September 2011 prevented TMT from taking measures to protect property that it already owned, so TMT's claim does not fall into the exception contemplated by the Nelson Court. See 262 F.Supp.3d at 861. Additionally, it seems to the Court that the exception described in Jensen contemplates restoring the aggrieved party to its former position and because TMT did not pay anything to U.S. Bank or receive anything from it, the Court is unable to conclude that this exception is applicable to the instant situation.

Next, the Court considers TMT's intentional misrepresentation claim regarding alleged misrepresentations relating to the September 2011 DDA portfolio sale. TMT claims that U.S. Bank, through Tate and vanBrandwijk, repeatedly and knowingly falsely represented to TMT that the September 2011 portfolio contained [*31] zero-agency DDA when, in fact, it contained less valuable two-agency DDA. (See SAC ¶¶ 91-99, 239, 249.)

The U.S. Bank Defendants argue that summary judgment on this claim in their favor is appropriate for two reasons: (1) TMT's alleged reliance on the alleged misrepresentations was not reasonable, and (2) TMT waived any right to recovery on this claim by performing on the contract after discovering the falsity of the alleged misrepresentations. Because the Court finds the U.S. Bank Defendants' second point dispositive, it will not address their first argument.

Minnesota law provides that a party waives its right to recover for intentional misrepresentation when it performs on a contract after discovering the misrepresentation. See Dawson v. Thuet Bros., 147 Minn. 429, 180 N.W. 534, 535 \(Minn. 1920\). "If a party, induced by fraud to enter into a contract, discovers the fraud while the contract is still executory and thereafter executes the contract, he is held to have waived the fraud, for he has, in effect, reaffirmed the contract in the light of the actual facts and conditions as he then knows them to exist." Id. (citations omitted). In holding that a party had waived an intentional misrepresentation (fraud) claim by performing on a contract after discovering [*32] the other's misrepresentation, the Minnesota Supreme Court explained that:

[T]o allow a person who has discovered the fraud while the contract is still wholly executory to go on and execute it, and then sue for the fraud, looks very much like permitting him to speculate upon the fraud of the other party. It is virtually to allow a man to recover for self-inflicted injuries. The fraud is really consummated, and the damages incurred, by the acceptance of the property and paying for it. And if this is done after the fraud is discovered, the purchaser cannot say that he sustained this damage by reason of the fraud. It seems to us that if a party discovers the fraud before he enters upon the performance of the contract, he must decide whether he will go on under it or rescind. He cannot say it is a good contract for the purpose of authorizing him to accept the property, but not binding on him as to the price to be paid for it.

Thompson v. Libby, 36 Minn. 287, 31 N.W. 52, 53 \(Minn. 1886\).

In this case, it is undisputed that TMT's performance of the September 2011 DDA sales contract was its payment to U.S. Bank. This payment occurred on October 3, 2011. It is also undisputed that TMT unquestionably knew that the September 2011 DDA portfolio contained [*33] two-agency debt on that date. (Poley Aff., Ex. 14, Bugni Dep. at 277:11 - 14; Ex. 70, at 2.) As such, regardless of whether TMT believed the September 2011 portfolio contained zero-agency debt in the weeks and months leading up to its performance of the sales contract, TMT waived any intentional misrepresentation claim with respect to the September 2011 portfolio by performing on the contract when it knew that the portfolio contained two-agency debt. See Dawson, 180 N.W. at 535.

Finally, the Court considers TMT's intentional misrepresentation claim with respect to alleged misrepresentations relating to the March 2012 DDA portfolio sale. TMT alleges that it overbid on the March 2012 portfolio due to a misrepresentation by vanBrandwijk as to UCR's bid amount. (SAC ¶ 102.) Specifically, TMT alleges that vanBrandwijk falsely stated that UCR bid "in excess of $0,045" per dollar of DDA in the July 2011 Portfolio, and based upon that misrepresentation, TMT's bid for the March 2012 Portfolio was too high. (Id.)

Here, it is clear to the Court that vanBrandwijk's alleged statement regarding UCR's bid on the July 2011 DDA portfolio was, in fact, true, as UCR bid $0.0526 per dollar of DDA in said portfolio. (Poley Aff., [*34] Ex. 72.) As such, the U.S. Bank Defendants are entitled to summary judgment on this claim. See TCI, 890 N.W.2d at 432.

Negligent Misrepresentation (Count 6)

The Court first considers Count 6 of TMT's Second Amended Complaint which assert claims for negligent misrepresentation against the U.S. Bank Defendants. To prevail on its claim, TMT must establish must establish:

(1) a duty of care owed by the defendant to the plaintiff; (2) the defendant supplies false information to the plaintiff; (3) justifiable reliance upon the information by the plaintiff; and (4) failure by the defendant to exercise reasonable care in communicating the information.

See Bonhiver v. Graff, 311 Minn. 111, 248 N.W.2d 291, 299 \(Minn. 1976\).

TMT sets forth the same allegations in support of its negligent misrepresentation claim as its intentional misrepresentation (fraud) claim, specifically alleged misrepresentations relating to DDA sales occurring prior to September 2011, alleged misrepresentations relating to the September 2011 DDA portfolio sale, and alleged misrepresentations relating to the March 2012 DDA portfolio sale. For the same reasons as set forth above in its analysis of TMT's intentional misrepresentation claim, the Court concludes that the U.S. Bank Defendants are entitled to summary [*35] judgment in their favor.

Breach of Contract (Count 7(b))

The Court next considers TMT's claim for breach of contract against U.S. Bank. In its Second Amended Complaint, TMT alleges that "[o]n May 8, 2013, TMT and U.S. Bank, through its Vice Chairman Kent Stone, entered into an agreement for the purchase by TMT of $200,000,000 of U.S. Bank DDA Portfolio at $0.03, as a one-time transaction." (SAC ¶ 271.) The Court understands this to be an allegation that Stone, on behalf of U.S. Bank, orally agreed to sell TMT a DDA portfolio containing accounts worth $200,000,000 for $0.03 per dollar of DDA in said portfolio. TMT further alleges that it had arranged to sell this portfolio to a third party for $0.0775 per dollar of DDA in the portfolio but that ultimately U.S. Bank failed to honor the agreement and did not sell the portfolio to TMT.

In order to prevail on its breach of contract claim, TMT must establish "(1) formation of a contract, (2) performance by plaintiff of any conditions precedent to his right to demand performance by the defendant, and (3) breach of the contract by defendant." Park Nicollet Clinic v. Hamann, 808 N.W.2d 828, 833 \(Minn. 2011\) (citing Briggs Transp. Co. v. Ranzenberger, 299 Minn. 127, 217 N.W.2d 198, 200 \(Minn. 1974\)). "For an enforceable agreement to exist, the offeror and offeree both must express agreement [*36] on every material term of the contract." Travelers Ins. Co. v. Westridge Mall Co., 826 F. Supp. 289, 292 \(D. Minn. 1992\). "When the parties know that an essential term of their intended transaction has not yet been agreed upon, there is no contract." Malevich v. Hakola, 278 N.W.2d 541, 544 \(Minn. 1979\). Price is an essential term of a contract for sale. Olson v. Sharpless, 53 Minn. 91, 55 N.W. 125, 125 \(Minn. 1893\).

TMT argues that genuine issues of material fact exist with respect to the agreed-upon price that TMT would pay for the DDA. It argues that at the meeting on May 8, 2013, Bugni, on behalf of TMT, offered to purchase all of the DDA which U.S. Bank had been accumulating since its March 2012 DDA auction for $0.025. (Declaration of Dan Rasmus in Support of Plaintiff's Motion for Partial Summary Judgment ("Rasmus 1st Deck"), Ex. B, Bugni Dep., at 308:23 - 309:4; 315:24 - 316:17.) It further points out that a third party, Christina Bohlke, was also present at this meeting and testified that she "recalled] that [Bugni] and [Leiferman] threw out a number of what they would be willing to pay on this stale DDA portfolio. My best recollection - I don't know 100 percent, but I believe - what I recall was 3 and a half cents on the dollar." (Rasmus 2nd Decl., Ex. BB, Bohlke Dep., at 31:11-15.) When asked about whether Stone or the other U.S. Bank officer, Anthony McGill, orally [*37] agreed to Bugni and Leiferman's proposed price, Bohlke testified, "I don't recall that, that they verbally agreed to it. I can't recall 100 percent." (Id. at 31:18 - 19.)

Based on the undisputed facts before the Court, the Court finds that this alleged contract fails because there was no agreement as to the material term of price. In TMT's predecessor lawsuit, it claimed it was to pay $0,035 per dollar of DDA debt. (Poley Aff., Ex. 64, ¶ 235.) TMT's complaint here alleged a price of $0,030. (SAC, ¶ 271.) Its interrogatory responses stated it was to pay only $0,025. (Poley Aff., Ex. 32 at 24, Interrogatory 28(b).) TMT's initial disclosures stated that it was to pay a fixed $5 million sum, regardless of whether the portfolio contained $200 million, $300 million, or any amount in between, which works out to a price between $0,166 and $0,025 per dollar of DDA debt. (Id., Ex. 47 at 5, ¶ 3.) TMT's expert witness also offered four different damages scenarios based on four different purchase prices, $0,025, $0.03, $0.0525, and $0,055. (Id., Ex. 7 at 28.) In addition, Leiferman testified that no price term had been agreed to at all; rather, that U.S. Bank was supposed to review the contemplated [*38] DDA portfolio, at which point the parties could continue to negotiate a price term. (Id., Ex. 15 at 323:19-25.)

Price is an essential term of this alleged agreement because, absent a price term, the Court cannot ascertain damages. Wilhelm Lubrication Co. v. Battrud, 268 N.W.2d 634, 635 (Minn. 1936). Equally important, where an alleged contract "remain[s] in a state of negotiation," there is no contract. Mannheimer Realty Co., 247 N.W. at 804; 451 Corp., 310 N.W.2d at 924. Because the parties never agreed to a price, there was no contract. Westridge Mall, 826 F. Supp. at 292; Malevich, 278 N.W.2d at 544. Further, as set forth in separate Order of the Court, TMT is precluded from introducing evidence of any oral statements made on behalf of the U.S. Bank Defendants and therefore is unable to establish that Stone orally agreed to TMT's proposal at the May 8, 2013 meeting. Accordingly, the Court will grant U.S. Bank's motion for summary judgment on this claim.

Promissory Estoppel (Count 8)

Count 8 of the Second Amended Complaint sets forth a claim for promissory estoppel against U.S. Bank. TMT premises this claim upon Stone's alleged promise to Bugni and Leiferman that TMT could purchase $200,000,000 of DDA from U.S. Bank at $0.03 on the dollar.<sup>4</sup> (SAC ¶ 276.) TMT alleges that this occurred at the May 8, 2013 meeting in Cincinnati.

Promissory estoppel is an [*39] equitable claim. See UnitedElec. Corp. v. All Service Elec., Inc., 256 N.W.2d 92, 96 (Minn. 1977). It requires a plaintiff to demonstrate "(1) a clear and definite promise; (2) intent to induce reliance; (3) actual reliance; and (4) a need to enforce the promise in order to prevent injustice." Minn. Deli Provisions, Inc. v. Boar's Head Provisions Co., Inc., 606 F.3d 544, 551 (8th Cir. 2010) (citing Ruud v. Great Plains Supply, Inc., 526 N.W.2d 369, 372 (Minn. 1995)). In order to be "clear and definite," the promise must possess "sufficient clarity and definiteness to determine if there has been performance." Martens v. Minn. Mining & Mfg. Co., 616 N.W.2d 732, 746 n. 27 (Minn. 2000) (adding that absent this, "proof would be equally lacking as to on what the respondents could rely for purposes of their promissory estoppel claim"). If a promise is not sufficiently definite to support a contract claim, it is insufficient to support a promissory estoppel claim. See Aberman v. Maiden Mills Indus., Inc., 414 N.W.2d 769, 772-73 (Minn. Ct. App. 1987).

TMT argues that genuine issues of material fact exist regarding the elements of its promissory estoppel claim. It argues that the May 8, 2013 meeting was arranged to discuss the sale of the DDA portfolio that U.S. Bank had accumulated since its last auction. It contends that Kent, on behalf of U.S. Bank, made a clear, definite promise to sell the DDA to TMT at that meeting, after which TMT took affirmative steps to contact investors to line up funding and seek financing for the DDA purchase.

Here, it seems to the Court as though the record [*40] demonstrates that there are no genuine issues of material fact which would preclude summary judgment in favor of U.S. Bank at this juncture. For the same reasons set forth herein explaining why the Court is granting U.S. Bank's motion for summary judgment on TMT's breach of contract claim, it is the Court's determination that no clear and definite promise to sell DDA to TMT was made by Stone at the May 8, 2013 meeting. Additionally, as set forth in separate Order of the Court, TMT is precluded from introducing evidence of any oral statements made on behalf of the U.S. Bank Defendants and therefore is unable to establish that Kent made a clear and definite oral promise on behalf of U.S. Bank.

Unjust Enrichment (Count 9)

---

<sup>4</sup> In its Second Amended Complaint, TMT also bases its claim upon a purported five-year forward flow agreement between TMT and U.S. Bank which was allegedly reached on March 17, 2011. It has since withdrawn this allegation.

In Count 9 of its Second Amended Complaint, TMT sets forth a claim for unjust enrichment against U.S. Bank. It alleges that it overpaid for the September 2011 and March 2012 DDA portfolios after U.S. Bank (1) misrepresented the DDA as zero-agency debt when it was actually less valuable two-agency debt, and (2) falsely indicated that UCR had paid $0,045 on the dollar for past DDA portfolios when it had actually paid less than $0.03 on the dollar. (SAC ¶¶ 282 - 285.) It [*41] indicates that U.S. Bank voluntarily accepted TMT's overpayments and that it would be unjust and inequitable to allow U.S. Bank to benefit from these overpayments. (SAC ¶¶ 286, 287.)

"The theory of unjust enrichment or money had and received has salutary and beneficial uses and has been invoked in support of claims based upon failure of consideration, fraud, mistake, and in other situations where it would be morally wrong for one party to enrich himself at the expense of another." Cady v. Bush, 283 Minn. 105, 166 N.W.2d 358, 361-62 \(Minn. 1969\). The claim "is founded on the principle that a defendant who has received money, which in equity and good conscience should have been paid to the plaintiff, should pay the money over." Fort Dodd Partnership v. Trooien, 392 N.W.2d 46, 48 \(Minn. Ct. App. 1986\). However, "[e]quitable relief [based on unjust enrichment] cannot be granted where the rights of the parties are governed by a valid contract." U.S. Fire Insur. Co. v. Minn. State Zoological Bd., 307 N.W.2d 490, 497 \(Minn. 1981\) (citing Cady, 166 N.W.2d at 358).

It is the Court's opinion that TMT's unjust enrichment claim fails for two reasons. First, the sale of the September 2011 and March 2012 DDA portfolios, the only two ever sold to TMT by U.S. Bank, are governed by valid sale contracts. (Poley Aff., Exs. 57, 75.) Thus, they cannot form the basis of an unjust enrichment claim. Second, as stated more fully herein, the record [*42] demonstrates that U.S. Bank correctly represented the two-agency status of the DDA sold to TMT and the price paid by UCR for the DDA portfolios it purchased from U.S. Bank prior to September 2011. Because it paid for what it received, TMT cannot establish an unjust enrichment claim under Minnesota law. See ServiceMaster of St. Cloud v. GAB Bus., Servs., Inc., 544 N.W.2d 302, 306 \(Minn. 1996\).

Respondeat Superior and Civil Conspiracy (Counts 10 & 11)

In Counts 10 and 11 of the Second Amended Complaint, TMT asserts that Tate and vanBrandwijk's alleged misconduct with respect to DDA sales can be imputed to U.S. Bank under theories of respondeat superior and civil conspiracy. Neither of these claims can stand on their own, instead requiring underlying tort liability by U.S. Bank employees for U.S. Bank to be held liable under either theory. See Ayer v. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, & Pac. Ry. Co., 187 Minn. 169, 244 N.W. 681, 682 \(Minn. 1932\) (respondeat superior); Harding v. Ohio Cas. Ins. Co., 230 Minn. 327, 41 N.W.2d 818, 824-25 \(Minn. 1950\) (civil conspiracy). Because the Court grants summary judgment in favor of the U.S. Bank Defendants on all of TMT's underlying tort claims, the Court shall also grant summary judgment in favor of U.S. Bank on TMT's respondeat superior and civil conspiracy claims.

Punitive Damages (Count 12)

Finally, the Court considers TMT's claim for punitive damages set forth in Count 12 of the Second Amended Complaint. TMT [*43] bases this claim upon Tate's alleged conspiratorial and fraudulent acts with respect to DDA sales, contending that Tate's employment at U.S. Bank provided him with authority to establish policy and make planning-level decisions on U.S. Bank's behalf. (SAC ¶¶ 317 - 319.) It further claims that U.S. Bank, through Tate, "acted with deliberate disregard for the rights and safety of [TMT]," thus entitling TMT to an award of punitive damages. (Id. at ¶ 320.)

Punitive damages are "allowed in civil actions only upon clear and convincing evidence that the acts of the defendant show deliberate disregard for the rights or safety of others." Minn.Stat. § 549.20, subd. 1\(a\). The statute further provides that:

(b) A defendant has acted with deliberate disregard for the rights or safety of others if the defendant has knowledge of facts or intentionally disregards facts that create a high probability of injury to the rights or safety of others and:

(1) deliberately proceeds to act in conscious or intentional disregard of the high degree of probability of injury to the rights or safety of others; or

(2) deliberately proceeds to act with indifference to the high probability of injury to the rights or safety of others.

Id. at subd. 1(b). [*44] "Punitive damages are intended to punish a defendant, or to make an example of a defendant's wrongdoing, and not to compensate the plaintiff who has already been compensated. As a consequence, punitive damages may only be awarded when a defendant's conduct reaches a threshold level of culpability." Ulrich v. City of Crosby, 848 F.Supp. 861, 867 (D. Minn. 1994) (internal citations omitted). Because the Court grants summary judgment in favor of the U.S. Bank Defendants on all of TMT's underlying tort and breach of contract claims, the Court shall also grant summary judgment in favor of U.S. Bank on TMT's punitive damages claim as well.

M.M.S.

---

End of Document

Sergeants Benevolent Ass'n Health & Welfare Fund v. Actavis, PLC

United States District Court for the Southern District of New York

December 26, 2018, Decided; December 26, 2018, Filed

15 Civ. 6549 (CM)

Reporter

2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 220574 *

SERGEANTS BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION HEALTH & WELFARE FUND, individually and on behalf of itself and all others similarly situated, Plaintiff, -against- ACTAVIS, PLC, and FOREST LABORATORIES, LLC, MERZ PHARMA GMBH & CO. KGAA, MERZ GMBH & CO. KGAA, MERZ PHARMACEUTICALS GMBH, AMNEAL PHARMACEUTICALS, LLC, TEVA PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRIES, LTD., BARR PHARMACEUTICALS, INC., COBALT LABORATORIES, INC., UPSHER-SMITH LABORATORIES, INC., WOCKHARDT LIMITED, WOCKHARDT USA LLC, SUN PHARMACEUTICALS INDUSTRIES, LTD., DR. REDDY'S LABORATORIES LTD., AND DR. REDDY'S LABORATORIES INC., Defendants.

Subsequent History: Motion denied by *In re Namenda Indirect Purchaser Antitrust Litig., 2020 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 247078, 2021 WL 100489 \(S.D.N.Y., Dec. 18, 2020\)*

Prior History: *Sergeants Benevolent Ass'n Health & Welfare Fund v. Actavis, PLC, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349 \(S.D.N.Y., Sept. 13, 2016\)*

Core Terms

---

unjust enrichment, Generic, motion to dismiss, Defendants', antitrust, purchasers, alleges, consumer, monopolization, consumer protection, Suppl, indirect, cases, courts, settlement agreement, deceptive, patent, manufacturer, switch, unfair, direct benefit, class action, cause of action, state law, FDA, state law claim, brand, anticompetitive, conspiracy to monopolize, anti trust law

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Antitrust & Trade Law > Procedural Matters

HN1 Antitrust & Trade Law, Procedural Matters

Indirect purchasers of products sold at supra-competitive prices may bring suit under state antitrust laws, if a state permits such claims.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > Predatory Pricing

HN2 Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices, Predatory Pricing

A product hop raises antitrust scrutiny when it coerces consumers and impedes competition.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN3 Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

In deciding a motion to dismiss pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\), a court must liberally construe all claims, accept all factual allegations in the complaint as true, and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff. To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. A motion to dismiss must be supported by information contained in the four corners of the complaint. This principally includes facts alleged in the complaint and materials attached to or incorporated by reference into the complaint. It also includes information of which the court takes judicial notice.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

HN4 Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

Product redesign is anticompetitive when it coerces consumers and impedes competition. While withdrawing an old product and substituting a new product does not constitute anticompetitive conduct per se, when a monopolist combines product withdrawal with some other conduct, the overall effect of which is to coerce consumers rather than persuade them on the merits, and to impede competition, its actions are anticompetitive.

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > Collateral Estoppel

HN5 Estoppel, Collateral Estoppel

Collateral estoppel, or issue preclusion, prevents the relitigation of an issue that was raised, litigated, and actually decided by a judgment in a prior proceeding. In order to establish that an issue was determined in a former adjudication, a party asserting collateral estoppel must establish four things: (1) the issues in the prior proceeding and the current proceeding are identical; (2) the issue raised in the current action was in fact actually decided in the prior proceeding; (3) there was full and fair opportunity to litigate the issue in the prior proceeding; and (4) the issue previously litigated and decided was necessary to support a valid and final judgment on the merits.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

HN6 Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

When a patent holder provides favorable terms to an alleged infringer as part of a settlement agreement, this is called a reverse payment. A reverse payment, where large and unjustified, can bring with it the risk of significant anticompetitive effects. Reverse payments comprised of cash, nominally conferred as compensation for avoided litigation costs, are most suspect, but reverse payments may also provide value in the form of early entry licenses, a period of exclusivity, or cash for avoided litigation costs.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

HN7 Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

All benefits conferred as part of a settlement agreement are subject to antitrust review under the Rule of Reason. Regarding cash payments for avoided litigation costs, courts must compare a given payment to estimated future litigation costs and consider whether a payment reflects traditional settlement considerations, such as avoided litigation costs or fair value for services' to determine if it was justified. These intrinsically fact-based determinations cannot be made on a pre-answer motion to dismiss.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

HN8 Complaints, Requirements for Complaint

Courts do not require that the plaintiffs provide precise figures and calculations at the pleading stage because very precise and particularized estimates of fair value and anticipated litigation costs may require evidence in the exclusive possession of the defendants, as well as expert analysis.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Procedural Matters

HN9 Antitrust & Trade Law, Procedural Matters

The Florida Antitrust Act does not permit indirect purchaser recovery. Florida adheres to the direct purchaser rule enunciated in Illinois Brick.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Procedural Matters

HN10 Antitrust & Trade Law, Procedural Matters

Because the Massachusetts Antitrust Act is to be construed in harmony with judicial interpretations of comparable Federal antitrust statutes, the rule of law established in Illinois Brick would apply with equal force to preclude claims brought under Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 93 by indirect purchasers in Massachusetts.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Procedural Matters

HN11 Antitrust & Trade Law, Procedural Matters

The Supreme Court of Puerto Rico has interpreted the private damages section of the Puerto Rico Antitrust Act (PRAA), 10 P.R. Laws §§ 263, et seq., to hold that private remedies were available to any plaintiff who met the following conditions: (1) the person was harmed in his business or property (2) by reason of (3) actions prohibited by law. In order to satisfy this second prong, a plaintiff need only allege that as a consequence of the legal violation, he has been injured. Because Puerto Rico liberally construes its standing requirements in private antitrust cases, it is immaterial whether plaintiffs are direct or indirect purchasers.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Procedural Matters

HN12[] Antitrust & Trade Law, Procedural Matters

The majority of courts that have been presented with Utah Code § 76-10-3109 require at least one Utah citizen or resident be a named plaintiff.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Procedural Matters

Civil Procedure > Special Proceedings > Class Actions > Certification of Classes

HN13[] Antitrust & Trade Law, Procedural Matters

Hawaii's limitation on class actions is a state law that restricts the types of claims eligible for class treatment beyond the limits established by Fed. R. Civ. P. 23. It thus conflicts with the federal rule. Therefore, the Hawaii Antitrust Act's notice provision would yield to Rule 23.

Civil Procedure > Special Proceedings > Class Actions > Certification of Classes

HN14[] Class Actions, Certification of Classes

Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 is not silent on the question of whether a particular claim is eligible for class treatment. Rule 23 contains its own limitations on those claims eligible for class treatment; therefore, a state law that restricts the types of claims eligible for class treatment beyond the limits established by Rule 23 conflicts with the federal rule.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > Claims

HN15[] Actual Monopolization, Claims

In Kansas holds that an indirect purchaser plaintiff may not proceed on a theory of monopolization unless accompanied by allegations of conspiracy.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > Claims

HN16[] Actual Monopolization, Claims

The Donnelly Act prohibits every contract, agreement, arrangement or combination that establishes a monopoly or restrains competition. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 340\(1\). The term arrangement must be interpreted as contemplating a reciprocal relationship of commitment between two or more legal or economic entities similar to but not embraced within the more exacting terms, contract, combination or conspiracy. An antitrust claim under the Donnelly Act must allege both concerted action by two or more entities and a consequent restraint of trade within an identified relevant product market. In other words, a plaintiff must allege concerted action to bring a claim under the Donnelly Act. There is no requirement that a plaintiff use the word conspiracy in order to state a claim.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > Claims

HN17 [blue document icon] Actual Monopolization, Claims

The Tennessee Trade Practices Act (TTPA) declares unlawful all arrangements, contracts, agreements, trusts, or combinations between persons or corporations made with a view to lessen, or which tend to lessen, full and free competition, as well as those designed, or which tend to control prices. Tenn. Code. § 47-25-101. The Supreme Court of Tennessee interprets the TPPA broadly. Its broad and comprehensive provisions cover every conceivable case of an agreement or contract made to lessen or destroy competition and control prices.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Procedural Matters

HN18 [blue document icon] Antitrust & Trade Law, Procedural Matters

The Illinois Antitrust Act (IAA), 740 Ill. Comp. Stat. 10/3, et seq., states a procedural rule applicable in Illinois state courts, rather than a substantive rule applicable to federal courts sitting in diversity jurisdiction in New York.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Procedural Matters

HN19 [blue document icon] Antitrust & Trade Law, Procedural Matters

An indirect purchaser plaintiff (IPP) is not required to identify the particular sections of the code under which antitrust claims are brought, as long as defendants are on notice of the theory plaintiffs are pursuing.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN20 [blue document icon] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

For purposes of the California Unfair Competition Law (CUCL), unfair practices include, among other things, any unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business act or practice. Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. Because the prohibitions on unlawful, unfair or fraudulent practices are written in the disjunctive, each of those prongs gives rise to a separate and distinct theory of liability.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN21 [blue document icon] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

Cal. Bus & Prof. Code § 17209, by its terms, applies only to appellate proceedings in state court.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN22 [blue document icon] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

The D.C. Consumer Protection and Procedures Act (DCCPPA) was designed to police trade practices arising only out of consumer-merchant relationships, and does not apply to commercial dealings outside the consumer sphere. The CCPA does not protect merchants in their commercial dealings with suppliers or other merchants. The relevant question is whether the plaintiffs activity is akin to that of a merchant. Transactions along the distribution chain that do not involve the ultimate retail customer are not consumer transactions that the DCCPPA seeks to reach. Rather, it is the ultimate retail transaction between the final distributor and the individual member of the consuming public that the DCCPPA covers.

Healthcare Law > Managed Healthcare

HN23 [+] Healthcare Law, Managed Healthcare

When a health insurance plan makes a purchase, it does so, not for personal purposes, but for the plan's business purposes, i.e., to fulfill its side of a contractual relationship with its members, who pay premiums for its coverage.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN24 [+] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

Most of the conducted enumerated in the Idaho Consumer Protection Act (ICPA) focuses on deceptive, fraudulent, or misleading practices. Idaho Code § 48-603. Nonetheless, there is no firm requirement that a plaintiff show deception since. Plaintiffs may state a claim for anticompetitive conduct, even if that conduct is not deceptive, under this prong of the ICPA. The ICPA must be liberally construed to effect the legislative intent to deter deceptive or unfair trade practices and to provide relief for consumers exposed to proscribed practices.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

HN25 [+] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

A plaintiff may allege that conduct is unfair under the Illinois Consumer Fraud Act without alleging that the conduct is deceptive. A deceptive practices claim must meet Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\)'s heightened pleading standard, while an unfair practices claim need not because it is not based on fraud.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN26 [+] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

The Kansas Consumer Protection Act (KCPA) is intended to protect consumers from suppliers who commit deceptive and unconscionable practices. Kan. Stat. § 50-623. In order to render a contract between the parties unconscionable, there must be some element of deceptive bargaining conduct present as well as unequal bargaining power.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN27 [+] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

Both class actions and indirect purchaser actions are permitted under Massachusetts' consumer protection law.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN28[] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

The pre-suit notice provisions of Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 93A do not apply if the prospective respondent does not maintain a place of business or does not keep assets within the commonwealth.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN29[] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

The Michigan Consumer Protection Act (MCPA) is broader than common law torts of fraud inasmuch as it prohibits not only deceptive business practices but also those which are unfair and unconscionable.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN30[] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

The Michigan Consumer Protection Act (MCPA) enables injured persons to bring a class action caused by a method, act, or practice in trade or commerce declared by a circuit court of appeals or the supreme court of the United States to be an unfair or deceptive act or practice within the meaning of section 5(a)(1) of the Federal Trade Commission Act. Mich. Comp. Laws § 445.911\(3\)\(c\). Moreover, federal courts have sustained causes of action under the MCPA for antitrust conduct.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN31[] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

The Montana Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act (MUTCPA) enables a consumer to bring an action for damages, Mont. Code § 30-14-133\(1\), and defines consumer as a person who purchases or leases goods, services, real property, or information primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, Mont. Code § 30-14-102\(1\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN32[] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

The Nevada Deceptive Trade Practices Act (NDTPA) enumerates deceptive trade practices at Nev. Rev. Stat. §§ 598.015 through 598.025. Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.0923 makes it a violation to knowingly violate a state or federal statute or regulation relating to the sale or lease of goods or services. Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.0923\(3\). A plaintiff can state a claim under this section of the NDTPA where the claims were predicated on allegations of anticompetitive conduct, which are considered prohibited acts under Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598A.060.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN33[] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

Nev. Rev. Stat. § 41.600 operates to provide a right of action to any person who is a victim of consumer fraud. The statute defines consumer fraud to encompass acts that violate the Nevada Deceptive Trade Practices Act (NDTPA). Nev. Rev. Stat. § 41.600\(2\)\(e\). "Person," as used in Nev. Rev. Stat. § 41.600, can include a corporate competitor, which indicates that private relief under the statute is not restricted to elderly or disabled persons. The fact that the law makes special provision for the elderly and disabled does not mean that private relief under the statute is not restricted to elderly or disabled persons.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN34 Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

Sales of the offending goods into New Hampshire alleges sufficient intrastate conduct to satisfy the New Hampshire Consumer Protection Act.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN35 Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

In addition to deceptive conduct, the New Mexico Unfair Practices Act (NMUPA) also makes unlawful unconscionable trade practices, which include those that result in a gross disparity between the value received by a person and the price paid. N.M. Stat. § 57-12-2\(E\)\(2\). A plaintiff need not allege consumer deception.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN36 Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 349 does not contain an unfair or unconscionable practices prong, and therefore a plaintiff must plead consumer fraud or deception in order to bring a claim. In addition, while antitrust conduct is actionable under § 349, plaintiffs still must allege deception to state a claim.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN37 Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

Consumers injured by anticompetitive conduct have an exclusive remedy under the state antitrust statute, the Tennessee Trade Practices Act.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN38 Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

The Utah Consumer Sales Practices Act expressly allows a plaintiff to plead unconscionable conduct as the basis of its claim, and this does not require a showing of fraud or deception. Utah Code § 13-11-5. The list of deceptive practices in the statute is not exclusive, by its own terms. Utah Code § 13-11-4\(2\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN39 [blue icon] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

The Utah Consumer Sales Practices Act contemplates sales made both to and apparently to a person for personal, family, or household purposes. Utah Code § 13-11-3\(2\)\(a\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN40 [blue icon] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

Class plaintiffs proceeding under the Utah Consumer Sales Practices Act must allege that the specific action was declared unlawful pursuant to an administrative rule, a court order, or (in limited cases) a consent judgment before the consumer transactions on which the action was based occurred.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN41 [blue icon] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

The language of the Vermont Consumer Protection Act clearly restricts the term consumer to end users of the product.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN42 [blue icon] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

The state court remedy for noncompliance with the pre-filing notice requirement of the West Virginia Consumer Credit and Protection Act appears to be dismissal of the claim.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

HN43 [blue icon] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

Under the West Virginia Consumer Credit and Protection Act, a cure offer, where accepted, tolls the applicable statute of limitations for the period the effectuation of the cure offer is being performed. W. Va. Code § 46A-6-106\(e\). Moreover, where the accepted cure offer is performed, it constitutes a complete defense to the action. § 46A-6-106\(h\). And, if a defendant accepts and performs a cure offer, and a plaintiff brings suit anyway, the defendant is entitled to attorneys' fees and costs for defending the action. In other words, the cure offer creates substantive defenses and additional remedies under state law.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN44 [blue icon] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

The elements of unjust enrichment are as follows: (1) plaintiff conferred a benefit upon the defendant, who had knowledge of the benefit; (2) the defendant accepted and retained the conferred benefit; and (3) under the circumstances, it would be inequitable for the defendant to retain the benefit without paying for it.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN45 [L] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

Unjust enrichment takes at least two forms: autonomous and parasitic. Parasitic claims are where the unjust enrichment is based upon a predicate wrong, such as a tort, breach of contract or other wrongful conduct such as an antitrust violation. Conversely, unjust enrichment may provide an independent ground for restitution, and this is known as autonomous restitution.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Procedural Matters

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN46 [L] Antitrust & Trade Law, Procedural Matters

Indirect purchasers may not allege autonomous unjust enrichment claims if that state follows Illinois Brick as to standing in antitrust claims.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN47 [L] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

At the pleading stage, the parties moving to dismiss bear the burden of arguing that a state does not recognize an autonomous cause of action for unjust enrichment. In the alternative, the party moving to dismiss may argue that the policy reasons barring recovery under the predicate statutes are strong enough to require dismissing any autonomous unjust enrichment claim in that state.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN48 [L] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

The essence of the theories of unjust enrichment or money had and received is that a plaintiff can prove facts showing that defendant holds money which, in equity and good conscience, belongs to plaintiff or holds money which was improperly paid to defendant because of mistake or fraud.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection

HN49 [L] Antitrust & Trade Law, Consumer Protection

It is a foundational principle of antitrust law that overcharges are passed along the distribution chain to consumers.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN50 [+] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

Arizona unjust enrichment law does not require that the plaintiff confer any benefit directly on the defendant.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN51 [+] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

In California, when a plaintiff alleges unjust enrichment, a court may construe the cause of action as a quasi-contract claim seeking restitution.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN52 [+] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

Florida courts have confirmed that recovery under quasi-contract is available even where the parties had no dealings at all with each other.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN53 [+] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

Illinois appears to recognize an independent cause of action for unjust enrichment. To state a cause of action based on a theory of unjust enrichment, a plaintiff must allege that the defendant has unjustly retained a benefit to the plaintiff's detriment, and that defendant's retention of the benefit violates the fundamental principles of justice, equity, and good conscience. A plaintiff in Illinois is likewise not required to allege privity or allege a direct benefit.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN54 [+] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

Kansas does not require privity for an unjust enrichment claim. Recovery under quasi-contract or unjust enrichment is not prohibited simply because the subcontractor and the owner of the property are not in privity. This conclusion is consistent with the theory of quasi-contract and unjust enrichment, which does not depend on privity.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN55 [+] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

Michigan law strictly grounds a claim for unjust enrichment in quasi-contract.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN56 [blue document icon] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

The doctrine of unjust enrichment or recovery in quasi-contract applies to situations where there is no legal contract but where the person sought to be charged is in possession of money or property which in good conscience and justice he should not retain but should deliver to another.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN57 [blue document icon] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

A plaintiff need not be in privity with the defendant to state a claim for unjust enrichment. The New York Court of Appeals has announced a rule that the relationship between the parties may not be too attenuated in a claim for unjust enrichment.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN58 [blue document icon] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

An unjust enrichment plaintiff must plead some relationship between the parties that could have caused reliance or inducement and the relationship cannot be too attenuated.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN59 [blue document icon] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

The North Carolina Supreme Court has defined the elements of an unjust enrichment claim without reference to a direct benefit: In order to establish a claim for unjust enrichment, a party must have conferred a benefit on the other party. The benefit must not have been conferred officially, that is it must not be conferred by an interference in the affairs of the other party in a manner that is not justified in the circumstances. The benefit must not be gratuitous and it must be measurable. An indirect benefit can support an unjust enrichment claim.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN60 [blue document icon] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

North Dakota courts have upheld unjust enrichment claims even where no direct benefit was alleged.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN61 [blue document icon] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

In Rhode Island, there are three elements of unjust enrichment. First, a benefit must be conferred upon the defendant by the plaintiff. Second, there must be an appreciation by the defendant of such benefit. Finally, there must be an acceptance of such benefit under such circumstances that it would be inequitable for him to retain the benefit without paying the value thereof. None of these elements requires conferral of a direct benefit.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN62 [+] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

The most significant requirement for a recovery on quasi contract is that the enrichment to the defendant be unjust. The Rhode Island courts have not stated clearly that an action for unjust enrichment requires that the plaintiff have conferred a benefit on the defendant directly.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN63 [+] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

Utah law does not require a direct benefit for a claim of unjust enrichment.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN64 [+] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

The Supreme Court of Wyoming described the elements of unjust enrichment as follows: (1) Valuable services were rendered, or materials furnished, (2) to the party to be charged, (3) which services or materials were accepted, used and enjoyed by the party, and, (4) under such circumstances which reasonably notified the party to be charged that the plaintiff, in rendering such services or furnishing such materials, expected to be paid by the party to be charged. Without such payment, the party would be unjustly enriched. A plaintiff seeking to recover under a theory of unjust enrichment under Wyoming law must allege a direct benefit.

Counsel: [*1] For Sergeants Benevolent Association Health & Welfare Fund Individually and on behalf of itself and all others similarly situated, Plaintiff: Elizabeth S Metcalf, Safirstein Metcalf LLP, New York, NY.

For Actavis, Plc, Forest Laboratories, Llc, Merz Gmbh & Co. Kgaa., Merz Pharmaceuticals Gmbh, Merz Pharma Gmbh & Co. Kgaa, Defendants: Heather McDevitt, Kristen O'Shaughnessy, Martin Michael Toto, LEAD ATTORNEYS, White & Case LLP (NY), New York, NY USA; Jack Pace, William Harold Bave, III, White & Case LLP (NY), New York, NY USA; John Mark Gidley, White & Case LLP (DC), Washington, DC USA; Kevin Charles Adam, White & Case LLP, Boston, MA USA; Peter J. Carney, White & Case LLP, New York, NY USA.

For Merz Pharmaceuticals Gmbh & Co. Kgaa, Defendant: Martin Michael Toto, White & Case LLP (NY), New York, NY USA.

For Amneal Pharmaceuticals, Llc, Defendant: Jay Philip Lefkowitz, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kirkland & Ellis LLP (NYC), New York, NY USA; Alexandra Corbett Strang, Devora Whitman Allon, Steven James Menashi Kirkland & Ellis LLP (NYC), New York, NY USA; Kyla A. Jackson, PRO HAC VICE, Kirkland & Ellis LLP (NYC), New York, NY USA.

For Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc., Barr Pharmaceuticals, Inc., Teva [*2] Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd, Defendants: Christopher T. Holding, PRO HAC VICE, Goodwin Procter, LLP (Boston), Boston, MA USA; Sarah K. Frederick, Goodwin Procter, LLP (Boston), Boston, MA USA.

For Cobalt Laboratories, Inc., Defendant: Christopher T. Holding, Sarah K. Frederick, LEAD ATTORNEYS, PRO HAC VICE, Goodwin Procter, LLP (Boston), Boston, MA USA; Jack Pace, White & Case LLP (NY), New York, NY USA; Peter J. Carney, White & Case LLP, New York, NY USA.

For Upsher-Smith Laboratories, Inc., Defendant: Jay Philip Lefkowitz, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kirkland & Ellis LLP (NYC), New York, NY USA; Alexandra Corbett Strang, Devora Whitman Allon, Kirkland & Ellis LLP (NYC), New York, NY USA; Kyla A. Jackson, PRO HAC VICE, Kirkland & Ellis LLP (NYC), New York, NY USA; Steven James Menashi, Kirkland & Ellis LLP (NYC), New York, NY USA.

For Wockhardt Limited, Wockhardt USA LLC, Defendants: Damon William Suden, William Alfred Escobar, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Kelley Drye & Warren, LLP (NY), New York, NY USA.

For Dr. Reddy's Laboratories Ltd., Dr. Reddy's Laboratories, Inc., Defendants: Eric Peter Stephens, Jones Day (NYC), New York, NY USA; Jonathan Bruce Berman, PRO HAC VICE, Jones Day (DC), Washington, DC USA. [*3]

For Sun Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd., Defendant: Jay Philip Lefkowitz, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kirkland & Ellis LLP (NYC), New York, NY USA; Alexandra Corbett Strang, Devora Whitman Allon, Kirkland & Ellis LLP (NYC), New York, NY USA; Steven James Menashi, Kirkland & Ellis LLP (NYC), New York, NY USA.

For Sun Pharmaceuticals Industries, Ltd., Defendant: Kyla A. Jackson, PRO HAC VICE, Kirkland & Ellis LLP (NYC), New York, NY USA.

Judges: Colleen McMahon, Chief United States District Judge.

Opinion by: Colleen McMahon

Opinion

---

ORDER

McMahon, C.J.:

The Complaint in this action, which was filed following an earlier civil enforcement action by the New York Attorney General, alleges a two-part scheme to prolong the monopoly of Defendant Forest Laboratories, LLC ("Forest"), over the blockbuster Alzheimer's drug memantine hydrochloride, or Namenda®. According to the Complaint, Forest and its patent licensor Merz<sup>1</sup> first entered into agreements with generic manufacturers to stay out of the market until the exclusivity period for Forest's existing, twice-a-day Namenda IR formulation had nearly expired ("pay for delay"). With this maneuver, Forest bought itself time to gain regulatory approval for a new, once-a-day Namenda XR formulation [*4] and to pull from the market the old, twice-a-day Namenda IR formulation (the "product hop" or "hard switch"). Although a preliminary injunction prevented Forest from withdrawing the old formulation, a successful switch would have effectively forestalled generic competition until the year 2029.

HN1 [↑] Under the United States Supreme Court's decision in Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720, 745-46, 97 S. Ct. 2061, 52 L. Ed. 2d 707 (1977), indirect purchasers of products sold at supra-competitive prices lack standing to sue under federal antitrust statutes. However, under its later decision in California v. ARC Am. Corp., 490 U.S. 93, 105-06, 109 S. Ct. 1661, 104 L. Ed. 2d 86 (1989), indirect purchasers may still bring suit under state antitrust laws, if a state permits such claims. Therefore, it is common in private antitrust litigation for two groups of purchasers, direct and indirect, to file separate cases arising out of the same nucleus of operative fact, but to allege different causes of action—direct purchasers under federal law and indirect purchasers under state laws.

That is precisely what happened here. In a parallel "direct purchaser" case, drug wholesaler plaintiffs, which bought Namenda directly from Forest, brought a suit alleging five counts under the federal antitrust laws against Forest, Merz, and Forest's parent company Actavis, plc ("Actavis"). [*5] That case, captioned In re Namenda Direct Purchaser Antitrust Litigation, No. 15-cv-7488 (S.D.N.Y.), is currently pending before this Court. I refer to the drug wholesaler plaintiffs in that case as the Direct Purchaser Plaintiffs, or "DPPs," and I refer to that case as the "DP Action."

---

<sup>1</sup> "Merz" refers to three entities, all named as Defendants in the Complaint: Merz GmbH & Co. KGaA, Merz Pharma GmbH & Co. KGaA, and Merz Pharmaceuticals GmbH.

In the instant case, employee health plan Sergeants Benevolent Association Health & Welfare Fund, which purchased Namenda indirectly, separately brought a suit alleging 123 Claims under state antitrust, consumer protection, and restitution laws.<sup>2</sup> This case, captioned Sergeants Benevolent Association Health & Welfare Fund v. Actavis, plc, No. 15-cv-6549 (S.D.N.Y.), names Actavis, Forest, Merz, and eight generic drug manufacturers<sup>3</sup> (the "Generic Defendants"), which were not named in the DP Action. I refer to the Plaintiff here, Sergeants Benevolent Association Health & Welfare Fund, as the Indirect Purchaser Plaintiff, or "IPP," and I refer to this case as the "IP Action."

The complaints in the DP and IP Actions were filed around the same time. The parties, with the exception of Merz, sought consolidated briefing on motions to dismiss, (Dkt No. 63), which was granted, (Dkt. No. 64). Merz eventually joined [*6] the consolidated briefing. (See, e.g., Dkt. No. 85.)

Ruling on the motions to dismiss both the DPPs' and IPP's complaints, this Court held that most of the federal antitrust counts in the DPPs' complaint survived. *Sergeants Benevolent Association Health & Welfare Fund v. Actavis, PLC, Nos. 15-cv-6549, 15-cv-7488, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at *16-*17 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 13, 2016)*. In the interest of efficiently resolving common factual and legal issues, it then denied without prejudice the motions to dismiss the IPP complaint, and placed all 123 state law claims on its suspense calendar while the federal antitrust claims in the DP Action were pending. *2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, [WL] at *17*.

The DP Action proceeded through class certification and denial of Defendants' motion for summary judgment before the parties expressed interest in mediation. (See Dkt. No. 122.)<sup>4</sup> However, it was determined that mediation would be successful only if the IP Action came off of the suspense calendar and the IPP came back into the proceedings. (Id.)

As a result, the IPP's 123 state law claims are presently before the Court on separate motions to dismiss by (1) Actavis, Forest, and Merz and (2) the Generic Defendants. The parties have also [*7] recently submitted supplemental briefing. (See Dkt. Nos. 129-33, 146, 149-56.)

For the reasons below, the motions to dismiss the IP Action are GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART.

Table of Contents

Table of Contents

- I. Overview of Claims and Jurisdiction
- II. Factual Background
  - A. The Parties
  - B. The Regulatory Scheme
  - C. Drug Substitution Laws and Product Hopping
  - D. The Namenda Settlement Agreements
  - E. The "Hard Switch"

<sup>2</sup>The IPP's Complaint includes four counts, with dozens of state law claims under each count. I recognize that plaintiffs will sometimes style their complaints this way. Frankly, however, each of these state law claims should be its own cause of action, such that the IPP Complaint would properly contain 123 separate counts.

<sup>3</sup>These are: Barr Pharmaceuticals, Inc. ("Barr"); Teva Pharmaceuticals Industries, Ltd. and Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc. (jointly, "Teva"); Cobalt Laboratories, Inc. ("Cobalt"); Upsher-Smith Laboratories, Inc. ("UPher-Smith"); Amneal Pharmaceuticals, LLC ("Amneal"); Wockhardt Lmuted and Wockhardt USA LLC (jointly, "Wokhardt"); Sun India Pharmaceuticals Industries, Ltd. ("Sun"); and Dr. Reddy's Laboratories Ltd. and/or Dr. Reddy's Laboratories, Inc. (jointly, "Dr. Reddy's").

<sup>4</sup> Unless otherwise noted, all references herein are to the docket in Sergeants Benevolent Association Health & Welfare Fund v. Actavis, plc, No. 15-CV-6549 (S.D.N.Y.).

III. Procedural History

IV. Standard of Review

V. Count One: Monopolization Under the Laws of 27 States Against Actavis, Forest, and Merz

A. The IPP's Underlying Factual Allegations State a Claim for Monopolization

1. The IPP Has Stated a Claim for Monopolization Based on the Hard Switch from Namenda IR to Namenda XR

2. The IPP States a Claim for Monopolization Based on the Settlement Agreements

3. The Court's Earlier Ruling Regarding the DPPs' Overarching Scheme Claim Does Not Support Dismissing Count One

4. The Statute of Limitations Argument Is Inadequately Briefed With Respect to the IP Action

B. The IPP States a Claim for Monopolization Under the Laws of Some States But Not Others

1. The IPP Has Article III Standing To Bring State Law Monopolization Claims on Behalf of Class Members Who Made [*8] Purchases in Those States

2. The IPP Fails to State a Claim for Monopolization in Three States That Follow Illinois Brick (Florida, Massachusetts, and Utah)

3. The IPP's Failure To Satisfy Pre-Suit Notification Requirements Does Not Warrant Dismissal of the Claims in Three States (Hawaii, Arizona, and Nevada)

4. The IPP Fails To State a Claim for Monopolization Under the Law of Kansas

C. In Conclusion, the IPP Has Stated A Claim for Monopolization Under Count One With Respect to the Laws of 23 States

VI. Count Two: Conspiracy To Monopolize Under the Laws of 27 States Against Actavis, Forest, Merz, and the Generic Defendants

A. The IPP States a Claim for Conspiracy To Monopolize

B. Illinois

C. Oregon

D. In Conclusion, the IPP Has Stated a Claim for Conspiracy to Monopolize Under Count Two With Respect to the Laws of 25 States

VII. Count Three: Consumer Protection and Unfair and Deceptive Trade Practices Under the Laws of 25 States Against Actavis, Forest, Merz, and the Generic Defendants

A. The IPP Adequately Pleads Its State Law Claims Under Twombly and Iqbal

B. The IPP Is Not Required to Plead Its Complaint in Accordance With Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b)

C. Illinois Brick Does Not Bar the [PP's Consumer [*9] Protection Claims

D. The IPP States a Claim Under the Consumer Protection Laws of Some States But Not Others

1. Alabama
2. Arizona
3. California
4. District of Columbia
5. Florida
6. Hawaii
7. Idaho
8. Illinois
9. Kansas
10. Maine
11. Massachusetts
12. Michigan
13. Missouri
14. Montana
15. Nebraska
16. Nevada
17. New Hampshire
18. New Mexico
19. New York
20. North Carolina
21. Rhode Island
22. Tennessee
23. Utah
24. Vermont
25. West Virginia

E. In Conclusion, the IPP Has Stated a Claim for Violation of State Consumer Protection Laws Under Count Three Under the Laws of 14 States

VIII. Count Four: Unjust Enrichment Under the Laws of 44 States

Against Actavis, Forest, Merz, and the Generic Defendants

A. Count Four Does Not State a Claim With Respect to the Generic Defendants Under the Laws of Any State

B. The Unjust Enrichment Claims Under the Laws of Ten States Are Barred By Illinois Brick (Alaska, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Montana, New Jersey, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Virginia, and Washington)

C. Autonomous Unjust Enrichment Claims in States That Do Not Follow Illinois Brick Survive (Arkansas and Wyoming)

D. The IPP States a Claim for Unjust Enrichment Under the Laws of Some States But Not Others

1. Alabama
2. Arizona [*10]
3. California

4. District of Columbia
  5. Florida
  6. Idaho
  7. Illinois
  8. Kansas
  9. Maine
  10. Massachusetts
  11. Michigan
  12. Mississippi
  13. New York
  14. North Carolina
  15. North Dakota
  16. Rhode Island
  17. Tennessee
  18. Utah
  19. Washington
  20. West Virginia and Wisconsin
  21. Wyoming
- E. In Conclusion, the IPP Has Stated a Claim for Unjust Enrichment Under Count Four With Respect to Actavis, Forest, and Merz Under the Laws of 31 States
- IX. Conclusion

BACKGROUND

I. Overview of Claims and Jurisdiction

This case, Sergeants Benevolent Association Health & Welfare Fund v. Actavis, No. 15-cv-6549 (S.D.N.Y.) (the "IP Action"), proceeds in parallel with the factually similar case, In re Namenda Direct Purchaser Antitrust Litigation, No. 15-cv-7488 (S.D.N.Y.) (the "DP Action").

Although this Court accepted these two cases on its docket as related cases pursuant to Local Rule 13, (see 15-cv-7488, entry of Oct. 6, 2015), and although this Court granted certain Defendants' motion for consolidated briefing on the motions to dismiss pursuant to its individual rules, (15-CV-6549, Dkt. No. 64), it never consolidated the cases under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 42\(a\), nor joined the claims and parties under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 18 and 19, respectively.

As a result, the IP Action proceeds as an entirely [*11] separate action composed solely of state law claims. The complaint in the IP Action alleges a total of 123 state law claims, under the law of 44 states, aggregated as four "counts": (1) monopolization (27 state law claims); (2) conspiracy to monopolize (27 state law claims); (3) violation of consumer protection and unfair and deceptive trade practices statutes (25 state law claims); and (4) unjust enrichment (44 state law claims).

Since not a single federal interest is implicated in the IP Action, the Court exercises jurisdiction over these 123 state law claims pursuant to the Class Action Fairness Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1332\(d\) ("CAFA"). CAFA's prerequisites are met. The IPP's Consolidated Amended Complaint ("CAC") alleges that the aggregate amount in controversy exceeds

$5,000,000.00. (CAC ¶ 31.) In addition, the IPP, a New York trust, is diverse from several of the Defendants, including Actavis, Merz, and the majority of the Generic Defendants. (CAC ¶ 15-29.)

II. Factual Background

The factual nucleus from which the IP Action arises has been described exhaustively in several published opinions, including those of Judge Sweet and the Second Circuit in the earlier civil enforcement action by the New York Attorney [*12] General, and those of this Court in the parallel DP Action.

The relevant opinions are; (i) New York v. Actavis, PLC, No. 14-cv-7473, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 172918, 2014 WL 7015198 \(S.D.N.Y. Dec. 11, 2014\) (Namenda I), in which the district court (Sweet, J.) preliminarily enjoined Actavis and Forest from withdrawing Namenda IR, the twice-a-day or "immediate release" formulation, from the market; (ii) Schneiderman ex rel. New York v. Actavis PLC, 787 F.3d 638 \(2d Cir. 2015\) (Namenda II), in which the Second Circuit upheld the preliminary injunction granted in Namenda I; and (iii) three opinions from the private, follow-on litigation before this Court.

The first opinion, on which the Court granted consolidated briefing, denied Actavis, Forest, and Merz's motion to dismiss the DP Action; denied all Defendants' motions to dismiss the IP Action without prejudice; and placed the 123 state law claims in the IP Action on the Court's suspense calendar. Sergeants Benevolent Association Health & Welfare Fund v. Actavis, PLC, Nos. 15-cv-7488, 15-cv-6549, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690 \(S.D.N.Y. Sept. 13, 2016\) (Namenda III).

The second opinion of this Court granted in part and denied in part the DPPs' motion for collateral estoppel and partial summary judgment against Actavis and Forest, on the basis of facts established about the product hop in Namenda [*13] I and Namenda II. In re Namenda Direct Purchaser Antitrust Litig., No. 15-cv-7488, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83446, 2017 WL 4358244 \(S.D.N.Y. May 23, 2017\) (Namenda IV).

The third opinion denied Actavis's and Forest's post-discovery motion for summary judgment and granted the DPPs' motion for class certification. In re Namenda Direct Purchaser Antitrust Litig., 331 F. Supp. 3d 152 \(S.D.N.Y. 2018\) (Namenda V).

In light of the detailed factual history discussed in these opinions, the Court provides only an abridged summary of the relevant facts here.

A. The Parties

Defendant Forest Laboratories, LLC ("Forest") is a limited liability company incorporated in Delaware with offices in New York and New Jersey. Namenda III, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*2. It is wholly owned by Defendant Actavis, plc ("Actavis").<sup>5</sup> Id.; (CAC ¶ 16.) The IPP also describes Actavis as Forest's successor-in-interest. (See CAC ¶ 92.)

In 2000, Forest entered into a patent licensing and cooperation agreement with Merz GmbH & Co. KGaA, Merz Pharma GmbH & Co. KGaA, and Merz Pharmaceuticals GmbH (collectively, "Merz")<sup>6</sup> to develop a memantine hydrochloride-based drug for the treatment of moderate-to-severe forms of Alzheimer's disease. Namenda III, 2016

<sup>5</sup> Allergan plc was formerly known as Actavis, plc. (See In re Namenda Direct Purchaser Antitrust Litig., No 18-2421 (2d Cir.), Dkt. No. 1 at 2 (corporate disclosure statement).) This opinion uses "Actavis throughout to reflect the fact that the IPP has not moved for a substitution of parties in the IP Action.

<sup>6</sup> The DPPs subsequently dismissed all three Merz entities from the DP Action on April 20, 2017. (15-cv-7488, Dkt. No. 207.) They remain parties to the IP Action, however.

U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*2; Namenda IV, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83446, 2017 WL 4358244, at \*2.

The resulting drug was launched in 2004 as a twice-daily immediate release formula ("Namenda IR"), generating $1.5 billion in annual sales [*14] for Forest in 2012 and 2013. Namenda II, 787 F.3d at 646-47.

Defendants Barr Pharmaceuticals, Inc. ("Barr"); Teva Pharmaceuticals Industries, Ltd. and Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc. (jointly, "Teva"); Cobalt Laboratories, Inc. ("Cobalt"); Upsher-Smith Laboratories, Inc. ("Upsher-Smith"); Anmeal Pharmaceuticals, LLC ("Amneal"); Wockhardt Limited and Wockhardt USA LLC (jointly, "Wockhardt"); Sun India Pharmaceuticals Industries, Ltd. ("Sun"); and Dr. Reddy's Laboratories Ltd. and/or Dr. Reddy's Laboratories, Inc. (jointly, "Dr. Reddy's") (collectively, the "Generic Defendants" and, together with Actavis, Forest, and Merz, the "Defendants") each developed generic formulations of Namenda IR and sought approval from the FDA to take these generic formulations to market. Namenda III, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*2.

Plaintiff Sergeants Benevolent Association Health & Welfare Fund (the "IPP," or, where appropriate, the "Named Plaintiff") is a New York trust that provides prescription drug benefits for active and retired New York City Police Department sergeants and their dependents through its participant plans. Id.; (CAC ¶ 15). As a third-party payor of pharmaceutical claims for members of its plans, the IPP alleges that it was an indirect purchaser of branded Namenda [*15] IR during the relevant period. (CAC ¶ 15.) The IPP alleges that, beginning in April 14, 2010 and continuing through the present day (the "Class Period"), it indirectly purchased branded Namenda IR in 11 states<sup>7</sup> at prices higher than it would have otherwise paid absent Defendants' unlawful anticompetitive conduct. (Id. ¶¶ 15, 146)

The IPP also alleges that it purchased (i.e. paid for) branded Namenda XR indirectly during the Class Period, when it would otherwise have purchased low-cost, generic Namenda IR absent Defendants' unlawful competitive conduct. (Id. ¶ 202.)

B. The Regulatory Scheme

The Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act \("FDCA"\), 21 U.S.C. § 301 et seq., governs the manufacture, sale, and marketing of prescription pharmaceuticals in the United States. Namenda III, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*2. The FDCA requires a pharmaceutical company to submit a New Drug Application ("NDA") to the FDA before it can bring a new drug to market. Id.

The Drug Price Competition and Patent Term Restoration Act \(the "Hatch-Waxman Act"\), Pub. L. No. 98-417, 98 Stat. 1585, was enacted to serve the "dual purposes of incentivizing innovation," by rewarding brand-name drug manufacturers for bringing new therapies to market, and "lowering drug prices for consumers," by rewarding generic [*16] drug manufacturers who attempt to compete with costly branded drugs. [2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, \[WL\] at \*3.](#)

Rewards under the Hatch-Waxman Act take the form of granting an exclusive share of the prescription pharmaceutical market through one of two legal regimes: patents and exclusivities. See Frequently Asked Questions on Patents and Exclusivity, FDA (last updated May 2, 2018), <https://www.fda.gov/drugs/developmentapprovalprocess/ucm079031.htm> ("FAQs"). Patents are property interests granted by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office ("PTO"), while exclusivities are statutory protections granted by the Food and Drug Administration ("FDA"), See Namenda IV, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83446, 2017 WL 4358244, at \*3; see also FAQs at 1.

Patents. Manufacturers may claim patents for new drug compounds, drug products, and methods of use. See In re Actos End-Payor Antitrust Litig., 848 F.3d 89, 94 \(2d Cir. 2017\) (Actos II). Patents vary in duration but typically last for twenty years. See FAQs at 2. During the lifetime of the patent, brand manufacturers are provided a legal monopoly on their invention, which can enable favorable price-setting. Id. at 1.

---

<sup>7</sup> The IPP does not, however, bring claims under the laws of all 11 states. (Compare CAC ¶ 15 with CAC ¶¶ 201, 207, 215, 226.)

Patent protection is so valuable to pharmaceutical companies that entering the period following patent expiration is known as going off the "patent cliff." Namenda III, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*3. In 2012, patent cliffs collectively caused the entire U.S. pharmaceutical market to shrink [*17] by 1%. Eric Sagonowsky, Big Pharma faces $26.5B in losses this year as next big patent cliff looms, analyst says, FiercePharma, Apr. 21, 2017, <https://www.fiercepharma.com/pharma/big-pharma-faces-26-5b-patent-loss-threats-year-analyst-says>.

The Hatch-Waxman Act allows a brand-name drug manufacturer to extend any patent submitted as part of an NDA for an additional five years, to compensate for the time elapsed during the FDA's approval process. 35 U.S.C. § 156; Namenda III, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*3.

Exclusivity. Both the FFDCA and the Hatch-Waxman Act also provide for statutory periods of "marketing exclusivity" in connection with the approval of certain NDAs. Otsuka Pharm. Co., Ltd. v. Price, 869 F.3d 987, 988 \(D.C. Cir. 2017\); see also FAQs at 3. "When a drug earns a period of exclusivity, the Food and Drug Administration must withhold approval of certain competing drugs," including generics, "if various conditions are satisfied." Otsuka Pharm., 869 F.3d at 988.

Not all NDAs will qualify for statutory exclusivities. For example, the FDA may grant exclusivities for, among other things, a new chemical entity (five years), 21 C.F.R. § 314.108; or an "orphan" drug intended to treat rare diseases (seven years), 21 C.F.R. § 316.31. See FAQs at 3. The FDA may also grant additional exclusivities later in the life of a drug, well after submission of the initial NDA. For instance, the FDA may [*18] grant a six-month period of exclusivity for studying the drug's efficacy in children ("pediatric exclusivity"). 21 U.S.C. § 355a; Namenda II, 787 F.3d at 644.

Interaction. To a degree, exclusivity interacts with patent protection. See FAQs at 4. For example, when a brand manufacturer submits an NDA to the FDA, it must list any patents that claim drugs, drug products, or methods of use that are the subject of that NDA. See In re Actos End Payor Antitrust Litig., No. 13-cv-9244, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 127748, 2015 WL 5610752, at \*1 \(S.D.N.Y. 2015\) (Actos I). The FDA lists all existing patents and exclusivities in the "Orange Book." Id.; FAQs at 5.

Patent protection also interacts with exclusivity when a generic manufacturer seeks FDA approval to market a generic version of a branded drug that is still "on patent." Specifically, the Hatch-Waxman Act provides for a 180-day period of "patent challenge" exclusivity for the first generic manufacturer to file a certification with the FDA that contests the validity of the brand manufacturer's patent. Namenda III, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*3; see also FAQs at 3. This period of exclusivity is valid against other generic manufacturers, although multiple filers may share the exclusivity period if they file on the same day. See FTC v. Actavis, Inc., 570 U.S. 136, 174-75, 133 S. Ct. 2223, 186 L. Ed. 2d 343 \(2013\) (Roberts, J., dissenting) (citing 21 U.S.C. § 355\(j\)\(5\)\(B\)\(iv\)\(II\)\(bb\); FDA, Guidance for Industry: 180-Day Exclusivity When Multiple [*19] ANDAs Are Submitted on the Same Day 4 (July 2003)). Patent challenge exclusivity is highly valuable, "possibly worth several hundred million dollars." Actavis, 570 U.S. at 144 (citing C. Scott. Hemphill, Paying for Delay: Pharmaceutical Patent Settlement as a Regulatory Design Problem, 81 N.Y.U. L. Rev. 1553, 1579 \(2006\)).

To win the 180-day period of patent challenge exclusivity, a generic manufacturer must file an Abbreviated New Drug Application ("ANDA") with the FDA, which relies on the NDA submitted by the brand manufacturer to show the drug is safe and effective. Actavis, 570 U.S. at 142. As part of this process, a generic manufacturer must certify that the generic drug "has the same active ingredients as, and is biologically equivalent" to the brand drug. Id. (internal citations omitted). In addition, and critical to gaining the 180-day exclusivity period, the first-filer generic manufacturer must also certify that the brand name drug is patented, but that the patent is invalid or the generic will not infringe it, a so-called "Paragraph IV" certification. Id. at 143.

The Hatch-Waxman Act allows a brand manufacturer to treat the filing of a Paragraph IV certification as an infringing action and to sue the generic filer for patent infringement. Id. The filing of a patent [*20] infringement action triggers an automatic, 30-month stay on the FDA's approval of the generic manufacturer's AND A. Id. During this time, however, the FDA may tentatively approve the AND A, such that the generic drug is set for final approval and launch after the 30-month stay expires. Namenda IV, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83446, 2017 WL 4358244, at \*4.

At this point, a generic manufacturer defending a patent infringement action based on its Paragraph IV certification has several options. First, it may defend the patent infringement action by arguing that the underlying patent is invalid or that its generic drug does not otherwise infringe the patent. If successful, a judgment in the infringement action results not only in the invalidation of the underlying patent or a finding of non-infringement but also entitles the generic manufacturer to the coveted 180-day exclusivity period. See Shashank Upadhye, Generic Pharmaceutical Patent and FDA Law §§ 28:9.50, 29:5 (2018-19 ed.).

Second, a generic manufacturer may launch its generic product "at risk," once it has gained FDA approval and the 30-month stay has expired, but while the litigation is ongoing. Id. § 32.

Third, the brand manufacturer and generic manufacturer may enter into a settlement agreement to resolve the litigation, which allows the generic manufacturer to extract [*21] certain concessions from the brand manufacturer ("reverse payments"). See Hemphill, supra, at 1568; see also Actavis, 570 U.S. at 140-41. Settlement agreements containing reverse payments may raise antitrust scrutiny if the payments flowing from the brand manufacturer to the generic manufacturer are "large and unjustified." Actavis, 570 U.S. at 158. Brand manufacturers are particularly incentivized to settle with first-filer generics because, under the Hatch-Waxman Act, no later-filing generic is eligible for the 180-day period of patent challenge exclusivity, thereby minimizing such "Paragraph IV" challenges.

C. Drug Substitution Laws and Product Hopping

Apart from the federal Hatch-Waxman Act, state law regimes also facilitate generic competition and the provision of cheaper prescription drugs to consumers by allowing, or in some cases requiring, pharmacists to fill a prescription for a branded drug with a "therapeutically equivalent" generic drug. Namenda IV, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83446, 2017 WL 4358244, at \*4. States define therapeutic equivalence differently, but most use the comparatively strict definition adopted by the FDA. [2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83446, \[WL\] at \*4-\*5](#). This definition only allows a pharmacist to substitute a generic drug if the FDA designates the generic as "AB-rated" in the Orange Book. Namenda III, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*3.

As this Court has previously observed, "The requirement [*22] that substituted drugs meet therapeutic equivalence standards, although intended to protect patients, allows brand-name drug manufacturers to 'game the system' through a practice known as 'product hopping.'" Namenda IV, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83446, 2017 WL 4358244, at \*5.

In a product hop, a brand manufacturer re-patents a slightly different formulation of the drug shortly before any generic competitors are legally allowed to enter the market. Namenda II, 787 F.3d at 643 & n.2 (citing Alan Devlin, Exclusionary Strategies in the Hatch-Waxman Context, 2007 Mich. St. L. Rev. 631, 658 \(2007\)). At its core, product hopping is regulatory arbitrage—taking advantage of the comparatively forgiving "improvement" standard under the federal patent laws and the relatively strict "therapeutically equivalent" standard under state drug substitution laws. See Devlin, supra, at 657 n.139. Examples of product hops have included embedding the drug's active ingredient in a different inactive substrate, In re Asacol Antitrust Litig., 323 F.R.D. 451, 462 \(D. Mass. 2017\) (Asacol II); introducing a tablet in place of a capsule, Mylan Pharm. Inc. v. Warner Chilcott Pub. Ltd. Co., 838 F.3d 421, 429 \(3d Cir. 2016\); or re-apportioning the "scoring" lines on a tablet that allow patients to break the pill into smaller dosages, id. at 429-30.

Once the re-formulated product is re-patented, but before generic versions of the old formulation can legally enter the market and gain a foothold through state drug substitution laws, a [*23] brand manufacturer may try to persuade physicians to prescribe their patients the new formulation (a "soft switch"). Namenda II, 787 F.3d at 648.

In the alternative, a brand manufacturer might withdraw the old formulation from the market altogether or severely restrict access, forcing physicians to adopt the new formulation in order to avoid interruptions to their patients' medication regimens ("hard switch"). Id.

HN2[] A product hop raises antitrust scrutiny when it "coerces consumers and impedes competition." Id. at 652.

D. The Namenda Settlement Agreements

After entering into the June 2000 patent licensing and cooperation agreement with Merz, in December 2002 Forest submitted an NDA to the FDA for 5 mg and 10 mg memantine hydrochloride tablets for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease. (CAC ¶ 63.) The drug was based on Patent No. 5,061,703 (the "'703 patent"), which was obtained in 1991 and was set to expire on April 11, 2010. (Id. ¶¶ 4, 64.)

In October 2003, the FDA approved Forest's NDA for Namenda IR tablets and listed the '703 patent in the Orange Book. (Id. ¶¶ 64-65.)

On October 16, 2007, at least fourteen generic manufacturers filed AND As with Paragraph IV certifications for AB-rated generic formulations of Namenda IR. (Id. ¶ 69.) Beginning in January 2008, Forest [*24] and Merz filed patent infringement lawsuits against these generic manufacturers, including the Generic Defendants, in the U.S. District Court for the District of Delaware. (Id. ¶¶ 70-71.) This triggered 30-month stays on these first-to-file AND As, which the IPP alleges would have begun to expire in April 2010. (Id. ¶ 72.)

Forest and Merz then obtained a patent extension on the '703 patent under the Hatch-Waxman Act. In March 2009, the '703 patent was extended for five years based on the duration of the FDA's approval process for the NDA. (Id. ¶ 67.)<sup>8</sup> This extended the '703 patent's expiration date from April 11, 2010 to April 11, 2015. (Id.)

Between July 2009 and December 2009, while the 30-month ANDA stays were in effect, Forest and Merz entered into settlement agreements with the Generic Defendants. (Id. ¶ 75.) Pursuant to these settlement agreements, the Generic Defendants agreed to delay market entry until as late as July 11, 2015. (Id. ¶ 76.)

All of the Generic Defendants received tentative approval of their AND As from the FDA between January 2010 and April 2010, and all had received final approval of their ANDAs by October 2011. (Id. ¶ 82-83.)

In 2014, Forest was granted an additional six months of pediatric exclusivity [*25] for Namenda IR based on studies of the drug's efficacy in children with autism. (Id. ¶ 68.) This tacked an additional six months of statutory market exclusivity for Namenda IR onto the end of the '703 patent protection period. (Id.)

E. The "Hard Switch"

On August 21, 2009, "less than a month after it had announced the first wave of settlements with generics challenging the Namenda IR patent," Forest submitted an NDA for a once-a-day, extended release formulation of memantine hydrochloride, Namenda XR. (Id. ¶ 98.) The IPP alleges that the NDA did not demonstrate that Namenda XR was more efficacious than Namenda IR. (Id.)

The FDA approved the NDA for Namenda XR on June 21, 2010, but Forest did not launch the drug until June 2013. (Id. ¶¶ 99, 102.)

After the launch of Namenda XR, Forest used aggressive marketing to begin encouraging patients and physicians to switch from Namenda IR to Namenda XR. (Id. ¶ 105.) The IPP alleges that, when that "soft switch" strategy failed, Forest began implementing a strategy in February 2014 that involved discontinuing and/or severely limiting the distribution of Namenda IR. (Id. ¶ 95, 127-28.) This "hard switch" strategy included: (i) seeking to have the Centers for [*26] Medicare and Medicaid Services ("CMS") remove Namenda IR from its reference list; (ii) signing an exclusive distribution agreement with a mail-order only pharmacy; and (iii) requiring physicians to certify that it was medically necessary for patients to take Namenda IR rather than Namenda XR. (Id. ¶ 95.) Forest planned to discontinue retail sales of Namenda IR in January 2015. (Id.)

---

<sup>8</sup> It is not clear from the face of the IPP Complaint how Forest was able to obtain a five-year patent extension, the maximum permitted, when the FDA approval process for the Namenda IRNDA allegedly took only one year.

In September 2014, New York State filed a complaint against Actavis and Forest alleging violations of the federal Sherman Antitrust Act and New York's Donnelly Act on the basis of the hard switch, and seeking to preliminarily enjoin the defendants from withdrawing Namenda IR from the market. Namenda II, 787 F.3d at 649.

In December of 2014, the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York (Sweet, J.) entered an order preliminarily enjoining Actavis and Forest from withdrawing Namenda IR from retail shelves. Namenda I, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 172918, 2014 WL 7015198, at *46. The Second Circuit upheld the injunction. Namenda II, 787 F.3d at 663.

The enforcement action was followed by several private, follow-on suits seeking treble damages under federal and state antitrust laws, which are described below.

III. Procedural History

The IP Action was filed in August of 2015 as a putative class action on behalf of:

All persons [*27] or entities in the United States and its territories who indirectly purchased, paid and/or provided reimbursement for some or all of the purchase price for branded Namenda IR 5 or 10 mg tablets, or Namenda XR capsules, for consumption by themselves, their families, or their members, employees, insureds, participants, or beneficiaries, other than for resale, at any time during the period from April 14, 2010 and continuing until the anticompetitive effects of Defendants' unlawful conduct ceases (the "Class Period").

(CAC ¶ 146.)

The DP Action was filed the following month.<sup>9</sup> Both the IP Action and the DP Action were placed on this Court's docket as related actions shortly thereafter. (See 15-cv-7488, entry of Oct. 6, 2015.)

Like the enforcement action, the private plaintiffs sought damages on the basis of the "hard switch," but they also alleged damages stemming from the settlement agreements entered into with generic manufacturers. (See, e.g., CAC ¶¶ 84-86.)

Early in the litigation, this Court granted the parties' request for consolidated briefing on the motions to dismiss both the DP and IP Actions. (Dkt. No. 64).<sup>10</sup> Thereafter, Actavis, Forest, and Merz submitted a single memorandum of law in support [*28] of their motion to dismiss the DP and IP Actions. (Dkt. No. 85 or "Forest Br.") The Generic Defendants, who had not been named in the DP Action, submitted a separate memorandum of law in support of their motion to dismiss the IP Action. (Dkt. No. 81 or "Gen. Defs. Br.")

Roughly speaking, Actavis, Forest, and Merz's briefing challenged the sufficiency of the facts alleged in the DPPS' and IPP's Complaints as a whole, while the Generic Defendants' briefing challenged the IPP's ability to bring individual claims as a matter of state law. Each group of Defendants expressly adopted the arguments of the other group, to the extent applicable, in full.

<sup>9</sup> Plaintiff Rochester Drug Co-Operative, Inc., also filed a complaint on behalf of direct purchasers that did not name the Generic Defendants. (15-CV-10083, Dkt. No. 1.) On January 26, 2016, Plaintiffs JM Smith Corporation and Rochester Drug Co-Operative, Inc. stipulated to consolidating the cases. (15-cv-7488, Dkt No 65.)

<sup>10</sup> As discussed, Merz did not join the motion for consolidated briefing, (Dkt. No. 63 at 2 n. 1), but later joined Actavis and Forest's brief, (Dkt. No. 85).

In the IP Action, the IPP filed two separate memoranda of law in opposition to (i) Actavis, Forest, and Merz's motion and (ii) the Generic Defendants' motion. (Dkt. No. 87 or "IPP Resp. to Forest Br."; Dkt. No. 88 or "IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br.".) Actavis, Forest, and Merz filed one reply, and the Generic Defendants filed another. (Dkt No. 90 or "Forest Reply"; Dkt. No. 89 or "Gen. Defs. Reply.")

On September 13, 2016, this Court issued an order (1) denying in part and granting in part Actavis, Forest, and Merz's motion to dismiss the DP Action; [*29] (ii) denying without prejudice Actavis, Forest, and Merz's and the Generic Defendants' motions to dismiss the IP Action; and (iii) placing the 123 state law claims from the IP Action on the Court's suspense calendar pending resolution of the federal antitrust claims in the DP Action.<sup>11</sup> Namenda III, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*16-\*17.

The DP Action proceeded through discovery, summary judgment, and class certification. See Namenda IV, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83446, 2017 WL 4358244; Namenda V, 331 F. Supp. 3d 152, 2018 WL 3970674. Defendants in the DP Action recently sought and were denied leave to appeal this Court's grant of class certification. (15-cv-7488, Dkt. No. 600.)

On September 10, 2018, after the parties to the DP Action expressed interest in mediation, this Court lifted its stay of the IP Action and referred the parties to Magistrate Judge Lehrburger for supervision of "such non-duplicative discovery as is necessary to get the parties to the IPP case up to speed[.]" (Dkt. No. 122 at 2.) The order of September 10, 2018 acknowledged that the 123 state law claims in the IP Action were the subject of a pending motion to dismiss and had yet to be addressed. (Id.)

Subsequently, Actavis, Forest, Merz, and the Generic Defendants filed renewed motions to dismiss the IP Action, along with supplemental briefing. (Dkt. No. 131-1 or "Gen. Defs. [*30] Suppl. Br."; Dkt. No. 133 or "Forest Suppl. Br."; Dkt. No. 152 or "IPP Resp. to Forest Suppl. Br."; Dkt. No. 158 or "IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br."; Dkt. No. 159 or "Forest Suppl. Reply"; and Dkt. No. 160 or "Gen. Defs. Suppl. Reply.") Defendants again divided the briefing, with Actavis, Forest, and Merz focusing on the sufficiency of the factual allegations regarding the underlying anticompetitive conduct, and the Generic Defendants briefing the requirements of each state's laws in detail.

Presently before the Court are the motions of (1) Actavis, Forest, and Merz and (2) the Generic Defendants to dismiss all 123 state law claims in the IP Action.

DISCUSSION

IV. Standard of Review

HN3 In deciding a motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12\(b\)\(6\), the Court must liberally construe all claims, accept all factual allegations in the complaint as true, and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff. See Cargo Partner AG v. Albatrans, Inc., 352 F.3d 41, 44 \(2d Cir. 2003\); see also Roth v. Jennings, 489 F.3d 499, 510 \(2d Cir. 2007\).

To survive a motion to dismiss, "a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter . . . to 'state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.'" Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 \(2009\) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 \(2007\)). "A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable [*31] inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556).

<sup>11</sup> This Court had previously ordered that "the Indirect Purchaser Plaintiff's claims are severed and placed on the Court's suspense calendar." Namenda III, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*17 (emphasis added). The use of the word "sever," however, did not connote that the cases had been consolidated under Rule 42\(a\) or joined for purposes of Rules 18 and 19.

Finally, a motion to dismiss must be supported by "information contained in the 'four corners' of the complaint." Hayden v. Cty. of Nassau, 180 F.3d 42, 54 \(2d Cir. 1999\). This principally includes facts alleged in the complaint and materials attached to or incorporated by reference into the complaint. Kramer v. Time Warner Inc., 937 F.2d 767, 773 \(2d Cir. 1991\). It also includes information of which the court takes judicial notice. Id.

V. Count One: Monopolization Under the Laws of 27 States Against Actavis, Forest, and Merz

The IPP first brings 27 separate state law claims grouped under the heading "Count One: Monopolization Under State Law." (CAC at 46.) These 27 state laws are all state antitrust or fair competition laws. (CAC ¶ 201.) The IPP asserts these claims against Actavis, Forest, and Merz, but not against the Generic Defendants. (CAC ¶ 201.)

Count One alleges unlawful monopolization based on two separate, anticompetitive acts: (i) the "hard switch" from Namenda IR to Namenda XR and (ii) the "pay to delay" settlement agreements with generic competitors. (CAC ¶¶ 193-96.)

The IPP alleges that both of these acts were part of an "overall scheme," (CAC ¶ 195), perpetuated to "maintain and extend [Forest's] monopoly power in [*32] the memantine hydrochloride market," (CAC ¶ 197). In turn, "Forest's unlawful anticompetitive scheme to prevent, delay, and/or minimize the success of the introduction into the United States marketplace of any generic versions of Namenda IR enabled Forest to continue charging supracompetitive prices for memantine hydrochloride without a substantial loss of sales." (Id.)

The bulk of the parties' briefing is directed to this Count and to Count Two, for conspiracy to monopolize.

Actavis, Forest, and Merz bring a full arsenal of arguments to dismiss Count One, viz.:

- Judge Sweet's preliminary injunction in the earlier enforcement action prevented any "hard switch" from Namenda IR to Namenda XR from occurring, and in any case the IPP will be unable to offer any evidence that its plan participants or any member of the Class switched to Namenda XR as a result of the withdrawal announcement, (Forest Br. at 15-34);
- The IPP has expressly disclaimed that it is relying on a theory of unlawful "reverse payments" under Actavis, 570 U.S. at 158, to show anticompetitive conduct with respect to the settlement agreements, and, even if the IPP were to rely on such a theory, it cannot plausibly allege that any of the reverse [*33] payments made pursuant to the agreements were improper, (Forest Br. at 34-60);
- The IPP's "injuries" caused by the settlement agreements are purely speculative, (Gen. Defs. Br. at 26);
- Because this Court previously dismissed the DPPs' claim for an "overarching scheme," and because the IPP has failed to plead any independently anticompetitive conduct with respect to either the hard switch or the settlement agreements, this Count must be dismissed, (Forest Br. at 60-62); and
- The antitrust laws of 26 states have limitations periods of five years or fewer, making it "likely" that all of the state law claims asserted under Count One are time-barred, (id. at 65 n.42).

Actavis, Forest, Merz, and the Generic Defendants also argue for the dismissal of particular state law claims that are part of Count One, viz.:

- The IPP lacks Article III standing to assert claim in states where it has not made purchases and thereby suffered injury-in-fact, which are all but nine states, (Forest Br. at 65-66);

- Illinois Brick bars the IPP's claims in five states<sup>12</sup> that have not enacted so-called "Illinois Brick repealer statutes," (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 10-11);
- The IPP has failed to satisfy statutory requirements in four [*34] states that any plaintiff first notify the state's attorney general before filing a private damages suit, (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 11-13); and
- Claims for unilateral monopolization are actionable under the laws of three states, (Forest Br. at 82).

A. The IPP's Underlying Factual Allegations State a Claim for Monopolization

1. The IPP Has Stated a Claim for Monopolization Based on the Hard Switch from Namenda 1R to Namenda XR

HN4 "Well-established case law makes clear that product redesign is anticompetitive when it coerces consumers and impedes competition." Namenda II, 787 F.3d at 652. While withdrawing an old product and substituting a new product does not constitute anticompetitive conduct per se, "when a monopolist combines product withdrawal with some other conduct, the overall effect of which is to coerce consumers rather than persuade them on the merits, and to impede competition, its actions are anticompetitive[.]" Id. at 654 (internal citations omitted).

As part of Count One, the IPP alleges that the IPP "unlawfully switched the conversion of the memantine hydrochloride market from Namenda IR to Namenda XR" through a variety of anticompetitive measures, including "(i) publicizing to doctors, caregivers [*35] and the general public that the discontinuation of Namenda IR was imminent; (ii) significantly limiting or attempting to limit the distribution of Namenda IR; and (iii) requesting that CMS remove Namenda IR tablets from the 2015 Formulary Reference File," all while knowing that Namenda XR was neither safer nor more effective than Namenda IR. (CAC ¶ 195.)

In its original, consolidated briefing, Actavis, Forest, and Merz argued that both the DPPs and the IPP had failed to state claims for the hard switch because Judge Sweet's preliminary injunction in the earlier enforcement action, Namenda I, had prevented the withdrawal of Namenda IR and therefore any alleged exclusionary conduct from occurring. (Forest Br. at 15.) Defendants also argued that both the DPPs and the IPP had failed to allege injury in fact and to adequately plead antitrust injury resulting from the announcement that Forest was discontinuing Namenda IR. (Id. at 30.) Defendants have renewed these arguments in supplemental briefing. (Forest Suppl. Br. at 10.)

a) Actavis and Forest Are Collaterally Estopped From Arguing That the Anticompetitive Hard Switch Took Place

HN5 "Collateral estoppel, or issue preclusion, prevents the relitigation [*36] of an issue that was raised, litigated, and actually decided by a judgment in a prior proceeding." Jim Beam Brands Co. v. Beamish & Crawford Ltd., 937 F.2d 729, 734 (2d Cir. 1991). In order to establish that an issue was determined in a former adjudication, a party asserting collateral estoppel must establish four things: (1) the issues in the prior proceeding and the current proceeding are identical; (2) the issue raised in the current action was in fact actually decided in the prior proceeding; (3) there was full and fair opportunity to litigate the issue in the prior proceeding; and (4) the issue previously litigated and decided was necessary to support a valid and final judgment on the merits. In re PCH Assoc., 949 F.2d 585, 593 (2d Cir. 1991).

---

<sup>12</sup> Generic Defendants also argue that Illinois Brick bars the IPP's claims under two additional states—Illinois and Oregon—under Count One. (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 10-11.) However, the IPP Complaint does not allege Illinois and Oregon claims under Count One; instead, it alleges them only under Count Two. (See CAC ¶ 201.) This Court therefore addresses the Illinois and Oregon arguments in the portion of the opinion that discusses Count Two.

After discovery in the parallel DP Action had closed, the DPPs sought partial summary judgment on the first count of their Complaint, which alleged that the Defendants' February 2014 announcement of the upcoming withdrawal of Namenda IR from the market constituted unlawful monopolization in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act. Namenda IV, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83446, 2017 WL 4358244, at *9.

In Namenda IV, this Court ruled, as against Actavis and Forest, that they were collaterally estopped from "relitigating the questions of (1) whether [Forest] possessed monopoly power over the U.S. memantine market up until the entry of generic competition; [*37] (2) whether its February 2014 announcement of the upcoming discontinuation of Namenda IR was coercive and anticompetitive; and (3) whether Forest had any non-pretextual procompetitive justification for its illegal conduct." 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83446, 2017 WL 4358244, at *9-*16. However, this Court denied the DPPs' motion for collateral estoppel with respect to the issue of whether plaintiffs had suffered an antitrust injury, i.e., been forced to switch from Namenda IR to Namenda XR as a result of Forest's withdrawal announcement. 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83446, [WL] at *16.<sup>13</sup>

The IPP sought the same relief in connection with the IP Action, (Dkt. Nos. 112, 113), which the Court stayed, (Dkt. No. 120 at 1).

The stay has now been lifted, and the motion is ripe for decision.

The Court grants the motion. For the reasons discussed in Namenda IV, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83446, 2017 WL 4358244, at *9-*16, Actavis and Forest are collaterally estopped from relitigating the issues of "(1) whether [Forest] possessed monopoly power over the U.S. memantine market up until the entry of generic competition; (2) whether its February 2014 announcement of the upcoming discontinuation of Namenda IR was coercive and anticompetitive; and (3) whether Forest had any non-pretextual procompetitive justification for its illegal conduct." 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83446, [WL] at *16. The same findings with respect [*38] to Namenda I and II that created estoppel in that case apply equally here.

By the same token, Actavis and Forest are not estopped from making arguments related to the IPP's injury. Their injury argument is addressed in subpart c), infra.

b) Even Though Merz Is Not Collaterally Estopped From Arguing That the Hard Switch Took Place, the IPP Nonetheless States a Claim That the Hard Switch Occurred

Merz, the only other party named in Count One, is not collaterally estopped from arguing that the IPP fails to state a claim against it because the product hop did not occur. (See Dkt. No. 116 at 1.)<sup>14</sup> Merz was not a party to the action in Namenda I or Namenda II, and the IPP did not move for collateral estoppel with respect to Merz in this action. (See Dkt. No. 113.)

Nonetheless, for the same reasons discussed in Namenda III, I find that the IPP has stated a plausible claim that the product hop occurred.

<sup>13</sup> Later, in Namenda V, this Court ultimately found that the DPPs, which were drug wholesalers, could rely on classwide economic models at trial to show that they had suffered antitrust injury. Namenda V, 331 F. Supp. 3d at 177. In addition, although the DPPs had originally moved for collateral estoppel on Count One against Actavis, Forest, and Merz, (15-cv-7488, Dkt. No. 134), the parties subsequently stipulated to the dismissal of Merz from the action, (15-cv-7488, Dkt. No. 207). In an accident of timing, therefore, Merz was dismissed after the parties had submitted briefing on the collateral estoppel motion but before this Court had ruled on that motion.

<sup>14</sup> Merz would also not be collaterally estopped from arguing that, under the facts alleged in the IPP Complaint, it had absolutely nothing to do with the hard switch. However, likely because Merz chose to be represented by the same counsel as Actavis and Forest, and likely because these parties chose to submit a consolidated brief in support of their motions to dismiss both the DPP and IPP Complaints, Merz never raised this argument separate and apart from Actavis and Forest. (See Forest Br. at 15-33.) The Court therefore does not address it.

In Namenda III, I found it persuasive for purposes of the DPPs' federal claims that both the Namenda I and Namenda II courts had identified exclusionary conduct that occurred prior to the entry of the preliminary injunction. See *Namenda III, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*10-\*11*. As a result, I held that the DPPs had alleged an injury on the [*39] basis that "they were forced to pay for certain patients' memantine treatment at brand-name prices because these patients switched to Namenda XR prior to the entry of the injunction." *Namenda III, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*12* (emphasis in original). Plaintiffs' injury, the Court found, was that they were forced to pay for Namenda XR "after generic entry—when absent Defendants' anticompetitive conduct, their patients' prescriptions would have been filled by a far cheaper generic." Id. (emphasis in original). In other words, the DPPs had adequately pled that Forest's announcement discontinuing Namenda IR, as well as the tactics that accompanied the announcement, was sufficiently coercive.

The very same reasoning applies to the IPP Complaint. The IPP alleges it was injured because it was deprived of the opportunity to buy lower-priced generic Namenda IR and forced to buy more expensive branded Namenda XR. (CAC ¶ 202.) Further, like the DPP Complaint, the IPP Complaint alleges that once patients switched their prescriptions as a result of the "hard switch" tactics, "reverse commuting" back to Namenda IR was highly unlikely. (Id. ¶ 126.) These allegations are substantively identical to those in the DPP Complaint, and they therefore [*40] survive a motion to dismiss for the same reasons articulated by this Court in *Namenda III*.

c) The IPP Sufficiently Pleads That It Was Injured as a Result of the Hard Switch

According to Actavis, Forest, and Merz, the IPP has failed to allege a cognizable antitrust injury based on Forest's announcement that it was discontinuing the Namenda IR formulation, because the IPP will not be able to establish "antitrust injury," i.e., that these tactics actually caused consumers to switch from Namenda IR to Namenda XR. (Forest Suppl. Br. at 10.)

"Antitrust injury" is a component of antitrust standing under federal law. "Unlike the United States government, which is authorized to sue anyone violating the antitrust laws, a private antitrust plaintiff must show 'standing' to sue" in a federal antitrust case. Phillip E. Areeda & Herbert Hovenkamp, Fundamentals of Antitrust Law, § 3.01[A] (4th ed. 2018 suppl.). Among other standing requirements, a plaintiff must show that it has suffered "antitrust injury," which is "defined as the kind of injury that the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and 'flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful.'" Id. (citing *Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489, 97 S. Ct. 690, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701 \(1977\)*).

Previously, with respect to the DP Action, [*41] this Court held that the DPPs would be required to show at the summary judgment stage that "patients switched to Namenda XR because of the announced withdrawal of Namenda IR . . . prior to the injunction." *Namenda III, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*12*. However, that holding related to the wholesaler plaintiffs' claims under federal law, which unquestionably requires that a private plaintiff demonstrate antitrust standing before he can proceed with his claim.

Here, however, the IPP alleges no claims under federal law. So that argument fails as a matter of law. To the extent Actavis, Forest, and Merz raise the federal requirement of "antitrust injury" as grounds for dismissal of the 27 state law claims in Count One, this argument is irrelevant.

Actavis, Forest, and Merz have not briefed whether each of the 27 state laws under which the IPP brings monopolization claims each contains a similar "antitrust injury" or "antitrust standing" requirement. (See Forest Suppl. Br. at 10-11.) *McLaughlin v. Am. Tobacco Co., 522 F.3d 215 \(2d Cir. 2008\)*, cited by Actavis, Forest, and Merz, is inapposite, not the least because it is a RICO case—with federal mail and wire fraud as the predicate acts—and not an indirect purchaser case based on state antitrust laws. Id. at 222. Therefore, I conclude that they have no [*42] basis to argue that the IPP has not sufficiently alleged injury under any of the 27 state law monopolization theories.

In supplemental briefing, Actavis, Forest, and Merz argue for the first time that the IPP Complaint does not plausibly allege any antitrust injury because the plaintiffs' expert in the DP Action "disclaimed any need to assess why patients switched to Namenda XR." (Forest Suppl. Br. at 10.) They highlight the fact that one of the DPPs' experts in that Action, Dr. Russell Lamb, calculated "aggregate overcharge damages" rather than "individualized analysis" for purposes of class certification. Namenda V, 331 F. Supp. 3d 152, 2018 WL 3970674, at \*10. In the DP Action, the Court found that this was sufficient to defeat Defendants' motion for summary judgment, because direct purchasers would have been indifferent to individual consumers' choices and instead would have paid attention to the market as a whole. 331 F. Supp. 3d 152, Id. at \*30.

The methodology used by the DPPs' expert—namely, evidence on a motion for summary judgment in the DP Action—is of no relevance in deciding whether the IPP has pleaded (not proven) a state antitrust violation. This argument is a red herring and entirely unpersuasive on a motion addressed to the pleadings.

2. The IPP States [*43] a Claim for Monopolization Based on the Settlement Agreements

HN6 As discussed, when a patent holder provides favorable terms to an alleged infringer as part of a settlement agreement, this is called a "reverse payment." Actavis, 570 U.S. at 141. The Supreme Court has held that "a reverse payment, where large and unjustified, can bring with it the risk of significant anticompetitive effects." Id. at 158. Reverse payments comprised of cash, nominally conferred as compensation for avoided litigation costs, are most suspect, but reverse payments may also provide value in the form of early entry licenses, a period of exclusivity, or cash for avoided litigation costs. King Drug Co. of Florence, Inc. v. Smithkline Beecham Corp., 791 F.3d 388, 403 \(3d Cir. 2015\) ("We do not believe Actavis's holding can be limited to reverse payments of cash ."); accord In re Loestrin 24 Fe Antitrust Litig, 814 F.3d 538, 552 \(1st Cir. 2016\).

As mentioned above, Count One for monopolization under the laws of 27 states alleges that, in addition to engaging in an anticompetitive hard switch, Actavis, Forest, and Merz "entered into unlawful agreements" with generic manufacturers "to settle patent infringement suits as part of an overall anticompetitive scheme." (CAC ¶¶ 193.)

Actavis, Forest, and Merz have moved to dismiss Count One on the ground that the IPP has failed to state a claim that the [*44] settlement agreements were, in and of themselves, unlawful. (Gen. Defs' Suppl. Br. at 3; Forest Suppl. Br. at 4.)

a) The IPP Brings a Reverse Payments Case Under Actavis

Defendants first argue that the IPP actually disclaims reliance on a reverse payment theory under Actavis, 570 U.S. 136, 133 S. Ct. 2223, 186 L. Ed. 2d 343. (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 3; Forest Suppl. Br. at 4.) They support this argument with several quotations from the IPP's brief in opposition to their original motions to dismiss. (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 4; Forest Suppl. Br. at 4.) These include the following statements made by the IPP, among others: "Forest desperately tries to convert the [IPP]'s theory of its case into a reverse payment settlement case, which it is not." (IPP Resp. to Forest Br. at 25.) "The [IPP] has not pled any reverse payment agreement claims." (Id.)

However, despite this language, the IPP argues, in this very same brief, "Even under an Actavis analysis, the [IPP]'s Complaint survives. See Directs' Brief, which the [IPP] adopts and incorporates by reference." (Id. at 27.) Over several pages, the IPP then fleshes out a claim under Actavis, including that the early entry licenses should trigger scrutiny because the negotiated entry dates fell after expiration [*45] of the '703 patent and only three months before $=P33 expiration of the pediatric exclusivity period, (id. at 27) and that the acceleration clauses in the settlement agreements, like most favored nation clauses, constitute reverse payments under Actavis, (id. at 29). In supplemental briefing, moreover, the IPP argued that the payments in the settlement agreements were unlawful because they exceeded expected litigation costs. (IPP Resp. to Forest Suppl. Br. at 10.)

So the pertinent question is: does the CAC allege facts that adequately plead a claim under Actavis, even if the IPP identified the proper legal theory only in the alternative?

b) The IPP States a Claim for Unlawful Reverse Payments in the Form of Early Entry Licenses, Cash Payments, and Unspecified Benefits

Defendants argue—as they did in their original motion to dismiss—that early entry licenses are per se pro-competitive and do not constitute reverse payments in violation of the rule laid out in Actavis. (Forest Suppl. Br. at 6.) In particular, Defendants point out that the early entry licenses permitted the Generic Defendants to enter three months before the pediatric exclusivity period expired. (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 5.)

Defendants also argue that [*46] any monetary payments the Generic Defendants received as part of the settlement agreements constituted avoided litigation costs, as lawfully permitted by Actavis. (Forest Suppl. Br. at 6-7; Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 5-7.)

Finally, they state that the IPP's allegations with respect to the reverse payments are bare and conclusory, and they therefore must be dismissed under Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557. (Forest Suppl. Br. at 6; Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 6-7.)

In Namenda III, this Court held that the DPPs had stated a claim against Actavis, Forest, and Merz based on the reverse settlement agreements with generic manufacturers. 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*15. As part of that decision, the Court said it could not determine as a matter of law that the settlement agreements were not anticompetitive simply because they allowed for entry prior to the end of exclusivity. Id. The Court distinguished Actos 1, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 127748, 2015 WL 5610752, at \*13, which had found that certain early entry licenses did not constitute anticompetitive reverse payments, because the plaintiffs in that case had not alleged a two-step anticompetitive scheme involving a post-settlement product hop. Id.

This same reasoning is applicable to the instant motion. Defendants have not cited any new, controlling case law which [*47] holds that, as a matter of law, early entry licenses are immune from antitrust scrutiny. And as discussed above, the opinions in King Drug, 791 F.3d at 403, and Loestrin 24 Fe, 814 F.3d at 552, suggest that no item of value that was transferred from plaintiff to defendant is immune from antitrust scrutiny as a matter of law. HN7 Rather, all benefits conferred as part of a settlement agreement are subject to antitrust review under the Rule of Reason. See also 2 William C. Holmes, Intellectual Property and Antitrust Law § 38:3 (Sept. 2018 update) (recent decisions on reverse payments "appear to favor a burden-shifting analysis keyed into the size of the reverse payment, proof of demonstrated anticompetitive effects, and the presence or absence of plausible justifications for the payment, with the trier balancing anticompetitive effects against procompetitive justifications.").

Regarding the alleged cash payments for avoided litigation costs, the Court held in Namenda III that Actavis required courts to compare a given payment to estimated future litigation costs and to "consider whether a payment 'reflects traditional settlement considerations, such as avoided litigation costs or fair value for services' to determine if it was justified." [*48] 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*14 (internal quotation omitted). "These intrinsically fact-based determinations," the Court found, "cannot be made on a pre-answer motion to dismiss." Id. The Court also rejected Defendants' argument that the FTC had created a universal safe harbor for litigation costs up to $7 million. Id. at 29.

Actavis, Forest, and Merz now argue for the first time in supplemental briefing that "the FTC has subsequently extended the safe harbor to additional reverse payment consent orders." (Forest Suppl. Br. at 7). The Court has read these consent orders. They do exclude "compensation for saved future litigation expenses of up to $7 million." See, e.g., Stip. Arder at 3-4, FTC v. Allergan, No. 17-cv-312 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 23, 2017), ECF No. 4. But they do not announce a Shift in FTC policy that would automatically immunize all payments under $7 million in all lawsuits and contexts from allegations of anticompetitive conduct under Actavis.

Finally, the Court disagrees with the Defendants that the IPP has not met its burden under Twombly with respect to the reverse payments simply because the Complaint does not estimate the value of the payments or anticipated litigation costs. (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 6.) The [*49] Complaint alleges that the Generic Defendants "very likely received something of value in exchange for the agreement to delay entry," (CAC ¶ 76) and no more is required at the motion to dismiss stage. HN8 Courts do not "require that the plaintiffs provide precise figures and calculations at the pleading stage" because "very precise and particularized estimates of fair value and anticipated litigation costs may require evidence in the exclusive possession of the defendants, as well as expert analysis." Loestrin, 814 F.3d at 552; see also In re Opana ER Antitrust Litigation, 162 F. Supp. 3d 704, 718 (N.D. Ill. 2016) ("precise valuation may require discovery").

c) The IPP Sufficiently Alleges That It Was Injured as a Result of the Settlement Agreements.

Finally, Defendants argue that the IPP fails to adequately plead that the settlement agreements caused it antitrust injury. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 26.) The IPP's injuries are too speculative, they argue, because "Plaintiff's sole theory of harm . . . is that consumers would have been able to purchase lower-price generic products earlier" had the litigation not settled. (Id.) Obviously, this would have lowered the amount the IPP would have to reimburse individual consumers who were beneficiaries under its plans.

The IPP alleges that, absent the unlawful [*50] settlement agreements, one of three events would have occurred that would have allowed for earlier entry of generic Namenda: (i) the generics would have prevailed in the patent litigation against Forest and Merz; (ii) the Generic Defendants would have launched "at risk" prior to the resolution of the patent litigation; or (iii) Forest and Merz would have settled the litigation legally with an earlier generic entry date. (CAC ¶ 81.)

The IPP's theory is similar to that of the DPPs, and in *Namenda III, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at *15*.

Specifically, with respect to the first early entry scenario, this Court held that, while the DPPs had alleged no facts to suggest that Forest's and Merz' s patent was invalid or that the Generic Defendants would have prevailed in litigation, this could be left to the summary judgment stage. Id. ("To survive a motion for summary judgment, [the DPPs] Will have to substantiate these allegations with evidence suggesting that the settlement agreements did, in fact, delay generic entry and that the delay had the effect of allowing Forest to complete the hard switch."). There is no [*51] reason this Court should now find otherwise with respect to the CAC in the IP Action.

With respect to the second possible early entry scenario, an "at risk" launch, the IPP has alleged that the FDA tentatively approved the ANDAs of several of the generic companies in early 2010, (CAC ¶ 82, 83), and that an unusually large number of generic manufacturers (14) submitted ANDAs with Paragraph IV certifications for Namenda IR, as compared to other branded drugs, (id. ¶ 69). Defendants argue that this is insufficient to show that an "at risk" launch was anything more than speculative, particularly given the expense of "at risk" launches and the fact that the Delaware court had issued claim construction opinions in the patent litigation that were unfavorable to the generic manufacturers. (Forest Br. at 41-42.) Again, however, this Court heard these very same arguments in Namenda III and found that they were more appropriately determined after discovery at the summary judgment stage. 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at *15.

Finally, with respect to the third, "alternative settlement" theory, the IPP alleges that, in the absence of unlawful settlement agreements that caused the Generic Defendants to act against their self-interest [*52] when settling, earlier entry would have been possible. (CAC ¶ 84.) Defendants argue that this impermissibly second guesses an otherwise pro-competitive settlement. (Forest Br. at 44 ("Plaintiffs [sic] cannot premise an antitrust theory on the claim that they [sic] could imagine a different agreement that right have been even more procompetitive.") (emphasis in original).) Once again, however, the Court rejected this argument in Namenda III, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at *15; and other courts have expressly recognized the viability of the "alternative settlement" theory in this type of litigation. In re Androgel Antitrust Litig. (No. II), No. 09-md-2084, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 99716, 2018 WL 2984873, at *16 (N.D. Ga. June 14, 2018) (collecting cases).

This Court thus concludes that the IPP has stated a claim for monopolization on the basis of the settlement agreements.

3. The Court's Earlier Ruling Regarding the DPPs' Overarching Scheme Claim Does Not Support Dismissing Count One

Defendants next argue that the IPP fails to state a claim for an "anticompetitive scheme" under Count One. (Forest Suppl. Br. at 9.) Defendants argue that, because the IPP fails to state a claim for either an anticompetitive hard switch or for anticompetitive settlement agreements, it cannot use an "overarching scheme" claim to tie [*53] this conduct together. But since this Court has already found that the IPP does state a claim on the basis of both the hard switch and the settlement agreements, this argument fails.

In addition, any ruling regarding the duplicative nature of the overarching scheme claim was confined to the DP Action. The DPPs had brought five claims, the first three of which alleged violations of Section 2 of the Sherman Act. (15-cv-7488, Dkt. No. 29 ¶¶ 237-65.) In the DPP Complaint, Count I was based on the hard switch, and Count III was based on the settlement agreements. (Id.) Count II alleged an "overarching scheme" based on the hard switch and settlement agreements. (Id.) Counts I through III were all asserted against Actavis, Forest, and Merz. (Id.) In Namenda III, this Court held that the "overarching scheme" claim was duplicative of the claims related to the product hop and the settlement agreements. 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*16.

The IPP Complaint is structured differently. It contains four Counts, the first two of which allege antitrust offenses under the laws of 27 states. (CAC ¶¶ 191-210.) As discussed earlier in this opinion, Count One alleges monopolization against Actavis, Forest, and Merz based on both the hard switch and [*54] the settlement agreements. (Id.) Count Two alleges a conspiracy to monopolize against all Defendants—Actavis, Forest, Merz, and the Generic Defendants—and bases those allegations on the settlement agreements but not on the hard switch. (Id.) Plainly, Counts One and Two are not duplicative because (i) they are asserted against different groups of defendants, and (ii) they are grounded in different conduct (conspiracy to monopolize being a separate theory from actual monopolization).

The Court therefore denies Actavis, Forest, and Merz's motion to dismiss Count One.

4. The Statute of Limitations Argument Is Inadequately Briefed With Respect to the IP Action

In their original brief in support of their motion to dismiss both the DP and IP Actions, Actavis, Forest, and Merz argued that the DPPs' claims were time-barred. (Forest Br. at 62-65.)

In Namenda III, this Court rejected Defendants' argument that the DPPs' claims based on the settlement agreements were time-barred because the DPP Complaint was filed more than five years after the last settlement agreement was executed. 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128349, 2016 WL 4992690, at \*16. Relying on Berkey Photo Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 603 F.2d 263, 295-96 \(2d Cir. 1979\), it held that "a purchaser suing a monopolist for overcharges paid within the previous four years may [*55] satisfy the conduct prerequisite to recovery by pointing to anticompetitive actions taken before the limitations periods"—but confined the damages period to four years before the filing of the DP Action based on the four-year statute of limitations in the Sherman Act. Id.

The original brief's discussion of the statute of limitations and the IPP Complaint was limited to two footnotes. The first footnote urged the Court to limit the IPP's damages "to four years prior to the filing of the Complaint—August 19, 2011, as opposed to the damages period asserted by IPPs [sic] as of April 14, 2010." (Id. at 62 n.41.)

This I cannot do. As Defendants themselves have acknowledged, the limitations period for each state's antitrust law is not uniformly four years. (See App'x 2.) Moreover, the parties have not briefed whether Berkey Photo, 603 F.2d at 267-68, which considered the question of ongoing injury with respect to the Sherman Act, is applicable to antitrust claims brought under state law.

In their second footnote, Defendants argue: "[T]he antitrust laws of 26 states alleged by IPPs [sic], the consumer protection laws of 21 states alleged by IPPs [sic], and the unjust enrichment claims of 28 states alleged by the 1PP have limitations periods [*56] of five years or less (see Appendices 2-4), making it likely that these claims are also time-barred." (Id. at 65 n.42.)<sup>15</sup>

"Likely" is not a standard that results in dismissal. This Court cannot make a sweeping inference about statutes of limitation for state antitrust laws on the basic of federal cases interpreting the Sherman Act. Nor will it independently undertake a review each state's requirements, armed with only a number in the cell of a table and without the movants' having briefed the issues. If the issue is important enough to movants, they can call relevant cases under relevant laws to the court's attention. I will not do Defendants' work for them.

As a result, Actavis, Forest, and Merz's motion to dismiss—or, in the alternative, shorten—the Count One claims on statute of limitations grounds is denied without prejudice. However, as I will not immediately entertain a new motion, they will have to wait until discovery is over to make any renewed motion.

B. The IPP States a Claim for Monopolization Under the Laws of Some States But Not Others

I now turn to Defendants' arguments regarding the individual state law claims alleged under Count One.

1. The IPP Has Article III Standing To Bring State Law Monopolization Claims on Behalf of Class Members Who Made Purchases in [*57] Those States

Defendants argue that the IPP may bring class claims only under the laws of eleven states—Delaware, Florida, Georgia<sup>16</sup> Kansas, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania<sup>17</sup>, South Carolina, and Virginia—because, as the Named Plaintiff, the IPP "lack[s] standing to assert claims under the laws of the states in which they [sic] do not reside or in which they [sic] suffered no injury." (Forest Br. at 65-66; Gen. Defs. Br. at 32-33.)

In supplemental briefing, however, Defendants concede that, pursuant to the Second Circuit's recent ruling in Langan v. Johnson & Johnson Consumer Cos., 897 F.3d 88, 96 (2d Cir. 2018), this is a "question of predominance under Rule 23\(b\)\(3\), not a question of standing under Article III." (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 9 (quoting Langan, 897 F.3d at 96).)

In Langan, which came before the Second Circuit on review of a grant of class certification, the Second Circuit denied Defendants' motion to de-certify the class and dismiss the case because the named plaintiff had not suffered injury-in-fact in each state where she asserted claims:

[W]e write to make explicit what we previously assumed in In re Foodservice Inc. Pricing Litigation, 729 F.3d 108 (2d Cir. 2013): as long as the named plaintiffs have standing to sue the named defendants, any concern about whether it is proper for a class to include out-of-state, nonparty class members [*58] with claims subject to different state laws is a question of predominance under Rule 23\(b\)\(3\), id. at 126-27, not a question of 'adjudicatory competence' under Article III[.]

897 F.3d 88, 93 \(2d Cir. 2018\). Since Langan, a number of district court opinions have followed its reasoning to deny motions to dismiss state law claims on Article III standing grounds because the named plaintiff did not make in-state purchases and thereby suffer injury-in-fact in those states. See, e.g., Daniel v. Tootsie Roll Indus., LLC, No. 17-cv-7541, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129143, 2018 WL 3650015, at *5 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 1, 2018) (applying Langan to hold that named plaintiffs had Article III standing to assert claims on behalf of "nonparty class members with claims subject to different state laws"); Donnenfeld v. Petro, Inc., 333 F. Supp. 3d 208, 2018 WL 4356727, at \*12 \(E.D.N.Y. 2018\) (denying defendant's motion to dismiss state consumer protection claims in states in which the plaintiff did not reside); Holve v. McCormick & Co., Inc., 334 F. Supp. 3d 535, 2018 WL 3861406, at \*10 \(W.D.N.Y. 2018\) (holding that named plaintiff had Article III standing to bring class claims under Maryland state law). Thus, the Court will not presently grant Defendants' motion to dismiss a broad swath of the IPP's state law claims for lack of Article III standing.

<sup>15</sup> The Generic Defendants adopt this argument in Actavis, Forest, and Merz's brief with their own footnote: "For the reasons set forth in Forest's motion to dismiss, Plaintiff's claims are also barred by the statute of limitations." (Gen. Defs. Br. at 50 n.27.) My holding above applies equally to the Generic Defendants.

<sup>16</sup> The IPP Complaint does not allege any claim under Georgia law, under any of Counts One through Four. (CAC ¶¶ 191-231.)

<sup>17</sup> The IPP Complaint does not allege any claim under Pennsylvania law, under any of Counts One through Four. (CAC ¶¶ 191-231.)

I write briefly to note that Langan gives rise to certain prudential concerns for [*59] CAFA class actions. It seems clear enough that Sergeants Benevolent cannot state a claim under the laws of at least some states whose laws are pleaded in its Complaint. Put otherwise, if there were no CAFA and the IPP brought a monopolization claim under the law of, say, Utah, that action would be dismissed on motion because the IPP could not state a claim under the relevant law. No state court would allow it to continue as a plaintiff on the theory that the proper time to deal with this question was at class certification. An entity that has no claim fails to state a claim—not as a matter of Article III standing (the issue addressed in Langan) but under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) or its state court equivalent. Yet a number of courts, purporting to follow Langan, have concluded that, because a class plaintiff who fails to state a claim under a particular state's law (i.e., it cannot recover for the alleged violation of law for its own account) nonetheless has Article III standing, the issue of whether the plaintiff fails to state a claim should abide a decision on a motion for class certification.

This court does not read Langan any more broadly than it purports to reach. Nothing in Langan, as I read it, precludes [*60] a defendant from moving to dismiss a CAFA plaintiff's claims under a particular statute pursuant to Rule 12\(b\)\(6\), on the grounds that the plaintiff fails to state a claim for its own account—a question entirely different from whether it has constitutional standing. CAFA—which confers no substantive rights on any litigant, but simply permits certain cases that do not otherwise belong in a federal court to be brought here—cannot be read to enable plaintiffs to state claims when the laws of the several states specifically provide to the contrary. It is imperative that too much not be read into Langan since neither CAFA nor state consumer protection laws require counsel to compete with other advocates for the positions of class counsel and lead plaintiff, both of which create healthy incentives to find the best class representative(s) possible.

For those courts that read Langan more broadly than I do, it is enough that a district court can conclude that a class plaintiff is not an appropriate class representative because he/it fails to state a claim at the class certification stage. But that comes at cost. A district court's inability to address these arguments at the motion to dismiss stage increases [*61] a plaintiff's leverage with respect to settlement negotiations, without any additional effort on its part.

So while I accept that Langan forecloses any argument that a CAFA plaintiff's claims should be dismissed on motion for lack of Article III standing, I decline to read it as foreclosing consideration of a properly made Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) motion at the motion to dismiss stage—a subject that the Court of Appeals nowhere addressed.

2. The IPP Fails to State a Claim for Monopolization in Three States That Follow Illinois Brick (Florida, Massachusetts, and Utah)

Defendants next argue that the IPP fails to state a claim under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) under the antitrust laws of Florida, Massachusetts, Puerto Rico, Rhode Island, and Utah, because these states follow the rule of Illinois Brick and prohibit indirect purchaser actions. (Forest Br. at 66; Gen. Defs. Br. 35-36; Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 10 n.4.)<sup>18</sup> They are correct about three of these states.

---

<sup>18</sup> Defendants also argue that any states that have not expressly adopted or rejected Illinois Brick should be treated as barring indirect purchaser claims. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 36 n.16 (citing In re Digital Music Antitrust Litig., 812 F. Supp. 2d 390, 413 \(S.D.N.Y. 2011\).) However, Defendants have not indicated which states these would be.

a) Florida

Count One of the IPP Complaint alleges a claim for monopolization under *Fla. Stat. §§ 501.201, et seq.* (CAC ¶ 201(d).) Actavis, Forest, and Merz argue that because the Florida Antitrust Act applies Illinois Brick, the IPP cannot recover as an indirect purchaser. [*62] (Forest Suppl. Br. at 10 n.4.)

I first note that the IPP incorrectly cites to the *Florida Deceptive and Unfair Trade Practices Act \("FDUTPA"\)*, *Fla. Stat. §§ 501.201, et seq.*, rather than the *Florida Antitrust Act*, id. §§ 542.15, et seq. I construe this as a typographical error but hold that Defendants are correct that HN9↑ the Florida Antitrust Act does not permit indirect purchaser recovery. "Florida adheres to the 'direct purchaser' rule enunciated in Illinois Brick." *Mack v. Bristol-Myers Squibb Co., 673 So.2d 100, 102 \(Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1996\)*.

The Court therefore DISMISSES the IPP's Florida Antitrust Act claim under Count One.

b) Massachusetts

Count One of the IPP Complaint alleges a claims for monopolization under Mass. Gen. Laws, ch. 93A. (CAC ¶ 201(i).) Defendants move to dismiss the Massachusetts law claim under Count One on the basis that Massachusetts follows Illinois Brick. (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 10 n.4 (citing *Ciardi v. F. Hoffmann-La Roche, Ltd., 436 Mass. 53, 762 N.E.2d 303, 308 \(Mass. 2002\)*.)

Again, I note that the IPP has incorrectly cited to chapter 93A, Massachusetts' consumer protection statute, rather than chapter 93, its antitrust statute. I again treat this as a typographical error, particularly since the IPP's conspiracy to monopolize claim is brought under chapter 93. 1 HN10↑ dismiss the claim anyway because *Ciardi* is squarely on point. Chapter 93A (consumer protection) allows [*63] indirect purchaser claims; chapter 93 (antitrust) does not. "Because the Antitrust Act is to be construed in harmony with judicial interpretations of comparable Federal antitrust statutes, the rule of law established in Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois . . . would apply with equal force to preclude claims brought under G.L. c. 93 by indirect purchasers in Massachusetts." *Ciardi, 762 N.E.2d at 308*; see also *In re EpiPen \(Epinephrine Injection, USP\) Mktg., Sales Practices & Antitrust Litig., 336 F. Supp. 3d 1256, 2018 WL 3973153, at \*32 n.20 \(D. Kan. 2018\)*.

The Court therefore DISMISSES the IPP's Massachusetts law claim under Count One.

c) Puerto Rico

Count One of the IPP Complaint alleges a claim for monopolization under the Puerto Rico Antitrust Act ("PRAA"), 10 P.R. Laws §§ 263, et seq. (CAC ¶ 201(aa).) Defendants move to dismiss because, while Puerto Rico does not expressly prohibit suits by indirect purchasers, the PRAA is modeled after the Clayton Act, under which indirect purchasers lack standing pursuant to the Supreme Court's decision in Illinois Brick. (Forest Suppl. Br. at 10 n.4.) The IPP counters that the PRAA does not limit standing to direct purchasers. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 11-12 (citing Rivera-Muniz v. Horizon Lines Inc., 737 F. Supp. 2d 57, 61 (D.P.R. 2010)).)

Again, the correct citation for the PRAA is 10 L.P.R.A. §§ 257, et seq., as section 263 covers price discrimination, [*64] specifically. The monopolization offense is found at 10 L.P.R.A. § 260. I once again construe this as a typographical error.

The Court recognizes that many district courts in the continental United States have dismissed indirect purchaser claims under the PRAA for lack of standing, based on the idea that the PRAA is modeled on federal statutes that do not extend standing to indirect purchasers. See, e.g., *Opana ER, 162 F.Supp.3d at 723* (collecting cases); *In re Digital Music Antitrust Litig., 812 F. Supp. 2d 390, 413 \(S.D.N.Y. 2011\)*.

Nonetheless, this Court finds that the U.S. District Court for the District of Puerto Rico has more faithfully interpreted the standing requirements of the PRAA, in light of how the Supreme Court of Puerto Rico reads that statute. Rivera-Muniz, 737 F. Supp. 2d at 61 (citing Pressure Vessels P.R. v. Empire Gas P.R., 137 D.P.R. 497, 520, 1994 Juris P.R. 144 (P.R. 1994)).

HN11 [+] In Pressure Vessels, the Supreme Court of Puerto Rico interpreted the private damages section of the PRAA to hold that private remedies were available to any plaintiff who met the following conditions: (1) the person was harmed in his business or property (2) by reason of (3) actions prohibited by law. 137 D.P.R. at 518. The Supreme Court of Puerto Rico reasoned that, in order to satisfy this second prong, a plaintiff need only allege that "as a consequence of the legal violation, he has been injured." Id. at 520. Based on this interpretation of the PRAA in Pressure [*65] Vessels, the Court in Rivera-Muniz held, "Because Puerto Rico liberally construes its standing requirements in private antitrust cases, it is immaterial whether Plaintiffs are direct or indirect purchasers." Rivera-Muniz, 737 F. Supp. 2d at 61 (internal citation omitted).

Defendants' motion to dismiss this claim is, therefore, DENIED.

d) Rhode Island

Count One of the IPP Complaint alleges a claim for monopolization under R.I. Gen. Laws §§ 6-36-1, et seq. (CAC ¶ 201(t).) Defendants move to dismiss this claim on the grounds that Rhode Island's Illinois Brick repealer statute went into effect on July 15, 2013. (Forest Suppl. Br. at 10 n.4.) Several federal district courts have held that the statute does not have retroactive application. See, e.g., In re Effexor Antitrust Litig., 337 F. Supp. 3d 435, 2018 WL 4466050, at *16 (D.N.J. 2018) (also analyzing general presumption against retroactive application in Rhode Island law); In re Niaspan Antitrust Litig., 42 F. Supp. 3d 735, 759 (E.D. Pa. 2014) (same).

The Court agrees with Defendants and with the weight of federal case law and finds that the IPP cannot bring claims under Rhode Island's antitrust law for conduct occurring before July 15, 2013. As a result, the Court DISMISSES IN PART the Rhode Island law claim under Count One, to the extent it seeks damages prior to that date. See Niaspan, 42 F. Supp. 3d at 759 (restricting end payor plaintiffs [*66] from "recover[ing] for any overcharges incurred before the . . . Rhode Island repealer statute took effect").

e) Utah

Count One of the IPP Complaint alleges a claim for monopolization under Utah Code §§ 76-10-1301, et seq. [sic].<sup>19</sup> (CAC ¶ 201(w).) Defendants move to dismiss this claim on Illinois Brick grounds, arguing, "Indirect purchasers may only bring claims under the Utah Antitrust Act if they are citizens or residents of Utah." (Gen. Defs. Br. at 35-36 n.15 (citing Utah Code § 76-10-3109))

Despite Defendants' characterization, this is not in fact an Illinois Brick argument but instead an argument about the ability of the Named Plaintiff to state a claim under the Utah Antitrust Act pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12\(b\)\(6\). The statute reads, in relevant part: "A person who is a citizen of this state or a resident of this state and who is injured or is threatened with injury in his business or property by a violation of the Utah Antitrust Act may bring an action for injunctive relief and damages, regardless of whether the person dealt directly or indirectly with the defendant." Utah Code § 76-10-3109.

HN12 [+] "The majority of courts that have been presented with this statute require at least one Utah citizen or resident be a named plaintiff." Opana ER, 162 F. Supp. 3d 704, 2018 WL 6003893, at *17 (collecting cases); see also GEICO Corp. v. Autoliv, Inc., No. 16-13189, 345 F. Supp. 3d 799, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 180216, 2018 WL 5077767, at \*27 \(E.D. Mich. Aug. 30, 2018\) (dismissing Utah antitrust [*67] claim with prejudice.)

---

<sup>19</sup> Since this provision governs prostitution offenses, and since Count Two cites the Utah Antitrust Act at Utah Code §§ 76-10-3101, et seq., (CAC P 207(x)), the Court once again assumes this is a typographical error.

Sergeants Benevolent, the sole Named Plaintiff in this case, has not alleged anywhere in the Complaint that it is a citizen or resident of Utah. Therefore, it fails to plead an element required to state a claim under the Utah Antitrust Act. The possibility that some beneficiary of the IPP may have retired to Utah is not enough, because none of the IPP's beneficiaries is a named plaintiff. Defendants' motion to dismiss the Utah monopolization claim under Count One pursuant to Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) is, therefore, GRANTED.

3. The IPP's Failure To Satisfy Pre-Suit Notification Requirements Does Not Warrant Dismissal of the Claims in Three States (Hawaii, Arizona, and Nevada)

In supplemental briefing, Defendants argue for the first time that the IPP's state antitrust claims under the laws of Arizona, Hawaii, and Nevada fail because the IPP has not alleged that it has complied with state law notice requirements. (Forest Suppl. Br. at 12; Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 12-13.)

a) Hawaii<sup>20</sup>

Count One of the IPP Complaint alleges an antitrust under Haw. Rev. Stat §§ 480, et seq. (CAC ¶ 201(e).) The Hawaii Antitrust Act reads, in relevant part: "A class action for claims for a violation of this chapter other than claims for unfair or [*68] deceptive acts or practices may be filed, and may be prosecuted on behalf of indirect purchasers by a person other than the attorney general as follows: (1) A filed copy of the complaint and all relevant supporting and exculpatory materials in possession of the proposed class representative or its counsel shall be served on the attorney general not later than seven days after filing of the complaint." Haw. Rev. Stat. § 480-13.3\(a\).

Generic Defendants argue that notice of suit must be provided to the state's attorney general and that failure to do so requires dismissal. (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 12 (citing Haw. Rev. Stat. § 480-13.3).) The IPP responds that at least two courts have allowed plaintiffs to proceed under the Hawaii Antitrust Act, despite their failure to comply with pre-suit notice requirements. (IPP ReSp. to Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 16 (citing In re Aggrenox Antitrust Litig., 94 F. Supp. 3d 224, 253-54 \(D. Conn. 2015\) (Aggrenox I); In re Aftermarket Filters Antitrust Litig., No. 08-md-4883, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104114, 2009 WL 3754041, at \*6 \(N.D. Ill. Nov. 5, 2009\))).

The Court finds the cases cited by the IPP to be persuasive on the question of whether failure to comply with the statutory requirement is fatal to a claim under the Hawaii Antitrust Act. In Aftermarket Filters, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104114, 2009 WL 3754041, at \*6, the court held that the statutory scheme did not imply that dismissal was the proper remedy for failing to comply with [*69] the notification requirement. Moreover, defendants could not use the notification requirement "as a shield to avoid answering for alleged anti-competitive behavior." Id. The court in Aggrenox I, 94 F. Supp. 3d at 253-54, adopted this reasoning.

The case cited by Defendants, In re Asacol Antitrust Litig., No. 15-cv-12370, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 94605, 2016 WL 4083333, at \*14 n.14 \(D. Mass. July 20, 2016\) (Asacol I), is not persuasive. There, the court admitted that "[c]ourts are divided on whether Hawaii's statute necessitates dismissal" but dismissed the claim without looking specifically to Hawaii law. Id.

However, even if I were to find that the Hawaii statute required dismissal of the IPP's claim in Hawaii state court, I would find that Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23 is comprehensive with respect to pre-filing requirements in federal court, as held by the United States Supreme Court in Shady Grove Orthopedic Associates v. Allstate Insurance Co., 559 U.S. 393, 130 S. Ct. 1431, 176 L. Ed. 2d 311 \(2010\). "The Second Circuit has not taken up the problem of the effect of Shady Grove's split opinions." *In re Aggrenox Antitrust Litig., No. 14-md-2516, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104647, 2016 WL 4204478, at \*5 \(D. Conn. Aug. 9, 2016\)* (Aggrenox I). According to Justice Scalia's plurality opinion, "the only test of a Rule's validity under the *Rules Enabling Act* is 'whether it regulates procedure,'" which the Court "found that *Rule 23* did." *In re Trilegiant Corp., 11 F. Supp. 3d 82, 116 \(D. Conn. 2014\)*. According to Justice Stevens' concurrence, if the state rule conflicts with *Rule 23*, the state rule will [*70] yield only if it is not "so bound up with the state-created right or remedy that it defines the scope of that substantive right or remedy." *Shady Grove, 559 U.S. at 419-20* (Stevens, J., concurring).

---

<sup>20</sup> Although this Court would ordinarily proceed through the state law claims in alphabetical order there exists much more fulsome case law regarding the pre-suit notice requirement under the Hawaii Antitrust Act than there does for any of the other states.

HN13 [↑] I find that Hawaii's limitation on class actions is "a state law that restricts the types of claims eligible for class treatment beyond the limits established by *Rule 23*." *In re Restasis Antitrust Litig., No. 18-md-2819, 355 F. Supp. 3d 145, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 194161, 2018 WL 5928143, at \*6 \(E.D.N.Y. Nov. 13, 2018\)*. It thus conflicts with the federal rule. Id. Under the plurality approach, therefore, the Hawaii Antitrust Act's notice provision would yield to *Rule 23*.

Moreover, a majority of federal courts have held that, pursuant to Justice Stevens' approach, the pre-suit notice requirement is not substantive. See, e.g., *Restasis, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 194161, 2018 WL 5928143, at \*6. Aggrenox I, 94 F. Supp. 3d at 254*, is particularly persuasive. There, the court reasoned that the plain language of the Hawaii statute itself "does not appear . . . to create a substantive right to recovery that only 'vests' after some action or inaction of the state attorney general. Rather, it creates a right to 'bring an action based on unfair methods of competition' in *section 480-2*, without any reference to notice, and delineates procedural prerequisites for class actions under the chapter in *section 480-13.3*." Id. The court there also observed that defendants had [*71] not drawn the court's attention to any arguments, e.g., from the legislative history, that would counsel a different reading. Id.

This Court agrees with the weight of federal case law, which holds the pre-suit notice provision in the Hawaii Antitrust Act would, first of all, not require dismissal of the suit in state court and that, even if it did, would not override *Rule 23* to bar a claim in federal district court.

The Court therefore DENIES Defendants' motion to dismiss the Hawaii law claim under Count One.

b) Arizona

Count One of the IPP Complaint alleges an antitrust claim under *Ariz. Rev. Stat. §§ 44-1403, et seq.* (CAC ¶ 201 (a).) The *Arizona Antitrust Act* provides, in relevant part: "A person filing a complaint, counterclaim or answer for any violation of the provisions of this article shall simultaneously with the filing of the pleading in the superior court or, in the case of pendent state law claims in the federal court, serve a copy of the complaint, counterclaim or answer on the attorney general." *Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1415\(A\)*.

In supplemental briefing, Defendants argue that notice of suit must be provided to the state's attorney general when the complaint is filed, and that failure to comply with the notice provision is grounds for dismissal. (Gen. [*72] Defs. Suppl. Br. at 12 (citing *Effexor, 337 F. Supp. 3d 435, 2018 WL 4466050, at \* 10-\*11; Asacol I, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 94605, 2016 WL 4083333, at \*14-\*15*.) In response, the IPP cites *In re Broiler Chicken Antitrust Litig., 290 F. Supp. 3d 772, 817 \(N.D. Ill. 2017\)*, where the district court allowed claims under Arizona's Antitrust Act to proceed, despite the plaintiffs' failure to comply with the statutory notice requirements. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 16.)

This Court does not see a meaningful distinction between the pre-suit notification requirement under the Hawaii Antitrust Act and that under the Arizona Antitrust Act, even if other courts have found to the contrary. Moreover, in addition to requiring those filing complaints to notify the attorney general, the statute by its terms also obliges those answering complaints to notify the attorney general. It is hard to imagine that failure to comply with this requirement would necessitate dismissal.

The Court is not persuaded by the reasoning in Effexor, 337 F. Supp. 3d 435, 2018 WL 4466050, at \*10-\*11, or in Asacol I, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 94605, 2016 WL 4083333, at \*14-\*15, which found that there was no conflict between Rule 23 and the Arizona pre-filing requirement. HN14<sup>14</sup> Instead, this Court agrees with the court in Restasis, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 194161, 2018 WL 5928143, at \*6, which found that the United States Supreme Court had held in Shady Grove that Rule 23 is "not silent on the question of whether a particular claim is eligible for class treatment." Restasis, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 194161, 2018 WL 5928143, at \*6. Rule 23 contains its own limitations on those claims eligible for class [*73] treatment; "[t]herefore, a state law that restricts the types of claims eligible for class treatment beyond the limits established by Rule 23 conflicts with the federal rule." Id. Like Hawaii's statute, therefore, this Court could only find that this requirement was grounds for dismissal if it also found the requirement to be substantive.

For the reasons already discussed, however, because this Court finds that, Arizona's pre-suit notice requirement is purely procedural, Defendants' motion to dismiss the Arizona antitrust claim under Count One is DENIED.

c) Nevada

Count One of the IPP Complaint alleges an antitrust claim under Nev. Rev. Stat. §§ 598A.060, et seq. (CAC ¶ 201(n).) The Generic Defendants argue that notice of suit must be provided to the state's attorney general or the claim cannot proceed. (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 12 (citing Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598A.210\(3\).) The statute states, in relevant part: "Any person commencing an action for any violation of the provisions of this chapter shall, simultaneously with the filing of the complaint with the court, mail a copy of the complaint to the Attorney General." Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598A.210\(3\).

Defendants argue that failure to notify the attorney general requires dismissal. (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 12 (citing Effexor, 337 F. Supp. 3d 435, 2018 WL 4466050, at \*10-\*11; Asacol I, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 94605, 2016 WL 4083333, at \*14-\*15.) In response, the [*74] IPP does not cite any cases that discuss Nevada law particularly, but instead argues generally that "pre-suit notice requirements are procedural and, therefore, superseded by federal law." (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 16 (citing Mace v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 109 F.3d 338, 346 \(7th Cir. 1997\).)

Only scant federal case law interprets the Nevada Antitrust Act's statutory notice requirement in light of Shady Grove, and the Court is not aware of any Nevada cases that discuss whether the requirement is substantive or procedural in nature.

Again, however, the Court sees no meaningful difference between the text of Nevada's statute and that of Hawaii's. The Court remains unpersuaded by the reasoning of the two cases cited by Defendants, for the reasons discussed above.

As a result, Defendants' motion to dismiss the Nevada law claim under Count One is DENIED.

4. The IPP Fails To State a Claim for Monopolization Under the Law of Kansas

Defendants argue that the IPP may not maintain a claim for monopolization (as opposed to conspiracy to monopolize) under the laws of Kansas, New York, and Tennessee because those statutes do not permit recovery for unilateral anticompetitive conduct. (Forest Br. at 67.)<sup>21</sup> For example, commentators have observed that "Section 50-132 [*75] of the [Kansas Restraint of Trade Act] would not appear to extend to cases of unilateral monopolization." 6 Julian von Kalinowski, Peter Sullivan, & Maureen McGuirl, Antitrust Laws and Trade Regulation § 116.03 (2d ed. 2018); see also Commonwealth Electrical Inspection Servs. v. Town of Clarence, 6 A.D.3d 1185, 1186, 776 N.Y.S.2d 687 \(N.Y. App. Div. 2004\) (New York's Donnelly Act does not create a cause of action for unilateral anticompetitive conduct); In re Ditropan XL Antitrust Litig., 529 F. Supp. 2d 1098, 1109 \(N.D. Cal. 2007\) (the Tennessee Trade Practices Act does not create a cause of action for unilateral monopolization).

---

<sup>21</sup> Although Actavis, Forest, and Merz purport to seek dismissal of the IPP's monopolization claims at CAC ¶¶ 207(e) 207(p) and 207(w), those paragraph numbers actually correspond to Count Two of the IPP Complaint—conspiracy to monopolize—which is not unilateral conduct by definition. As it has several times throughout this opinion the Court assumes that this is a typographical error, and it treats the pleadings as if Actavis, Forest, and Merz instead move to dismiss the equivalent state law claims under Count One of the IPP Complaint.

But the IPP Complaint does not allege monopolization via unilateral action. It pleads "plead some sort of concerted action" in support of its non-conspiracy monopolization claims. (See Forest Br. at 67.) The most obvious example is the IPP's allegation, in support of Count One, that Forest and Merz "entered into unlawful agreements with the Generic [] Defendants." (CAC ¶ 193). That is by definition not unilateral action. The IPP Complaint also plausibly alleges that Forest's hard switch was executed with the participation of other parties; those parties may not have been named as defendants but they did not have to be. For example, Forest signed "an exclusive distribution contract in November, 2014 for Namenda IR with Foundation Care, a mail-order-only pharmacy." (CAC ¶ 95). Forest also "agreed to pay rebates to [*76] health plans to make sure they put Namenda XR on the same tier as Namenda IR so that members would not have an incentive to choose Namenda IR and patients did not have to pay higher co-payments for Namenda XR." (CAC ¶ 110). There is nothing unilateral about any of this. Unilateral conduct might include, in the pharmaceutical context: launching a false advertising campaign against a competitor; filing a sham petition with the FDA; filing a sham patent with the PTO; or initiating sham litigation against a competitor. None of that is alleged here.

However, Actavis, Forest, and Merz also argue that, under the law of these three states, monopolization, absent conspiracy, is not a cognizable cause of action. Since Count Two alleges conspiracy to monopolize, in effect what Defendants argue is that Counts One and Two are necessarily duplicative insofar as they are raised under the law of these three states.

a) Kansas

Defendants cite In re Relafen Antitrust Litigation, 221 F.R.D. 260, 283 \(D. Mass. 2004\), for the proposition that Kansas "prohibits combinations and conspiracies only" and move to dismiss on that basis. (Forest Br. at 67.) The IPP argues that it has pled concerted action in the form of the settlement agreements as the foundation for its Kansas law claim [*77] under Count One. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 14.)

The Kansas Restraint of Trade Act ("KRTA") provides, in relevant part, "No person, servant, agent or employee of any person doing business within the state of Kansas shall conspire or combine with any other persons, within or without the state for the purpose of monopolizing any line of business[.]" Kan. Stat. § 50-132; see also Good v. Dickinson, 128 Kan. 481, 278 P. 730, 732 \(Kan. 1929\) (sale of business, although bilateral conduct, did not constitute trust or combination as required to allege monopolization). The Kansas Supreme Court has observed (albeit in dicta) that, when bringing a claim for monopolization, conspiracy is "legal requirement under Kansas antitrust law." Bergstrom v. Noah, 266 Kan. 829, 974 P.2d 520, 528 \(Kan. 1999\); but see Bellinder v. Microsoft Corp., Nos. 00-c-0855, 00-C-00092, 99-cv-17089, 2001 WL 1397995, at *1 (Kan. Dist. Ct. Sept. 7, 2001) (certifying class action under Kan. Stat. § 50-132 where plaintiffs alleged that Microsoft "abused its monopoly power" but did not allege conspiracy). HN15↑ The weight of published, appellate case law in Kansas holds that the IPP may not proceed on a theory of monopolization unless accompanied by allegations of conspiracy.

Other federal district courts have agreed that monopolization, absent conspiracy, does not state a claim under the KRTA. Relafen, 221 F.R.D. at 283; EpiPen, 336 F. Supp. 3d 1256, 2018 WL 3973153, at \*33.

Obviously, the IP's claim for conspiracy [*78] to monopolize is in Count Two, not Count One, and this court will dismiss duplicative counts. Defendants' motion to dismiss the Kansas claim under Count One is, therefore, GRANTED.

b) New York

HN16 [+] The Donnelly Act prohibits "[e]very contract, agreement, arrangement or combination" that establishes a monopoly or restrains competition. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 340\(1\). As the New York Court of Appeals has held, the term "arrangement" "must be interpreted as contemplating a reciprocal relationship of commitment between two or more legal or economic entities similar to but not embraced within the more exacting terms, 'contract', 'combination' or 'conspiracy'." State v. Mobil Oil Corp., 38 N.Y.2d 460, 344 N.E.2d 357, 359, 381 N.Y.S.2d 426 \(N.Y. 1976\); see also Glob. Reins. Corp. U.S. Branch v. Equitas Ltd., 18 N.Y.3d 722, 969 N.E.2d 187, 192, 946 N.Y.S.2d 71 \(N.Y. 2012\) ("An antitrust claim under the Donnelly Act . . . must allege both concerted action by two or more entities and a consequent restraint of trade within an identified relevant product market.")

In other words, a plaintiff must allege concerted action to bring a claim under the Donnelly Act, which the IPP does here. (See supra.) However, unlike the Kansas statute, there is no requirement that a plaintiff use the word "conspiracy" in order to state a claim.

At least one other federal district court has refused to dismiss a Donnelly Act claim that alleged concerted [*79] action but not conspiracy. In re K-Dur Antitrust Litig., No. 01-cv-1652, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 121946, 2008 WL 2660782, at \*3 n.15 \(D.N.J. Mar. 10, 2008\).

Defendants' motion to dismiss the New York claim under Count One is, therefore, DENIED.

c) Tennessee

HN17 [+] Similar to the Donnelly Act, the Tennessee Trade Practices Act ("TTPA") declares unlawful "[a]ll arrangements, contracts, agreements, trusts, or combinations between persons or corporations made with a view to lessen, or which tend to lessen, full and free competition," as well as those "designed, or which tend to" control prices. Tenn. Code. § 47-25-101. The Supreme Court of Tennessee interprets the TTPA broadly. "Its broad and comprehensive provisions cover every conceivable case of an agreement or contract made to lessen or destroy competition and control prices." Standard Oil Co. v. State, 117 Tenn. 618, 100 S.W. 705, 716 \(Tenn. 1907\). See also Freeman Indus., LLC v. Eastman Chem. Co., 172 S.W.3d 512, 522 \(Term. 2005\) (observing that "the language of Tennessee's antitrust statutes have not changed significantly since Standard Oil" and finding that the TTPA prohibits "agreements" and "arrangements" that affect competition).

Defendants cite no relevant law in support of the proposition that the TTPA requires a plaintiff to allege conspiracy.

Accordingly, Defendants' motion to dismiss the Tennessee claim under Count One is, therefore, DENIED.

C. In Conclusion, the IPP Has Stated [*80] A Claim for Monopolization Under Count One With Respect to the Laws of 23 States

In sum, the Court finds that the IPP has adequately pled facts supporting its allegations of monopolization based upon both the hard switch and the settlement agreements.

The Court also finds that, as a matter of law, the IPP may pursue its Count One claims for monopolization under the laws of all states except Florida, Kansas, Massachusetts, and Utah. Those claims are hereby DISMISSED. The IPP's claim for monopolization under Rhode Island law is hereby DISMISSED IN PART to the extent it seeks damages for injuries occurring before July 15, 2013.

VI. Count Two: Conspiracy To Monopolize Under the Laws of 27 States Against Actavis, Forest, Merz, and the Generic Defendants

Second, the IPP brings an additional 27 state law claims grouped under the heading "Count Two: Conspiracy to Monopolize Under State Law." (CAC at 52.) The claims under Count Two are, for the most part, identical to the 27 claims under Count One. (Id. ¶ 207.)

Count Two differs from Count One in three significant respects.

First, Count Two alleges conspiracy to monopolize rather than actual monopolization. "Defendants have intentionally and unlawfully conspired [*81] in order to allow Forest monopolize [sic] the market for memantine hydrochloride in violation" of state laws. (Id.)

Second, the IPP asserts claims for conspiracy to monopolize under Count Two against Actavis, Forest, Merz, and the Generic Defendants, who are not named in Count One. (Id. at 52.)

Third, whereas Count One alleges injuries to indirect purchasers stemming from both the hard switch and the settlement agreements, Count Two alleges injuries to indirect purchasers stemming from the settlement agreements only. (Id. ¶ 205.)

Beyond that, there are extremely minor, and likely inadvertent, differences between the state law causes of action underlying Counts One and Two. For example, Count One alleges monopolization under the laws of Florida and New Hampshire but does not allege monopolization under the laws of Illinois or Oregon. (Compare id. ¶¶ 201, 207.) Count Two, by contrast, alleges conspiracy to monopolize under the laws of Illinois and Oregon but does not allege conspiracy to monopolize the laws of Florida and New Hampshire. (Id.) There are also several differences—again, probably typographical errors—in the citations to the state codes. (See, e.g., id. ¶¶ 201(i), 207(i).)

Defendants move [*82] to dismiss Count Two in all or large part for many of the same reasons as they did for Count One, including:

- The IPP has expressly disclaimed reliance on Actavis, 570 U.S. at 158, and, in any event, cannot prove that the agreements contained unlawful "reverse payments", (Forest Br. at 34-60);
- Any injuries the IPP alleges it suffered due to the settlement agreements is purely speculative, (id. at 40-46);
- The claims are "likely" time-barred by the applicable state statutes of limitations, (id. at 65 n.42).
- The IPP lacks Article III standing to assert claims in states where it has not made purchases and thereby suffered injury in fact, which are all but nine states, (id. at 65-66);
- Illinois Brick bars the IPP's claims in six states, (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 10-11); and
- The IPP has failed to satisfy pre-suit notice requirements in four states, (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 11-13).

For the reasons discussed in the preceding sections of this opinions, none of these arguments has merit, with the exception of the arguments that (i) Massachusetts bars indirect purchasers from recovering under its antitrust act; (ii) Utah bars indirect purchasers from recovering under its antitrust act unless they are citizens or residents of Utah; and (iii) Rhode Island [*83] barred indirect purchasers from recovering under its antitrust act until the amendments of July 15, 2013. Therefore, the Massachusetts and Utah claims under Count Two are hereby DISMISSED, and the Rhode Island claim under Count Two is hereby DISMISSED IN PART, to the extent it seeks damages for injuries occurring before July 15, 2013.

Defendants also raise a handful of arguments specific to Count Two, viz.:

- The IPP does not adequately allege a conspiracy because it pleads only parallel conduct without the necessary "plus factors" that would be indicative of agreement; (Gen. Defs. Br. at 20; Forest Br. at 60);
- The Illinois Antitrust Act grants a right to bring a class action to the Illinois attorney general only (Gen. Defs. Br. at 35 n.15); and
- Oregon adheres to the law of Illinois Brick and therefore precludes recovery for indirect purchasers, (Gen. Defs. Br. at 35).

As with Count One, the Court first analyzes the argument of general applicability, and then turns to the Illinois and Oregon arguments.

A. The IPP States a Claim for Conspiracy To Monopolize

Defendants argue in their original briefing<sup>22</sup> that the IPP fails to allege a conspiracy, thereby necessitating dismissal of Count Two, [*84] because it has not pled sufficient "plus factors" to support an inference of conspiracy. (Forest Br. at 60; Gen. Defs. Br. at 20.)

This is, of course, an argument with respect to the elements of an antitrust conspiracy under federal law. Neither party has briefed the elements of conspiracy—let alone what is adequate at the motion to dismiss stage—under each state's law. However, both parties have apparently used federal antitrust law as a guidepost, and this Court does the same. The Court reminds the IPP that it will be required to show at the class certification stage that common legal issues with respect to the conspiracy elements of each state's law predominate over any individual issues.

Under the guideposts laid out by federal law, the IPP has pled sufficient circumstantial evidence to support a conspiracy to monopolize.

"[C]ourts have not given much attention to conspiracy to monopolize as a distinct antitrust offense." 2-16 Earl W. Kintner et al., Federal Antitrust Law § 16.39 (2017). Nonetheless, "in deciding whether there is concerted action, courts routinely apply the same analysis under both Sections 1 and 2" of the Sherman Act. 2 von Kalinowski, Sullivan, & McGuirl, supra, § 26.02; see also Areeda & Hovenkamp, supra, § 41.01[A]. "In order to establish a conspiracy in violation [*85] of § 1, whether horizontal, vertical, or both, proof of joint or concerted action is required; proof of unilateral action does not suffice." Anderson News, L.L.C. v. Am. Media, Inc., 680 F.3d 162, 183 (2d Cir. 2012). Put another way, "Since mere parallel behavior can be consistent with independent conduct, courts have held that a plaintiff must show the existence of additional circumstances, often referred to as 'plus' factors, which, when viewed in conjunction with the parallel acts, can serve to allow a fact-finder to infer a conspiracy." Apex Oil Co. v. DiMauro, 822 F.2d 246, 253 (2d Cir. 1987).

Defendants argue principally that parallel contingent launch provisions, on their own, are insufficient to establish a conspiracy. (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 8 (citing In re Nexium (Esomeprazole) Antitrust Litig., 842 F.3d 34, 55 (1st Cir. 2016)). Indeed, some courts in this district have found that pleading only contingent launch provisions does not survive a motion to dismiss. See Actos I, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 127748, 2015 WL 5610752, at *23. Moreover, it is true that when plaintiffs build their conspiracy cases on contingent launch clauses alone, they often fail at the summary judgment stage. See, e.g., King Drug Co. of Florence, Inc. v. Cephalon, Inc., Nos. 06-cv-1797, 06-cv-1833, 06-cv-2768, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84818, 2014 WL 2813312, at *14 (RD. Pa. June 23, 2014). Finally, the Nexium court found that, at trial, the absence of evidence other than contingent launch provisions entitled the defendants to judgment as a matter of [*86] law on the conspiracy claim. Nexium, 842 F.3d at 55.

However, this Court disagrees that more is presently required because, "to present a plausible claim at the pleading stage, the plaintiff need not show that its allegations suggesting an agreement are more likely than not true or that they rule out the possibility of independent action, as would be required at later litigation stages such as a defense motion for summary judgment . . . or a trial." Anderson News, 680 F.3d at 184 (internal citations omitted).

First, the IPP has met its burden to show parallel conduct, as it has alleged that the Generic Defendants entered into settlement agreements around the same time with Forest and Merz that contained the same pertinent provisions. (See IPP Resp. to Forest Br. at 36-37; see also CAC ¶ 76.) For example, Plaintiff alleges that the Generic Defendants entered into the settlement agreements in July, September, October, and December of 2009. (CAC ¶ 75.) Plaintiff also alleges that each of these agreements contained acceleration clauses, which led to agreement not to launch any competing generic formulations until July 11, 2015. (CAC ¶¶ 76, 79.) Even at the summary judgment stage, for example, the Nexium court found it significant for inferring [*87] the existence of a conspiracy that each generic competitor "agreed to delay its market entry on the express condition that every other Generic Defendant do the same." Nexium, 842 F. Supp. 3d at 54. The Court will not ignore this potent allegation merely because other courts have found that, after discovery, additional support is required.

---

<sup>22</sup> By way of background, I note briefly that the Court did not previously have occasion to consider the conspiracy issue in the DP Action. The DP Action did not expressly assert conspiracy as a cause of action, (15-cv-7488, Did. No. 29 ¶¶ 237-65), and the DPPs later informed the Court that they had abandoned any "inter-generic conspiracy claim" raised under Count IV of their Complaint, Namenda V, 331 F. Supp. 3d 152, 2018 WL 3970674, at *25.

Second, the IPP adequately alleges "plus factors" that support an inference of conspiracy at the motion to dismiss stage. The IPP Complaint directly alleges that the settlements were "negotiated collectively" or in such a manner that each Generic Defendant was informed of the pertinent terms of the other agreements. (CAC ¶¶ 75, 77.) Such collective negotiations, if true, would certainly constitute circumstantial evidence of a conspiracy.

The IPP Complaint also adequately alleges behavior against interest, which, combined with allegations of parallel conduct, can be indicative of concerted rather than independent action. See, e.g., Toys "R" Us, Inc. v. FTC, 221 F.3d 928, 935 (7th Cir. 2000); Apex Oil, 822 F.2d at 254. Forest, Merz, and the Generic Defendants entered into the settlement agreements between July and December of 2009, which allowed for generic entry no earlier than July 11, 2015. (CAC ¶ 19-29.) The FDA's automatic, 30-month stays allegedly [*88] began to expire in April 2010. (CAC ¶ 72.) The FDA tentatively approved the generics' ANDAs in January and April of 2010. (CAC ¶ 82.) This translates to a delay of roughly five years in exchange for only three months' competition within the exclusivity period, which certainly states a claim against interest that is plausible on its face.

Finally, the presence of contingent launch clauses, which are analogous to "most favored nation" provisions, raises antitrust scrutiny, even if they may have certain procompetitive effects. See, e.g., U.S. v. Apple, Inc., 952 F. Supp. 2d 638, 701 (S.D.N.Y. 2013).

The Court finds that the IPP states a claim for conspiracy to monopolize.

B. Illinois

Count Two (but not Count One) of the IPP Complaint alleges claims under the Illinois Antitrust Act ("IAA"), 740 Ill. Comp. Stat. 10/3, et seq. (CAC ¶ 207(e).) Defendants move to dismiss this claim because the statute states, in relevant part, "no person shall be authorized to maintain a class action in any court of this State for indirect purchasers asserting claims under this Act, with the sole exception of this State's Attorney General." 740 Ill. Comp. Stat. 10/7(2); (Forest Suppl. Br. at 10 n.4). See also Gaebler v. N.M. Potash Corp., 285 Ill. App. 3d 542, 676 N.E.2d 228, 230, 221 Ill. Dec. 707 (Ill. App. Ct. 1996); Bobrowicz v. City of Chicago, 168 Ill. App. 3d 227, 522 N.E.2d 663, 669, 119 Ill. Dec. 1 (Ill. App. Ct. 1988).

The IPP responds that the restriction "does nothing more than dictate the manner in which the [*89] procedural device of a class action can proceed" and does not apply in federal court pursuant to the Supreme Court's holding in Shady Grove Orthopedic Assocs., P.A. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 559 U.S. 393, 130 S. Ct. 1431, 176 L. Ed. 2d 311 (2010). (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 8-10.)

HN18 Courts in this circuit have split as to whether the indirect purchaser class action bar in the IAA is procedural or substantive, under Justice Stevens' concurrence in Shady Grove. Compare Dig. Music, 812 F. Supp. 2d at 416, with Aggrenox II, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104647, 2016 WL 4204478, at *6. However, the Court agrees with those cases in this circuit that have treated the IAA as stating a procedural rule applicable in Illinois state courts, rather than a substantive rule applicable to federal courts sitting in diversity jurisdiction in New York.

First, the same paragraph of the statute begins by stating that "[n]o provision of this Act shall deny any person who is an indirect purchaser the right to sue for damages." 740 Ill. Comp. Stat. 10/7(2). The statute therefore does not limit the substantive rights of an injured party in an individual action. See Aggrenox II, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104647, 2016 WL 4204478, at *6 ("[A]ny indirect purchaser procedurally blocked from participation in a class action would still have the same remedy in an individual action.")

Moreover, were the IAA to prohibit class actions altogether, the statute would read no differently than the New York class actions bar at issue in *[*90] Shady Grove*—a fact observed by at least one other court in this circuit. *Aggrenox II, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104647, 2016 WL 4204478, at *6* ("I cannot square Shady Grove's allowance of a Rule 23 class action despite New York's class-action bar with the disallowance of a Rule 23 class action in the case of Illinois's class-action bar simply on the basis that Illinois's bar is narrower.").

Defendants' motion to dismiss the Illinois claim for conspiracy to monopolize under Count Two is DENIED.

C. Oregon

Defendants argue that "the laws of Oregon bar recovery for at least part of the period for which Plaintiff seeks damages." (Gen. Defs. Br. at 35 (citing Niaspan, 42 F. Supp. 3d at 759.) The IPP responds that "Rihis is a non-issue" given that the class period begins after the enactment of Oregon's Illinois Brick repealer. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 13.)

Oregon's Illinois Brick repealer statute became effective on January 1, 2010. See Or. Rev. Stat. § 646.780; Laws 2009, c.304, § 1, eff. Jan. 1, 2010. The IPP has proposed a Class Period beginning April 14, 2010. (CAC ¶ 146.) There is therefore no Illinois Brick problem for purposes of this case.

Defendants' motion to dismiss the Oregon claim for conspiracy to monopolize under Count Two is DENIED.

D. In Conclusion, the IPP Has Stated a Claim for Conspiracy to Monopolize Under [*91] Count Two With Respect to the Laws of 25 States

In sum, the Court finds that the IPP has adequately pled facts supporting its allegations of conspiracy to monopolize.

The Court also finds that, as a matter of law, the IPP may pursue its Count Two claims for conspiracy to monopolize under the laws of all states except Massachusetts and Utah. Those claims are hereby DISMISSED. Moreover, the IPP's claim for conspiracy to monopolize under Rhode Island law is hereby DISMISSED IN PART to the extent that it seeks to recover for injuries incurred prior to July 15, 2013.

VII. Count Three: Consumer Protection and Unfair and Deceptive Trade Practices Under the Laws of 25 States Against Actavis, Forest, Merz, and the Generic Defendants

The IPP Complaint next alleges an additional 25 state law claims grouped under the heading "Count Three: Consumer Protection and Unfair and Deceptive Trade Practices." (CAC at 56.) The IPP asserts this cause of action against all Defendants: Actavis, Forest, Merz, and the Generic Defendants. (Id.)

This cause of action alleges that "Defendants engaged in unfair competition or unfair acts or unconcionable [sic] acts or practices in violation of" state consumer protection statutes. [*92] (CAC ¶¶ 212.) Specifically, "There was a gross disparity between the price that [the IPP] and [Class] members paid for the brand product and the value received, given that a less expensive substitute generic product should have been available." (Id. ¶ 213.) Count Three also alleges that the IPP and the Class "were deprived of the opportunity to purchase a generic version of Namenda IR 5 or 10 mg tablets and forced to pay higher prices for Namenda XR." (Id. ¶ 214.) Together, these allegations form the factual nucleus on which the 25 state law consumer protection claims are based.

As they have done with respect to Counts One and Two of the IPP Complaint, Defendants first advance several broad-based arguments aimed at dismissing Count Three of the IPP Complaint as a whole or in large part, viz.:

- The claims are "likely" time-barred under the applicable statute of limitations, (Forest Br. at 65 n.42);
- The IPP lacks Article III standing to bring claims in states where it has not made purchases and thereby suffered injury-in-fact, (Gen. Defs. Br. at 31);

- The IPP must satisfy the pleading requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\), since state consumer protection claims are grounded in fraud, (Gen. Defs. Br. at 38); and [*93]
- In the alternative, IPP has failed to satisfy the Fed. R. Civ. P. 8 pleading standard under Twombly and Iqbal, (id. at 37).

For the reasons already discussed, this Court denies the motion to dismiss the claims as "likely" time-barred. In addition, the Court has already held that it will not dismiss a broad swath of claims for lack of Article III standing, on the basis that the IPP did not suffer injury-in-fact in states where it did not make purchases. However, the Court must consider the other Rule 9\(b\) and Rule 8 arguments.

Defendants next make several separate state-specific arguments, viz.:

- The IPP may not bring state consumer protection claims where the state follows Illinois Brick, (id.);
- The IPP has failed to satisfy the pre-filing requirements under certain states' statutes, (Gen. Defs. Br. at 40; Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 13);
- Certain states require a showing of consumer deception, which the IPP does not and cannot allege, (Forest Br. at 67 n.47);
- Some states require that the claim be based on a consumer transaction or conduct that is consumer-oriented, which the IPP does not plead, (Forest Br. at 67-68 n.48);
- A subset of consumer protection statutes do not cover antitrust conduct, (Forest Br. at 68 n.49; Gen. [*94] Defs. Br. at 40);
- Recovery is possible under certain consumer protection statutes only when the conduct complained of is primarily intrastate, (Forest Br. at 68 n.50; Gen. Defs. Br. at 40, 41-42);
- Certain state statutes confer a right of action only on consumers who are natural persons with regard to transactions made primarily for personal or household purposes, (Forest Br. at 68 n.51), or on consumers who are elderly or disabled, (Forest Br. at 68 n.52; Gen. Defs. Br. at 40); and
- Some states' consumer protection laws prohibit nationwide class actions or prohibit class actions altogether, (Forest Br. at 68 n.53; Gen. Defs. Br. at 39, 41-42).

Defendants raise one or several of these arguments as a defense to each state law claim under Count Three. The table in Appendix 3 of Actavis, Forest, and Merz's original brief provides a mostly accurate overview of which arguments correspond to which claims. (See Forest Br. App'x 3.)

As this Court has done with the other Counts of the IPP Complaint, it first addresses Defendants' arguments of general applicability and then addresses each state law claim.

A. The IPP Adequately Pleads Its State Law Claims Under Twombly and *Iqbal

Defendants argue that the IPP does not [*95] properly plead its claim for violation of state consumer protection laws under Count Three because (i) it does not cite to specific provisions of the consumer protection statutes and (ii) it does not plead the elements of each state's law. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 37, 42.) Merely listing citations to the state codes, they argue, does not satisfy Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 \(2009\) or Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570.

The Court disagrees.

HN19 [Footnote] First, the IPP is not required to identify the particular sections of the code under which the claims are brought, as long as defendants are on notice of the theory plaintiffs are pursuing. See, e.g., In re Propranolol Antitrust Litig., 249 F. Supp. 3d 712, 729 \(S.D.N.Y. 2017\) (denying defendants' motion to dismiss even though indirect purchasers did not specify the state code sections under which the claims were brought).

Moreover, the factual allegations that support the IPP's claims are well-pleaded throughout the Complaint, and it is not necessary that the IPP reiterate each of them when listing its causes of action in the final section of the Complaint. See In re Domestic Drywall Antitrust Litig. No. 13-cv-2437, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 90619, 2016 WL 3769680, at *11 (E.D. Pa. July 13, 2016) ("To the extent Defendants' one-paragraph [Twombly] argument is an invitation for the Court to comb through all of Plaintiffs' consumer protection claims and determine whether the elements [*96] have been adequately pleaded, the Court respectfully declines the invitation."); see also In re Petrobras Sec. Litig., 152 F. Supp. 3d 186, 197 (S.D.N.Y. 2016) (in securities fraud case, complaint "as a whole" adequately pleaded specific statements made or authorized by specific defendants, actual reliance, and failure to comply with statutory requirements).

Finally, although state laws may vary to some degree in the elements that they require, the IPP has made an effort to limit its claims to state laws that share substantive foundational features—such as a right of action for "unfair," as opposed to "deceptive," trade practices. See, e.g., Propranolol, 249 F. Supp. 3d at 729 (finding that a high level of detail was "not necessary at the pleading stage because the 'elements of unjust enrichment are similar in every state.") (citing In re Credit Default Swaps Antitrust Litig., No. 13-md-2476, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 123784, 2014 WL 4379112, at *18 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 4, 2014)).

B. The IPP Is Not Required to Plead Its Complaint in Accordance With Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b)

Defendants next argue that because "allegations of deceptive trade practices . . . amount to allegations of fraud," the IPP must satisfy the heightened pleading standard of Rule 9(b). (Gen. Defs. Br. at 38 (citing NCC Sunday Inserts, Inc. v. World Color Press, Inc., 692 F. Supp. 327, 330 (S.D.N.Y. 1988); Gen. Defs. Reply at 24.)

The IPP responds that it "has carefully limited its consumer fraud claims to the 'unfair methods' [*97] and 'unfair trade practices' prongs of the statutes." (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 17.) (See also CAC ¶ 214 (alleging injury "as a direct and proximate result of Defendants' unfair competition, unfair or unconscionable acts and practices").) The IPP also responds that NCC Sunday Inserts, 692 F. Supp. at 330, was binding only with respect to the Connecticut Unfair Trade Practices Act, under which the IPP does not bring a claim. (Id. at 17.)

Courts regularly distinguish between state consumer protection claims that proceed under a theory of "deceptive practices" and those that proceed under a theory of "unfair practices." See, e.g., In re Packaged Seafood Prods. Antitrust Litig., 242 F. Supp. 3d 1033, 1074 (S.D. Cal. 2017); In re Auto. Parts Antitrust Litig. (Instrument Panel Clusters), No. 12-md-2311, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 90724, 2014 WL 2993753, at *19 (E.D. Mich. July 3, 2014). This is consistent with the federal FTC Act, which allows recovery for "unfair" as well as "deceptive" acts or practices, 15 U.S.C. §§ 45(a)(1), 45(n), and on which "virtually every" state consumer protection law is based, Toward Greater Equality in Business Transactions: A Proposal to Extend the Little FTC Acts to Small Businesses, 96 Harv. L. Rev. 1621, 1622 (1983).

As for NCC Sunday Inserts, that decision—which addresses a statute not at issue in this case, the Connecticut Unfair Trade Practices Act—does not hold that the heightened pleading standards of Rule 9(b) apply to allegations [*98] under state consumer protection laws. That case held only that, "To the extent that fraud is being alleged under the rubric 'deceptive trade practices,' Rule 9(b) governs the pleading procedures." NCC Sunday Inserts, 692 F. Supp. at 330.

The IPP does not allege anything under the rubric of "deceptive trade practices"—deliberately so. In the absence of any "developed argument or legal authority" for Defendants' argument that I must treat the CAC as alleging deception rather than unfair acts, the claims may proceed. Dig. Music, 812 F. Supp. 2d at 408 n.10.

Defendants' motion to dismiss all Count Three claims on these grounds is, therefore, DENIED.

C. Illinois Brick Does Not Bar the IPP's Consumer Protection Claims

Defendants argue—but do not cite any persuasive authority—that consumer protection claims brought by indirect purchasers are barred in all states that follow Illinois Brick. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 31-34.) Instead, the cases they cite focus overwhelmingly on unjust enrichment claims brought by indirect purchasers. (Id.)

The Generic Defendants cite only one case in which a court dismissed a consumer protection act claim that was duplicative of a state antitrust claim; in that instance, however, the district court based its finding on a case from the Supreme Court of Illinois [*99] that specifically barred plaintiffs from invoking the Consumer Fraud Act to recover for conduct not covered by the Illinois Antitrust Act. In re Wellbutrin XL Antitrust Litig., 260 F.R.D. 143, 162 (E.D. Pa. 2009).

The Court DENIES without prejudice the Defendants' motion to dismiss the majority of claims under Count Three in one fell swoop. I will consider the Illinois Brick arguments to the extent that the Defendants have briefed them with respect to each state's law.

D. The IPP States a Claim Under the Consumer Protection Laws of Some States But Not Others

I now turn to the arguments aimed at individual state law claims.

At this particular stage, the Court notes that it has been tasked with determining the intricacies of 25 states' consumer protection laws, in many cases with the benefit of very little briefing. For certain claims, Defendants' arguments for dismissal consists of little more than a footnote in its brief, which in many cases is a citation to either a single federal district court opinion in a similar, nationwide class of indirect purchasers, or a particular statutory provision, with little or no explanation of how state courts have interpreted this particular provision.

As is its duty, the Court has taken these arguments seriously. Nonetheless, [*100] the Court cautions that, to the extent this very limited briefing invites the Court to sua sponte "comb through all of Plaintiffs' consumer protection claims and determine whether the elements have been adequately pleaded, the Court respectfully declines the invitation." Domestic Drywall, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 90619, 2016 WL 3769680, at * 11. In other words, this Court responds to the arguments that are affirmatively raised in Defendants' briefing but does not undertake an independent assessment of arguments that are not pointed out by the Defendants—who are represented by able counsel.

Because of Defendants challenge each state's law on multiple grounds, this opinion proceeds state by state.

1. Alabama

Generic Defendants move to dismiss the Alabama claim under Count Three because the IPP cites to Alabama's antitrust statute, Ala. Code § 8-10-3, rather than to its consumer protection statute, Ala. Code § 8-10-2. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 37 n.17.) As this Court has done throughout this opinion for the benefit of both the IPP and the Defendants, it takes the IPP at its word that this is a typographical error. (See IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 18 n.8.)

For the first time in supplemental briefing, Defendants argue that the IPP fails to satisfy the pre-filing notice requirement under Alabama's consumer [*101] protection statute. (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 13 (citing Ala. Code § 8-19-10(e).) That provision states, in relevant part: "At least 15 days prior to the filing of any action under this section, a written demand for relief . . . , shall be communicated to any prospective respondent by placing in the United States mail or otherwise." Ala. Code § 8-19-10(e).

It also states: "The demand requirements of this subsection shall not apply if the prospective respondent does not maintain a place of business or does not keep assets within the state, but such respondent may otherwise employ the provisions of this section by making a written offer of relief and paying the rejected tender into court as soon as practicable after receiving notice of an action commenced under this section." Id.

Defendants have not argued that they maintain a place of business or keep assets within the state, and nothing in the CAC alleges that they so do. (See CAC ¶¶ 16-30.) Even if this Court were to determine that Defendants maintain a place of business or keep assets in the state, nothing in the statute suggests that notifying defendants is a prerequisite to suit or that an action that failed to comply with this provision would require dismissal in state court. [*102] Indeed, the relatively flexible notice provisions for out-of-state defendants suggests otherwise. Moreover, the tenor of the provision as a whole suggests that it operates much like a Rule 68 offer of judgment and is aimed at encouraging settlement.

Effexor, 337 F. Supp. 3d 435, 2018 WL 4466050, cited by Defendants, did not analyze the language of the various notice provisions at issue or opine on their purpose. That case also did not examine whether, under the laws of each state, the proper remedy for non-compliance with the notice remedy would be dismissal. Beyond Effexor, Defendants cite no case for the proposition that defendant notification requirements under these statutes would require dismissing the claim here.

Defendants' motion to dismiss the Alabama law claim under Count Three is DENIED.

2. Arizona

The IPP has withdrawn this claim. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 17 n.7.)

3. California

Defendants first argue that the California Unfair Competition Law \("CUCL"\) requires a showing of consumer deception. (Forest Br. at 67 n.47.) The IPP responds that it has limited its state consumer protection claims to the "unfair methods" and "unfair trade practices" prongs of state statutes. (IPP. Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 17).

Here, the IPP has [*103] the better of the arguments. HN20↑ For purposes of CUCL, unfair practices include, among other things, "any unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business act or practice." Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. Moreover, California's Supreme Court has held "that because the prohibitions on 'unlawful,' 'unfair' or 'fraudulent' practices are written in the disjunctive, each of those 'prongs' gives rise to a separate and distinct theory of liability." 1-16 Cheryl Lee Johnson (ed.), California Antitrust and Unfair Competition Law § 16.04 (revised ed. 2018) (citing Cel-Tech Commc'n, Inc. v. L.A. Cellular Tel. Co., 20 Cal. 4th 163, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527, 540 \(Cal. 1999\); see also Podolsky v. First Healthcare Corp., 50 Cal. App. 4th 632, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89, 102 \(Cal. Ct. App. 1996\) (nursing home's practice of requiring relatives of patients on Medicare/Medicaid to sign guarantees could fall under "unlawful" prong of the CUCL, even if not deceptive)). Therefore, the IPP is correct that it need not allege deceptive behavior to survive a motion to dismiss.

Defendants next argue that the IPP must plead primarily intrastate conduct in order to allege a claim under the CUCL. (Forest Br. at 68 n.50). The IPP responds that the Complaint alleges intrastate effects and that, as a matter of law, a nationwide antitrust class action satisfies "intrastate" pleading requirements. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 32.)

The Court agrees that the IPP has pleaded intrastate [*104] effects in its Complaint, insofar as the IPP alleges both that it indirectly purchased Namenda in California, (CAC ¶ 15), and that hundreds of thousands of consumers nationwide, including, presumably, California residents, were affected, (id. ¶ 48).

The only case cited by Defendants is inapposite, as it discusses wholly extraterritorial application of the statute and says nothing about whether the conduct must occur "primarily" within the state. Meridian Project Sys., Inc. v. Hardin Constr. Co., LLC, 404 F. Supp. 2d 1214, 1225 \(E.D. Cal. 2005\). In other cases, California courts have allowed class members who were either California residents or for whom the relevant transaction had occurred in state to bring claims under the CUCL. Norwest Mortg., Inc. v. Superior Court, 72 Cal. App. 4th 214, 222, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18 \(Cal. 1998\).

Ct. App. 1999) (class members who were either California residents or for whom the defendant had purchased insurance within California could bring claims).

Finally, Defendants argue that the IPP has not satisfied California's pre-filing notice requirement. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 41 (citing Cal. Bus & Prof. Code § 17209).) HN21 That provision reads: "If a violation of this chapter is alleged or the application or construction of this chapter is in issue in any proceeding in the Supreme Court of California, a state court of appeal, or the appellate division of a superior court, each person filing any brief or [*105] petition with the court in that proceeding shall serve, within three days of filing with the court, a copy of that brief or petition on the Attorney General. . . and on the district attorney of the county in which the lower court action or proceeding was originally filed." Id. (emphasis added). That provision, by its terms, applies only to appellate proceedings in state court. Since this is a diversity case in a federal district court, the statute does not apply.

As a result, the Court DENIES the Defendants' motion to dismiss the California claim under Count Three.

4. District of Columbia

Defendants argue that the IPP fails to state a claim under the D.C. Consumer Protection and Procedures Act \("DCCPPA"\) because it is not a "consumer" within the meaning of that statute. (Forest Br. at 67-68 n.48 (citing D.C. Code § 28-3905\(k\).)

The relevant provision of the DCCPPA states: "A consumer may bring an action seeking relief from the use of a trade practice in violation of a law of the District." D.C. Code § 28-3905\(k\)\(1\)\(A\). "When used as a noun," a "consumer" means "a person who, other than for purposes of resale, does or would purchase, lease (as lessee), or receive consumer goods or services, including as a co-obligor or surety, or does [*106] or would otherwise provide the economic demand for a trade practice." Id. § 28-3901\(a\)\(2\)\(A\). A "trade practice" means "any act... [involving] ... a sale, lease or transfer, of consumer goods or services." Id. § 28-3901\(a\)\(6\). When used as an adjective, "consumer" relates to things "receive[d] and normally use[d] for personal, household or family purposes." Id. § 28-3901 \(a\)\(2\)\(B\)\(i\).

HN22 Sergeant Benevolent, the only Named Plaintiff in this Action, does not fit the definition of "consumer" under the plain language of the statute. Additionally, the D.C. Court of Appeals has clarified that "the CPPA was designed to police trade practices arising only out of consumer-merchant relationships, and does not apply to commercial dealings outside the consumer sphere." Ford v. Chartone, Inc., 908 A.2d 72, 81 \(D.C. 2006\) (internal quotations omitted). "[T]he CPPA does not protect merchants in their commercial dealings with suppliers or other merchants." Id. at 83. For example, D.C. courts have held that a taxi driver's claims for coerced purchases of gasoline and other supplies against his taxi-owners association do not state a claim under the DCCPPA. Mazanderan v. Indep. Taxi Owners' Ass'n, Inc., 700 F. Supp. 588, 591 \(D.D.C. 1988\). The relevant question is whether the plaintiffs activity is akin to that of a merchant. Ford, 908 A. 3d at 83.

In addition, "Courts overseeing multidistrict litigation as well as state [*107] courts in the District of Columbia have ... held that transactions along the distribution chain that do not involve the ultimate retail customer are not 'consumer transactions' that the [DCCPPA] seeks to reach. Rather, it is the ultimate retail transaction between the final distributor and the individual member of the consuming public that the [DCCPPA] covers." In re Cast Iron Soil Pipe & Fittings Antitrust Litig., No. 14-m-2508, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 121620, 2015 WL 5166014, at \*30 \(E.D. Term. 2015\).

HN23 Sergeant Benevolent is not an "individual member of the consuming public." Id. Moreover, it is immaterial that Sergeant Benevolent pays for pharmaceuticals prescribed to its members, who do use them for "personal, family, or household purposes." D.C. Code § 28-3901\(a\)\(2\)\(B\)\(i\). As other courts have held, "when an insurance plan makes a purchase, it does so, not for personal purposes, but for the plan's business purposes, i.e., to fulfill its side of a contractual relationship with its members, who pay premiums for its coverage." Restasis, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 194161, 2018 WL 5928143, at \*7 (collecting cases).

Because the IPP fails to state a claim under the DCCPPA under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\), the Court GRANTS Defendants' motion to dismiss.<sup>23</sup>

5. Florida

Defendants move to dismiss the claim under the Florida Deceptive and Unfair Trade Practices Act ("FDUTPA") on the grounds [*108] that the IPP does not sufficiently allege intrastate conduct. (Forest Br. at 68 n.50; Gen. Defs. Br. at 40-41 n.20.) Relatedly, Defendants argue that a plaintiff may not use the FDUTPA to bring claims on behalf of a nationwide class. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 39 n.18).

The cases cited by Defendants, however, say nothing about an intrastate conduct requirement and instead stand for the proposition that the FDUTPA covers only those individuals who live or make purchases in Florida. It is intrastate injury, not conduct, which implicates the FDUTPA.

For example, in Oce Printing Sys. USA, Inc. v. Mailers Data Servs., Inc., 760 So.2d 1037, 1040 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2000), the court held that plaintiffs, a class of users, brokers, and servicers of Siemens/Oce ultra-high speed printers, possessed viable causes of action under FDUTPA only if they were also Florida consumers, and that they would not be entitled to recovery merely on the basis that Siemens/Oce had entered into certain anticompetitive agreements or otherwise engaged in unlawful conduct within the state of Florida. Id.

Likewise, the court in Montgomery v. New Piper Aircraft, 209 F.R.D. 221, 228 (S.D. Fla. 2002), held that a nationwide class of aircraft owners could not recover under the FDUTPA merely because the defendant's unlawful conduct had taken place within the state. Id. Instead, only Florida consumers [*109] could take advantage of the FDUTPA. Id.

Finally, Coastal Physician Servs. of Broward Cty., Inc. v. Ortiz, 764 So.2d 7, 8 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1999), held that the FDUTPA was "for the protection of in-state consumers for either in-state or out-of-state debt collectors." Id.

The IPP alleges that it "indirectly purchased, paid and/or provided reimbursement for Namenda in ... Florida." (CAC ¶ 15.) Moreover, although the IPP brings the IP Action on behalf of a nationwide Class, it does not purport to enable all members of the Class to recover under the FDUTPA. For these reasons, Defendants' motion to dismiss the Florida claim under Count Three is DENIED.

6. Hawaii

Defendants argue that the Hawaii Unfair and Deceptive Acts or Trade Practices statute ("HUDAP") only "allow[s] suits by consumers who are natural persons with regard to transactions made primarily for personal or household purposes." (Forest Br. at 68 n.51). The statute reads, in relevant part: "No person other than a consumer, the attorney general or the director of the office of consumer protection may bring an action based upon unfair or deceptive acts or practices declared unlawful by this section." Haw. Rev. Stat. § 480-2\(d\). The preceding section of the statute defines "consumer" as "a natural person who, primarily for personal, family, or household [*110] purposes, purchases, attempts to purchase, or is solicited to purchase goods or services or who commits money, property, or services in a personal investment." Haw. Rev. Stat. § 480-1.

Sergeants Benevolent Association Health & Welfare Fund is not a natural person. It is a trust, incorporated in New York, which reimburses either pharmacies or its members for purchases of Namenda. Additionally, Sergeants Benevolent also does not pay for Namenda "primarily for personal, family, or household purposes," regardless of how its member insureds use Namenda. See Restasis, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 194161, 2018 WL 5928143, at \*7. Therefore, it fails to state a claim under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) with respect to the HUDAP.

---

<sup>23</sup> Defendants also argue that the DCCPPA require plaintiffs to allege deceptive conduct, (Forest Br. at 67 n.47), and is inapplicable to antitrust conduct, (Forest Br. at 68 n.49; Gen. Defs. Br at 40 n. 19) However because the Court dismisses the DCCPPA claim under Count Three for failure to state a claim based on a retail purchase for personal, family, or household purposes, it does not reach these arguments.

Defendants' motion to dismiss the Hawaii law claim under Count Three is GRANTED.

7. Idaho

Defendants first argue that plaintiff has failed to plead deceptive conduct, as required by the Idaho Consumer Protection Act ("ICPA"). (Forest Br. at 67 n.47.) The IPP responds that the ICPA confers a right of action based on "unfair" conduct. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 17.) Defendants also argue that the ICPA makes unlawful only specific types of conduct, including misrepresentations, and does not include antitrust conduct. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 40 n.19 (citing Ida. Code § 48-603.) These arguments are treated [*111] together.

HN24 [+] Like many state consumer protection laws, most of the conducted enumerated in the ICPA focuses on deceptive, fraudulent, or misleading practices. Idaho Code § 48-603. Nonetheless, there is no firm requirement that a plaintiff show deception since, for example, "engaging in any unconscionable method, act, or practice in the conduct of trade or commerce-is expressly contemplated by the Act. Ida. Code § 48-603\(18\); id. § 48-603C. Other courts have found that plaintiffs may state a claim for anticompetitive conduct, even if that conduct is not deceptive, under this prong of the ICPA. In re New Motor Vehicles Canadian Exp. Antitrust Litig., 350 F. Supp. 2d 160, 184 \(D. Me. 2004\).

Moreover, the ICPA contains a harmonization provision with the federal FTC Act. Idaho Code § 48-604\(1\). And, the Supreme Court of Idaho has held that the ICPA must be "liberally construed to effect the legislative intent to deter deceptive or unfair trade practices and to provide relief for consumers exposed to proscribed practices." In re W. Acceptance Corp., Inc., 117 Idaho 399, 788 P.2d 214, 216 \(Ida. 1990\) (emphasis added) (internal quotation omitted). The Court therefore denies Defendants' motion to dismiss the ICPA claim.

Defendants next argue that the ICPA requires that the underlying conduct involve a consumer transaction or conduct that is consumer-oriented. (Forest Br. at 67-68 n.48 (citing Sheet Metal Workers Local 441 Health & Welfare Plan v. GlaxoSmithKline, PLC, 737 F. Supp. 2d 380, 409 \(E.D. Pa. 2010\)).) [*112]

In Sheet Metal Workers, the court referenced a state court decision, State ex rel Wasden v. Daicel Chem. Indus., Ltd., 141 Idaho 102, 106 P.3d 428, 435 \(Ida. 2005\), which examined the unconscionability provisions of the ICPA and found that they were "designed to prohibit unconscionable 'sales conduct' that is directed at the consumer." Id. (emphasis added). Wasden, however, hinged on two factors: whether the alleged price-fixing of sorbates, an antimicrobial food and animal feed additive, was "sales conduct" for purposes of the ICPA and whether the defendants had ever sold sorbates to consumers in Idaho. Id. at 430, 435.

Here, by contrast, the Defendants are alleged to have marketed and sold Namenda to consumers at inflated, anticompetitive prices by, among other things, restricting consumer access to generic versions of Namenda and announcing the withdrawal of the Namenda IR formulation directly to consumers. Thus, construing the allegations in the light most favorable to the Plaintiff, I find that the IPP has adequately alleged "consumer conduct" within the meaning of the statute. See also New Motor Vehicles, 350 F. Supp. 2d at 185 (upholding claim for antitrust conduct under ICPA).

Defendants' motion to dismiss is DENIED.

8. Illinois

Defendants first argue that plaintiffs must allege deception [*113] in order to state a claim under the Illinois Consumer Fraud Act ("ICFA"). (Forest Br. at 67 n.47.) See also Sullivan's Wholesale Drug Co., Inc. v. Faryl's Pharmacy, Inc., 214 Ill. App. 3d 1073, 573 N.E.2d 1370, 1376, 158 Ill. Dec. 185 \(111. App. Ct. 1991\) (plaintiffs

"cause of action must stand or fall on whether defendants' conduct was deceptive") (citing Laughlin v. Evanston Hosp., 133 Ill. 2d 374, 550 N.E.2d 986, 993, 140 Ill. Dec. 861 (Ill. 1990)). The IPP argues that it can plead its claim under the "unfairness" prong of the ICFA, which is separate from the "deception" prong. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 17.)

HN25 At bottom, it is unclear whether Laughlin's statement that the ICFA's "reach was to be limited to conduct that defrauds or deceives consumers or others" was intended to bar all future claims brought under its "unfairness" prong, or whether its holding was, instead, restricted to the price discrimination claims alleged in that particular case. 550 N.E.2d at 993. Subsequent cases in Illinois imply that "unfairness" has survived Laughlin: "[a] plaintiff may allege that conduct is unfair under the [ICFA] without alleging that the conduct is deceptive." Hill v. PS Illinois Tr., 368 Ill. App. 3d 310, 856 N.E.2d 560, 568, 305 Ill. Dec. 755 (Ill. Ct. App. 2006). "A deceptive practices claim must meet Rule 9(b)'s heightened pleading standard, while an unfair practices claim need not because it is not based on fraud." Wheeler v. Assurant Specialty Prop., 125 F. Supp. 3d 834, 842 (N.D. Ill. 2015). I will follow the lead of those Illinois courts and decline to dismiss the IPP's claim as a matter of law on [*114] these grounds.

Second, Defendants argue that the ICFA is inapplicable to antitrust conduct. (Forest Br. at 68 n.49 (citing 815 Ill. Comp. Stat. 505/2; Laughlin, 550 N.E.2d at 993); Gen. Defs. Br. at 40 n.19.) The IPP responds that the ICFA "should be interpreted in the same manner and to the same extent as Section 5 of the FTC Act," which unquestionably includes conduct that violates the antitrust laws. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 26 (citing 815 Ill. Comp. Stat. 505/2).

Again, this Court is not persuaded that Laughlin bars the current claims. Laughlin held that price discrimination, which was not actionable under the IAA, was similarly not actionable under the ICFA. 550 N.E.2d at 993 ("There is no indication that the legislature intended that the Consumer Fraud Act be an additional antitrust enforcement mechanism."); accord Butler v. Jimmy John's Franchise, LLC, 331 F. Supp. 3d 786, 2018 WL 36311577, at *8 (S.D. Ill. 2018) ("the Illinois Supreme Court has instructed that plaintiffs cannot use the [ICFA] to get around the fact that their theory does not fly under the [IAA]."). As a result, Laughlin stands for the proposition that the ICFA is not a safety net that serves to catch residual anticompetitive behavior, although it does not speak to whether the ICFA countenances claims that are also actionable under the IAA.

A subsequent [*115] case, Gaebler v. NM Potash Corp., 285 Ill. App. 3d 542, 676 N.E.2d 228, 230, 221 Ill. Dec. 707 (Ill. App. Ct. 1996), relied on Laughlin to bar claims for anticompetitive conduct that were brought pursuant to the ICFA only-presumably because plaintiffs had tried to skirt the IAA's prohibition on indirect purchaser class actions. Id. ("[C]lassic antitrust allegations dressed in Consumer Fraud Act clothing" did not state a claim). However, federal courts in Illinois and the Seventh Circuit have questioned whether Gaebler, which interprets Laughlin as preventing the ICFA from ever being a remedy for anticompetitive conduct, states the law too broadly. Siegel v. Shell Oil Co., 480 F. Supp. 2d 1034, 1049 n.12 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (noting that no other Illinois appellate courts have interpreted Laughlin in this manner). And, consistent with both Laughlin and Gaebler, other federal courts have held that "[i]t remains possible . . . that an unfair practice might be covered by both the antitrust law and the Consumer Fraud Act." Baton v. Live Nation Entm't Inc., 746 F.3d 827, 831 (7th Cir. 2014). The Court finds these recent cases, as well as the lack of subsequent appellate case law in Illinois, persuasive on the question of whether Gaebler bars recovery for anticompetitive conduct under the ICFA.

Third, Defendants argue that the ICFA bars class actions. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 39, n.18; Forest Br. at 68, n.53). However, they fail to cite to any [*116] provision of the ICFA that does so. Instead, they cite to the IAA, which does not purport to apply to other statutes. 740 Ill. Comp. Stat. § 10/7(2) ("no person shall be authorized to maintain a class action . . . for indirect purchasers asserting claims under this Act") (emphasis added). In the absence of any arguments, case law, or citations to the consumer fraud statute, the Court finds that this argument does not provide sufficient grounds for dismissing the ICFA claim.

Finally, Defendants argue that the ICFA requires plaintiffs to allege a consumer transaction or conduct that is consumer-oriented. (Forest Br. at 67-68, n.48 (citing Ill. Comp. Stat. 505/10a(a))) But that section reads, in relevant part, "Proof of a public injury, a pattern, or an effect on consumers and the public interest generally shall be required in order to state a cause of action under this Section against a party defendant who is a new vehicle dealer or used vehicle dealer within the meaning of Chapter 5 of the Illinois Vehicle Code or who is the holder of a retail installment contract within the meaning of Section 2.12 of the Motor Vehicle Retail Installment Sales Act." Ill. Comp. Stat 505/10a\(a\) (emphasis added). By its terms, the statute is inapplicable to the case at bar. [*117]

Defendants' motion to dismiss the Illinois claim under Count Three is DENIED.

9. Kansas

Defendants argue that the IPP has failed to allege consumer deception in satisfaction of the elements of the Kansas Consumer Protection Act ("KCPA"). (Forest Br. at 67 n.47.) The IPP responds generally that it brings its claims pursuant to the "unconscionable" prong of the state consumer protection laws. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 17.)

HN26[] The Court agrees with Defendants' interpretation of the statute. The KCPA is intended to "protect consumers from suppliers who commit deceptive and unconscionable practices." Kan. Stat. § 50-623; see also id. §§ 50-626, 50-627. As with other state laws, the enumerated offenses under the statute focus overwhelmingly on deceptive or fraudulent acts. Unlike other states, however, Kansas courts have spoken more uniformly to the issue of whether the "unconscionability" prong of the statute also requires a showing of deception: "In order to render the contract between the parties unconscionable, there must be some element of deceptive bargaining conduct present as well as unequal bargaining power." Cornelison v. Denison State Bank, 315 P.3d 278 (Kan. Ct. App. 2014) (citing Willman v. Ewen, 230 Kan. 262, 266, 634 P.2d 1061 (1981)); see also State ex rel. Stovall v. Confikied.com, L.L.C., 272 Kan. 1313, 1321, 38 P.3d 707, 713 (2002) (same). And, unlike courts in, for example, Illinois, courts in Kansas have not affirmatively [*118] excused a plaintiff proceeding with a claim for unconscionability from satisfying the heightened pleading requirements for claims grounded in fraud. Compare Wheeler, 125 F. Supp. 3d at 842, supra.

Because the IPP cites no cases in support of its arguments, and cites one in support of Defendants', the KCPA claim is DISMISSED.<sup>24</sup>

10. Maine

Defendants argue that the Maine Unfair Trade Practices Act \("MUTPA"\) provides a cause of action only for persons who purchase goods "primarily for personal, family, or household purposes." (Forest Br. at 68 n.51.) The statute provides a remedy to, in relevant part "[a]ny person who purchases or leases goods, services or property, real or personal, primarily for personal, family or household purposes and thereby suffers any loss of money or property, real or personal." Me. Rev. Stat. tit. 5, § 213\(1\).

For the reasons discussed above, the Court finds that Sergeants Benevolent, an insurer, has not purchased or paid for Namenda "primarily for personal, family, or household purposes." See Restasis, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 194161, 2018 WL 5928143, at *7. It has paid for the drug because it is an insurer and has a contractual duty to reimburse its members for their purchases. Therefore, it fails to state a claim under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\).

Defendants' motion to dismiss is GRANTED.<sup>25</sup>

<sup>24</sup> Defendants also argue that the KCPA bars class actions (Gen. Defs. Br. at 39 n.18; Forest Br. at 68 n.53); that the statute requires plaintiffs to allege a consumer transaction or conduct that is consumer-oriented (Forest Br. at 67-68 n.48); that the statute is inapplicable to antitrust conduct (Gen. Defs. Br. at 40; Forest Br. at 68 n.49); and that the statute only allows suits by consumers who are natural persons with regard to transactions made primarily for personal or household purposes (Forest Br. at 68 n.51). However, because the Court dismisses the KCPA claim on the grounds that it is inapplicable to antitrust conduct, it does not reach these arguments.

<sup>25</sup> Defendants also argue that the MUPTA requires a showing of consumer deception. (Forest Br. at 67 n.47.) However, because the Court dismisses the MUPTA claim on the grounds that Sergeants Benevolent has failed to state a claim based on purchases made "primarily for personal, family, or household purposes," it does not reach these arguments.

11. Massachusetts

In order [*119] to bring a claim under Massachusetts' state consumer protection law, Defendants argue that the IPP must allege primarily intrastate conduct. (Forest Br. at 68 n.50; Gen. Defs. Br. at 41 n.20.) Defendants do not cite any case law for this proposition, although they do cite Mass. Laws ch. 93A, § 1, which defines "trade" and "commerce" to include "trade or commerce directly or indirectly affecting the people of this commonwealth." Id. The IPP responds that the Complaint alleges intrastate effects and that, as a matter of law, a nationwide antitrust class action satisfies "intrastate" pleading requirements. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 32.)

On its own, the "affecting people of this commonwealth" language does not persuade the Court that this claim should be dismissed, particularly as the IPP has alleged sales of Namenda IR and Namenda XR affecting consumers and third party payors across the country, including in Massachusetts.

It is true that an earlier version of the Massachusetts statute contained an exemption for defendants "of whose gross revenue at least twenty per cent is derived from transactions in interstate commerce," as well as for defendants who met certain other criteria. See [*120] Dodd v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 373 Mass. 72, 365 N.E.2d 802, 808 \(Mass. 1977\). However, the statute no longer carves out such defendants. Rather, the current version of that provision now states, in relevant part, "For the purpose of this section, the burden of proving exemptions from the provisions of this chapter shall be upon the person claiming the exemptions." Mass. Laws ch. 93A, § 3.

Next, Defendants argue that G.L. c. 93A does not allow for class actions or indirect purchaser actions. Ciardi, 762 N.E.2d at 314, HN27 [↑] is squarely on point: it holds that both class actions and indirect purchaser actions are permitted under Massachusetts' consumer protection law. Id.

Finally, Defendants argue in their supplemental briefing that the IPP has not satisfied the pre-filing notice requirement under chapter 93A. (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 13 (citing Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 93A, § 9\(3\).) HN28 [↑]) Like Alabama's consumer protection statute, the pre-suit notice provisions of chapter 93A do not apply if "the prospective respondent does not maintain a place of business or does not keep assets within the commonwealth." Id. Defendants do not argue, and nothing in the CAC alleges, that they maintain a place of business or keep assets in Massachusetts. (See CAC ¶¶ 16-30.) Moreover, nothing in § 9\(3\) suggests that a Massachusetts court would dismiss an action [*121] under Chapter 93A if a plaintiff failed to comply with this provision. Like the Alabama statute, the provision appears to operate like a Rule 68 offer of judgment, capping damages for defendants who make settlement offers in good faith.

Defendants' motion to dismiss the Massachusetts law claim under Count Three is DENIED.

12. Michigan

Defendants first argue that the IPP is required to allege consumer deception to plead a claim under the Michigan Consumer Protection Act \("MCPA"\). (Forest Br. at 67 n.47.) The IPP argues that it can base its claim on "unfair" practices. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 17.)

HN29 [↑] The IPP is correct. "The MCPA is broader than common law torts of fraud inasmuch as it prohibits 'not only 'deceptive' business practices but also those which are 'unfair' and 'unconscionable.'" Game On Ventures, Inc. v. Gen. RV Ctr., Inc., 587 F. Supp. 2d 831, 839 \(E.D. Mich. 2008\) (citing Mayhall v. A.H. Pond Co., 129 Mich. App. 178, 341 N.W.2d 268, 270 \(Mich. Ct. App. 1983\)). The Court finds that the IPP has adequately alleged conduct falling under § 445.903\(1\)\(z\)—"Charging the consumer a price that is grossly in excess of the price at which similar property or services are sold." (Compare CAC ¶ 213). Therefore, Defendants' first argument fails.

Defendant next argues that the IPP fails to plead a consumer transaction or conduct that is consumer-oriented. (Forest Br. at 67-68, n.48 [*122] (citing Sheet Metal Workers, 737 F. Supp. 2d at 412.) Sheet Metal Workers, however, dismissed the plaintiffs' MCPA claim in a sham patent litigation case because plaintiffs had not "alleged that [defendant] had an intent to deceive consumers and because their actions [did] not fall within any of the enumerated prohibited practices listed in section 445.901 [sic]." Id. The facts of Sheet Metal Workers are readily distinguishable, particularly as the IPP has adequately alleged "unfair" conduct under an enumerated provision of the statute.

Third, Defendants argue that the MCPA is inapplicable to antitrust conduct because it only applies to "specific types of conduct," such as misrepresentations. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 40 n.19 (citing Mich. Comp. Laws § 445.903); Forest Br. at 68 n.49.) The IPP opposes this argument on the basis that the MCPA is "modeled after the FTC Act and extend[s] to prohibit unfair methods of competition including monopolistic conduct." (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 26.)

HN30[] The IPP is correct. The MCPA does contain harmonization language: it enables injured persons to bring a class action caused by "a method, act, or practice in trade or commerce declared by a circuit court of appeals or the supreme court of the United States to be an unfair or deceptive [*123] act or practice within the meaning of section 5\(a\)\(1\) of the Federal Trade Commission Act." Mich. Compiled Laws § 445.911\(3\)\(c\). Moreover, federal courts have sustained causes of action under the MCPA for antitrust conduct. FTC v. Mylan Lab., Inc., 62 F. Supp. 2d 25, 48 \(D.D.C. 1999\).

Defendants' motion to dismiss is DENTED.

13. Missouri

Defendants argue that the IPP fails to adequately plead a consumer transaction or conduct that is consumer-oriented under the Missouri Merchandising Practices Act \("MMPA"\). (Forest Br. at 67-68, n.48 (citing Mo. Rev. Stat. § 407.020\(1\)).

The Court is not convinced that the provision of the MMPA cited by Defendants contains such a requirement. "The act, use or employment by any person of any deception, fraud, false pretense, false promise, misrepresentation, unfair practice or the concealment, suppression, or omission of any material fact in connection with the sale or advertisement of any merchandise in trade or commerce . . . in or from the state of Missouri, is declared to be an unlawful practice." Mo. Rev. Stat. § 407.020\(1\). "Trade or commerce," in turn, is defined as "the advertising, offering for sale, sale, or distribution, or any combination thereof, of any services and any property, tangible or intangible, real, personal, or mixed, and any other article, commodity, or thing of value wherever situated." [*124] Id. § 407.010\(7\).

Because Defendants have cited no authority commensurate with the proposition that Missouri restricts recovery under the MMPA to consumer-oriented conduct not covered by the IPP Complaint, their motion to dismiss the Missouri claim under Count Three is DENTED.

14. Montana

Defendants argue that the Montana Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act \("MUTCPA"\) only "allow[s] suits by consumers who are natural persons with regards [sic] to transactions made primarily for personal or household purposes." (Forest Br. at 68, n.51 (citing Mont. Stat. § 30-14-102)).

HN31[] The MUTCPA enables a "consumer" to bring an action for damages, Mont. Stat. § 30-14-133\(1\), and defines "consumer" as "a person who purchases or leases goods, services, real property, or information primarily for personal, family, or household purposes," id. § 30-14-102\(1\).

As I have held with respect to other state laws containing this requirement, I find that Sergeants Benevolent has failed to state a claim under the MUTPCPA because it did not purchase Namenda "primarily for personal, family, or household purposes." See Restasis, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 194161, 2018 WL 5928143, at \*7.

Defendants' motion to dismiss is, therefore, GRANTED.<sup>26</sup>

15. Nebraska

Defendants argue that the IPP fails to adequately plead a consumer transaction [*125] or conduct that is consumer-oriented under the Nebraska Consumer Protection Act \("NCPA"\). (Forest Br. at 67-68 n.48 (citing Neb. Rev. Stat. § 59-1601).) As with their claim under Missouri law, Defendants have cited no authority commensurate with the proposition that the NCPA restricts recovery to "consumer-oriented" conduct or that such conduct not covered by the IPP Complaint. Section 59-1601 of the NCPA is broad, with no indications that recovery is restricted to certain types of conduct: "person" is defined to include trusts," id. § 59-1601\(1\), and "trade and commerce" is defined to mean, in relevant part, "any commerce directly or indirectly affecting the people of the State of Nebraska," id. § 59-1601\(2\).

As a result, Defendants' motion to dismiss the Nebraska claim under Count Three is DENIED.

16. Nevada

Defendants argue that the Nevada Deceptive Trade Practices Act \("NDTPA"\) requires the IPP to allege deceptive conduct. (Forest Br. at 67 n.47.) The IPP argues that it has limited its claims to the "unfair methods" and "unfair trade practices" prongs of the statute. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 17.)

HN32[] The NDTPA enumerates deceptive trade practices at sections 598.015 through 598.025 of the statute. Section 598.0923 of the statute makes it a violation to "knowingly . . . violate a state or federal statute [*126] or regulation relating to the sale or lease of goods or services." Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.0923\(3\). This Court adopts the reasoning in Effexor, 337 F. Supp. 3d 435, 2018 WL 4466050, at \*20, which found that a plaintiff could state a claim under this section of the NDTPA where the claims were "predicated on allegations of anticompetitive conduct, which are considered prohibited acts under Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598A.060." Id.

Defendants next argue that the Nevada Deceptive Trade Practices Act ("NDTPA") confers a right of action only to elderly or disabled persons. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 40 (citing Nev. Rev. Stat. § 598.0977); see also Forest Br. at 68 n. 52.) Because the IPP, "a New York trust, is not an elderly or disabled person located in Nevada," it cannot bring a claim. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 40.)

HN33[] I agree with the IPP that private relief in the statute is not so limited. As the IPP persuasively argues, Nev. Rev. Stat. § 41.600 operates to provide a right of action to "any person who is a victim of consumer fraud." (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 31 (citing Nev. Rev. Stat. § 41.600; Southern Serv. Corp. v. Excel Bldg. Servs., Inc., 617 F. Supp. 2d 1097, 1099 \(D. Nev. 2007\))) The statute defines "consumer fraud" to encompass acts that violate the NDTPA. See Nev. Rev. Stat. § 41.600\(2\)\(e\) ("consumer fraud" means . . . a deceptive trade practice as defined in NRS 598.0915 to 598.0925, inclusive"). In Southern Serv. Corp., 617 F. Supp. 2d at 1100, moreover, the U.S. District Court for the District of Nevada found that "person," as used in Nev. Rev. Stat. § 41.600, could include a corporate [*127] competitor, which indicates that private relief under the statute is not restricted to elderly or disabled persons. The fact that the law makes special provision for the elderly and disabled does not mean that others are not covered elsewhere in the statute.

---

<sup>26</sup> Defendants also argue that the MUTPCPA does not permit class actions. (Forest Br. at 68 n.53.) However, because the Court dismisses the MUTPCPA claim on the grounds that Sergeants Benevolent has failed to state a claim based on purchases made "primarily for personal, family, or household purposes," it does not reach these arguments.

Other federal district courts to examine this issue are in accord and have not restricted NDTPA claims to elderly or disabled plaintiffs. DDAVP, 903 F. Supp. 2d at 227; Domestic Drywall, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 90619, 2016 WL 3769680, at \*10.

Defendants' motion to dismiss the Nevada law claim under Count Three is DENIED.

17. New Hampshire

Defendants argue that the New Hampshire Consumer Protection Act \("NHCPA"\) only applies when the underlying conduct is primarily intrastate. (Forest Br. at 68 n.50; Gen. Defs. Br. at 40-41 n.20). Defendants cite to the provision of the statute that deems unlawful "any unfair method of competition . . . in the conduct of any trade or commerce within this state." N.H. Rev. Stat. § 358-A:2. The IPP alleges it has met this requirement, both with respect to its Complaint and as a matter of nationwide class action law. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 32.)

Without more, the Court is not persuaded that the "within this state" language in the statute requires dismissal of the claim. "[C]ouds interpreting New Hampshire's consumer protection [\*128] law disagree as to whether a nationwide scheme in which the plaintiffs pay a higher price in the state is sufficient to satisfy the statute's requirement." In re Ductile Iron Pipe Fittings \(DIPF\) Indirect Purchaser Antitrust Litig., No. 12-cv-169, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 142466, 2013 WL 5503308, at \*22 \(D.N.J. Oct. 2, 2013\) (collecting cases). However, based on the language of the statute, this Court agrees with those cases that have held that HN34[] sales of the offending goods into New Hampshire alleges sufficient intrastate conduct to satisfy the NHCPA. DDAVP, 903 F. Supp. 2d at 231.

Defendants' motion to dismiss the New Hampshire claim is, therefore, DENIED.

18. New Mexico

Defendants first argue that the New Mexico Unfair Practices Act \("NMUPA"\) requires plaintiffs to allege deceptive conduct. (Forest Br. at 67, n.47). The IPP says that the NMUPA also covers unfair or unconscionable conduct. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 17.)

HN35[] The IPP has the better reading of the NMUPA. In addition to deceptive conduct, the NMUPA also makes unlawful "unconscionable trade practices," which include those that "result[] in a gross disparity between the value received by a person and the price paid." N.M. Stat. § 57-12-2\(E\)\(2\); (compare CAC P 213). Federal courts have permitted price-fixing claims, which typically do not require alleging [\*129] deception, to proceed under this provision. In re Lipitor Antitrust Litig., 336 F. Supp. 3d 395, 2018 WL 4006752, at \*20 \(D.N.J. 2018\); Domestic Drywall, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 90619, 2016 WL 3769680, at \*8. Although this is not a price-fixing case, the Court is persuaded by these cases that hold that a plaintiff need not allege consumer deception. In addition, and for the same reasons, the Court also rejects Defendants' argument that the NMUPA does not provide a remedy for antitrust conduct. (Forest Br. at 68, n.49; Gen. Defs. Br. at 40 n.19.)

Defendants next argue that the IPP fails to adequately plead a consumer transaction or conduct that is consumer-oriented under the NMUPA. (Forest Br. at 67-68 n.48 (citing N.M. Stat. §§ 57-12-2 to -3)).

As with their claim under Missouri and Nebraska law, however, Defendants have cited no authority commensurate with the proposition that the NCPA restricts recovery to "consumer-oriented" conduct or that such conduct not covered by the IPP Complaint. Section 57-12-3 of the NMUPA states: "Unfair or deceptive trade practices and unconscionable trade practices in the conduct of any trade or commerce are unlawful." Section 57-12-2, in turn, defines "trade or commerce" very broadly, including "the advertising, offering for sale or distribution of any services and any property and any other article, commodity or thing of value, including [\*130] any trade or commerce directly or indirectly affecting the people of this state." N.M. Stat. § 57-12-2\(C\).

Defendants' motion to dismiss is DENIED.

19. New York

Defendants move to dismiss the IPP's claim under section 349 of New York's General Business Law ("NYGBL") for failure to plead deceptive conduct. (Forest Br. at 67 n.47.) The IPP argues that it is not required to plead deceptive conduct to recover under the statute and that allegations of "unfair" conduct suffice. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 17.)

HN36 [F] The Court agrees with Defendants. Section 349 of the NYGBL does not contain an "unfair" or "unconscionable" practices prong, and therefore a plaintiff must plead consumer fraud or deception in order to bring a claim. In addition, while antitrust conduct is actionable under section 349, plaintiffs still must allege deception to state a claim. See Dig. Music, 812 F. Supp. 2d at 410 (analyzing New York cases); see also 7 von Kalinowski, Sullivan, & McGuirl, supra, § 132.07. Even cases cited by the IPP hold that any plaintiff who brings a claim under section 349 must allege deceptive conduct in its Complaint. See, e.g., In re Processed Egg Prods. Antitrust Litig., 851 F. Supp. 2d 867, 907 \(E.D. Pa. 2012\) (dismissing claim for failure to allege deception as the basis for injury) (citing Stutman v. Chem. Bank, 95 N.Y.2d 24, 731 N.E.2d 608, 611-12, 709 N.Y.S.2d 892 \(N. Y. 2000\)).

As a result, Defendants' motion to dismiss the New York claim is GRANTED.<sup>27</sup>

20. North Carolina

Defendants ask this Court to dismiss the IPP's claim under the North Carolina Unfair and Deceptive Trade Practices Act \("NCUDTPA"\) [*131] because it has failed to allege conduct that is primarily intrastate. (Forest Br. at 68 n.50; Gen. Defs. Br. at 41 n.20 (both citing N.C. Gen. Stat. § 75-1.1.) However, nothing in the section of the statute cited by Defendants indicates that a claim may be brought pursuant to the NCUDTPA only if the conduct is "primarily intrastate." See N.C. Gen. Stat. § 75-1.1.

Second, Defendants argue that the NCUDTPA only permits actions by natural persons with regard to transactions made primarily for personal or household purposes. (Forest Br. at 68 n.51 (citing N.C. Gen. Stat. 75.1-1).) Again, nothing in the cited section indicates that a claim would be restricted to natural persons or to transactions made primarily for personal or household purposes. In fact, "commerce" is expressly defined to "include[] all business activities, however denominated," and exempts only "professional services rendered by a member of a learned profession." N.C. Gen. Stat. § 75-1.1\(b\).

Defendants' motion to dismiss is DENIED.

21. Rhode Island

Defendants argue that the Rhode Island Deceptive Trade Practices Act \("RIDTPA"\) limits relief to "[a]ny person who purchases or leases goods or services primarily for personal, family, or household purposes." R.I. Gen. Laws § 6-13.1-5.2\(a\); (see also Forest [*132] Br. at 68 n.51).

As discussed in previous sections, Sergeants Benevolent fails to state a claim under the RIDTPA because it did not purchase Namenda "primarily for personal, family, or household purposes." See Restasis, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 194161, 2018 WL 5928143, at \*7.

---

<sup>27</sup> Defendants also argue that NYGBL § 349 requires a plaintiff to allege a consumer transaction or conduct that is consumer-oriented, (Forest Br. at 67-68 n.48), and that the statute covers only conduct that is primarily intrastate, (Forest Br. at 68 n.50; Gen. Defs. Br. at 40-41 n.20). However, because the Court dismisses the NYGBL § 349 claim for failure to plead deceptive or fraudulent conduct, it does not reach these arguments.

Defendants' motion to dismiss is, therefore, GRANTED.<sup>28</sup>

22. Tennessee

Defendants argue that the TCPA is inapplicable to antitrust conduct. (Forest Br. at 68 n.49; Gen. Defs. Br. at 40 n.19 (citing Tenn. Code § 47-18-104\(b\)).) There appears to be a split among Tennessee's intermediate courts with respect to this question. Some courts have held expressly that "the TCPA does not apply to anti-competitive conduct." Bennett v. Visa U.S.A. Inc., 198 S.W.3d 747, 755 \(Term. Ct. App. 2006\). Others have concluded that anticompetitive conduct is an "unfair" practice covered by the TCPA. Blake v. Abbott Labs., No. 03A01-9509-cv-00307, 1996 Tenn. App. LEXIS 184, 1996 WL 134947, at \*5-\*7 \(Tenn. Ct. App. Mar. 27, 1996\).

HN37[<sup>29</sup>] More recent decisions in Tennessee, including Bennett, have reasoned that, by not incorporating the "unfair methods of competition" language from the federal FTC Act into Tennessee's "little FTC" Act, the Tennessee legislature intended to prohibit recovery for anticompetitive conduct under the TCPA. Bennett, 198 S.W.3d at 754-55; see also Sherwood v. Microsoft Corp., No. M2000-1850-00A-R9-CV, 2003 Tenn. App. LEXIS 539, 2003 WL 21780975, at \*31-\*33 \(Ten. Ct. App. July 31, 2003\); Duke v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of Tenn., Inc., No. W2005-146-00A-R3-CV, 2006 Tenn. App. LEXIS 355, 2006 WL 1491547, at \*8 \(Tenn. Ct. App. May 31, 2006\). Instead, the legislature [*133] intended that consumers injured by such conduct would have an exclusive remedy under the state antitrust statute, the Tennessee Trade Practices Act. Sherwood, 2003 Tenn. App. LEXIS 539, 2003 WL 21780975, at \*33. Blake, by comparison, did not analyze the legislative history of the TCPA or its incongruities with the federal FTC Act, instead relying on the statutory mandate that it be "liberally construed." 1996 Tenn. App. LEXIS 184, 1996 WL 134947, at \*6-\*7.

Like other federal courts to review this issue, I find that the more recent opinions of the Tennessee Court of Appeals, such as Bennett and Sherwood, both persuasive in their own right, as well as indicative of how the Tennessee Supreme Court would likely rule on this question. See Relafen, 221 F.R.D. at 284; In re Photochromic Lens Antitrust Litig., No. 10-md-2173, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 119257, 2011 WL 4914997, at \*4 & n.14 \(Oct. 14, 2011\).

Therefore, Defendants' motion to dismiss the Tennessee claim under Count Three is GRANTED.<sup>29</sup>

23. Utah

Defendants first argue that the Utah Consumer Sales Practices Act ("UCSPA") requires the IPP to plead deceptive conduct. (Forest Br. at 67 n.47.) The IPP argues that a plaintiff may state a claim under the UCSPA for "unfair" acts or practices that are not inherently deceptive. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 17.)

The Court agrees with the IPP. HN38[<sup>29</sup>] The UCSPA expressly allows a plaintiff to [*134] plead "unconscionable" conduct as the basis of its claim, and that this does not require a showing of fraud or deception. See Utah Code § 13-11-5; see also New Motor Vehicles, 350 F. Supp. 2d at 205; Gallegos v. LVNV Funding LLC, 169 F. Supp. 3d 1235, 1245 \(D. Utah 2016\) (considering separately claims for deceptive and unconscionable acts).

---

<sup>28</sup> Defendants also argue that the RIDTPA requires a showing of consumer deception, (Forest Br. at 67 n.47), and is inapplicable to antitrust conduct, (Forest Br. at 68 n.49). However, because the Court dismisses the RIDTPA claim on the grounds that Sergeants Benevolent has failed to state a claim based on purchases made "primarily for personal, family, or household purposes," it does not reach these arguments.

<sup>29</sup> Defendants also argue that the TCPA requires a showing of consumer deception (Forest Br. at 67 n.47) and that the statute does not permit class actions (Forest Br. at 68 n.53; Gen. Defs. Br. 39 n.18.) However, because the Court dismisses the TCPA claim as inapplicable to antitrust conduct, it does not reach these arguments.

Defendants next argue that the UCSPA is inapplicable to antitrust conduct because anticompetitive conduct is not enumerated within the statute's list of "deceptive practices." (Forest Br. at 68 n.49; Gen. Defs. Br. at 40 n.19 (citing Utah Code § 13-11-4.) The IPP responds that the UCSPA contains a harmonization provision with the FTC Act, giving it a broad reach. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 26.)

First, the list of deceptive practices in the statute is not exclusive, by its own terms. Utah Code § 13-11-4\(2\). Second, Defendants cite to the "deceptive act or practice" provision of the UCSPA, whereas the IPP has stated that it brings all claims under Count Three pursuant to the "unfair" or "unconscionable" practices prongs of the relevant statutes. Here, the relevant provision is not section 13-11-4 but instead section 13-11-5. Finally, other federal district courts have found that allegations of anticompetitive conduct, when brought pursuant to the "unconscionability" provision of the UCSPA, can survive a motion to dismiss. New Motor Vehicles, 350 F. Supp. 2d at 205; Aftermarket Filters, 2009 WL 3754041, at \*9. Therefore, the Court [*135] declines to dismiss the UCSPA claim on this ground.

Defendants next move to dismiss the UCSPA claim because it applies only to natural persons making purchases for personal or household purposes. (Forest Br. at 68 n.51 (citing Utah Code §§ 13-11-3\(2\)\(a\), 13-11-19.)

The Court disagrees that the UCSPA clearly restricts recovery in this manner. Utah Code § 13-11-5 states, "An unconscionable act or practice by a supplier in connection with a consumer transaction violates this act, whether it occurs before, during, or after the transaction." Id. § 13-11-5 (emphasis added). Utah Code § 13-11-19, which provides a private cause of action, permits a "consumer who suffers loss as a result of a violation of this chapter" to recover actual damages. Id. § 13-11-19\(2\) (emphasis added). The statute defines "consumer transaction" in Section 13-11-3\(2\) but does not anywhere define "consumer." That subsection reads, in relevant part: "'Consumer transaction' means a sale . . . or other . . . transfer or disposition of goods . . . , to, or apparently to, a person for . . . primarily personal, family, or household purposes." Utah Code § 13-11-3\(2\)\(a\) (emphasis added). "Person," moreover, expressly includes a "corporation, . . . trust, partnership, association, . . . or any other legal entity." Id. § 13-11-3\(5\) (emphasis added).

On its face, the definition [*136] of "consumer transaction" appears to contemplate sales of goods to—among other entities—corporations and trusts for their "personal," "family," or "household" purposes. This, of course, is possible only through an entity's members, employees or customers, which is consistent with the IPP's allegations in its Complaint.

The Court is not aware of any case law that would prohibit recovery by the IPP for failure to state a claim on the basis of these statutory provisions. The Court is aware of only one case, from the District of Utah, that purports to interpret "consumer" for purposes of subsection 13-11-19. Icon Health & Fitness, Inc. v. ConsumerAffairs.com, No. 16-cv-168, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 37517, 2018 WL 1183372, at \*5 \(D. Utah Mar. 6, 2018\), motion to certify appeal denied, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 78328, 2018 WL 2122855 \(D. Utah May 8, 2018\). The court in that case reasoned that the plaintiff, whose products were reviewed on Defendant's website, did not have a cause of action under the UCSPA because the plaintiff did "not allege or argue that it is a consumer harmed by Defendants' conduct." Id. The facts of the IP Action are clearly distinguishable, however, because Sergeants Benevolent alleges that, through its own reimbursements or payments for branded Namenda, it grossly overpaid for the product relative to its value. [*137] (CAC ¶ 213.) In addition, at least one federal court has allowed a corporation, which that a competitor engaged in false consumer advertising in the course of consumer transactions, to recover under the UCSPA. See Derma Pen, LLC v. 4EverYoung Ltd., No. 13-cv-00729, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 79464, 2017 WL 2258362, at \*15 \(D. Utah May 22, 2017\), aff'd, 736 F. App'x 741 \(10th Cir. 2018\).

HN39 [↑] In addition, unlike other consumer protection statutes reviewed by this Court, the UCSPA contemplates sales made both "to" and "apparently to" a person for personal, family, or household purposes. Utah Code § 13-11-3\(2\)\(a\). The Court is not aware of any Utah case that interprets this language, and the distinction is not clear from the legislative history. The "apparently to" language was inserted as part of S.B. 75, which expanded the definition of "consumer transaction" related to identity fraud. 2000 Utah Las Ch. 57 (West) (S.B. 75) ("Consumer transaction' . . . includ[es] the use or misuse of personal identifying information of any person in relation to a consumer transaction to, or apparently to, a person for primarily personal, family, or household purposes."). Later, the identity fraud language was stripped from the definition, but the phrase "apparently to" was retained. 2004 Utah Laws Ch. 55 (H.B. 195). [*138] Construing the allegations in the Complaint in the light most favorable to the IPP, however, the Court finds that sales of Namenda were made either to or "apparently to" consumers primarily for their personal, family, or household purposes. Therefore, the Complaint states a claim.

Finally, Defendants argue that class actions are not permissible under the UCSPA. (Forest Br. at 68 n.53; Gen, Defs. Br. at 39 n.18 (citing Utah Code § 13-11-19\(2\).)) The UCSPA states, in relevant part: "A consumer who suffers loss as a result of a violation of this chapter may recover, but not in a class action, actual damages[.]" Utah Code § 13-11-19\(2\).

HN40[] However, another paragraph of the same section permits a consumer to bring a class action for actual damages provided certain preconditions are satisfied. Utah Code § 13-11-19\(4\)\(a\); see also Miller v. Basic Research, LLC, 285 F.R.D. 647, 654-55 \(D. Utah 2010\). Specifically, class plaintiffs proceeding under the UCSPA must allege that the specific action was declared unlawful pursuant to an administrative rule, a court order, or (in limited cases) a consent judgment before the consumer transactions on which the action was based occurred. Id.

Courts that have examined the class action damages bar under the UCSPA have tended to defer the question of whether an action meets the statutory prerequisites [*139] until later stages of the case. See, e.g., In re General Motors LLC Ignition Switch Litig., 339 F. Supp. 3d 262, 2018 WL 4351892, at \*46 n.63 \(S.D.N.Y. 2018\) ("The Court defers to another day whether the provision" that limits damages under the UCSPA "applies here."); In re Volkswagen "Clean Diesel" Mktg., Sales Practices, & Prods. Liability Litig., MDL No. 2672, 349 F. Supp. 3d 881, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 171598, 2018 WL 4777134, at \*28-\*29 \(N.D. Cal. Oct. 3, 2018\) ("The Court will not make these determinations at this stage.").

The Court agrees that this issue is more appropriately handled following discovery, when the parties can address (i) if the statutory prerequisites have been met with respect to the conduct and particular transactions alleged and, (ii) in the alternative, whether the need to make this individualized determination in Utah would defeat predominance.

Defendants' motion to dismiss the UCSPA claim is DENIED.

24. Vermont

Defendants move to dismiss the Vermont Consumer Protection Act \("VCPA"\) because it permits only claims brought by natural persons making purchases for personal or household purposes. (Forest Br. at 68 n.51 (citing Vt. Stat. tit 9 § 2461\(b\).)

This cited provision restricts recovery to a "consumer," Vt. Stat. tit. 9 § 2461\(b\). "Consumer," in turn, is defined as "any person who purchases, leases, contracts for, or otherwise agrees to pay consideration for goods or services not for resale in the ordinary [*140] course of his or her trade or business but for his or her use or benefit or the use or benefit of a member of his or her household, or in connection with the operation of his or her household . . . , or a person who purchases, leases, contracts for, or otherwise agrees to pay consideration for goods or services not for resale in the ordinary course of his or her trade or business but for the use or benefit of his or her business or in connection with the operation of his or her business." Vt. Stat. tit. 9, § 2451a\(a\) (emphasis added).

HN41[] As discussed in preceding sections, Sergeants Benevolent cannot state a claim under this statute by alleging that it reimbursed for Namenda on behalf of its insured members. See Restasis, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 194161, 2018 WL 5928143, at \*7. The language of the statute clearly restricts the term "consumer" to end users of the product,

Therefore, Defendants' motion to dismiss the VCPA claim is GRANTED.

25. West Virginia

Defendants argue for the first time in their supplemental briefing that the IPP's claim under the West Virginia Consumer Credit and Protection Act ("WVCCPA") must be dismissed because the IPP has not satisfied the statutory pre-filing notice requirement. (Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 13 (citing W. Va. Code § 46A-6-106\(c\).) That provision reads, in relevant part: [*141] "No action, counterclaim, cross-claim or third-party claim may be brought pursuant to the provisions of this section until the person has informed the seller or lessor in writing and by certified mail, return receipt requested, of the alleged violation and provided the seller or lessor twenty days from receipt of the notice of violation but ten days in the case a cause of action has already been filed to make a cure offer." W. Va. Code § 46A-6-106\(c\).

HN42 [↑] Unlike the similar pre-suit notice requirement under the Hawaii Antitrust Act, the state court remedy for noncompliance with the WVCCPA's pre-filing notice requirement appears to be dismissal of the claim. Harrison v. Porsche Cars North Am., Inc., No. 15-0381, 2016 W. Va. LEXIS 245, 2016 WL 1455864, at \*3 \(W. Va. Apr. 12, 2016\) (unpublished opinion) (dismissing claim for failure to comply with pre-suit notice provisions).

Because the notification requirement is an express precondition to filing suit, federal district courts sitting in diversity have also granted defendants' motions to dismiss when the plaintiffs have not complied with this provision. Waters v. Electrolux Home Prods., Inc., 154 F. Supp. 3d 340, 354 \(N.D. W. Va. 2015\) (consumer class action); Mullins v. Ethicon, Inc., No. 12-cv-2952, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7940, 2017 WL 319804, at \*3 \(S.D. W. Va. Jan. 20, 2017\) (consumer class action); McCoy v. Southern Energy Homes, Inc., No. 09-cv-1271, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 56594, 2012 WL 1409533, at \*13 \(S.D. W. Va. Apr. 23, 2012\); Stanley v. Huntington Nat. Bank, No. 11-ev-54, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9448, 2012 WL 254135, at \*7 \(N.D. W. Va. Jan. 27, 2012\) (individual action). Other courts have [*142] dismissed the claim without prejudice. Processed Egg Prods., 851 F. Supp. 2d at 911.

To this Court's knowledge, no federal district court has examined the cure offer requirement in light of the Supreme Court's holding in Shady Grove. Certainly, the pre-suit cure offer requirement is "a state law that restricts the types of claims eligible for class treatment beyond the limits established by Rule 23," because it requires certain prerequisites to filing suit that Rule 23 does not. Restasis, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 194161, 2018 WL 5928143, at \*6. It therefore conflicts with the federal rule.

The question is therefore whether the cure offer requirement is "so bound up with the state-created right or remedy that it define the scope of that substantive right or remedy." Id. (citing Shady Grove, 559 U.S. at 419-20 (Stevens, J., concurring)).

HN43 [↑] This Court finds that it is. Under the statute, the cure offer, where accepted, tolls the applicable statute of limitations "for the period the effectuation of the cure offer is being performed." W. Va. Code § 46A-6-106\(e\). Moreover, where the accepted cure offer is performed, it constitutes a complete defense to the action. Id. § 46A-6-106\(h\). And, if a defendant accepts and performs a cure offer, and a plaintiff brings suit anyway, the defendant is entitled to attorneys' fees and costs for defending the action. Id. In other words, the cure offer [*143] creates substantive defenses and additional remedies under state law.

For this reason, the Court GRANTS Defendants' motion to dismiss the West Virginia claim under Count Three.<sup>30</sup>

E. In Conclusion, the IPP Has Stated a Claim for Violation of State Consumer Protection Laws Under Count Three Under the Laws of 14 States

In sum, the Court finds that the IPP Complaint adequately pleads facts supporting its allegations of unfair trade practices against all Defendants. The Court also finds that, as a matter of law, the IPP may pursue its Count Three claims for consumer protection law violations under the laws of all states except Arizona (which claim was withdrawn by the IPP), the District of Columbia, Hawaii, Kansas, Maine, Montana, New York, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Vermont, and West Virginia. Those claims are hereby DISMISSED.

---

<sup>30</sup> Defendants also argue that the WVCCPA requires plaintiffs to allege deceptive conduct, (Forest Br. at 67 n.47); requires plaintiffs to plead a consumer transaction or conduct that is consumer-oriented, (Forest Br. at 67-68 n.48); and is inapplicable to antitrust conduct, (Forest Br. at 68 n.49; Gen. Defs. Br. at 40 n.19). However, because the Court dismisses the WVCCPA claim for failure to serve a cure offer on the Defendants prior to initiating the lawsuit, it does not reach these arguments.

VIII. Count Four: Unjust Enrichment Under the Laws of 44 States Against Actavis, Forest, Merz, and the Generic Defendants

Finally, the IPP Complaint alleges 44 state law claims grouped under the heading "Count Four: Unjust Enrichment." (CAC at 56.) The IPP asserts this cause of action against all Defendants: Forest, Actavis, Merz, and the Generic Defendants. (Id.)

This cause of action [*144] alleges that "Defendants have benefited from the overcharges" on Namenda IR and XR; that these benefits were "made possible by the unlawful and inequitable acts alleged" in the Complaint; that "Defendants' financial benefits are traceable to Plaintiff and End-Payor Class members' overpayments"; and that "Plaintiff and End-Payor Class members have conferred an economic benefit upon the Defendants in the nature of profits resulting from unlawful overcharges." (CAC ¶¶ 219-21.) Together, these allegations form the factual nucleus on which the 44 state unjust enrichment claims are based.

At the outset, the IPP notes that, "No the extent required, this claim is pled in the alternative to other claims in this Complaint." (CAC ¶ 218.) The IPP maintains that "unjust enrichment is a separate cause of action" from both state antitrust and consumer protection laws, "which plaintiffs are allowed to plead in the alternative under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8—regardless of consistency and whether based on legal or [sic] equitable grounds." (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 41). The IPP also alleges that it has no adequately remedy at law. (CAC ¶ 230.)

As they have done with respect to Counts One, Two, and Three of the IPP Complaint, [*145] Defendants first make several broad-based arguments aimed at dismissing Count Four of the Complaint as a whole, including:

- The claims are "likely" time-barred under the applicable statute of limitations, (Forest Br. at 65 n.42);
- The IPP has failed to satisfy the Fed. R. Civ. P. 8 pleading standard under Twombly and Iqbal, (Gen. Defs. Br. at 42);
- The IPP lacks Article III standing to bring claims in states where it has not made purchases and thereby suffered injury-in-fact, (Forest Br. at App'x 4);
- The IPP has not plausibly alleged that it conferred any benefit on the Generic Defendants, (Gen. Defs. Br. at 46);
- The IPP may not skirt the strictures of Illinois Brick by bringing indirect purchaser claims as equitable actions for unjust enrichment, (Gen. Defs. Br. at 34-36 nn.12, 14; Forest Br. App'x 4); and
- Equitable claims cannot be used as a backstop where the injuries suffered by plaintiffs are not cognizable under either the antitrust or consumer protection laws (Gen. Defs. Br. at 43).

This Court has already addressed the first three of these arguments. For the same reasons discussed in preceding sections, the Court therefore denies Defendants' motions to dismiss on those grounds.

The Court addresses [*146] the remaining three arguments—related to conferral of a benefit, Illinois Brick, and equitable claims—in its discussion below.

As with Count Three, Defendants also make several separate, state-specific arguments aimed at dismissing the individual state law claims under Count Four, viz.:

- Certain states have no independent cause of action for unjust enrichment, (Gen. Defs. Br. at 44; Forest Br. at 70 n.55);
- Some states require the plaintiff to allege that the defendant received a direct benefit from it, (Gen. Defs. Br. at 44 15; Forest Br. at 77 n.57); and

- A subset of states require the plaintiff to allege privity with the defendant, (Gen. Defs. Br. at 47-48), or "something approaching privity," (Forest Br. at 70).

Defendants raise one or several of these arguments as a defense to each state law claim under Count Four. The table in Appendix 4 of Actavis, Forest, and Merz's original brief provides a mostly accurate overview of which arguments correspond to which claims. (See Forest Br. App'x 4.)

Again, as this Court has done with the other Counts of the IPP Complaint, it first addresses Defendants' arguments of general applicability and then proceeds through each state claim, determining [*147] whether the relevant arguments raised warrant dismissal.

A. Count Four Does Not State a Claim With Respect to the Generic Defendants Under the Laws of Any State

Federal district courts generally recognize that "[t]he elements of unjust enrichment are similar in every state." *Lazarek v. Ambit Energy Holdings, LLC, No. 15-cv-6361, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 161135, 2017 WL 4344557, at *6 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 29, 2017)* (citing *Credit Default Swaps, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 123784, 2014 WL 4379112, at *18*).

Both Lazarek and Credit Default Swaps base their reasoning in large part on a law review article, which compared the elements of unjust enrichment in each state and, finding them to be similar, proposed that these state laws could be applied to antitrust claims. Daniel R. Karon, Undoing the Otherwise Perfect Crime—Applying Unjust Enrichment to Consumer Price-Fixing Claims, 108 W. Va. L. Rev. 395, 409-10 & n.79 (2005).

HN44 [1] That article summarized the elements of unjust enrichment as follows: "(1) [plaintiff] conferred a benefit upon the defendant, who had knowledge of the benefit; (2) [t]he defendant accepted and retained the conferred benefit; and (3) [u]nder the circumstances, it would be inequitable for the defendant to retain the benefit without paying for it." Id. at 409.

Notably, the IPP adopts this same formulation in its brief. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 38.)

The Generic Defendants [*148] move to dismiss all of Count Four with respect to themselves — but not with respect to Actavis, Forest, and Merz—because "Plaintiff's Complaint does not plausibly allege that Plaintiff conferred even an indirect economic benefit . . . on the Generic Defendants." (Gen. Defs. Br. at 46; Gen. Defs. Suppl. Br. at 17-18.) The IPP responds that the Generic Defendants received a benefit "in the nature of profits resulting from unlawful overcharges." (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 39.)

Even by the IPP's own logic, however, the unlawful overcharges did not unjustly enrich the Generic Defendants. If the benefit alleged is indeed "profits resulting from unlawful overcharges"—prof is which could have come only from sales of branded Namenda IR and Namenda XR—then the CAC alleges no facts consistent with the claim that any benefit flowed from the IPP or the Class to the Generic Defendants.

In other words, nowhere has the IPP alleged that it or other members of the Class paid increased prices for generic versions of Namenda IR. Rather, the gravamen of the IPP Complaint is that it and other Class members paid increased prices for branded Namenda IR while generic Namenda IR was kept off of the market. [*149] All of these overcharge benefits flowed to Forest.<sup>31</sup>

Indeed, according to the CAC, the only benefits conferred upon the Generic Defendants came from Forest and Merz—not from the IPP or class members—and came in the form of: (i) cash payments for avoided litigation costs; (ii) early entry licenses; and (iii) an acceleration clause that guaranteed entry no later than other generic manufacturers. The IPP has wholly failed to allege a connection between these benefits, which again are the only benefits to Generic Defendants mentioned in the CAC, and the loss suffered by the IPP and other Class members.

---

<sup>31</sup> Again, most likely due to their decision to retain the same counsel and to submit a brief jointly with Forest, Actavis and Merz have not challenged the unjust enrichment claims under Count Four on the basis that no benefit from the overcharges on Namenda flowed to them, so the Court will not raise and address this argument sua sponte.

(See CAC ¶ 221 ("Plaintiff and [IPP] Class members have conferred an economic benefit upon the Defendants in the nature of profits resulting from unlawful overcharges, to the economic detriment of Plaintiff and the End-Payor Class members.".).) <sup>32</sup>

The Court therefore DISMISSES all 44 state law claims under Count Four with respect to the Generic Defendants.

B. The Unjust Enrichment Claims Under the Laws of Ten States Are Barred By Illinois Brick (Alaska, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Montana, New Jersey, Oklahoma, South Carolina, [*150] Virginia, and Washington)

The remaining Defendants next move to dismiss the claims for unjust enrichment under the laws of 20 states because allowing the IPP to pursue such claims would constitute an impermissible "end run" around the Illinois Brick prohibition on indirect purchaser actions. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 34-36 nn.12, 14; Forest Br. App'x 4.)<sup>33</sup>

As an initial matter, these 20 states include Puerto Rico and Utah. As this Court has already determined when addressing the arguments brought against Count One, Puerto Rico and Utah allow indirect purchaser claims. Accordingly, the Court DENIES Defendants' motion to dismiss the Puerto Rico and Utah unjust enrichment claims.

HN45 Whether the remaining 18 state claims can be dismissed based on Illinois Brick depends on whether the claims stand on their own or simply reflect an alternative election of equitable remedies by the IPP. Courts in this circuit have observed that "unjust enrichment takes at least two forms:" autonomous and parasitic. In re Dig. Music Antitrust Litig., 812 F. Supp. 2d 390, 411 (S.D.N.Y. 2011). "Parasitic claims are where the unjust enrichment is based upon a predicate wrong, such as a tort, breach of contract or other wrongful conduct such as an antitrust violation." Id. (internal quotation omitted). [*151] "Conversely, unjust enrichment may provide an independent ground for restitution, and this is known as autonomous restitution." Id. (internal quotation omitted).

Logically, "Autonomous claims in an area regulated by an independent body of law are more problematic than parasitic claims because the premise for such a claim must be that, even if the defendants' conduct is blameless under the substantive requirements of federal and state antitrust statutes and state consumer protection statutes, the plaintiffs nevertheless can still obtain restitution," Id. at 411-12. This becomes even trickier when the state legislature has expressed a policy preference restricting certain groups of plaintiffs from recovering.

HN46 The majority of courts in this circuit have followed the rule that indirect purchasers may not allege autonomous unjust enrichment claims if that state follows Illinois Brick. "It is beyond peradventure that indirect purchasers may not employ unjust enrichment to skirt the limitation on recovery imposed by Illinois Brick." Dig. Music, 812 F. Supp. 2d at 412; accord DDAVP, 903 F. Supp. 2d at 232; Yong Ki Hong v. KBS Am., Inc., 951 F. Supp. 2d 402, 425 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) ("Certainly, if such plaintiffs were permitted to repackage their antitrust claims as unjust enrichment actions, the entire thrust and purpose of the antitrust standing [*152] doctrine would disintegrate,").

This Court agrees with the logic of those decisions, which is respectful of states' own policy determinations about who may recover for anticompetitive conduct. It therefore DISMISSES the following ten autonomous unjust enrichment claims brought in states that follow the rule of Illinois Brick: Alaska, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Montana, New Jersey, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Virginia, and Washington.

<sup>32</sup> The Restatement (Third) of Restitution and Unjust Enrichment states, "While the paradigm case of unjust enrichment is one in which the benefit on one side of the transaction corresponds to an observable loss on the other, the consecrated formula at the expense of another' can also mean in violation of the other's legally protected rights,' without the need to show that the claimant has suffered a loss." Restatement (Third) of Restitution and Unjust Enrichment § 1 (2011). The IPP presumably could have chosen to rely upon this theory to prosecute its claims of unjust enrichment. However, the IPP has also stated expressly in its Complaint and in briefing that it conferred a benefit on Generic Defendants in the form of overcharges, so the Court does not reach this question.

<sup>33</sup> Because Actavis, Forest, and Merz adopt the Generic Defendants' briefing in whole, this Court continues to refer to Generic Defendants' briefs, even though these defendants were dismissed from Count Four.

Defendants seek dismissal of claims in an additional eight states that follow Illinois Brick but for which the Complaint pleads a viable antitrust or consumer protection claim: Alabama, Idaho, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, New York, Rhode Island, and South Dakota, (Gen. Defs. Br. at 34-36,) By definition, these are parasitic claims rather than autonomous claims.

"As to parasitic claims premised on a violation of state law, these claims boil down to an election of remedies." Digital Music, 812 F. Supp. 2d at 413, This turns on a case-by-case examination of whether each state's antitrust or consumer protection statute has "override[n]" or "limit[ed] ... the scope of restitutive relief that would normally be available to a plaintiff at equity. Id.

No party has briefed the extent to [*153] which each of these eight states' antitrust and consumer protection laws limits a plaintiff's ability to recover in equity. Absent such argument or briefing, this Court will not undertake an independent assessment of whether and to what extent these each of these statutes restricts equitable recovery.

Therefore, Defendants' motion to dismiss these eight parasitic unjust enrichment claims is DENIED, without prejudice to consideration of the issue at a later date on proper briefing.

C. Autonomous Unjust Enrichment Claims in States That Do Not Follow Illinois Brick Survive (Arkansas and Wyoming)

Defendants also argue that, in an antitrust case, claims for unjust enrichment cannot lie where the injuries suffered by plaintiffs are not cognizable under either the antitrust or consumer protection laws. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 43.) This is true regardless of whether those states follow Illinois Brick. On these grounds, they move to dismiss any autonomous unjust enrichment claims remaining, which would be those under the laws of Arkansas and Wyoming.

The IPP responds that recovery under a theory of autonomous enrichment is not contingent on statutory claims. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 39-40.)

The [*154] Court is aware of some cases that support Defendants' argument. For example, in Sheet Metal Workers Local 441 Health & Welfare Plan v. GlaxoSmithKline, plc, 737 F. Supp. 2d 380, 426 (E.D. Pa. 2010), the court applied the respect-for-state-policies rationale undergirding Digital Music and held that it would dismiss all autonomous unjust enrichment claims "unless plaintiffs have presented convincing caselaw establishing that a state recognizes unjust enrichment as an autonomous cause of action." Id. at 426; accord Niaspan, 42 F. Supp. 3d at 763.

This Court finds, however, that such a determination inappropriately shifts the burden at the motion to dismiss stage to the nonmoving party—particularly in light of the fact that unjust enrichment claims can morph from parasitic to autonomous once a court determines that the predicate statutory claims do not survive. Rather than asking the plaintiff to shoulder the burden of these contingencies, the Court finds it is more appropriate HN47 [↑] at this stage that the parties moving to dismiss bear the burden of arguing that the state does not recognize an autonomous cause of action for unjust enrichment, as Defendants do here with respect to California, Illinois, and Mississippi. (See Forest Br. App'x 4.)

In the alternative, the party [*155] moving to dismiss may argue that the policy reasons barring recovery under the predicate statutes are strong enough to require dismissing any autonomous unjust enrichment claim in that state. For example, at least one district court has held that it would "decline to allow autonomous restitution where recovery under state antitrust and consumer protection statutes is specifically prohibited." In re Flonase Antitrust Litig., 692 F. Supp. 2d 524, 542 n.13 (E.D. Pa. 2010). The Court agrees that such an approach accords respect to states' own substantive policy determinations.

Here, however, the Court has not had occasion to determine whether recovery is "strictly prohibited" under the antitrust and consumer protection laws of Arkansas and Wyoming. This is because (i) the IPP did not allege antitrust or consumer protection claims in those states, and (ii) Defendants did not independently raise reasons why the IPP would be prohibited from recovering under the antitrust laws of Arkansas and Wyoming, beyond the fact that the IPP simply did not allege those claims in the first place. Cf. In re TFT-LCD (Flat Panel) Antitrust Litig., 599 F. Supp. 2d 1179, 1191 (N.D. Cal. 2009) (defendants briefed policy reasons why plaintiffs could not recover under the antitrust laws and, therefore, by extension, the unjust enrichment laws, of Arkansas, Virginia, Montana, [*156] and Puerto Rico).

In sum, this Court agrees with the reasoning of In re Cardizem CD Antitrust Litig., 105 F. Supp. 2d 618, 669 (E.D. Mich. 2000). That case reasoned that a federal policy requiring dismissal of all autonomous unjust enrichment claims in an antitrust case would both "fail[] to read Plaintiffs' complaint in the light most favorable to Plaintiffs and confuse[] Plaintiffs' right to recover an equitable remedy under a common law claim based upon principles of unjust enrichment with its right to recover a remedy at law for an alleged violation of a state's antitrust laws."

Therefore, the Court DENIES Defendants' motion to dismiss the claims under Arkansas and Wyoming law, without prejudice to consideration of the issue at a later date on proper briefing.

D. The IPP States a Claim for Unjust Enrichment Under the Laws of Some States But Not Others

The Court now turns to Defendants' state-specific arguments for dismissing the IPP's unjust enrichment claims under Count Four. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 44-50.)

1. Alabama

Defendants argue that the IPP cannot allege a claim for unjust enrichment in Alabama because to do so it must allege that it conferred a direct benefit on the Defendants. (Forest Br. at 70 n.57 [*157] (citing Danny Lynn Elec. & Plumbing, LLC v. Veolia ES Solid Waste Se., Inc., No. 09-cv-192, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 78557, 2011 WL 2893629, at *6 (M.D. Ala. July 19, 2011); Gen. Defs. Br. at 45 n.24 (same).))

The IPP responds that unjust enrichment does not require a direct benefit because it does not require privity. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 43.) The IPP also cites several federal district court cases that denied motions to dismiss based on the "direct benefit" requirement, none of which discuss that requirement in the context of Alabama law. (Id.)

HN48 [↑] "The essence of the theories of unjust enrichment or money had and received is that a plaintiff can prove facts showing that defendant holds money which, in equity and good conscience, belongs to plaintiff or holds money which was improperly paid to defendant because of mistake or fraud." Hancock-Hazlett Gen. Constr. Co. v. Trane Co., 499 So. 2d 1385, 1387 (Ala. 1986) (emphasis in original). The IPP Complaint plainly alleges that Defendants "hold" money, in the form of overcharges on Namenda IR and Namenda XR that "belongs to" the IPP or to other members of the Class. HN49 [↑] It is a foundational principle of antitrust law that overcharges are passed along the distribution chain to consumers.

The case cited by Defendants is distinguishable. In Danny Lynn Electric & Plumbing, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 78557, 2011 WL 2893629, at *6, plaintiffs' payments of inflated fees to a company did not directly benefit individual employees of the company, [*158] whose annual bonuses were tied to that company's profits. Id. It could not be said, in other words, that the individuals "held" money, through their bonuses, that belonged to the fee payers. Id.

Defendants' motion to dismiss this claim is DENIED.

2. Arizona

Defendants argue that the claim for unjust enrichment under Arizona law should be dismissed because the IPP does not allege that it "directly" benefitted the Defendants. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 45 n.24 (citing *In re Refrigerant Compressors Antitrust Litig. No. 09-MD-02042, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 50737, 2013 WL 1431756, at \*26 \(E.D. Mich. Apr. 9, 2013\)*.)

HN50 [+] Arizona law, however, does not appear to require that the plaintiff confer any benefit directly on the defendant. See *Murdock-Bryant Constr., Inc. v. Pearson, 146 Ariz. 48, 703 P.2d 1197, 1202-03 \(Ariz. 1985\)*. In that case, the court found that the excavation and site preparation subcontractor had conferred a benefit on a joint venture partner, even though that partner had signed the JV agreement with the prime contractor after the excavation and site preparation subcontractor's work had already been performed. Id.

Other federal district courts have also rejected the so-called "direct benefit" argument to hold that indirect purchasers may state a claim for unjust enrichment under Arizona law. See *In re Lidoderm Antitrust Litig., 103 F. Supp. 3d 1155, 1175-76 \(N.D. Cal. 2015\)*. Those courts reasoned, in part, that unjust enrichment in [*159] Arizona is a "flexible, equitable remedy," and "[a] benefit may be any type of advantage, including that which saves the recipient from any loss or expense." Id. The Lidoderm court found, accordingly, that indirect purchasers still stated a claim even though they had dealt directly with intermediaries in the chain of distribution, rather than defendants. Id.; see also Flonase, 692 F. Supp. 2d at 543.

Defendants' motion to dismiss this claim is DENIED.

3. California

Defendants argue that California has no independent cause of action for unjust enrichment. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 44.)

HN51 [+] While some California courts have held that there is no independent recovery in unjust enrichment, others have simply restyled a claim for unjust enrichment as a claim sounding in quasi-contract, and still other courts have treated these claims in the ordinary course, enumerating its elements. 55 Cal. Jur. 3d Restitution § 2 (noting inconsistent treatment of unjust enrichment claims and collecting cases). For example, the Ninth Circuit recently held, in the same opinion, that "in California, there is not a standalone cause of action for 'unjust enrichment,' which is synonymous with 'restitution,'" but later held that "[w]hen a plaintiff alleges [*160] unjust enrichment, a court may construe the cause of action as a quasi-contract claim seeking restitution." *Astiana v. Hain Celestial Grp., 783 F.3d 753, 762 \(9th Cir. 2015\)*.

Because this Court apparently may construe the claim as one for quasi-contract, the Court DENIES Defendants' motion to dismiss.

4. District of Columbia

Defendants argue that the claim for unjust enrichment under the District of Columbia's law should be dismissed for the IPP's failure to allege that it conferred a direct benefit on the Defendants. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 45 n.24 (citing *Refrigerant Compressors, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 50737, 2013 WL 1431756, at \*26*.)

The Court disagrees. *Refrigerant Compressors* relied on cases that did not analyze D.C. law. See also *Lidoderm, 103 F. Supp. 3d at 1176* (finding Defendants' citation to Refrigerant Compressors "not helpful"). Defendants have cited no other case law requiring D.C. law to be so construed, and the Court is aware of none. See id. ("I find that in absence of cases arising under District of Columbia law that support defendants' proposed narrow definition of direct benefit, the claims under District of Columbia law can proceed.").

Defendants' motion to dismiss this claim is DENIED.

5. Florida

Defendants also argue that the claim for unjust enrichment under Florida law should be dismissed because the IPP must allege that it conferred a direct benefit [*161] on the Defendants. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 45, n.24 (citing Century Senior Servs. v. Consumer Health Ben. Ass'n, Inc., 770 F. Supp. 2d 1261, 1267 (S.D. Fla. 2011).)

The Court agrees with the district court's thoughtful analysis in In re Processed Egg Prods. Antitrust Litig., 851 F. Supp. 2d 867, 928-29 (E.D. Pa. 2012), which upheld a claim for unjust enrichment under Florida law against the same challenge. That case surveyed several Florida cases and determined that while some Florida courts had not allowed plaintiffs to rely on the doctrine of unjust enrichment absent a direct benefit, other courts had allowed these claims to proceed. Id. For example, on a motion to dismiss, an appellate court overturned a trial court's dismissal of a medical services provider's unjust enrichment claim, which was based on uncompensated treatment of defendant HMO's members. Merkle v. Health Options, Inc., 940 So. 2d 1190, 1199 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2006). HN52[] Florida courts have also confirmed that recovery under quasi-contract is available "even where the parties had no dealings at all with each other." Commerce P'ship 8098 L.P. v. Equity Contracting Co., Inc., 695 So. 2d 383, 386 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1997).

Therefore, at this stage, the Court DENIES Defendants' motion to dismiss.

6. Idaho

Defendants move to dismiss the claim for unjust enrichment under Idaho law because the IPP fails to allege privity (or "something approaching privity") and that the IPP conferred a direct benefit on Defendants. (Forest Br. at 70 nn.56-57; Gen. Defs. Br. at 45 n.24.) Defendants cite Beco Constr. Co., Inc. v. Bannock Paving Co., Inc., 118 Idaho 463, 797 P.2d 863, 867 (Ida. 1990).

The Court [*162] agrees and dismisses this claim as to all Defendants. First, the Beco Construction court rejected the plaintiff's contention that "the equitable principle of unjust enrichment does not require the plaintiff and the defendant to have any other relationship beyond the nexus that one party may not unjustly enrich itself at the expense of the other." Id.

Second, other Idaho courts have similarly restricted recovery in the absence of a direct relationship. See, e.g., Stevenson v. Windermere Real Estate/Capital Grp., Inc., 152 Idaho 824, 275 P.3d 839, 842-44 (Ida. 2012) ("The Stevenson' argument, reduced to its essence, is that because they conferred a benefit upon Jefferson, and Jefferson conferred a benefit upon Windermere, they can cut out the middleman and directly recover from Windermere for unjust enrichment. . . . We are unwilling to expand the doctrine of unjust enrichment to the extent advocated by the Stevenson."); Med. Recovery Servs., LLC v. Bonneville Billing & Collections, Inc., 157 Idaho 395, 336 P.3d 802, 806 (Ida. 2014) [summarizing cases].

Defendants' motion is GRANTED.

7. Illinois

Defendants argue that Illinois has no independent cause of action for unjust enrichment and that, in the alternative, the IPP has failed to allege privity with Defendants or conferral of a direct benefit on Defendants. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 44, 45 nn.22, 24.) Defendants also argue that the IPP has failed to allege [*163] a duty owed to it by Defendants, which is required under Illinois law for recovery in unjust enrichment. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 48 n.26.)

First, Illinois appears to recognize an independent cause of action for unjust enrichment. HN53[] "To state a cause of action based on a theory of unjust enrichment, a plaintiff must allege that the defendant has unjustly retained a benefit to the plaintiff's detriment, and that defendant's retention of the benefit violates the fundamental principles of justice, equity, and good conscience." *HPI Health Care Servs., Inc. v. Mt. Vernon Hosp., Inc.*, 131 Ill. 2d 145, 545 N.E.2d 672, 679, 137 Ill. Dec. 19 \(Ill. 1989\). However, it is also true that, recently, intermediate appellate courts have called this into question. See *Cleary v. Philip Morris Inc.*, 656 F.3d 511, 517 \(7th Cir. 2011\) [noting apparent disagreement in Illinois law]. This Court follows the controlling view of the Illinois Supreme Court and declines to dismiss the IPP's unjust enrichment claim under Illinois law.

A plaintiff in Illinois is likewise not required to allege privity or allege a direct benefit. See *Freeman Indus., LLC v. Eastman Chem. Co.*, 172 S.W.3d 512, 525 \(Tenn. 2005\) [listing HPI Health Care as a case that "concluded that the benefit received by a defendant need not be direct to establish an unjust enrichment claim"].

Defendants cite *Cleary*, 656 F.3d at 517, to support their contention that defendants must receive a benefit from plaintiff in a "direct way." [Gen. [*164] Defs. Br. at 45.] However, Cleary was decided on the basis that the plaintiffs had not alleged any detriment that would make the defendants' retention of profits from cigarette sales unjust, since plaintiffs had not proven that they would have refrained from purchasing defendants' cigarettes even defendants had disclosed their true nature and risk. *656 F.3d at 519*. Because the IPP has alleged a detriment here, in the form of overcharges, Cleary is inapposite.

Finally, Defendants cite *Martis v. Grinnell Mut. Reins. Co.*, 388 Ill. App. 3d 1017, 905 N.E.2d 920, 928, 329 Ill. Dec. 82 \(Ill. App. Ct. 2009\), for the proposition that the IPP must allege a duty owed to it by Defendants in order to state a claim for unjust enrichment. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 48 n.26.) Contrary to Defendants' argument, however, Martis dismissed plaintiff's claim because plaintiff's claim under the *Illinois Consumer Fraud Act* ("ICFA") had been dismissed; therefore, there was no underlying fraud count upon which the plaintiff could establish a duty in unjust enrichment. *905 N.E.2d at 928*. Here, by contrast, the Court has found that the IPP has stated a claim under the ICFA.

Therefore, Defendants' motion to dismiss the IPP's claim for unjust enrichment under Illinois law is DENIED.

8. Kansas

Defendants argue that the IPP fails to state a claim for unjust enrichment under [*165] Kansas law because it does not allege either (i) that the IPP and the Defendants are in privity or (ii) that the IPP conferred a direct benefit on Defendants. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 44, 45 nn.22, 24.)

**HN54** [↑] Kansas does not require privity. "Our past cases establish that recovery under quasi-contract or unjust enrichment is not prohibited simply because the subcontractor and the owner of the property are not in privity. This conclusion is consistent with the theory of quasi-contract and unjust enrichment, which does not depend on privity." *Haz-Mat Response, Inc. v. Certified Waste Servs. Ltd.*, 259 Kan. 166, 910 P.2d 839, 847 \(Kan. 1996\).

Other district courts have been similarly unable to find any authority for the proposition that plaintiffs in Kansas are required to allege a "direct benefit." See *Processed Egg Prods.*, 851 F. Supp. 2d at 930 \(E.D. Pa. 2012\); *Packaged Seafood Prods.*, 242 F. Supp. 3d 1033, 1090 \(S.D. Cal. 2017\); *Lidoderm*, 103 F. Supp. 3d at 1177-78; *Auto. Parts Antitrust Litig. \(Instrument Panel Clusters\)*, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 90724, 2014 WL 2993753, at \*30. In particular, this Court adopts the thoughtful analysis in *Processed Egg Prods.*, 851 F. Supp. 2d at 929-30, which summarized several Kansas cases that permitted plaintiffs to maintain unjust enrichment claims absent "direct" benefits.

Accordingly, Defendants' motion to dismiss this claim is DENIED.

9. Maine

Defendants argue that to plead a claim for unjust enrichment under Maine law, the IPP must allege that it conferred a benefit directly on the Defendants. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 45 n.24.)

The Defendants again cite *Refrigerant Compressors*, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 50737, 2013 WL 1431756, at \*25, which dismissed a similar [*166] claim for unjust enrichment, albeit without any analysis of Maine's laws.

Beyond Refrigerant Compressors, the Court is aware of one trial-level case from Maine purporting to condition recovery on a direct benefit. *Rivers v. Amato*, No. CIV. A. CV-00-131, 2001 Me. Super. LEXIS 296, 2001 WL 1736498, at \*4 \(Me. Super. Ct. June 22, 2001\). In that case, however, a prospective buyer claimed unjust enrichment against the owner of a piece of property, on the theory that the buyer's negotiations with a third-party developer had led to the owner's repudiating their original contract and entering into a higher-priced land sale contract with that developer. Id. The court there found that the prospective buyer had failed to allege that any cognizable benefit was conferred. Id.

At present, and in the absence of any additional briefing by Defendants on this issue, neither Refrigerant Compressors nor Rivers convinces the Court that Maine's unjust enrichment law requires a plaintiff to allege a direct benefit in order for its claim to survive a motion to dismiss. See also *TFT-LCD \(Flat Panel\)*, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 110635, 2011 WL 4501223, at \*11 (denying motion to dismiss claim under Maine's unjust enrichment law for failure to allege direct benefit).

Defendants' motion is DENIED.

10. Massachusetts

Defendants argue that Massachusetts law similarly requires [*167] that the IPP confer a direct benefit on Defendants in order to state a claim for unjust enrichment. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 45 n.24.) Defendants again cite Refrigerant Compressors, which does not contain any analysis of Massachusetts law and does not cite to any cases containing analysis of Massachusetts law. *2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 50737, 2013 WL 1431756, at \*25*.

Moreover, Massachusetts law does not appear to include such a requirement. See, e.g., *Meshna v. Scrivanos*, No. CIV.A. 2011 01849 BLS 1, 2011 Mass. Super. LEXIS 334, 2012 WL 414476, at \*4 \(Mass. Super. Ct. Dec. 21, 2011\) (plaintiff employees successfully pleaded unjust enrichment claim against restaurant owner on the basis that owner was unjustly enriched by tips that customers left for employees). See also *Packaged Seafood Prods.*, 242 F. Supp. 3d 1033, 1091 \(S.D. Cal. 2017\) (noting absence of direct benefit rule in Massachusetts cases).

Defendants' motion to dismiss is DENIED.

11. Michigan

Defendants argue that Michigan law also requires the IPP to allege that it conferred a direct benefit on Defendants, again citing Refrigerant Compressors. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 45 n.24 (citing *2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 50737, 2013 WL 1431756, at \*25*.) The IPP responds that other courts have sustained claims for unjust enrichment under Michigan law by indirect purchaser classes. (IPP Resp. to Gen. Defs. Br. at 43 (citing *In re Suboxone \(Buprenorphine Hydrochloride and Naloxone\) Antitrust Litig.*, 64 F. Supp. 3d 665, 706 \(E.D. Pa. 2014\)).

HN55 This Court is persuaded that, under Michigan law—which strictly grounds a claim for [*168] unjust enrichment in quasi-contract—the relationship between the IPP and the Defendants is too attenuated to support a claim of unjust enrichment. See *A & M Supply Co. v. Microsoft Corp. \("A & M II"\)*, No. 274164, 2008 Mich. App. LEXIS 433, 2008 WL 540883, at \*2 \(Mich. Ct. App. Feb. 28, 2008\) (requiring direct benefit). In A & M I, the Court of Appeals vacated and remanded the trial court's certification of a class of "individuals who purchased, leased, or licensed a copy of Windows 95 or Windows 98 from an entity other than Microsoft." *A & M Supply Co. v. Microsoft Corp. \("A & M I"\)*, 252 Mich. App. 580, 654 N.W.2d 572, 575 \(Mich. Ct. App. 2002\). In a later proceeding, A & M II, the Court of Appeals dismissed the unjust enrichment claims by indirect purchasers against Microsoft because there was no "direct contact" between the parties, nor any showing that "Microsoft received any direct payment or other benefit from those purchasers," *2008 Mich. App. LEXIS 433, 2008 WL 540883, at \*2*.

Although there may be limited exceptions to the "direct benefit" requirement where the plaintiff and defendant are directly in contact, see Kammer Asphalt Paving Co. v. E. China Twp. Sch., 443 Mich. 176, 504 N.W.2d 635, 641 (Mich. 1993), the IPP has not alleged that either it or any Class members had direct contact with Actavis, Forest, or Merz. See also Hollowell v. Career Decisions, Inc., 100 Mich. App. 561, 298 N.W.2d 915, 920 (Mich. Ct. App. 1980) ("The process of imposing a 'contract-in-law' to prevent unjust [*169] enrichment is an activity which courts should approach with some caution.").

Therefore, Defendant's motion to dismiss this claim is GRANTED.

12. Mississippi

Defendants cite Cole v. Chevron USA, Inc., 554 F. Supp. 2d 655, 671 (S.D. Miss. 2007), for the proposition that unjust enrichment is not a separate cause of action in Mississippi.

HN56 After reading Cole and the case on which it relies, Coleman v. Conseco, Inc., 238 F. Supp. 2d 804, 813 (S.D. Miss. 2002), the Court is not convinced that Mississippi courts have barred unjust enrichment as a separate cause of action. Although Mississippi courts discuss unjust enrichment as a "theory of recovery," this is not incompatible with its being considered a cause of action. See Estate of Johnson v. Adkins, 513 So. 2d 922, 926 (Miss. 1987) ("The doctrine of unjust enrichment or recovery in quasi-contract applies to situations where there is no legal contract but where the person sought to be charged is in possession of money or property which in good conscience and justice he should not retain but should deliver to another[.]") (citing Hans v. Hans, 482 So.2d 1117, 1122 (Miss. 1986)).

Other federal courts have agreed. "Contrary to Coleman and its federal progeny . . . there is a substantial body of Mississippi case law that treats unjust enrichment as a separate cause of action." In re Light Cigarettes Mktg. Sales Practices Litig., 751 F. Supp. 2d 183, 193 (D. Me. 2010).

Defendants' motion to dismiss this claim is DENIED.

13. New York

Defendants argue that New York requires both privity [*170] and conferral of a direct benefit in order to allege a claim for unjust enrichment. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 45 n.24; id. at 48; Forest Br. at 70 nn.56-57.) HN57 The privity argument is a non-starter. "[A] plaintiff need not be in privity with the defendant to state a claim for unjust enrichment[.]" Sperry v. Crompton Corp., 8 N.Y.3d 204 215, 863 N.E.2d 1012, 1018, 831 N.Y.S.2d 760 (2007).

The New York Court of Appeals has announced a rule that the relationship between the parties may not be "too attenuated" in a claim for unjust enrichment. Sperry v. Crompton Corp 8 N.Y.3d 204, 216, 863 N.E.2d 1012, 1018, 831 N.Y.S.2d 760 (2007). In Sperry, for example, the Court of Appeals dismissed a claim by end purchasers of rubber products against manufacturers of processing chemicals that had allegedly been sold to the rubber product manufacturers at a markup. Sperry v. Crompton Corp., 8 N.Y.3d 204, 209, 863 N.E.2d 1012, 1013-14, 831 N.Y.S.2d 760 (2007).

Later, the New York Court of Appeals dismissed on the same grounds a claim for unjust enrichment brought by a real estate broker, which had conducted due diligence on certain properties, against a rival brokerage firm, which had purchased those due diligence reports from the developer and eventually won the commission to sell the properties in the original broker's stead. Georgia Mahne & Co. v. Rieder, 19 N.Y.3d 511, 519, 973 N.E.2d 743, 748, 950 N.Y.S.2d 333 (2012). Over a dissent, the Court of Appeals held that "regardless of whether [the defendant rival firm] was a good-faith purchaser of the due diligence materials, the complaint [*171] fails to present a sufficient connection between [plaintiff and defendant] to form the basis of an unjust enrichment claim." Id.

HN58 [+] However, wrongdoing can create the requisite relationship between benefactor and beneficiary. The First Department has synthesized the rule as follows: "a plaintiff must plead some relationship between the parties that could have caused reliance or inducement and ... the relationship cannot be too attenuated." Philips Int'l Invs., LLC v. Pektor, 117 A.D.3d 1, 4, 982 N.Y.S.2d 98, 100-01 (2014); see also Mandarin Trading Ltd v. Wildenstein, 16 N.Y.3d 173, 944 N.E.2d 1104, 1111, 919 N.Y.S.2d 465 (N.Y. 2011).

In Philips International Investments, for example, the First Department denied a motion to dismiss an unjust enrichment claim against a group of limited partnerships that had swooped in to purchase viable properties in a real estate transaction—cutting plaintiff, who had done much of the development work, out of the deal—because they "knew of the alleged wrong being done to plaintiff and of their essential role in the allegedly wrongful scheme." Philips Int'l Investments, LLC v. Pektor, 117 A.D.3d 1, 8, 982 N.Y.S.2d 98, 103 (2014).

At this time, the Court cannot hold that the relationship between the IPP and the Defendants is too attenuated as matter of law, since the IPP has plausibly pled that Defendants derived an economic benefit from charging monopolistic and artificially inflated prices for Namenda, a direct and proximate [*172] result of Defendants' unlawful practices. Cf. Dur an v. Bautista, 47 Misc. 3d 1207[A], 15 N.Y.S.3d 711, 2015 N.Y. Slip Op. 50507[U], 19, 2015 WL 1567020, at *18 [N.Y. Sup. 2015] ("It is against equity and good conscience to permit [the defendant] to retain the proceeds ... if the Class is able to prove the alleged fraudulent scheme.")

Other district courts examining this requirement with respect to indirect purchaser class actions are in accord. See Processed Egg Prods., 851 F. Supp. 2d at 930; DDAVP, 903 F.Supp.2d at 234; Suboxone, 64 F. Supp. 3d at 709-10.

The Court therefore DENIES Defendants' motion to dismiss the claim for unjust enrichment under New York law, without prejudice to renewal at a later date.

14. North Carolina

Defendants cite Effler v. Pyles, 94 N.C. App. 349, 380 S.E.2d 149, 152 (N.C. Ct. App. 1989), for the proposition that a plaintiff must allege that it conferred a direct benefit on a defendant. (Forest Br. at 70 n.57; Gen, Defs. Br. at 45 n.24.) The Effler court affirmed the trial court's entry of summary judgment in favor of defendant because the record did "not satisfy plaintiff's burden of showing that she conferred a benefit directly on defendant." Effler, 380 S.E.2d at 152 (emphasis added).

HN59 [+] The North Carolina Supreme Court has defined the elements of the claim more broadly, without reference to a "direct" benefit: "In order to establish a claim for unjust enrichment, a party must have conferred a benefit on the other party. The benefit must not have been conferred officially, [*173] that is it must not be conferred by an interference in the affairs of the other party in a manner that is not justified in the circumstances. The benefit must not be gratuitous and it must be measurable." Booe v. Shadrick, 322 N.C. 567, 369 S.E.2d 554, 556 (N.C. 1988).

Moreover, "cases decided after Effler have held that an indirect benefit can support an unjust enrichment claim." Lau v. Constable, No. 16 CVS 4393, 2017 NCBC LEXIS 10, 2017 WL 536361, at *5 (N.C. Super. Feb. 7, 2017) (collecting cases); see also Bandy v. Gibson, No. 16 CVS 456, 2017 NCBC LEXIS 66, 2017 WL 3207068, at *5 (N.C. Super. July 26, 2017) (same).

Generally, federal district courts that have recognized this split in North Carolina authority have not dismissed unjust enrichment claims on pre-answer motions. Lidoderm, 103 F. Supp. 3d at 1178 (citing other federal cases). In particular, the court in Processed Egg Prods., 851 F. Supp. 2d at 931-32, found that the more expansive language of Booe, from the North Carolina Supreme Court, was more persuasive than the language of Effler, from the intermediate appellate court. Id. This Court agrees that, given both the divide in authority and the clear language of Booe, a case from the North Carolina Supreme Court, it cannot dismiss the claim on these grounds.

Therefore, the Court DENIES Defendants' motion to dismiss the North Carolina claim for unjust enrichment.

15. North Dakota

Defendants argue that unjust enrichment under North Dakota law requires the plaintiff to have conferred a direct benefit on the defendant, [*174] citing Ritter, Laber & Assocs., Inc. v. Koch Oil, Inc., 2004 ND 117, 680 N.W.2d 634, 642 (N.D. 2004) and Relafen, 221 F.R.D. at 280. (Forest Br. at 70 n.57; Gen.Defs.Br. at 45 n.24.)

In Ritter, defendant and plaintiffs worked on the same construction project; the defendant argued that the plaintiffs, which had not chosen to contract with it directly at the outset of the project, could not later sue it for unjust enrichment. 680 N.W.2d at 642 (citing Apache Corp. v. MDU Res. Grp, Inc., 1999 ND 247, 603 N.W.2d 891 (N.D. 1999)).

Apache, however, does not stand for the proposition that, in North Dakota, unjust enrichment claims universally require a direct benefit. Rather, that case holds that, when parties involved in a single project do not all contract with one another, "[t]he separate contracts convey clearly the limited kinds of liability and exposure each party has in mind.... Respect for that contract arrangement requires the courts to refuse restitution between the parties who did not contract with each other." Apache, 603 N.W.2d at 895 (citing Dan B. Dobbs, Law of Remedies, § 4.1(2), p. 372 (2d ed. 1993)). Accord In re Auto. Parts (Fuel Senders) Antitrust Litig., 29 F. Supp. 3d 982, 1025 (E.D. Mich. 2014) (declining to dismiss indirect purchasers' unjust enrichment claim under North Dakota law on the basis of Apache); In re Auto. Parts (Bearings) Antitrust Litig., 50 F. Supp. 3d 836, 864-65 (E.D. Mich. 2014).

HN60[] Moreover, North Dakota courts have upheld unjust enrichment claims even where no direct benefit was alleged. See, e.g., Opp v. Matzke, 1997 ND 32, 559 N.W.2d 837, 840 (N.D. 1997) (well driller had stated claim for unjust enrichment against landowner even [*175] though she had not asked him to drill the well and did not reside on the property; since defendant "provide[d] her family a place to live on the property," she benefitted from the well).

Defendants' motion to dismiss the North Dakota claim is DENIED.

16. Rhode Island

Defendants argue that Rhode Island law requires the IPP to allege that it conferred a direct benefit on Defendants. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 45 n.24.) Defendants again cite Refrigerant Compressors, which dismissed the Rhode Island unjust enrichment claim without any analysis of Rhode Island law. *2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 50737, 2013 WL 1431756, at *25*.

HN61[] In Rhode Island, there are three elements of unjust enrichment. R&B Elec. Co. v. Amco Const. Co., 471 A.2d 1351, 1355 (R.I. 1984). "First, a benefit must be conferred upon the defendant by the plaintiff. Second, there must be an appreciation by the defendant of such benefit. Finally, there must be an acceptance of such benefit under such circumstances that it would be inequitable for him to retain the benefit without paying the value thereof." Id. at 1356. None of these elements requires conferral of a direct benefit.

HN62[] Moreover, "[t]he most significant requirement for a recovery on quasi contract is that the enrichment to the defendant be unjust," Id. Because the Rhode Island courts have not stated clearly that [*176] an action for unjust enrichment requires that the plaintiff have conferred a benefit on the defendant directly, and because Defendants have cited no case that so holds, the Court denies Defendants' motion to dismiss this claim on such grounds.

However, because the conduct underlying this claim is based on antitrust violations, and because Rhode Island did not recognize a cause of action for indirect purchasers under its antitrust statute until July 15, 2013, the Court DISMISSES IN PART this claim to the extent the IPP seeks to recover for injuries incurred before that date.

17. Tennessee

Defendants argue that a plaintiff in Tennessee must demonstrate either (i) that it "has exhausted all remedies against the person with whom the plaintiff enjoyed privity of contract" or (ii) that any attempt to exhaust these remedies would be futile, before it may recover in unjust enrichment. Freeman Indus., LLC v. Eastman Chem. Co., 172 S.W.3d 512, 525-26 \(Tenn. 2005\); (see also Gen. Defs. Br. at 46-47). Defendants further contend that the IPP's assertions at paragraphs 222-23 of its Complaint demonstrate that that the IPP intends to rely on a futility theory, but that, under Tennessee law, "a bare allegation of futility is not enough." (Gen. Defs. Br. at 46-47.)

Freeman Indus., 172 S.W.3d at 526, held that, [*177] at the summary judgment stage, an affidavit from plaintiffs counsel averring that he was "unaware of any viable claims" against the party with which the plaintiff had been in privity, without any further factual basis, was insufficient to show that he was entitled to recover in unjust enrichment. Id.

The IP Action, however, is at the motion to dismiss stage, where plaintiff has adequately alleged that any claim against the pharmacies or distributors would be futile. (CAC ¶¶ 222-23.) It is thus easily distinguishable from Freeman Industries, and the IPP must be given the opportunity to prove up its futility argument after discovery is complete.

Defendants' motion to dismiss the Tennessee claim is DENIED.

18. Utah

Defendants argue that, under Utah law, a plaintiff must allege that it conferred a benefit directly on a defendant. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 45 n.24 (citing Concrete Prods. Co. v. Salt Lake Cty., 734 P.2d 910, 911-12 \(Utah 1987\).)

In Concrete Prods., 734 P.2d at 911, a concrete supplier delivered materials to a subcontractor hired for a public works project. Id. The supplier, which was never paid, unsuccessfully sued the subcontractor, and then turned around and attempted to sue the county government on the theory that the county had not required the general [*178] contractor to post a bond. Id. The court found that the subcontractor could not recover in unjust enrichment against the county because there was no benefit to the county whatsoever—"instead, [the county] will incur the expenses of cleaning and maintaining curbs and gutters with no resale value or intrinsic economic worth." Id. at 912. Although the Concrete Products court distinguished an earlier case, Breitling Bros. Constr. v. Utah Golden Spikers, Inc., 597 P.2d 869 \(Utah 1979\), by stating that "[n]o direct benefit, such as that demonstrated by the plaintiff in Breitling, is present here," Concrete Prods., 734 P.2d at 911-12 (emphasis added), the use of the word "direct" in that case's dicta does not convince the Court that a plaintiff must allege a direct benefit as part of its prima facie case.

HN63 [↑] Other district courts have also found that Utah law does not require a direct benefit. Processed Egg Prods., 851 F. Supp. 2d at 932-34; Auto. Parts (Bearings), 50 F. Supp. 3d at 864-65; Packaged Seafood Prods., 242 F. Supp. 3d at 1092-93.

Defendants' motion to dismiss the Utah unjust enrichment claim is, therefore, DENIED.

19. Washington

Defendants claim that Washington unjust enrichment law requires plaintiffs to allege a direct benefit. (Gen. Defs. Br. at 45 n.24 (citing Keil v. Scholten, No. 48051-1-1, 2002 Wash. App. LEXIS 196, 2002 WL 988562, at \*5 \(Wash. Ct. App. Feb. 4, 2002\) (unpublished opinion).)

In Keil, a group that had formed a joint venture to purchase a commercial real estate property sued a real estate broker for unjust enrichment, seeking recovery [*179] of two hundred thousand dollars he had earned as a commission from the sale proceeds. *2002 Wash. App. LEXIS 196, [WL] at *4*. But for the broker's fraud and misrepresentations concerning the sale, the group argued, it never would have paid the four hundred thousand dollars cash at closing from which the broker earned his fee. [2002 Wash. App. LEXIS 196, \[WL\] at \*5](#). The court found that the group could not recover the broker's commission on a theory of unjust enrichment because, pursuant to the sale documents, it was the property owner's obligation to pay the brokerage fee, not the group's. Id.

Similarly, in State v. Am. Tobacco Co., No. 96-2-15056-SEA, 1996 WL 931316, at *8-9 (Superior Ct. Wash. Apr. 9, 1999), the court found that the State of Washington had not stated a claim for unjust enrichment against tobacco producers, because the benefit that the state alleged to have conferred, in the form of medical payments, was too attenuated. Id.

However, in Chem. Bank v. Wash Pub. Power Supply Sys., 102 Wn.2d 874, 691 P.2d 524, 544 (Wash. 1984), the Supreme Court of Washington held that a group of bondholders, which had funded a nuclear power plant construction project that later went bankrupt, had provided a "benefit" to the projects' participants—municipal entities that had bargained for a share of the plants' power output—such that restitution was appropriate. Id. at 558. The court reasoned that "the Restatement's definition [\*180] of benefit is quite broad;" that the bond revenues—although flowing through a third party—had been raised on the request of the participants; and that, "[f]inally, it was for the participants' benefit that the plants were being built in the first place." Id.

This Court is not aware of any federal district court cases discussing the "direct benefit" requirement under Washington unjust enrichment law in the antitrust context. However, this Court concludes that it must follow the reasoning of the Washington Supreme Court in Chemical Bank. The IPP has alleged that unlawful overcharges for branded Namenda IR and Namenda XR flowed ultimately to Defendants, even though there were intermediaries in the chain of distribution. This is analogous to the bondholder financing that flowed to the participants in Chemical Bank. Moreover, it was on Defendants' account that higher prices for Namenda were passed through to the consumer.

Therefore, the Court DENIES Defendants' motion to dismiss

20. West Virginia and Wisconsin

Defendants argue that a plaintiff must allege conferral of a direct benefit on a defendant in order to bring a claim for unjust enrichment in West Virginia and Wisconsin. (Gen. Defs. [\*181] Br. at 45 n.24 (citing Refrigerant Compressors, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 50737, 2013 WL 1431756, at 25-26). Refrigerant Compressors, however, neither analyzes the law under either of these jurisdictions nor cites any case that does.

As a result, and in the absence of any additional briefing, Defendants' motion to dismiss these claims is DENIED.

21. Wyoming

Lastly, Defendants argue that the IPP has failed to allege that it conferred a direct benefit on Defendants, as required under Wyoming law. (Forest Br. at 70 n.57 (citing Boyce v. Freeman, 2002 WY 20, 39 P.3d 1062, 1065-66 \(Wyo. 2002\).) In Boyce, 39 P.3d at 1063, the plaintiff gave a pickup truck to an employee of the defendant because the employee told the plaintiff that the defendant would pay for the truck. Id. Plaintiff was never paid for the truck and brought an unjust enrichment claim against the defendant, alleging that the employee had used the truck on the job and, therefore, that the defendant-employer was unjustly enriched. Id. The Supreme Court of Wyoming found that because nothing in the record showed that the employer knew it was expected to pay for the truck, or that the employer induced the plaintiff to give the truck to its employee, "[w]e see no evidence leading us to conclude that... good conscience requires [the defendant] to pay[.]" Id. at 1066. The opinion concluded, in part, that the employer [\*182] had "received no direct benefit from this action." Id.

HN64  In Boyce, the Supreme Court of Wyoming also described the elements of unjust enrichment as follows: "(1) Valuable services were rendered, or materials furnished, (2) to the party to be charged, (3) which services or materials were accepted, used and enjoyed by the party, and, (4) under such circumstances which reasonably notified the party to be charged that the plaintiff, in rendering such services or furnishing such materials, expected to be paid by the party to be charged. Without such payment, the party would be unjustly enriched." Id. at 1065 (citing Coones v. F.D.I.C., 894 P.2d 613, 617 (Wyo. 1995) (emphasis added).)

The Court finds that the Boyce opinion as a whole establishes that a plaintiff seeking to recover under a theory of unjust enrichment under Wyoming law must allege a direct benefit.

Other federal district courts sitting in diversity are in accord. See, e.g., Aftermarket Filters, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104114, 2010 WL 1416259, at *2-3.

Therefore, Defendants' motion to dismiss the Wyoming claim is GRANTED.

E. In Conclusion, the IPP Has Stated a Claim for Unjust Enrichment Under Count Four With Respect to Actavis, Forest, and Merz Under the Laws of 31 States

In sum, the Court finds that the IPP Complaint has adequately pled facts supporting a claim for [*183] unjust enrichment against Actavis, Forest, and Merz only. The Court thus dismisses all claims under Count Four with respect to the Generic Defendants.

The Court also finds that, as a matter of law, the IPP may pursue its Count Four claims for unjust enrichment under the laws of all states except Alaska, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Michigan, Montana, New Jersey, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Virginia, Washington, and Wyoming. Those claims are hereby DISMISSED.

The Court also DISMISSES IN PART the IPP's claim under Rhode Island law, to the extent the IPP seeks recovery for injuries occurring prior to July 15, 2013.

IX. Conclusion

In conclusion, the Court holds as follows:

With respect to Count One for monopolization, the claims under the laws of Florida, Kansas, Massachusetts, and Utah are DISMISSED in their entirety. The claim under the law of Rhode Island is DISMISSED IN PART, to the extent that the IPP seeks to recover on the basis of injuries occurring before July 15, 2013.

With respect to Count Two for conspiracy to monopolize, the claims under the laws of Illinois, Massachusetts, and Utah are DISMISSED in their entirety. The claim under the law of Rhode Island is DISMISSED IN PART, to the extent that the IPP seeks to recover on the basis of injuries occurring before July 15, 2013.

With respect to Count Three for consumer protection and unfair and deceptive trade practices, the claims under the laws of Arizona, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, Kansas, Maine, Montana, New York, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Vermont, and West Virginia are DISMISSED in their entirety.

With respect to Count Four, unjust enrichment, all claims are DISMISSED ONLY WITH RESPECT TO the Generic Defendants. For the remaining Defendants, Actavis, Forest, and Merz, the claims under the laws of Alaska, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Michigan, Montana, New Jersey, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Virginia, Washington, and Wyoming are DISMISSED in their entirety. The claim under the law of Rhode Island is DISMISSED IN PART, to the extent that the IPP seeks to recover on the basis of injuries occurring before July 15, 2013.

The Clerk of Court is respectfully requested to remove Docket Number 133 from the Court's list of pending motions.

Pursuant to this Court's memorandum endorsement at Docket Number 165, the Clerk of Court is also respectfully requested to remove Docket Number 150 from the Court's [*185] list of pending motions.

Dated: December 26, 2018

/s/ Colleen McMahon

Chief Judge

BY ECF TO ALL PARTIES

---

End of Document

Cinetopia, LLC v. AMC Entm't Holdings, Inc.

United States District Court for the District of Kansas

December 27, 2018, Decided; December 27, 2018, Filed

Case No. 18-2222-CM-KGG

Reporter

2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 216600 *; 2018-2 Trade Cas. (CCH) P80,626; 2018 WL 6804776

CINETOPIA, LLC, Plaintiff, v. AMC ENTERTAINMENT HOLDINGS, INC. and AMERICAN MULTI-CINEMA, INC., Defendants.

Core Terms

---

theater, allegations, licensing, film, distributors, movie, geographic, antitrust, relevant market, clearances, markets, argues, competitors, estoppel, tortious interference, monopoly power, blanket, buying, movie theater, monopolization, exhibitor, vertical, promise, opened, zone, rule of reason, exclusionary

Counsel: [*1] For Cinetopia LLC, Plaintiff: Carson M. Hinderks, Christina Marie Wahl, David F. Oliver, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Berkowitz Oliver LLP - KCMO, Kansas City, MO; Cori Gordon Moore, Thomas L. Boeder, LEAD ATTORNEYS, PRO HAC VICE, Perkins Coie, LLP -- Seattle, Seattle, WA; F. Matthew Ralph, Michael A. Lindsay, LEAD ATTORNEYS, PRO HAC VICE, Dorsey & Whitney LLP - Minneapolis, Minneapolis, MN.

For AMC Entertainment Holdings, Inc., American Multi-Cinema, Inc., Defendants: Barton W. Cox, Michael A. Swartzendruber, Nicholas J. Hendrix, LEAD ATTORNEYS, PRO HAC VICE, Norton Rose Fulbright US LLP, Dallas, TX; Darryl Anderson, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Norton Rose Fulbright US LLP, Houston, TX; Joseph M. Rebein, Zach Chaffee-McClure, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Shook, Hardy & Bacon LLP - KC/Grand, Kansas City, MO.

Judges: CARLOS MURGUIA, United States District Judge.

Opinion by: CARLOS MURGUIA

Opinion

---

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

This case involves movie theaters, the films they show, and when the theaters are able to get access to those films. Plaintiff Cinetopia, LLC operates a movie theater in Overland Park, Kansas, in the Prairiefire development. Roughly three miles away, defendants AMC Entertainment Holding, Inc. and American Multi-Cinema, Inc. (collectively, [*2] "AMC") operate an AMC theater called the AMC Town Center 20. According to Cinetopia, AMC is the largest movie theater circuit in the United States. Cinetopia claims that AMC has used its dominant market position to force movie distributors to grant AMC exclusive licenses to play movies, which stifles competition and unfairly harms theaters like Cinetopia. Cinetopia claims that AMC's practices violate federal antitrust laws. Cinetopia also brings state law claims for tortious interference and estoppel. AMC filed a motion to dismiss (doc. 27) all of Cinetopia's claims. For the following reasons, the court denies AMC's motion.

I. Factual Background

The following facts are taken from Cinteopia's complaint and are viewed in the light most favorable to Cinetopia.

Cinetopia opened its Prairiefire movie theater ("Cinetopia Overland Park 18") in May 2014. Cinetopia Overland Park 18 is a unique, cutting-edge theater. For example, it operates a restaurant on the premises; offers restaurant and bar menus for some of its screens designed for the exhibition of blockbusters; has ten "Living Room Theaters" with full restaurant and bar service; includes a movie Parlor; and offers other luxury accommodations. [*3] When Cinetopia Overland Park 18 opened, AMC was already operating AMC Town Center 20. AMC Town Center 20 does not offer a restaurant menu or in-theater waiter and staff service, and has received a number of negative online reviews.

Cinetopia alleges that in 2010, AMC implemented a National Clearance Position. Under that national policy, AMC told movie distributors (like Disney, Paramount, and Universal) that it wanted exclusive access to movies over any new theater in close proximity to an existing AMC theater. These "clearances" meant that AMC would refuse to play any film a distributor licensed to play for the competing theater. As one example of the execution of AMC's policy, in 2010, AMC sent a letter to the major film distributors indicating that it would "not play day-and-date" with a new movie theater in Georgia that was within three miles of two AMC theaters. Playing day-and-date means to simultaneously exhibit a particular movie. (See Doc. 28, at 9; Doc. 29, at 24.) In the same letter, AMC reminded the distributors that AMC had "played 100% of [their] wide commercial releases and look[ed] forward to continuing that arrangement going forward." (Doc. 17, at 17.) And when the [*4] new theater opened in Georgia, AMC's CEO told the owner that AMC would use its "full weight and power" to "prevent them from building new theaters near AMC [t]heaters." (Id.)

The Cinetopia Overland Park 18 and AMC Town Center 20 are within the same "film licensing zone." A film licensing zone is a geographic area established or recognized by distributors in which prints of films are generally made available to play when released. Cinetopia uses the term "clearance" or "blanket clearance" throughout its complaint to mean an exclusivity agreement between a distributor and an exhibitor licensed to play a film (i.e., a distributor like Paramount and an exhibitor like AMC) that applies "to all films licensed in a competitive film licensing zone and is accompanied by a similarly blanket refusal to play day-and-date any film licensed to a competing theater." (Id. at 8.)

Before Cinetopia opened its theater at Prairiefire, AMC offered to "buy" the facility. Initially, AMC suggested some "very attractive prices." (Id. at 17.) But in the end, AMC's offer was for a purchase price of zero dollars. Cinetopia declined. AMC responded, "Okay, then I guess we will see what happens next summer when you try to open." (Id. at 18 [*5].) Beginning when Cinetopia opened, AMC's actions resulted in Cinetopia being denied access to a number of desirable movies, including Godzilla, Captain America: Winter Soldier, Guardians of the Galaxy, Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, The Amazing Spider-Man 2, The Hunger Games: Mockingjay Part 2, Divergent Series: The Insurgent, Jurassic World, and Pitch Perfect 2, among many others. According to Cinetopia, "AMC's exclusionary demands, backed by AMC's circuit and monopoly power, were the reason distributors denied Cinetopia fair competitive access to high grossing, wide release, commercial films. These denials were not based on the distributors' fair and independent assessment of the quality and customer-drawing capacity of Cinetopia Overland Park, which was vastly superior to that of the competing AMC Theater." (Id. at 20.)

After Cinetopia opened, AMC again expressed interest in buying Cinetopia's facilities at attractive prices. But at the same time, AMC was trying to acquire another large national theater circuit, Carmike Cinemas. The size of the Carmike deal required AMC to report the deal to the United States Department of Justice ("DOJ"), who would review the deal for potential anticompetitive effects. Cinetopia claims that AMC renewed its (pretended) interest in buying Cinetopia Overland Park 18 so that Cinetopia would not bring legal action for anticompetitive conduct while the DOJ was reviewing the Carmike deal. According to Cinetopia, AMC delivered an indication of interest including a proposed purchase price in February 2016, but advised that the proposed deal would be delayed because of the Carmike acquisition. After the DOJ approved the Carmike [*6] acquisition, AMC offered another price—substantially lower than the previous offer. Eventually, AMC offered even worse terms and a condition that Cinetopia release all of its legal claims against AMC.

II. Standards of Review

The court will grant a 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss only when the factual allegations fail to "state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 \(2007\). Although the factual allegations need not be detailed, the claims must set forth entitlement to relief "through more than labels, conclusions and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action." In re Motor Fuel Temperature Sales Practices Litig., 534 F. Supp. 2d 1214, 1216 \(D. Kan. 2008\). The allegations must contain facts sufficient to state a claim that is plausible, rather than merely conceivable. Id. "All well-pleaded facts, as distinguished from conclusory allegations, must be taken as true." Swanson v. Bixler, 750 F.2d 810, 813 \(10th Cir. 1984\); see also Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 \(2009\). The court construes any reasonable inferences from these facts in favor of the plaintiff. Tal v. Hogan, 453 F.3d 1244, 1252 \(10th Cir. 2006\).

Discovery in antitrust cases can be expensive. Twombly, 550 U.S. at 558 (applying the plausibility standard to Sherman Act antitrust claims). But while this potential expense may require some specificity in pleading, antitrust cases do not require heightened fact pleading. Id. at 570. Rather, an antitrust complaint is subject to the [*7] same standards identified above. Id.; see also In re Urethane Antitrust Litig., 663 F. Supp. 2d 1067, 1074 \(D. Kan. 2009\).

III. Analysis

A. Count I — Circuit Dealing

The court first addresses Cinetopia's claim for circuit dealing. Defendant argues that this claim fails because it is not a per se violation of the antitrust laws (so plaintiff must plead a relevant market, but hasn't done so) and, even if it is a per se violation, plaintiff has not provided adequate allegations to state a claim under either United States v. Griffith, 334 U.S. 100, 68 S. Ct. 941, 92 L. Ed. 1236 \(1948\), overruled on other grounds by Copperweld Corp. v. Indep. Tube Corp., 467 U.S. 752, 771-72, 104 S. Ct. 2731, 81 L. Ed. 2d 628 \(1984\), or United States v. Paramount Pictures, Inc., 334 U.S. 131, 68 S. Ct. 915, 92 L. Ed. 1260 \(1948\).

Griffith and Paramount identify two forms of circuit dealing. The first involves the use of circuit buying power and is described in Griffith as follows:

A man with a monopoly of theatres in any one town commands the entrance for all films into that area. If he uses that strategic position to acquire exclusive privileges in a city where he has competitors, he is employing his monopoly power as a trade weapon against his competitors. It may be a feeble, ineffective weapon where he has only one closed or monopoly town. But as those towns increase in number throughout a region, his monopoly power in them may be used with crushing effect on competitors in other places.

334 U.S. at 107. The second type of circuit dealing, identified in Paramount [*8], is the elimination, by contracts or otherwise, of competitive bidding on a film-by-film and theater-by-theater basis. 334 U.S. at 154-55. Ayres v. AG Processing Inc., 345 F. Supp. 2d 1200, 1210 \(D. Kan. 2004\). AMC asserts that it has a privilege to "interfere." Digital Ally, Inc. v. Utility Assocs., Inc., No. 14-2262-CM, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 49893, 2017 WL 1197561, at \*17 \(D. Kan. Mar. 30, 2017\). This privilege is grounded in the Restatement (Second) Torts, which provides that competitors do not tortiously interfere when

Cinetopia alleges that AMC has engaged in both types of circuit dealing, and that such actions are per se unlawful. Specifically, Cinetopia alleges that AMC has monopoly power in many markets where AMC is the only theater operating. AMC is therefore able to use its position of power in those markets to receive beneficial treatment in markets where it is not the only theater. And Cinetopia further alleges that AMC has negotiated "blanket clearances" for movie licenses, which eliminates competition on a film-by-film basis.

1. Per Se Violation

AMC asks the court to determine that the type of circuit dealing alleged by Cinetopia is a vertical restraint of trade, which is analyzed under the "rule of reason" instead of the per se rule. See *Ohio v. Am. Express Co., 138 S. Ct. 2274, 2284, 201 L. Ed. 2d 678 \(2018\)* (explaining that vertical restraints are "restraints 'imposed by agreement between firms at different levels of distribution'") (citation omitted). It is [*9] typically only horizontal restraints, which are created by agreement between competitors, that qualify for per se treatment. Id. AMC argues that the Tenth Circuit has said that the per se rule should be limited in application. See, e.g., *Buccaneer Energy \(USA\) Inc. v. Gunnison Energy Corp., 846 F.3d 1297, 1306 \(10th Cir. 2017\)* ("The rule of reason is the default approach, and there is a presumption in favor of its application."). And the Supreme Court has in recent years addressed a number of once-unlawful vertical restraints and evaluated them under the rule of reason. See, e.g., *Cont'l T.V., Inc. v. GTE Sylvania Inc., 433 U.S. 36, 59, 97 S. Ct. 2549, 53 L. Ed. 2d 568 \(1977\)* (reversing prior precedent that vertical non-price restraints were per se unlawful); *State Oil Co. v. Khan, 522 U.S. 3, 22, 118 S. Ct. 275, 139 L. Ed. 2d 199 \(1997\)* (holding that vertical maximum retail price maintenance agreements were not per se unlawful; reversing prior precedent); *Leegin Creative Leather Prods., Inc. v. PSKS, Inc., 551 U.S. 877, 899-908, 127 S. Ct. 2705, 168 L. Ed. 2d 623 \(2007\)* (same, with vertical minimum retail price maintenance agreements). Finally, AMC asks this court to consider Paramount and Griffith in their context—a time when the relationships between movie distributors and exhibitors were not the same as they are today. See *Redwood Theaters, Inc. v. Festival Enters., Inc., 200 Cal. App. 3d 687, 697, 248 Cal. Rptr. 189 \(1988\)*.

The Supreme Court has not overturned the per se treatment of circuit dealing claims. And lower courts continue to apply the per se rule with respect to circuit dealing claims. See, e.g., *2301 M Cinema LLC v. Silver Cinemas Acquisition Co., No. 17-1990 \(EGS\), 342 F. Supp. 3d 126, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 167176, 2018 WL 4681007, at \*3 \(D.C. Cir. Sept. 28, 2018\)*; *Cobb Theatres III, LLC v. AMC Entm't Holdings, Inc., 101 F. Supp. 3d 1319, 1343 \(N.D. Ga. 2015\)*; *Reading Int'l, Inc. v. Oaktree Cap. Mgmt. LLC, No. 03-CV-1895, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 504, 2007 WL 39301, at \*7 \(S.D.N.Y. Jan. 8, 2007\)*; *Flagship Theatres of Palm Desert, LLC v. Century Theatres, Inc., 198 Cal. App. 4th 1366, 131 Cal. Rptr. 3d 519, 527 \(Cal. Ct. App. 2011\)*. This court will do the same. In any [*10] event, for the reasons stated later in this opinion, the result would not change if the court were to apply the rule of reason.

2. Adequate Allegations

AMC further argues that even if circuit dealing is treated as a per se antitrust violation, Cinetopia has failed to adequately allege a claim under either Griffith or Paramount. Specifically, AMC claims that Cinetopia does not adequately allege any external markets for purposes of a leveraging claim under Griffith. And AMC also claims that Cinetopia merely makes conclusory statements about "blanket clearances" and film-by-film licensing that fail to adequately support a claim under Paramount.

a) Allegations of External Markets

Griffith prohibits circuit dealing in the form of monopoly leveraging. This happens when an exhibitor "with a monopoly of theaters in any one town . . . uses that strategic position to acquire exclusive privileges in a city where [the exhibitor] has competitors." *Griffith, 334 U.S. at 107*. To state a claim for this type of antitrust violation, the plaintiff must allege a second market that is being leveraged. See *Four Corners Nephrology Assocs., P.C. v. Mercy Med. Ctr. of Durango, 582 F.3d 1216, 1222 \(10th Cir. 2009\)*.

AMC complains that Cinetopia did not identify a specific non-competitive market in which AMC owns a theater. But Cinetopia alleges [*11] a nationwide circuit—the largest in the United States. And Cinetopia alleges that AMC is the sole film provider in many markets. It further alleges that the majority of AMC's theaters lack a direct competitor within three miles. As in Cobb Theatres III, this is a sufficient allegation of the use of an entire circuit, including theaters in closed markets, to obtain privileges in competitive markets. 101 F. Supp. 3d at 1343. The test here is plausibility; not certainty. Cinetopia's allegations of an external market are sufficient to satisfy Twombly.

b) Conclusory Statements of "Blanket Clearances"

Paramount says that a movie exhibitor may not pool its purchasing power by negotiating "agreements that cover two or more theaters in a particular circuit . . ." 334 U.S. at 154. This conduct "eliminate[s] the opportunity for a small competitor to obtain the choice of first runs," and "put[s] a premium on the size of the circuit." Id. According to AMC, Cinetopia must allege facts sufficient to show "(i) a licensing agreement for a film covering multiple AMC theaters, that (ii) had the effect of eliminating the opportunity for Cinetopia to obtain a license agreement at Cinetopia Overland Park 18." (Doc. 28, at 28.)

Cinetopia alleges [*12] that blanket clearances were a core part of AMC's "national exclusionary campaign to prevent or limit competitive entry." (Doc. 17, at 15.) Cinetopia further alleges that AMC discussed its policy with each major distributor and "insisted on blanket clearances and refusals to play day-and-date to protect any theater in its national circuit from 'competitive encroachment.'" (Id. at 16.) According to Cinetopia, AMC's practices "destroyed competition on a film-by-film theater-by-theater basis." (Doc. 29, at 23.) Cinetopia claims that "AMC's exclusionary demands, backed by AMC's circuit and monopoly power, were the reason distributors denied Cinetopia fair competitive access to high grossing, wide release, commercial films. These denials were not based on the distributors' fair and independent assessment of the quality and customer-drawing capacity of Cinetopia Overland Park, which was vastly superior to that of the competing AMC Theater." (Doc. 17, at 20.) These allegations are adequate to plausibly state a claim under Paramount. To be certain, Cinetopia will have to offer more specific evidence of agreements covering multiple theaters to survive a motion for summary judgment. But the allegations [*13] in Cinetopia's complaint are sufficient for this stage of the proceedings.

B. Counts II — IV

In Count II of its complaint, Cinetopia alleges a claim for monopolization under § 2 of the Sherman Act. Count III is for attempted monopolization under the same law. And Count IV is for unreasonable restraint of trade in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act. AMC argues that all three claims fail for the same overriding reason: Cinetopia has not alleged a relevant market.

Section 2 of the Sherman Act establishes that it is illegal to "monopolize, or attempt to monopolize . . . any part of the trade or commerce among the several States . . ." 15 U.S.C. § 2. Section 2 prohibits monopolistic anticompetitive conduct that harms competition. Auraria Student Hous. at the Regency, LLC v Campus Vill. Apartments, LLC, 843 F.3d 1225, 1233 \(10th Cir. 2016\). "The purpose of the Act is not to protect businesses from the working of the market; it is to protect the public from the failure of the market. The law directs itself not against conduct which is competitive, even severely so, but against conduct which unfairly tends to destroy competition itself." Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 506 U.S. 447, 458, 113 S. Ct. 884, 122 L. Ed. 2d 247 \(1993\). The elements of a § 2 claim are "(1) monopoly power in the relevant market; (2) willful acquisition or maintenance of this power through exclusionary conduct; and (3) harm to competition." Lenox MacLaren Surg. Corp. v. Medtronic, Inc., 847 F.3d 1221, 1231 \(10th Cir. 2017\). To prove a § 2 monopolization and attempt claim, plaintiffs must show [*14] that "a defendant's conduct actually monopolizes or dangerously threatens to do so." Id. (quoting Spectrum Sports, 506 U.S. at 459). Additionally, all § 2 claims require proof of a relevant antitrust market. Buccaneer, 846 F.3d at 1320 (citing Auraria, 843 F.3d at 1232-33).

Section 1 of the Sherman Act prohibits "[e]very contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations." 15 U.S.C. § 1. For a § 1 violation, a plaintiff must plead (1) a contract, combination, or conspiracy among two or more independent actors; (2) that unreasonably restrains trade; and (3) is in, or substantially affects, interstate commerce. Id.; TV Commc'n's Network, Inc. v. Turner Network Television, Inc., 964 F.2d 1022, 1027 \(10th Cir. 1992\). To show that a restraint of trade under § 1 violates the rule of reason, a plaintiff must also identify a relevant market. Ohio, 138 S. Ct. at 2284.

1. Allegations of Relevant Market

"Because the relevant market provides the framework against which economic power can be measured, defining the product and geographic markets is a threshold requirement." Auraria, 843 F.3d at 1244 (quoting Campfield v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 532 F.3d 1111, 1118 (10th Cir. 2008)). The product market "is composed of products that have reasonable interchangeability for the purposes for which they are produced—price, use and qualities considered." Id. at 1244-45 (quoting SCFC ILC, Inc. v. Visa USA, Inc., 36 F.3d 958, 966 (10th Cir. 1994)). "The geographic market is the narrowest market which is wide enough so [*15] that products from adjacent areas cannot compete on a substantial parity with those included in the market." Id. at 1245 (quoting Westman Comm'n Co. v. Hobart Intl, Inc., 796 F.2d 1216, 1222 (10th Cir. 1986)). "Failure to allege a legally sufficient market is cause for dismissal of the claim." Campfield, 532 F.3d at 1118. But market definition is also a "deeply fact-intensive inquiry," making courts hesitant to dismiss for failure to plead a relevant market. Concord Assocs., L.P. v. Entm't Props. Trust, 817 F.3d 46, 53 (2d Cir. 2016); Reazin v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield, Inc., 899 F.2d 951, 975 (10th Cir. 1990). Market definitions are sufficient if they "plausibly suggest the contours of the relevant geographic and product markets." Cobb Theatres III, 101 F. Supp. 3d at 1336 (citation and quotation marks omitted).

a) Are allegations of a relevant market required?

Cinetopia argues that it is not required to define a relevant market for Counts II—IV for two reasons. First, Cinetopia claims that it has offered direct evidence of monopoly power, which relieves it of the need to define a market. Second, Cinetopia claims that a market definition is not required because it has alleged the factual predicate for a "quick look" analysis. The court need not address either of these arguments further here because, as explained below, the court determines that Cinetopia has sufficiently alleged a relevant market.

b) Geographic Market

Cinetopia alleges that the geographic market is "local because existing [*16] industry structure limits access to competitive film licensing zones." (Doc. 17, at 10.) In this case, the geographic market is therefore the "Overland Park/Leawood film licensing zone in which Cinetopia Overland Park 18 and AMC Town Center 20 in Leawood are located . . ." (Id.)

AMC argues that Cinetopia's geographic market definition is too limited. According to AMC, a valid geographic market definition must "reflect[] the total market demand for plaintiffs' product" and "cannot circumscribe the market to a few buyers." Campfield, 532 F.3d at 1118-19.

The court determines that Cinetopia's alleged geographic market is sufficient because Cinetopia is alleging that AMC is a monopsonist—a buyer who is able to assert market power in the upstream input market. See id. at 1118. "When considering market power in a monopsony situation, 'the market is not the market of competing sellers [here, the movie theaters exhibiting the films] but of competing buyers. This market is comprised of buyers who are seen by sellers as being reasonably good substitutes.'" Id. (citation omitted). In a monopsonist case, the court looks upstream at how the distributors determine "reasonably good substitutes."

Cinetopia has alleged that AMC essentially [*17] forced the upstream movie distributors to create "film licensing zones" to determine who will receive licenses within geographic areas. There may be other theaters within relatively close proximity to AMC and Cinetopia. And ultimately, the facts may show that a different geographic market is proper. But for now, Cinetopia has plausibly alleged that a proper geographic market is that which was created by AMC's own actions.

c) Product Market

Cinetopia alleges that the relevant product market is the "market for licensing of first run, high grossing, wide release, commercial films," or the "film licensing market." (Doc. 17, at 9.) AMC argues that this does not make sense; the product at issue is not the license—it's the films themselves.

On this point, the court agrees with Cinetopia. As noted above, Cinetopia has essentially alleged a monopsony. The relevant market is therefore the upstream purchases (of licenses) instead of the downstream sales (of tickets to view the movies). Practically speaking, it is not the movies themselves that are being bought and sold here. It is the right—or the license—to exhibit the movies and view the movies. Cinetopia has adequately alleged a relevant product [*18] market.

C. State Law Claims

Finally, Cinetopia brings two state law claims: one for tortious interference, and one for estoppel. AMC asks the court to dismiss both claims.

1. Tortious Interference with Actual and/or Prospective Business Relations

To state a claim for tortious interference with a business relationship, Cinemark must allege:

- (1) the existence of a business relationship or expectancy with the probability of future economic benefit to the plaintiff; (2) knowledge of the relationship or expectancy by the defendant; (3) that, except for the conduct of the defendant, plaintiff was reasonably certain to have continued the relationship or realized the expectancy; (4) intentional misconduct by defendant; and (5) damages suffered by plaintiff as a direct or proximate cause of defendant's misconduct.
- (a) the relation concerns a matter involved in the competition between the actor and the other and
  - (b) the actor does not employ wrongful means and
  - (c) his action does not create or continue an unlawful restraint of trade and
  - (d) his purpose is at least in part to advance his interest in competing with the other.

Restatement (Second) Torts § 768. The Tenth Circuit has predicted that Kansas courts would adopt this principle. [*19] DP-Tek Inc. v. AT&T Glob. Info. Sols. Co., 100 F.3d 828, 831 \(10th Cir. 1996\). AMC argues that under Kansas law, "wrongful means" requires Cinetopia to plead independently actionable conduct. Because Cinetopia's antitrust claims fail, AMC argues, its tortious interference claims must fail, as well. But this court has held that Cinetopia's antitrust claims may proceed. Because Cinetopia has plausibly alleged that AMC has employed wrongful means to obtain movie licenses, AMC cannot succeed on its competitive privilege defense at this time.

Alternatively, AMC asks the court to dismiss Cinetopia's tortious interference claim because Cinetopia has not adequately identified the specific groups of individuals with which it had a business expectancy. But Cinetopia has alleged that AMC interfered with Cinetopia's relationship with the Prairiefire development by "reducing [the development's] attendance and revenues, and limiting its growth and viability." (Doc. 17, at 3.) Cinetopia has also alleged that AMC interfered with its "relationships with distributors that include future economic benefits to Cinetopia from the continued fair competitive access to the licensing of movies." (Id. at 28.) Cinetopia specifically identifies these distributors as Disney, Paramount, Sony, Universal, [*20] Warner Bros., Lionsgate, and Universal. And Cinetopia has alleged that AMC interfered with its theater patrons. It is unnecessary to identify individual ticket purchasers when setting forth allegations in the complaint. See In re Syngenta AG MIR 162 Corn Litig., 131 F. Supp. 3d 1177, 1218 \(D. Kan. 2015\). These allegations are sufficient to state a claim for tortious interference.

2. Estoppel

To succeed on a claim of promissory estoppel, a party must show: "(1) the promisor reasonably intended or expected the promisee to act in reliance on the promise; (2) the promisee acted reasonably in reliance on that promise; and (3) a refusal of the court to enforce the promise would sanction the perpetration of fraud or result in other injustice." W & W Steel, LLC v. BSC Steel, Inc., 944 F. Supp. 2d 1066, 1078 \(D. Kan. 2013\) (citing Ayalla v. Southridge Presbyterian Church, 37 Kan. App. 2d 312, 152 P.3d 670, 677 \(Kan. Ct. App. 2007\)). Estoppel does not apply if "any essential element thereof is lacking or is not satisfactorily proved." Ram Co. v. Estate of Kobbeman, 236 Kan. 751, 696 P.2d 936, 944 (Kan. 1985) (citation omitted). And "[e]stoppel will not be deemed to arise from facts which are ambiguous and subject to more than one construction." Gillespie v. Seymour, 250 Kan. 123, 823 P.2d 782, 789 (Kan. 1991) (citation omitted).

AMC asks the court to dismiss Cinetopia's estoppel claim because the only promise it identifies is not enforceable as a matter of law. According to AMC, Cinetopia claims "AMC promised to purchase Cinetopia Overland Park 18 for fair consideration," [*21] (doc. 17, at 29), which is merely a general proposal (without an offer and acceptance), and is not enough. It was a mere agreement to agree.

AMC does not identify all of Cinetopia's allegations relating to its claim for estoppel. In addition to the allegation identified above, Cinetopia also alleged that AMC promised to buy the theater for a specific price: "In February 2016, AMC delivered an indication of interest including a proposed purchase price, but AMC advised Cinetopia that the proposed deal would be delayed due to the DOJ's investigation of the AMC-Carmike deal." (Doc. 17, at 23.) And Cinetopia claims, "In order to forestall legal action by Cinetopia to block AMC's unlawful clearances and to prevent the DOJ from learning about this exclusionary conduct, AMC once again pretended to be interested in buying Cinetopia's facilities at attractive prices." (Id.) Finally, "AMC repeatedly assured Cinetopia in numerous private communications that it would buy Cinetopia's theaters at the original valuation, after the Carmike deal was finalized." (Id.) Cinetopia alleges that it relied on these assurances to its detriment. At this stage of the proceedings, these allegations are sufficient [*22] to plausibly state a claim for estoppel.

IV. Conclusion

For the above reasons, the court denies AMC's motion to dismiss. While the evidence ultimately may not support all of Cinetopia's claims, Cinetopia has pleaded plausible causes of action for violations of federal antitrust law and state law at this time.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that Defendants' Motion to Dismiss (Doc. 27) is denied.

Dated this 27th day of December, 2018, at Kansas City, Kansas.

/s/ Carlos Murgua

CARLOS MURGUIA

United States District Judge

Clean Water Opportunities, Inc. v. Willamette Valley Co.

United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit

January 4, 2019, Filed

No. 18-30245

Reporter

759 Fed. Appx. 244 *; 2019 U.S. App. LEXIS 308 **; 2019-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P80,630; 2019 WL 113681

CLEAN WATER OPPORTUNITIES, INCORPORATED, doing business as Engineered Polyurethane Patching Systems, Plaintiff - Appellant v. THE WILLAMETTE VALLEY COMPANY, Defendant - Appellee

Notice: PLEASE REFER TO FEDERAL RULES OF APPELLATE PROCEDURE RULE 32.1 GOVERNING THE CITATION TO UNPUBLISHED OPINIONS.

Prior History: [**1] Appeal from the United States District Court for the Middle District of Louisiana. USDC No. 3:16-CV-227.

Core Terms

---

patch, pricing, discounts, manufacturers, variable, alleges, predatory-pricing, exclusionary, monopoly, products, antitrust, predatory, plywood, district court, monopolist, costs, competitive price, competitor, non-patch

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > De Novo Review

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

Civil Procedure > Pleading & Practice > Pleadings > Rule Application & Interpretation

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN1 [?] Standards of Review, De Novo Review

An appellate court reviews a district court's grant of a motion to dismiss de novo, applying the same standard on review as that applied by the district court. In order to survive a motion to dismiss, a plaintiff's factual allegations must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level. Although appellate courts are bound to accept plaintiff's factual allegations as true, this principle is inapplicable to legal conclusions. Threadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of action, supported by mere conclusory statements, do not suffice. A plaintiff is not entitled to relief when the well-pleaded facts do not permit the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > Predatory Pricing

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > Allocation

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > Sherman Act

HN2 [↓] Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices, Predatory Pricing

Predatory pricing occurs when a defendant sacrifices present revenues for the purpose of driving a competitor out of the market with the hope of recouping the losses through subsequent higher prices. In order to successfully state a claim of predatory pricing under the Sherman Act, a plaintiff must plausibly allege that: 1) the prices complained of are below an appropriate measure of the alleged monopolist's costs; and 2) that the alleged monopolist has a reasonable chance of recouping the losses through below-cost pricing. As to the first element, an ideal measure of the alleged monopolist's cost would be true marginal cost. However, because of difficulties in ascertaining true marginal cost, courts look to average variable cost in conducting the predatory-pricing inquiry. Average variable costs are costs that vary with the amount produced, including hourly labor, the cost of materials, transport, and electrical consumption at a plant. Accordingly, in order to state a claim for predatory pricing, a plaintiff must sufficiently plead that the alleged monopolist priced its goods below its average variable costs for producing those goods.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > Pleading & Practice > Pleadings > Rule Application & Interpretation

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

HN3 [↓] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

For conclusory allegations, courts are not bound to accept them as true under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > Monopoly Power

HN4 [↓] Actual Monopolization, Monopoly Power

The Supreme Court has recognized that the acquisition of a competitor alone may constitute a violation of federal antitrust laws, under certain circumstances.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > Monopoly Power

HN5 [↓] Actual Monopolization, Claims

In order to state a claim under § 2 of the Sherman Act for the unlawful maintenance of a monopoly, a plaintiff must allege that the defendant: 1) possesses monopoly power in the relevant market; and 2) acquired or maintained that power willfully, as distinguished from the power having arisen and continued by growth produced by the development of a superior product, business acumen, or historic accident. Exclusionary conduct under § 2 is the creation or maintenance of monopoly by means other than the competition on the merits embodied in the Grinnell standard. The "key factor" courts look to in conducting this inquiry is "the proffered business justification for the act. If the conduct has no rational business purpose other than its adverse effects on competitors, an inference that it is exclusionary is supported.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

HN6 [down arrow] Actual Monopolization, Claims

While the rationality of a business decision is a significant factor in ascertaining whether conduct is exclusionary under § 2 of the Sherman Act, it is not a sine qua non.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > State Regulation

HN7 [down arrow] Attempts to Monopolize, Sherman Act

The Louisiana antitrust statute substantially mirrors the Sherman Act.

Counsel: For CLEAN WATER OPPORTUNITIES, INCORPORATED, doing business as Engineered Polyurethane Patching Systems, Plaintiff - Appellant: Joseph R. Ward, Jr., Esq., Ward & Condrey, L.L.C., Covington, LA; Stacy R. Palowsky, Esq., Palowsky Law, L.L.C., Covington, LA.

For WILLAMETTE VALLEY COMPANY, Defendant - Appellee: Bradley Charles Myers, Esq., Katie Deranger Bell, Kean Miller, L.L.P., Baton Rouge, LA; Robert Nathan Hochman, John W. Teece, Sidley Austin, L.L.P., Chicago, IL; Amanda Starer Norton, Sidley Austin, L.L.P., Washington, DC.

Judges: Before STEWART, Chief Judge, KING and OWEN, Circuit Judges.

Opinion

---

[*245] PER CURIAM:*

Clean Water Opportunities, Incorporated, appeals the district court's order dismissing its various federal and state antitrust claims against The Willamette Valley Company. We AFFIRM.

I.

We set forth the facts as alleged in the complaint and accept them as true, as we are required to do at the motion-to-dismiss stage. Clean Water Opportunities, Incorporated, doing business as Engineered Polyurethane Patching Systems ("EPPS"), manufactured patch, a polyurethane material used to fill knot holes [**2] in plywood. EPPS offered patch to plywood manufacturers in the so-called Southern Market, which includes portions of Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, and Arkansas.

Manufacturers of patch sell the product to plywood manufacturers on a per-gallon basis. In their dealings with plywood manufacturers, patch manufacturers sell not only patch itself, but also the equipment used to apply patch and servicing for that equipment.

---

* Pursuant to 5TH Cir. R. 47.5, the court has determined that this opinion should not be published and is not precedent except under the limited circumstances set forth in 5TH Cir. R. 47.5.4.

Although David Edwards, the owner and founder of EPPS, had previously competed with The Willamette Valley Company ("Willamette") in the patch market, EPPS itself entered into the market in or around 2013. At that time, Willamette was the sole seller of patch. Shortly after entering the market, EPPS entered into a production contract with MARTCO, a Louisiana-based plywood manufacturing company, to supply patch for one of MARTCO's two manufacturing lines. Subsequently, EPPS proposed an additional contract under which it would supply patch to both of MARTCO's manufacturing lines for five years at $12.90 per gallon. This price was significantly lower than Willamette's price of $17 per gallon.

Willamette managed to scuttle this transaction, however. Upon learning [**3] of EPPS's proposal, Willamette offered MARTCO "a substantial discount" on all the non-patch products it sold to MARTCO, contingent upon MARTCO purchasing all its patch from Willamette. EPPS attempted to offer similar discounts to MARTCO, but MARTCO advised EPPS that EPPS was unable to offer anything that could match Willamette's discounts. MARTCO thereafter "terminate[d] its relationship with EPPS." During this time period, EPPS also sought business from two other plywood manufacturers, but discussions stalled prior to the creation of any formal agreement, also allegedly due to 2 Willamette's offer of a substantial discount on non-patch products to those manufacturers.

As a result of this lost business, it was no longer financially viable for EPPS to compete in the patch market. Approximately two months after losing MARTCO's business, EPPS entered into a contract with Willamette to sell all of its assets. The agreement included a noncompete clause. Willamette thereafter became the sole seller of patch in the Southern Market.

In April 2016, EPPS sued Willamette in federal court, alleging violations of the Sherman Act, the Clayton Act, and Louisiana's [*246] antitrust analogue. EPPS alleged that [**4] Willamette had engaged in predatory pricing in violation of the Sherman Act when it offered discounts on non-patch products to the would-be EPPS customers, because these discounts resulted in a price for patch that was effectively below Willamette's average variable costs for producing patch. It also alleged that Willamette illegally established a monopoly, in violation of state and federal law, and had purchased EPPS's assets to maintain its monopoly. Upon Willamette's motion to dismiss, the district court determined that EPPS had failed sufficiently to allege pricing below average variable cost and that its predatory-pricing claim therefore failed. The district court alternatively held that the predatory-pricing claim failed because EPPS had failed to allege that Willamette would have been able to recoup losses incurred as a result of its alleged pricing scheme after EPPS exited the market. The district court also concluded that EPPS's other claims depended on its predatory pricing claim, and therefore dismissed those claims as well. EPPS now appeals.

II.

A.

HN1[ We review a district court's grant of a motion to dismiss de novo, applying the same standard on review as that applied by the [**5] district court. See Gonzalez v. Kay, 577 F.3d 600, 603 (5th Cir. 2009). In order to survive a motion to dismiss, a plaintiff's "[f]actual allegations must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007). Although we are bound to accept plaintiff's factual allegations as true, this principle "is inapplicable to legal conclusions. Threadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of action, supported by mere conclusory statements, do not suffice." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009). A plaintiff is not entitled to relief when "the well-pleaded facts do not permit the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct." Id. at 679.

B.

EPPS first alleges that Willamette engaged in predatory pricing in order to maintain its monopoly over the patch industry when it offered substantial discounts on its non-patch products to several would-be EPPS customers. HN2[ "Predatory pricing occurs when a defendant 'sacrifice[s] present revenues for the purpose of driving [a competitor] out of the market with the hope of recouping the losses through subsequent higher prices." Felder's Collision Parts, Inc. v. All Star Adver. Agency, Inc., 777 F.3d 756, 759 (5th Cir. 2015) (alterations in original) (quoting Int'l Air Indus., Inc. v. Am. Excelsior Co., 517 F.2d 714, 723 (5th Cir. 1975)). In order to successfully state a claim of predatory pricing under the Sherman Act, a plaintiff must plausibly allege that "1) the prices complained of are below an [**6] appropriate measure of the alleged monopolist's costs and 2) that the alleged monopolist has a reasonable chance of recouping the losses through below-cost pricing." Stearns Airport Equip. Co. v. FMC Corp., 170 F.3d 518, 527 (5th Cir. 1999). As to the first element, an ideal measure of the alleged monopolist's cost would be true marginal cost. Id. at 532. However, because of difficulties in ascertaining true marginal cost, this court looks to average variable cost in conducting the predatory-pricing inquiry. Id. Average variable costs are costs that "vary with the amount produced," including "hourly labor, the cost of materials, transport, and electrical consumption at a plant." Id. Accordingly, in order to state a [*247] claim for predatory pricing, a plaintiff must sufficiently plead that the alleged monopolist priced its goods below its average variable costs for producing those goods.

EPPS alleges that, although Willamette did not price patch itself below average variable cost, it effectively did so when it substantially discounted non-patch products to induce customers to purchase its patch. When these discounts are considered, EPPS argues, the price of patch sank below Willamette's average variable cost to produce it. Willamette does not appear to dispute that the effective [**7] price of patch, with discounts on other products considered, constituted an appropriate measure of price for purposes of the predatory-pricing analysis, and we see no authority barring such an approach. We therefore consider Willamette's pricing holistically, rather than focusing exclusively on the price at which it sold patch.

EPPS's factual allegations fail to plausibly support its claim that Willamette effectively priced its patch below average variable cost. EPPS alleges that Willamette offered discounts to several plywood manufacturers that "were substantial and represented a benefit below Willamette's cost to produce patch." Absent further factual enhancement, these claims amount to no more than HN3[<sup>1</sup>] conclusory allegations, which we are not bound to accept as true Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). See Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678.

The specific factual allegations EPPS does plead only serve to render its case implausible. First, EPPS alleges that it offered to sell patch at $12.90 per gallon and that Willamette sold patch at $17 per gallon. Second, it alleges that the competitive price for patch was $10. Thus, the average variable cost for producing patch likely falls somewhere below the competitive price of $10. Even setting average variable [**8] cost directly at the competitive price of $10, Willamette needed only to discount its other products to undercut EPPS's price of $12.90. In doing so, Willamette only had to remain within the $2.90 interval between EPPS's price and the competitive price in order to maintain above-cost pricing. And likely, it could have gone further, since its average variable costs were almost certainly lower than the competitive price. Accordingly, we have no reasonable basis to infer that Willamette effectively priced its patch below average variable cost. Because EPPS failed to plausibly allege one of the two essential elements of its predatory pricing claim against Willamette, dismissal of that claim was appropriate. We therefore need not consider the question of whether EPPS successfully alleged recoupment.

C.

EPPS also alleges that Willamette violated § 2 of the Sherman Act and §§ 4 and 7 of the Clayton Act when it purchased EPPS's assets and entered into a noncompete agreement with EPPS's founder. HN4[<sup>1</sup>] The Supreme Court has recognized that the acquisition of a competitor alone may constitute a violation of federal antitrust laws, under certain circumstances. See United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 576, 86 S. Ct. 1698, 16 L. Ed. 2d 778 (1966) (listing acquisition by defendant of its competitors [**9] as one of several "unlawful and exclusionary practices" used by defendant to achieve monopoly).

In its brief, EPPS does not argue that Willamette's acquisition of EPPS, standing alone, amounted to an antitrust violation. Instead, EPPS contends that because the district court erred in dismissing its predatory-pricing claim, it similarly erred in dismissing its unlawful-acquisition claim. The two claims allegedly must rise and fall together. Because we reject the latter [*248] claim, we must likewise reject the former. Accordingly, we affirm the district court's grant of Willamette's motion to dismiss as to EPPS's unlawful-acquisition claim.

D.

The balance of EPPS's complaint consists of its allegation that Willamette illegally monopolized the patch market in violation of § 2 of the Sherman Act and an analogous Louisiana law. Unlike its unlawful-acquisition claim, EPPS argues that its § 2 claim stands independent of its predatory-pricing claim. For support, EPPS cites out-of-circuit precedent holding that "[b]ehavior that otherwise might comply with antitrust law may be impermissibly exclusionary when practiced by a monopolist." United States v. Dentsply Int'l, Inc., 399 F.3d 181, 187 (3d Cir. 2005). The thrust of EPPS's § 2 theory is that although Willamette's pricing scheme [**10] may not have itself violated federal law as a predatory-pricing scheme, it may nonetheless violate § 2 because it has been practiced by a monopolist and had the effect of maintaining that monopoly.

HN5 [↑] In order to state a claim under § 2 for the unlawful maintenance of a monopoly, a plaintiff must allege that the defendant: "1) possesses monopoly power in the relevant market and 2) acquired or maintained that power willfully, as distinguished from the power having arisen and continued by growth produced by the development of a superior product, business acumen, or historic accident." Stearns Airport, 170 F.3d at 522 (citing Grinnell, 384 U.S. at 563). We assume arguendo that EPPS has successfully alleged facts demonstrating that the first element is present. The second element requires a showing of exclusionary conduct. "Exclusionary conduct under section 2 is the creation or maintenance of monopoly by means other than the competition on the merits embodied in the Grinnell standard." Id. The "key factor" we look to in conducting this inquiry is "the proffered business justification for the act. If the conduct has no rational business purpose other than its adverse effects on competitors, an inference that it is exclusionary is supported." Id.

The rationality [**11] of Willamette's acts is readily apparent. The only exclusionary conduct EPPS alleges is Willamette's offering of substantial discounts to its customers. Willamette's justification for these actions "is obvious: it was trying to sell its product." Id. at 524. Here, Willamette was faced with the prospect of losing business to a competitor. In order to keep that business, it offered discounts on its other products. Although, as the predatory-pricing framework contemplates, certain discounts may be so substantial as to cross the line into economic irrationality, no such discounts are present here: as stated above, the discounts resulted in an effective selling price of patch that was, in all likelihood, either competitive or supracompetitive.

HN6 [↑] While the rationality of a business decision is a significant factor in ascertaining whether conduct is exclusionary, it is not a sine qua non. See id. at 524-26 (considering other factors in addition to business rationality, including the approval of the consumer and the potential existence of bribery or threats, in determining the validity of plaintiff's § 2 claim). EPPS does not, however, explain why this court should deem this economically rational conduct exclusionary. [**12] As a result, the rationality of Willamette's actions is determinative. We therefore affirm as to the district court's denial of EPPS's § 2 claim.

E.

Finally, the Louisiana antitrust claim similarly rises and falls with the claims discussed above. The parties do not dispute [*249] that EPPS's Louisiana antitrust claim hinges on the success of the federal claims, because HNT [↑] the Louisiana statute substantially mirrors the Sherman Act. This circuit's caselaw confirms that understanding. Felder's Collision Parts, 777 F.3d at 759. Because each of EPPS's federal-law claims fails, so too must its Louisiana claim.

III.

We therefore conclude that dismissal pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) was appropriate as to each of EPPS's claims against Willamette. Accordingly, the judgment of the district court is AFFIRMED.

---

End of Document

Greenkraft, Inc. v. Gemayels

Superior Court of California, County of Orange

January 8, 2019, Decided

30-2018-00979579-CU-FR-CJC

Reporter

2019 Cal. Super. LEXIS 57491 *

Greenkraft, INC. v. Gemayels

Core Terms

---

cause of action, unfair, parties, amended complaint, fraudulent, protective order, subpoenas, estoppel, alleges

Counsel: [*1] Saleen K. Erakat, from Callahan & Blaine, APLC, present for Plaintiff(s).

Peter Sunukjian, from Briggs & Alexander, APC, present for Defendant(s).

Judges: Walter Schwarm.

Opinion by: Walter Schwarm

Opinion

---

MINUTE ORDER

Tentative Ruling posted on the Internet .

Parties represent to the Court they have reviewed its tentative ruling posted online. Argument heard.

The Court adopts and MODIFIES its ruling as to Motion No. 1 as follows:

Motion No. 1:

Defendants' (George Patrick Gemayel and Gem Works LLC) Demurrer to Second Amended Complaint (filed on 10-2-18) is SUSTAINED as to the Fifth Cause of Action with leave to amend. The Demurrer is SUSTAINED as to the Seventh Causes of Action WITH leave to amend. The Demurrer is OVERRULED as to the Ninth Cause of Action.

The Fifth Cause of Action alleges a cause of action for Breach of Contract. Defendant contends that Commercial Code section 2201 prevents Plaintiff from enforcing this contract. Commercial Code section 2201 states, "(1) Except as otherwise provided in this section a contract for the sale of goods for the price of five hundred dollars ($ 500) or more is not enforceable by way of action or defense unless there is some writing sufficient to indicate that a contract for sale has been made between the parties and [*2] signed by the party against whom enforcement is sought or by his or her authorized agent or broker [¶] (2) Between merchants if within a reasonable time a writing in confirmation and sufficient against the sender is received and the party receiving it has reason to know its contents, it satisfies the requirements of subdivision \(1\) against the party unless written notice of objection to its contents is given within 10 days after it is received." Commercial Code section 2104, subdivision \(1\), explains,

"Merchant' means a person who deals in goods of the kind or otherwise by his occupation holds himself out as having knowledge or skill peculiar to the practices or goods involved in the transaction or to whom such knowledge or skill may be attributed by his employment of an agent or broker or other intermediary who by his occupation holds himself out as having such knowledge or skill."

The Second Amended Complaint (SAC) concedes that the alleged contract was an oral contract. (SAC, ¶¶ 13 and 62.) It appears that Plaintiff does not dispute the alleged contract involved the sale of goods for more than $ 500. (Plaintiff Greenkraft, Inc.'s Opposition to Defendants' Demurrer to Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint (Opposition), filed on 12-21-18; [*3] 3:15-5:3; SAC, ¶ 62.)

It does not appear that Plaintiff qualifies as a merchant within the meaning of Commercial Code section 2204, subdivision \(1\). Although the SAC alleges "... Plaintiff ordered 210 vehicles ... from Walter's Auto Sales ..." (SAC, ¶ 14), it does not allege that Plaintiff employed Walter's Auto Sales as an agent or broker. The SAC does not sufficiently plead that Plaintiff's business involves the sale of vehicles. The SAC describes Plaintiff's business as "... a manufacturer of alternative fuel automotive products." (SAC, ¶ 10.) There are no clear allegations in the SAC that establish Plaintiff and Defendant are "merchants" in connection with the purchase and sale of vehicles within the meaning of Commercial Code section 2104, subdivision \(1\). Thus, the SAC does not adequately plead that the alleged contract falls within Commercial Code section 2201, subdivision \(2\).

Paragraph 70 of the SAC indicates Plaintiff sent an invoice to Gem Works LLC for the first 70 vehicles, and that Gem Works LLC paid for these vehicles. (SAC, ¶¶ 63-64.) This allegation may sufficiently allege a writing within Commercial Code section 2201, subdivision \(2\), as to the first 70 vehicles. The SAC, however, does not appear to claim damages resulting from the sale of the first 70 vehicles. The SAC does not sufficiently plead that any portion of the contract after the sale [*4] of the first 70 vehicles falls within Commercial Code section 2201, subdivision \(2\). Therefore, Commercial Code section 2201, subdivision \(1\), prevents the enforcement of the contract as to the remaining vehicles.

Allied Grape Growers v. Bronco Wine Co. \(1988\) 203 Cal.App.3d 432, 443, states, "Furthermore, the great weight of authority from sister state jurisdictions holds that estoppel can be applied to overcome the Uniform Commercial Code's statue of frauds provision as long as a court is not enforcing a mere oral promise. There must be some form of detrimental reliance." (The SAC does not adequately allege detrimental reliance. The SAC pleads, "... as a result of that contract, Greenkraft ordered 210 vehicles from Mercedes Benz." (SAC, ¶ 62.) The SAC does not allege that Plaintiff paid for these 210 vehicles. The loss of profits from the Agreement does not appear sufficient to demonstrate detrimental reliance. (SAC, ¶ 21.)

Based on the above, Plaintiff has failed to allege sufficient facts to avoid the application of Commercial Code section 2201, subdivision \(1\), as to the Fifth Cause of Action. Thus, the court sustains Defendants' Demurrer as to the Fifth Cause of Action.

As to the Seventh Cause of Action, "[t]he UCL does not proscribe specific activities, but broadly prohibits 'any unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business act or practice and unfair, deceptive, untrue or misleading [*5] advertising.' [Citation.]" (Puentes v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., Inc. \(2008\) 160 Cal. App. 4th 638, 643-644).

Saunders v. Superior Court \(1994\) 27 Cal.App.4th 832, 838-839, states, "Section 17200 defines unfair competition as 'any unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business act or practice ' The 'unlawful' practices prohibited by section 17200 are any practices forbidden by law, be it civil or criminal, federal, state, or municipal, statutory, regulatory, or court-made. [Citation.] It is not necessary that the predicate law provide for private civil enforcement. [Citation.] As our Supreme Court put it, section 17200 'borrows' violations of other laws and treats them as unlawful practices independently actionable under section 17200 et seq. [Citation.] 'Unfair' simply means any practice whose harm to the victim outweighs its benefits. [Citation.] 'Fraudulent,' as used in the statute, does not refer to the common law tort of fraud but only requires a showing members of the public "are likely to be deceived." [Citation.]"

Arce v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, Inc. \(Arce\) \(2010\) 181 Cal.App.4th 471, 489-490, explains, "If the trial court were to find that Applied Behavior Analysis therapy and speech therapy for autism spectrum disorders are covered services under the terms of the health care plan, then Kaiser's alleged practice of categorically denying coverage for such services to the putative class could constitute a breach of contract. A breach of contract in turn may [*6] form the predicate for a UCL claim, "provided it also constitutes conduct that is 'unlawful, or unfair, or fraudulent.'" [Citations.] [Citation.] With respect to the unfairness prong of Business and Professions Code section 17200, appellate courts have recognized that 'a systematic breach of certain types of contracts (e.g., breaches of standard consumer or producer contracts involved in a class action) can constitute an unfair business practice under the UCL. [Citations.]' [Citations.]"

Consequently, it's not clear that Plaintiff's references to Civil Code sections 1572, 1709, and 1710, each which outlines circumstances in which civil liability attaches to fraud, are sufficient to establish the "unlawful" prong.

"... 'When a plaintiff who claims to have suffered injury from a direct competitor's "unfair" act or practice invokes section 17200, the word "unfair" in that section means conduct that threatens an incipient violation of an antitrust law, or violates the policy or spirit of one of those laws because its effects are comparable to or the same as a violation of the law, or otherwise significantly threatens or harms competition.' [Citation.]" (Bardin v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. \(2006\) 136 Cal.App.4th 1255, 1266-1267) Although Plaintiff briefly references the "unfair" prong, it offers no argument which supports its application.

Here, Plaintiff [*7] alleges, "The fraudulent conduct of Defendants has deceived members of the public, including, but not limited to, Mercedes Benz .... (SAC, ¶78.) Plaintiff does not provide authority supporting that a single entity qualifies as a "members of the public within the meaning of Business and Professions Code section 17200. Absent authority which indicates the deception of a single entity is sufficient to support fraudulent conduct under Business and Professions Code section 17200, the court sustains the Defendants' Demurrer as to the Seventh Cause of Action.

As to the Ninth Cause of Action for Promissory Estoppel, Flintco Pacific, Inc. v. TEC Management Consultants, Inc. \(2016\) 1 Cal.App.5th 727, 734, describes the elements necessary to establish promissory estoppel. Paragraphs 87-92 adequately of the SAC adequately plead a claim for promissory estoppel. Defendants' primary argument is that an alleged contract prevents a claim for promissory estoppel. (Defendants' Demurrer to Second Amended Complaint (Demurrer), filed on 10-2-18; 7:4-21.) Adams v. Paul \(1995\) 11 Cal.4th 583, 593, provides, "Moreover, a party may plead in the alternative and may make inconsistent allegations. [Citations.]" Therefore, the court overrules Defendants' Demurrer as to the Ninth Cause of Action.

In summary, the court Defendants' (George Patrick Gemayel and Gem Works LLC) Demurrer to Second Amended Complaint is SUSTAINED as [*8] to the Fifth Cause of Action with leave to amend. The Demurrer is SUSTAINED as to the Seventh Cause of Action with leave to amend. The Demurrer is OVERRULED as to the Ninth Cause of Action. Plaintiff is to file an amended complaint within 14 days of the date of service of the notice of this order.

Defendants are to give notice.

Motion No. 2:

Defendants (George Patrick Gemayel and Gem Works LLC) Motion for Protective Order (filed on 8-20-18) is continued to 3-12-19 at 1:30 p.m. in Department C19 for the reasons set forth below.

The Motion seeks a protective order as to eleven deposition subpoenas which collectively contain 345 requests for production. Plaintiff Greenkraft, Inc.'s Opposition to Defendant's Motion for Protective Order (Opposition), filed on 12-21-18, states, "With respect to the subpoenas, Greenkraft has agreed to withdraw certain requests, Defendants have agreed to withdraw objections to certain requests and the parties have jointly agreed to modify others... [T]he parties have significantly limited the outstanding disputes between them with respect to the subpoenas." (Opposition; 5:11-15.) Defendants' Reply to Plaintiff Greenkraft's Opposition to Defendants' Motion for

Protective [*9] Order (Reply), filed on 10-3-18, states, "Nevertheless, the parties did agree to the modification of certain subpoenas in question here." (Reply; 2:13.) (See also, 12-21-18 Erakat Decl., ¶ 3.)

Although these briefs attempt to articulate the remaining disputes, they do so without providing context or identifying the remaining requests at issue. The court appreciates the parties' attempt to resolve these disputes without court intervention. To the extent the parties still require the court's assistance to resolve any remaining disputes, the court requires a Joint Statement that identifies each subpoena and Request for Production which remains in dispute and the subject of the dispute. The parties are to submit this joint statement no later than 1-31-19.

Defendants are to give notice.

Motion for Protective Order continued to 03/12/2019 at 01:30 PM in Department C19.

Case Management Conference continued to 03/12/2019 at 01:30 PM in Department C19.

---

End of Document

LegalForce RAPC Worldwide P.C. v. UpCounsel, Inc.

United States District Court for the Northern District of California

January 10, 2019, Decided; January 10, 2019, Filed

CASE NO. 18-cv-02573-YGR

Reporter

2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5061 *; 2019 WL 160335

LEGALFORCE RAPC WORLDWIDE P.C., ET AL., Plaintiffs, vs. UPCOUNSEL, INC., Defendant.

Core Terms

---

motion to dismiss, law firm, Lawyers, plaintiffs', customers, unfair, consumers, allegations, largest, unfair competition, advertising, argues, LegalForce RAPC's Lanham Act, quotation, website, marks, predicate, false and misleading, misleading, prong, Top, potential client, competitor, technology, violations, puffery, ratings, cause of action, Lanham Act, fraudulent

Counsel: [*1] For LegalForce RAPC Worldwide P.C., Plaintiff: Emil J Ali, Lake Oswego, OR; Jorge Aurelio Amador, Jorge A. Amador Law Firm, San Francisco, CA; Nicholas Carl Craft, LegalForce RAPC Worldwide, Tempe, AZ; Wensheng Ma, LegalForce RAPC Worldwide, P.C., Mountain View, CA; Raj Vasant Abhyanker, Raj Abhyanker, PC, Mountain View, CA.

For LegalForce, Inc., Plaintiff: Raj Vasant Abhyanker, Raj Abhyanker, PC, Mountain View, CA; Emil J Ali, Lake Oswego, OR; Jorge Aurelio Amador, Jorge A. Amador Law Firm, San Francisco, CA; Wensheng Ma, LegalForce RAPC Worldwide, P.C., Mountain View, CA.

For UpCounsel, Inc., Defendant: Simona Alessandra Agnolucci, LEAD ATTORNEY, Abraham Harry Fine, Nicholas David Marais, Keker, Van Nest & Peters LLP, San Francisco, CA; Jesselyn K Friley, Keker Van Nest and Peters, San Francisco, CA.

Judges: YVONNE GONZALEZ ROGERS, UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT JUDGE.

Opinion by: YVONNE GONZALEZ ROGERS

Opinion

---

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART MOTION TO DISMISS FIRST AMENDED COMPLAINT

Now before the Court is defendant UpCounsel, Inc.'s ("UpCounsel") motion to dismiss plaintiffs Legalforce RAPC Worldwide P.C.'s ("LegalForce RAPC") and LegalForce, Inc.'s ("Trademarkia") first amended complaint. (Dkt. No. 49 [*2] ("MTD").) Having carefully considered the pleadings in this action, the papers submitted, and the oral argument held on November 6, 2018, and for the reasons set forth below, the Court GRANTS IN PART AND DENIES IN PART UpCounsel's motion.<sup>1</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> Given the sheer number of statements addressed in this Order, the Court summarizes that those which contain specific representations have survived the motion to dismiss, as have the allegations regarding UpCounsel's fee structure.

I. BACKGROUND

UpCounsel is an online marketplace for legal services that enables users (primarily entrepreneurs and businesses) to find and hire attorneys via its website UpCounsel.com. (First Amended Complaint ("FAC") ¶ 16, Dkt. No. 45.) California attorney Raj Abhyanker started both plaintiff companies approximately four years before UpCounsel launched. (Id. ¶¶ 13-15.) Plaintiff LegalForce RAPC is a law firm wholly owned by Abhynaker, which practices corporate and intellectual property law. (Id. ¶ 7.) Plaintiff Trademarkia offers law firm automation and free trademark search services through its website Trademarkia.com. (Id. ¶ 8.) UpCounsel and plaintiffs compete to provide individuals and small businesses with affordable access to attorneys. (Id. ¶ 2.)

Plaintiffs allege that UpCounsel's false advertising and unfair competition have caused consumers to purchase UpCounsel's services instead of LegalForce RAPC's services. (Id. ¶ 114.) Among the challenged [*3] conduct by UpCounsel is its (i) acting as an unregistered lawyer referral service, (ii) acting as a runner and capper to solicit potential clients, (iii) fee sharing with attorneys; (iv) aiding and abetting its attorneys to violate California Rule of Professional Conduct 1-400 and 37 C.F.R. section 11.703; and (v) use of certain advertisements and promotional statements which plaintiffs allege are false and/or misleading to reasonable consumers. Plaintiffs claim that UpCounsel's alleged misconduct has resulted in lost sales opportunities, lost asset value, lost market share, lost revenue, and rising costs per client acquisition for LegalForce RAPC. (Id. ¶¶ 114-16.)

On September 11, 2018, plaintiffs filed their FAC, asserting therein three claims for relief: (1) "False Advertising and Unfair Competition [under] the Lanham Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1125\(a\)"; (2) "California False & Misleading Advertising [under] Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500 et seq. ['(FAL')]"'; and (3) "California Unfair Competition in Violation of Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. ['UCL']".<sup>2</sup> The instant motion followed.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

Dismissal under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure "can be based on the lack of a cognizable legal theory or the absence of sufficient facts alleged under a cognizable legal theory." Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dep't, 901 F.2d 696, 699 \(9th Cir. 1990\). Rule 8\(a\)\(2\), however, "requires only 'a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled [*4] to relief[.]'" Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 \(2007\) (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 8\(a\)\(2\)). Consequently, "a complaint attacked by a Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations[.]" Id. Nonetheless, "a plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds of his entitlement to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do[.]" Id. (internal quotation marks, citation, and alterations omitted).

In analyzing a motion to dismiss, a district court must accept as true all material allegations in the complaint and construe them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. NL Indus., Inc. v. Kaplan, 792 F.2d 896, 898 \(9th Cir. 1986\). "To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual material, accepted as true, to 'state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.'" Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 \(2009\) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570). "Factual allegations must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level[.]" Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555 (citation omitted). Courts "are not bound to accept as true a legal conclusion couched as a factual allegation[.]" Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (internal quotation marks omitted).

On a motion to dismiss, a court can consider documents attached to the complaint, documents incorporated by reference in a complaint, or documents subject to judicial notice. [*5] U.S. v. Ritchie, 342 F.3d 903, 908 \(9th Cir. 2003\). The court is not required to accept as true allegations that contradict such documents. Daniels-Hall v. Nat'l Educ. Ass'n, 629 F.3d 992, 998 \(9th Cir. 2010\).

---

<sup>2</sup> Specifically, LegalForce RAPC asserts all three claims, while Trademarkia asserts only a claim under the UCL.

III. FIRST CLAIM FOR RELIEF: FALSE ADVERTISING AND UNFAIR COMPETITION (LANHAM ACT, 15 U.S.C. § 1125\(a\))

The Lanham Act prohibits any person from using, "on or in connection with any goods or services, . . . any . . . false or misleading description of fact, or false or misleading representation of fact, which . . . misrepresents the nature, characteristics, [or] qualities . . . of his or her or another person's goods, services, or commercial activities[.]" 15 U.S.C. § 1125\(a\)\(1\)\(B\).

LegalForce RAPC's Lanham Act claim is based generally on ten allegedly "false and misleading advertising [s]tatements . . . relat[ing] to descriptions or representations of fact that misrepresent the nature, characteristics, and quality of UpCounsel's services." (FAC ¶¶ 118-19.) UpCounsel argues that all of the challenged statements are non-actionable.

In its motion, UpCounsel generally sorts plaintiffs' false advertisement allegations into four groups.<sup>3</sup> As a result, UpCounsel's position with respect to each statement asserted in the FAC was difficult for the Court to discern. The Court instead understands UpCounsel's motion as attacking eight statements, or categories [*6] of statements, which are addressed in turn. (See infra Sections III.A-H.)<sup>4</sup>

A. "UpCounsel is the world's largest law firm."

Plaintiffs allege six iterations of the statement that "UpCounsel is the world's largest virtual law firm." According to plaintiffs, all of them were "made with an intent to deceive consumers into thinking the statement 'UpCounsel is the world's largest virtual law firm' is trustworthy and legitimate." (FAC ¶ 25.) "Since UpCounsel is not a law firm," plaintiffs contend that "these statements are false and misleading to average consumers. . . . Clearly, UpCounsel sells itself as a law firm, acts like a law firm, and therefore is a law firm despite its self-serving statements to the contrary." (Id. ¶ 26.)

UpCounsel generally argues, without specifically addressing each iteration, that the statement that UpCounsel is "equivalent to the world's largest law firm" is non-actionable puffery. (MTD at 12.)<sup>5</sup> The Court addresses each of the six iterations in turn.

1. Statements on the website of UpCounsel's business partner inDinero Inc.

On the website of UpCounsel's business partner inDinero Inc., UpCounsel made the following statements: [*7] "We are the world's largest virtual law firm for businesses of any size. We allow businesses to get high-quality, cost-

<sup>3</sup>Those groups include: "behind-the-scenes HTML source code or 'search engine optimization' ('SEO') efforts," "quotes suggesting that UpCounsel is 'equivalent to the world's largest virtual law firm' or that available lawyers are, for example, the 'best patent lawyers' in a particular city," "whether UpCounsel's fee structure is 'false and misleading,'" and "serious but spurious allegations that some lawyers advertised on UpCounsel's website are 'not even licensed to practice law' in a particular state, or in any state." (See MTD at 9-10.)

<sup>4</sup>Any statements not addressed herein are those that were not clearly the subject of UpCounsel's motion to dismiss.

<sup>5</sup>UpCounsel also argues as a general matter that "[p]laintiffs cannot rest their Lanham Act claims on UpCounsel's executives' statements, both as a matter of fact and as a matter of law." (MTD at 13.) It cites L.A. Taxi Cooperative, Inc. v. Uber Technologies, Inc., 114 F. Supp. 3d 852 (N.D. Cal. 2015) in support thereof. However, that case is distinguishable because the challenged statements, which were made by Uber representatives to journalists and published in independent online articles, were "'inextricably intertwined' with the reporters' coverage of a matter of public concern, i.e. whether Uber is safe for riders[.]'" Id. at 864 (emphasis supplied). For this reason, the court in L.A. Taxi determined that the statements could not constitute commercial speech actionable under the Lanham Act. Unlike the statements in L.A. Taxi, the challenged statements here do not implicate matters of public concern. Thus, this argument fails, and the Court does not address it further.

effective legal services. While our lawyers serve as outside general counsel to many companies, we also assist with specialized legal work like IP, immigration, commercial contracts, litigation, and much more." (FAC ¶ 19; id. Exh. 35 at 1.)

First, as plaintiffs' counsel conceded at oral argument, the phrase "world's largest virtual law firm" constitutes non-actionable puffery. (See Transcript of Proceedings held on November 6, 2018 ("Hearing Tr. 2") at 13:23-14:3, Dkt. No. 71.) Second, LegalForce RAPC's reliance on these statements as a basis for its Lanham Act claim does not persuade, in light of the context in which the statements were made, which the Court may consider. Namely, on its website inDinero also states: "Every day, we have the pleasure of working with innovative startups that are making a true difference in the world around us. This Customer Spotlight, we'd like to introduce you to UpCounsel. They make it easy for you to find talented and local attorneys at an affordable rate." (FAC Exh. 35 at 1 (emphases supplied).) UpCounsel's motion is thus GRANTED [*8] as to these statements.

2. Statements by UpCounsel's customers

In an article entitled "6 Lexoo Competitors Connecting Lawyers and Clients with Online Legal Platforms," DataFox, a customer of UpCounsel, stated: "UpCounsel is the world's largest virtual law firm. With UpCounsel, businesses can access and manage a high-quality and on-demand legal workforce. Today, both big and small businesses use UpCounsel to supplement or replace their traditional service providers." (FAC ¶ 20; id. Exh. 36 at 2.)

LegalForce RAPC's reliance on these statements similarly does not persuade. In the article, UpCounsel is featured as one of six private companies "that could help the legal services technology market grow . . ." (FAC Exh. 36 at 1 (emphasis supplied).) UpCounsel's motion is thus GRANTED as to these statements.

3. Statements by UpCounsel's Co-founder and Chief Executive Officer in an interview

On March 15, 2015, Mimesis Law, a strategic communications consultancy firm, published a video it produced of an interview with UpCounsel's Co-founder and CEO, Matthew Faustman, entitled "Competitor or Collaborator? What UpCounsel's Growth Means for BigLaw." (FAC ¶ 21.) In the interview, Faustman made the [*9] following statement: "So, what we've created at UpCounsel is equivalent to the world's largest virtual law firm."<sup>6</sup>

The Court already dismissed the Lanham Act claim to the extent it is based on this statement, in the context of UpCounsel's previous motion to dismiss the initial complaint in this action. (See Transcript of Proceedings Held on August 28, 2018 ("Hearing Tr. 1") at 9:25-10:20, Dkt. No. 46; see also Dkt. No. 42 ("MTD Order") at 1.) To reiterate, LegalForce RAPC's reliance on this statement is disingenuous. While Faustman, indeed, remarks in the video that "what we've created at UpCounsel is equivalent to the world's largest law firm," he immediately goes on to say, "But, as I'm sure you know, and many of your viewers know, we aren't a law firm. We are a venture-backed technology company. We've started with technology and we end with technology, where we've created a [sic] intelligent technology platform that makes it easy to discover and work with a community of attorneys."<sup>7</sup> UpCounsel's motion is thus GRANTED as to these statements.

*4. Statements [*10] by Faustman at Persian Tech Conference*

On December 12, 2014, Faustman made the following statements: "[W]e have created what is essentially the world's largest virtual law firm . . . We're able to deliver high-quality, cost-effective, and faster solutions than what the traditional law firms are actually able to provide."<sup>8</sup>

<sup>6</sup> See <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FG1ZBCL181I&app=desktop&t=0m44s>; see also FAC ¶ 21.

<sup>7</sup> See <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FG1ZBCL181I&app=desktop&t=0m52s>.

LegalForce RAPC's reliance on these statements also does not persuade. Between the two sentences plaintiffs quote, Faustman states the following: "We essentially allow independent talented lawyers throughout the world through a mobile device or a laptop to plug into the UpCounsel marketplace and accept work, and essentially work freely as independent contractors. We then bundle this up and we go to our companies. We go to our clients, which are businesses between 5 and 1000 employees. . . ."<sup>9</sup> UpCounsel's motion is thus GRANTED as to these statements.

5. Statements made up UpCounsel's Co-founders in online video titled "Inside UpCounsel's Mission to Modernize the Legal Industry"

In a September 21, 2015 online [*11] video, Faustman made the following statement: "This is a very high-trust kind of industry, and in order to make any movement people have to associate you with very high quality [that] is as good as using a law firm."<sup>10</sup> In addition, Mason Blake, Cofounder and Chief Technology Officer of UpCounsel, stated: "The beauty of UpCounsel is that it's essentially a virtualized law firm in a box . . . ."<sup>11</sup>

LegalForce RAPC's reliance on Faustman's statement is unpersuasive because the statement itself indicates that using UpCounsel is as good as using a law firm. As for Blake's statement, the preceding statement made by the moderator of the discussion is the following: "One of the things that gets me really excited about UpCounsel too is . . . your primary offering is that connection—is the back office for the lawyers and then being able to use your platform to communicate, you know a small business and the lawyer they're working with—but you can also assemble a team of lawyers who help you with different things."<sup>12</sup> Thus, the subsequent statement by Blake [*12] which describes UpCounsel as a "virtualized law firm in a box" ties back to the notion that UpCounsel is a technology platform that makes it easy to discover and work with a community of attorneys. UpCounsel's motion is thus GRANTED as to these statements.

6. Statements by Faustman in an interview with San Gabriel Valley Tribune

In an article published on March 26, 2015 and updated on August 30, 2017, Faustman was quoted as describing UpCounsel as "equivalent to the largest virtual law firm in the world." (FAC ¶ 24; id. Exh. 40 at 2.)

LegalForce RAPC's reliance on this statement does not persuade because the quote by Faustman immediately following this one states: "We are a venture-backed technology company based out of San Francisco . . . . We have a marketplace structure, and we power that with a group of top-tier attorneys." (FAC Exh. 40 at 2 (emphases supplied).) UpCounsel's motion is thus GRANTED as to these statements.

7. Conclusion

In sum, the Court does not accept as true plaintiffs' allegations with respect to the aforementioned statements as they are contradicted by the documents attached to, and incorporated by [*13] reference in, the FAC. Accordingly,

<sup>8</sup> See <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jaS7kuEv1Y4&t=0m35s> ;
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jaS7kuEv1Y4&t=1m22s> ; see also FAC ¶ 22.

<sup>9</sup> See <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jaS7kuEv1Y4&t=0m44s> (emphasis supplied).

<sup>10</sup> See <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=eKe3y2aEG2I&app=desktop&t=8m19s> ; see also FAC ¶ 23(a).

<sup>11</sup> See <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=eKe3y2aEG2I&app=desktop&t=2m23s> ; see also FAC ¶ 23(b).

<sup>12</sup> See <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=eKe3y2aEG2I&app=desktop&t=2m02s> .

UpCounsel's motion to dismiss LegalForce RAPC's Lanham Act claim is GRANTED WITHOUT LEAVE TO AMEND to the extent the claim is based on the statement that "UpCounsel is the world's largest law firm."

B. "Top 5% of {Practice Area} Lawyers in {City}"

Plaintiffs allege that "UpCounsel has made tens of thousands of false and misleading statements in the format of 'Top 5% of {Practice Area} Lawyers in {City}' in tens of thousands of web pages on its website." (FAC ¶ 27; see generally, e.g., id. Exhs. 26-29.) Plaintiffs contend that "[b]y indicating '5%', UpCounsel implies that there exists an independent and publicly trusted ranking system in each and every city and the attorneys that UpCounsel lists on its city pages are chosen from the top 5% of such a list. In reality, no such list exists." (FAC ¶ 30.) Plaintiffs allege that this statement misled customers, as evidenced by a review of UpCounsel on Yelp from a customer who said the reason he selected UpCounsel was because he believed it was "a network for only the most top notch legal reps in the area" and "[t]he attorneys offered with them are at the top of their game and you will get what you pay for." [*14] (FAC ¶ 32 (emphasis removed); id. Exh. 39 at 2.) Separately, a customer wrote on Quora that he was deceived when he saw an advertisement on a search engine because "[o]ffering 'Business Legal Services On-Demand by Top Attorneys,' UpCounsel also promised attorneys who could do the job for much less money." (FAC ¶ 32 (emphasis removed); id. Exh. 72 at 2.) The customer wrote: "Well, the bottom line in this review of UpCounsel: I wish I had never used UpCounsel and I'm warning all startups, business and companies out there to never make the same mistake!" (FAC ¶ 32 (emphasis removed); id. Exh. 72 at 2.)

UpCounsel argues that the examples and related exhibits plaintiffs provide are Google search results, not statements made by UpCounsel. (MTD at 12.) In any event, even if UpCounsel had made these statements, UpCounsel argues that they would still be "general assertions" and "mere puffery." (Id.)

As a preliminary matter, the Lanham Act claims based on the "Top 5% of Trademark Attorneys" already survived dismissal on the basis of puffery. (See MTD Order at 2; Hearing Tr. 1 at 16:14-17.) That the FAC adds similar statements pertaining to other types of attorneys, namely patent, intellectual property, copyright, [*15] and startup attorneys, (see FAC ¶ 27), does not affect the Court's ruling as to this category of statements.<sup>13</sup>

As for UpCounsel's Google search result argument, the Court finds it unpersuasive at the motion to dismiss stage. Plaintiffs allege that the search results "republish" statements originally made by UpCounsel. (FAC ¶ 27.) The issue of who actually made the statements (i.e., the search results) is a factual issue to be resolved at summary judgment.

<sup>13</sup> UpCounsel cites Hackett v. Feeney, No. 2:09-cv-02075-RLH-LRL, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 101485, 2011 WL 4007531 \(D. Nev. Sept. 8, 2011\) in support of its argument that, in order to be actionable under the Lanham Act, the statement must answer the "critical question '[Top 5%] as determined by whom[?]' (Reply at 11 (emphasis supplied).) However, that case is distinguishable. First, it involves a #1 claim, namely "Voted #1 Best Show in Vegas!" 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 101485, WL at \*4; see also In re Century 21-RE/MAX Real Estate Advert. Claims Litig., 882 F. Supp. 915, 923 (C.D. Cal. 1994) ("The word[] . . . '#1' convey[s] no specific meaning and thus cannot be considered literally false."). Moreover, the full quote from Hackett cited by UpCounsel provides: "the[] words (voted, considered, rated, etc.) in combination with '#1 Best Show in Vegas' begs the question: By whom?" Hackett, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 101485, 2011 WL 4007531, at \*5 (emphasis supplied). Here, unlike in Hackett, none of the 5% statements say UpCounsel was voted/considered/rated as top 5%. Moreover, the "#1 Best Show in Vegas" statement at issue in Hackett is classic puffery because it made no reference to the category in which the show "The Rat Pack is Back" was number one. Here, on the other hand, the 5% statement specifies a particular category as to which the 5% statement applies, namely the specific practice area. It cannot be said that no reasonable consumer would rely on such an assertion.

UpCounsel also cites Southland Sod Farms v. Stover Seed Co., 108 F.3d 1134 \(9th Cir. 1997\) in its reply brief, arguing that "[m]ost of" plaintiffs' "supposedly false claims" are "general assertions and vague claims of 'lower costs and superiority' . . . ." (Defendant UpCounsel Inc.'s Reply in Support of Motion to Dismiss Plaintiffs' First Amended Complaint ("Reply") at 11, Dkt. No. 59.) However, for the reasons discussed herein, the Court disagrees and finds that they are instead "quantifiable" and/or "make[] a claim as to the specific or absolute characteristics" of UpCounsel's services, provided by the attorneys who use its platform. Newcal Indus., Inc. v. Ikon Office Sol., 513 F.3d 1038, 1053 \(9th Cir. 2008\) (internal quotation marks omitted).

Accordingly, UpCounsel's motion to dismiss LegalForce RAPC's Lanham Act claim is DENIED to the extent the claim is based on statements in the format of "Top 5% of {Practice Area} Lawyers in {City}."

C. "The 10 Best {Practice Area} Lawyers in {State} NEAR ME"

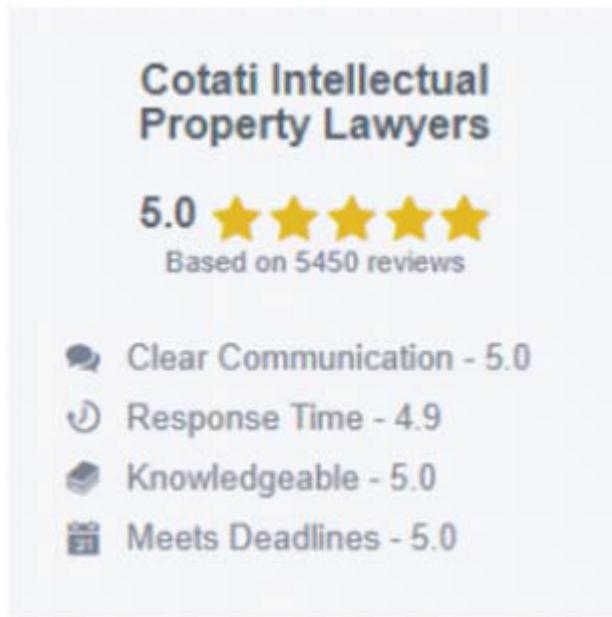

Plaintiffs allege that "UpCounsel has made over 1,000 false and misleading statements in the format of 'The 10 Best {Practice Area} Lawyers in {State} NEAR ME' in over 1,000 web pages on its website." (FAC ¶ 33; see also id. Exh. 52.) According to plaintiffs, "[t]hese statements are false because individuals listed in each resulting page [*16] are not usually near the customer who did the search, and often not even in the same state." (Id. ¶ 35.)

While LegalForce does not address this category of statements directly, it appears to fall within the second of its four groups, namely the group encompassing "quotes suggesting that UpCounsel is 'equivalent to the world's largest virtual law firm' or that available lawyers are, for example, the 'best patent lawyers' in a particular city." (MTD at 9-10.) Against this backdrop, the argument that statements in the format of "The 10 Best {Practice Area} Lawyers in {State} NEAR ME" are Google search results fails for the reasons previously stated, as does the contention that the statement must answer the question "as determined by whom[?]" Moreover, statements in the format of "The 10 Best {Practice Area} Lawyers in {State} NEAR ME" are not puffery because UpCounsel is advertising a top-10 list of the best attorneys practicing in a specific area of law in a geographically limited area. See Newcal, 513 F.3d at 1053 (explaining that "[u]ltimately, the difference between a statement of fact and mere puffery rests in the specificity or generality of the claim"). A reasonable consumer reading these statements could conclude [*17] that UpCounsel attorneys are objectively and measurably superior to other "{practice area} lawyers in {state}" near the consumer. (FAC ¶ 33.)

Accordingly, UpCounsel's motion to dismiss LegalForce RAPC's Lanham Act claim is DENIED to the extent the claim is based on statements in the format of "The 10 Best {Practice Area} Lawyers in {State} NEAR ME."

D. "{City} {Practice Area} Lawyers 5.0 ***** Based on {X number of} reviews"

Plaintiffs allege that in a total of 51,700 landing pages, "there is a Page Summary Block which shows '{City} {Practice Area} Lawyers 5.0 ***** Based on {X number of} reviews.'" (FAC ¶ 38.) For example:

(See id. Exh. 61 at 1.) According to plaintiffs, the statement "Cotati Intellectual Property Lawyers 5.0 ***** Based on 5450 reviews" is a false statement, namely: "It is impossible for Cotati Intellectual Property Lawyers to have 5,450 reviews on UpCounsel. Cotati is a small town in Northern California with a population of 7,455. There are only 21 attorneys in the city of Cotati licensed to practice law in California, and none of these 21 attorneys are listed on UpCounsel." (Id. ¶ 39.) Thus, plaintiffs maintain that "UpCounsel manipulates [Google's search optimization] [*18] technique to deceive Google crawlers and other search engines so that Google will display UpCounsel's fabricated and false ratings and reviews on the first page search result." (FAC ¶ 42.) As a result, UpCounsel "steers away potential clients from [p]laintiffs and hinders [p]laintiffs' ability to compete." (Id.)

UpCounsel argues that use of search-engine optimization techniques "as a means to its advertising ends" does not suffice to state a claim under the Lanham Act because UpCounsel's "software code" is not a statement that was seen or relied on by customers. (MTD at 10 (emphasis in original).) UpCounsel also maintains that its advertising statements regarding five-star reviews are non-actionable puffery.

Whether UpCounsel's software code is a statement that was seen and relied on by customers is a factual issue to be resolved at summary judgment. As for UpCounsel's argument that the statements themselves are non-actionable puffery, it does not persuade. The statements indicate a specific area of law in a geographically limited area and also a specific number of reviews. A reasonable consumer reading these statements could conclude that UpCounsel attorneys are objectively and measurably superior [*19] to other "{city} {practice area} lawyers." (FAC ¶ 38.)

Accordingly, UpCounsel's motion to dismiss LegalForce RAPC's Lanham Act claim is DENIED to the extent the claim is based on the Page Summary Block on UpCounsel's landing pages which shows "{City} {Practice Area} Lawyers 5.0 ***** Based on {X number of} reviews."

E. ***** Rating: 5 - {X number of} reviews"

Plaintiffs allege that "when a customer searches 'intellectual property lawyer in cotati, ca,' UpCounsel makes another false and misleading statement," which appears beneath the separate false and misleading statement "Top 5% Intellectual Property Lawyers in Cotati, CA," namely "***** Rating: 5 - {X number of} reviews." (FAC ¶ 43.) For example:

Top 5% of Intellectual Property Lawyers in Cotati, CA | UpCounsel
 https://www.upcounsel.com › Intellectual Property › California •
 ★★★★ Rating: 5 - 5.174 reviews
 Compare Cotati Intellectual Property Attorneys & Lawyers for hire on UpCounsel and choose the best
 IP attorney for your intellectual property needs in Cotati, ...

(Id. Exh. 33-G at 1.) According to plaintiffs, "[t]he display of the invariable 5-star rating followed by the number of reviews is achieved by manipulating Google search results through deceptive, unethical, and fraudulent search engine optimization techniques. . . . UpCounsel's deceptive aggregations of reviews mislead [consumers] into believing the reviews came from actual customers in those cities and states." (Id. ¶ 45.) In addition, "[t]o keep its pages at the top of search results," plaintiffs [*20] allege that UpCounsel "underhandedly tricks Google by 'refreshing' its reviews through a posting regularly updated, fabricating reviews directly on each webpage on the UpCounsel website." (Id. ¶ 49.)

UpCounsel repeats its argument regarding HTML code and search-optimization techniques and generally asserts that statements that attorneys have five-star reviews are non-actionable puffery. (MTD at 12.)

The former argument fails for the reasons discussed in the previous section. As for UpCounsel's argument that the statements are puffery, it does not persuade. The statements are "quantifiable," namely they indicate a five-star rating based on a specific number of reviews, and are thus actionable. Newcal. 513 F.3d at 1052.

Accordingly, UpCounsel's motion to dismiss LegalForce RAPC's Lanham Act claim is DENIED to the extent the claim is based on statements in the format of "***** Rating: 5 - {X number of} reviews."

F. Review and Web Page Source Code Deception

Plaintiffs allege generally that UpCounsel's presentation layer code (i.e., "software code that is executed on a client side device and which is responsible for displaying textual and graphical elements printed on a webpage to users throughout their monitors") reveals that [*21] UpCounsel "intentionally and purposefully, and in bad faith, attempts to deceive Google search crawlers and the public that uses Google to search for legal services." (FAC ¶ 50.) For example, "UpCounsel's tag for its 5450 fabricated reviews for attorneys in Cotati is based on a fraudulent data field called 'reviewCount' which is printed on each page," and "UpCounsel's page source for each of its tens of thousands of reviews includes the following line of code: <divitemprop='aggregateRating' itemscope itemtype='http://schema.org/AggregateRating '>," the sole purpose of which is to "trick search engines into recognizing UpCounsel's aggregate ratings as trustworthy." (FAC ¶¶ 52, 53; id. Exh. 76 at 26.) "Specifically," plaintiffs allege, "this descriptor indicates that UpCounsel is attempting to fraudulently utilize the 'AggregateRating' class or library on the website www.schema.org to trick search engines into recognizing its ratings and reviews as honest and reputable, when in fact they are aggregated fraudulently to generate a fabricated city rating." (Id. ¶ 54.) The lines of code are depicted in the FAC as follows:

(Id. ¶ 52.) According to plaintiffs, "[w]hen adding this library of [*22] code, UpCounsel intentionally violates (1) the technical and content guidelines of Google, which require legitimate reviews and (2) provisions of the Google Technical guidelines." (Id. ¶ 57.) The core of plaintiffs' allegations regarding review and web page source code deception is thus that "UpCounsel fraudulently and unethically employs techniques published on Schema.org to deceive Google and average consumers into thinking that when they search on Google, they are receiving trustworthy reviews of real attorneys in their city or 'near them' when in fact, the reviews are a manufactured hodgepodge of unrelated UpCounsel attorneys who often have no connection to the particular city or state." (Id. ¶ 59.) UpCounsel, in turn, has "greatly benefited from deceptive, unethical, and fraudulent search engine optimization techniques." (Id. ¶ 62.) Namely, plaintiffs claim that "UpCounsel's false and misleading advertising has propelled it to secure 10,000† customers" and that "[a] percentage of these clients would have become clients of RAPC." (Id. ¶ 64.)

UpCounsel argues that its "software code," or the pages of HTML "page source" that plaintiffs use in their brief, are not statements that were [*23] seen and relied on by customers. (MTD at 10.) As for the corresponding search results, UpCounsel argues that plaintiffs cannot rest a false advertising claim—which requires a false statement made by the defendant—on search results that plaintiffs have elicited from a third party using words that plaintiffs have chosen. (Id. at 11.)

The Court agrees in part. Specifically, the Court finds that standing on their own, the software code and HMTL page source are not actionable statements. However, plaintiffs have tied the software code and HTML page source to specific actionable statements. (See Plaintiffs' Opposition to Defendant's Motion to Dismiss First Amended Complaint ("Opp.") at 16, Dkt. No. 55 ("UpCounsel . . . carefully tags the statements in the website coding so that Google includes the false and misleading statements in search results for consumers.").) Thus, the software code and HTML page source represent UpCounsel's purported intent when making the statements, namely to mislead consumers. Accordingly, allegations pertaining to the same, while not sufficient to give rise to a separate Lanham Act claim, shall not be dismissed.<sup>14</sup>

Accordingly, UpCounsel's motion to dismiss LegalForce RAPC's [*24] Lanham Act claim is DENIED to the extent the claim is based on UpCounsel's alleged review and web page source code deception.

G. Distant, Unlicensed Attorneys

Plaintiffs allege that "UpCounsel deceives customers by steering them to attorneys and non-attorneys who are not located anywhere close to their city, or authorized to practice in their respective state" or in any state. (FAC ¶ 65; see also id. ¶ 66.) For instance, plaintiffs "take issue . . . with UpCounsel listing . . . patent agents as lawyers." (Opp. at 26.)

UpCounsel concedes that the three examples that plaintiffs cite in the FAC (see FAC ¶¶ 66-68) are, as indicated in the corresponding exhibits, patent prosecutors. However, UpCounsel argues that it does not steer anyone to unlicensed attorneys and that plaintiffs identify nothing on UpCounsel's website that represents that these individuals are attorneys. In addition, UpCounsel reiterates its argument that Google search results are not statements. (See Reply at 13) ("That leaves Plaintiffs with just one allegation: that Google is somehow displaying these individuals under misleading headings.") (emphasis in original).) Without some false statement by UpCounsel, UpCounsel insists that [*25] LegalForce RAPC has no Lanham Act claim.

Accepting as true plaintiffs' allegation that the search results "republish" statements originally made by UpCounsel, as the Court must in analyzing UpCounsel's motion to dismiss, UpCounsel cannot reasonably argue at this stage that it has not made false statements by way of the search results. Indeed, UpCounsel does not refute that the patent prosecutors are linked to search results advertising attorney services, and in different states. (See, e.g., FAC Exh. 57 at 1 ("Mark Levenda Attorney Profile on Upcounsel") (emphasis supplied); id. Exh. 37 at 1 (search result heading is "Bend Attorneys & Lawyers for Hire On-Demand" but description states "Mark Levenda is a patent attorney with over 12 years of experience. He is licensed to practice law in Arizona and is also a member of the Arizona patent bar") (emphasis supplied); see also, e.g., FAC Exhs. 32 at 3 & 56 at 1, 2 (patent agent appears as "Top 5%" immigration lawyer in Blackfoot Idaho and as an "Oregon Attorney[] & Lawyer[] for Hire On-Demand" through UpCounsel).)

Accordingly, UpCounsel's motion to dismiss LegalForce RAPC's Lanham Act claim is DENIED to the extent the claim is based on UpCounsel's [*26] alleged "dece[p]tion" [of] customers by steering them to attorneys and non-attorneys who are not located anywhere close to their city, or authorized to practice in their respective state." (FAC ¶ 65.)

H. False and Misleading Fee Structure

Plaintiffs allege that "UpCounsel deceptively hides exactly how much in fees consultant users or employer users pay as part of its success fee, ranging from 15% to 24%." (FAC ¶ 76.) Specifically, "th[e] 15% mark up in its terms is materially inconsistent with its invoices, in which the mark up spikes to 24%." (Id. ¶ 78.) In addition to these alleged misrepresentations regarding the mark up, plaintiffs allege: "UpCounsel attempts to 'mask' this 'processing fee' from its Employer Users by including it as part of the hourly fee paid to each lawyer. Specifically, the initial hourly rate shown to each potential client after a proposal is provided by an attorney is silent as to whether it includes the processing fee." (Id. ¶ 79.)

---

<sup>14</sup> As for UpCounsel's argument regarding the corresponding search results, the fact that plaintiffs formulated the searches which triggered the results is of no moment. UpCounsel does not dispute that the search results and information contained therein are accessible to the broader public. As previously stated, the issue of who actually made the statements (i.e., the search results), whether it be UpCounsel or a third party, is a factual issue to be resolved at summary judgment. (See supra p. 10.)

UpCounsel argues that plaintiffs are "either confused or intentionally obfuscating the truth." (MTD at 13.) Namely, "[t]here is no 'range' from 15% to 24%; those are different fees charged for entirely different services." (Id.) Regarding the [*27] former, UpCounsel explains that Section 7.1 of its Terms of Service, (see FAC Exh. 11), has nothing to do with work performed by attorneys through UpCounsel's platform. Rather, it sets out the referral fee an employer is to pay UpCounsel if it decides to employ—on a full-time basis in the future—an attorney it met through the platform. (MTD at 13; See FAC Exh. 11 at ECF pp. 57-58.) The amount of that referral fee is "determined by the start date of that employment, and how close in time it is to when those parties first met through UpCounsel." (Reply at 12.) Regarding the latter, UpCounsel contends that it makes clear that its "processing fee"—not a referral fee—"amounts to 24% of your total invoice." (MTD at 13 (citing FAC ¶ 78 n.8).) "In other words, if an attorney performs an hour's work for an UpCounsel client and charges $250, the client pays that attorney $250 and, in addition, pays UpCounsel 24% (or $60) in processing fees." (MTD at 13.) In any event, UpCounsel maintains that its fee structure does not constitute a statement, in interstate commerce or advertising, that is literally false.

The Court finds that the disagreement between the parties boils down to a factual dispute appropriate for resolution at summary [*28] judgment, not on a motion to dismiss. Accordingly, UpCounsel's motion to dismiss LegalForce RAPC's Lanham Act claim is DENIED to the extent it is based on UpCounsel's allegedly false and misleading fee structure.

I. Conclusion

LegalForce RAPC's Lanham Act claim is subject to dismissal only to the extent the claim is based on the statement that "UpCounsel is the world's largest law firm." Otherwise, the claim survives UpCounsel's motion to dismiss.

IV. SECOND CLAIM FOR RELIEF: CALIFORNIA FALSE & MISLEADING ADVERTISING (CAL. BUS.&PROF. CODE § 17500 ET SEQ.)

California's FAL prohibits the dissemination of any advertising "which is untrue or misleading." Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500; see also In re Sony Gaming Networks & Customer Data Sec. Breach Litig., 996 F. Supp. 2d 942, 985-86 (S.D. Cal. 2014).

UpCounsel argues that LegalForce RAPC's FAL claim fails for the same reasons as its Lanham Act and UCL claims. First, UpCounsel contends that plaintiffs have not alleged a false or misleading statement sufficient to state a false advertising claim. Second, UpCounsel argues that LegalForce RAPC does not have standing under the FAL because it has not suffered an injury in fact or lost money or property as a result of a violation.<sup>15</sup>

As a preliminary matter, because the Court previously ruled in plaintiffs' favor on the issue of standing under [*29] both the FAL and UCL, UpCounsel's motion based on lack of standing is DENIED. (See MTD Order at 2.)<sup>16</sup> Otherwise, because LegalForce RAPC's FAL claim is based in its entirety on conduct which forms the basis of its Lanham Act claim, this claim rises and falls with LegalForce RAPC's Lanham Act claim. See Walker & Zanger, Inc. v. Paragon Indus., Inc., 549 F. Supp. 2d 1168, 1182 (N.D. Cal. 2007) ("[C]laims of . . . false advertising under state statutory and common law are 'substantially congruent' to claims made under the Lanham Act.") (quoting Cleary v. News Corp., 30 F.3d 1255, 1263 (9th Cir. 1994)). Accordingly, UpCounsel's motion as to the FAL claim is GRANTED IN PART AND DENIED IN PART in accordance with the Court's aforementioned rulings regarding LegalForce RAPC's Lanham Act claim.

<sup>15</sup> UpCounsel's motion actually makes these arguments as to "plaintiffs," i.e., both LegalForce RAPC and Trademarkia. However, only LegalForce RAPC asserts a claim under the FAL. (See FAC at p. 42 (indicating that the FAL claim is asserted "[a]gainst UpCounsel by RAPC").) UpCounsel's standing argument in the context of the FAL claim therefore pertains to LegalForce RAPC only, and the Court thus proceeds with its discussion accordingly.

<sup>16</sup> See also discussion at infra pp. 19-20.

V. THIRD CLAIM FOR RELIEF: CALIFORNIA UNFAIR COMPETITION (CAL. BUS.&PROF. CODE § 17200 ET SEQ.)

The UCL proscribes business practices that are "unlawful, unfair[,] or fraudulent." Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200; see also In re Sony, 996 F. Supp. 2d at 985. Because the statute is written in the disjunctive, it applies separately to business practices that are (1) unlawful, (2) unfair, or (3) fraudulent. See Pastoria v. Nationwide Ins., 112 Cal. App. 4th 1490, 1496, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 148 \(2003\).

Plaintiffs assert claims under the unlawful and unfair prongs only. The Court discusses each prong in turn after addressing the threshold issue of Trademarkia's standing.

A. Trademarkia's Standing

At the hearing on the instant motion, UpCounsel [*30] addressed the issue of Trademarkia's standing to pursue its UCL claim against UpCounsel, arguing for the first time that plaintiffs' allegations in the FAC regarding "lost sales and increased costs," namely those contained in FAC ¶¶ 114-116, pertain to LegalForce RAPC only, and not Trademarkia. (See Hearing Tr. 2 at 11:2-25.) While UpCounsel is correct regarding these specific allegations, its argument that Trademarkia lacks standing to pursue its UCL claim against UpCounsel does not persuade. Because UpCounsel did not distinguish at the hearing between Article III standing and statutory standing, the Court addresses both.<sup>17</sup>

A plaintiff asserting a UCL claim must satisfy both the Article III and UCL standing requirements. Birdsong v. Apple, Inc., 590 F.3d 955, 960 n.4 \(9th Cir. 2009\). To have standing to assert a UCL claim, the plaintiff must show that "she hast lost 'money or property' sufficient to constitute an 'injury in fact' under Article III of the Constitution." Rubio v. Capital One Bank, 613 F.3d 1195, 1203-04 \(9th Cir. 2010\). Thus, the plaintiff asserting a UCL claim must have Article III standing in the form of economic injury. Cardenas v. NBTY, Inc., 870 F. Supp. 2d 984, 991 \(E.D. Cal. 2012\); see also Birdsong, 590 F. 3d at 960 n.4 ("[T]he UCL incorporates Article III's injury in fact requirement . . . .") (citation omitted).

The UCL's loss of "money or property" requirement is broadly expansive as to what sort of economic [*31] injury suffices. See Kwikset Corp. v. Superior Court, 51 Cal. 4th 310, 323, 120 Cal. Rptr. 3d 741, 246 P.3d 877 \(2011\). The California Supreme Court instructs that "[t]here are innumerable ways in which economic injury from unfair competition may be shown." Id.; see also Law Offices of Mathew Higbee v. Expungement Assistance Servs., 214 Cal. App. 4th 544, 561, 153 Cal. Rptr. 3d 865 \(2013\) ("[T]he notion of 'lost money' under the UCL is not limited."). Loss of business to a competitor as a result of unfair competition is a paradigmatic, and indeed the original, variety of loss contemplated by the UCL. See Law Offices of Mathew Higbee, 214 Cal. App. 4th at 560-61 (explaining that while the UCL has developed into an important consumer-protection statute, its "original purpose . . . was to protect against wrongful conduct in commercial enterprises which resulted in business loss to another, ordinarily by the use of unfair means in drawing away customers from a competitor") (internal quotation marks omitted). A decrease in business value has also been deemed sufficient to show "an identifiable trifle of injury as necessary for standing under the UCL." Id. at 561.

Here, plaintiffs make the following allegations of economic injury, inter alia, with respect to both Trademarkia and LegalForce RAPC:

- "UpCounsel . . . deceive[s] Google crawlers and other search engines so that Google will display UpCounsel's fabricated and false ratings and reviews on the first page search [*32] result. As such, UpCounsel steers away potential clients from [p]laintiffs and hinders [p]laintiffs' ability to compete." (FAC ¶ 42.)

---

<sup>17</sup> Moreover, because UpCounsel's standing point at oral argument was limited to Trademarkia's purported injuries, and because the Court previously ruled on the issue of plaintiffs' standing under the UCL, (see Dkt. No. 42 at 2), the Court limits its discussion herein accordingly. Thus, the Court does not address the causation or redressability requirements of Article III standing.

- "Plaintiffs' value of their business has been directly reduced and negotiations with potential acquirers have stalled." (Id. ¶ 115.)
- "UpCounsel prevented competition from [p]laintiffs by unfairly gaining potential clients through illegal solicitation and sharing legal fees with lawyers. But-for [sic] UpCounsel's unlawful and unfair competition, a good percentage of these potential clients would have otherwise gone to [p]laintiffs." (Id. ¶ 140.)
- "If UpCounsel did not engage in the alleged unlawful solicitation and unethical fee sharing, [it] would not have made false and misleading advertisements on Google and would not have unfairly competed with [p]laintiffs. Therefore, UpCounsel's conduct of unfair competition took away potential sales belonging to [p]laintiffs and proximately caused injury to [p]laintiffs." (Id. ¶ 141.)

The Court concludes that allegations of "plaintiffs'" i.e. LegalForce RAPC's and Trademarkia's, lost business and decrease in business value, in the overall context of the FAC and its allegations of wrongfully denied business opportunities, [*33] suffice to plead standing under the UCL's expansive standing doctrine. Because these allegations also suffice for pleading injury in fact under Article III,<sup>18</sup> UpCounsel's argument regarding Trademarkia's lack of standing is without merit.

B. Unlawful Prong

"The unlawful prong of the UCL prohibits anything that can properly be called a business practice and that at the same time is forbidden by law." *In re Adobe Sys., Inc. v. Privacy Litig.*, 66 F. Supp. 3d 1197, 1225 \(N.D. Cal. 2014\) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Generally, violation of almost any law may serve as a basis for a UCL claim." *Jordan v. Paul Fin., LLC*, 745 F. Supp. 2d 1084, 1098 \(N.D. Cal. 2010\) (internal quotation marks omitted). However, a UCL claim "must identify the particular section of the statute that was violated and must describe with reasonable particularity the facts supporting the violation." *In re Anthem, Inc. Data Breach Litig.*, 162 F. Supp. 3d 953, 989 \(N.D. Cal. 2016\) (internal quotation marks omitted). Plaintiffs asserts five predicates for their "unlawful" UCL claim: California Business and Professions Code sections (1) 6152\(a\) and (2) 6155; (3) 37 C.F.R. section 11.504; and California Rules of Professional Conduct ("RPC") (4) 1-320 and (5) 1-400. (See FAC ¶ 138(a)-(d).)

UpCounsel contends that plaintiffs "may not 'plead around an absolute bar to relief by recasting the cause of action as one for unfair competition.'" (MTD at 5 (quoting *Cel-Tech Commc'n Inc v. L.A. Cellular Tel. Co.*, 20 Cal. 4th 163, 182, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 \(1999\)).) Specifically, UpCounsel [*34] argues that plaintiffs' "unlawful" UCL claim fails because "its purported statutory hooks expressly forbid private rights of action . . ." (MTD at 5.) Plaintiffs, in opposition, respond that "[a] claim under the UCL cannot be brought [only] where the legislature has created an immunity or provided a 'safe harbor' for that action." (Opp. at 8 (quoting *Cel-Tech*, 20 Cal. 4th at 182.) At oral argument, UpCounsel agreed with plaintiffs that, in some instances, a statute that does not provide a private cause of action can serve as a predicate for a UCL claim. (Hearing Tr. 2 at 10:1-2 ("I completely agree that if a statute is entirely silent[,] that can serve a statutory hook.").) However, UpCounsel maintained that where a private right of action to enforce a statute has been expressly foreclosed, that statute may not serve as a predicate for a UCL claim. Specifically, UpCounsel argued that section 6156 forecloses a private cause of action under section 6155 because the former specifically provides for enforcement actions by public entities or the state of California, but not actions by individuals or competitors. (See id. at 9:22-25.)

It is true that plaintiffs may not "plead around an absolute bar to relief" by recasting the cause of action as a claim [*35] under the UCL. *Cel-Tech*, 20 Cal. 4th at 182-83 (internal quotation marks omitted). At the same time, California courts have repeatedly stated that a plaintiff may bring a UCL claim even when the conduct alleged to constitute unfair competition violates a statute that does not provide a private right of action. See, e.g., *Troyk v. Farmers Grp., Inc.*, 171 Cal. App. 4th 1305, 1335, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 589 \(2009\); *McKell v. Wash. Mut., Inc.*, 142 Cal.

---

<sup>18</sup> See *Kwikset*, 51 Cal. 4th at 325 ("If a party has alleged or proven a personal, individualized loss of money or property in any nontrivial amount, he or she has also alleged or proven injury in fact.").

App. 4th 1457, 1475, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 227 (2006); Kasky v. Nike, Inc., 27 Cal. 4th 939, 950, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 296, 45 P.3d 243 (2002); Stop Youth Addiction, Inc. v. Lucky Stores, Inc., 17 Cal. 4th 553, 561-66, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 731, 950 P.2d 1086 (1998), superseded by statute on other grounds as stated in Arias v. Superior Court, 46 Cal. 4th 969, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588, 209 P.3d 923 (2009). Courts have reconciled these two principles by holding that "[t]o forestall an action under the unfair competition law, another provision must actually 'bar' the action . . ." Cel-Tech, 20 Cal. 4th at 183. Thus, if a statute explicitly precludes private enforcement, or if a statute expressly provides immunity for the conduct alleged, a plaintiff may not plead around this bar by bringing a claim under the UCL. Compare Hartless v. Clorox, No. 06CV2705 JAH(CAB), 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 81686, 2007 WL 3245260, at *4 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 2, 2007) (holding that a UCL claim cannot be predicated on Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act ("FIFRA") due to Congress' express rejection of private actions to enforce FIFRA), with Fowler v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., No. 17-cv-02092-HSG, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 146732, 2017 WL 3977385, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 11, 2017) (permitting 24 C.F.R. section 203.558 to serve as predicate for UCL claim because it "does not explicitly bar private enforcement"), and Stop Youth Addiction, 17 Cal. 4th at 566 (permitting provision of California Penal Code to serve as basis [*36] for UCL claim because there was no "absolute[] bar[]" to relief).

With these principles in mind, the Court turns to the five predicates plaintiffs assert for their "unlawful" UCL claim, namely California Business and Professions Code sections (1) 6152 and (2) 6155, California Rules of Professional Conduct (3) 1-320 and (4) 1-400, and (5) 37 C.F.R. section 11.504.

1. Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6152 & 6155

The Court is not persuaded by UpCounsel's argument that section 6156 forecloses a private right of action under section 6155. In Stop Youth Addiction, the California Supreme Court considered a similar question, namely "whether the absence of a private right of action to enforce the predicate statute compromises a plaintiff's eligibility to maintain a UCL cause of action." 17 Cal. 4th at 563. With respect to Penal Code section 308, one of the two predicates asserted for the UCL claim in that case, the court noted: "Undeniably, section 308 provides for its own direct enforcement only by public lawyers. It does not follow, however, that a private UCL action that borrows violations . . . of section 308 to establish predicate 'unlawful' (§17200) business activity is barred." Id. at 566 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted) (second emphasis supplied). The court emphasized that the UCL states, "[u]nless otherwise expressly [*37] provided, the remedies or penalties provided by this chapter [i.e., ch. 5, Enforcement, Bus. & Prof. Code, §§ 17200-17209] are cumulative to each other and to the remedies or penalties available under all other laws of this state." Stop Youth Addiction, 17 Cal. 4th 533 at 573 (internal quotation marks omitted) (alterations and emphasis in original). The court continued, "[t]he term 'expressly' means 'in an express manner; in direct or unmistakable terms; explicitly; definitely; directly.'" Id. (quoting City & Cty. of S.F. v. W. Air Lines, Inc., 204 Cal. App. 2d 105, 120, 22 Cal. Rptr. 216 (1962)). The court refused to hold that Penal Code section 308 impliedly precluded a private cause of action under the UCL, explaining that to do so, the court "would have to read the word 'implicitly' into [Business and Professions Code] section 17205 or read the word 'expressly' out of it." Id.

Turning to the case at bar, California Business and Professions Code section 6155 provides, in relevant part, that "[a]n individual, partnership, corporation, association, or any other entity shall not operate for the direct or indirect purpose, in whole or in part, of referring potential clients to attorneys," unless the service is registered with the State Bar of California. Section 6156 provides:

Any individual, partnership, association, corporation, or other entity, including, but not limited to, any person or entity having an ownership interest in a lawyer referral service, that engages, has engaged, or proposed to engage in violations of Section 6155, shall be liable for a civil penalty . . . , which shall be assessed and recovered in a civil action brought: (1) In the manner specified in subdivision (a) of Section 17206 . . . (2) By the State Bar of California.

Section 17206 in turn provides:

Any person who engages, has engaged, or proposes to engage in unfair competition shall be liable for a civil penalty not to exceed two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500) for each violation, which shall be assessed and recovered in a civil action brought in the name of the people of the [*38] State of California by the Attorney General, by any district attorney, by any county counsel authorized by agreement with the district attorney in actions involving violation of a county ordinance, by any city attorney of a city having a population in excess of 750,000, by any city attorney of any city and county, or with the consent of the district attorney, by a city prosecutor in any city having a full-time city prosecutor, in any court of competent jurisdiction.

Thus, section 6156 provides for enforcement actions to recover civil penalties under section 6155 only by public entities or the State Bar of California. As with the court in Stop Youth Addiction, this Court concludes that "[i]t does not follow, however, that a private UCL action that borrows violations . . . of section 6155 to establish predicate 'unlawful' . . . business activity is barred." Stop Youth Addiction, 17 Cal. 4th at 566 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Nothing in section 6156 creates a bar to plaintiffs' UCL claim based on section 6155 analogous to an "absolute[] bar[]." Stop Youth Addiction, 17 Cal 4th at 566. The Court agrees with the Stop Youth Addiction court that a statute does not necessarily bar a private right of action where the statutory scheme provides for penal (or, in this case, civil) penalties. Accordingly, UpCounsel's [*39] motion to dismiss plaintiffs' UCL claim based on a violation of section 6155 is DENIED.<sup>19</sup>

UpCounsel further attacks plaintiffs' attempt to premise their UCL claim on section 6155, arguing that doing so is unprecedeted and contradicted by the FAC. According to UpCounsel, it neither operates to refer potential clients to attorneys nor takes any referral fee for doing so, but rather "allow[s] individuals to post descriptions of their legal needs; get free custom quotes from attorneys through the platform; choose whether to engage an attorney, and if so whom; pay the attorney his or her full rate, and pay a small processing fee to UpCounsel." (MTD at 7 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Reply at 4 (UpCounsel is "more like a public bulletin board that individuals and companies can consult and consider before choosing a lawyer they like").) Plaintiffs respond that regardless of whether an identical case exists, UpCounsel is clearly operating "for the direct or indirect purpose, in whole or in part, of referring potential clients to attorneys." (Opp. at 12 (quoting Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 6155\(a\))).

As a preliminary matter, the fact that no similar case exists is irrelevant to the actual merits of plaintiffs' claim. Moreover, UpCounsel's argument [*40] ignores the broad reach of the UCL's unlawful prong. See CRST Van Expedited, Inc. v. Werner Enters., Inc., 479 F.3d 1099, 1106 \(9th Cir. 2007\) ("The California Supreme Court has given the term 'unlawful' a straightforward and broad interpretation: The UCL covers a wide range of conduct. It embraces anything that can properly be called a business practice and that at the same time is forbidden by law[.]"); Andreoli v. Youngevity Int'l, Inc., No. 16-cv-02922-BTM-JLB, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 49791, 2018 WL 1470264, at \*11 \(S.D. Cal. Mar. 23, 2018\) ("As to an unlawful business practice, the UCL's coverage is broad and sweeping . . . .") Next, UpCounsel's contention that the FAC contradicts plaintiffs' claim that UpCounsel violated section 6155 is disingenuous. Indeed, UpCounsel quotes FAC ¶ 90 in support thereof, but that paragraph of the FAC describes UpCounsel's own attempts at disclaiming being a referral service on its website. As for UpCounsel's argument that it is not operating as a referral service, it ignores that plaintiffs' allegations suffice in this regard, namely:

Although UpCounsel.com has a disclaimer in fine print stating that it is not a "lawyer referral service", referring attorneys to potential clients is in essence all that UpCounsel does. According to the "How It Works" page of UpCounsel, customers looking for attorneys first post a job on UpCounsel.com, [*41] then the website's proprietary algorithm "matches" customers with certain attorneys, and finally customers hire the attorneys instantly through UpCounsel. (See Exhibit 70.) . . . UpCounsel is thus a de facto "lawyer referral service" . . . (FAC ¶¶ 90, 91 (emphasis in original).)

<sup>19</sup> Citing section 6156, UpCounsel similarly moves to dismiss plaintiffs' UCL claim based on a violation of section 6152 "because that code section specifically provides for enforcement actions by public entities . . . or the State Bar of California[.]" (MTD at 5-6 (emphasis removed).) However, section 6156 references violations of section 6155 only, and not violations of section 6152. See Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 6156\(a\) ("Any individual, partnership, association, corporation, or other entity . . . that engages, has engaged, or proposes to engage in violations of Section 6155, shall be liable for a civil penalty . . . .") (emphasis supplied). Thus, UpCounsel's motion to dismiss plaintiffs' UCL claim based on a violation of section 6152 is DENIED.

2. Rules of Professional Conduct ("RPC") 1-320 & 1-400

The result with respect to the RPC differs. The RPC expressly provide: "These rules are not intended to create new civil causes of action." Cal. R. Prof. Conduct 1-100(A).

The Court acknowledges, as plaintiffs note, that the court in *People ex rel. Herrera v. Stender, 212 Cal. App. 4th 614, 152 Cal. Rptr. 3d 16 \(2012\)* rejected the argument that violations of the RPC do not support a cause of action under the UCL. See id. at 632; Opp. at 9. However, Herrera did not involve a private action and was instead brought by the California Attorney General. Plaintiffs also cite *Estakhrian v. Obenstine, 320 F.R.D. 63 \(C.D. Cal. 2017\)*, but the court there neither analyzed nor decided whether RPC 1-320 could be the basis of an unlawful prong claim. Rather, that class certification decision stands only for the proposition that whether a person who shared legal fees with a non-lawyer was an issue common to the class. See id. at 78. Similarly, in *Hoy v. Clinnin, No. 17-cv-788-BTM-KSC, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 96872, 2017 WL 2686216 \(S.D. Cal. June 22, 2017\)*, the issue before the court was whether to remand a malpractice claim arising under the [*42] RPC to state court under the local controversy exception to the Class Action Fairness Act. See [*2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 96872, \[WL\] at \*1*](#). The court granted the motion to remand, and its analysis of the UCL claim at issue was limited to repeating Herrera's holding and a citation to Estakhrian.<sup>20</sup>

In sum, given the RPC's express bar on private enforcement, plaintiffs are precluded from enforcing RPC 1-320 and 1-400 privately by using them as predicates for their UCL claims. UpCounsel's motion to dismiss plaintiffs' UCL claim based on a violation of these rules is thus GRANTED.<sup>21</sup>

3. 37 C.F.R. § 11.504

Finally, with respect to 37 C.F.R. section 11.504, UpCounsel argues only that "[a]ny UCL claim under [the United States Patent and Trademark Office Rules of Professional Conduct] is impliedly preempted by federal law," citing just one case in support thereof. (MTD at 6.) However, six days before oral argument on the instant motion was held, the California Supreme Court ordered that the cited case be depublished. See *Post Foods, LLC v. Superior Court, 25 Cal. App 5th 278, 235 Cal. Rptr. 3d 641 \(2018\)*, as modified on denial of reh'g (Aug. 14, 2018), review denied and ordered not to be officially published (Oct. 31, 2018). Thus, it cannot be cited or relied on by UpCounsel. See *Cal. Rules of Court 8.1115\(a\)*. Absent binding, or at the least citable, authority on the [*43] issue, the Court is not inclined at this juncture to dismiss plaintiffs' UCL claim based on a violation of 37 C.F.R. section 11.504. UpCounsel's motion to dismiss the same on the sole basis of preemption is thus DENIED.

C. Unfair Prong

"The 'unfair' prong of the UCL creates a cause of action for a business practice that is unfair even if not proscribed by some other law." *In re Adobe, 66 F. Supp. 3d at 1125*. "The UCL does not define the term 'unfair.' . . . [And] the proper definition of 'unfair' conduct 'is currently in flux' among California courts." Id. (internal quotation marks omitted) (alterations in original).

<sup>20</sup> As for *Balukjan v. Virgin Am., Inc., No. 18-cv-00185-SI, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40387, 2018 WL 1242179 \(N.D. Cal. Mar. 9, 2018\)*, the court there stated in dicta that "[v]irtually any state, federal or local law can serve as the predicate for an action under section 17200, . . . including . . . rules of professional conduct." [*2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40387, \[WL\] at \*7*](#). However, the court engaged in no analysis on that point. Instead, it relied on Herrera, which, as the Court previously indicated, did not involve a private action.

<sup>21</sup> In light of the Court's ruling, the Court does not address the parties' remaining arguments regarding the RPC.

Although the precise test for the UCL's "unfair" prong has not been definitively established, plaintiffs endorse the Federal Trade Commission ("FTC") Act section 5 test employed in Camacho v. Automobile Club of Southern California, 142 Cal. App. 4th 1394, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 770 (2006). Under that test, three factors define unfairness: "(1) the consumer injury must be substantial; (2) the injury must not be outweighed by any countervailing benefits to consumers or competition; and (3) it must be an injury that consumers themselves could not reasonably have avoided." Camacho, 142 Cal. App. 4th at 1403; see also FAC ¶ 139(b)-(d). UpCounsel contends that where, as here, the plaintiff is a competitor, "the word 'unfair' . . . means conduct that threatens an incipient violation of [*44] an antitrust law, or violates the policy or spirit of one of those laws because its effects are comparable to or the same as a violation of the law, or otherwise significantly threatens or harms competition." (MTD at 8 (quoting Cel-Tech, 20 Cal. 4th at 187.) And, UpCounsel argues, plaintiffs cannot state an antitrust claim unless they "plead and prove a reduction of competition in the market in general and not mere injury to their own positions as competitors." (MTD at 8 (internal quotation marks omitted) (emphasis in original).) In that context, UpCounsel contends that plaintiffs have not, and cannot, allege harm to general market competition.

The parties do not dispute that this action is brought by a competitor, and not a consumer, nor can they. This point is significant because, in adopting its test for determining what is unfair under the UCL, the California Supreme Court in Cel-Tech stated:

This case involves an action by a competitor alleging anticompetitive practices. Our discussion and this test are limited to that context. Nothing we say relates to actions by consumers or by competitors alleging other kinds of violations of the unfair competition law such as "fraudulent" or "unlawful" business practices or "unfair, [*45] deceptive, untrue or misleading advertising."

Cel-Tech, 20 Cal. 4th at 187 n.12 (emphasis supplied); cf. FAC ¶ 139(a)-(d) (alleging anticompetitive practices). In devising this "more precise" test, the court in Cel-Tech "turn[ed] for guidance to the jurisprudence arising under the 'parallel' . . . section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. § 45(a)) (section 5)." Id. at 185. In Watson Labs., Inc. v. Rhone-Poulenc Rorer, Inc., 178 F. Supp. 2d 1099 (C.D. Cal. 2001), on which plaintiffs rely, the court determined that the Cel-Tech test applied, see id. at 1118 n.13, and similarly determined, citing Section 5, that certain "federal antitrust decisions provide sound and appropriate standards for evaluating [plaintiff's] § 17200 'unfair' business act claim." Id. at 1119. However, it did not indicate, as plaintiffs appear to argue, that Section 5 provides an alternative applicable test that displaces the Cel-Tech test. Plaintiffs also cite the recent decision by Judge Freeman in In re Nexus 6P Products Liability Litigation, 293 F. Supp. 3d 888 (N.D. Cal. 2018) because it "noted . . . one test for determining what is unfair under California's UCL is the FTC Act section 5 test . . ." (Opp. at 13.) However, In re Nexus 6P involved a consumer class action, and the court there addressed "the proper definition [of the term 'unfair'] in the consumer context." Id. at 930 (emphases supplied).

Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Court is not persuaded by UpCounsel's argument that plaintiffs must "state [*46] an antitrust claim." (MTD at 8.) Namely, the Cel-Tech test provides that an "unfair" claim under the UCL may be proven only on the basis of "conduct that threatens an incipient violation of an antitrust law, or violates the policy or spirit of one of those laws because its effects are comparable to or the same as a violation of the law, or otherwise significantly threatens or harms competition." Cel-Tech, 20 Cal. 4th at 187 (emphasis supplied). Against this backdrop, plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged facts to establish that UpCounsel's actions "otherwise significantly threaten[] or harm[] competition." Id. For example, they allege:

[Attorney ethics rules] have not been revised in the age of the Internet. UpCounsel has brazenly ignored law, ethics, and common sense in defiance of healthy competition. . . . As a result of UpCounsel's malfeasance, [p]laintiffs, law firms, and legal technology companies across the United States are unable to fairly compete with UpCounsel.

(FAC ¶ 5.) Moreover, plaintiffs allege: "Plaintiffs are not able to compete fairly despite having an early start because they cannot fee share with non-attorneys. For this reason, based on UpCounsel's own admissions, UpCounsel has unfairly threatened [p]laintiffs' [*47] business directly by unfairly competing." (Id. ¶ 111.) Plaintiffs also allege:

It is unfair to the competition in the practice of law if UpCounsel is able to offer legal services by violating state laws, federal regulations[,] and California ethics rules without being punished, while the vast majority of attorneys and legal technology companies, including [p]laintiffs, abide by the laws, federal regulations[,] and California ethics rules.

(FAC ¶ 139(a).)

Accordingly, UpCounsel's motion to dismiss plaintiffs' claim under the UCL's unlawful prong is DENIED.

VI. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, UpCounsel's motion to dismiss is GRANTED IN PART AND DENIED IN PART as follows:

- The motion to dismiss LegalForce RAPC's Lanham Act claim is GRANTED WITHOUT LEAVE TO AMEND to the extent the claim is based on the statement that "UpCounsel is the world's largest law firm." To the extent the Lanham Act claim is based on any other statement asserted in the FAC, the motion is DENIED.
- The motion to dismiss LegalForce RAPC's FAL claim based on lack of standing is DENIED. The motion is otherwise GRANTED IN PART AND DENIED IN PART in accordance with the Court's rulings herein regarding LegalForce RAPC's [*48] Lanham Act claim.
- The motion to dismiss plaintiffs' UCL claim is GRANTED to the extent the claim is based on a violation of Rules of Professional Conduct 1-320 and 1-400. To the extent it is based on other predicates, it is DENIED.
- The motion to dismiss plaintiffs' claim under the UCL's unlawful prong is DENIED. This Order terminates Docket Number 49.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Dated: January 10, 2019

/s/ Yvonne Gonzalez Rogers

YVONNE GONZALEZ ROGERS

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT JUDGE

---

End of Document

In re Am. Express Anti-Steering Rules Antitrust Litig.

United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York

January 14, 2019, Decided; January 14, 2019, Filed

11-MD-2221 (NGG) (RER); 08-CV-2315 (NGG) (RER); 08-CV-2316 (NGG) (RER); 08-CV-2317 (NGG) (RER); 08-CV-2380 (NGG) (RER); 08-CV-2406 (NGG) (RER); 11-CV-0337 (NGG) (RER); 11-CV-0338 (NGG) (RER)

Reporter

361 F. Supp. 3d 324 *; 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6876 **; 2019-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P80,642; 2019 WL 202664

IN RE: AMERICAN EXPRESS ANTI-STEERING RULES ANTITRUST LITIGATION. This Document Relates to: All Individual Merchant Plaintiff Actions 08-CV-2315 (NGG) (RER), 08-CV-2316 (NGG) (RER), 08-CV-2317 (NGG) (RER), 08-CV-2380 (NGG) (RER), 08-CV-2406 (NGG) (RER), 11-CV-0337 (NGG) (RER), 11-CV-0338 (NGG) (RER)

Prior History: Rite-Aid Corp. v. Am. Express Travel Related Servs. Co., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 59545 \(E.D.N.Y., Aug. 4, 2008\)

Core Terms

---

merchants, platform, cardholders, two-sided, relevant market, network, allegations, products, card, interchangeable, single-brand, submarket, summary judgment motion, stare decisis, antitrust, one-sided, summary judgment, transactions, courts, pizza, matter of law, credit-card, consumer, markets, pricing, cases, market power, customers, purposes, credit card

Counsel: [\[\*\*1\] For American Express Anti-Steering Rules Antitrust Litigation \(NO II\), In Re \(1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER\): Philip C. Korologos, LEAD ATTORNEY, Boies, Schiller & Flexner LLP, New York, NY.](#)

For Ascena Retail Group, Inc., ANN INC., Automobile Club of Southern California, AutoNation, Inc., Bally Total Fitness Corporation, BJ's Restaurants, Inc., Bridgestone Americas Inc., Brookstone Company, Inc., CALERES, CarMax, Inc., Centric Group, LLC, CoreLogic, Inc., Crestline Hotels & Resorts, LLC, Darden Restaurants, Inc., Enterprise Holdings, Inc., Ferguson Enterprises, Inc., Festival Fun Parks, LLC (d/b/a Palace Entertainment), Fitness International, LLC, Fresh Enterprises, LLC, Georgetown University, Host Hotels & Resorts, Inc., Ingram Micro, Inc., Innovative Dining Group, Jack in the Box Inc., Lucky Brand Dungarees, LLC, MorphoTrust USA LLC, Nestle Waters North America, Nespresso USA, Inc., The New York Times Company, Office Depot, Inc., OfficeMax Incorporated, Public Storage, The Regents of the University of California, Sears Holdings Management Corporation, Siemens Corporation, Sofa Mart, LLC, Denver Mattress Co., LLC, Big Sur Waterbeds, Inc., Staples, Inc., SYNNEF Corporation, Target Corporation, [\[\*\*2\] Tesoro Companies, Inc., Tiffany and Company, University of Michigan, Williams-Sonoma, Inc., The WP Company LLC, Movants \(1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER\): Daniel A. Sasse, Crowell & Moring LLP, Irvine, CA; Kelly T. Currie, Crowell & Moring, LLP, New York, NY; Richard J. Leveridge, Adams Holcomb LLP, Washington, DC.](#)

For Marriott International, Inc., Movant (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Kelly T. Currie, Crowell & Moring, LLP, New York, NY; Richard J. Leveridge, Adams Holcomb LLP, Washington, DC.

For United Airlines, Inc., Ushio America, Inc., Movants (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Daniel A. Sasse, Crowell & Moring LLP, Irvine, CA.

For Rite Aid Corporation, Rite Aid HDQTRS Corp, Plaintiffs (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): David P. Germaine, Vanek Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Eric Bloom, Hanglevich Segal Pudlin & Schiller, Harrisburg, PA; James Almon, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Maureen Smith Lawrence, PRO HAC VICE, Hanglevich

361 F. Supp. 3d 324, *324 (2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6876, **2

Segal Pudlin & Schiller, Philadelphia, PA; Paul E. Slater, Sperling Slater & Spitz, Chicago, IL; Richard A. Arnold, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Zachary R. Davis, Hangle Aronchick Segal & Pudlin, Philadelphia, PA.

For Walgreen Co, Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): [**3] David P. Germaine, Vanek Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Douglas H. Patton, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Kenny Nachwalter, Miami, FL; Linda P. Nussbaum, Nussbaum Law Group, PC, New York, NY; Paul E. Slater, Sperling Slater & Spitz, Chicago, IL; Richard A. Arnold, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Firefly Air Solutions, LLC, Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Gary B. Friedman, LEAD ATTORNEY, Friedman Law Group LLP, New York, NY; Joel C. Meredith, LEAD ATTORNEY, Meredith & Associates, Philadelphia, PA; Mark Reinhardt, LEAD ATTORNEY, Reinhardt Wendorf & Blanchfield, St. Paul, MN; Steven J. Greenfogel, LEAD ATTORNEY, Lite DePalma Greenberg LLC, Philadelphia, PA; Vincent J. Esades, LEAD ATTORNEY, Heins Mills & Olson, P.L.C., Minneapolis, MN.

For Plymouth Oil Corporation, Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Gary B. Friedman, LEAD ATTORNEY, Friedman Law Group LLP, New York, NY; Mark Reinhardt, LEAD ATTORNEY, Reinhardt Wendorf & Blanchfield, St. Paul, MN; Brian A. Ratner, Hausfeld LLP, Washington, DC; Eugene A. Spector, PRO HAC VICE, Spector, Roseman & Kodroff, Philadelphia, PA; Joseph Gentile, [**4] Sarraf Gentile LLP, New York, NY; Rachel Kopp, PRO HAC VICE, Spector Roseman Kodroff & Willis PC, Philadelphia, PA; Ronen Sarraf, Sarraf Gentile LLP, New York, NY; William Caldes, PRO HAC VICE, Spector, Roseman Kodroff & Willis, P.C., Philadelphia, PA.

For Jasa, Inc., on behalf of themselves, Animal Land, Inc., Lopez-DeJonge, Inc., Italian Colors Restaurant, Cohen Rese Gallery, Inc., Bar Hama LLC, Plaintiffs (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Christopher William Hellmich, PRO HAC VICE, Hellmich Law Offices, Costa Mesa, CA; Dean Martin Solomon, Levitt & Kaizer, New York, NY; Douglas A Millen, PRO HAC VICE, FREED KANNER LONDON & MILLEN LLC, Bannockburn, IL; Gary B. Friedman, Friedman Law Group LLP, New York, NY; Mark Reinhardt, Reinhardt Wendorf & Blanchfield, St. Paul, MN; Noah Shube, New York, NY; Read K. McCaffrey, The Law Offices of Marc Seldin Rosen, Baltimore, MD; Richard P. Rouco, Quinn Connor Weaver Davies & Rouco, Birmingham, AL.

For Jasa, Inc., and all similarly situated persons, Rookies, Inc., Plaintiffs (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Christopher William Hellmich, PRO HAC VICE, Hellmich Law Offices, Costa Mesa, CA; Dean Martin Solomon, Levitt & Kaizer, New York, NY; Gary B. Friedman, Friedman [**5] Law Group LLP, New York, NY; Mark Reinhardt, Reinhardt Wendorf & Blanchfield, St. Paul, MN; Noah Shube, New York, NY; Read K. McCaffrey, The Law Offices of Marc Seldin Rosen, Baltimore, MD; Richard P. Rouco, Quinn Connor Weaver Davies & Rouco, Birmingham, AL.

For Meijer, Inc., Publix Super Market, Inc., Raley's, Supervalu Inc., Plaintiffs (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): David P. Germaine, PRO HAC VICE, Vanek Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; James Almon, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; John P. Bjork, Vanek Vickers & Masini, Chicago, IL; Joseph Michael Vanek, PRO HAC VICE, Vanek, Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Linda P. Nussbaum, Nussbaum Law Group, PC, New York, NY; Mitchell H. Macknin, Sperling & Slater, P.C., Chicago, IL; Paul E. Slater, Sperling Slater & Spitz, Chicago, IL; Richard A. Arnold, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Susan R. Schwaiger, Grant & Eisenhofer, PA., New York, NY.

For CVS Pharmacy, Inc., Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): David P. Germaine, PRO HAC VICE, Vanek Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; James Almon, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; John P. Bjork, Vanek Vickers & Masini, Chicago, IL; John Daniel Radice, Radice Law Firm, PC, Beach [**6] Haven, NJ; Joseph Michael Vanek, PRO HAC VICE, Vanek, Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Linda P. Nussbaum, Nussbaum Law Group, PC, New York, NY; Mitchell H. Macknin, Sperling & Slater, P.C., Chicago, IL; Paul E. Slater, Sperling Slater & Spitz, Chicago, IL; Richard A. Arnold, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Robert N. Kaplan, Kaplan, Kilsheimer & Fox, LLP, New York, NY; Susan R. Schwaiger, Grant & Eisenhofer, PA., New York, NY.

For Bi-Lo, LLC, Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): David P. Germaine, Vanek Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Eric Bloom, Hangle Aronchick Segal Pudlin & Schiller, Harrisburg, PA; James Almon, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Linda P. Nussbaum, Nussbaum Law Group, PC, New York, NY; Maureen Smith Lawrence, PRO HAC VICE, Hangle Aronchick Segal Pudlin & Schiller, Philadelphia, PA; Paul E. Slater, Sperling Slater & Spitz,

Chicago, IL; Richard A. Arnold, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Zachary R. Davis, Hangley Aronchick Segal & Pudlin, Philadelphia, PA.

For H.E. Butt Grocery Company, Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Victoria Lee Smith, LEAD ATTORNEY, Stinson, Morrison, Hecker, LLP, Kansas City, MO; Brian K. O'Bleness, Stinson [**7] Morrison Hecker LLP, Kansas City, MO; David P. Germaine, Vanek Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Douglas H. Patton, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Linda P. Nussbaum, Nussbaum Law Group, PC, New York, NY; Paul E. Slater, Sperling Slater & Spitz, Chicago, IL; Richard A. Arnold, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For The Kroger Co., Safeway Inc., Ahold U.S.A. Inc., Albertson's LLC, Hy-Vee, Inc., Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): David P. Germaine, Vanek Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Douglas H. Patton, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Kenny Nachwalter, Miami, FL; Paul E. Slater, Sperling Slater & Spitz, Chicago, IL; Richard A. Arnold, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company Inc., Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): David P. Germaine, Vanek Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Kenny Nachwalter, Miami, FL; Paul E. Slater, Sperling Slater & Spitz, Chicago, IL; Richard A. Arnold, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny [**8] Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Treehouse, Inc., Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Brian G. Weber, Johns, Flaherty & Collins, S.C., La Crosse, WI; Jason S. Kilene, PRO HAC VICE, Gustafson Gluek PLLC, Minneapolis, MN; Joseph G. Veenstra, Johns, Flaherty & Collins, S.C., La Crosse, WI.

For IL Forno, Inc., Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Gary B. Friedman, LEAD ATTORNEY, Friedman Law Group LLP, New York, NY; Mark Reinhardt, LEAD ATTORNEY, Reinhardt Wendorf & Blanchfield, St. Paul, MN; R. Alexander Saveri, Saveri & Saveri, Inc., San Francisco, CA; Robert Winslow Cohen, Robert W Cohen, APC Law Offices, Los Angeles, CA.

For National Supermarkets Association, Inc., on behalf of its membership, and all other similarly situated persons, Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Gary B. Friedman, Friedman Law Group LLP, New York, NY; Noah Shube, New York, NY.

For Plaintiffs, All Class Plaintiffs, Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Bernard Persky, Labaton Sucharow LLP, New York, NY; David P. Germaine, PRO HAC VICE, Vanek Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Jason S. Kilene, PRO HAC VICE, Gustafson Gluek PLLC, Minneapolis, MN; Rachel Kopp, Spector Roseman Kodroff & Willis PC, Philadelphia, PA; Steven [**9] J. Greenfogel, Lite DePalma Greenberg LLC, Philadelphia, PA.

For The Marcus Corporation, Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Mark Reinhardt, LEAD ATTORNEY, Reinhardt Wendorf & Blanchfield, St. Paul, MN; Christopher William Hellmich, PRO HAC VICE, Hellmich Law Offices, Costa Mesa, CA; Dean Martin Solomon, Levitt & Kaizer, New York, NY; Gary B. Friedman, Friedman Law Group LLP, New York, NY; Joe R. Whatley, Jr., Whatley Drake & Kallas LLC, New York, NY; Read K. McCaffrey, The Law Offices of Marc Seldin Rosen, Baltimore, MD; Richard P. Rouco, Quinn Connor Weaver Davies & Rouco, Birmingham, AL.

Bill McCauley, Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se.

Read McCaffrey, Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se.

For Hillary Jaynes, Anthony Oliver, Bernadette Martin, Bryan Huey, James Eaton, Paul Kashishian, Gianna Valdes, Chad Tintrow, Matthew Moriarty, Shawn O'Keefe, Francisco Robleto, Jr., Michael Thomas Reid, Plaintiffs (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Joseph J. Tabacco, Jr., LEAD ATTORNEY, Berman DeValerio, San Francisco, CA.

For Andrew Amend, Igor Gelman, Zachary Draper, Plaintiffs (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Kim Elaine Miller, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kahn Gauthier Swick, LLC, New York, NY; Melinda Ann Nicholson, [**10] LEAD ATTORNEY, Kahn Swick & Foti, LLC, Madisonville, LA.

For Plymouth Oil Corp., Plaintiff (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Kristen Ward, PRO HAC VICE; Scott Allan Martin, Hausfeld LLP, New York, NY.

For American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc, American Express Company, Defendants (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Peter T. Barbur, LEAD ATTORNEY, Cravath Swaine Moore LLP, NY, NY; Alanna Rutherford, Eric Brenner, Philip M. Bowman, Philip C. Korologos, Boies, Schiller & Flexner LLP, New York, NY; Athena N. Cheng, Elizabeth L. Grayer, Kevin J Orsini, Cravath, Swaine & Moore LLP, New York, NY; Damien Jerome Marshall, Boies, Schiller & Flexner, LLP(NYC), New York, NY; Daniel Ryan, Hinshaw & Culbertson LLP, Chicago, IL; David John Hanus, Hinshaw & Culbertson, LLP, Milwaukee, WI; Donald L. Flexner, PRO HAC VICE, Boies, Schiller & Flexner LLP, New York, NY; Evan R. Chesler, Cravath, Swaine & Moore, New York, NY; John Francis LaSalle, Boies Schiller & Flexner LLP, New York, NY; Matthew S. Tripolitsiotis, Boies Schiller & Flexner LLP, Armonk, NY; Robert M. Cooper, Boies, Schiller & Flexner LLP, Washington, DC; Tamara Rubb, PRO HAC VICE, Cravath, Swaine & Moore LLP, New York, NY; William T. Thomas, [**11] Boies Schiller & Flexner, Fort Lauderdale, FL.

For Susan Burdette, Defendant (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Kim Elaine Miller, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kahn Gauthier Swick, LLC, New York, NY; Melinda Ann Nicholson, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kahn Swick & Foti, LLC, Madisonville, LA.

For Government Plaintiffs in 10-cv-4496, Interested Party (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Anne E. Schneider, Attorney General of Missouri, Jefferson City, MO; Mark Hamer, Department of Justice, Washington, DC.

For Target Corporation, Staples, Inc., The Bon-Ton Stores, Inc., Interested Parties (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Alycia Nadine Broz, Michael J. Canter, Robert N. Webner, Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP, Columbus, OH; Gregory Alan Clarick, Clarick Gueron Reisbaum LLP, New York, NY.

For Willkie Farr & Gallagher LLP, Interested Party (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Robert J. Jossen, LEAD ATTORNEY, Dechert LLP, The Chrysler Building, New York, NY.

For Gary Friedman, Interested Party (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Samuel Issacharoff, Samuel Issacharoff, Esq., New York, NY; Theresa Trzaskoma, Brune & Richard LLP, New York, NY.

For DFS Services LLC, Discover Home Loans, Inc., Discover Bank, Interested Parties (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Jennifer M. Selendy, LEAD [**12] ATTORNEY, Kirkland & Ellis, New York, NY.

For Squire Patton Boggs (US) LLP, Interested Party (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Mitchell Rand Berger, LEAD ATTORNEY, Squire Patton Boggs (US) LLP, Washington, DC; Thomas Michael Guiffre, LEAD ATTORNEY, Patton Boggs LLP, Washington, DC.

For Hausfeld, LLP, Interested Party (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Michael D. Hausfeld, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Hausfeld LLP, Washington, DC; Scott Allan Martin, LEAD ATTORNEY, Hausfeld LLP, New York, NY.

For Prof. Myriam Gilles, Interested Party (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Noah Shube, New York, NY.

For Circuit City Liquidating Trust, the RSH Liquidating Trust, Holiday Companies, Gander Mountain Company, Commonwealth Hotels, Inc., Intervenors (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): K. Craig Wildfang, Robins Kaplan L.L.P., Minneapolis, MN; Ryan W. Marth, Robins Kaplan LLP, Minneapolis, MN; Thomas J. Undlin, Robins Kaplan, L.L.P., Minneapolis, MN.

For Keila Ravelo, Intervenor (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Lawrence S. Lustberg, LEAD ATTORNEY, Gibbons, P.C., Newark, NJ; Jake F. Goodman, Gibbons P.C., Newark, NJ.

For 7-Eleven, Inc., Academy, Ltd., Affiliated Foods Midwest Cooperative, Aldo US Inc., American Eagle Outfitters, Inc., Barnes & Noble, [**13] Inc., Barnes & Noble College Booksellers, LLC, Bealls, Inc., Best Buy Stores, L.P., Boscovs, Inc., Brookshire Grocery Company, Buc-ees Ltd., The Buckle, Inc., Dillards, Inc., Coborns Incorporated, DAstogino Supermarkets, Inc., Drury Hotels Company, LLC, Euromarket Designs, Inc., Meadowbrook, L.L.C., Express, LLC, HMSHost Corporation, Ikea North America Services, LLC, Lowes Companies, Inc., Martins Super Markets, Inc., National Grocers Association, Petsmart, Inc., Recreational Equipment, Inc., Republic Services, Inc., Urban Outfitters, Inc., Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., Whole Foods Market Group, Inc., Whole Foods Market Rocky Mountain/Southwest, L.P., Whole Foods Market California, Inc., Mrs. Goochs Natural Food Markets, Inc., Whole Food Company, Whole Foods Market Pacific Northwest, Inc., WFM-WO, Inc., WFM Northern Nevada, Inc., WFM Hawaii, Inc., WFM Southern Nevada, Inc., Objectors (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Adam Owen Glist, David Alan Scupp, Gary J. Malone, Jeffrey Isaac Shinder, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY.

361 F. Supp. 3d 324, *324 [**14] 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6876, **13

For Macy's Inc., Kohl's Corporation, The TJX Companies, Inc., J.C. Penney Corporation, Inc., Office Depot, Inc., L Brands, Inc., Big Lots Stores, Inc., PNS Stores, Inc., C.S. [**14] Ross Company, Closeout Distribution, Inc., Acena Retail Group, Inc., Abercrombie & Fitch Co., OfficeMax Incorporated, Saks Incorporated, Chico's FAS, Inc., Luxottica U.S. Holdings Corp., American Signature, Inc., National Retail Federation, Objectors (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Alycia Nadine Broz, Michael J. Canter, Robert N. Webner, Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP, Columbus, OH; Gregory Alan Clarick, Clarick Gueron Reisbaum LLP, New York, NY.

Kevin S. Scheunemann, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Kewaskum, WI.

For Home Depot U.S.A., Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Alison Berkowitz Prout, PRO HAC VICE, Bondurant Mixson & Elmore, LLP, Atlanta, GA; Frank M. Lowrey, PRO HAC VICE, Bondurant Mixson & Elmore, LLP, Atlanta, GA.

For The Buckeye Institute for Public Policy Solutions, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Adam E. Schulman, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Competitive Enterprise Institute, Center for Class Action Fairness, Washington, DC.

For Brenda Howell, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Denise H. Gibbon, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Attorney at Law, New York, NY.

For Blue Cross Blue Shield entities, WellPoint, Inc., Objectors (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Adam P. Feinberg, [**15] Anthony F. Shelley, LEAD ATTORNEY, Miller & Chevalier Chartered, Washington, DC.

For Unlimited Vacations and Cruises, Inc., Lasko Enterprises, Inc., Annamarie Falvo, Objectors (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): John Jacob Pentz, III, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, John J. Pentz, Esq., Sudbury, MA.

For Alaska Airlines, Inc., Southwest Airlines, Inc., Newegg, Inc., AirTran Airways, Inc., DSW Inc., Objectors (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): David P. Germaine, Vanek Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Jason A. Zweig, Hagens Berman Sobol Shapiro LLP, New York, NY; Joseph Michael Vanek, Vanek, Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Paul E. Slater, Sperling Slater & Spitz, Chicago, IL.

For Restoration Hardware, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Joe Vecchione Demarco, DeVore & DeMarco LLP, New York, NY.

For Lord & Taylor Acquisitions, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Gregory Alan Clarick, LEAD ATTORNEY, Clarick Gueron Reisbaum LLP, New York, NY; Alycia Nadine Broz, Michael J. Canter, Robert N. Webner, Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP, Columbus, OH.

For United States of America, United States of America, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Gregg I. Malawer, Department of Justice, Antitrust Division, Washington, [**16] DC.

For Amazon.com, Inc., Ashley Furniture Industries Inc., Costco Wholesale Corp., Footlocker, Inc., The Gap, Inc., Marathon Petroleum Company LP, Michaels Stores, Inc., National Association of Convenience Stores, Panda Restaurant Group, Inc., Panera, LLC, RaceTrac Petroleum, Inc., Retail Industry Leaders Association, Roundy's Supermarkets, Inc., Sears Holdings Corporation, Speedway LLC, Starbucks Corporation, Stein Mart, Inc., The Wet Seal, Inc., YUM! Brands, Inc., Mills Motor, Inc., Mills Auto Enterprises, Inc., Willmar Motors, L.L.C., Mills Auto Center, Inc., Fleet and Farm of Alexandria, Inc., Fleet Wholesale Supply of Fergus Falls, Inc., Fleet and Farm of Green Bay, Inc., Fleet and Farm of Menomonie, Inc., Mills Fleet Farm Inc., Fleet and Farm of Manitowoc, Inc., Fleet and Farm of Plymouth, Inc., Fleet and Farm Supply Co. of West Bend, Inc., Fleet and Farm of Waupaca, Inc., Mills E-Commerce Enterprises, Inc., Brainerd Lively Auto, L.L.C., Objectors (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Jeffrey Isaac Shinder, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY.

Assistech Special Needs, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Tucson, AZ.

Les Petits Bisous! LLC, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Havre [**17] de Grace, MD.

Bailey H. Squier Associates, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Burleson, TX.

The Crow Hill Company, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Highland, NY.

Sales Growth Specialists, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Long Lake, MN.

361 F. Supp. 3d 324, *324 (2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6876, **17

Sports Coverage, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Dallas, TX.

SIGMAPAC, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se.

The Fuel Foundation, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se.

Ports Petroleum Company Inc., doing business as Fuel Mart, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Wooster, OH.

Brooks Brothers Group, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, New York, NY.

rue21, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Warrendale, PA.

The Estee Lauder Companies, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, New York, NY.

New Vista, LLC, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, North Little Rock, AR.

SIGMA, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se.

Diamond State Oil, LLC, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, North Little Rock, AR.

Coulson Oil Company, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, North Little Rock, AR.

New Neptune, LLC, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, North Little Rock, AR.

Cumberland [**18] Farms, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Framingham, MA.

Gulf Oil Limited Partnership, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Framingham, MA.

RR #1 TX, LLC, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, North Little Rock, AR.

Port Cities Oil, LLC, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, North Little Rock, AR.

Cracker Barrel Old Country Store, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Lebanon, TN.

Petroplus, LLC, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, North Little Rock, AR.

New Mercury, LLC, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, North Little Rock, AR.

Superstop Stores, LLC, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, North Little Rock, AR.

O'Reilly Automotive, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Springfield, MO.

AutoZone, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Memphis, TN.

Spirit Airlines, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Miramar, FL.

BlueGalaxy Digital, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Beavercreek, OH.

The Comic King, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Melrose, MA.

Dairy Queen, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Kewaskum, WI.

Hot Topic, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, City of Industry, CA.

Erich Neumann, [**19] Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Miami, FL.

Skeeter's Automotive Repair, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Santa Ana, CA.

Pacific Sunwear of California, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Anaheim, CA.

Prestigiousbullion/Coppercapowns, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Millsboro, DE.

Kathy Goodhart-Walker, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Benson, AZ.

Christopher & Banks Corporation, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Plymouth, MN.

FL Snyder and Son Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Albany, OR.

The Children's Place Retail Stores, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Secaucus, NJ.

361 F. Supp. 3d 324, *324 (2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6876, **19

Akamaru Japanese Restaurant, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Visalia, CA.

Family Express Corporation, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Valparaiso, IN.

Incredible Creations, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Buford, GA.

The Water Brewerey, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Costa Mesa, CA.

For The Water Brewerey, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER): Scott A. Kron, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kron & Card LLP, Laguna Hills, CA.

Belk, Inc., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Charlotte, NC.

Andersson [**20] Technologies LLC, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Phoenixville, PA.

NTT Corporation, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Los Angeles, CA.

Swarovski North America Limited, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Cranston, RI.

Shabakas, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Clinton, MS.

Tiffany and Company, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, New York, NY.

I.L. "Lonnie" Morris, CPA & Company, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Plano, TX.

Siringo Optometry Associates, PLLC, Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Denver, CO.

Arthur Howard, Ph.D., Objector (1:11-md-02221-NGG-RER), Pro se, Hemet, CA.

For Rite Aid Corporation, Rite Aid HDQTRS.Corp., Plaintiffs (1:08-cv-02315-NGG-RER): Steve D. Shadowen, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Hilliard&Shadowen LLP, Austin, TX; Eric Bloom, Hangley Aronchick Segal&Pudlin, Harrisburg, PA; Jason L. Reimer, PRO HAC VICE, Hangley Aronchick Segal&Pudlin, Harrisburg, PA; Linda P. Nussbaum, Nussbaum Law Group, PC, New York, NY.

For Walgreen Co, Plaintiff (1:08-cv-02315-NGG-RER): James Almon, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc., American Express Company, Defendants (1:08-cv-02315-NGG-RER): [**21] Evan R. Chesler, LEAD ATTORNEY, Cravath, Swaine&Moore, New York, NY; Philip M. Bowman, Philip C. Korologos, LEAD ATTORNEY, Eric Brenner, Boies, Schiller&Flexner LLP, New York, NY; Elizabeth L. Grayer, Kevin J Orsini, Cravath, Swaine&Moore LLP, New York, NY.

For CVS Pharmacy, Inc., Plaintiff (1:08-cv-02316-NGG-RER): Linda P. Nussbaum, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nussbaum Law Group, PC, New York, NY; Mitchell H. Macknin, LEAD ATTORNEY, Sperling&Slater, P.C., Chicago, IL; Paul E. Slater, LEAD ATTORNEY, Sperling Slater&Spitz, Chicago, IL; Robert N. Kaplan, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kaplan, Kilsheimer&Fox, LLP, New York, NY; David P. Germaine, PRO HAC VICE, Vanek Vickers&Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Joseph Michael Vanek, PRO HAC VICE, Vanek, Vickers&Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL.

For American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc., American Express Company, Defendants (1:08-cv-02316-NGG-RER): Philip M. Bowman, Philip C. Korologos, LEAD ATTORNEY, Eric Brenner, Boies, Schiller&Flexner LLP, New York, NY.

For Walgreen Co., Plaintiff (1:08-cv-02317-NGG-RER): Douglas H. Patton, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Kenny Nachwalter, LEAD ATTORNEY, Miami, FL; William Jay Blechman, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, [**22] Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; James Almon, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Linda P. Nussbaum, Nussbaum Law Group, PC, New York, NY; Richard A. Arnold, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc., American Express Company, Defendants (1:08-cv-02317-NGG-RER): Philip M. Bowman, Philip C. Korologos, LEAD ATTORNEY, Eric Brenner, Boies, Schiller&Flexner LLP, New York, NY.

For Bi-Lo, LLC, Plaintiff (1:08-cv-02380-NGG-RER): Steve D. Shadowen, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Hilliard&Shadowen LLP, Austin, TX; Eric Bloom, Hangley Aronchick Segal&Pudlin, Harrisburg, PA; Jason L.

Reimer, PRO HAC VICE, Hangley Aronchick Segal&Pudlin, Harrisburg, PA; Linda P. Nussbaum, Nussbaum Law Group, PC, New York, NY.

For American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc., American Express Company, Defendants (1:08-cv-02380-NGG-RER): Philip M. Bowman, LEAD ATTORNEY, Eric Brenner, Boies, Schiller&Flexner LLP, New York, NY; Philip C. Korologos, LEAD ATTORNEY, Boies, Schiller&Flexner LLP, New York, NY.

For H.E. Butt Grocery Company, Plaintiff (1:08-cv-02406-NGG-RER): Douglas H. Patton, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; William [**23] Jay Blechman, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Brian K. O'Bleness, Stinson Morrison Hecker LLP, Kansas City, MO; David E. Everson, PRO HAC VICE, Stinson Morrison Hecker LLP, Kansas City, MO; James Almon, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Linda P. Nussbaum, Nussbaum Law Group, PC, New York, NY; Richard A. Arnold, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc., American Express Company, Defendants (1:08-cv-02406-NGG-RER): Philip M. Bowman, Philip C. Korologos, LEAD ATTORNEY, Eric Brenner, Boies, Schiller&Flexner LLP, New York, NY.

For The Kroger Co., Safeway Inc., Ahold U.S.A., Inc., Albertson's LLC, Hy-Vee, Inc., The Great Atlantic&Pacific Tea Company, Inc., Plaintiffs (2:11-cv-00337-NGG-RER): Douglas H. Patton, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; James Almon, Richard A. Arnold, William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Kenny Nachwalter, Miami, FL.

For American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc., American Express Company, Defendants (2:11-cv-00337-NGG-RER): Donald L. Flexner, Eric Brenner, Boies, Schiller&Flexner LLP, New York, NY.

For Meijer, Inc., Publix [**24] Super Markets, Inc., Raley's, Supervalu Inc., Plaintiffs (2:11-cv-00338-NGG-RER): David P. Germaine, PRO HAC VICE, Vanek Vickers&Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Joseph Michael Vanek, PRO HAC VICE, Vanek, Vickers&Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Linda P. Nussbaum, Nussbaum Law Group, PC, New York, NY; Mitchell H. Macknin, Sperling&Slater, P.C., Chicago, IL; Paul E. Slater, Sperling Slater&Spitz, Chicago, IL; Susan R. Schwaiger, Grant&Eisenhofer, PA, New York, NY.

For American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc., American Express Company, Defendants (2:11-cv-00338-NGG-RER): Eric Brenner, Boies, Schiller&Flexner LLP, New York, NY.

Judges: NICHOLAS G. GARAUFIS, United States District Judge.

Opinion by: NICHOLAS G. GARAUFIS

Opinion

---

[*330] MEMORANDUM & ORDER

NICHOLAS G. GARAUFIS, United States District Judge.

In this set of consolidated antitrust actions (the "MP Actions"), the Merchant Plaintiffs (the "MPs")<sup>1</sup> challenge under Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1-2, the contracts that they have entered into with Defendants American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc. and American Express Company (together, "Amex"). (See Am. Compl. (Dkt. 814).) Specifically, the MPs challenge Amex's anti-steering rules, referred to as the [**25] Non-Discrimination Provisions ("NDPs"), which are contained in merchant agreements entered into between Amex and each MP. The MPs seek an order enjoining Amex from enforcing the NDPs, as well as treble damages for the injuries the MPs allege they have sustained [*331] on account of the NDPs. (See id. ¶ 11.)

---

<sup>1</sup>The MPs are Ahold U.S.A., Inc.; Albertson's LLC; BI—LO, LLC; CVS Pharmacy, Inc.; The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, Inc.; H.E. Butt Grocery Co.; Hy-Vee, Inc.; The Kroger Co.; Meijer, Inc.; Publix Super Markets, Inc.; Raley's Inc.; Rite Aid Corporation; Rite Aid HDQTRS Corp.; Safeway Inc.; Supervalu Inc.; and Walgreen Co.

Pending before the court is Amex's motion seeking summary judgment as to the MPs' allegations of a one-sided market and the MPs' allegations of an Amex-only market. (See Notice of Mot. to Dismiss (Dkt. 835).) For the following reasons, Amex's motion is GRANTED.

I. BACKGROUND

The facts of this case—the procedural history, the restraints on competition, the workings of the credit-card market in general and Amex's platform in particular, etc. have been discussed at great length in this court's previous opinions in this matter and in the related case brought by the federal government. See In re Am. Exp. Anti-Steering Rules Antitrust Litig. (In re Amex), No. 11-MD-2221 (NGG), 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3332, 2016 WL 748089, at *1-4 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 7, 2016); United States v. Am. Exp. Co. (U.S. v. Amex), 88 F. Supp. 3d 143, 149-67 (E.D.N.Y. 2015), rev'd, 838 F.3d 179 (2d Cir. 2016), aff'd sub nom. Ohio v. Am. Exp. Co. (Ohio), 138 S. Ct. 2274, 201 L. Ed. 2d 678 (2018). The court repeats certain facts and aspects of the procedural history here as necessary to introduce and to decide the instant motion.

A. Factual Overview

The MPs are retail merchants that have [**26] each entered into an American Express Card Acceptance Agreement (the "Agreement") with Amex. (Am. Compl. ¶ 1.) In those Agreements, "and in virtually every other such Agreement that Amex has entered into with a merchant," Amex has included the NDPs, which prevent the merchant "from differentially pricing the use of payment cards, stating a preference for any form of payment, or allowing the retail customer to use different payment cards on differing terms or conditions established by the merchant." (Id.; see id. ¶¶ 2-3 (describing the NDPs).) The MPs claim that these restraints are anticompetitive "because they nullify the operation of the price mechanism, impede competition among credit card networks and suppress output." (Id. ¶ 4; see id. ¶¶ 4-6.) As a result, the MPs allege, "merchant fees and the net two-sided transaction price for Amex and other credit card networks are higher than the competitive level and higher than they otherwise would be in the absence of Amex's anticompetitive restraints [and] the number of credit card transactions is lower than it otherwise would be in the absence of the Amex restraints." (Id. ¶ 7.)

The MPs allege that the NDPs "have had an actual adverse [**27] effect on competition as a whole . . . in that they have reduced output, quality and consumer choice and increased price and barriers to entry in each of the relevant markets and/or submarkets." (Id. ¶ 53.) The MPs seek to proceed to trial with respect to four formulations of the relevant market:

1. a one-sided, all-general purpose credit card ("GPCC") market;
2. a one-sided, Amex-only market;
3. a two-sided, all-GPCC market; and
4. a two-sided, Amex-only market.

(Id. ¶ 11, see id. ¶¶ 56-57, 64.) The MPs assert claims under each cause of action with respect to all four formulations of the relevant market and submarket. (See id. ¶¶ 68-85.)

B. Procedural History

In 2008, certain of the MPs brought suit against Amex in this court. See In re Amex, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3332, 2016 WL 748089, at *2 & n.3. As stated above, the MPs allege that the anti-steering rules Amex imposes on merchants that participate in its network are an anticompetitive restraint on trade in violation of the Sherman Act. See Rite Aid Corp. v. Am. Exp. Travel Related Servs. Co., 708 F. Supp. 2d 257, 261-62 (E.D.N.Y. 2010). After [*332] answering each MP's complaint, Amex moved for judgment on the pleadings, arguing that all of the MPs' claims were barred by the Sherman Act's four-year statute of limitations. On March 3, 2010, the court denied the motion. Id. at 264; see *In re Amex, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3332, 2016 WL 748089, at *2*.

Meanwhile, in October [**28] 2010, the Department of Justice and the attorneys general of eighteen states filed suit against Amex, MasterCard, and Visa (the "Government Action").<sup>2</sup> The MP Actions and the Government Action proceeded to coordinated discovery. In late 2013, Amex moved for summary judgment in both the Government Action and the MP Actions, and moved to consolidate the actions for trial. The court denied Amex's motion for summary judgment in the Government Action in May 2014. See United States v. Am. Exp. Co., 21 F. Supp. 3d 187 (E.D.N.Y. 2014). Separately, the court denied Amex's motion to consolidate the actions for the purpose of trial (Feb. 11, 2014, Order (Dkt. 335)), and stayed the MP Actions during the pendency of a motion for final settlement approval in consolidated class actions that comprise part of the MDL and in which the MPs are putative class members (see Apr. 9, 2014, Order). The court reserved judgment on Amex's motion for summary judgment in the MP Actions.

The Government Action proceeded to a bench trial during the summer of 2014. On February 19, 2015, the court found by a preponderance of the evidence that the specific NDPs challenged by the Government violate Section 1 of the Sherman Act. After receiving additional briefing from the parties to the Government [**29] Action, as well as other interested parties including the MPs, the court issued a permanent injunction on April 30, 2015. United States v. Am. Exp. Co., No. 10-CV-4496 (NGG), 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 56945, 2015 WL 1966352 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 30, 2015), rev'd, 838 F.3d 179, aff'd sub nom. Ohio, 138 S. Ct. 2274, 201 L. Ed. 2d 678. The court denied Amex's motion to stay the permanent injunction pending appeal. United States v. Am. Exp. Co., No. 10-CV-4496 (NGG), 2015 WL 13735045 (E.D.N.Y. May 19, 2015). Amex then filed a notice of appeal and sought a stay pending appeal from the Second Circuit. Although a three-judge panel of the Second Circuit initially denied Amex's motion to stay (Order of USCA (Dkt. 687 in No. 10-CV-4496)), the Second Circuit ultimately entered a temporary stay of the permanent injunction and a temporary stay of the Government Action in this court (Order of USCA (Dkt. 697 in No. 10-CV-4496)).

On September 26, 2016, the Second Circuit reversed this court's judgment in the Government Action, holding that the court erred in excluding the market for cardholders from its definition of the relevant market. See U.S. v. Amex, 838 F.3d at 197, 206-07. Because the Second Circuit found that the Government could not, on the facts of the case, prove net harm to both cardholders and merchants, it directed this court to enter judgment in favor of Amex. Id. at 207. Certain state plaintiffs then sought [**30] certiorari, which the Supreme Court granted.<sup>3</sup> Ohio v. Am. Exp. Co., 138 S. Ct. 355, 199 L. Ed. 2d 261 (Mem) (2017). On June 25, 2018, the Supreme Court affirmed the Second Circuit, [*333] holding that this court should have included both sides of the Amex platform when defining the relevant market. Ohio, 138 S. Ct. at 2285-86.

Following the Supreme Court's affirmation of the dismissal of the Government Action, matters resumed in the MP Actions. The court granted the MPs leave to file an amended complaint—intended to address some of the deficiencies with the Government Action raised by the Court in Ohio—and set a briefing schedule on various anticipated motions for summary judgment by Amex. (July 10, 2018, Order (Dkt. 811).) The MPs filed the amended complaint on July 27, 2018. (Am. Compl.) Under the original briefing schedule set by the court, Amex was to serve its motions for summary judgment—one as to the allegations of one-sided and Amex-only markets, and one "additional" motion as to the allegation of a two-sided market that includes all GPCCs—on the Merchant Plaintiffs by no later than August 17, 2018. (See July 10, 2018, Order.) On August 6, 2018, Amex requested that it "be given leave to file a summary judgment motion directed to the Merchant Plaintiffs' allegations [**31] regarding competitive harm in a two-sided market after the new discovery is complete." (Aug. 6, 2018, Letter (Dkt. 815) at 2.)

---

<sup>2</sup> Visa and MasterCard entered into consent decrees with the Government on the same day that the Government Action was initiated; only Amex remained as a defendant. See *In re Amex, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3332, 2016 WL 748089, at *2 n.5*.

<sup>3</sup> In response to the grant of certiorari, this court stayed all further proceedings in the MP Actions. (Oct. 24, 2017, Order.) The court directed the parties, by no later than 14 days after entry of a decision in Ohio, to "confer and submit a joint letter proposing a schedule for additional motions, if any, and setting forth the parties' availability for trial." (Id.)

The court granted Amex's request and set the briefing schedule on the motion for summary judgment as to the Merchant Plaintiffs' claims on the two-sided, all-GPCC market to take place following the completion of additional fact discovery. (See Aug. 6, 2018, Min. Entry; Aug. 17, 2018, Order.)

On August 17, 2018, Amex served on the Merchant Plaintiffs a motion to dismiss or, in the alternative, for summary judgment. (Amex Mem. in Supp. of Mot. to Dismiss (Dkt. 828 at ECF p.6).) Amex did not answer the amended complaint. The MPs subsequently sought an order from this court compelling Amex to file its answer and defenses to the amended complaint. (Mot. to Compel (Dkt. 828 at ECF p.1).) On September 26, 2018, the court held that, because Amex did not "seek to dismiss any 'claims' in the amended complaint," its motion could not be considered a motion to dismiss, but rather one for summary judgment. In re Am. Exp. Anti-Steering Rules Antitrust Litig. (In re Amex), *F. Supp. , 343 F. Supp. 3d 94, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 165924, 2018 WL 4623052, at *4-5, *7 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 26, 2018)*. The court ordered Amex to answer the amended complaint, *2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 165924, [WL] at *7*, which Amex did on October 10, 2018 (Answer (Dkt. 834)). The court also provisionally terminated the pending [**32] briefing schedule on the motion for summary judgment, on the assumption that it would be more efficient to deal with Amex's anticipated summary-judgment motion in one fell swoop after the completion of additional fact discovery. See *In re Amex, F. Supp. 3d , 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 165924, 2018 WL 4623052, at *7*. On October 1, 2018, however, Amex informed the court that it had "decided that it [would] not file a motion for summary judgment directed to Plaintiffs' two-sided market allegations." (Oct. 1, 2018, Amex Letter (Dkt. 832).) Accordingly, Amex's motion seeking summary judgment as to the MPs' one-sided and Amex-only relevant market allegations was fully briefed on October 12, 2018. (Notice of Mot.; Amex Mem. in Supp. of Mot. for Summ. J. ("Mem.") (Dkt. 836); MPs Opp'n to Mot. for Summ. J. ("Opp'n") (Dkt. 841-1); Amex Reply in Supp. of Mot. for Summ. J. ("Reply") (Dkt. 843-1).)

II. LEGAL STANDARD

A court must grant summary judgment when "the movant shows that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a). "A 'material' fact is one capable of influencing the case's outcome under governing substantive law, and a 'genuine' dispute is one as to which the evidence [*334] would permit a reasonable juror [**33] to find for the party opposing the motion." Figueroa v. Mazza, 825 F.3d 89, 98 (2d Cir. 2016) (citing Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986)). "The movant may discharge this burden by showing that the nonmoving party has 'fail[ed] to make a showing sufficient to establish the existence of an element essential to that party's case, and on which that party will bear the burden of proof at trial.'" Lantheus Med. Imaging, Inc. v. Zurich Am. Ins. Co., 255 F. Supp. 3d 443, 451 (S.D.N.Y. 2015) (alteration in original) (quoting Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1986)). "The mere existence of a scintilla of evidence' in support of the non-movant will be insufficient to defeat a summary judgment motion." Transflo Terminal Servs., Inc. v. Brooklyn Res. Recovery, Inc., 248 F. Supp. 3d 397, 399 (E.D.N.Y. 2017) (quoting Anderson, 477 U.S. at 252).

"In determining whether an issue is genuine, '[t]he inferences to be drawn from the underlying affidavits, exhibits, interrogatory answers, and depositions must be viewed in the light most favorable to the party opposing the motion.' SCW W. LLC v. Westport Ins. Corp., 856 F. Supp. 2d 514, 521 (E.D.N.Y. 2012) (alteration in original) (quoting Cronin v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 46 F.3d 196, 202 (2d Cir. 1995)). "[T]he judge's function is not . . . to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial." Redd v. N.Y. Div. of Parole, 678 F.3d 166, 173-74 (2d Cir. 2012) (quoting Anderson, 477 U.S. at 249). However, "[a] party may not rely on mere speculation or conjecture as to the true nature of the facts to overcome a motion for summary judgment," and "[m]ere conclusory allegations or denials . . . cannot by themselves create a genuine issue of material fact where [**34] none would otherwise exist." Hicks v. Baines, 593 F.3d 159, 166 (2d Cir. 2010) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Finally, it bears noting that "[s]ummary judgment is not an all-or nothing proposition." In re Methyl Tertiary Butyl Ether Prods. Liab. Litig., 824 F. Supp. 2d 524, 533 (S.D.N.Y. 2011). A party may move pursuant to Rule 56(a) for summary judgment as to an entire claim or defense, as well as "part of a claim or defense." Id. So, while the court has previously held that the MPs' alternative formulations of the relevant market (and submarket) are not, by themselves, independent claims subject to a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, see In re Amex, 88 F. Supp. 3d, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 165924, 2018 WL 4623052, at *7, it is proper for the court to adjudicate the existence of a genuine issue for trial as to each relevant market on a motion for summary judgment.

III. DISCUSSION

In order for the MPs' antitrust claims against Amex to succeed, they must define a relevant market in which the allegedly uncompetitive behavior exhibited by Amex restrained trade. U.S. v. Amex, 88 F. Supp. 3d at 170 ("In order to determine whether Amex's NDPs violate the Sherman Act, the court must first determine the contours of the relevant market and thereby define an appropriate context for the remainder of its analysis."); see Ohio, 138 S. Ct. at 2285 & n.7 (holding that market definition is required when analyzing a vertical restraint); In re Aluminum Warehousing Antitrust Litig., 95 F. Supp. 3d 419, 448 (S.D.N.Y. 2015); see also Geneva Pharms. Tech. Corp. v. Barr Labs., Inc., 386 F.3d 485, 506-07 (2d Cir. 2004) ("Under the rule of reason, the plaintiffs [**35] bear an initial burden to demonstrate the defendants' challenged behavior had an actual adverse effect on competition as a whole in the [*335] relevant market." (citation and internal quotation marks omitted)).

For antitrust purposes, a relevant market has two components: a "product market" and a "geographic market." See Concord Assocs. v. Entm't Props. Tr., 817 F.3d 46, 52 (2d Cir. 2016). Here, as in the Government Action, all "parties have agreed that the relevant geographic market is the Territorial United States," U.S. v. Amex, 88 F. Supp. 3d at 170, so only the relevant product market is at issue. "Under the federal antitrust laws, a product market is 'composed of products that have reasonable interchangeability' from the perspective of the relevant consumer with the product sold by the defendant firm." Id. (quoting United States v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 351 U.S. 377, 404, 76 S. Ct. 994, 100 L. Ed. 1264 (1956)); see Concord Assocs., 817 F.3d at 52 ("A relevant product market consists of products that have reasonable interchangeability for the purposes for which they are produced—price, use and qualities considered." (citation and internal quotation marks omitted)). If a product is "interchangeable," consumers retain the ability to "switch to a substitute," thus "restrain[ing] a firm's ability to raise prices above the competitive level." City of New York v. Grp. Health Inc., 649 F.3d 151, 155 (2d Cir. 2011) (quoting Geneva Pharms., 386 F.3d at 496).

"[M]arket definition is a deeply fact-intensive inquiry." Chapman v. N.Y. State Div. for Youth, 546 F.3d 230, 238 (2d Cir. 2008) (quoting [**36] Todd v. Exxon Corp., 275 F.3d 191, 199 (2d Cir. 2008)). Still, though, "a plaintiff whose proposed relevant market or allegation of market power is challenged by a motion for summary judgment must come forward with admissible evidence sufficient to raise a genuine issue of fact for trial as to the market definition or the existence of market power." Emigra Grp. v. Fragomen, Del Rey, Bernsen & Loewy, 612 F. Supp. 2d 330, 347 (S.D.N.Y. 2009); Diseños Artísticos E Industriales, S.A. v. Work, 714 F. Supp. 46, 49 (E.D.N.Y. 1989) (stating that summary judgment should be granted where a plaintiff's definition of the relevant market "verges on legal insufficiency and is unsupported by any probative or credible evidence"); cf. City of New York v. Grp. Health Inc., No. 06-CV-13122 (RJS), 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 60196, 2010 WL 2132246, *5 (S.D.N.Y. May 11, 2010) (dismissing antitrust claim because the plaintiff's "market definition [was] inadequate as a matter of law"), aff'd, 649 F.3d 151.

Amex's motion for summary judgment requires the court to ask whether three of the MP's four proposed market definitions can succeed as a matter of law. While Amex has not moved for summary judgment as to the MPs' two-sided, all-GPCC market definition, the other three definitions—one-sided, Amex-only; one-sided, all-GPCC; and two-sided, Amex-only—remain subject to this motion. The court agrees with Amex that these three market definitions cannot succeed as a matter of law, so the court GRANTS Amex's motion for summary judgment. [**37]

A. One-Sided Market Allegations

1. One-Versus Two-Sided Markets

Because Amex moves for summary judgment on the grounds that the MPs' one-sided market allegations are faulty as a matter of law, the court begins its analysis by defining "one-sided" and "two-sided" platforms and examining how the Supreme Court construed these terms in Ohio.

"[A] two-sided platform offers different products or services to two different groups who both depend on the platform to intermediate between them." Ohio, 138 S. Ct. at 2280; see also id. at 2298 (Breyer, J., dissenting) ("[T]here are four relevant features of [two-sided platforms] on the majority's account: they (1) offer [*336] different products or services, (2) to different groups of customers, (3) whom the 'platform' connects, (4) in simultaneous transactions."). As the Court has stated, a credit-card network is an example of a two-sided platform because of the simultaneous transactions it facilitates between cardholders and merchants:

For cardholders, the network extends them credit, which allows them to make purchases without cash and to defer payment until later. . . . For merchants, the network allows them to avoid the cost of processing transactions and offers them quick, guaranteed payment. [**38]

Id. at 2280 (majority op.); see U.S. v. Amex, 838 F.3d at 185-86.

While "it is not always necessary to consider both sides of a two-sided platform" when defining the relevant market for antitrust purposes, courts must consider both sides of the platform when it exhibits two features typical of two-sided platforms. See Ohio, 138 S. Ct. at 2286. First, the court must ask if the platform exhibits "what economists call 'indirect network effects.'" Id. at 2280 (citation omitted). As this court has previously recognized, "[i]ndirect network effects exist when the number of agents or the quantity of services bought on one side of a two-sided platform affects the value that an agent on the other side of the platform can realize." U.S. v. Amex, 88 F. Supp. 3d at 155; see Ohio, 138 S. Ct. at 2280 ("Indirect network effects exist where the value of the two-sided platform to one group of participants depends on how many members of a different group participate."). Second, the court must ask if the platform exhibits "interconnected pricing and demand." Ohio, 138 S. Ct. at 2286. That is, in certain cases, the platform must "[s]trik[e] the optimal balance of the prices charged on each side of the platform" so as to "maximize the value of [the platform's] services and to compete with their rivals." Id. at 2281.

In Ohio, the Supreme Court held that credit-card networks [**39] are two-sided platforms.<sup>4</sup> Id. at 2285. The court found that credit-card networks exhibit indirect network effects: the value of a credit card to cardholders increases when more merchants accept the card, and the card is more valuable to merchants when more cardholders use it. Id. at 2281. On the flip side, a credit-card network that raises the price on either cardholders or merchants risks entering "a feedback loop of declining demand" due to the likelihood that members of the affected side will leave the platform, thus decreasing the value to the other side and increasing the risk that members of that side will in turn leave the platform. See id. at 2281, 2285. As for interconnected pricing and demand, the Court noted that credit-card networks "often charge cardholders a lower fee than merchants because cardholders are more price sensitive." Id. at 2281. But even if the network is losing money on the cardholder side—usually because the network offers rewards, such as airline miles, as an incentive for cardholders to use the card—the network is able to remain viable "because increasing the number of cardholders increases the value of accepting the card to merchants and, thus, increases the number of merchants who accept it." Id.; [**40] see also id. at 2286 ("To optimize sales, the network must find the balance of pricing [*337] that encourages the greatest number of matches between cardholders and merchants."). The network "can then charge those merchants a fee for every transaction (typically a percentage of the purchase price)." Id. at 2281.<sup>5</sup> Taken together, these features confirm that

<sup>4</sup>The Court also noted that credit-card networks are a particular kind of two-sided platform: a transaction platform, which "suppl[ies] only one product-transactions." Ohio, 138 S. Ct. at 2286 (internal quotation marks omitted). "In the credit-card market, these transactions are jointly consumed by a cardholder, who uses the payment card to make a transaction, and a merchant, who accepts the payment card as a method of payment." Id. (internal quotation marks omitted).

<sup>5</sup>In a subsequent portion of the Ohio opinion, the Court found that the evidence does not support the Government's contention that Amex's anti-steering provisions are the cause of any increases in merchant fees. 138 S. Ct. at 2288. Instead, the Court

"courts must include both sides of the platform—merchants and cardholders—when defining the credit-card market" Id. at 2286.

2. Stare Decisis

The doctrine of stare decisis compels a district court to abide by the legal decisions of higher courts in the same jurisdiction.<sup>6</sup> See, e.g., Dobbs v. Anthem Blue Cross & Blue Shield, 600 F.3d 1275, 1279 (10th Cir. 2010) (setting forth "the general rule that a district court is bound by decisions made by its circuit court"); Dodge v. County of Orange, 282 F. Supp. 2d 41, 80 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) ("[V]ertical stare decisis provides little, if any, leeway for a district court judge to stray from Court of Appeals precedent."); Evan H. Caminker, Why Must Inferior Courts Obey Superior Court Precedents?, 46 Stan. L. Rev. 817, 818 (1994) ("[L]ongstanding doctrine dictates that a court is always bound to follow a precedent by a court 'superior' to it"); see also Hart v. Massanari, 266 F.3d 1155, 1170 (9th Cir. 2001) ("[C]aselaw on point is the law."). While courts and commentators may disagree as to whether vertical stare decisis is a constitutional command, see \*\*411 Winslow v. FERC, 587 F.3d 1133, 1135, 388 U.S. App. D.C. 375 (D.C. Cir. 2009) (quoting U.S. Const. art. III, § 1), or simply a "contingent" but "pragmatic" approach to decisionmaking, see Trammell, supra note 7, at 582-83 (citing Caminker, supra, at 867), the endurance of vertical stare decisis reflects a general and sensible belief that legal outcomes should be predictable and consistent, see Colonial Realty Corp. v. MacWilliams, 381 F. Supp. 26, 28 (S.D.N.Y. 1974) (noting "the interests of the legal system in consistency and uniformity" as "the central values" underlying the doctrine of vertical stare decisis); 18 James W. Moore, Moore's Federal Practice § 134.01[1], at 134-9 (3d ed. 2018).

Although stare decisis is, as a formal matter, concerned with fidelity to precedent, it often functions as a type of preclusion doctrine—similar to res judicata, or "law of the case." See 18B Charles Alan Wright, Arthur R. Miller & Edward H. Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure § 4478.5, at 814 (2d ed. 2002). Modern commentators have argued that there is little difference functionally between precedent and preclusion: both operate inflexibly to bind nonparties to prior decisions, and both can bind as to certain questions of law or fact. See Max Minzner, Saving Stare Decisis: Preclusion, Precedent, and Procedural Due Process, 2010 B.Y.U. L. Rev. 597, 608-11; Trammell, supra note 7, at 585-86; see \*\*421 also 18A Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure § 4449, at 335 & n.30 (3d ed. 2017) ("[I]n some special settings [a judgment] may achieve a particularly potent force that approaches preclusion under the name of stare decisis . . . ."). At the same [\[\*338\]](#) time, the argument for applying stare decisis inflexibly—that is, for a court to declare itself constrained by a higher court's prior judgment—is more persuasive where the question is one that has already been the subject of litigation "between the same parties." See 18 Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure § 4425, at 701 (3d ed. 2016).

While it is not necessary at this juncture to define the full scope of the doctrine of stare decisis, it bears emphasizing that a decision can be given stare decisis effect even when the facts of the subsequent case are dissimilar. See Haith ex rel. Accretive Health, Inc. v. Bronfman, 928 F. Supp. 2d 964, 971 (N.D. Ill. 2013) ("The reach of Supreme Court decisions are not limited to the particular facts and circumstances presented in the case being decided; lower courts must apply the reasoning of those decisions even to cases that are factually dissimilar."). The arguments for applying stare decisis as a form of preclusion may be heightened the more similar the facts, see \*\*431 Rodriguez v. City of Albuquerque, No. 07-CV-901, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 108660, 2008 WL 5978925, at \*2 \(D.N.M. Dec. 22, 2008\) (stating that vertical stare decisis "should effectively foreclose future litigation" as to cases that "all involve . . . the exact same set of facts"), but slight—or great—distinctions in factual circumstances between cases cannot save a party from being bound by a legal determination. It is thus incumbent upon a court construing a prior decision to give broad effect to the earlier case's legal principles and apply them as relevant. See Walker v. Georgia, 417 F.2d found that that the cause of increased merchant fees is "increased competition for cardholders and a corresponding marketwide adjustment in the relative price charged to merchants." Id.

---

<sup>6</sup>This form of stare decisis is commonly referred to as "vertical stare decisis," as distinguished from "horizontal stare decisis," which refers to a court's adherence to its own past decisions. See, e.g., Joseph W. Mead, Stare Decisis in the Inferior Courts of the United States, 12 Nev. L.J. 787, 788 (2012); Alan M. Trammell, Precedent and Preclusion, 93 Notre Dame L. Rev. 565, 581 (2017).

5, 8 (5th Cir. 1969) (Tuttle, J.) ("[U]nless the Supreme Court expressly limits its opinion to the facts before it, it is the principle which controls and not the specific facts upon which the principle was decided.").

3. Whether the MPs May Proceed Under a One-Sided Market Theory

Ohio's holding is clearly stated: "[C]redit-card networks are two-sided platforms." 138 S. Ct. at 2285. Despite this seemingly ironclad language, the MPs contend that the holding in Ohio is irrelevant to the instant action because market definition is a question of fact. (Opp'n at 3; see id. at 6.) Further, they submit that it would be inappropriate to apply the Ohio holding to this case given that these are different "cases based on different facts." (Id. at 3.) In response, Amex states that the Supreme Court's holding in Ohio **441 binds this court to reject the MPs' one-sided market allegations because the Supreme Court set forth a "conclusion[] of law" contrary to the MPs' legal formulation, and because "the economic activity and the basic facts are the same" between the Government Action and the MP Actions. (Reply at 3-4 & n.6.) The court agrees with Amex.

It strains credulity for the MPs to claim that this case is essentially dissimilar from the Government Action. (See Opp'n at 3-4.) As in the Government Action, the plaintiffs claim that Amex is liable under the Sherman Act for restraining trade by including the NDPs in its merchant contracts. As in the Government Action, the plaintiffs' allegations are dependent on the economic realities of the credit-card market and the unique features of how Amex operates. And as in the Government Action, the plaintiffs seek to define the "relevant market" for Sherman Act purposes at least in part by reference to Amex's interactions with merchants alone, rather than by simultaneously scrutinizing Amex's interactions with merchants and cardholders.<sup>7</sup>

[*339] The MPs argue that this case is distinguishable from the one that both the Supreme Court and the Second Circuit decided in Amex's **45 favor because the MPs "have come forward with different relevant market facts." (Opp'n at 4.) As far as the court can tell, the MPs do not argue that there is actually anything different about the facts at issue in this action. Rather, the MPs want the chance to make arguments that they claim were not properly presented in the Government Action and that would, in their estimation, result in a different legal outcome from that reached in Ohio. These arguments include: that Amex is a "mature" market, thus calling into question whether it exhibits indirect network effects (Opp'n at 9-12); and that "there is abundant evidence that Amex does not 'balance' the prices on the two sides of its platform and that those prices are not 'relative' to each other or 'interconnected'" (id. at 12-15). The MPs are first incorrect that the Supreme Court must have explicitly considered an argument in order for its opinion to be binding as to that argument.<sup>8</sup> While the Ohio opinion does not mention the arguments made by the Government and its amici as to market maturity (see Opp'n at 12), the Court still held that "two-sided transaction platforms exhibit more pronounced indirect network effects" and thus that both sides **46 of the platform must be included in the relevant-market analysis, Ohio, 138 S. Ct. at 2286-87.<sup>9</sup> Similarly, while the Ohio opinion may not

<sup>7</sup> Amex also points out that the MPs, in earlier filings in this action, admitted that "the basic facts and law in the Government [Action] and the MP Actions] are identical." (Reply at 3.)

<sup>8</sup> This court's construction of the Ohio holding does not violate the general rule that courts should not read Supreme Court opinions as "contain[ing] holdings on matters the Court did not discuss and which, presumably, the parties did not argue," Sweeney v. Westvaco Co., 926 F.2d 29, 40 (1st Cir. 1991) (Breyer, C.J.). (See also Opp'n at 12.) The relevant question in this instance is whether the Court discussed, and issued a holding on, whether Amex is a two-sided transaction platform and whether the "relevant market" for antitrust purposes contains both sides of the platform. Because the Court did so, see Ohio, 138 S. Ct. at 2286-87, the question of whether this holding incorporated the MPs' maturity theory is irrelevant.

<sup>9</sup> In support of their argument regarding market maturity, the MPs point to US Airways, Inc. v. Sabre Holdings Corp., No. 11-CV-2725 (LGS), 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40932, 2017 WL 1064709 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 21, 2017), appeal filed, No. 17-983 (2d Cir. Apr. 6, 2017). (See Opp'n at 11.) In US Airways, the district court held that the Second Circuit's opinion in U.S. v. Amex did not foreclose the US Airways jury's finding of a one-sided market based on market maturity, in part because U.S. v. Amex "[did] not address or appear to consider market maturity." 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40932, 2017 WL 1064709, at *10. But US Airways noted that the finding of a two-sided market in U.S. v. Amex occurred "in a different industry and with very different facts," id., suggesting that the Second Circuit's decision was binding on the facts of the Amex platform, which continue to be present in this case. While U.S. v. Amex and Ohio may not foreclose future antitrust plaintiffs from arguing that a supposedly two-sided market critically engage with the claim that "Amex brings merchants and cardholders together and that credit card transactions occur simultaneously on both sides of the platform" (Opp'n at 14), it is clear that the Supreme Court based its holding on this assumption, even if it was "unchallenged" (see id.). See Ohio, 138 S. Ct. at 2286 ("[T]wo-sided transaction platforms exhibit . . . interconnected pricing and demand. . . . In the credit-card market, these transactions are jointly consumed by a cardholder, who uses the payment card to make a transaction, and a merchant, who accepts the payment card as a method of payment." (internal quotation marks omitted)). The upshot of this analysis is that the MPs are wrong that Ohio "did not . . . [<sup>**340</sup>]" hold that credit card platforms"—in particular, the Amex platform—"are two-sided markets as a matter of law." (Opp'n at 6.) While this rule is still subject to case-by-case application, cf. US Airways, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40932, 2017 WL 1064709, at \*8 ("The relevant market for purposes of antitrust analysis may not be two-sided even though the defendant operates a two-sided platform."), this court may not deviate from the Court's clear [<sup>**47</sup>] application of this rule to the facts of this case.

Nor are the MPs owed an opportunity to upset the Supreme Court's holdings on this matter. As Amex properly identifies, the relevant question is not whether the MPs are precluded as a matter of collateral estoppel and res judicata from making their arguments as to market maturity and the interconnectedness of the Amex platform; the question is whether Ohio held as a matter of law that the MPs' one-sided allegations cannot succeed.<sup>10</sup> (See Reply at 5-6 (citing Taylor v. Sturgell, 553 U.S. 880, 128 S. Ct. 2161, 171 L. Ed. 2d 155 \(2008\), and Allen v. McCurry, 449 U.S. 90, 101 S. Ct. 411, 66 L. Ed. 2d 308 \(1980\).) Ohio holds that Amex is a two-sided transaction platform that exhibits indirect network effects and interconnected pricing and demand, see 138 S. Ct. at 2286-87, a decision that is binding on this court as a matter of stare decisis. Cf. US Airways, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40932, 2017 WL 1064709, at \*10. Any argument that the MPs, as nonparties to the Government Action, did not have a "full and fair opportunity to litigate the claims and issues settled in that suit," Taylor, 553 U.S. at 892 (internal quotation marks omitted), is unavailing.<sup>11</sup>

The court also rejects the MPs' argument that Ohio does not bind this court on the grounds that market definition is typically thought of as a question of fact. (See Opp'n at 3.) The MPs are correct that, as a general rule, the question of market definition "is a highly factual one best allocated to the trier of fact." Meredith Corp. v. SESAC LLC, 1 F. Supp. 3d 180, 219 \(S.D.N.Y. 2014\) (quoting Fineman v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc., 980 F.2d 171, 199 \(3d Cir. 1992\)); see Leegin Creative Leather Prods., Inc. v. PSKS, Inc., 551 U.S. 877, 899, 127 S. Ct. 2705, 168 L. Ed. 2d 623 \(2007\) (discussing "[t]he case-by-case adjudication contemplated by the rule of reason"). Just because the definition of a relevant market necessarily involves considerations that must be adjudicated on a case-by-case basis does not, however, it does mean that courts are unable to conclude at the summary-judgment stage whether a relevant market can exist. See Meredith Corp., 1 F. Supp. 3d at 219 (stating that, on a motion for summary judgment relating to the definition of a relevant market, the court must ask "whether there is sufficient evidence on which a trier of fact could adopt plaintiffs market definition"); cf. Minzner, supra, at 609 ("The distinction between fact and law, while once true, is no longer so clear."). As stated above, the facts in the MP Actions are identical to those in the [<sup>**341</sup>] Government Action. Because the Supreme Court has already answered the exact question presented to this [<sup>**49</sup>] court with respect to the same defendant, the court may not find for the MPs on the basis of their one-sided market allegations.<sup>12</sup> See Powers v. United States, 424 F.2d 593, 601-02, 191 Ct. Cl. 762 \(Ct. Cl. is actually one-sided due to the presence of market maturity, US Airways makes it clear that such an argument cannot survive on the facts of the MP Actions.

<sup>10</sup> Because vertical stare decisis is an absolute command, see Amy Coney Barrett, Precedent and Jurisprudential Disagreement, 91 Tex. L. Rev. 1711, 1713 \(2013\), this court is forbidden from revisiting a higher court's binding holding, no matter how little sense a bound party—or this court—may think the applicable rule of law makes.

<sup>11</sup> In Taylor, the Supreme Court specifically recognized the possibility that a nonparty against whom a decision would not necessarily have a preclusive effect could still be barred as a matter of law from litigating "repetitive suits" through application of stare decisis. See [<sup>**481</sup>] 553 U.S. at 893-95; see also Rodriguez, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 108660, 2008 WL 5978925, at \*2 (stating that litigation that involves "the exact same set of facts" as an earlier case would be "effectively foreclose[d]" as a matter of stare decisis).

1970) (stating that stare decisis applies "where the parties, the law, and the controlling facts remain the same, but the facts are separable in the two causes of action"); cf. McCabe v. Lifetime Entm't Servs., LLC, No. 17-CV-908 (ERK) (SJB), 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3212, 2018 WL 1521860, at *16 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 4, 2018) (finding that stare decisis precludes certification of a class to which the Second Circuit previously denied certification in a separate action), R&R adopted, Order (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 26, 2018), appeal filed, No. 18-1149 (2d Cir. Apr. 19, 2018); Rodriguez, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 108660, 2008 WL 5978925, at *2 (stating that courts should apply stare decisis to foreclose relitigation of cases involving "the exact same set of facts").

***

"[L]ike cases should be treated alike." 18 Moore, supra, § 134.01[1], at 134-9. Taking that command seriously, the court is compelled by the Supreme Court's decision in Ohio and the Second Circuit's decision in U.S. v. Amex to reject the MPs' one-sided market arguments as a matter of law. Accordingly, for the reasons set forth above, the court grants Amex's motion for summary judgment as to the MPs' one-sided market allegations. [**50]

B. Amex-Only Market Allegations

The second part of Amex's motion for summary judgment requires the court to ask whether this case may proceed to trial under the theory that Amex restrained competition within an Amex-only market.

As stated above, the MPs bear the burden of defining a relevant market within which Amex allegedly restrained trade. There is no dispute as to the geographical market at issue in this case. There is, however, a dispute as to the product market: While both sides agree that the MPs may define the product market by reference to all GPCCs, Amex argues that the MPs may not define a relevant submarket limited to Amex-only credit-card transactions. The court agrees with Amex and grants its motion for summary judgment as to an Amex-only market.

1. Doctrinal Overview

a. Defining a Relevant Market

"Defining a relevant product market is 'a process of describing those groups of producers which, because of the similarity of their products, have the ability—actual or potential—to take significant amounts of business away from each other.' Hamilton Chapter of Alpha Delta Phi, Inc. v. Hamilton Coll., 106 F. Supp. 2d 406, 411-12 (N.D.N.Y. 2000) (quoting Hayden Pub. Co. v. Cox Broad. Corp., 730 F.2d 64, 71 (2d Cir. 1984)). The "outer boundaries" of such a product market are determined by "the reasonable interchangeability [*342] of [**51] use or the cross-elasticity of demand between the product itself and substitutes for it." Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, 370 U.S. 294, 325, 82 S. Ct. 1502, 8 L. Ed. 2d 510 (1962); accord Chapman, 546 F.3d at 237. A product is reasonably interchangeable if it is "roughly equivalent to another for the use to which [the product] is put." Chapman, 546 F.3d at 238 (citation omitted). Reasonable interchangeability is indicated by the presence of "sufficient cross-elasticity of demand," which "exists if consumers would respond to a slight increase in the price of one product by switching to another product." Todd, 275 F.3d at 201-02; see also Intellective, Inc. v. Mass. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 190 F. Supp. 2d 600, 610 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) ("Interchangeability' looks to the use or function of the given product as compared to other products. . . . 'Cross-elasticity' is related to interchangeability, and requires a consideration of the extent to which a change in the price of one product will alter demand for another product."). "[A]s a general rule, the process of defining the relevant market requires consideration of cross-elasticity of demand." Hayden Pub., 730 F.2d at 71.

<sup>12</sup> The cases that the MPs cite in support of their argument that the holding of Ohio cannot be given stare decisis effect are inapposite. (See Opp'n at 3.) In Complaint of Tug Helen B. Moran, Inc., 607 F.2d 1029 (2d Cir. 1979), the Second Circuit found that the apportionment of liability in one negligence case did not bind the district court's apportionment of liability in a subsequent case arising out of a different incident. The holding in Ohio is not a "determination[] of fact," and even if it were, the Second Circuit's consideration of stare decisis in Tug Helen B. Moran would not apply because this case is not one in which there are "different facts and a different record." See id. at 1031. And in United States v. Nolan, 136 F.3d 265 (2d Cir. 1998), the Second Circuit briefly mentioned stare decisis in dicta as a way of expressing the point that the same statute can be interpreted in a variety of ways depending on the factual situation. See id. at 269. That anodyne point is not relevant to the motion before the court.

"Reasonable interchangeability sketches the boundaries of a market, but there may also be cognizable submarkets which themselves constitute the appropriate market for antitrust analysis." Geneva Pharms., 386 F.3d at 496 (citing Brown Shoe, 370 U.S. at 325). The Supreme Court has articulated a number of "practical indicia" that may allow "well-defined submarkets" [**52] to "constitute product markets for antitrust purposes." Brown Shoe, 370 U.S. at 325. These factors include "industry or public recognition of the submarket as a separate economic entity, the product's peculiar characteristics and uses, unique production facilities, distinct customers, distinct prices, sensitivity to price changes, and specialized vendors."<sup>13</sup> Brown Shoe, 370 U.S. at 325. As the Second Circuit has recognized, however, "[t]he term 'submarket' is somewhat of a misnomer, since the 'submarket' analysis simply clarifies whether two products are in fact 'reasonable' substitutes and are therefore part of the same market." Geneva Pharms., 386 F.3d at 496. Therefore, an antitrust plaintiff seeking to define a relevant product submarket—like a plaintiff seeking to define a broader relevant market—must show that cross-elasticity of demand exists within the submarket. See PSKS, Inc. v. Leegin Creative Leather Prods., Inc., 615 F.3d 412, 418 \(5th Cir. 2010\) ("[T]he requirements for pleading a submarket are no different from those for pleading a relevant broader market."); Geneva Pharms., 386 F.3d at 496; U.S. Anchor Mfg., Inc. v. Rule Indus., Inc., 7 F.3d 986, 995 \(11th Cir. 1993\) ("[D]efining a 'submarket' is the equivalent of defining a relevant product market for antitrust purposes."); PepsiCo, Inc. v. Coca-Cola Co., No. 98-CV-3282 \(LAP\), 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13440, 1998 WL 547088, at \*5 \(S.D.N.Y. Aug. 27, 1998\) ("Ultimately, a 'submarket' definition turns on the same inquiry as a 'market' definition—whether the products in a proposed submarket are reasonably interchangeable in [**53] use or production with products in the broader market." (citation and internal quotation marks omitted)). But see Geneva Pharms., 386 F.3d at 496 (analyzing the "competitive pressures" that create a submarket for generic warfarin sodium in spite of the "[f]unctional interchangeability" [*343] between the brand name drug and its chemically identical generic equivalent).

b. Single-Brand Markets

It is an understatement to say that single-brand markets are disfavored. From nearly the inception of modern antitrust law, the Supreme Court has expressed skepticism of single-brand markets, stating that courts should not look at the power that certain manufacturers "have over their trademarked products" when asking whether monopolization exists, but rather that "[i]llegal [market] power must be appraised in terms of the competitive market for the product." E. I. du Pont, 351 U.S. at 393 (emphasis added). Accordingly, time and time again, courts in this circuit have rejected attempts by antitrust plaintiffs to limit the relevant market to a single brand or product. Mooney v. AXA Advisors, L.L.C., 19 F. Supp. 3d 486, 500 \(S.D.N.Y. 2014\); see, e.g., Planetarium Travel, Inc. v. Altour Int'l, Inc., 97 F. Supp. 3d 424, 429 \(S.D.N.Y. 2015\) (rejecting plaintiff's attempt to limit product market to one airline-ticket-purchasing network); Bookhouse of Stuyvesant Plaza, Inc. v. Amazon.com, Inc., 985 F. Supp. 2d 612, 620 \(S.D.N.Y. 2013\) (rejecting construction of complaint that would allege harm to the U.S. market for e-books [**54] that are readable on Amazon's Kindle devices and apps); Global Discount Travel Servs., LLC v. Trans World Airlines, Inc., 960 F. Supp. 701, 705-06 \(S.D.N.Y. 1997\) (Sotomayor, J.) (rejecting single-brand market allegations where customers were only "locked into" buying TWA tickets because of consumer preference); see also Todd, 275 F.3d at 200 ("Cases in which dismissal on the pleadings is appropriate frequently involve . . . failed attempts to limit a product market to a single brand, franchise, institution, or comparable entity that competes with potential substitutes . . . ."). In order to overcome this heavy presumption, the plaintiff must point to "exceptional market conditions" that have created a market for a single brand that would otherwise be just "one brand in a market of competing brands." Domed Stadium Hotel, Inc. v. Holiday Inns, Inc., 732 F.2d 480, 488 \(5th Cir. 1984\); see In re

---

<sup>13</sup> The Supreme Court's description of these factors as "practical indicia" indicates that this list is not intended to function as a "litmus test"—"submarkets can exist where only some of these factors are present." Bon-Ton Stores, Inc. v. May Dep't Stores Co., 881 F. Supp. 860, 868 \(W.D.N.Y. 1994\).

Fresh Del Monte Pineapples Antitrust Litig., No. 04-MD-1628 (RMB), 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 97289, 2009 WL 3241401, at *11 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2009) (citing Domed Stadium Hotel, 732 F.2d at 488).

To illustrate the difficulties that plaintiffs seeking to define a single-brand market face, the court turns to the seminal case of Queen City Pizza, Inc. v. Domino's Pizza, Inc., 124 F.3d 430 (3d Cir. 1997). See Hack v. President & Fellows of Yale Coll., 237 F.3d 81, 85 (2d Cir. 2000) (citing Queen City Pizza, 124 F.3d at 438), abrogated on other grounds by Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N.A., 534 U.S. 506, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002). In Queen City Pizza, the Third Circuit affirmed the dismissal of a claim that Domino's monopolized the market of "pizza supplies and ingredients for use in Domino's stores." 124 F.3d at 436. While the plaintiffs' franchise agreements with Domino's limited their ability to [**55] purchase pizza supplies and ingredients that were not approved by Domino's, they could not argue that these other products were in any way distinguishable from the Domino's-approved products except in their designation by Domino's. It was unimportant whether the plaintiffs were able, under the terms of their contract with Domino's, to use non-Domino's-approved pizza supplies and ingredients; instead, the court asked whether "pizza makers in general might use such products"—that is, Domino's-approved and non-Domino's-approved products—"interchangeably." Id. at 438. Because the Domino's-approved and non-Domino's-approved products were interchangeable from the perspective of a [*344] general pizza maker, a single-brand market was not appropriate. The overarching question regarding single-brand markets is thus not whether the plaintiffs have articulated certain factors that distinguish a certain product from similar products, but whether the product does not have reasonable interchangeability of use with rival products. See Global Discount Travel Servs., 960 F. Supp. at 705 ("A consumer might choose to purchase a certain product because the manufacturer has spent time and energy differentiating his or her creation from the panoply of products in the market, [**56] but at base, Pepsi is one of many sodas, and NBC is just another television network.").

There is one situation in which courts generally agree that single-brand markets can succeed: an "aftermarket," which is "a type of derivative market consisting of consumable goods or replacement components that must be used for the proper functioning of some primary good," IIA Phillip Areeda et al., Antitrust Law: An Analysis of Antitrust Principles and Their Application ¶ 564b, at 421 (4th ed. 2014). See Xerox Corp. v. Media Scis., Inc., 660 F. Supp. 2d 535, 543-45 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) (discussing Eastman Kodak Co. v. Image Tech. Servs., Inc., 504 U.S. 451, 112 S. Ct. 2072, 119 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1992); Mathias v. Daily News, L.P., 152 F. Supp. 2d 465, 483 (S.D.N.Y. 2001)) (same). For example, in Eastman Kodak, the Supreme Court permitted an aftermarket composed of companies that service Kodak machines because, from the perspective of owners of Kodak equipment, "service and parts for Kodak equipment are not interchangeable with other manufacturers' service and parts." Eastman Kodak, 504 U.S. at 481-82. District courts in this circuit have recognized single-brand aftermarkets in similar circumstances. See Alt. Electrodes, LLC v. Empi, Inc., 597 F. Supp. 2d 322, 335 (E.D.N.Y. 2009); Xerox Corp. v. Media Scis. Int'l, Inc., 511 F. Supp. 2d 372, 385 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

It is important to make clear that single-brand market definitions are not formally limited to the aftermarket context. See Mooney, 19 F. Supp. 3d at 501. Single-brand market allegations are usually rejected because they "are consistently pled in a manner that lacks plausibility or is otherwise untethered [**57] to economic reality." Id. at 500-01. Accordingly, an antitrust plaintiff may succeed in defining a single-brand relevant market if it can establish that "a product's characteristics make it unique or circumstances prevent consumers from substituting alternatives for the same purposes." In re Payment Card Interchange Fee & Merch. Discount Antitrust Litig., 562 F. Supp. 2d 392, 403 (E.D.N.Y. 2008) (citing IIA Areeda et al., supra, ¶ 563d); see Mooney, 19 F. Supp. 3d at 500-01. In most cases, though, the product at issue—even if distinguishable from other products due to its brand or certain features—will have possible substitutes such that a single-brand market definition is inappropriate. See IIA Areeda et al., supra, ¶ 563d, at 413-14 (listing examples).

2. Application

The key question regarding the viability of MPs' Amex-only market allegations is whether the transactions<sup>14</sup> produced [*345] by Amex are reasonably interchangeable with the transactions produced by other GPCCs, such as Visa, MasterCard, and Discover.<sup>15</sup> All parties agree that, from a cardholder's perspective, the transactions are interchangeable; that is, "if Amex raises its net two-sided price by increasing the price on the cardholder side (i.e., by reducing rewards), . . . [Amex] will lose cardholders and sales to MasterCard, Visa or Discover." (Opp'n at 20; see Amex Mem. at 10.) In Amex's view, that is the end of the inquiry: because [**58] "competition between two-sided transaction platforms does not exist just on one side of the platform or the other," the admission that competition for transactions exists on the cardholder side of the platform precludes the court from defining an Amex-only market. (Amex Mem. at 10.) Not so, argue the MPs: they submit that they will be able to present evidence at trial that cross-elasticity of demand on the merchant side of the platform is "weak or non-existent"—in other words, that "Amex can raise its net two-sided price by increasing merchant fees while leaving rewards alone without losing sales to other credit cards"—thus making it inappropriate for the court to grant summary judgment as to the single-brand submarket allegations. (Opp'n at 20.)

The court does not think it prudent to state, as a matter of law, that cross-elasticity of demand on one side of a two-sided market forecloses the possibility that a single-brand market or submarket may be appropriate. It is true that one group of participants in the two-sided market before the court—the cardholders—treats Amex cards interchangeably [**59] with other credit cards. But it is misguided to end the analysis there. If there is a disputed question of fact regarding whether the merchants treat Amex as interchangeable, there remains an open question as to whether the product at issue—the transactions—is actually interchangeable. This analysis is not, as Amex claims, an "attempt to segment the substitutability analysis." (Mem. at 10.) As the MPs point out, the Supreme Court has commanded that, in the case of a two-sided transaction market, courts "must look to 'both sides of the platform.'" (Opp'n at 22 (quoting Ohio, 138 S. Ct. at 2286); see id. at 21 (stating that there is "no rational basis" to look only at the cardholder side of the platform "where the anticompetitive restraint is directed only at the merchant side of the platform).)

But this is not the end of the inquiry. The "prevailing rule against single-brand markets" has multiple underpinnings which must be dealt with before the court may conclude that a single-brand market is appropriate. (See Mem. at 11.) Chief among these is the rule that a market of "otherwise identical products" cannot be rendered "non-interchangeable" simply by a plaintiff's assumption of contractual restraints. Queen City Pizza, 124 F.3d at 438; accord Smugglers Notch Homeowners' Ass'n v. Smugglers' Notch Mgmt. Co., 414 F. App'x 372, 377 \(2d Cir. 2011\) (summary [**60] order) (quoting Queen City Pizza, 124 F.3d at 443). Accordingly, where the defendant has "[e]conomic power" in a proposed market due exclusively to the "contractual arrangements" it has entered into with "a distinct class of consumers," an antitrust claim with respect to that market cannot lie. See Hack, 237 F.3d at 85. An antitrust claim based on a contractual term voluntarily assumed by the plaintiff can only succeed if "the defendant's power to force plaintiffs" to accept [*346] the allegedly anticompetitive provision "stems . . . from the market," not an agreement that the parties have entered into. Smugglers Notch, 414 F. App'x at 376-77 (internal quotation marks omitted) (quoting Queen City Pizza, 124 F.3d at 443).

The MPs assert that Amex is unlawfully restraining trade through its imposition of anti-steering rules in the cardholder acceptance agreements that it enters into with merchants. (See Am. Compl. ¶ 1.) Amex argues that the MPs' claims as to an Amex-only market are barred because this market definition is "based on the contractual restraints at issue." (Mem. at 14.) In order to understand whether this defense is on-point, the court once again turns to Queen City Pizza. In Queen City Pizza, the franchisee plaintiffs alleged that Domino's was restraining trade in the market for Domino's-approved pizza [**61] ingredients and supplies because franchisees could not use non-Domino's-approved products without violating the franchise agreement. 124 F.3d at 438. The court concluded that the only reason Domino's had power to restrain the plaintiffs from purchasing other—interchangeable—pizza ingredients and supplies was due to the contracts that the plaintiffs had voluntarily entered into, and that that was insufficient to make out a showing that Domino's had power in the market. See id. at 438-41.

<sup>14</sup> The product supplied by Amex is credit-card "transactions." Ohio, 138 S. Ct. at 2286-87. A transaction occurs when Amex facilitates a cardholder's use of her card to buy a good at the same time that it facilitates a merchant's acceptance of the card to receive payment for the good. See id.; Benjamin Klein et al., Competition in Two-Sided Markets: The Antitrust Economics of Payment Card Interchange Fees, 73 Antitrust L.J. 571, 580 (2006) ("[P]ayment card transactions . . . are jointly consumed by a cardholder, who uses the payment card to make a transaction, and a merchant, who accepts the payment card as a method of payment.").

<sup>15</sup> The practical differences between Amex, which operates a "closed-loop" payment card system, and Visa and MasterCard, which operate "open-loop" systems, have been extensively discussed in the context of the Government Action. See U.S. v. Amex, 838 F.3d at 188, 207-08; U.S. v. Amex, 88 F. Supp. 3d at 157-58.

The same seems true here: the MPs would be permitted to steer customers away from using Amex cards but for the inclusion of the NDPs in the contracts which the MPs voluntarily entered into with Amex; the only thing allegedly restraining competition for "Amex" transactions—and thereby distinguishing those transactions from transactions using any other credit card—are the NDPs. As Amex points out, the MPs have admitted to the fact that their single-brand market theory is based solely on the NDPs. (See Amex Rule 56.1 Statement of Material Facts (Dkt. 837) ¶ 36 ("[W]ith its Merchant Restraints in place, AmEx operates in a product market unto itself . . . ." (quoting Expert Report of Dr. Christopher A. Velturo ("Velturo I") (Dkt. 840-5) (under [**62] seal) ¶ 104).) Indeed, in their brief in opposition to Amex's motion for summary judgment, the MPs seemingly do not dispute the contention that their "allegation for an Amex-only submarket is 'based on the contractual restraints at issue.'" (Opp'n at 22 (quoting Mem. at 14).) Instead, the MPs state that Queen City Pizza does not preclude their Amex-only market definition because here, unlike in Queen City Pizza, Amex has "pre-contract economic power that gives it the ability to compel merchants to accept its cards and agree to the anti-steering rules." (Id. at 24; see id. at 23.)

The MPs' Amex-only market allegations founder at this juncture, due to the fact that the MPs impermissibly seek to prove Amex's pre-contract market power by reference to "critical loss analysis." In general, a critical loss analysis "identifies the volume of business a supplier would have to lose (or correspondingly, the number of customers who would have to threaten to shift to another supplier) for a posited price increase to be rendered unprofitable." (Velturo I ¶ 106; see id. ¶¶ 109-13.) In this case, the MPs argue that a critical loss analysis would show that they are unable to respond to increases in Amex's merchant fees [**63] by ceasing to accept Amex cards. (Opp'n at 23-24; see Velturo I ¶ 114.) This is so because a merchant that stops accepting Amex would suffer a greater "loss of profits on purchases by customers who no longer shop at the merchants because AmEx is no longer accepted" than it would gain profits from "a reduction in its payment acceptance costs on customers that it retains who now use a lower cost card rather than AmEx." (Velturo [*347] I ¶ 107; see Opp'n at 24 ("[A] small loss of sales causes the merchant a greater loss than does the Amex anticompetitive overcharge.").) In other words, the supposed pre-contract power that Amex possesses that allegedly compels merchants to accept the terms of their cardholder agreement—including the NDPs—comes from the fact that Amex cardholders would rather take their business to an Amex-accepting merchant than use a different card to shop at a merchant that has ceased accepting Amex.

As Amex correctly identifies, this is cardholder insistence by another name.<sup>16</sup> (See Amex Reply at 8.) In the Government Action, this court relied on cardholder insistence—which refers to "the segment of Amex's cardholder base who insist on paying with their Amex cards and who would [**64] shop elsewhere or spend less if unable to use their cards of choice"—for its finding that Amex possessed sufficient market power to cause an adverse effect on competition. See U.S. v. Amex, 88 F. Supp. 3d at 191. The Second Circuit reversed, stating that cardholder insistence could not form the basis of a finding of market power. U.S. v. Amex, 838 F.3d at 203-04. As the Second Circuit saw it, [c]ardholder insistence results not from market power, but instead from competitive benefits on the cardholder side of the platform and the concomitant competitive benefits to merchants who choose to accept Amex cards." Id. at 202. That statement compels the court's rejection of the MPs' Amex-only market allegations based on critical loss analysis.<sup>17</sup>

---

<sup>16</sup> In their original opposition to Amex's motion for summary judgment as to an Amex-only submarket, the MPs treated the terms "critical loss analysis" and "insistence" as interchangeable. (See MPs Nov. 21, 2013, Mem. in Opp'n to Amex Mot. for Summ. J. (Dkt. 715) at 20, 22; see also Amex Reply at 9.)

<sup>17</sup> The MPs argue that the Second Circuit's discussion of cardholder insistence is irrelevant to the question of whether they can define an Amex-only relevant market because that court's opinion only discussed cardholder insistence in the context of market

***

Because the MPs cannot define a single-brand market without reference to the contractual restraints at issue in this case, and because the MPs have not made a legally permissible allegation that Amex possessed pre-contract market power that compelled acceptance of the NDPS, the MPs' Amex-only market fails as a matter of law. Accordingly, the court grants Amex's motion for summary judgment as to the MPs' Amex-only market allegations.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the court GRANTS Amex's motion for [**65] partial summary judgment (Dkt. 835). Counsel for both sides are DIRECTED, by no later than January 25, 2019, to provide the court with a joint update regarding the anticipated length of trial in light of this memorandum and order. Both sides are also DIRECTED to confer and contact the court's Deputy at 718-613-2545 to schedule a status conference to discuss pretrial issues.

SO ORDERED.

Dated: Brooklyn, New York

January 14, 2019

/s/ Nicholas G. Garaufis

NICHOLAS G. GARAUFIS

United States District Judge

---

End of Document

---

power. (Opp'n at 19 & n.6.) The MPs read the Second Circuit's opinion too narrowly. As discussed above, the question of whether the MPs may proceed as to an Amex-only market turns on the question of whether Amex's power to force the MPs to agree to the NDPS stems from the market or from the contract. See Smugglers Notch, 414 F. App'x at 376-77. Accordingly, the Second Circuit's findings as to insistence in the context of market power are applicable here, where the definition of the relevant market requires analysis of market power.

Shandong Lihong Tech. Ltd. Crop v. Masimo Corp.

Superior Court of California, County of Orange

January 14, 2019, Decided; January 14, 2019, Filed

CASE NO: 30-2018-01002779-CU-BT-CJC

Reporter

2019 Cal. Super. LEXIS 18904 *

Shandong Lihong Technology Limited Corp v. Masimo Corporation

Core Terms

---

unfair, cause of action, fair dealing, leave to amend, allegations, competitor, demurrer, alleged facts, first cause, good faith, unfair act, unfair business practice, covenant of good faith, member of the public, contracting parties, fraudulent practice, breach of contract, breach of covenant, notice of ruling, violation of law, anti trust law, public policy, conditions, consumers, deception, threatens, benefits, deceived, unfairly, harmed

Opinion

---

[*1] MINUTE ORDER

There are no appearances by any party.

The Court, having taken the above-entitled matters under submission on January 11, 2019, and having fully considered the arguments of all parties, both written and oral, now rules as follows:

NOTICE OF RULING

Defendant Masimo Corporation's demurrer to Plaintiff Shandong Lihong Technology Limited Crop's First Amended Complaint ("FAC") is sustained with 15 days leave to amend.

Violation of Business and Professions Code Section 17200 (First Cause of Action)

In the first cause of action, Plaintiff alleges violation of Business and Professions Code section 17200 (the "UCL"). The UCL prohibits "any unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business act or practice and unfair, deceptive, untrue or misleading advertising." Under the unlawful prong, a violation of law may be actionable as unfair competition under the UCL. (Lueras v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, LP (2013) 221 Cal.App.4th 49, 81, 163 Cal. Rptr. 3d 804.) "An unfair business practice occurs when that practice offends an established public policy or when the practice is immoral, unethical, oppressive, unscrupulous or substantially injurious to consumers... An unfair business practice also means the public policy which is a predicate to the action must be tethered to specific constitutional, statutory or regulatory provisions." (Ibid. [internal citations omitted].) A fraudulent [*2] practice "require[s] only a showing that members of the public are likely to be deceived and can be shown even without allegations of actual deception, reasonable reliance and damage." (Ibid. [internal citations omitted].)

The UCL "was intentionally framed in its broad, sweeping language, precisely to enable judicial tribunals to deal with the innumerable new schemes which the fertility of man's invention would contrive." (Cel-Tech

Communications, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Telephone Co. \(1999\) 20 Cal.4th 163, 181, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 [internal citations and quotations omitted.] While the UCL's scope is broad, it is not unlimited. In order to give businesses fair notice of what they can and cannot do, the California Supreme Court has cautioned that "[c]ourts may not simply impose their own notions of the day as to what is fair or unfair." (Id. at p. 182.) For this reason, the California Supreme Court developed a test when the plaintiff is commercial competitor whether the conduct or practice is "unfair." "When a plaintiff who claims to have suffered injury from a direct competitor's 'unfair' act or practice invokes section 17200, the word 'unfair' in that section means conduct that threatens an incipient violation of an antitrust law, or violates the policy or spirit of one of those laws because its effects are comparable [*3] to or the same as a violation of the law, or otherwise significantly threatens or harms competition." (Id. at p. 187.) In articulating this test, the California Supreme Court was careful to emphasize that harm "to a competitor is not equivalent to [harm] to competition," and that "only the latter is the proper focus of antitrust laws." (Id. at p. 186.) "The UCL's purpose is to protect both consumers and competitors by promoting fair competition in commercial markets for goods and services." (Kasky v. Nike, Inc. \(2002\) 27 Cal.4th 939, 949, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 296, 45 P.3d 243; Cel-Tech Communications, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Telephone Co., supra, 20 Cal.4th at p. 180.)

Here, the FAC does not allege an unlawful business act or practice. The FAC also does not allege a fraudulent practice because it does not allege facts to show that members of the public are likely to be deceived. (See Lueras v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, LP, supra, 221 Cal.App.4th at p. 81.)

The FAC's allegations of Defendant's alleged use of Plaintiff's customers' names and addresses and plaintiff's market information, also does not constitute an unfair conduct or practice. Plaintiff's allegations, if true, allege unfair acts in a more generalized moral sense. However, they fail to allege an unfair act or practice as set forth in Cel-Tech. (See Celebrity Chefs Tour, LLC v. Macy's Inc. \(S.D. Cal. 2014\) 16 F.Supp.3d 1141, 1156.) Plaintiff's allegations merely indicate harm to its commercial interests, rather than harm to competition. Accordingly, the demurrer as to the [*4] first cause of action is sustained with 15 days leave to amend.

Breach of Contract (Second Cause of Action)

The elements for a cause of action for breach of contract are "the existence of the contract, performance by the plaintiff or excuse for nonperformance, breach by the defendant and damages." (First Commercial Mortgage Co. v. Reece \(2001\) 89 Cal.App.4th 731, 745, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 23.) Plaintiff does not allege any facts to show how Defendant breached the distribution agreement. Accordingly, the demurrer as to the second cause of action is sustained with 15 days leave to amend.

Breach of Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing (Third Cause of Action)

To state a claim for a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, Plaintiff must allege all of the following: (1) that plaintiff and defendant entered into a contract; (2) that plaintiff did all, or substantially all of the significant things that the contract required it to do, or that it was excused from having to do those things; (3) that all conditions required for defendant's performance had occurred; (4) that defendant unfairly interfered with plaintiff's right to receive the benefits of the contract; and (5) that plaintiff was harmed from defendant's conduct. (CACI no. 325.) "The covenant of good [*5] faith and fair dealing, implied by law in every contract, exists merely to prevent one contracting party from unfairly frustrating the other party's right to receive the benefits of the agreement actually made. It cannot impose substantive duties or limits on the contracting parties beyond those incorporated in the specific terms of their agreement." (Guz v. Bechtel National, Ind. \(2000\) 24 Cal.4th 317, 349, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089.) "With the exception of bad faith insurance cases, a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing permits a recovery solely in contract." (Spinks v. Equity Residential Briarwood Apartments \(2009\) 171 Cal.App.4th 1004, 1054, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 453 [internal citations omitted].)

Here, Plaintiff does not allege facts to show breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. For instance, Plaintiff does not allege facts to show that all conditions required for Defendant's performance had occurred. Accordingly, the demurrer as to the third cause of action is sustained with 15 days leave to amend.

The Clerk shall give notice of the ruling.

---

End of Document

Sentinel Global Prod. Sols., Inc. v. Hydrofarm, Inc.

Court of Appeal of California, First Appellate District, Division One January 17, 2019, Opinion Filed

A149017

Reporter

2019 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 417 *; 2019 WL 244550

SENTINEL GLOBAL PRODUCT SOLUTIONS, INC., Plaintiff and Appellant, v. HYDROFARM, INC., Defendant and Respondent.

Notice: NOT TO BE PUBLISHED IN OFFICIAL REPORTS. CALIFORNIA RULES OF COURT, RULE 8.1115\(a\), PROHIBITS COURTS AND PARTIES FROM CITING OR RELYING ON OPINIONS NOT CERTIFIED FOR PUBLICATION OR ORDERED PUBLISHED, EXCEPT AS SPECIFIED BY RULE 8.1115\(b\). THIS OPINION HAS NOT BEEN CERTIFIED FOR PUBLICATION OR ORDERED PUBLISHED FOR THE PURPOSES OF RULE 8.1115.

Prior History: [*1] Sonoma County Super. Ct. No. SCV-254184.

Core Terms

---

translation, cause of action, declaration, products, prospective economic advantage, unfair, triable issue, disrupt, intentional interference, venture, enforceable contract, economic relations, trial court, contractual, summary judgment, material fact, manufacture, contractual relationship, unfair competition, italics omitted, certification, interfere, asserts, induce

Judges: Banke, J.; Humes, P. J., Margulies, J. concurred.

Opinion by: Banke, J.

Opinion

---

Plaintiff Sentinel Global Product Solutions, Inc. (Sentinel) sold the products of a Chinese company, Xiamen Superpro Technology Company, Ltd. (Superpro), to, among others, defendant Hydrofarm, Inc. (Hydrofarm). Sentinel claims it had an agreement with Superpro that it would be Superpro's exclusive distributor in the United States.

When Hydrofarm began purchasing products directly from Superpro, rather than Sentinel, Sentinel sued Hydrofarm for tortious interference with contract, tortious interference with prospective economic advantage, and unfair competition. The trial court granted Hydrofarm's motion for summary judgment. We affirm.

BACKGROUND

In 2005, Gregory Moore, Keith Harrington and Russell Winnett agreed to form Sentinel to sell products used in hydroponic gardening.<sup>1</sup>

Harrington and Winnett subsequently met with two Chinese citizens, Xu Liqiang (Xu) and Lin Yaoliang (Lin), to discuss the manufacturing of a component to be used in hydroponic indoor gardening. Xu and Lin agreed to design and manufacture the component. Harrington suggested Xu and Lin form a manufacturing company, which [*2] they did, creating Superpro.

In 2006, Harrington and Moore, as "legal representative[s]" of Interplas LLC and Redwood Imports LLC, respectively, signed a joint venture agreement with Xiamen Kunlun Technology Co., Ltd. (Xiamen), "co-invested by [Xu] and [Lin]." The agreement, entitled "Contrac[t] of a Chinese-Foreign Equity Joint Venture," provided that the parties would "set up a joint venture limited liability company in the PRC [(People's Republic of China)] (hereinafter referred to as the 'JVC'), named as Superpro Automation Technology Co. Ltd."

The agreement specified, "The establishment of the JVC shall start from the date on which the business license of the JVC is issued." It further provided, "This contract shall come into force with effect from the date of approval by the examination and approval of Huli District Foreign Investment Bureau." The agreement also stated, "The formation of this contract, its validity, interpretation, execution, amendment, termination and settlement of disputes shall be governed by the laws of the PRC." "All activities of the JVC shall be governed by the laws, decrees and relevant rules and regulations of the PRC and the JVC shall be subject to the [*3] jurisdiction and protection of PRC laws." Xiamen was responsible for "[a]ssisting in handling applications for approval, registration and other matters for the establishment of the JVC in the PRC."

Thus, it was not disputed that "[t]he [a]llied JVA specified clearly that approval by the Chinese government was required before the venture would be valid and enforceable, and that Chinese law would govern the agreement."

Three years later, in 2009, Sentinel and Superpro executed a "Letter of Intent for the Joint Venture: Superpro Electronic (Xiamen) Co. Ltd." The letter provided "both parties agree to establish Superpro Electronic (Xiamen) Co., Ltd . . . subject to the terms and conditions as stipulated hereinafter." It also provided Sentinel "can sell products in their territory to North America, South America, Europe, UK, New Zealand, Australia and Africa," while "Superpro can sell products within their territory. Asia includes China, Japan, Vietnam, Philippines etc."

In 2011, Moore purchased Winnett's interest in Sentinel. The purchase agreement provided, among other things, that Winnett "agrees and covenants that for a period of five years . . . after the Effective Date, he shall not, [*4] nor on behalf of any other person or entity, directly or indirectly . . . (ii) interfere with or disrupt, or attempt to interfere with or disrupt, the relationship, contractual or otherwise, between [Sentinel] and any customer, supplier, partner or employee of [Sentinel]." Apparently, Winnett commenced working, on a commission basis, for Superpro, and subsequently went to work for Growop Technology, Ltd. (Growop), a California corporation. He is the only named defendant in a fourth cause of action for breach of contract, which alleges Winnett breached the buyout agreement "by accepting employment with Growop."

In August 2012, Superpro began selling products directly to Hydrofarm and Worm's Way, another defendant who is not a party to this appeal. Hydrofarm and Worm's Way then stopped purchasing products from Sentinel.

The court granted summary judgment in favor of Hydrofarm and Worm's Way.<sup>2</sup>

DISCUSSION

---

<sup>1</sup> Moore is the "President and co-founder" of Sentinel. Harrington and Winnett are defendants in the underlying action. Harrington "quit as a partner of Sentinel" in 2009, while Winnett sold his interest in 2011. Superpro, the Chinese manufacturing company, was not named as a defendant.

<sup>2</sup> Although Sentinel's notice of appeal states it has appealed from the judgment, in its briefing Sentinel asks only that this court "vacate the Judgment issued in favor of Hydrofarm."

Standard of Review

The standard of review on appeal from a summary judgment is de novo. (Aguilar v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2001) 25 Cal.4th 826, 860, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 841, 24 P.3d 493 (Aguilar); Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal.4th 317, 334, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089.) In general, summary judgment: "shall be granted if . . . there is no triable issue as to any material fact. . . . In determining if the papers show that there is no triable issue as to [*5] any material fact, the court shall consider all of the evidence set forth in the papers . . . and all inferences reasonably deducible from the evidence . . . [unless] contradicted by other inferences or evidence that raise a triable issue as to any material fact." (Code Civ. Proc., § 437c, subd. (c).)

The moving party bears the burden of showing, to a degree equal to the standard of proof at trial, that there is no issue of material fact on any cause of action; if the moving party succeeds, then the opposing party bears the burden of presenting competent evidence raising an issue of material fact. (Aguilar, supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 845; see Code Civ. Proc., § 437c, subd. (p)(2).) We "determine with respect to each cause of action whether the defendant seeking summary judgment has conclusively negated a necessary element of the plaintiff's case, or has demonstrated that under no hypothesis is there a material issue of fact that requires the process of trial, such that the defendant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." (Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc., supra, 24 Cal.4th at p. 334.)

Cause of Action for Intentional Interference with Contract

The elements of a cause of action for intentional interference with contractual relations are: "(1) a valid contract between plaintiff and a third party; (2) defendant's knowledge of this contract; (3) defendant's [*6] intentional acts designed to induce a breach or disruption of the contractual relationship; (4) actual breach or disruption of the contractual relationship; and (5) resulting damage." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal.3d 1118, 1126, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587.)

"In its simplest terms, to be liable for inducing breach of contract, there must be a valid contract." (PMC, Inc. v. Saban Entertainment, Inc. (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 579, 595, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 877 (PMC), disapproved on another ground by Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 (Korea Supply).) "It is logical to force the plaintiff to plead and prove an enforceable contract when stating a cause of action for intentional interference with contract. If a party is not obligated to perform a contract and may refuse to do so at his election without penalty, then the other party to that agreement enjoys nothing more than an expectancy." (PMC, at p. 599.) PMC held that "a cause of action for intentional interference with contract requires an underlying enforceable contract. Where there is no existing, enforceable contract, only a claim for interference with prospective advantage may be pleaded. To [conclude] otherwise unnecessarily confuses the two torts and fails to recognize their inherent differences." (Id. at p. 601, italics omitted.)

"PMC's recognition of the inherent differences between the two interference torts was based in large part on the discussion of [*7] those differences in Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 [(Della Penna)]. . . . Della Penna addressed 'the need to draw and enforce a sharpened distinction between claims for tortious disruption of an existing contract and claims that a prospective contractual or economic relationship has been interfered with by the defendant.' [Citation.] Emphasizing that the two torts are analytically different, Della Penna stated: [¶] 'The courts provide a damage remedy against third party conduct intended to disrupt an existing contract precisely because the exchange of promises resulting in such a formally cemented economic relationship is deemed worthy of protection from interference by a stranger to the agreement. Economic relationships short of contractual, however, should stand on a different legal footing as far as the potential for tort liability is reckoned. Because ours is a culture firmly wedded to the social rewards of commercial contests, the law usually takes care to draw lines of legal liability in a way that maximizes areas of competition free of legal penalties.'" (Bed, Bath & Beyond of La Jolla, Inc. v. La Jolla Village Square Venture Partners (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 867, 878, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830 (Bed, Bath & Beyond), italics omitted.)

Bed, Bath and Beyond agreed with "PMC's analysis and conclusion that a cause of action for intentional interference [<sup>*8</sup>] with contractual relations requires an underlying enforceable contract, and where the underlying contract is unenforceable, only a claim for interference with prospective economic advantage lies. We believe this rule is a proper extension of the California Supreme Court's admonition that courts should not blur the analytical line between the two interference torts and its recognition that the 'formally cemented economic relationship' created by an 'existing contract' is entitled to greater solicitude than a relationship falling short of that." (Bed, Bath & Beyond, supra, 52 Cal.App.4th at p. 879, italics omitted.)

No Triable Issue of an Enforceable Contract

As to the first element of a contractual interference claim, it is undisputed that neither the joint venture agreement nor the letter of intent were ever approved by the Chinese government, as required under Chinese law and the terms of the joint venture agreement.

Sentinel claims, however, that "[t]he mere fact that the [joint venture agreement] was not completed under Chinese law, or that the 2009 [letter of intent] was pending at the time of the 2011-12 interference by Hydrofarm did not preclude the trial court from finding a valid and enforceable contract." Relying on Golden v. Anderson (1967) 256 Cal.App.2d 714, 719, 64 Cal. Rptr. 404 Sentinel [<sup>*9</sup>] maintains "[c]ontracts which are voidable by reason of the statute of frauds, formal defects, lack of consideration, lack of mutuality, or even uncertainty of term, still afford a basis for a tort action when the defendant interferes with their performance."

Golden, however, was decided before cases drew "a clear distinction between tort liability for interference with a contract and tort liability for interference with prospective economic advantage." (Bed, Bath & Beyond, supra, 52 Cal.App.4th at p. 880, fn. 9.) Prior to the California Supreme Court's holding in Della Penna, the distinction between those two causes of action was "blurred in California case law." (Bed, Bath & Beyond, at p. 880, fn. 9.) As Bed, Bath & Beyond explained, "[t]he rule we adopt from PMC is not inconsistent with [Golden], as it does not preclude imposition of tort liability for interference with an unenforceable contract; it merely limits the scope of such liability to a claim for interference with prospective economic advantage." (Ibid.)

Accordingly, there is no merit to Sentinel's claim that it can maintain a cause of action for contractual inference in the absence of an enforceable contract.

No Triable Issue of Actual Knowledge

As to the second element of a contractual interference claim, Sentinel [<sup>*10</sup>] failed to raise a triable issue that Hydrofarm "had actual knowledge that [Sentinel] had or claimed to have an exclusive North American distributorship with Superpro." Indeed, Sentinel concedes that even the letter of intent, which it claims was the "operative agreement," "does not specifically state that the sales and distribution rights are exclusive to Sentinel."

Sentinel asserts, however, that the "actual knowledge" requirement does not require that Hydrofarm "be aware of . . . the specific terms of the contract, including whether Sentinel had exclusive distribution rights." Sentinel is mistaken. Hydrofarm could not intentionally interfere with an alleged exclusive distributorship agreement if it did not know such an agreement existed. (See Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co., supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1126; Ramona Manor Convalescent Hospital v. Care Enterprises (1986) 177 Cal.App.3d 1120, 1130, 225 Cal. Rptr. 120 ["If the actor had no knowledge of the existence of the contract or his actions were not intended to induce a breach, he cannot be held liable. . . ." Italics omitted].)

Apparently acknowledging the lack of evidence that Hydrofarm had any actual knowledge of the purported exclusive distributor agreement, Sentinel additionally asserts that former co-owner Winnett's knowledge "of the contractual agreements and relations was legally imputed [<sup>*11</sup>] to Hydrofarm." This is so, Sentinel claims, because Winnett was acting as Hydrofarm's agent in facilitating sales between Superpro (for whom Winnett was working) to Hydrofarm.

In an agency relationship, ""(1) An agent or apparent agent holds a power to alter the legal relations between the principal and third persons and between the principal and himself; (2) an agent is a fiduciary with respect to matters within the scope of the agency; and (3) a principal has the right to control the conduct of the agent with respect to matters entrusted to him.""
*\(Garlock Sealing Technologies, LLC v. NAK Sealing Technologies Corp. \(2007\) 148 Cal.App.4th 937, 964, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 177.\)*

Sentinel points to no evidence of any of these attributes as between Winnett and Hydrofarm. Specifically, there is no evidence Winnett was empowered to alter Hydrofarm's legal relations or that he was a fiduciary of Hydrofarm. On the contrary, as Sentinel asserts, and the evidence shows, Winnett was working for Superpro and "had a written agreement to be paid sales commissions by Superpro on sales to Hydrofarm." Furthermore, Winnett's knowledge, as a former co-owner of Sentinel, of any agreements between Sentinel and Superpro would include, as Sentinel concedes, that the "operative agreement" "does not specifically state that the sales [*12] and distribution rights are exclusive to Sentinel."

Accordingly, Sentinel failed to meet its burden to raise a triable issue as to the requisite elements of a cause of action for intentional interference with contractual relations.

Cause of Action for Interference with Prospective Economic Advantage

"Intentional interference with prospective economic advantage has five elements: (1) the existence, between the plaintiff and some third party, of an economic relationship that contains the probability of future economic benefit to the plaintiff; (2) the defendant's knowledge of the relationship; (3) intentionally wrongful acts designed to disrupt the relationship; (4) actual disruption of the relationship; and (5) economic harm proximately caused by the defendant's action." (*Roy Allan Slurry Seal, Inc. v. American Asphalt South, Inc. \(2017\) 2 Cal.5th 505, 512, 213 Cal. Rptr. 3d 568, 388 P.3d 800.*)

"The tort of interference with prospective economic advantage protects the same interest in stable economic relationships as does the tort of interference with contract, though interference with prospective advantage does not require proof of a legally binding contract. [Citation.] The chief practical distinction between interference with contract and interference with prospective economic advantage is that a broader [*13] range of privilege to interfere is recognized when the relationship or economic advantage interfered with is only prospective." (*Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co., supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1126*, fn. omitted.)

"[A] plaintiff seeking to recover for alleged interference with prospective economic relations has the burden of pleading and proving that the defendant's interference was wrongful 'by some measure beyond the fact of the interference itself.'" (*Della Penna, supra, 11 Cal.4th at pp. 392-393.*) "[A]fter Della Penna the elements of the tort of interference with prospective economic advantage remain the same, except that the third element also requires a plaintiff to plead intentional wrongful acts on the part of the defendant designed to disrupt the relationship." (*Korea Supply, supra, 29 Cal.4th at p. 1154*, italics omitted.) "California has required plaintiffs to show that a defendant has engaged in an independently, or inherently, wrongful act." (*Id. at p. 1161.*)

"[W]hile intentionally interfering with an existing contract is 'a wrong in and of itself' [citation], intentionally interfering with a plaintiff's prospective economic advantage is not. . . . An act is not independently wrongful merely because defendant acted with an improper motive. As we said in Della Penna, 'the law usually takes care to draw lines of legal liability in a way that [*14] maximizes areas of competition free of legal penalties.' (*Della Penna, supra, 11 Cal.4th at p. 392.*) The tort of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage is not intended to punish individuals or commercial entities for their choice of commercial relationships or their pursuit of commercial objectives, unless their interference amounts to independently actionable conduct. [Citation.] We conclude, therefore, that an act is independently wrongful if it is unlawful, that is, if it is proscribed by some constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard." (*Korea Supply, supra, 29 Cal.4th at pp. 1158-1159.*)

Sentinel claims Hydrofarm's alleged independent wrongful conduct was "tacitly inducing Russ Winnett to materially breach the non-[interference] clause of his [buy-out] agreement with Sentinel." Hydrofarm did this, Sentinel asserts, by "encourag[ing] [Winnett's] efforts to secure Superpro as a supplier to Hydrofarm." But Sentinel does not identify any evidence that Hydrofarm knew of the non-interference clause in the buy-out agreement between Winnett and Sentinel. Nor does Sentinel identify any facts evidencing a "tacit" inducement to breach the Winnett/Sentinel agreement. Indeed, in its cause of action against Winnett [*15] for breach of the non-interference clause, Sentinel alleges he did so by accepting employment with Growop, not by attempting to "secure Superpro as a supplier to Hydrofarm."

Thus, as the trial court concluded, Sentinel failed to produce evidence "showing that [Hydrofarm] engaged in any independently wrongful conduct beyond the alleged interference" and thus failed to raise a triable issue as to a material element of a cause of action for tortious interference with prospective economic advantage.

Cause of Action for Unfair Competition

In its third cause of action for unfair competition under Business and Professions Code section 17200, Sentinel alleged Hydrofarm "unfairly utilized information obtained through their role as distributors of [Sentinel's] products to sell almost identical products without the cost of research, design and development and creation of a factory equipped to manufacture the products." Sentinel specifically claims there is a triable issue as to "whether Hydrofarm unfairly took advantage of the industry and efforts of Sentinel by using and employing confidential information regarding the manufacture of the hydroponic products sold by Sentinel, copying the designs and appearance of the products, and then thereafter [*16] directly competing with Sentinel after illicitly obtaining access to Superpro's engineers."

"Because Business and Professions Code section 17200 is written in the disjunctive, it establishes three varieties of unfair competition—acts or practices which are unlawful, or unfair, or fraudulent. "In other words, a practice is prohibited as 'unfair' or 'deceptive' even if not 'unlawful' and vice versa.'"'" (Cel-Tech Communications, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Telephone Co. \(1999\) 20 Cal.4th 163, 180, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 (Cel-Tech).)

"Although the unfair competition law's scope is sweeping, it is not unlimited. Courts may not simply impose their own notions of the day as to what is fair or unfair." (Cel-Tech, supra, 20 Cal.4th at p. 182.) Cel-Tech noted, "A few Courts of Appeal have attempted a definition. (E.g., People v. Casa Blanca Convalescent Homes, Inc. \(1984\) 159 Cal.App.3d 509, 530, 206 Cal. Rptr. 164. . . . '[A]n "unfair" business practice occurs when it offends an established public policy or when the practice is immoral, unethical, oppressive, unscrupulous or substantially injurious to consumers.']; [State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. v. Superior Court \[\(1996\)\] 45 Cal.App.4th \[1093.\] 1104, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229](#) ["the court must weigh the utility of the defendant's conduct against the gravity of the harm to the alleged victim"].)" (Cel-Tech, at p. 184.)

Cel-Tech concluded earlier attempts to define "unfairness" resulted in "definitions [that] are too amorphous and provide too little guidance to courts and businesses." (Cel-Tech, supra, 20 Cal.4th at p. 185.) It explained: "any finding of unfairness to competitors under [[Business and Professions Code\] section 17200](#) [must] [*17] be tethered to some legislatively declared policy or proof of some actual or threatened impact on competition. We thus adopt the following test: When a plaintiff who claims to have suffered injury from a direct competitor's 'unfair' act or practice invokes [[Business and Professions Code\] section 17200](#), the word 'unfair' in that section means conduct that threatens an incipient violation of an antitrust law, or violates the policy or spirit of one of those laws because its effects are comparable to or the same as a violation of the law, or otherwise significantly threatens or harms competition." (Cel-Tech, at pp. 186-187.)

As the trial court ruled, Sentinel's operative complaint "fail[ed] to allege a single unlawful act." While the complaint "alludes to possible trademark violations, or trade secret, or trade dress issues . . . it alleges no violation of any statute."

Apparently recognizing this, Sentinel asserts in its briefing on appeal only "unfairness" by Hydrofarm. Sentinel claims this alleged unfairness took the form of taking "advantage of the industry and efforts of Sentinel," "using and employing confidential information," "copying the designs and appearance of the products," and "directly competing with Sentinel."

Sentinel, however, failed to [*18] meet its burden of presenting competent evidence raising an issue of material fact in this regard. (Aguilar, supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 845.) There is no evidence Hydrofarm was a manufacturer of the products at issue, rather than simply a buyer. Sentinel's brief does not identify what allegedly "confidential information" Hydrofarm used. The complaint alleges only that Hydrofarm "unfairly utilized information obtained through [its] role as distributor[] of [Sentinel's] products." And, even assuming Hydrofarm's purchase of products directly from Superpro made it a direct competitor of Sentinel, direct competition itself is not illegal or unfair. Indeed, the Unfair Competition Law seeks to protect "fair competition in commercial markets for goods and services." (Kwikset Corp. v. Superior Court \(2011\) 51 Cal.4th 310, 320, 120 Cal. Rptr. 3d 741, 246 P.3d 877.) As Sentinel itself acknowledged, "[i]njury to a competitor is not equivalent to injury to competition. . . . ([Cel-Tech II, supra, 20 Cal.4th at [p.] 186.{}])]

Evidentiary Objection to Declaration of Xu Liqiang

Sentinel also claims the trial court erred in overruling its objection to the declaration of Xu, a founder of Superpro, because Hydrofarm "failed to submit a translator's declaration." Xu's declaration, which was properly sworn, was in English. However, the declaration [*19] recited, among other things, that prior to signing the declaration, Xu had reviewed a Chinese translation.

We review a trial court's evidentiary ruling for abuse of discretion. (People v. McCurdy \(2014\) 59 Cal.4th 1063, 1095, 176 Cal. Rptr. 3d 103, 331 P.3d 265.)

Sentinel claims Evidence Code sections 750, 751, subdivision \(a\) and 752, subdivision \(a\) required that a translator's declaration be filed in conjunction with Xu's declaration. Evidence Code section 750 provides: "A person who serves as an interpreter or translator in any action is subject to all the rules of law relating to witnesses." Evidence Code section 751 provides, in part: "A translator shall take an oath that he or she will make a true translation in the English language of any writing he or she is to decipher or translate." (Evid. Code, § 751, subd. \(c\).) Evidence Code section 753 provides, in turn, that: "When the written characters in a writing offered in evidence are incapable of being deciphered or understood directly, a translator who can decipher the characters or understand the language shall be sworn to decipher or translate the writing." (Evid. Code, § 753, subd. \(a\).)

It is unclear whether these statutory provisions even apply to Xu's declaration, given that the document submitted to the court was in English and in no need of translation.

But even if Xu's English declaration was subject to the Evidence Code "oath" requirements, counsel for co-defendant Worm's Way submitted a declaration [*20] that she retained TransPerfect Translations, Inc. to translate Xu's declaration from English to Chinese for his review. As an exhibit to her declaration, counsel attached a "certification" by an employee of TransPerfect Translations, Inc. certifying that the English to Chinese translation was "produced . . . according to our . . . certified quality management system, and has been validated and judged to be a true and accurate translation." This certification was "[s]worn to before" an Illinois notary public. Sentinel then filed "Amended Evidentiary Objections" to Xu's declaration, addressing the translation issues. Hydrofarm filed a declaration of the same TransPerfect Translations employee, made under California law, in which she reaffirmed that the translation was true and accurate.

Sentinel maintains, however, that the trial court "did not consider the Translator's Certification." This is so, it claims, because the court stated in its order granting summary judgment that "This ruling does not consider any of the new evidence submitted with the reply," and the certification was submitted with the reply. But that is not a fair reading of the trial court's order. Rather, read in the [*21] context of all the parties' submissions, it is apparent the court was not referring to the translator's certification, but to the "large volume of new evidence" proffered by the parties, "none of which is included in their original Separate Statement."

We, thus, conclude that on this record, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in overruling Sentinel's objection to Xu's declaration.

DISPOSITION

The judgment is affirmed. Costs on appeal to respondent.

Banke, J.

We concur:

Humes, P. J.

Margulies, J.

---

End of Document

O1 Communs., Inc. v. MCI Communs. Servs.

United States District Court for the Eastern District of California

January 18, 2019, Decided; January 18, 2019, Filed

No. 2:18-cv-01950-JAM-DB

Reporter

2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9459 *; 2019 WL 266253

O1 COMMUNICATIONS, INC., Plaintiff, v. MCI COMMUNICATIONS SERVICES, INC. and VERIZON SELECT SERVICES INC., Defendants.

Core Terms

---

Communications, rates, tariffed, alleges, Defendants', switched, charges, breach of contract claim, VoIP Symmetry Rule, carrier's, customers, access services, unfair, doctrine of primary jurisdiction, contractual, withholding, disputed, unfair competition, invoice, tariff

Counsel: [*1] For O1 Communications, Inc., Plaintiff: Anita Taff-Rice, LEAD ATTORNEY, iCommLaw, Walnut Creek, CA.

For MCI Communications Services Inc., Verizon Select Services Inc., Defendants: Kevin D. Horvitz, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Meghan M. Baker, LEAD ATTORNEY, Downey Brand LLP (Sacramento), Sacramento, CA; Scott H. Angstreich, PHV, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg Hansen Todd Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC.

Judges: JOHN A. MENDEZ, UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE.

Opinion by: JOHN A. MENDEZ

Opinion

---

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO STAY COUNT I AND TO DISMISS COUNTS II and III

This matter involves a billing dispute between two telecommunications companies. O1 Communications, Inc. ("Plaintiff" or "O1") sued MCI Communications Services, Inc. and Verizon Select Services, Inc. (collectively, "Defendants" or "Verizon"), alleging Verizon improperly withheld, and continues to withhold, payments for switched access services that O1 provided to Verizon. First Amended Compl. ("FAC"), ECF No. 7. Verizon moves to stay O1's breach of contract claim, and to dismiss O1's claims for violations of the federal Communications [*2] Act and California's unfair competition law. Mot., ECF No. 14-1.

For the reasons set forth below, the Court GRANTS IN PART and DENIES IN PART Defendants' motion.<sup>1</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> This motion was determined to be suitable for decision without oral argument. E.D. Cal. L.R. 230\(g\). The hearing was scheduled for January 8, 2019. The parties should also take notice that this is the only footnote in this Order. The Court finds

I. FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

O1 is a competitive local exchange carrier ("CLEC") based in El Dorado Hills, California. FAC ¶ 6. O1 provides Verizon with switched access services, routing and connecting long-distance calls for Verizon customers. FAC ¶¶ 2, 6-8. Interexchange carriers, like Verizon, pay originating access charges to CLECs for connecting customers who initiate long-distance calls within a CLEC's local calling area and terminating access charges to CLECs for connecting customers who receive long-distance calls within a CLEC's local calling area. See FAC ¶¶ 2, 12. O1 also provides database queries that enable toll free calls to be directed to the correct destination. FAC ¶ 12.

The federal inter-carrier tariff compensation scheme permits CLECs to charge different amounts for switched access services in part based on the functionality of the services provided. FAC ¶ 13. O1 and Verizon disagreed on the functionality provided by O1, and thus could not agree on the appropriate compensation based on federal [*3] and California state tariffs. FAC ¶ 2. To settle this dispute, in February 2015, O1 and Verizon entered into an agreement (the "Settlement Agreement") which, among other things, provides flat per-minute rates for the access charges to be billed by O1 as a substitute for the otherwise applicable, but disputed, tariffed rates. FAC ¶¶ 13-14, 18-20; Settlement Agreement, ECF No. 14-2, at 2-3. The Settlement Agreement is governed by New York law. Settlement Agreement ¶ 12.

Beginning with the January 1, 2015 invoice, O1 billed Verizon the rates agreed to by Verizon in the Settlement Agreement, and, until February 5, 2016, Verizon fully paid the invoices. FAC ¶¶ 22-23. Verizon subsequently ceased payments and disputed O1's invoices from January 2015 through May 2016, asserting O1 failed to provide full end-office switched access functionality and that much of the traffic transmitted by O1 consisted of fraudulent, "spoofed" calls. FAC ¶¶ 23, 27-28. O1 denied Verizon's allegations and the parties exchanged letters in 2016 and 2017 regarding the disputed payments. See Exhibits 2-4, ECF No. 7-1, at 3-10. Despite Verizon's failure to pay under the terms of the Settlement Agreement, O1 has, as required [*4] by law, continued to provide Verizon and its customers with switched access services. FAC ¶¶ 30-34.

Moreover, O1 alleges "[u]pon information and belief, Verizon also may have colluded with AT&T in an effort to drive O1 from the market by cutting off O1's revenues." FAC ¶ 67. Specifically, O1 contends, "[u]pon information and belief, on or about March 2016, Verizon personnel communicated with AT&T Corp. personnel about AT&T Corp.'s allegations that most, if not all, of the toll free traffic transmitted by O1 to AT&T was 'spoofed' and that because of the alleged 'spoofing,' AT&T was withholding 100% of O1's invoiced amounts." FAC ¶ 25. O1 further alleges that Verizon began to withhold payments to O1 after, and as a consequence of, those communications with AT&T. FAC ¶ 27.

On July 14, 2018, O1 filed this suit to recover contractual payments allegedly owed by Verizon. Compl., ECF No. 1. In its First Amended Complaint, O1 brings causes of action for breach of contract, violation of the federal Communications Act (47 U.S.C. § 201), and violation of California's unfair competition law (Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200). FAC at 10-15.

Verizon moves to stay O1's breach of contract claim under the primary jurisdiction doctrine, and to dismiss O1's claims [*5] for violations of the federal Communications Act and California's unfair competition law for failure to state a claim or, in the alternative, to also stay these claims. Mot., ECF No. 14-1. O1 opposes the motion. Opp'n, ECF No. 24.

II. OPINION

A. Breach of Contract Claim

Verizon argues this Court should stay O1's breach of contract claim, under the primary jurisdiction doctrine, pending the FCC's resolution of whether the VoIP Symmetry Rule applies to LECs that partner with over-the-top VoIP providers. Mot. at 6. As is relevant here, the FCC plans to determine whether an LEC partnered with an over-the-that 71 footnotes by Verizon and 10 footnotes by O1 is very distracting. The parties are strongly encouraged to avoid such excessive and unnecessary use of footnotes in the future.

---

top VoIP provider, which provides call routing over a broadband Internet connection, performs the functional equivalent of end-office switching and can thus charge the higher tariffed rates due for that service. Id. at 3-4, 6.

"The [primary jurisdiction] doctrine is a 'prudential' one, under which a court determines that an otherwise cognizable claim implicates technical and policy questions that should be addressed in the first instance by the agency with regulatory authority over the relevant industry rather than by the judicial branch." Clark v. Time Warner Cable, 523 F.3d 1110, 1114 (9th Cir. 2008). The Ninth Circuit has applied the primary jurisdiction doctrine [*6] when there is a "(1) a need to resolve an issue that (2) has been placed by Congress within the jurisdiction of an administrative body having regulatory authority (3) pursuant to a statute that subjects an industry or activity to a comprehensive regulatory authority that (4) requires expertise or uniformity in administration." Clark, 523 F.3d at 1115 (quoting Syntek Semiconductor Co. v. Microchip Tech. Inc., 307 F.3d 775, 781 (9th Cir. 2002)).

Verizon contends O1 exclusively partners with over-the-top VoIP providers and so the FCC's interpretation of the VoIP Symmetry Rule, which would impact the appropriate tariffed rate, is directly raised in the contractual dispute with O1. Mot. at 3, 8. And while the interpretation of the VoIP Symmetry Rule is indeed pending before the FCC (see AT&T Corp. v. FCC, 841 F.3d 1047, 1049, 426 U.S. App. D.C. 383 (D.C. Cir. 2016) (vacating In the Matter of Connect Am. Fund, 30 F.C.C. Rcd. 1587 (2015))), Verizon's argument fails. The primary jurisdiction doctrine does not apply here because O1's breach of contract claim does not implicate the FCC's interpretation of the VoIP Symmetry Rule. Rather, the breach of contract claim can be properly adjudicated based on the plain language of the Settlement Agreement.

The Settlement Agreement provides, with respect to different services, that O1 "shall bill Verizon" "at a rate not to exceed" a certain dollar amount per minute of use. Settlement Agreement ¶¶ [*7] 2(a)—(e). The contract makes no mention of O1's tariffed rates, and the contractual rates provided are owed to O1 irrespective of such tariffed rates. Id. Notwithstanding, Verizon argues the contractual language of "at a rate not to exceed" acts as a cap to O1's tariffed rates, drawing the VoIP Symmetry Rule into the contract. Reply, ECF No. 29, at 2. But reading into the contract an implicit reference to O1's tariffed rates would contradict the unambiguous, plain language of the Settlement Agreement. See Beal Sav. Bank v. Sommer, 8 N.Y.3d 318, 324, 865 N.E.2d 1210, 834 N.Y.S.2d 44 (N.Y. 2007). The express language of the Settlement Agreement is clear, and the flat-rate payment provisions do not implicate O1's tariffed rates and are therefore not contingent on the FCC's interpretation of the VoIP Symmetry Rule.

In further support of its request to stay the proceedings, Verizon cites recent decisions from the District of Colorado (Teliax, Inc. v. AT&T Corp., No. 15-cv-01472-RBJ, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 141470, 2017 WL 3839459 (D. Colo. Sept. 1, 2017)) and Northern District of Illinois (Peerless Network, Inc. v. MCI Commc'n Servs., Inc., No. 14 C 7417, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 43044, 2018 WL 1378347 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 16, 2018)) which stayed similar payment disputes under the primary jurisdiction doctrine pending the FCC's resolution of the VoIP Symmetry Rule. Mot. at 6-7. Verizon also points to O1's own request to stay proceedings for the same reason in a case against AT&T. Mot. at 7 (citing [*8] O1 v. AT&T, No. 3:16-cv-01452 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 17, 2018), ECF No. 129). But this argument is misplaced. Each of these three other cases specifically involved disputes about tariffed rates, which incorporate the VoIP Symmetry Rule, and not contractual agreements where payments are not contingent on tariffed rates.

Thus, this Court declines to stay O1's breach of contract claim.

B. Violation of Communications Act Section 201

Section 201 of the federal Communications Act provides that "[a]ll charges, practices, classifications, and regulations for and in connection with such communications service, shall be just and reasonable and any such charge, practice, classification, or regulation that is unjust and unreasonable is hereby declared unlawful." 47 U.S.C. § 201(b).

O1 alleges that Verizon's "self-help" of withholding contractual payments due to O1 and Verizon's "self-declared refund of previously made payments to O1" is unreasonable and violates Section 201 of the Communications Act. FAC ¶¶ 51-55. O1 relies on a Fifth Circuit decision affirming a judgment against a customer-carrier under Section 201 for the customer-carrier's reduction of amounts paid to an LEC on undisputed invoice charges based on its estimate of previous "overpayments" on certain disputed charges. *CenturyTel of Chatham, LLC v. Sprint Commc'ns Co., L.P.*, 861 F.3d 566, 577-578 \(5th Cir. 2017\). This Court [*9] does not find *CenturyTel* persuasive.

Verizon contends the FCC's recent interpretation of Section 201 is instructive. Mot. at 10-11 (discussing Memorandum Opinion & Order, *All Am. Tel. Co. v. AT&T Corp.*, 26 FCC Rcd. 723 \(2011\) ("All American Order")). This Court agrees. In the All American Order, the Commission noted that it has "repeatedly held that an allegation by a carrier that a customer has failed to pay charges specified in the carrier's tariff fails to state a claim for violation of any provision of the Act, including sections 201\(b\) and 203\(c\)—even if the carrier's customer is another carrier. These holdings stem from the fact that the [Communications] Act generally governs a carrier's obligations to its customers, and not vice versa." *All American Order*, 26 FCC Rcd., at 727. The Commission therefore held that, "although a customer-carrier's failure to pay another carrier's tariffed charges may give rise to a claim in court for breach of tariff/contract, it does not give rise to a claim . . . for breach of the Act itself." Id. And although the case at hand involves a claim brought under Section 201 for failure to pay charges under a contract, rather than a tariff, that difference does not change the result.

O1 alleges that since March 2016 Verizon has entirely withheld payments due for switched access services provided by O1. FAC ¶ 35. [*10] But a claim against Verizon, in its role as a customer, for withholding such payments is not actionable under Section 201 of the Communications Act. O1's cause of action for violation of Section 201 of the Communications Act is therefore dismissed with prejudice.

C. Violation of California's Unfair Competition Law

California's unfair competition law ("UCL") broadly prohibits "any unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business act or practice." *Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200*. The California Supreme Court, guided by federal antitrust law, held a business act or practice is "unfair" when the conduct "threatens an incipient violation of an antitrust law, or violates the policy or spirit of one of those laws because its effects are comparable to a violation of the law, or that otherwise significantly threatens or harms competition." *Cel-Tech Commc'ns, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co.*, 20 Cal. 4th 163, 187, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 \(Cal. 1999\). Moreover, "any finding of unfairness to competitors under section 17200 [must] be tethered to some legislatively declared policy or proof of some actual or threatened impact on competition." *Cel-Tech*, 20 Cal. 4th, at 186-87.

O1 alleges Verizon is engaging in an unfair business practice by knowingly taking advantage of O1's legal obligation to continue providing switched access service to Verizon while Verizon refuses to pay for those services based on unsubstantiated [*11] allegations, in collusion with AT&T and in effort to deprive O1 of cash flows. FAC ¶¶ 56-75; Opp'n at 13-15. O1 thus argues the predicate unfair conduct goes beyond a mere breach of contract—which alone cannot sustain a UCL claim—because Verizon has colluded with AT&T in withholding the payments to harm O1, a competitor. Opp'n at 14-15. O1 appears, in its opposition, to "tether" its UCL claim to a violation of California Business and Professions Code Section 17048. Id.

As currently pleaded, O1's UCL cause of action must be dismissed. The Supreme Court's reasoning in *Twombly*, which also involved allegedly collusive practices of telecommunications companies, is illustrative. *Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly*, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 \(2007\). In *Twombly*, citing the defendants' "parallel course of conduct," the plaintiffs alleged "upon information and belief" that the defendants had "entered into a contract, combination or conspiracy" in violation of antitrust law. *Twombly*, 550 U.S., at 551. The Supreme Court held that the plaintiffs had "not nudged their claims across the line from conceivable to plausible," and accordingly, "their complaint must be dismissed." *Id. at 547*. The Supreme Court explained the defendants' "parallel conduct, even conduct consciously undertaken" was insufficient to state a claim for an antitrust violation because [*12] such conduct was "just as much in line with a wide swath of rational and competitive business strategy unilaterally prompted by common perceptions of the market." *Id. at 554, 555*.

Here, O1 alleges "upon information and belief" that, in deciding not to pay for the switched access services, Verizon communicated with AT&T about AT&T's rationale for refusing to pay O1, that Verizon adopted AT&T's rationale, and, thus, that Verizon "may" be "collu[ding]" with AT&T in an effort to drive O1 from the market by cutting off O1's revenues." FAC ¶¶ 25, 27, 67, 69. But O1's allegation of collusion, upon which its UCL claim rests, is conclusory and insufficient to support the claim. Verizon's parallel conduct could simply be the rational reaction of a business actor to publicly-made allegations against a counterparty. Reply at 5 (citing Twombly, 550 U.S., at 557). Nevertheless, this Court grants Plaintiff leave to amend its complaint with respect to the UCL claim. See Cook, Perkiss & Liehe, Inc. v. N. Cal. Collection Serv. Inc., 911 F.2d 242, 247 \(9th Cir. 1990\) ("[A] district court should grant leave to amend even if no request to amend the pleading was made, unless it determines that the pleading could not possibly be cured by the allegation of other facts.").

Separately, O1's request for relief for the UCL violation is not fatal [*13] to its claim. In the FAC, O1 requested treble damages for the alleged UCL violation. FAC ¶ 80. But plaintiffs may only seek injunctive relief and restitution, not damages, under a UCL claim. Cel-Tech, 20 Cal. 4th, at 179. Restitution is improper here because Verizon has not taken any money from O1 through an unfair business practice, rather Verizon has not paid money allegedly owed. See Kraus v. Trinity Mgmt. Servs., Inc., 23 Cal. 4th 116, 126-127, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 485, 999 P.2d 718 \(Cal. 2000\). And while O1 did not specifically request an injunction in the FAC, under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure every final judgment, other than a default judgment, "should grant the relief to which each party is entitled, even if the party has not demanded that relief in its pleadings." Fed. R. Civ. P. 54\(c\). Verizon was on notice of O1's claims, and would not be prejudiced by injunctive relief barring unfair business practices. See Seven Words LLC v. Network Sols., 260 F.3d 1089, 1098 \(9th Cir. 2001\).

Thus, the Court grants Verizon's motion to dismiss O1's UCL claim without prejudice.

III. ORDER

For the reasons set forth above, the Court GRANTS IN PART and DENIES IN PART Defendants' motion (ECF No. 14-1) as follows:

1. DENIES Defendants' motion to stay Plaintiff's breach of contract claim (Count I);
2. GRANTS WITH PREJUDICE Defendants' motion to dismiss Plaintiff's cause of action for violation of Section 201 of the Communications [*14] Act (Count II); and
3. GRANTS WITHOUT PREJUDICE Defendants' motion to dismiss Plaintiff's UCL claim (Count III).

If Plaintiff elects to amend its complaint with respect to the UCL claim, Plaintiff shall file a Second Amended Complaint within twenty days of this Order. Defendants' responsive pleading is due twenty days thereafter.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Dated: January 18, 2019

/s/ John A. Mendez

JOHN A. MENDEZ

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

Suarez v. iHeartMedia + Entm't, Inc.

United States District Court for the Western District of Texas, San Antonio Division

January 22, 2019, Decided; January 22, 2019, Filed

Civil Action No. SA-18-CV-1237-XR

Reporter

2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10171 *; 2019-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P80,651; 2019 WL 286186

ANGEL SUAREZ, Plaintiff, v. IHEARTMEDIA + ENTERTAINMENT, INC., Defendant.

Core Terms

---

allegations, Pleadings, antitrust, songs, anti trust law

Counsel: [*1] Angel Suarez, Plaintiff, Pro se, San Antonio, TX.

For iHeartMedia + Entertainment, Inc., Defendant: Richard William Espey, Espey & Associates, PC, San Antonio, TX.

Judges: XAVIER RODRIGUEZ, UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE.

Opinion by: XAVIER RODRIGUEZ

Opinion

---

ORDER ON MOTION FOR JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS

On this date, the Court considered Defendant iHeartMedia's Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings. Docket no. 10. Plaintiff Angel Suarez, proceeding pro se, did not respond, but the Court will consider all applicable filings to determine whether dismissal is warranted. After careful consideration, the Court GRANTS Defendant's motion and dismisses Plaintiff's claims without prejudice.

BACKGROUND

On November 2, 2018, Plaintiff filed his Original Petition in the 225th Judicial District Court of Bexar County, Texas. Docket no. 1-2. He alleges he is "suing for monopoly practices based on USA antitrust laws" and for not practicing "equal opportunity." Id. He alleges Defendant plays songs "from artists of their favorite record label and never play my songs on my album 'Latino Supremacist.'" Id. Plaintiff alleges that fans have requested his songs and that he has sent his songs to Defendant. Id. Because Defendant has not played his [*2] music, he alleges he has lost profit opportunities and royalties and seeks $7,000,000 in damages and an order that Defendant "play one of the Eastar record label songs." Id.

On November 28, Defendant removed to this Court. On December 21, Defendant filed its Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings. Docket no. 10. Defendant argues that Plaintiff's claim "based on USA antitrust laws," which must be construed as a claim under the Sherman Act or Clayton Act, fails under either statute. Id. Further, Defendant seeks dismissal with prejudice because Plaintiff could allege no viable antitrust claim even if allowed to re-plead. Id. at 5.

Plaintiff did not respond to this motion, but he filed on December 28 a document entitled "Proof Requested." Docket no. 11. This document functions as a table of contents for an attached CD that contains letters, calls, and emails that Plaintiff alleges are proof his songs have been requested and are "an initial proof but this is not the only thing we have in our power." Id. Defendant objected to the included evidence on January 11, 2019, and although Plaintiff's filing was not a response to Defendant's motion, Defendant included a reply in support of its motion anyway. [*3] Docket no. 13.

LEGAL STANDARD

Defendant moves for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12\(c\). "The standard for dismissal under Rule 12\(c\) is the same as that for dismissal for failure to state a claim under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\)." Chauvin v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 495 F.3d 232, 237 (5th Cir. 2007) (citing Johnson v. Johnson, 385 F.3d 503, 529 (5th Cir. 2004)); Guidry v. Am. Pub. Life Ins. Co., 512 F.3d 177, 180 (5th Cir. 2007) (adopting the same standard after Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007)). "To survive a [Rule 12\(b\)\(6\)] motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to 'state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.'" Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570). A claim for relief must contain (1) "a short and plain statement of the grounds for the court's jurisdiction"; (2) "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to the relief"; and (3) "a demand for the relief sought." FED. R. CIV. P. 8\(a\). In considering a motion to dismiss under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\), all factual allegations from the complaint should be taken as true, and the facts are to be construed favorably to the plaintiff. Fernandez-Montez v. Allied Pilots Assoc., 987 F.2d 278, 284 (5th Cir. 1993). To survive a 12(b)(6) motion, a complaint must contain "more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555 (2007). "Factual allegations must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Id. Judgment on the pleadings is only appropriate when "the material facts are not in [*4] dispute and a judgment on the merits can be rendered by looking to the substance of the pleadings and any judicially noticed facts." Great Plains Trust Co. v. Morgan Stanley Dean Witter & Co., 313 F.3d 305, 312 (5th Cir. 2009).

DISCUSSION

The Court liberally construes Plaintiff's allegations "under the USA antitrust laws" as stating a claim under the Sherman Act or the Clayton Act. The Court is aware of no basis in the law, however, for Plaintiff's claim for "equal opportunity" in Defendant's allocation of radio airtime, no matter how liberally construed. Docket no. 1-2. To the extent that this phrase represents a cause of action independent of Plaintiff's antitrust claim, that cause of action is dismissed.

Further, Plaintiff fails to state a viable claim under any antitrust law. First, Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1, requires a plaintiff to show that the defendants "(1) engaged in a conspiracy (2) that restrained trade (3) in a particular market." MM Steel, L.P. v. JSW Steel (USA) Inc., 806 F.3d 835, 843 (5th Cir. 2015) (quoting Spectators' Commc'n Network Inc. v. Colonial Country Club, 253 F.3d 215, 220 (5th Cir. 2001)). Here, Plaintiff does not allege a restraint on trade or a particular market. To the extent his complaint can be read as alleging conspiracy, these allegations are conclusory and lack sufficient facts.

Second, a claim under Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2, requires a plaintiff to show "(1) that the defendant has engaged in predatory or anticompetitive [*5] conduct with (2) a specific intent to monopolize and (3) a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power." Retractable Techs., Inc. v. Becton Dickinson & Co., 842 F.3d 883, 891 (5th Cir. 2016) (quoting Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. Mc+Quillan, 506 U.S. 447, 456, 113 S. Ct. 884, 122 L. Ed. 2d 247 (1993)). Here, Plaintiff's allegations do not satisfy any element.

Third, the Clayton Act prohibits price discrimination, 15 U.S.C. § 13, and tying agreements (sales made on the agreement not to use the goods of a competitor), 15 U.S.C. § 14. No substantive provision of the Clayton Act is put in issue by Plaintiff's allegations. Further, standing to pursue an antitrust suit requires the plaintiff to show "1) injury-in-fact, an injury to the plaintiff proximately caused by the defendants' conduct; 2) antitrust injury; and 3) proper plaintiff status, which assures that other parties are not better situated to bring suit." Doctor's Hosp. of Jefferson, Inc. v. Southeast Medical Alliance, 123 F.3d 301, 305 (5th Cir. 1997). The requirement for antitrust injury is necessary for a Sherman Act claim and is inferred from Section 4 of the Clayton Act. Id. (citing 15 U.S.C. § 15(a)). Antitrust injury is "injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes the defendants' acts unlawful. The injury should reflect the anticompetitive effect either of the violation or of anticompetitive acts made possible by the violation." Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489, 97 S. Ct. 690, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701 (1977). Plaintiff seeks millions of dollars [*6] in damages but has not adequately alleged any injury, much less one that reflects the "anticompetitive effect" of Defendant's conduct. Thus, Plaintiff does not state any viable claim, antitrust or otherwise, and dismissal is warranted.

Finally, Defendant asks that the Court dismiss with prejudice, as Plaintiff's claims are frivolous and no additional facts could cure the pleading's deficiencies. It is true that on these facts Plaintiff states no claim, and that far more factual material is needed for any claim to survive a Rule 12 motion. But given Plaintiff's pro se status and the dearth of pleaded facts, the Court cannot reliably assess whether a viable claim is possible. Thus, Plaintiff's claims are dismissed without prejudice.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Defendant's Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings (docket no. 10) is GRANTED. Plaintiff's claims are DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE. The Clerk is directed to close this case.

It is so ORDERED.

SIGNED this 22nd day of January, 2019.

/s/ Xavier Rodriguez

XAVIER RODRIGUEZ

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

---

End of Document

Edoho-Eket v. Wayfair.com

United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit

January 23, 2019, Filed

No. 17-6509

Reporter

2019 U.S. App. LEXIS 2332 *; 2019 WL 2524366

UDEME EDOHO-EKET, Plaintiff-Appellant, v. WAYFAIR.COM; WAYFAIR, LLC, Defendants-Appellees.

Notice: NOT RECOMMENDED FOR FULL-TEXT PUBLICATION. SIXTH CIRCUIT RULE 28 LIMITS CITATION TO SPECIFIC SITUATIONS. PLEASE SEE RULE 28 BEFORE CITING IN A PROCEEDING IN A COURT IN THE SIXTH CIRCUIT. IF CITED, A COPY MUST BE SERVED ON OTHER PARTIES AND THE COURT. THIS NOTICE IS TO BE PROMINENTLY DISPLAYED IF THIS DECISION IS REPRODUCED.

Prior History: [*1] ON APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE MIDDLE DISTRICT OF TENNESSEE.

Edoho-Eket v. Wayfair.com, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 194360 \(M.D. Tenn., Nov. 27, 2017\)

Core Terms

---

magistrate judge, district court, report and recommendation, recommendation

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > De Novo Review

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN1 [] Standards of Review, De Novo Review

The appellate court reviews de novo a district court's dismissal of a complaint pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\).

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

HN2 [] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

In order to avoid dismissal, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Under this standard, the court may not accept conclusory legal assertions that do not include specific facts necessary to establish the cause of action.

Civil Procedure > Parties > Pro Se Litigants > Pleading Standards

HN3 [] Pro Se Litigants, Pleading Standards

Pleadings drafted by pro se litigants should be held to less stringent standards than those drafted by lawyers and should be liberally construed, but pro se litigants are not exempt from the requirements of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Internet Business > Online Advertising > Spam Email

Civil Procedure > Preliminary Considerations > Justiciability > Standing

HN4 [] Online Advertising, Spam Email

A plaintiff lacks standing to bring a claim under the CAN-SPAM Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 7701, where she is not an internet access service provider. 15 U.S.C.S. § 7706\(g\)

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > Federal Trade Commission Act

HN5 [] Trade Practices & Unfair Competition, Federal Trade Commission Act

Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act does not provide a private right of action. 15 U.S.C.S. § 57b.

Civil Procedure > Judicial Officers > Magistrates > Waiver of Appeals

HN6 [] Magistrates, Waiver of Appeals

Parties may not raise new arguments or issues at the district court stage that were not presented to the magistrate judge.

Civil Rights Law > Protection of Rights > Section 1983 Actions > Elements

HN7 [] Section 1983 Actions, Elements

In order to state a viable constitutional claim under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983, a plaintiff must allege that: (1) she was deprived of a right, privilege, or immunity secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States, and (2) the deprivation was caused by a person acting under color of state law.

Counsel: Udeme Edoho-Eket, Plaintiff - Appellant, Pro se, Nashville, TN.

For Wayfair.Com, Wayfair, Llc, Defendants - Appellees: Tara L. Swafford, Swafford Law Firm, Franklin, TN; Elizabeth Grace Hart, The Swafford Law Firm, Franklin, TN.

Judges: Before: KEITH, MOORE, and GIBBONS, Circuit Judges.

Opinion

---

ORDER

Udeme Edoho-Eket, a pro se Tennessee resident, appeals the district court's judgment dismissing her complaint for failing to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. This case has been referred to a panel of the court that, upon examination, unanimously agrees that oral argument is not needed. See Fed. R. App. P. 34(a).

In 2017, Edoho-Eket filed a complaint seeking monetary damages against Wayfair.com and Wayfair, LLC, alleging that the defendants discriminated against her and violated "BRIA 23 1 Free Markets and Antitrust Law," "FTC regulations to cease spam activities," and the "Federal Trade Commission Act . . . Section 5." She claimed that these violations occurred when the defendants blocked her from making new purchases from their websites and those of their partners after she returned items that she claimed were defective or broken. She alleged [*2] that her right as a United States citizen to shop anywhere at her discretion had been violated because the defendants prevented her from making orders "at any retailer."

The defendants subsequently filed a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). After briefing, the magistrate judge recommended the dismissal of the complaint with prejudice, reasoning that: (1) "BRIA 23 1" was a publication from a private group and thus not a law providing any statutory grounds for relief; (2) Edoho-Eket did not provide a specific citation to any Federal Trade Commission ("FTC") regulation concerning spam activities; (3) the Federal Trade Commission Act ("FTCA"), Section 5, did not provide a private right of action; and (4) she failed to allege membership in a protected class, or that similarly situated individuals outside of her class were treated differently by the defendants. Over Edoho-Eket's objections, the district court adopted the magistrate judge's recommendation and dismissed the complaint.

On appeal, Edoho-Eket asserts that her claims should be considered under the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, "BRIA 23 1 Free Markets and Antitrust Law," the FTCA, the Controlling the Assault of Non-Solicited Pornography and Marketing Act of 2003 ("CAN-SPAM Act") [*3], and Chapter 21 of Title 42 of the United States Code. She also argues that she did claim that she was a member of a protected class in her objections to the magistrate judge's report and recommendation and that she has conflicts of interest with Judge Waverly D. Crenshaw, Jr., and Magistrate Judge Joe Brown.

HN1[ We review de novo a district court's dismissal of a complaint pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6). See Tackett v. M & G Polymers, USA, LLC, 561 F.3d 478, 481 (6th Cir. 2009). HN2[ In order to avoid dismissal, "a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to 'state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.'" Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007)). "A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Id. Under this standard, we may not "accept conclusory legal assertions that do not include specific facts necessary to establish the cause of action." Lutz v. Chesapeake Appalachia, LLC, 717 F.3d 459, 464 (6th Cir. 2013). HN3[ Pleadings drafted by pro se litigants should be held to less stringent standards than those drafted by lawyers and should be liberally construed, Martin v. Overton, 391 F.3d 710, 712 (6th Cir. 2004), but pro se litigants are not exempt from the requirements of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Wells v. Brown, 891 F.2d 591, 594 (6th Cir. 1989).

The district [*4] court correctly determined that Edoho-Eket failed to state claims for violations of "BRIA 23 1" or any FTC law or regulation. First, "BRIA 23 1" appears to be a publication from a private group,<sup>1</sup> and therefore is not a law enacted by Congress providing statutory relief. Second, Edoho-Eket did not identify in the complaint a specific FTC regulation or law concerning spam that the defendants had violated. The defendants suggested that she might be referring to the CAN-SPAM Act, 15 U.S.C. § 7701, and Edoho-Eket embraces this suggestion on appeal, but HN4[↑] she lacks standing to bring such a claim because she is not an internet access service provider. See 15 U.S.C. § 7706\(g\); Facebook, Inc. v. Power Ventures, Inc., 844 F.3d 1058, 1064 (9th Cir. 2016); Omega World Travel, Inc. v. Mummagraphics, Inc., 469 F.3d 348, 357 n.3 (4th Cir. 2006); Hafke v. Rosedale Grp. LLC, No. 1:11-cv-220, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 116003, 11 WL 4758768, at *4-5 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 7, 2011). Lastly, HN5[↑] Section 5 of the FTCA does not provide a private right of action. See 15 U.S.C. § 57b; FTC v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., 853 F.2d 458, 464 (6th Cir. 1988). Moreover, Edoho-Eket failed to object to the magistrate judge's recommendation that she lacked standing to assert these FTCA claims. See United States v. Walters, 638 F.2d 947, 949-50 (6th Cir. 1981).

Although Edoho-Eket did not elaborate on her claim for "discrimination" in the complaint, the district court initially determined that service should issue because the complaint could be liberally construed to state discrimination claims under 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981 and 1982 involving a breach of contract [*5] because the district court "infer[red] that the plaintiff believes that the defendants' discrimination was based on the plaintiff's ethnicity, race, national origin, or descent as known by or as perceived by the defendants from the plaintiff's name." Despite this initial review, the district court referred the complaint to a magistrate judge and stated that he could still recommend the dismissal of any claim under 28 U.S.C. § 1915\(e\)\(2\). The magistrate judge recommended dismissal of the discrimination claim because Edoho-Eket did not allege that she belonged to a protected class. See Christian v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 252 F.3d 862, 872 (6th Cir. 2001) (discussing the standard under § 1981); Mencer v. Princeton Square Apartments, 228 F.3d 631, 634-35 (6th Cir. 2000) (discussing the standard under § 1982). The magistrate judge correctly noted that, in light of the defendants' motion to dismiss, the mere fact that Edoho-Eket had what appeared to be an African name was insufficient to infer that she was making an allegation of racial discrimination. In fact, she did not make her first reference to race until her objections to the magistrate judge's report and recommendation. See Murr v. United States, 200 F.3d 895, 902 n.1 (6th Cir. 2000) (explaining that HN6[↑] parties may not raise new arguments or issues at the district court stage that were not presented to the magistrate judge). In adopting the magistrate judge's report [*6] and recommendation, the district court also noted that the magistrate judge had already given Edoho-Eket an opportunity to amend the complaint to add the required allegations.

Edoho-Eket also did not raise an equal-protection claim until her objections to the magistrate judge's report and recommendation. Even if we were to construe her use of the word "discrimination" as raising such a claim, HN7[↑] in order to state a viable constitutional claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, a plaintiff must allege that: (1) she was deprived of a right, privilege, or immunity secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States, and (2) the deprivation was caused by a person acting under color of state law. Flagg Bros. v. Brooks, 436 U.S. 149, 155, 98 S. Ct. 1729, 56 L. Ed. 2d 185 (1978). Edoho-Eket did not allege in the complaint that the defendants were state actors, and her allegations concerning online retail transactions do not suggest any action fairly attributable to the state. See Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co., 457 U.S. 922, 937, 102 S. Ct. 2744, 73 L. Ed. 2d 482 (1982). Even if the defendants had received some kind of public funding, as she suggested in her objections to the magistrate judge's report and recommendation, such funding would not convert them into state actors. See Rendell-Baker v. Kohn, 457 U.S. 830, 840, 102 S. Ct. 2764, 73 L. Ed. 2d 418 (1982).

Lastly, Edoho-Eket argues that Judge Crenshaw and Magistrate Judge Brown have conflicts of interest in her [*7] case because she personally knows Judge Crenshaw and has seen Magistrate Judge Brown on television. However, Edoho-Eket did not follow the proper procedures to seek judicial disqualification in the district court, and these allegations, without anything more, do not give us reason to question the judges' impartiality. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 144, 455; Youn v. Track, Inc., 324 F.3d 409, 423 \(6th Cir. 2003\).

---

<sup>1</sup> Constitutional Rights Foundation, Free Markets and Antitrust Law, BILL OF RIGHTS IN ACTION, Vol. 23, No. 1, <http://www.crf-usa.org/bill-of-rights-in-action/bria-23-1-free-markets-and-antitrust-law.html> (last visited Oct. 9, 2018).

For these reasons, we AFFIRM the district court's judgment.

---

End of Document

Owens v. Cal. Dep't of Corr. & Rehab.

United States District Court for the Eastern District of California

January 23, 2019, Decided; January 23, 2019, Filed

Case No. 1:19-cv-00027-DAD-JLT

Reporter

2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11034 *

JERRY LEE OWENS, Petitioner, v. CALIFORNIA DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS AND REHABILITATION, Respondent.

Core Terms

---

Recommendation, frivolous, writ of mandamus, federal court, nonsensical, mandamus, federal district court, mandamus relief, district court, state official, state court, contends, courts

Counsel: [*1] Jerry Owens, Petitioner, Pro se, Jamestown, CA.

Judges: Jennifer L. Thurston, UNITED STATES MAGISTRATE JUDGE.

Opinion by: Jennifer L. Thurston

Opinion

---

FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATION TO DISMISS PETITION FOR WRIT OF MANDAMUS

On December 26, 2018, Petitioner filed a petition for writ of mandamus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1361 in this Court. The petition is frivolous and nonsensical. Therefore, the Court will recommend it be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

DISCUSSION

The All Writs Act, codified at 28 U.S.C. § 1651\(a\), provides that "[t]he Supreme Court and all courts established by Act of Congress may issue all writs necessary or appropriate in aid of their respective jurisdictions and agreeable to the usages and principles of law." The federal mandamus statute set forth at 28 U.S.C. § 1361 provides: "The district courts shall have original jurisdiction of any action in the nature of mandamus to compel an officer or employee of the United States or any agency thereof to perform a duty owed to the plaintiff." 28 U.S.C. § 1361. Mandamus relief is only available to compel an officer of the United States to perform a duty if (1) the petitioner's claim is clear and certain; (2) the duty of the officer "is ministerial and so plainly prescribed as to be free from doubt," Tagupa v. East-West Center, Inc., 642 F.2d 1127, 1129 \(9th Cir.1981\) (quoting Jarrett v. Resor, 426 F.2d 213, 216 \(9th Cir.1970\)); and (3) no other adequate [*2] remedy is available. Piledrivers' Local Union No. 2375 v. Smith, 695 F.2d 390, 392 \(9th Cir.1982\).

Petitioner's claims are entirely nonsensical. Petitioner claims that state "criminal case(s) ... are really civil claims in equity, without full disclosure to the people," and they are "fraudulently called criminal." (Doc. 1 at 14.) He contends the state criminal courts "are operating under trust law, assuming Defendant is a decedent," and that "[a]fter finding the alleged Defendant guilty, the court clerks sell the judgment to the Federal Courts since the Defendant is a decedent, the Court officials consider themselves as a beneficiary." (Id.) Petitioner contends his state criminal judgment is, in actuality, a note which becomes a security, which is then pooled with other securities and sold as bonds. (Id. at 14.) Petitioner continues on with this argument, citing the Uniform Commercial Code, Internal Revenue Service actions, admiralty law, antitrust law, unfair trade practices, and so forth. (Id. at 15-16.) The arguments are clearly nonsensical, frivolous, and do not merit further analysis. Furthermore, mandamus relief is not available because Respondent is not an officer, employee or agency of the United States. Title 28 U.S.C. § 1651(a) does not vest a federal district court with the power to compel [*3] performance of a state court, judicial officer, or another state official's duties under any circumstances. Pennhurst State Sch. & Hosp. v. Halderman, 465 U.S. 89, 106, 104 S. Ct. 900, 79 L. Ed. 2d 67 (1984) (11th Amendment prohibits federal district court from ordering state officials to conform their conduct to state law). Thus, a petition for mandamus to compel a state official to take or refrain from some action is frivolous as a matter of law. Demos v. United States Dist. Court, 925 F.2d 1160, 1161-62 (9th Cir. 1991); Robinson v. California Bd. of Prison Terms, 997 F. Supp. 1303, 1308 (C.D.Cal. 1998) (federal courts are without power to issue writs of mandamus to direct state agencies in the performance of their duties); Dunlap v. Corbin, 532 F.Supp. 183, 187 (D.Ariz.1981) (plaintiff sought order from federal court directing state court to provide speedy trial), aff'd without opinion, 673 F.2d 1337 (9th Cir. 1982).

RECOMMENDATION

Accordingly, the Court RECOMMENDS that this action be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE as frivolous.

This Findings and Recommendation is submitted to the assigned District Court Judge, pursuant to the provisions of 28 U.S.C. § 636 (b)(1)(B) and Rule 304 of the Local Rules of Practice for the United States District Court, Eastern District of California. Within thirty days after service of the Findings and Recommendation, Petitioner may file written objections with the Court. Such a document should be captioned "Objections to Magistrate Judge's Findings and Recommendation." The Court will then review the Magistrate Judge's ruling pursuant to [*4] 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C). Petitioner is advised that failure to file objections within the specified time may waive the right to appeal the District Court's order. Martinez v. Ylst, 951 F.2d 1153 (9th Cir. 1991).

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Dated: January 23, 2019

/s/ Jennifer L. Thurston

UNITED STATES MAGISTRATE JUDGE

Physician Specialty Pharm. v. Therapeutics

United States District Court for the District of Minnesota

January 23, 2019, Decided; January 24, 2019, Filed

No. 18-cv-1044 (MJD/TNL)

Reporter

2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 53115 *; 2019 WL 1239705

Physician Specialty Pharmacy, LLC, Plaintiff, v. Prime Therapeutics, LLC, Defendant.

Subsequent History: Adopted by, Dismissed by, in part Physician Specialty Pharm., LLC v. Prime Therapeutics, LLC, 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 52431 \(D. Minn., Mar. 28, 2019\)

Motion granted by Physician Specialty Pharm., LLC v. Prime Therapeutics, LLC, 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 67092 \(D. Minn., Apr. 19, 2019\)

Magistrate's recommendation at Physician Specialty Pharm., LLC v. Prime Therapeutics, LLC, 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 159853 \(D. Minn., Aug. 8, 2019\)

Motion denied by, Costs and fees proceeding at Physician Specialty Pharm., LLC v. Prime Therapeutics, LLC, 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 221857 \(D. Minn., Dec. 19, 2019\)

Core Terms

---

pharmacy, relevant market, specialty, monopolization, audit, mail-order, geographic, pled, batch, prescription, alleges, retail, monopoly power, markets, recommends, network, conspiracy, sufficient facts, alleged facts, health insurance, state law claim, large group, anticompetitive, rule-of-reason, parties, pleads, prices, fails, citizenship, antitrust

Counsel: [*1] For Plaintiffs: Adrienne Dresevic & Robert J. Dindoffer, The Health Law Partners, P.C., Farmington Hills, MI and Elizabeth R. Odette & Kristen G. Marttila, Lockridge Grindal Nauen P.L.L.P., Minneapolis, MNN.

For Defendants: Christine Lindblad, Meghan M.A. Hansen, Ellie J. Barragry, & Alex L. Rubenstein, Fox Rothschild LLP, Minneapolis, MN.

Judges: Tony N. Leung, United States Magistrate Judge.

Opinion by: Tony N. Leung

Opinion

---

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

This matter is before the Court, United States Magistrate Judge Tony N. Leung, on Defendant's Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Amended Complaint (ECF No. 18) and Plaintiff's Motion in Limine Regarding June 30, 2016 Settlement Demand Letter. (ECF No. 35). These motions have been referred to the undersigned magistrate judge for a report and recommendation to the Honorable Michael J. Davis, United States District Judge for the District of Minnesota, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636\(b\)\(1\) and Local Rule 72.1. (ECF No. 25). Based on all the files, records, and proceedings herein, and for the reasons set forth below, this Court recommends that Defendant's motion be GRANTED and Plaintiff's Motion be DENIED AS MOOT.

I. FACTUAL BACKGROUND AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Physician Specialty Pharmacy, LLC ("PSP"), is a specialty pharmacy [*2] located in and organized pursuant to the laws of Florida. Amend. Compl. ¶ 13. (ECF No. 6). Because PSP is located on the Florida-Alabama border, a substantial number of its customers come from Alabama. Prime Therapeutics ("Prime") is a pharmacy benefit manager located in Minnesota that is owned by nine health plans that are members of the Blue Cross Blue Shield Association. Id. at ¶ 14, 16. Prime manages the prescription drug benefits for Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Alabama, a health insurance provider that controls 93 percent of large-group health benefits in Alabama. Id. at ¶¶ 17, 144-45.

For several years, PSP filled prescriptions claims for Prime's beneficiaries. Id. at ¶ 26. When a Prime member used PSP to fill a prescription, PSP would use an electronic interface to submit a claim to Prime. Id. at ¶ 47. Prime would then tell PSP what amount Prime would reimburse PSP for the prescription and what amount the member would pay for the prescription. Id. Once Prime processed the prescription, it received payment from the member's health insurance plan. Id. at ¶ 48.

Beginning at the end of 2015 and continuing into 2016, Prime began to conduct a series of audits into PSP's business. [*3] Id. at ¶ 27. The first batch of audits began on December 14, 2015 and covered claims submitted between November 30, 2014 and November 30, 2015. Id. at ¶ 77. The second batch of audits began in January 2016 and covered claims between December 12, 2015 and January 8, 2016. Id. The final batch of audits began in the first half of 2016 and covered all claims submitted between January 8, 2016 and May 27, 2016. Id. While Prime conducted these audits, it refused to pay PSP for any prescription that PSP dispensed to a Prime member. Id. at ¶ 78.

Prime issued its findings for the first two batches of audit results in April 2016. Id. at ¶ 81. It rejected over $300,000 worth of claims that PSP submitted to Prime for reasons including incorrect entry of an origin code and using drug wholesalers that Prime had excluded, despite the fact that Prime never notified PSP of those exclusions. Id. at ¶¶ 83-85. Prime informed PSP that it would need to submit to an "administrative audit appeal process" if it wanted to receive payment for the rejected claims. Id. at ¶ 87.

Before PSP could appeal, however, and before Prime issued the results of its final batch of audits, Prime terminated PSP from its pharmacy [*4] network for "poor audit performance." Id. at ¶ 88-89. PSP subsequently appealed both the first two audit batches and its termination from Prime's network. Id. at ¶¶ 93-94. A few months after PSP appealed, Prime issued its results for the third batch of audits. Id. at ¶ 95. It rejected more than $500,000 worth of PSP's claims for technical and clerical errors. Id. at ¶ 98-99. Prime also rejected PSP's appeals of its first two batches of audit results, but gave PSP the opportunity for a final appeal, as required by state law. Id. at ¶ 101-02. Around the same time, Prime announced a partnership with Walgreens to provide specialty pharmacy and mail service businesses. Id. at ¶ 171.

PSP submitted its final appeal of the first batch of audit results and its first appeal of the third batch of audit results on September 3, 2016. Id. at ¶¶ 104-05. It also submitted a final appeal of the second batch of audit results on September 16, 2016. Id. ¶ 106. Prime denied PSP's first appeal of the third batch of audit results and asked for amended final appeals of the other two batches on November 23, 2016. Id. at ¶¶ 107-08. PSP filed a final appeal of the third batch of audit results and supplemental [*5] information on the other two batches of audit results on December 23, 2016. Id. at ¶ 110. It also submitted additional information regarding the third batch of audit results on January 11, 2017. Id. at ¶ 112.

On April 3, 2017, Prime announced the creation of AllianceRx, a joint venture with Walgreens to provide specialty and mail-order pharmacy services. Id. at ¶¶ 159-60. A few weeks later, Prime issued its final audit results regarding PSP's claims. Id. at ¶ 117. Prime rejected over $700,000 worth of claims. Id. at ¶ 118. Shortly thereafter, Prime also rejected PSP's appeal of its termination from Prime's network. Id. at ¶ 124. PSP subsequently requested a dispute resolution conference, at which an attorney for Prime indicated that she did not know of any PSP claims where the patient did not receive the medication that was billed or prescribed. Id. at ¶ 131. PSP alleges that Prime used the audits as a pretext to terminate PSP from its network for the benefit of AllianceRx.

PSP filed suit, alleging that Prime violated Minnesota and Florida state law and federal antitrust law. PSP alleged that Prime and Walgreens unlawfully restrained trade in the Alabama specialty/mail-order pharmacy [*6] markets and the retail pharmacy market by vertically integrating over 90 percent of Alabama's prescription drug benefits and by excluding PSP from dispensing prescriptions to Prime members. Id. at ¶ 364-66. PSP also alleged that Prime and Walgreens combined, conspired, and agreed to monopolize the Alabama specialty/mail-order pharmacy market and the Alabama retail pharmacy market and that Prime attempted to monopolize or monopolized the same markets. Id. at ¶¶ 367-74.

Prime moved to dismiss the complaint. (ECF No. 18). Attached to a declaration in support of its motion was a settlement demand letter from PSP, dated June 30, 2016. (ECF No. 21-3). PSP subsequently moved to exclude that letter from evidence. (ECF No. 35). At the hearing, the Court ordered the parties to provide supplemental letter briefing on a number of issues. The parties submitted those letters on October 1 and 9, 2018, following which the Court took the matter under advisement.

II. MOTION TO DISMISS

Prime has moved to dismiss the Amended Complaint under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) and 12\(b\)\(1\). When determining a Rule 12\(b\)\(1\) motion, courts "must distinguish between a 'facial attack' and a 'factual attack' on jurisdiction." Carlsen v. GameStop, Inc., 833 F.3d 903, 908 \(8th Cir. 2016\) (quoting Osborn v. United States, 918 F.2d 724, 729 n.6 \(8th Cir. 1990\)). "In a facial attack, 'the court [*7] restricts itself to the face of the pleadings, and the non-moving party receives the same protections as it would defending against a motion brought under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\).'" Id. "In a factual attack, the court considers matters outside the pleadings, and the non-moving party does not have the benefit of 12\(b\)\(6\) safeguards." Id.

In deciding a Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) motion, a court accepts as true all well-pleaded factual allegations and then determines "whether they plausibly give rise to an entitlement to relief." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 680, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 \(2009\). In doing so, the court must draw reasonable inferences in the plaintiff's favor. Zink v. Lombardi, 783 F.3d 1089, 1098 \(8th Cir. 2015\) (citation omitted). "To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Sletten & Brettin Orthodontics v. Cont'l Cas. Co., 782 F.3d 931, 934 \(8th Cir. 2015\) (citation and internal quotations omitted). Facial plausibility of a claim exists "when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 556, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929). Although a sufficient complaint need not be detailed, it must contain "[f]actual allegations . . . enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555 (citation omitted). Complaints are insufficient [*8] if they contain "naked assertions devoid of further factual enhancement." Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557) (internal quotation marks omitted).

A. Federal Law Claims

PSP first contends that Prime and Walgreens violated Section 1 of the Sherman Act, which provides that "[e]very contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is declared to be illegal." 15 U.S.C. § 1. "Despite its broad language,"

Section 1 applies only to "unreasonable" restraints of trade or commerce. Craftsmen Limousine, Inc. v. Ford Motor Co., 363 F.3d 761, 772 (8th Cir. 2004) ("Craftsmen I"). In order to evaluate whether PSP has pled facts showing the alleged contract, combination, or conspiracy is unreasonable, the Court must first identify what legal standard governs the challenged conduct. Id. at 773.

The default standard for evaluating whether conduct violates Section 1 of the Sherman Act is the "rule of reason." Leegin Creative Leather Products, Inc. v. PSKS, Inc., 551 U.S. 877, 885, 127 S. Ct. 2705, 168 L. Ed. 2d 623 (2007). To successfully plead a case under the rule-of-reason standard, a plaintiff must allege facts showing that the challenged conduct has "detrimental effects" upon competition. Fleigel v. Christian Hosp., NE-NW, 4 F.3d 682, 688 (8th Cir. 1993). Traditionally, a plaintiff pleads such a case by first alleging sufficient facts to define a relevant market, which is composed of both a product and geographic market. [*9] Craftsmen Limousine, Inc. v. Ford Motor Co., 491 F.3d 380, 388 (8th Cir. 2007) ("Craftsmen II"). The plaintiff then performs "an inquiry into market power and market structure designed to assess the [conduct's] actual effect." Copperweld Corp. v. Independence Tube Corp., 467 U.S. 752, 768, 104 S. Ct. 2731, 81 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1984). This inquiry requires consideration of a number of factors, "including specific information about the relevant business, its condition before and after the restraint was imposed, and the restraint's history, nature, and effect." State Oil Co. v. Khan, 522 U.S. 3, 10, 118 S. Ct. 275, 139 L. Ed. 2d 199 (1997). This is a very "challenging" standard for a plaintiff to meet. Craftsmen II, 491 F.3d at 388.

In some cases, however, a truncated, "quick look" rule-of-reason standard applies. See Calif. Dental Ass'n v. FTC, 526 U.S. 756, 770, 119 S. Ct. 1604, 143 L. Ed. 2d 935 (1999). The quick-look standard applies when a person "with even a rudimentary understanding of economics could conclude that the arrangements in question would have an anticompetitive effect on customers and markets." Id. at 770. Typically, the quick rule standard applies when there are facts pled that show "genuine adverse effects on competition," such as a "naked restriction on price or output." FTC v. Ind. Fed'n of Dentists, 476 U.S. 447, 460, 106 S. Ct. 2009, 90 L. Ed. 2d 445 (1986). In these cases, because the "anticompetitive effects can easily be ascertained," Calif Dental Ass'n v. FTC, 526 U.S. at 770, there is no need to conduct an "elaborate market analysis." Ind. Fed'n of Dentists, 476 U.S. at 461. Instead, upon a showing of anticompetitive effects, the burden turns immediately to the defendant to show some form of pro-competitive [*10] justification for the conduct. National Collegiate Athletic Ass'n v. Board of Regents of University of Oklahoma, 468 U.S. 85, 113, 104 S. Ct. 2948, 82 L. Ed. 2d 70 (1984) ("NCAA").

Finally, some restraints are considered unreasonable "per se." Leegin, 551 U.S. at 886. The per se standard applies to restraints that "always or almost always tend to restrict competition and decrease output." Id. Such restraints include horizontal agreements between competitors to fix prices, divide markets, or boycott certain firms. Id.; Johnson Bros. Liquor Co. v. Bacardi U.S.A., Inc., 830 F. Supp. 2d 697, 707 (D. Minn. 2011). Because these categories of restraints are "so strongly linked with anti-competitive activity and their economic impact so immediately obvious . . . the plaintiff meets its burden of proving the unreasonableness of the restraint merely by proving the existence and substance of the restraint itself." Craftsmen II, 491 F.3d at 387.

PSP contends that the per se standard should apply here, citing caselaw holding that the per se standard applies to conspiracies between firms to exclude another from the marketplace, so long as the conspirators possess "market power or exclusive access to an element essential to effective competition." Johnson Bros., 830 F. Supp. 2d at 707; see also Silver v. New York Stock Exchange, 373 U.S. 341, 347-48, 83 S. Ct. 1246, 10 L. Ed. 2d 389 (1963). But the per se standard applies to those types of conspiracies only when the conspirators directly compete with one another. See Johnson Bros., 830 F. Supp. 2d at 700 (considering agreement between two producers of alcoholic beverages). This is not such [*11] a case. PSP does not allege that Walgreens and Prime compete directly with one another. Instead, PSP alleges that Prime is a customer or purchaser of pharmacies like PSP and Walgreens. And when there is an agreement between a buyer and a seller to exclude another entity from the market, the per se rule is inapplicable. See NYNEX Corp. v. Discon, Inc., 525 U.S. 128, 136-37, 119 S. Ct. 493, 142 L. Ed. 2d 510 (1998) (explaining that the freedom to switch suppliers lies close to the heart of the competitive process that the antitrust laws seek to encourage). Instead, such agreements are subject to a rule-of-reason analysis. Lomer Wholesale Grocery, Inc. v. Dieter's Gourmet Foods, Inc., 824 F.2d 582, 590 (8th Cir. 1987). The Court will therefore apply that standard to PSP's Section 1 claim.

The next question is whether the traditional, more extensive rule-of-reason standard should apply or whether the conduct should be evaluated under the truncated, quick-look standard. Neither party appears to argue that the quick-look standard is appropriate. And the facts as pled do not establish the type of "naked restraint on price [or] output" that would mandate such an analysis. NCAA, 468 U.S. at 110. PSP does not allege any facts to show that prices have been affected dramatically or that output has decreased. And other courts have declined to apply the quick-look standard to vertical restraints, including exclusive [*12] dealing arrangements. See Hannah's Boutique, Inc. v. Surdej, 112 F. Supp. 3d 758, 770 (E.D. Ill. 2015) (declining to apply quick-look standard to vertical price restraints); Acton v. Merle Norman, No. cv-88-7462, 1995 WL 441852 \*8, \(C.D. Cal. May 16, 1995\) (noting that the Ninth Circuit has never approved of the quick look approach for such restraints). Accordingly, PSP has not alleged sufficient facts to show the challenged conduct has "obvious anticompetitive effects." Law v. National Collegiate Athletic Ass'n, 134 F.3d 1010, 1020 \(10th Cir. 1998\). Thus, this case is subject to traditional rule-of-reason analysis.

Because the traditional rule-of-reason standard applies, PSP must allege sufficient facts to define a relevant product and geographic market. Double D Spotting Service, Inc. v. Supervalu, Inc., 136 F.3d 554, 560 \(8th Cir. 1998\). The relevant product market must be broad enough to include only those products that are reasonably interchangeable. Id. The geographic market must encompass the "area in which consumers can practically seek alternative sources of the product." Id. Though "proper market definition can typically be determined only after a factual inquiry into the commercial realities faced by consumers," courts have not imposed "a per se prohibition against dismissal of antitrust claims for failure to plead a relevant market" under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\). Id. (quoting Queen City Pizza, Inc. v. Domino's Pizza, Inc., 124 F.3d 430, 436 \(3d Cir. 1997\)). In this case, PSP alleges two relevant markets: (1) the Alabama retail pharmacy [*13] market and (2) the Alabama specialty and mail-order pharmacy market.

As pled, the geographic market for both relevant markets fails. PSP contends the geographic market encompasses the entire state of Alabama because Alabama controls access to the relevant markets by licensing and regulating pharmacies. But a properly pled geographic market must not only encompass the area in which the seller is able to operate lawfully. It must also be limited to the area where "the purchaser can practically turn for supplies." Tampa Elec. Co. v Nashville Coal Co., 365 U.S. 320, 327, 81 S. Ct. 623, 5 L. Ed. 2d 580 \(1961\). As pled, PSP does not allege any facts that show that a purchaser of retail pharmacy or specialty/mailorder pharmacy services could practically turn to any other similar pharmacy in the state of Alabama to obtain those services.

There are two distinct types of purchasers of retail or mail-order/specialty pharmacy services. The first type is individual patients, who use retail, mail-order, and specialty pharmacy services to fill their prescriptions. The second type is pharmacy benefit managers, like Prime, who seek to create a network of pharmacies that their members can use to fill their prescriptions. As pled, PSP alleges that a patient who fills his or her prescription at [*14] a retail or specialty pharmacy located on the western border of Alabama could reasonably turn to a similar pharmacy located on the other side of the state to fill that prescription.<sup>1</sup> PSP's proposed geographic market also suggests that a pharmacy benefit manager could put together a viable retail or specialty/mail-order pharmacy network for its members by forgoing any pharmacy located in the northern part of the state and instead setting up a network composed entirely of pharmacies in the southern part of the state. But PSP does not allege any facts to support this. In fact, regarding the retail pharmacy market, PSP itself admits in its brief that patients "rarely leave their locality to obtain prescription medications." (ECF No. 29, p. 24). Thus, by PSP's own reasoning, a patient who lives on the western border of Alabama is unlikely to travel to the Florida/Alabama border, where PSP is located, to obtain pharmacy services. PSP's alleged geographic market is therefore not plausible.

The Alabama specialty and mail-order pharmacy market also fails because PSP does not plead sufficient facts to show that those two services should be combined into a single product market. The outer boundaries [*15] of a product market must be determined by examining whether consumers would shift from one service to another in response to a change in the cost of the original service. HDC Med., Inc. v. Minntech Corp., 474 F.3d 543, 547 \(8th Cir. 2007\). Because PSP alleges that specialty and mail-order pharmacies form the same market, they must also allege facts that show it is plausible for a patient seeking mail-order pharmacy services to obtain the same services from a specialty pharmacy and vice versa. See id. PSP does not do so. Though PSP alleges that mail-order pharmacies provide specialty pharmacy services, including drug compounding, PSP does not allege that specialty pharmacies provide mail-order services or that a person who obtains nonspecialty medications through a mail-order pharmacy could obtain those medications from a specialty pharmacy. Thus, as pled, PSP does not show how mail-order and specialty pharmacy services are interchangeable with one another.

---

<sup>1</sup> A statewide geographic market might be plausible for mail-order pharmacies. But PSP does not allege a stand-alone Alabama mail-order market.

The fact that Prime and Walgreens have developed a joint venture that encompasses both specialty and mail-order pharmacy services does not mean that those services are interchangeable for purposes of defining a plausible product market. It simply means that the joint venture offers two different [*16] service lines, each of which is interchangeable with its own market. But a person who requires mail-order prescription drug services could not obtain those services from a specialty pharmacy storefront. Thus, as pled, PSP fails to allege facts showing a plausible product market for mail order and specialty pharmacy services.

Even if PSP pled viable markets, its Section 1 claim would still fail because PSP has failed to demonstrate anticompetitive harm to those markets. Viewing the facts in a light most favorable to PSP, the only harm that it identifies is its own exclusion from the market. But the loss of PSP by itself does not constitute the type of "significant anticompetitive effects" that Section 1 prohibits. See Tanaka v. Univ. of Southern California, 252 F.3d 1059, 1064 (9th Cir. 2001). Conduct does not cause significant harm to a market when it is alleged to have impacted only a single party, even if the purpose of the conduct is retaliation. Id. Instead, the plaintiff must show harm to competitive conditions in the defined markets. Id. In this case, PSP only pleads that it is the victim of a conspiracy intended to drive it out of the relevant markets. That, without more, is insufficient to establish a Section 1 claim. See TheMLSonline.com, Inc. v. Regional Multiple Listing Service of Minnesota, Inc., 840 F. Supp. 2d 1174, 1181-82 (D. Minn. 2012). The conduct that PSP describes might be prohibited [*17] by other laws, including "business tort laws." NYNEX, 525 U.S. at 137. But that does not mean it is unlawful under antitrust law.

In addition, the facts as pled by PSP do not support its claim that it was, or would have been, excluded from the relevant markets. PSP alleges that Prime controls over 90 percent of the relevant markets because it is the exclusive pharmacy benefit manager for Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Alabama, which controls 93 percent of large group health benefits in Alabama. In support of this allegation, PSP cites to a Kaiser Family Foundation ("KFF") study listing the market share for the three largest large group health plans in Alabama. PSP contends that because Prime has excluded PSP from Prime's network, Prime has virtually excluded PSP from the Alabama retail pharmacy and mail order/specialty markets.

For two reasons, the Court does not find PSP's allegations to be sufficient. First, the KFF report on which PSP relies is limited only to those persons with large group health insurance. According to that report, a person has large group health insurance only if he or she works for a firm with more than 100 employees. Kaiser Family Foundation, *Market Share and Enrollment of Largest [*18] Three Insurers-Large Group Market* (2016).<sup>2</sup> The number of persons in Alabama in 2016 with large group health insurance is approximately 530,000. Id. But the United States Census found there were 4,779,736 people in Alabama in 2010 and now estimates there are 4,887,871 people there as of July 1, 2018. United States Census Bureau, QuickFacts Alabama (2018).<sup>3</sup> That means there are more than 4 million Alabama residents who receive health insurance from some other source, including coverage through the individual markets, Medicare, Medicaid, a small group plan, or even a large group health plan that uses a different pharmacy benefit manager. PSP does not allege any facts to show that Prime dominates the pharmacy benefit market for those individuals, nor that show the conduct complained of prohibited PSP from operating in those markets and serving those customers. As a result, PSP cannot show that it was excluded from the relevant markets. For all of these reasons, the Court recommends that PSP's Section 1 claim be dismissed without prejudice.

<sup>2</sup> Available at <https://www.kff.org/other/state-indicator/market-share-and-enrollment-of-largest-three-insurers-large-groupmarket/?currentTimeframe=0&selectedRows=%7B%22states%22:%7B%22alabama%22:%7B%7D%7D%7D&sortModel=%7B%22colId%22:%22Location%22,%22sort%22:%22asc%22%7D>.

<sup>3</sup> Available at <https://www.census.gov/quickfacts/al>. The Court may take judicial notice of publicly-available data about the population. Friends of Lake View School District Inc. No. 25 of Phillips County v. Beebe, 578 F.3d 753, 762 n. 12 (8th Cir. 2009); see also Hollinger v. Home State Mut. Ins. Co., 654 F.3d 564, 571-72 (5th Cir. 2011) ("United States census data is an appropriate and frequent subject of judicial notice").

PSP also alleges that Prime monopolized, or attempted to monopolize, the Alabama [*19] market for retail and specialty and mail-order pharmacy services, in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act. To bring a monopolization claim under Section 2, a plaintiff must plead facts establishing that the defendant: (1) possessed monopoly power in the relevant market and (2) willfully acquired or maintained that power, "as distinguished from growth or development as a consequence of a superior product, business acumen, or historic accident." United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 571, 86 S. Ct. 1698, 16 L. Ed. 2d 778 \(1966\). Monopoly power is the power "to control prices or exclude competition." United States v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 351 U.S. 377, 391, 76 S. Ct. 994, 100 L. Ed. 1264 \(1956\). To prevail on an attempted monopolization claim, a plaintiff must allege facts showing "(1) a specific intent by the defendant to control prices or destroy competition; (2) predatory or anticompetitive conduct undertaken by the defendant directed to accomplishing the unlawful purpose; and (3) a dangerous probability of success." General Indus. Corp. v. Hartz Mountain Corp., 810 F.2d 795, 803 \(8th Cir. 1987\).

In a traditional Section 2 monopolization case, a plaintiff establishes that the defendant possesses monopoly power by defining a relevant geographic and product market and then by pleading facts to show the defendant's share of that particular market. Bathke v. Casey's Gen. Stores, Inc., 64 F.3d 340, 345 \(8th Cir. 1995\). The same requirements apply to a plaintiff bringing an attempted monopolization case. Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 506 U.S. 447, 456, 113 S. Ct. 884, 122 L. Ed. 2d 247 \(1993\). The analysis of the product [*20] and geographic market in a Section 2 claim is identical to the analysis required of those markets in a Section 1 rule-of-reason claim. Compare id. with Double D, 136 F.3d at 560. In this case, PSP alleges the same geographic and product markets as it did for its Section 1 claim. Thus, PSP's Section 2 claim fails for the same reasons.

Even if PSP had pled sufficient facts to allege a plausible market, its claim would fail because PSP does not allege sufficient facts to show that Prime possesses monopoly power in either market. As with its Section 1 claim, PSP's monopoly power allegations are based largely on the KFF study related to large group health plans. And as discussed before, the KFF study relates only to a small subset of Alabama insureds. It is insufficient to establish that PSP has monopoly power in the relevant markets.<sup>4</sup>

Furthermore, the Court cannot conclude on the basis of the KFF study that Prime possesses over 90 percent market share of the retail pharmacy or mail-order/specialty pharmacy markets. Until its joint venture with Walgreens, Prime did not participate in either market. The KFF study that PSP relies on relates only to the market shares of health insurance providers, rather than the market shares of retail pharmacies, mail-order [*21] pharmacies, or specialty pharmacies. PSP appears to imply that because of the joint venture between Prime and Walgreens, Prime will obtain monopoly power in the relevant markets because Prime will require its customers to use only AllianceRx or other Walgreens pharmacies. But PSP does not plead any facts that show Walgreens' market share in the relevant markets, nor does PSP allege facts showing that it is plausible that Prime will require its members to use a Walgreens retail or AllianceRx. The Court therefore cannot conclude that PSP has pled sufficient facts to show that Prime has monopoly power in the relevant markets.

A plaintiff can also prove monopoly power through direct evidence of a monopoly, which is typically established through actual control over prices or the actual exclusion of competitors. Re/Max Int'l, Inc. v. Realty One, Inc., 173 F.3d 995, 1016 \(6th Cir. 1999\). If a plaintiff pleads sufficient facts to show that direct evidence of monopoly power exists, then the plaintiff is not required to plead a plausible geographic or product market, as is required in a traditional Section 2 claim. Id.

---

<sup>4</sup> For the same reasons, even if PSP had alleged facts showing, for purposes of its Section 1 claim, that Prime and Walgreens were direct competitors, PSP would not be able to show that the per se standard should apply to that claim because it does not allege facts showing the two possessed market power. See Johnson Bros., 830 F. Supp. 2d at 707 (requiring proof of market power or exclusive access to an element necessary for competition for per se rule to apply to refusal to deal claim).

PSP, however, does not allege sufficient facts to show direct evidence of monopoly power. PSP does not plead with particularity anywhere in its complaint that [*22] prices will increase as a result of Prime's conduct. Nor can PSP show that it was excluded from operating as a pharmacy as a result of Prime's monopoly power. As discussed above, though Prime excluded PSP from Prime's network, PSP was free to continue operating in both of the relevant markets, serving patients who used other pharmacy benefit managers or had other sources of health insurance, such as Medicare or Medicaid. In fact, the facts as pled show that PSP continued to operate after Prime terminated PSP from its network until the Alabama Board of Pharmacy revoked PSP's license nearly five months later.<sup>5</sup>

In addition, like its Section 1 claim, the fact that Prime excluded PSP from its own network is insufficient to establish the type of exclusionary conduct that is necessary to allege direct evidence of monopoly power. "Generally, Section 2 of the Sherman Act does not restrict the right 'of [a] trader or manufacturer engaged in an entirely private business, freely to exercise his own independent discretion as to parties with whom he will deal.'" Park Irmat Drug Corp. v. Express Scripts Holding Co., 911 F.3d 505, 518 (8th Cir. 2018) (quoting Verizon Commc'n v. Law Offices of Curtis V. Trinko, LLP, 540 U.S. 398, 408, 124 S. Ct. 872, 157 L. Ed. 2d 823 (2004)). A limited exception to this principle exists only when the facts pled show that the defendant elected to forgo short-term benefits because "it [*23] was more interested in reducing competition . . . over the long run by harming its smaller competitor." Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 608, 105 S. Ct. 2847, 86 L. Ed. 2d 467 (1985). That exception, however, "is at or near the outer boundary of Section 2 liability." Trinko, 540 U.S. at 409. And in this case, PSP pleads no facts to show that Prime, Walgreens, or AllianceRx lost out on shortterm profits or other benefits by its decision to terminate PSP from its network. Thus, PSP fails to show direct evidence of monopoly power. Its monopolization claim therefore fails.

PSP further alleges that Prime and Walgreens violated Section 2 of the Sherman Act by conspiring to monopolize the Alabama retail pharmacy and Alabama mail order and specialty pharmacy markets. To bring a conspiracy to monopolize claim, the plaintiff must allege facts showing concerted action undertaken with the specific intent to obtain a monopoly and at least one overt act committed in furtherance of the conspiracy. Alexander v. Nat'l Farmers Org., 687 F.2d 1173, 1182-83 (8th Cir. 1982). Though a conspiracy claim brought under Section 2 does not require proof of a relevant market in the same sense as required for actual and attempted monopolization cases, it does require some "minimal showing of product and geographic context . . . to ensure a claim is not based upon some abstract showing of unlawful intent." [*24] Id. There is little-to-no legal authority setting forth the particular showing that PSP must make under Alexander to allege the appropriate product and geographic context. But for three reasons, the Court concludes that the showing must be substantially similar to what a plaintiff must plead to bring a monopolization claim.

First, other courts that have considered the standard articulated in Alexander have generally concluded that this decision is similar to those in other cases that required a relevant market to be pled. See Auraria Student Housing at the Regency LLC v. Campus Village Apartments, LLC, 843 F.3d 1225, 1240 n. 5 (10th Cir. 2016) (concluding that nine circuits require a relevant market be defined or identified in some less rigorous fashion); Fraser v. Major League Soccer, LLC, 284 F.3d 47, 67 n. 16 (1st Cir. 2002) (stating that a number of decisions, including Alexander, "say that a relevant market is necessary"). At a minimum, these decisions suggest that a plaintiff must allege facts showing some sort of relevant market in order to plead a conspiracy-to-monopolize claim. In fact, these decisions suggest that even under Alexander, that market definition is close to, if not identical with, the standard required for Section 2 claims.

Second, the Alexander court also concluded that "an unlawful conspiracy under Section 2 necessarily violates Section 1 as an 'unreasonable' restraint of trade." [*25] 687 F.2d at 1193. Subsequent decisions from the Eighth Circuit make clear that, absent application of the per se or quick-look standard, a plaintiff must define a relevant

<sup>5</sup>The Court will take judicial notice of the Alabama Board of Pharmacy's license verification for purposes of this motion to dismiss. Stahl v. U.S. Dep't of Agriculture, 327 F.3d 697, 700 (8th Cir. 2003) ("The district court may take judicial notice of public records and thus may consider them on a motion to dismiss.") product and geographic market to bring a Section 1 claim. See, e.g. Double D, 136 F.3d at 560. Thus, allowing a plaintiff to bring a conspiracy-to-monopolize claim under Section 2 without pleading some form of product or geographic market would be inconsistent with Eighth Circuit precedent setting forth the necessary elements to bring a traditional rule-of-reason claim under Section 1. This further supports the requirement that a plaintiff plead a relevant geographic and product market.

Third, and certainly not least, United States Supreme Court precedent decided since Alexander casts doubt on Alexander's conclusion that the relevant market need can be pled in a less rigorous fashion in a conspiracy-to-monopolize case. Section 2 prohibits any person from monopolizing, attempting to monopolize, or combining or conspiring with any other person to monopolize "any part of the trade or commerce among the several States." 15 U.S.C. § 2. In Spectrum Sports, the Supreme Court considered whether a plaintiff needed to define a relevant market in order to plead an attempted monopolization claim. 506 U.S. at 457. The Supreme Court [*26] concluded that Section 2 required such a showing because the "any part" clause of that statute applied both to attempted monopolization cases and monopolization cases. Id. The Court explained that because it previously concluded that the "any part" clause required the pleading of a relevant geographic and product market in a monopolization case, it would require the same showing when pleading an attempted monopolization case. Id.

It "is evident from the text of [Section 2], the 'any part' language also applies to conspiracy-to-monopolize claims." Auraria, 843 F.3d at 1236. It is therefore "equally apparent then, that the 'any part' language does not excuse a plaintiff in a conspiracy to monopolize case from identifying the relevant market." Id.<sup>6</sup> Thus, in light of Spectrum Sports, the "any part" clause requires a plaintiff to plead a geographic and product market when bringing a conspiracy-to-monopolize case. Id. at 1237 (citing Standard Oil Co. of N.J. v. United States, 221 U.S. 1, 61, 31 S. Ct. 502, 55 L. Ed. 619 \(1911\)).

Taking the above factors into consideration, the Court concludes that PSP must define a market in the substantially same way that is required to in order to bring a monopolization or attempted monopolization claim. And as set forth above, PSP does not plead sufficient facts to define a relevant market, [*27] nor show that it has been excluded from that market. Accordingly, the Court recommends that PSP's conspiracy to monopolize claim be dismissed.

Finally, PSP alleges that the actions of Walgreens, Prime, and AllianceRx violate Section 3 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 14. Section 3 makes it unlawful for any person engaged in commerce to set or offer discounts from prices based on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the purchaser would not use the competing products of a seller. PSP contends that the prices negotiated between Prime, AllianceRx, or Walgreens were based on the agreement or understanding that PSP would be excluded from Prime's network.

For a plaintiff to successfully plead a Section 3 claim, the plaintiff must allege facts that show that the contract or agreement forecloses competition "in a substantial share of the line of commerce involved." Tampa Elec., 365 U.S. at 329. The primary factor in this determination is the definition of the relevant market. Id. The plaintiff must also show that "opportunities for other traders to enter into or remain in that market [are] significantly limited." Southeast Missouri Hosp. v. C.R. Bard, Inc., 642 F.3d 608, 625 \(8th Cir. 2011\).

PSP's Section 3 claim fails for the same reasons as PSP's monopoly claim. As set forth above, PSP fails to plead facts establishing a relevant market [*28] or showing that opportunities in the market were significantly limited following the establishment of the joint venture between Prime and Walgreens. At most, PSP is able to show only that opportunities to participate in the relevant markets for large group health plans might be limited. And even assuming that Prime will require its beneficiaries to use Walgreens or AllianceRx going forward, PSP does not allege facts that show it is foreclosed from offering services in the relevant markets to customers with different sources of health insurance. Thus, the Court recommends that PSP's Section 3 claim be dismissed.

<sup>6</sup> The Auraria court also noted that it was the "minority position" to not require that a relevant market be defined in a conspiracy-to-monopolize case. 845 F.3d at 1241. The Court also noted that commentators had concluded that the "better reasoned decisions" required proof of a relevant market in such cases. 845 F.3d at 1239 n. 4.

B. State Law Claims

PSP also pleads a number of state law claims. It contends that, even if the Court dismisses the federal law claims, the Court retains jurisdiction of these claims because the parties are diverse in citizenship and the amount in controversy is greater than $75,000. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332\(a\)\(1\). Prime contends that because it is an LLC and because one of its members is a citizen of Florida, diversity jurisdiction does not exist.

For diversity jurisdiction to exist, there must be "complete diversity of citizenship among the litigants." OnePoint Solutions, LLC v. Borchert, 486 F.3d 342, 346 (8th Cir. 2007). An LLC's citizenship is the citizenship of each of its members. [*29] Id. Thus, if the citizenship of any LLC member is the same as the citizenship of any of the opposing parties, complete diversity of citizenship does not exist for purposes of diversity jurisdiction. See id.

In this case, the parties agree that PSP is a citizen of Florida, but dispute whether any of Prime's members are Florida citizens. At the hearing, Prime argued that Navigy Holding, Inc., a corporation organized pursuant to the laws of Florida, was a member of Prime. PSP agreed that Navigy was a Florida citizen for purposes of diversity jurisdiction but stated that it did not know whether Navigy was a member of Prime. Following the hearing, Prime submitted for in camera review a copy of a joinder agreement showing that Navigy Holding, Inc. was a member of Prime. (ECF No. 52). Prime also made a redacted version of this agreement available to PSP. (ECF No. 50). The Court has reviewed both the redacted and unredacted joinder agreements and concludes that either is sufficient to establish that Navigy is a member of Prime. Accordingly, the Court concludes that diversity jurisdiction does not exist between the parties.

Because diversity jurisdiction does not exist, the Court's original jurisdiction [*30] over this matter is based on the federal questions presented by PSP's Sherman and Clayton Act claims. The Court has supplemental jurisdiction over PSP's state law claims pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1337\(a\). Because the Court has now dismissed the claims arising under original jurisdiction, the Court may decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over the state law claims. 28 U.S.C. § 1337\(c\). In deciding whether to exercise supplemental jurisdiction after dismissing the only claims arising under its original jurisdiction, the Court must consider "the stage of the litigation; the difficulty of the state claim; the amount of judicial time and energy necessary for the claim's resolution; and the availability of a state forum." Minnesota Ass'n of Nurse Anesthetists v. Unity Hosp., 5 F.Supp.2d 694, 711 (D. Minn. 1998), citing Marshall v. Green Giant Co., 942 F.2d 539, 549 (8th Cir. 1991).

The "normal practice" is to dismiss supplemental state law claims when the federal claims are dismissed prior to trial. Kapaun v. Dziedzic, 674 F.2d 737, 739 (8th Cir. 1982). In this case, the remaining state claims turn solely on interpretations of state law relatively unrelated to the competition-related issues of PSP's antitrust claims. Litigation is also not that far along, as the pre-trial scheduling conference has not been held and the parties have not filed their Rule 26 report. Accordingly, the Court recommends that supplemental jurisdiction [*31] not be exercised over PSP's state law claims.

C. Leave to Amend

PSP asks that it receive leave to amend if the Court grants Prime's motion to dismiss. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 15\(a\)\(2\) requires leave to amend be "freely give[n] when justice so requires." The purpose of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure is to facilitate a proper decision on the merits of a claim, rather than on "mere technicalities." Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 181, 83 S. Ct. 227, 9 L. Ed. 2d 222 (1962). The Court believes justice supports providing one more opportunity for PSP to plead facts establishing a viable antitrust claim. The Court therefore recommends that PSP be given leave to amend the complaint.

III. MOTION IN LIMINE REGARDING SETTLEMENT DEMAND LETTER

In support of its motion to dismiss, Prime filed a June 30, 2016 letter that PSP's attorneys sent to Prime and Prime's counsel demanding the release of more than $1,000,000 that PSP claimed Prime wrongly held. Prime filed this letter in support of certain arguments it made regarding PSP's state law claims. PSP now moves to exclude that letter from the record pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 408.

Following dismissal of PSP's antitrust claims, the Court no longer has jurisdiction over PSP's state law claims. The Court therefore need not reach the substantive issues raised in PSP's motion. [*32] See Grinnell Mut. Reinsurance Co. v. Moon, 845 F. Supp. 2d 989, 994 \(D. Minn. 2012\) (declining as moot motion for summary judgment regarding state law cause of action that the court declined to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over). The Court recommends that Plaintiff's Motion in Limine be denied as moot.

IV. RECOMMENDATION

Based on the foregoing, and all the files, records, and proceedings herein, IT IS HEREBY RECOMMENDED that:

1. Defendant's Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Amended Complaint (ECF No. 18) be GRANTED and the Amended Complaint be DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE.
2. Plaintiff be given 30 days from the date of the District Judge's ruling on this Report & Recommendation to file an amended complaint.
3. Plaintiff be given 45 days from the date of the District Judge's ruling on this Report & Recommendation to serve an amended complaint on Defendant.
4. Plaintiff's Motion in Limine Regarding the June 30, 2016, Settlement Demand Letter (ECF No. 35), be DENIED AS MOOT.

Date: January 23, 2019

/s/ Tony N. Leung

Tony N. Leung

United States Magistrate Judge

District of Minnesota

Physician Specialty Pharmacy, LLC v. Prime Therapeutics, LLC

No. 18-cv-1044 (MJD/TNL)

---

End of Document

Ohio State ex rel. AG v. Life Care Ctrs. Am., Inc.

State of Ohio, Court of Common Pleas, Franklin County

January 24, 2019, Decided

Case No. 18 CV 3015

Reporter

2019 Ohio Misc. LEXIS 229 *

OHIO STATE EX REL ATTORNEY GENERAL, Plaintiff, v. LIFE CARE CENTERS AMERICA, INC., Defendant.

Core Terms

---

allegations, competitors, asserts, Valentine Act, statute of limitations, plain statement, geographic, antitrust, prices

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

HN1 [] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

In construing a claim for purposes of a Civ.R. 12\(B\)\(6\) motion, it is presumed that all factual allegations in the claim are true and it must appear beyond doubt that the party can prove no set of facts warranting recovery. As such, all reasonable inferences must be drawn in favor of the nonmoving party. Because Ohio is a notice pleading state, a party need only set forth "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the party is entitled to relief." Civ.R. 8\(A\)\(1\). Further, a pleader is ordinarily not required to allege in the complaint every fact he or she intends to prove; such facts may not be available until after discovery. For this reason, the court dismisses claims only when a party can prove no set of facts entitling her to relief. Because it is so easy for the pleader to satisfy the standard of Civ.R. 8\(A\), few complaints are subject to dismissal.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > Time Limitations

HN2 [] Trade Practices & Unfair Competition, State Regulation

The Valentine Act, R.C. § 1331.01 et seq., is Ohio's antitrust statute which prevents agreements between competitors to exchange sensitive information and unreasonably restrain trade. Any civil or criminal action or proceeding for a violation of R.C. § 1331.01 to R.C. 1331.14 shall be forever barred unless commenced within four years after the cause of action accrued. R.C. § 1331.12.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > Time Limitations

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation

HN3 [] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

The Ohio Legislature patterned the Valentine Act, R.C. § 1331.01 et seq., after the federal antitrust statute, the Sherman Act. Accordingly, the Supreme Court of Ohio looks to federal case law when evaluating Valentine Act claims. In Zenith Radio Corp., the Supreme Court of United States held: In the context of a continuing conspiracy to violate the antitrust laws, this has usually been understood to mean that each time a plaintiff is injured by an act of the defendants a cause of action accrues to him to recover the damages caused by that act and that, as to those damages, the statute of limitations runs from the commission of the act.

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > Extensions & Revivals

HN4 [] Statute of Limitations, Extensions & Revivals

Under federal law, even when a plaintiff alleges a continuing violation, an overt act by the defendant is required to restart the statute of limitations and the statute runs from the last overt act.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > Extensions & Revivals

HN5 [] Regulated Practices, Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

Antitrust law provides that, in the case of a "continuing violation," say a price fixing conspiracy that brings about a series of unlawfully high priced sales over a period of years, each overt act that is part of the violation and that injures the plaintiff, e.g., each sale to the plaintiff, starts the statutory period running again, regardless of the plaintiffs knowledge of the alleged illegality at much earlier times.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

HN6 [] Complaints, Requirements for Complaint

Ohio is a notice pleading state, where only a short and plain statement is necessary to adequately state a claim. Civ.R. 8\(A\)\(1\). Under Civ.R. 12\(B\)\(6\), a court need not look beyond the four corners of a complaint.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Market Definition > Relevant Market > Geographic Market Definition

HN7 [] Relevant Market, Geographic Market Definition

The determination of the adequacy of a relevant market, like a geographic market, is typically a question of fact. The Supreme Court of the United States had held, a geographic market is sufficient if it sets out the geographic parameters of "effective competition." An area of effective competition is charted by careful selection of the market area in with the seller operates, and to which the purchaser can practically turn for supplies.

Judges: [*1] Judge Daniel R. Hawkins.

Opinion by: Daniel R. Hawkins

Opinion

---

DECISION AND ENTRY DENYING DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT

Hawkins, J.

This matter came before the Court on Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiff's complaint. Upon review of the motion, associated briefing, and pleadings, the Court finds the motion not well taken and DENIES the same.

I. Background

Defendant Lifecare Centers of America, Inc., provides assisted living services and skilled nursing services to elderly clients in Ohio and approximately 28 other states. Plaintiff's Complaint, ¶¶ 8-9, 35-36. Plaintiff, the State of Ohio, asserts Defendant Lifecare Centers of America, Inc., exchanged "competitively-sensitive nonpublic information with its competitors[.]" Id. at ¶ 7. Under its complaint, Plaintiff seeks a permanent injunction against Defendant, restraining it from "[c]ommunicating or agreeing to communicate sensitive information to any competitor" and pay damages for the harm it incurred against the elderly of Ohio pursuant to R.C. §1331.03. Defendant now moves to dismiss Plaintiff's complaint.

II. Motion-to-Dismiss Standard

HN1 In construing a claim for purposes of a Civ. R. 12\(B\)\(6\) motion, "it is presumed that all factual allegations in the [claim] [*2] are true and it must appear beyond doubt that the [party] can prove no set of facts warranting recovery." Tulloh v. Goodyear Atomic Corp., 62 Ohio St.3d 541, 544, 584 N.E.2d 729 (1992). As such, "all reasonable inferences must be drawn in favor of the nonmoving party." Byrd v. Faber, 57 Ohio St.3d 56, 60, 565 N.E.2d 584 (1991). Because Ohio is a notice pleading state, a party need only set forth "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the party is entitled to relief." Civ.R. 8\(A\)\(1\). Further, "a pleader is ordinarily not required to allege in the complaint every fact he or she intends to prove; such facts may not be available until after discovery." State ex rel. Hanson v. Guernsey Cty. Bd. Of Commsrs., 65 Ohio St.3d 545, 549, 1992-Ohio 73, 605 N.E.2d 378 (1992). For this reason, the court dismisses claims only when a party can prove no set of facts entitling her to relief. Volbers-Klarich v. Middletown Mgmt., 125 Ohio St.3d 494, 2010-Ohio-2057, 929 N.E.2d 434, ¶ 12. "Because it is so easy for the pleader to satisfy the standard of Civ.R.8\(A\), few complaints are subject to dismissal." Leictitman v. WLW Jacor Communications, Inc., 92 Ohio App.3d 232, 234, 634 N.E.2d 697 (1st Dist. 1994).

III. Discussion

Defendant asserts Plaintiff has failed to state a claim for which relief may be granted because: (1) the complaint is barred by the statute of limitations under R.C. §1331.12; (2) the complaint contains no allegations that Defendant exchanged information with its competitors; and (3) the complaint does not allege market harm as under the Valentine Act. The Court now addresses the same.

A. Statute of Limitations

Plaintiff brings its claims under [*3] HN2↑ the Valentine Act, Ohio's antitrust statute which prevents agreements between competitors to exchange sensitive information and unreasonably restrain trade. R.C. §1331.01-1331.14. "Any civil or criminal action or proceeding for a violation of sections 1331.01 to 1331.14 of the Revised Code . . . shall be forever barred unless commenced within four years after the cause of action accrued." R.C. §1331.12. Defendant asserts Plaintiff has failed to bring the underlying case within the four-year statute of limitations.

HN3↑ The Ohio Legislature patterned the Valentine Act after the federal antitrust statute, the Sherman Act. See Johnson v. Microsoft, 106 Ohio St. 3d 278, 281, 2005- Ohio 4985, 834 N.E.2d 791 \(2005\). Accordingly, the Supreme Court of Ohio looks to federal case law when evaluating Valentine Act claims. Id. In Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., the Supreme Court of United States held:

In the context of a continuing conspiracy to violate the antitrust laws, such as the conspiracy in the instant case, this has usually been understood to mean that each time a plaintiff is injured by an act of the defendants a cause of action accrues to him to recover the damages caused by that act and that, as to those damages, the statute of limitations runs from the commission of the act.

401 U.S. 321, 338, 91 S. Ct. 795, 28 L. Ed. 2d 77 \(1971\). Here, Plaintiff alleges the underlying matter was a continuing [*4] conspiracy. Plaintiffs Memorandum Contra, p. 9. Yet, HN4↑ under federal law, "[e]ven when a plaintiff alleges a continuing violation, an overt act by the defendant is required to restart the statute of limitations and the statute runs from the last overt act." DXS, Inc. v. Siemens Med. Sys., 100 F.3d 462, 467 \(6th Cir.1996\) (citing Peck v. General Motors Corp., 894 F.2d 844, 849 \(6th Cir. 1990\)).

In Klehr v. A.O. Smith Corp., dairy farmers sought action against farm equipment corporations for falsely representing and inducing the farmers to purchase a silo, which resulted in loss to their farm. The Supreme Court stated, HN5↑ "Antitrust law provides that, in the case of a 'continuing violation,' say a price fixing conspiracy that brings about a series of unlawfully high priced sales over a period of years, 'each overt act that is part of the violation and that injures the plaintiff,' e.g., each sale to the plaintiff, 'starts the statutory period running again, regardless of the plaintiffs knowledge of the alleged illegality at much earlier times.'" Klehr v. A.O. Smith Corp., 521 U.S. 179, 189, 117 S. Ct. 1984, 138 L. Ed. 2d 373 \(1997\).

Plaintiff alleges Defendant conspired to and did work to raise or stabilize the prices of services. Plaintiff's Complaint, ¶¶ 7, 38-75. The Court finds each instance where the price was raised or stabilized to evade the decreasing of prices was a separate overt act because [*5] each time the prices were raised, new and additional injuries occurred. Klehr v. A.O. Smith Corp., 521 U.S. 179, 189, 117 S. Ct. 1984, 138 L. Ed. 2d 373 \(1997\). Plaintiff alleges Defendant conspired to raise and/or stabilize the prices of assisted living services and skilled nursing services up to and including October 2014. Plaintiff's Complaint, ¶ 43. The underlying matter was filed on April 10, 2018. Accordingly, the Court finds Plaintiff's claims are not barred by R.C. §1331.12.

B. Failure to State a Claim

The Defendant argues Plaintiff has not adequately plead its claim under the Valentine Act, and lacks allegations supporting § 1331.01 \(C\)\(1\)\(e\), which states:

To make, enter into, execute, or carry out contracts, obligations, or agreements of any kind . . . by which they agree in any manner to keep the price of such article, commodity, or transportation at a fixed or graduated figure, or by which they shall in any manner establish or settle the price of an article, commodity, or transportation between them or themselves and others, so as directly or indirectly to preclude a free and unrestricted competition among themselves, purchasers, or consumers in the sale or transportation of such article or commodity, or by which they agree to pool, combine, or directly or indirectly unite any interests which [*6] they have connected with the sale or transportation of such article or commodity, that its price might in any manner be affected[.]

Specifically, the Defendant argues Plaintiff's complaint lacks allegations of (1) an exchange of information and (2) actual stabilization or harm to the market.

i. Exchange of Information with Competitors

The Defendant asserts the Complaint only alleges unilateral action and not an exchange of sensitive information. As previously stated, HN6 Ohio is a notice pleading state, where only a short and plain statement is necessary to adequately state a claim. Civ. R. 8\(A\)\(1\). Under Civ. R. 12\(B\)\(6\), a court need not look beyond the four corners of a complaint. Within the Complaint, Plaintiff states, "Defendant's regular, frequent and systematic exchanges of competitively-sensitive nonpublic information with its competitors have injured the State and many of its most vulnerable citizens, and have violated Ohio's antitrust law." Plaintiff's Complaint, ¶ 7. Plaintiff's Complaint goes on to state many other similar allegations that Defendant exchanged sensitive information with competitors. Id. at ¶¶ 37-59. Based on the foregoing, the Court finds Plaintiff has plead a short, plain statement alleging [*7] the exchange of competitively-sensitive nonpublic information with its competitors in support of its claim under the Valentine Act.

ii. Market Harm

Defendant argues the Plaintiff's Complaint does not adequately state a claim because it fails to properly allege the area of the geography market or harm to that market. Both parties admit that HN7 the determination of the adequacy of a relevant market, like a geographic market, is typically a question of fact. Anapi Southwest, Inc. v. Coca-Cola Ents., 300 F. 3d 620, 628 \(5th Cir. 2002\); White & White, Inc. v. Am. Hosp. Supply Corp., 723 F.2d 495, 499 \(6th Cir. 1983\). The Supreme Court of the United States had held, a geographic market is sufficient if it sets out the geographic parameters of "effective competition." Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, 370 U.S. 294, 324, 82 S. Ct. 1502, 8 L. Ed. 2d 510 \(1961\). An area of effective competition is "charted by careful selection of the market area in with the seller operates, and to which the purchaser can practically turn for supplies." Food Lion, LLC v. Dean Foods Co., 739 F. 3d 262, 277 \(6th Cir. 2014\).

Within the Complaint, Plaintiff states, "[t]he purchasers of Private Pay Services typically seek those services within 5-25 miles of their homes, depending upon population density in that area." Plaintiffs Complaint, ¶ 26. Additionally, Plaintiff asserts, "[t]he Ohio geographic markets affected by the conduct described in [the] Complaint generally fall within a 5-25 mile radius of each of the conspirators' [*8] Ohio Communities[.]" Id. at ¶ 27. The Court finds these to be statements setting out the geographic parameters of effective competition. Defendant asserts the Court should not consider those allegations which include areas outside the 5-25 mile radius from Defendant's locations, as they are separate markets. The Court finds Plaintiff to be correct, but the allegations put forth regarding these additional markets do not diminish the claims of harm Plaintiff asserts within the alleged market. Id. at ¶¶ 38-53 (referring to Central Ohio competitors, a location in Milliard, etc.). Accordingly, the Court finds Plaintiff asserts short, plain statements of market harm.

IV. Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, the Court finds Plaintiff's claims are not barred by the statute of limitations and Plaintiff does put forth short, plain statements supporting its claim showing that the party is entitled to relief under the Valentine Act. Accordingly, the Court DENIES Defendant's motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

It Is So Ordered.

/s/ Daniel R. Hawkins

/s/ Judge Daniel R. Hawkins

---

End of Document

City of Rockford v. Mallinckrodt ARD, Inc.

United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois

January 25, 2019, Decided; January 25, 2019, Filed

Case No: 17 CV 50107

Reporter

360 F. Supp. 3d 730 *; 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12171 **; 2019-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P80,658; 2019 WL 330471

City of Rockford, et al., Plaintiffs, v. Mallinckrodt ARD, Inc., et al., Defendants.

Subsequent History: Reconsideration denied by, Motion denied by *City of Rockford v. Mallinckrodt ARD, Inc., 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 103885, 2019 WL 2763181 \(N.D. Ill., May 3, 2019\)*

Related proceeding at *Mallinckrodt PLC v. City of Rockford \(In re Mallinckrodt PLC\), 2021 Bankr. LEXIS 1601 \(Bankr. D. Del., June 16, 2021\)*

Prior History: *City of Rockford v. Mallinckrodt Ard, Inc., 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 41085 \(N.D. Ill., Feb. 2, 2018\)*

Core Terms

---

antitrust, defendants', plaintiffs', allegations, conspiracy, courts, containment, motion to dismiss, prices, misrepresentation, parties, unjust enrichment, purchaser, state-law, Acquisition, replead, antitrust claim, anti trust law, anticompetitive, conspired, recitals, price-fixing, prong, fair dealing, patients, promise, manufacturer, promissory estoppel, class action, monopolization

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

HN1* [blue icon] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

When deciding a motion to dismiss, the court accepts all of the well-pleaded allegations of the complaint as true and draws all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff. Under the Federal Rules, a complaint need only contain a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief. *Fed. R. Civ. P. 8\(a\)\(2\)*. Detailed factual allegations are not required, but the plaintiff must allege facts that, when accepted as true state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. In analyzing whether a complaint has met this standard, the reviewing court must draw on its judicial experience and common sense.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > Fraud

360 F. Supp. 3d 730, *730L 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12171, **12171

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

Torts > Business Torts > Fraud & Misrepresentation > Actual Fraud

Torts > ... > Multiple Defendants > Concerted Action > Civil Conspiracy

HN2 [] Claims, Fraud

Claims for fraud, conspiracy to defraud and RICO conspiracy are subject to a heightened pleading standard that requires plaintiffs to plead their allegations with specificity. Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 9\(b\).

Civil Procedure > ... > Responses > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Affirmative Defenses

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

HN3 [] Defenses, Demurrs & Objections, Affirmative Defenses

A plaintiff is not required to plead elements in his or her complaint that overcome affirmative defenses.

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > Injury in Fact

Constitutional Law > ... > Case or Controversy > Standing > Elements

HN4 [] Standing, Injury in Fact

Generally, U.S. Const. art. III standing is the threshold question in every federal case, determining the power of the court to entertain the suit. All that is required to demonstrate Article III standing is injury in fact plus redressability.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Sherman Act

Constitutional Law > ... > Case or Controversy > Standing > Elements

HN5 [] Standing, Sherman Act

The United States Supreme Court has found two additional standing limitations born from the Sherman Act as part of a separate standing doctrine known as antitrust standing. Courts must engage in a proximate cause analysis to determine whether a plaintiff is a proper party to bring suit.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Sherman Act

HN6 [] Standing, Sherman Act

Illinois Brick v. Illinois' indirect purchaser rule denies a plaintiff antitrust standing unless it fits into one of the recognized exceptions to Illinois Brick. One such exception is the co-conspirator exception, which allows indirect purchasers to sue middlemen-conspirators if the plaintiffs can establish a conspiracy and overcharges. Illinois Brick does not limit suits by consumers against a manufacturer who illegally contracted with its dealers to set the latter's resale price. The consumer plaintiff is a direct purchaser from the dealer who, by hypothesis, has conspired illegally with the manufacturer with respect to the very price paid by the consumer. There is no problem of duplication or apportionment because the consumer is the only party who has paid any overcharge. Although the manufacturer did not sell directly to the consumer, he is a fellow conspirator with the direct-selling dealer and therefore jointly and severally liable with the dealer for the consumer's injury. The crucial question for courts assessing this exception is whether the alleged anticompetitive conduct stems from an agreement between the alleged co-conspirators.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

Civil Procedure > Pleading & Practice > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > Sherman Act

HN7 [] Regulated Practices, Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

A plaintiff alleging conspiracy to fix prices in violation of the Sherman Act must allege enough factual matter (taken as true) to suggest that an agreement was made—that is, enough facts to raise a reasonable expectation that discovery will reveal evidence of illegal agreement. This standard is not the same as the heightened pleading standard of Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b), and accordingly, plaintiffs can allege an antitrust conspiracy by pleading circumstantial evidence of an illegal agreement. The courts do not apply any heightened pleading standard, nor do the courts seek to broaden the scope of Rule 9. Circumstantial evidence is the lifeblood of antitrust law because direct evidence will rarely be available to prove the existence of a price-fixing conspiracy.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > Sherman Act

HN8 [] Private Actions, Sherman Act

The United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit explains that the crux of the Illinois Brick v. Illinois' co-conspirator exception is the joint-and-several liability of conspiring defendants: If the defendant was among those conspirators, then it is responsible for the entire overcharge of all defendants—and any direct purchaser from any conspirator can collect its own portion of damages (that is, the damages attributable to its direct purchases) from any conspirator.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Sherman Act

HN9 [] Standing, Sherman Act

In determining whether an antitrust plaintiff is a proper party to bring suit, courts look at the following factors: (1) the causal connection between the violation and the harm; (2) the presence of improper motive; (3) the type of injury and whether it was one Congress sought to redress; (4) the directness of the injury; (5) the speculative nature of the damages; and (6) the risk of duplicate recovery or complex damage apportionment.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope

HN10 [] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Section 1 of the Sherman Act prohibits every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce. 15 U.S.C.S. § 1. Only those agreements that are unreasonable restraints on trade are actionable under § 1. To state § 1 claims, plaintiffs must plead facts plausibly suggesting: (1) a contract, combination, or conspiracy (meaning, an agreement); (2) a resulting unreasonable restraint of trade in a relevant market; and (3) an accompanying antitrust injury.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Sherman Act

HN11 [ ] Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason, Sherman Act

The unreasonable restraint of trade prong under 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 asks courts to assess the competitive effects of challenged behavior as its abandonment or a less restrictive substitute. Courts use one of three tests to determine the challenged behavior. Courts use a per se test for conduct such as horizontal price fixing, market allocation, group boycotts, or tying arrangements that are so inherently anticompetitive, they are considered illegal per se. In contrast, vertical arrangements such as exclusive distribution agreements are analyzed under the rule of reason test, which assigns the burden to plaintiffs to sufficiently allege that an agreement has an anticompetitive effect on a given market within a given geographic area. More often than not, courts use the rule of reason test and not the per se test. Courts sometimes employ a third test, known as the quick-look test, for conduct that is not plainly anticompetitive but where no elaborate industry analysis is required to demonstrate the anticompetitive character of an agreement.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Sherman Act

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN12 [ ] Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason, Sherman Act

At the motion to dismiss stage of proceeding, courts do not find it necessary to determine which mode of analysis under 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, the per se or the rule of reason, it will ultimately employ in evaluating a defendant's activities.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

HN13 [ ] Scope, Monopolization Offenses

The elimination of competition with no procompetitive justification is the type of conduct that the antitrust laws were designed to guard against.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > Sherman Act

HN14 [ ] Scope, Monopolization Offenses

The third prong under 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 requires that an antitrust plaintiff must allege that the claimed injuries are of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and reflect the anticompetitive effect of either the violation or anticompetitive acts made possible by the violation. The purpose of the Sherman Act is to protect consumers from injury that results from diminished competition. Thus the plaintiff must allege, not only an injury to himself, but an injury to the market as well. A private plaintiff must show antitrust injury—which is to say, injury by reason of those things that make the practice unlawful, such as reduced output and higher prices.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

HN15 [down] Price Discrimination, Competitive Injuries

Paying higher prices as a result of coordinated output restrictions is a paradigmatic antitrust injury.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > Sherman Act

HN16 [down] Price Discrimination, Competitive Injuries

The antitrust-injury doctrine was created to filter out complaints by competitors and others who may be hurt by productive efficiencies, higher output, and lower prices, all of which the antitrust laws are designed to encourage. To recover under the antitrust laws, the plaintiff must show that its injury flows from that which makes the conduct an antitrust problem: higher prices and lower output.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > Sherman Act

HN17 [down] Scope, Monopolization Offenses

A conspiracy to monopolize consists of (1) the existence of a combination or conspiracy, (2) overt acts in furtherance of the conspiracy, (3) an effect upon a substantial amount of interstate commerce, and (4) the existence of specific intent to monopolize. 15 U.S.C.S. § 2 claims may be plead under three different theories: (1) monopolization, (2) attempted monopolization, and (3) conspiracy to monopolize.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing > Exclusive Dealing

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

HN18 [down] Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing, Exclusive Dealing

With respect to the fourth prong under 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, in cases that involve exclusive dealing arrangements, courts typically infer a sufficient allegation of specific intent when overt acts are adequately pled. Explaining that anticompetitive conduct may be sufficient to prove the necessary intent to monopolize. Courts are wary to dismiss antitrust cases on intent solely on the pleadings because evidence of intent is often in the control of the defendants.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

**HN19** [L] Scope, Monopolization Offenses

In addressing the second prong 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, similar to 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, anticompetitive effects requirement, plaintiffs must allege that the overt acts constitute anticompetitive conduct. To safeguard the incentive to innovate, the possession of monopoly power will not be found unlawful unless it is accompanied by an element of anticompetitive conduct. Under § 2, intent to obtain a monopoly is unlawful only where an entity seeks to maintain or achieve monopoly power by anticompetitive means. The offense of monopolization is the acquisition of monopoly by improper methods or, more commonly the abuse of monopoly. The acts from which the court can infer anticompetitive conduct must be essentially predatory in nature. Exclusionary, predatory, or anticompetitive conduct for purposes of § 2 claims is broadly defined as conduct that is in itself an independent violation of the antitrust laws or that has no legitimate business justification other than to destroy or damage competition.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing > Exclusive Dealing

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

**HN20** [L] Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing, Exclusive Dealing

While analysis of the second prong 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, can in some cases differ greatly from claims under the second prong 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, for exclusive dealing claims brought under § 2, the analysis nearly the same as that for § 1 claims. This makes sense given that a plaintiff alleging an unreasonable restraint of trade would typically be required to allege that a defendant undertook overt acts to effectuate the restraint. Section 2 claims that allege antitrust violations based on exclusive dealing arrangements are analyzed in much the same way as § 1 claims.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing > Exclusive Dealing

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

**HN21** [L] Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing, Exclusive Dealing

Like claims under 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, a plaintiff alleging a 15 U.S.C.S. § 2 claim must also allege an antitrust injury. The § 2 requirement of antitrust injury under a conspiracy-to-monopolize theory specifically.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Remedies > Injunctions

**HN22** [L] Remedies, Injunctions

The § 16 of the Clayton Act provides in part that any person, firm, corporation, or association shall be entitled to sue for and have injunctive relief against threatened loss or damage by a violation of the antitrust laws. 15 U.S.C.S. § 26.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Purchasers > Indirect Purchasers

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Remedies > Injunctions

360 F. Supp. 3d 730, *730L 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12171, **12171

HN23 [blue icon] Purchasers, Indirect Purchasers

The indirect-purchaser doctrine does not foreclose equitable relief. 15 U.S.C.S. § 26.

Civil Procedure > Special Proceedings > Class Actions > Certification of Classes

Constitutional Law > The Judiciary > Case or Controversy > Standing

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

HN24 [blue icon] Class Actions, Certification of Classes

Courts are split as to whether a court should rule on a plaintiff's U.S. Const. art. III standing to bring state-law claims on behalf of unnamed class members at a motion to dismiss stage, or as an alternative, defer that ruling until the class certification stage. The United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois is persuaded that the standing issue focuses on whether the named plaintiff is properly before the court, not whether represented parties or absent class members are properly before the court, and applies that reasoning to a case when ruling on a motion to dismiss.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

Constitutional Law > Supremacy Clause > Federal Preemption

HN25 [blue icon] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

The Arkansas Deceptive Trade Practices Act (ADTPA) prohibits a variety of conduct, including deceptive and unconscionable trade practices. Ark. Code Ann. § 4-88-107\(a\). However, the ADTPA contains a safe harbor provision that does not apply the law to practices which are subject to and comply with any rule, order, or statute administered by the Federal Trade Commission. Ark. Code Ann. § 4-88-101\(1\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

HN26 [blue icon] Scope, Monopolization Offenses

In Arkansas, unconscionable trade practices include conduct violative of public policy or statute. This requires something more than merely alleging that the price of a product was unfairly high. Two important considerations are whether there is a gross inequality of bargaining power between the parties to the contract and whether the aggrieved party was made aware of and comprehended the provision in question. While price-fixing or monopolization are not listed in the Arkansas Deceptive Trade Practices Act (ADTPA), the statute does contain a catch-all provision that proscribes engaging in any other unconscionable, false, or deceptive act or practice in business, commerce, or trade. Ark. Code Ann. § 4-88-107\(a\)\(10\). Allegations of price fixing are not the kind of conduct prohibited under the statute because price-fixing, within the meaning of the ADTPA, does not affront the sense of justice, decency, or reasonableness. However, monopolization claims are actionable under the ADTPA. Courts have interpreted the catchall provision of the Arkansas Deceptive Trade Practices Act—which prohibits any unconscionable, false, or deceptive act or practice in business, commerce, or trade-broadly so as to encompass 15 U.S.C.S. § 2 monopolization claims.

360 F. Supp. 3d 730, *730L 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12171, **12171

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

Governments > Legislation > Statutory Remedies & Rights

**HN27** [💡] Private Actions, State Regulation

There is a split of authority on the issue of whether the Illinois Antitrust Act's class action prohibition is part of Illinois' substantive rights or remedies. The United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois agrees with the reasoning that casts doubt on whether the framework of substantive rights or remedies controls.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Purchasers > Indirect Purchasers

Civil Procedure > Special Proceedings > Class Actions

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

**HN28** [💡] Purchasers, Indirect Purchasers

The Illinois Antitrust Act does not alter the scope of any substantive right or remedy-and is thus not substantive for purposes of Shady Grove v. Allstate analysis-because any indirect purchaser procedurally blocked from participation in a class action would still have the same remedy in an individual action. The Illinois Antitrust Act's class action limitation hews more closely to a particular substantive right (indirect-purchaser antitrust claims) than the New York state-law limitation in Shady Grove, but if New York's state-law bar is not a procedural rule that alters the scope of a substantive right or remedy, then the narrower scope of Illinois's state-law bar does not make it one that does.

Civil Procedure > Special Proceedings > Class Actions

**HN29** [💡] Special Proceedings, Class Actions

*Fed. R. Civ. P. 23* explicitly empowers a federal court to certify a class in every case that satisfies its criteria. Like the rest of the *Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 23* automatically applies in all civil actions and procedures in the United States district courts.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > State Regulation

**HN30** [💡] Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices, State Regulation

In assessing Hawaii's antitrust statute notice provision, nothing in the Hawaii antitrust statutory scheme suggests that a defendant may use the statute as a shield to avoid answering for alleged anti-competitive behavior.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Breach > Breach of Contract Actions > Elements of Contract Claims

**HN31** [] Breach of Contract Actions, Elements of Contract Claims

To prevail on its breach of contract claim, a plaintiff must demonstrate: (1) the existence of a valid and enforceable contract; (2) substantial performance by the plaintiff; (3) a breach by defendants; and (4) resultant damages.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contract Conditions & Provisions > Contracts Law > Contract Conditions & Provisions

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contract Formation > Offers > Definite Terms

**HN32** [] Contracts, Contract Conditions & Provisions

Recitals to a contract provide explanations of those circumstances surrounding the execution of the contract. Recitals are preliminary in nature and are generally not binding on the parties or an effective part of their agreement unless referred to in the operative portion of their agreement. Courts in Illinois look for the terms contained within the recitals to appear in the operative portions of the contract before assigning those terms binding power upon the parties.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contract Conditions & Provisions > Contracts Law > Contract Conditions & Provisions

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contract Formation > Offers > Definite Terms

**HN33** [] Contracts, Contract Conditions & Provisions

Under Illinois law, recitals are not binding obligations unless referred to in the operative portion of the contract.

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Ambiguities & Contra Proferentem

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Intent

**HN34** [] Contract Interpretation, Ambiguities & Contra Proferentem

Under Illinois law contractual terms that are too vague or indefinite are not enforceable. A term that is too vague or indefinite is one that a court cannot, under proper rules of construction and applicable principles of equity, ascertain what the parties have agreed to do.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation

**HN35** [] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

In the context of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the court must accept all of the well-pleaded allegations of a complaint as true; however, in a contract action, if the language of the contract is plainly inconsistent with the plaintiff's representations, the court may decline to afford the presumption of truth. Where the allegations of a pleading are inconsistent with the terms of a written contract attached as an exhibit, the terms of the latter, fairly construed, must prevail over the averments differing therefrom.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Breach > Breach of Contract Actions > Elements of Contract Claims

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Good Faith & Fair Dealing

HN36 [+] Breach of Contract Actions, Elements of Contract Claims

To state a claim for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in Illinois, a plaintiff must plausibly allege (1) that the existence of an enforceable contract (2) breaching a specific duty imposed by the contract other than the covenant of good faith and fair dealing; (3) that defendant failed to exercise its contractual discretion reasonably and with proper motive; and (4) resultant damages.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Breach > Breach of Contract Actions > Elements of Contract Claims

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Good Faith & Fair Dealing

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Intent

HN37 [+] Breach of Contract Actions, Elements of Contract Claims

In Illinois, every contract implies good faith and fair dealing between the parties to it, and where an instrument is susceptible of two conflicting constructions, one which imputes bad faith to one of the parties and the other does not, the latter construction should be adopted. This good-faith principle is used only as a construction aid in determining the intent of the contracting parties. The obligation of good faith and fair dealing is used as an aid in construing a contract under Illinois law, but does not create an independent cause of action. Under Illinois law the covenant of good faith and fair dealing is not an independent source of duties for the parties to contract. The implied covenant is used to interpret a contract. Nor can it be used to contradict the express terms in a contract. Rather, a plaintiff can plead breach of the implied covenant as a theory for a breach of contract cause of action-and not as a separate, independent cause of action-in the situations where it is being used as a gap-filler where a contract is otherwise silent on how the parties are to perform certain terms of the contract. However, courts only allow this when the gap-filler is used to prevent a party from abusing discretion outlined for them in the contract.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Breach > Breach of Contract Actions > Elements of Contract Claims

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Good Faith & Fair Dealing

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

HN38 [+] Breach of Contract Actions, Elements of Contract Claims

A party who does not properly exercise contractual discretion breaches the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing that is in every contract. In order to plead a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, a plaintiff must plead existence of contractual discretion. Where the contract vests one of the parties with discretion in performing an obligation, and that party exercises that discretion in bad faith, unreasonable or in a manner inconsistent with the reasonable expectations of the parties, it breaches the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contract Formation > Consideration > Promissory Estoppel

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Types of Contracts > Quasi Contracts

HN39 [] Consideration, Promissory Estoppel

Promissory estoppel is a common-law principle that a promise made without consideration may nonetheless be enforced to prevent injustice if the promisor should have reasonably expected the promisee to rely on the promise and if the promisee did actually rely on the promise to his or her detriment. However, under Illinois law, promissory estoppel and unjust enrichment are unavailable where the parties have entered into an express contract. Like a plaintiff's claims for unjust enrichment, a plaintiff may only plead promissory estoppel in the alternative to a breach of contract claim, such that no express contract may be invoked in its count for promissory estoppel.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contract Formation > Consideration > Promissory Estoppel

HN40 [] Consideration, Promissory Estoppel

To state a claim for the common-law doctrine of promissory estoppel, a plaintiff must prove that (1) defendant made an unambiguous promise to plaintiff, (2) plaintiff relied on such promise, (3) plaintiff's reliance was expected and foreseeable by defendants, and (4) plaintiff relied on the promise to its detriment.

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN41 [] Equitable Relief, Quantum Meruit

Unjust enrichment is a product of common law that enshrines the principle that no one ought to enrich himself unjustly at the expense of another. The doctrine enshrines both legal and equitable values, but at its core, properly alleged unjust enrichment claims involve situations in which the benefit the plaintiff is seeking to recover proceeded directly from him to the defendant.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN42 [] Complaints, Requirements for Complaint

Both Illinois and Tennessee permit a plaintiff to plead unjust enrichment as an alternative theory of liability. A plaintiff may plead as follows: (1) there is an express contract, and the defendant is liable for breach of it; and (2) if there is not an express contract, then the defendant is liable for unjustly enriching himself at my expense. This is counter to the wider-sweeping argument that a plaintiff may not plead both the existence of an enforceable contract and unjust enrichment in the same complaint.

360 F. Supp. 3d 730, *730L 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12171, **12171

Civil Procedure > Preliminary Considerations > Equity > Adequate Remedy at Law

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

HN43 [blue icon] Equity, Adequate Remedy at Law

In order to state an unjust enrichment claim under Illinois law, a plaintiff must allege a benefit mistakenly conferred, a benefit procured through wrongful conduct, and a benefit to which plaintiff has a better claim than the defendant for some other reason. In addition, Illinois law requires that relief under an unjust enrichment theory is obtainable only when there is no adequate remedy at law available to the plaintiff. Because it is an equitable remedy, unjust enrichment is only available when there is no adequate remedy at law.

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Exhaustion of Remedies > Contractual Remedies

Contracts Law > Remedies > Equitable Relief > Quantum Meruit

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

HN44 [blue icon] Exhaustion of Remedies, Contractual Remedies

Under Tennessee law, the elements of an unjust enrichment claim are 1) a benefit conferred upon the defendant by the plaintiff; 2) appreciation by the defendant of such benefit; and 3) acceptance of such benefit under such circumstances that it would be inequitable for him to retain the benefit without payment of the value thereof. Additionally, Tennessee law dictates that a plaintiff seeking relief for unjust enrichment must demonstrate that he exhausted all remedies against the person with whom the plaintiff enjoyed privity of contract. Under Tennessee law, the issue of exhaustion must be addressed in the complaint. This exhaustion of remedies requirement only applies to entities in privity with the plaintiff. As long as the plaintiff has satisfied that exhaustion obligation it can still recover against defendants with whom the plaintiff is not in privity.

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Exhaustion of Remedies > Contractual Remedies

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN45 [blue icon] Exhaustion of Remedies, Contractual Remedies

An unjust enrichment claim may be dismissed where a plaintiff fails to allege that it has exhausted all remedies against the entities in which it has privity of contract and failed to plead that doing so would be futile.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > Fraud

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Scope

HN46 [blue icon] Claims, Fraud

A RICO plaintiff alleging a violation of 18 U.S.C.S. § 1962\(c\) must show conduct of an enterprise through a pattern of racketeering activity, and that she has been injured in her business or property by reason of the RICO violation. A claim of a pattern of racketeering activity requires at least two predicate acts of racketeering activity within a ten-year period. Racketeering activity is defined to include, among other things, any act indictable under specified provisions of the United States Code, including 18 U.S.C.S. § 1341 (mail fraud) and 18 U.S.C.S. § 1343 (wire fraud).

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > Fraud

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

HN47 [ ] Claims, Fraud

The elements of mail fraud under 18 U.S.C.S. § 1341 are: (1) the defendant's participation in a scheme to defraud; (2) defendant's commission of the act with intent to defraud; and (3) use of the mails in furtherance of the fraudulent scheme. The elements of wire fraud under 18 U.S.C.S. § 1343 are similar: a scheme to defraud, a false representation, and use of interstate communications. To defraud is to make a false statement or material misrepresentation, or the concealment of a material fact. Plaintiffs alleging mail and wire fraud as predicate acts to their RICO claims must allege the identity of the person who made the misrepresentation, the time, place and content of the misrepresentation, and the method by which the misrepresentation was communicated to the plaintiff.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > Fraud

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

HN48 [ ] Claims, Fraud

When ruling on a Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) motion, the heightened pleading requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\) apply to allegations of mail and wire fraud in a civil RICO complaint. Further, in cases with multiple defendants, Rule 9\(b\) requires a RICO plaintiff to plead sufficient facts to notify each defendant of his alleged participation in the scheme. The heightened pleading standard of Rule 9\(b\) serves an important purpose, to ensure that a plaintiff has some basis for his accusations of fraud before making those accusations and thus discourages people from including such accusations in complaints simply to gain leverage for settlement or for other ulterior purposes.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > Fraud

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

HN49 [ ] Claims, Fraud

Plaintiffs alleging mail fraud need not show that every particular communication that they point out contained misrepresentations, because even routine and innocent mailings can supply an element of the offense of mail fraud when they are used in the execution of the fraudulent scheme. But plaintiffs alleging little more than the existence of a price-fix scheme and defendants' intent to misrepresent prices is different than alleging the who, what, when, where and how of an actual misrepresentation.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > Fraud

HN50 [ ] Claims, Fraud

360 F. Supp. 3d 730, *730L 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12171, **12171

Proximate cause is one of the requirements of a cause of action for a RICO violation.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > Fraud

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

HN51 [ ] Claims, Fraud

The proximate cause limitation of a properly-pled RICO violation requires some direct relation between the injury asserted and the injurious conduct alleged. The general tendency in this context is for courts not to go beyond the first step, because multiple steps, as the courts have detailed, separate the alleged fraud from the asserted injury. Courts have routinely dismissed 18 U.S.C.S. § 1962\(c\) claims in drug cases where plaintiffs do not allege with specificity that defendants made misrepresentations directly to third-party payors.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > Fraud

HN52 [ ] Claims, Fraud

A 18 U.S.C.S. § 1962\(a\) claim requires a showing that a defendant: (1) received income from a pattern of racketeering activity; (2) used or invested that income in the operation of an enterprise; and (3) caused the injury complained of by the use or investment of racketeering income in an enterprise.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > Claims > Fraud

HN53 [ ] Claims, Fraud

To state a claim under 18 U.S.C.S. § 1962\(d\), a plaintiff must allege the existence of an agreement to participate in an endeavor which, if completed, would constitute a violation of RICO. This requires plaintiffs to allege that (1) the defendant agreed to facilitate the operation of an enterprise through a pattern of racketeering activity, in violation of subsections (a), (b), or (c) of RICO, and (2) the defendant agreed to effectuate at least two predicate acts that create a pattern of racketeering activity.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

Torts > ... > Fraud & Misrepresentation > Actual Fraud > Elements

HN54 [ ] Heightened Pleading Requirements, Fraud Claims

Under Illinois law, the elements of common law fraud are: (1) a false statement of a material fact; (2) knowledge or belief of falsity by the party making it; (3) intention to induce the other party to act or refrain from acting; (4) action by the other party in justifiable reliance on the truth of the statement; and (5) damage to the other party resulting from such reliance. Similarly, Tennessee law requires: (1) an intentional misrepresentation of material fact, (2) knowledge of the representation's falsity, (3) an injury caused by reasonable reliance on the representation, and (4) the requirement that the misrepresentation involve a past or existing fact. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\) applies to fraud claims.

360 F. Supp. 3d 730, *730L 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12171, **12171

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

Torts > ... > Fraud & Misrepresentation > Actual Fraud > Elements

HN55 [ ] Heightened Pleading Requirements, Fraud Claims

The heightened pleading standard of Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) forces the plaintiff to conduct a careful pretrial investigation and thus operates as a screen against spurious fraud claims. A plaintiff is required to state the identity of the person making the misrepresentation, the time, place, and content of the misrepresentation, and the method by which the misrepresentation was communicated to the plaintiff.

Torts > ... > Fraud & Misrepresentation > Actual Fraud > Elements

HN56 [ ] Actual Fraud, Elements

In the context of a fraud claim, high prices do not in and of themselves constitute false representations.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

Torts > ... > Concerted Action > Civil Conspiracy > Elements

HN57 [ ] Complaints, Requirements for Complaint

Under Illinois law, to state a claim for civil conspiracy, the plaintiff must sufficiently allege that an underlying wrong existed. Similarly, under Tennessee law, a claim for civil conspiracy requires an underlying predicate tort allegedly committed pursuant to the conspiracy.

Civil Procedure > ... > Declaratory Judgments > State Declaratory Judgments > Scope of Declaratory Judgments

HN58 [ ] State Declaratory Judgments, Scope of Declaratory Judgments

The declaratory judgment remedy gives a means by which rights and obligations may be adjudicated in cases involving an actual controversy that has not reached the stage at which either party may seek a coercive remedy. Claims for declaratory judgment are routinely dismissed where the claim substantially overlaps with a plaintiff's substantive claims. Where a substantive suit would resolve the issues raised by the declaratory judgment action, the declaratory judgment action serves no useful purpose because the controversy has ripened and the uncertainty and anticipation of litigation are alleviated.

Counsel: [**1] For City Of Rockford, on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated, Plaintiff: Donald E Haviland, Jr, LEAD ATTORNEY, Haviland Hughes, Ambler, PA; Peter J. Flowers, LEAD ATTORNEY, Jonathan Peter Mincieli, Michael W. Lenert, Meyers & Flowers, LLC, St. Charles, IL; Ifeanyichukwu C. Mogbana, Kerry Franklin Partridge, City Of Rockford Department Of Law, Rockford, IL; William H. Platt, II, Haviland Hughes, Ambler, PA.

For Acument Global Technologies, Inc., on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated, Plaintiff: Donald E Haviland, Jr, LEAD ATTORNEY, Haviland Hughes, Ambler, PA.

For Mallinckrodt ARD, Inc., formerly known as Questcor Pharmaceuticals, Inc., Mallinckrodt PLC, Defendants: George Patrick Watson, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Lindsay Sklar Johnson, Bryan Cave LLP, Atlanta, GA; Herbert R Giorgio, Jr., LEAD ATTORNEY, Bryan Cave Leighton Paisner LLP, St Louis, MO; Joel M. L. Huotari, WilliamsMcCarthy, Rockford, IL; Philip Dean Bartz, PRO HAC VICE, Bryan Cave Leighton Paisner LLP, Washington, DC; Rebecca A. Nelson, PRO HAC VICE, Bryan Cave Leighton Paisner LLP, St. Louis, MO; Scott Collins Sullivan, WilliamsMcCarthy LLP, Rockford, IL.

For United Biosource Corporation, [**2] Express Scripts Holding Company, Express Scripts, Inc., Curascript, Inc., doing business as Curascript, SD, Accredo Health Group, Inc., Defendants: Matthew M. Martino, LEAD ATTORNEY, Evan Ross Kreiner, Michael H Menitove, Patrick G. Rideout, Robert A. Fumerton, Thomas Pak, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; Amy Lynn Van Gelder, Matthew Robert Kipp, Skadden Arps Slate Meagher & Flom, LLP CH, Chicago, IL.

Judges: FREDERICK J. KAPALA, District Judge.

Opinion by: FREDERICK J. KAPALA

Opinion

---

[*742] MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

Plaintiffs, City of Rockford, Illinois, and Acument Global Technologies Inc., filed a second amended complaint (the "SAC") against two groups of defendants: (1) Mallinckrodt plc and Mallinckrodt ARD, Inc. [*743] (including its acquisition of "Questcor Pharmaceuticals, Inc.") (collectively, "Mallinckrodt"); and (2) Express Scripts Holding Company and its four wholly-owned subsidiaries, Express Scripts, Inc. ("ESI"), Curascript, Inc., Accredo Health Group, Inc., and United Biosource Corp. ("UBC") (collectively, "Express Scripts"), pursuant to federal and state antitrust and consumer protection laws, the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"), various state-law claims, and [**3] 28 U.S.C. §§ 2201-2202 for declaratory judgment. Before this court are defendants' motions to dismiss. For the reasons that follow, defendants' motions to dismiss are granted in part and denied in part.

I. BACKGROUND

The following facts are drawn from the allegations in the SAC. Because this case comes before the court pursuant to a motion to dismiss, the court accepts all non-conclusory allegations in the SAC as true.

A. Acthar and the Exclusive Dealing Arrangement

Acthar is an adrenocorticotrophic hormone ("ACTH") drug, which causes the body to produce cortisone and other steroid hormones. SAC ¶ 41. In 1952, the Food and Drug Administration approved Acthar's application to over fifty conditions. Id. ¶ 40. One of those conditions is infantile spasms, a serious condition but one with an annual patient population of less than 2,000 children. Id. ¶ 45. In 2001, Questcor Pharmaceuticals, Inc. acquired the rights to Acthar. In 2014, Mallinckrodt plc, another pharmaceutical company, acquired Questcor and, with it, Acthar. Id. ¶ 44. As a result of the acquisition Questcor's name was changed to Mallinckrodt ARD, Inc. Id. ¶ 22.<sup>1</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> At times the SAC refers to Mallinckrodt when it actually meant Questcor. For example, plaintiffs allege that Mallinckrodt acquired the Acthar monopoly from Aventis, SAC ¶ 9, when in actuality Questcor purchased Acthar. Because the SAC alleges that Mallinckrodt is responsible for Questcor's actions before 2014—a proposition which neither Mallinckrodt plc nor Mallinckrodt ARD, Inc. contest—the court will treat Questcor's actions as Mallinckrodt's actions for purposes of these motions to dismiss. The court's references to Mallinckrodt before 2014 refer to Questcor's conduct.

Before 2007, Acthar was distributed to any doctor, hospital, wholesaler, or specialty pharmacy [**4] who requested the drug to treat seriously ill patients. Id. ¶ 47. On August 27, 2007, Mallinckrodt embarked on a "new strategy" that sought to limit Acthar's distribution by designating Express Scripts<sup>2</sup> as Mallinckrodt's sole distributor [*744] of Acthar. Id. ¶¶ 48-49, 221.<sup>3</sup> Plaintiffs allege that the "new strategy" is in fact a vertical price-fixing conspiracy, in which Mallinckrodt used Express Scripts as its exclusive distributor of Acthar through a program called the "Acthar Support & Access Program" (the "ASAP") to raise prices, restrict distribution, and stifle competition. According to plaintiffs, the structure of the ASAP allows defendants to restrict the distribution of Acthar to just one distributor, Express Scripts, thereby eliminating other distributors from negotiating for lower prices for Acthar. Id. ¶¶ 48, 90, 231.

Express Scripts' role is to provide "integrated specialty services" to facilitate every other facet of the distribution chain, where each Express Scripts entity plays different roles at different levels of this process. Id. ¶ 58. UBC, a pharmaceutical support services company,<sup>4</sup> acts as the "hub" between these entities, coordinating Acthar's sale, distribution, [**5] and reimbursement between Mallinckrodt, ESI, CuraScript, and Accredo. Id. ¶ 51. Specifically, after being contacted directly by patients or notified by Mallinckrodt that a patient wants to purchase Acthar, UBC confirms the medical necessity of the prescription through Accredo (a specialty pharmacy services company) and then arranges payment through ESI (the pharmacy benefit manager ("PBM")) for shipment of Acthar to patients through CuraScript (the wholesale pharmacy/distributor).<sup>5</sup> Id. ¶¶ 57-62, 67. This allows Mallinckrodt to simply ship Acthar directly to patients and receive payments directly from the patients' third-party payors, while Express Scripts handles the rest. Id. ¶ 50.

Plaintiffs further allege various anticompetitive acts that enabled defendants to use the ASAP to price-fix and maintain Mallinckrodt's monopoly. One example is the timing of Acthar's first large price increase. As soon as defendants implemented the ASAP, Mallinckrodt increased the price of Acthar from approximately $1,980 to $27,922.80—a 1,310% increase in the span of a month, and a 69,707% increase from 2001. Id. ¶¶ 89-90. Arguing that this price increase was made possible by an unlawful conspiracy between [**6] defendants, plaintiffs allege that Express Scripts did not push back on this price increase despite acknowledging that Acthar was vastly overpriced, and still has not pushed back on even higher prices as of the filing of the SAC. Id. ¶¶ 94, 97-99. Express Scripts was in a unique position to negotiate the most competitive prices for specialty drugs in the United States as a result of its representation of the largest number of buyers in the pharmaceutical marketplace. Id. ¶¶ 56, 73, 96, 100-102, 239. Plaintiffs provide an example of a time where Express Scripts used its bargaining power to extract lower prices from a manufacturer, Daraprim, which had increased the price of another drug 5000% in one year. Id. ¶¶ 85-86. Specifically, in December 2015, Express Scripts partnered with a different manufacturer to offer <sup>2</sup>Express Scripts argues that the various Express Scripts entities named in this action are distinct corporate entities, and accordingly, plaintiffs cannot "group plead" their allegations against all of the Express Scripts entities because "[a] complaint based on a theory of collective responsibility must be dismissed," even in cases of alleged conspiracy, where plaintiffs do not allege that each particular defendant joined the conspiracy and knew of its scope. Bank of Am., N.A. v. Knight, 725 F.3d 815, 818 (7th Cir. 2013). But the SAC contains various allegations about the roles of each Express Script entity such that each entity is put on notice as to which defendants engaged in which acts that allowed Express Scripts to effectuate the alleged antitrust violations. See Guaranteed Rate, Inc. v. Conn, 264 F. Supp. 3d 909, 931 (N.D. Ill. 2017) (differentiating the facts in that case from Knight where there were no allegations about which defendant did what, whereas the allegations in Conn laid out how each entity played a particular role in the conspiracy). It may come about in discovery that there are insufficient facts to support claims against the specific Express Scripts entities. But at this stage, the court accepts plaintiffs' allegations that the Express Scripts entities worked together, through various lines of business, to effectuate the Synacthen Acquisition, and does not find that plaintiffs' group pleading provides the Express Scripts defendants insufficient notice of the claims against them.

<sup>3</sup>In ¶ 48 of the SAC, plaintiffs allege that Mallinckrodt's announcement of the "new strategy" was "[e]ffective August 1, 2001," when it appears that plaintiffs meant August 1, 2007.

<sup>4</sup>Plaintiffs allege that Express Scripts Holding Company announced on November 27, 2017, that it sold UBC to a private equity firm.

<sup>5</sup>Express Scripts notes in their motion to dismiss that CuraScript, Inc. is actually a specialty pharmacy, whereas the pertinent entity is Priority Healthcare Distribution, Inc., doing business as CuraScript SD.

its purchasers a low-cost alternative to the drug as a response to Daraprim's manufacturer's pricing decision. Id. ¶¶ 87-88. But in the case of Acthar, Express Scripts "had [*745] no interest in lowering the price for Acthar because it was making money off all aspects of its exclusive arrangement with the manufacturer. In other words, by helping Mallinckrodt maintain and enhance its [**7] monopoly power in the ACTH market, Express Scripts along with Mallinckrodt realized greater profits at the expense of payors, like Plaintiffs." Id. ¶ 96. As a result, from the time Mallinckrodt acquired Acthar in 2001 to the commencement of this action, the cost of Acthar grew 109,046%. Id. ¶ 93.

B. The Synacthen Acquisition

Plaintiffs also contend that the purported conspiracy allowed Mallinckrodt to keep Acthar's price high by eliminating potential competition to Acthar. By 2013, the only significant alternative to Acthar was Synacthen Depot ("Synacthen"), a synthetically derived ACTH medication manufactured by Novartis AG. Id. ¶ 106. Mallinckrodt was aware of Novartis as a competitive threat for years, including when defendants implemented the ASAP in 2007. Id. ¶¶ 127-129. Mallinckrodt unsuccessfully attempted to buy the rights to Synacthen in 2009. Id. ¶¶ 106, 132. In October of 2012, Mallinckrodt learned that at least one other company was attempting to buy the rights to Synacthen from Novartis to compete with Mallinckrodt in the ACTH drug market in the United States. Id. ¶ 141. Three firms proceeded through several rounds of negotiations with Novartis, submitted formal offers, [**8] and drafted near-final agreements. Id. ¶ 136. Each firm planned to commercialize Synacthen in the United States, having taken affirmative steps to do so by independently conducting due diligence, and crafting business plans and regulatory approval strategies. Id. ¶ 137.

In 2013, Novartis agreed to sell the rights of Synacthen to Retrophin, Inc., for $16 million. Id. ¶ 108. However, on June 11, 2013, the day Retrophin was to sign its contract with Novartis, Mallinckrodt "swept in at the eleventh hour" and agreed with Novartis to pay a minimum of $135 million for the exclusive rights to Synacthen (the "Synacthen Acquisition"). Id. ¶¶ 108, 144-145, 147. Unlike the three alternative bidders, Mallinckrodt had only incomplete plans for Synacthen and conducted limited due diligence when it submitted its initial offer to Novartis. Id. ¶ 143. Upon purchasing the rights to Synacthen, Mallinckrodt chose not to bring it to market. Id. ¶¶ 108, 145. Mallinckrodt never sought FDA approval for Synacthen. Id. ¶ 145. Acthar was and continues to be the only viable product in the market for infantile spasms and certain other conditions. Id. ¶ 122. Because ACTH drugs require Food and Drug Administration [**9] approval to be sold to consumers, there are significant barriers to entry for ACTH drugs. Id. ¶ 124.

In January 2014, Retrophin sued Mallinckrodt for antitrust violations in the United States District Court for the Central District of California. Retrophin alleged that there was no procompetitive aspect of Mallinckrodt's acquisition of Synacthen. Id. ¶ 146. The Federal Trade Commission sued Mallinckrodt on January 18, 2017, similarly alleging that Mallinckrodt exercised, and continued to exercise, monopoly power in the United States and did so unlawfully based on the Synacthen Acquisition. Id. ¶¶ 115-116. Mallinckrodt chose to settle the Retrophin lawsuit for $15.5 million and the FTC lawsuit for $100 million. Id. ¶¶ 91, 150, 155. Plaintiffs point to the Retrophin and FTC complaints against Mallinckrodt to support their claims that Mallinckrodt violated antitrust laws by eliminating the only viable competition to Acthar.<sup>6</sup>

[*746] C. The Instant Action

---

<sup>6</sup>The consent order between the FTC and Mallinckrodt notes: "This Order shall not be used as evidence in any proceedings other than a proceeding by Plaintiffs or the Synacthen Sublicensee regarding enforcement or modification of this Order." Order for Permanent Injunction and Equitable Monetary Relief, FTC v. Mallinckrodt ARD Inc., F.T.C. No. 1310172, at 8 (D.D.C. Jan 30, 2017). Accordingly, the court does not consider the Order for its analysis in this opinion, but does consider the FTC and Retrophin complaints.

Rockford provides its employees with a health plan that includes prescription insurance coverage for two Acthar patients. The health plan has a contract with ESI, which requires ESI to collect payments for the price of [**10] Acthar. In a contract between Rockford and ESI (the "PBM Agreement" or the "contract") that the parties entered into on January 1, 2015, ESI agreed to provide Rockford certain services, including "cost containment," although "cost containment" is not defined in the agreement. Mallinckrodt charged Rockford for Acthar at a discounted rate of 13.5% off the "average wholesale price" as set forth in the PBM Agreement. Mallinckrodt set the average wholesale prices of Acthar used by Express Scripts for reimbursement. Accordingly, on April 1, 2015, Mallinckrodt had Acthar shipped directly to the children of two Rockford employees. ESI then charged Rockford $100,457.64 for the 30-day supply of Acthar, pursuant to the terms of the PBM Agreement.

In contrast, Acument has a contract with CVS Caremark ("CVS") which covered the spouse of one of Acument's employees because the spouse suffers from a condition for which Acthar was prescribed as a treatment option. Plaintiffs allege that CVS stepped into the place of ESI in the Acthar distribution chain, but was still coordinated by UBC. CVS charged Acument $894,617.75 for thirteen administrations of Acthar in a thirteen-month period between December [**11] 2015 and December 2016. Id. ¶ 10.

The SAC alleges claims by Rockford against Express Scripts for unjust enrichment (Count I); Rockford against Mallinckrodt for unjust enrichment (Count II); Acument against Mallinckrodt for unjust enrichment (Count III); plaintiffs against all defendants for fraud (Count IV), conspiracy to defraud (Count V), maintenance of monopolization under 15 U.S.C. § 2 (Count VI), unreasonable restraint of trade under 15 U.S.C. § 1 (Count VII), violation of state antitrust and consumer protection laws (Count VIII), participation in racketeering activity under 18 U.S.C. § 1962\(c\) (Count IX), use of investment funds from racketeering activity under 18 U.S.C. § 1962\(a\) (Count X), and agreement to participate in racketeering activity under 18 U.S.C. § 1962\(d\) (Count XI); and Rockford against Express Scripts for breach of contract based on the PBM Agreement (Count XII), promissory estoppel (Count XIII), declaratory judgment based on the PBM Agreement (Count XIV), and breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing (Count XV). Mallinckrodt and Express Scripts have separately moved to dismiss the SAC pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12\(b\)\(6\) for failure to state claims against them.<sup>7</sup>

II. ANALYSIS

HN1 When deciding a motion to dismiss, the court accepts all of the well-pleaded [**12] allegations of the complaint as true and draws all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff. Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007). Under the Federal Rules, a complaint need only contain "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled [*747] to relief." Fed. R. Civ. P. 8\(a\)\(2\). "[D]etailed factual allegations" are not required, but the plaintiff must allege facts that, when "accepted as true . . . state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009). In analyzing whether a complaint has met this standard, the "reviewing court [must] draw on its judicial experience and common sense." Id. at 679. Further, plaintiffs' HN2 claims for fraud, conspiracy to defraud<sup>8</sup> and RICO conspiracy are subject to a heightened pleading standard that requires plaintiffs to plead their allegations with specificity. See Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 9\(b\); Fid. Nat'l Title Ins. Co. of N.Y. v. Intercounty Nat'l Title Ins. Co., 412 F.3d 745, 749 (7th Cir. 2005).

As an initial matter, defendants argue in their motions to dismiss that plaintiffs' claims are barred by applicable statutes of limitations to the extent that plaintiffs seek recovery for them and the class based on payments for

---

<sup>7</sup> Plaintiffs also filed supplemental authority they believe support their positions; defendants filed briefs disputing that these cases militate in favor of plaintiffs. The court acknowledges these cases and has considered them in its analysis.

<sup>8</sup> For purposes of this opinion only, references to a "conspiracy" in the opinion's sections on plaintiffs' federal and state antitrust claims refer specifically to an "antitrust conspiracy," whereas references to a "conspiracy" in the other sections refers instead to common-law conspiracy, the principle difference being that the court applies Rule 9\(b\)'s heightened pleading standard to the latter but not the former.

Acthar that fall outside of each claim's respective limitations periods. HN3↑ "A plaintiff is not required to plead elements in his or her complaint that overcome affirmative defenses, such as statute-of-limitations [**13] defenses." NewSpin Sports, LLC v. Arrow Elecs., Inc., 910 F.3d 293, 2018 WL 6295272, at *3 (7th Cir. 2018). Accordingly, defendants' statute of limitations argument may be raised in their answers and litigated later in these proceedings.

A. Federal Antitrust Claims (Counts VI and VII)

The gravamen of plaintiffs' antitrust claims is that defendants acted and conspired to raise Acthar prices exorbitantly high as part of a vertical price-fixing scheme and did so by implementing the ASAP, restricting distribution, not seeking low-cost alternatives to Acthar, and, in the case of the Synacthen Acquisition, eliminating viable competitors from entering the ACTH market in order to unlawfully preserve Mallinckrodt's monopoly for its and Express Scripts' pecuniary benefit. The antitrust conspiracy, as plaintiffs allege, injured plaintiffs by forcing them to pay higher costs for Acthar than they would have but for defendants' conduct. For the foregoing reasons, the court finds that Rockford has plausibly stated that defendants' conduct amounted to violations of §§ 1 and 2 and that it was injured by this conduct, but that Acument does not plausibly allege that it has antitrust standing to sue.

1. Plaintiffs' Article III Standing for Federal Antitrust Claims

HN4↑ Generally, Article III standing is "the threshold question in every federal case, determining the power of the court to entertain [**14] the suit." Warth v. Seldin, 422 U.S. 490, 498, 95 S. Ct. 2197, 45 L. Ed. 2d 343 (1975). All that is required to demonstrate Article III standing is "injury in fact plus redressability." Kochert v. Greater Lafayette Health Servs., Inc., 463 F.3d 710, 714 (7th Cir. 2006). There is no dispute that plaintiffs have Article III standing to bring their federal antitrust claims. Thus, the court will proceed to discuss each plaintiffs' "antitrust standing" to bring this suit.

2. Rockford's Antitrust Standing for Federal Claims

HN5↑ The Supreme Court has found two additional standing limitations born from the [\[\*748\]](#) Sherman Act as part of a separate standing doctrine known as "antitrust standing." See Loeb Indus., Inc. v. Sumitomo Corp., 306 F.3d 469, 480 (7th Cir. 2002) (describing the range of antitrust standing limitations that have emerged from federal law). First, in Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720, 97 S. Ct. 2061, 52 L. Ed. 2d 707 (1977), the Supreme Court held that only direct purchasers from alleged antitrust violators may bring federal antitrust actions. Second, in Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters \("AGC"\), 459 U.S. 519, 103 S. Ct. 897, 74 L. Ed. 2d 723 (1983), the Supreme Court held that courts must engage in a "proximate cause" analysis to determine whether a plaintiff is a "proper party" to bring suit. Because these limitations "are analytically distinct," Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters, Local 734 Health & Welfare Tr. Fund v. Philip Morris Inc., 196 F.3d 818, 828 (7th Cir. 1999), the court assesses each in turn, see also Loeb, 306 F.3d at 475 ("We find that Illinois Brick presents no obstacle [**15] to any of the plaintiffs' claims but that the claims of the scrap copper dealers are precluded under AGC.").

a. Illinois Brick

As alleged, Rockford directly purchased Acthar from Express Scripts, so the "indirect purchaser" limitation of Illinois Brick does not affect Rockford's antitrust standing to sue Express Scripts. HN6↑ As for its claims against Mallinckrodt as an indirect purchaser,<sup>9</sup> Illinois Brick's "indirect purchaser" rule denies Rockford antitrust standing unless it fits into one of the recognized exceptions to Illinois Brick. One such exception is the "co-conspirator" exception, which allows indirect purchasers to sue middlemen-conspirators if the plaintiffs can establish a conspiracy and overcharges:

Illinois Brick does not limit suits by consumers against a manufacturer who illegally contracted with its dealers to set the latter's resale price. The consumer plaintiff is a direct purchaser from the dealer who, by hypothesis, has conspired illegally with the manufacturer with respect to the very price paid by the consumer. There is no problem of duplication or apportionment because the consumer is the only party who has paid any overcharge. Although the manufacturer did not sell [**16] directly to the consumer, he is a fellow conspirator with the direct-selling dealer and therefore jointly and severally liable with the dealer for the consumer's injury.

2 PHILLIP E. AREEDA & HERBERT HOVENKAMP, ANTITRUST LAW 264 (rev. ed. 1995) (footnotes omitted); see Paper Sys. Inc. v. Nippon Paper Indus. Co., 281 F.3d 629, 634 (7th Cir. 2002). The "crucial question" for courts assessing this exception is whether the alleged anticompetitive conduct stems from an agreement between the alleged co-conspirators. Tamburo v. Dworkin, 601 F.3d 693, 699 (7th Cir. 2010).

HN7 A plaintiff alleging conspiracy to fix prices in violation of the Sherman Act must allege "enough factual matter (taken as true) to suggest that an agreement was made"—that is, "enough fact[s] to raise a reasonable expectation that discovery will reveal evidence of illegal agreement." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556. This standard is not the same as the "heightened" pleading standard of Rule 9(b), and accordingly, plaintiffs can allege an antitrust conspiracy by pleading circumstantial evidence of an illegal agreement. [*749] See id. at 569 n.14 (affirming dismissal of antitrust conspiracy allegations and noting that "[i]n reaching this conclusion, we do not apply any 'heightened' pleading standard, nor do we seek to broaden the scope of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9. . . . Here, our concern is not that the allegations in the complaint [**17] were insufficiently 'particular[ized]'; rather, the complaint warranted dismissal because it failed in toto to render plaintiffs' entitlement to relief plausible" (citation omitted)). Indeed, "circumstantial evidence is the lifeblood of antitrust law" because direct evidence will rarely be available to prove the existence of a price-fixing conspiracy. In re Flash Memory Antitrust Litig., 643 F. Supp. 2d 1133, 1147 (N.D. Cal. 2009) (quoting United States v. Falstaff Brewing Corp., 410 U.S. 526, 534 n.13, 93 S. Ct. 1096, 35 L. Ed. 2d 475 (1973)) ("Plaintiffs alleged that [the] agreements were used as the means to maintain and achieve the end result of the conspiracy by controlling the supply, and thereby permitting increases in the price for the products. While these allegations may not expressly state that the agreements themselves were illegal, they nonetheless may be considered with the pleadings as a whole in determining the existence of a 'plausible' conspiracy." (citations and footnote omitted)).

As the court accepts all allegations at the Rule 12 stage as true, the court finds that a reasonable inference could be drawn that defendants conspired to unlawfully boost the price of Acthar, restrict its output, and eliminate competition in violation of federal antitrust law when Mallinckrodt instituted its "new strategy." The goal of the exclusive dealing arrangement was [**18] "to lock patients into receiving Acthar through one channel and prevent a competitive product from entering the market." SAC ¶ 222 (emphasis added). Express Scripts employed its market power to effectuate these goals, allowing Mallinckrodt to maintain its monopoly, thereby increasing both their profits, and prevent competitors from challenging that monopoly. Thus, Mallinckrodt's decision to purchase the rights to Synacthen "at the eleventh hour" only to "shelve" the product upon acquiring it was simply an intended goal of the ASAP, effectuated by both defendants. Id. ¶¶ 111-114, 145. Specifically, Express Scripts agreed not to push back on Mallinckrodt's decisions to inflate Acthar's price beyond the competitive level, in contrast to when Express Scripts took the opposite approach in 2015 with respect to Turing's drug, Daraprim. Id. ¶¶ 86-88. While defendants appear to isolate the exclusive dealing arrangement from the Synacthen Acquisition, taking the allegations in the SAC as true, plaintiffs allege that these anticompetitive acts were part of the same conspiracy. Id. ¶¶ 231, 250. The court anticipates that further discovery will shed light on Express Scripts' knowledge of and role [**19] in the

---

<sup>9</sup> The court leaves open the possibility after discovery that Rockford can prove that it stands in a direct purchasing relationship with Mallinckrodt, depending on what the evidence uncovers about the structure of the exclusive distribution arrangement—for example, if plaintiffs can prove that Express Scripts is really Mallinckrodt's agent.

Synacthen Acquisition, if any. But at this stage of litigation, the court draws all reasonable inferences from the complaint in favor of plaintiffs and taking the SAC as a whole finds that plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged a conspiracy.

Defendants cite In re ATM Fee Antitrust Litigation to argue that allegations of a vertical conspiracy pursuant to the "co-conspirator" exception must include the allegation that "the conspiracy must fix the price paid by the plaintiffs," and because plaintiffs failed to allege that defendants fixed the price paid by plaintiffs, Illinois Brick still applies. 686 F.3d 741, 750 \(9th Cir. 2012\) (emphasis added); see also Dickson v. Microsoft Corp., 309 F.3d 193, 214-215 \(4th Cir. 2002\) (noting in dicta that "the rationale for concluding that Illinois Brick does not apply to a price-fixing conspiracy is that no overcharge has been passed on to the consumer: When a dealer has illegally conspired with a manufacturer with respect to the price paid by a consumer, then the consumer is the only party [*750] who has paid any overcharge"). In particular, Mallinckrodt argues that the SAC contains "no plausible allegations that the prices that Plaintiffs paid were set by an agreement between [defendants]" because "ESI charged Rockford for Acthar pursuant to [**20] the terms of a separate agreement between Rockford and ESI," and "Acument contracted with CVS for the provision of specialty drugs like Acthar and made direct payments to CVS. Similarly, Express Scripts argues that plaintiffs "repeatedly plead[ ] facts illustrating that Mallinckrodt unilaterally sets the [average wholesale price] for Acthar." (emphasis in original).

HN8 But ATM Fee expressly noted that the Seventh Circuit takes a different approach. See ATM Fee, 686 F.3d at 755 n.7 (citing Paper Systems, 281 F.3d at 631-32) (noting that the Seventh and Third Circuits "restrict Illinois Brick's influence by allowing an exception when the direct purchaser conspires with the seller, even though the price illegally set is an upstream cost that is passed-on to the plaintiffs"). In Paper Systems, for example, the Seventh Circuit explained that the crux of the "co-conspirator" exception is the joint-and-several liability of conspiring defendants: "If [the defendant] was among those conspirators, then it is responsible for the entire overcharge of [all five \[defendant\] manufacturers](#)—and any direct purchaser from any conspirator can collect its own portion of damages (that is, the damages attributable to its direct purchases) from any conspirator." 281 F.3d at 632 (emphasis [**21] in original); see also In re Brand Name Prescription Drugs Antitrust Litig., 186 F.3d 781, 787 \(7th Cir. 1997\) ("[I]t was necessary for [plaintiffs] to present economic evidence that would show that the hypothesis of collusive action was more plausible than that of individual action. They did not, however, as the defendant manufacturers rather absurdly argue, have to exclude all possibility that the manufacturers' price discrimination was unilateral rather than collusive."); Fontana Aviation, Inc. v. Cessna Aircraft Co., 617 F.2d 478, 481 \(7th Cir. 1980\) ("Standing separately some of the allegations may be of no antitrust concern, but if all of [the defendant's] alleged activities were combined and coordinated with the intent to destroy [the plaintiff], its target, as a competitor, the allegations, whatever their merit, should be judged as a whole and not separately."); Kleen Prods. LLC v. Int'l Paper, 306 F.R.D. 585, 608 \(N.D. Ill. 2015\) aff'd sub nom. Kleen Prods. LLC v. Int'l Paper Co., 831 F.3d 919, 930 \(7th Cir. 2016\) (stating axiomatically that plaintiffs may also sue co-conspirators that are vertically connected to an upstream defendant in antitrust actions because co-conspirators are jointly and severally liable for alleged antitrust violations). Plaintiffs allege that defendants are jointly and severally liable for the alleged antitrust violations that plaintiffs (and the class) directly and wholly felt. Paper Systems, 281 F.3d at 632-34 (noting that joint and several liability is a "vital instrument for [**22] maximizing deterrence," so "[a]s long as [defendants'] direct customers hold the exclusive right to [100% of] damages for its own output, the holding and goals of Illinois Brick have been satisfied"). That plaintiffs contracted directly with Express Scripts on Acthar's price does not negate the inference that Express Scripts allegedly agreed with Mallinckrodt to price-fix.

Further, the three concerns highlighted by Illinois Brick are not of concern in the instant case. First, there is no risk of duplicative liability or potentially inconsistent judgments because plaintiffs and Express Scripts would not be suing for the same injury given plaintiffs' allegations that Express Scripts took part in the price-fixing that allegedly injured plaintiffs. Second, permitting plaintiffs to sue would not cause inefficient enforcement of the antitrust laws by diluting the ultimate [*751] recovery and thus decreasing direct purchasers' incentive to sue. Though the court notes that there are no allegations that would lead Express Scripts to seek recovery for any such overcharge in subsequent lawsuits, it would still be able to recover the same amount on their hypothetical lost profits claim even if plaintiffs [**23] recovered on their separate price-fixing claims. Third, Illinois Brick warned against requiring courts to ascertain the portion of an overcharge that was passed on. But here, plaintiffs do not allege that defendants' agreement in fact included a "pass-on" payment. Rather, plaintiffs allege that defendants agreed on what share of the payment Express Scripts would receive, and then Express Scripts would simply deduct its agreed-upon share before forwarding the remainder to Mallinckrodt, see SAC ¶ 20; the court would simply look to the amount deducted by Express Scripts to ascertain the portion of the overcharge. While plaintiffs do not allege what that amount is, defendants do not explain why that amount would be difficult to ascertain.

In sum, plaintiffs allege circumstantial evidence to support their argument that defendants agreed to a vertical price-fixing scheme. Discovery may illuminate that Express Scripts did not in fact play a role in the Synacthen Acquisition, that defendants had no intention of effecting harm to the market through the exclusive dealing arrangement, and/or that Mallinckrodt conducted its allegedly unlawful conduct separate and apart from its business associations [**24] with Express Scripts. Indeed, plaintiffs will be required later in litigation to provide evidence "that tends to exclude the possibility that the alleged conspirators acted independently." Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., Ltd. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 588, 106 S. Ct. 1348, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538 (1988). But at the Rule 12 stage, the court draws all reasonable inferences in favor of plaintiffs, and finds that Illinois Brick is not a bar to plaintiffs' claims.

b. AGC

HNG  Aside from Illinois Brick, another antitrust standing limitation imposed on parties bringing antitrust actions comes from AGC. In determining whether an antitrust plaintiff is a "proper party" to bring suit under AGC, courts look at the following factors: (1) the causal connection between the violation and the harm; (2) the presence of improper motive; (3) the type of injury and whether it was one Congress sought to redress; (4) the directness of the injury; (5) the speculative nature of the damages; and (6) the risk of duplicate recovery or complex damage apportionment. 459 U.S. at 537-45.

The court finds that Rockford alleges that it is a proper party to bring its federal antitrust claims and thus satisfies the AGC factors.<sup>10</sup> Rockford has plausibly alleged that, as a direct cause of defendants' purported conspiracy, it was injured by being forced to pay higher [**25] prices for Acthar than it would have but for the agreements of the defendants and the Synacthen Acquisition which together prevented a low-cost alternative entering the market. See SAC ¶ 151. Further, as detailed below in the court's discussion of plaintiffs' § 2 claims, Rockford has plausibly alleged that defendants had the specific intent to create anticompetitive effects through the conspiracy, thus establishing an improper motive. And at this time, the court finds no concerns such as speculative damages, duplicative recovery, or apportionment issues that cast doubt on the [*752] propriety of Rockford bringing its federal antitrust claims against either defendant. The injuries alleged in the SAC are precisely the types of injuries that Congress sought to redress in creating the Sherman Act—those being, "reduced output and higher prices," as well as the unlawful elimination of competition. U.S. Gypsum Co. v. Ind. Gas Co., Inc., 350 F.3d 623, 626-27 (7th Cir. 2003). Consequently, the court finds that Rockford has antitrust standing to bring its federal antitrust claims.

3. Acument's Antitrust Standing for Federal Claims

While the court finds that the SAC plausibly alleges an antitrust conspiracy between Mallinckrodt and Express Scripts, there is an additional wrinkle [**26] concerning the "directness" of Acument's purchasing relationship to Express Scripts because plaintiffs allege that Acument paid CVS for Acthar and not ESI. Specifically, they allege that, when Acument contracted with CVS Caremark for the provision of specialty drugs, like Acthar, to its employee beneficiaries, CVS Caremark simply charged the same prices based on the prices set by Mallinckrodt in agreement with Express Scripts, as the product continued to flow directly from Express Scripts to the patients of other PBMs, like CVS Caremark. . . . "[S]uch payments were transferred by CVS Caremark to Mallinckrodt pursuant to a likely understanding between the two that the total amount would be forwarded to Mallinckrodt, less a certain amount previously agreed to by Mallinckrodt and CVS Caremark."

---

<sup>10</sup> Defendants do not argue that plaintiffs fail to meet the AGC factors with respect to their federal antitrust claims.

SAC ¶¶ 70, 72, 196, 246 (emphasis added).

Plaintiffs do not sufficiently plead that CVS was a member of the conspiracy merely by alleging that CVS operated in the same fashion as Express Scripts, see id. ¶¶ 233-234, or that Mallinckrodt had a "likely understanding" with CVS, which mirrored the arrangement it had with Express Scripts, id. ¶ 196. Otherwise, the SAC contains scant mentions of CVS and [**27] its role as part of the dealing arrangement alleged in all other respects to be exclusive.<sup>11</sup> As currently formulated, plaintiffs do not plausibly allege that Acument was a direct purchaser from a member of the alleged conspiracy, nor does Acument plausibly allege any other theory which [*753] would furnish antitrust standing to it. As such, Acument cannot state a claim against either Mallinckrodt or Express Scripts.

AGC also presents a problem here, albeit less of a problem than Illinois Brick. It appears that the allegations in the SAC may satisfy the AGC factors as applied to Acument. But until we know the contours of CVS' role in supplying Acthar to Acument's employee's spouse, the court is not able to engage in a complete application of the AGC factors to Acument.

Thus, the court dismisses without prejudice Acument's federal antitrust claims against Mallinckrodt and Express Scripts. The court grants plaintiffs leave to replead to correct Counts VI and VII's deficiencies.<sup>12</sup>

The court now turns to the merits of Rockford's §§ 1 and 2 claims under the Sherman Act.<sup>13</sup>

4. § 1 (Count VII)

HN10 [Section 1 of the Sherman Act] prohibits "[e]very contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, [**28] in restraint of trade or commerce." 15 U.S.C. § 1. Only those agreements that are unreasonable restraints on trade are actionable under § 1. See Omnicare, Inc. v. UnitedHealth Grp., Inc., 629 F.3d 697, 705 (7th

<sup>11</sup> Taking plaintiffs' allegations as true, the assertions that Acument paid CVS for Acthar appear to contradict the exclusivity of ESI as the only PBM as part of the alleged ASAP. Additionally, Acument's explanation of CVS' role in defendants' alleged scheme is cryptic. Acument alleges that it had a contract with CVS which provided prescription drug insurance coverage for its employee's spouse. SAC ¶ 71. But it is unclear whether CVS is acting as a prescription drug insurance carrier or something else. CVS is elsewhere described as an entity which performs a function similar to that of ESI. Id. ¶¶ 66, 70, 233. The SAC states that CVS is required to collect payments for the purchase of Acthar, but figures 1 and 2, which are presumably designed to clarify the text, shows that patient payments go directly from the patient to ESI. This situation is further muddled by plaintiffs' allegation that CVS deducts an agreed-upon share of money it receives before forwarding it to Mallinckrodt, while figures 1 and 2 of the SAC show money from the health plans, which may or may not refer to CVS, going to ESI. See id. ¶ 233. Notably, Acument's role is not shown on the figures at all. Rockford is self-insured, but it is unclear how in this scenario in which Acument's employee's spouse has prescription insurance coverage that Acument still pays 80% of the cost of the spouse's specialty pharmacy drugs, which comes to $894,617.75, to obtain Acthar. Id. ¶¶ 10, 21. The dearth of information makes it difficult to understand the precise relationship of Acument, CVS, and the patient. Curiously, the SAC claims that payments for Acthar flow directly from Acument to CVS, id. ¶ 233, which is described as one of the "co-conspirators," id. ¶ 234, yet no details are provided anywhere else in the SAC as to how CVS participates in the alleged conspiracy.

<sup>12</sup> Defendants argue that the court should not exercise its discretion and allow plaintiffs to replead for a third time. The court notes that while another amended complaint will be plaintiffs' fourth total complaint filed in this action, a subsequent complaint would be the first incident to the court's ruling on a Rule 12(b) motion. As plaintiffs requested leave to amend in their oppositions to defendants' motions to dismiss, the court will allow plaintiffs to replead to correct the deficiencies detailed in this opinion if counsel can do so in accordance with the obligations imposed by Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

<sup>13</sup> The remainder of this opinion's analysis of plaintiffs' federal antitrust claims deals only with Rockford because the court has found that Acument has not shown that it has antitrust standing to bring its federal antitrust claims. However, Acument may have viable claims should it choose to sufficiently replead antitrust standing to bring its federal antitrust claims. The court makes no finding at this stage as to whether Acument has adequately stated a claim.

Cir. 2011) (citing State Oil Co. v. Khan, 522 U.S. 3, 10, 118 S. Ct. 275, 139 L. Ed. 2d 199 (1997)). To state § 1 claims, plaintiffs must plead facts plausibly suggesting: (1) a contract, combination, or conspiracy (meaning, an agreement); (2) a resulting unreasonable restraint of trade in a relevant market; and (3) an accompanying "antitrust injury." See Agnew v. NCAA, 683 F.3d 328, 335 (7th Cir. 2012). As the court detailed in the section on antitrust standing, plaintiffs satisfied the first prong by alleging with sufficient factual support that defendants contracted among themselves and conspired to vertically fix Acthar's price and maintain Mallinckrodt's monopoly. See, e.g., SAC ¶¶ 5, 7-8, 48-49, 111-114, 145, 222. The court will turn to the remaining two prongs.

a. Unreasonable Restraint of Trade

HN11[↑] The "unreasonable restraint of trade" prong asks courts to assess "the competitive effects of challenged behavior relative to such alternatives as its abandonment or a less restrictive substitute." Id. Courts use one of three tests to determine the challenged behavior. Courts use a "per se" test for conduct such as horizontal price fixing, market allocation, group boycotts, or tying arrangements that [**29] are so inherently anticompetitive, they are considered illegal per se. See Copperweld Corp. v. Independence Tube Corp., 467 U.S. 752, 768, 104 S. Ct. 2731, 81 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1984). In contrast, vertical arrangements such as exclusive distribution agreements are analyzed under the "rule of reason" test, which assigns the burden to [*754] plaintiffs to sufficiently allege that an agreement has an anticompetitive effect on a given market within a given geographic area. See Methodist Health Servs. Corp. v. OSF Healthcare Sys., No. 1:13-cv-01054-SLD-JEH, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 136478, 2016 WL 5817176, at *8 (C.D. Ill. Sept. 30, 2016) (citing Roland Machinery Co. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 749 F.2d 380, 393 (7th Cir. 1984)). More often than not, courts use the "rule of reason" test and not the "per se" test. See State Oil, 522 U.S. at 10. Courts sometimes employ a third test, known as the "quick-look" test, for conduct that is not plainly anticompetitive but where "no elaborate industry analysis is required to demonstrate the anticompetitive character of . . . an agreement." Natl Soc'y of Prof'l Eng'rs v. United States, 435 U.S. 679, 692, 98 S. Ct. 1355, 55 L. Ed. 2d 637 (1978).

Rockford alleges two anticompetitive understandings—the exclusive dealing arrangement and the Synacthen Acquisition—that together form the basis of their § 1 claims. While courts generally assess exclusive dealing arrangements under the rule of reason analysis, it is less clear that the rule of reason analysis applies here where plaintiffs have alleged that the conspiracy included both the exclusive dealing arrangement [**30] and the Synacthen Acquisition, which plaintiff argues deserves a "per se" analysis. However, the court agrees with plaintiffs that the court need not make this determination at this time. See In re: EpiPen (Epinephrine Injection, USP) Mktg., Sales Practices & Antitrust Litig., 336 F. Supp. 3d 1256, 2018 WL 3973153, at *19 n.8 (D. Kan. 2018) ("In ruling [on a motion to dismiss], the court just needs to determine whether the class plaintiffs have alleged a plausible conspiracy under the antitrust laws."); CSR Ltd. v. Fed. Ins. Co., 40 F. Supp. 2d 559, 564 (D.N.J. 1998) (HN12[↑]) "At this early [motion to dismiss] stage of the proceeding, the court does not find it necessary to determine which mode of analysis [per se or rule of reason] it will ultimately employ in evaluating the defendants' activities."); 2 AREEDA & HOVENKAMP, ANTITRUST LAW 264 ¶ 305(e), at 69 ("Often, however, the decision about which rule is to be employed will await facts that are developed only in discovery."). After discovery, the court can better determine whether and how to take a more detailed look at the effects of defendants' conduct. See, e.g., EpiPen, 336 F. Supp. 3d 1256, 2018 WL 3973153, at *16 (noting that if the court applied a rule of reason analysis to the exclusive dealing arrangement in that case, it would consider a "number of factors" from Tampa Elec. Co. v. Nashville Coal Co., 365 U.S. 320, 327, 81 S. Ct. 623, 5 L. Ed. 2d 580 (1961), to determine whether a "substantial [*31] foreclosure of the market" occurred, making the conduct unreasonable). Discovery will elucidate whether the purported conspiracy as a whole is patently anticompetitive "such as would always or almost always tend to restrict competition and decrease output." See id. at 565 (citing Nw. Wholesale Stationers, Inc. v. Pac. Stationery & Printing Co., 472 U.S. 284, 289, 105 S. Ct. 2613, 86 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1985)). At this stage, it is sufficient for plaintiffs to plausibly allege that defendants engaged in conduct that resulted in an unreasonable restraint of trade.

Rockford alleges that defendants conspired to keep prices high, restrict output, and prevent competition from entering the market. The "new strategy" reduced the number of wholesale distributors of Acthar from three to one, thereby restricting patient's access to Acthar, and employed Express Scripts' market power not to push for lower-cost alternatives. SAC ¶¶ 48, 103. The ASAP thus allowed Mallinckrodt to maintain its dominant monopoly power in the ACTH drug market, maintain prices at artificially high levels, and exclude less expensive competitive products from the ACTH drug market. [*755] The other focus of the SAC is the exclusion of competitive alternatives to the market and highlights the Synacthen Acquisition. Because Retrophin planned to bring Synacthen to market [**32] as the first viable competitor to Acthar, keeping Synacthen from the United States market resulted in complaints filed by the FTC and Retrophin for depriving the market of a lower-cost alternative with no procompetitive justifications. Id. ¶ 151. HN13[<sup>14</sup>] The elimination of competition with no procompetitive justification is the type of conduct that the antitrust laws were designed to guard against. See In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d 931, 950 (N.D. Ill. 2018) (citing Havco of Am., Ltd. v. Shell Oil Co., 626 F.2d 549, 556 (7th Cir. 1980) (citation omitted)). Consequently, the court finds that Rockford's assertions of anticompetitive conduct are sufficient to adequately plead the "unreasonable restraint of trade" prong of Rockford's § 1 claim.

b. Antitrust Injury

HN14[<sup>15</sup>] The third prong requires that an antitrust plaintiff must allege that the "claimed injuries are of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and reflect the anticompetitive effect of either the violation of or anticompetitive acts made possible by the violation." Kochert, 463 F.3d at 716; see also Agnew, 683 F.3d at 334-35 ("The purpose of the Sherman Act is to protect consumers from injury that results from diminished competition. Thus the plaintiff must allege, not only an injury to himself, but an injury to the market as well." (citation omitted)); Gypsum, 350 F.3d at 626-27 ("A private plaintiff must show antitrust injury—which [**33] is to say, injury by reason of those things that make the practice unlawful, such as reduced output and higher prices."). Rockford alleges that defendants were able to charge higher prices for Acthar by restricting distribution of Acthar through the ASAP. SAC ¶ 8. HN15[<sup>16</sup>] "Paying higher prices as a result of coordinated output restrictions is a paradigmatic antitrust injury." Wash. Cty. Health Care Auth., Inc. v. Baxter Int'l Inc., 328 F. Supp. 3d 824, 845 (N.D. Ill. 2018). Further, Rockford alleges that Retrophin planned to bring Acthar to market and that defendants' decision to shelve Synacthen rather than bring it to market stifled competition. Had Novartis sold the rights to Synacthen to one of the other bidders that planned to bring Acthar to market, Rockford alleges that purchasers would have had a low-cost alternative to Acthar. See SAC ¶¶ 146-147. HN16[<sup>17</sup>] This is the type of injury that antitrust laws were intended to prevent. See Gypsum, 350 F.3d at 627 ("The antitrust-injury doctrine was created to filter out complaints by competitors and others who may be hurt by productive efficiencies, higher output, and lower prices, all of which the antitrust laws are designed to encourage."); Teamsters, 196 F.3d at 825 ("To recover under the antitrust laws, the plaintiff must show that its injury flows from that which makes the conduct an antitrust [**34] problem: higher prices and lower output."). Thus, Rockford has satisfied the "antitrust injury" prong and, accordingly, the court finds that Rockford has stated a § 1 claim.

5. § 2 (Count VI)

Rockford alleges that defendants acted and conspired to monopolize the ACTH drug market in violation of § 2.<sup>14</sup> See 15 U.S.C. § 2. HN17[<sup>18</sup>] A conspiracy to monopolize consists of (1) the existence of a combination or conspiracy, (2) overt acts in [*756] furtherance of the conspiracy, (3) an effect upon a substantial amount of interstate commerce, and (4) the existence of specific intent to monopolize. See The Great Escape, Inc. v. Union City Body Co., 791 F.2d 532, 540-41 (7th Cir. 1986).

The first prong of this test is sufficiently pled. Plaintiffs allege that Mallinckrodt initiated its "new strategy" to limit Acthar's distribution to one distributor, Express Scripts. Id. ¶¶ 48-49, 221, 231. Plaintiffs allege that Mallinckrodt was acting in concert with Express Scripts in an exclusive dealing arrangement well before the Synacthen Acquisition, and thus, plaintiffs plausibly allege that defendants' conspiracy encompassed and facilitated the Acquisition. As to the third prong, the parties do not dispute that as pled the alleged conspiracy affects a substantial amount of interstate commerce. See SAC ¶ 19. HN18 [¶] With respect to [**35] the fourth prong, in cases such as this that involve exclusive dealing arrangements, courts typically infer a sufficient allegation of specific intent when overt acts are adequately pled. See Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 506 U.S. 447, 459, 113 S. Ct. 884, 122 L. Ed. 2d 247 (1993) (explaining that anticompetitive conduct "may be sufficient to prove the necessary intent to monopolize"). The court agrees with this inferential analysis, particularly because "[c]ourts are wary to dismiss antitrust cases on intent solely on the pleadings because evidence of intent is often in the control of the defendants." Wagner v. Magellan Health Servs., Inc., 121 F. Supp. 2d 673, 681 (N.D. Ill. 2000).

---

<sup>14</sup> Section 2 claims may be plead under three different theories: (1) monopolization, (2) attempted monopolization, and (3) conspiracy to monopolize. Plaintiffs proceed under the third theory only.

HN19 [¶] In addressing the second prong, similar to § 1's "anticompetitive effects" requirement, plaintiffs must allege that the overt acts constitute "anticompetitive conduct." See Verizon Commc'n Inc. v. Law Offices of Curtis V. Trinko, LLP, 540 U.S. 398, 407, 124 S. Ct. 872, 157 L. Ed. 2d 823 (2004) ("To safeguard the incentive to innovate, the possession of monopoly power will not be found unlawful unless it is accompanied by an element of anticompetitive conduct." (emphasis in original)); Endsley v. City of Chicago, 230 F.3d 276, 283 (7th Cir. 2000) ("Under § 2, intent to obtain a monopoly is unlawful only where an entity seeks to maintain or achieve monopoly power by anticompetitive means."); Am. Acad. Suppliers, Inc. v. Beckley-Cardy, Inc., 922 F.2d 1317, 1320 (7th Cir. 1991) ("The offense of monopolization is the acquisition of monopoly by improper methods or, more commonly . . . the abuse of monopoly." (emphasis in original)). The acts from [**36] which the court can infer anticompetitive conduct must be essentially "predatory" in nature. See Mercatus Grp., LLC v. Lake Forest Hosp., 641 F.3d 834, 854 (7th Cir. 2011). Exclusionary, predatory, or anticompetitive conduct for purposes of § 2 claims is broadly defined as "conduct that is in itself an independent violation of the antitrust laws or that has no legitimate business justification other than to destroy or damage competition." The Great Escape, 791 F.2d at 541; DSM Desotech Inc. v. 3D Sys. Corp., No. 08 CV 1531, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5980, 2009 WL 174989, at *9 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 26, 2009).

HN20 [¶] While analysis of this prong can in some cases differ greatly from claims under § 1, for exclusive dealing claims brought under § 2, the analysis nearly the same as that for § 1 claims. This makes sense given that a plaintiff alleging an "unreasonable restraint of trade" would typically be required to allege that a defendant undertook "overt acts" to effectuate the restraint. Methodist Health, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 136478, 2016 WL 5817176, at *8 (noting that § 2 claims that allege antitrust violations based on exclusive dealing arrangements "are analyzed in much the same way as § 1 claims"). The court will await discovery to determine how to best characterize defendants' conduct. But at this [*757] stage, the court finds that Rockford has plausibly alleged that defendants' conduct was anticompetitive under the Seventh Circuit's broad definition of exclusionary, predatory, or anticompetitive [**37] conduct. As noted with respect to Rockford's § 1 claims, Rockford alleged that defendants conspired to price-fix and prevent competitors from entering the market, implemented through a joint-effort (the ASAP) that allowed Mallinckrodt to unlawfully acquire the rights to Synacthen. One can plausibly infer that the Synacthen Acquisition and Mallinckrodt's immediate "shelving" of Synacthen had no legitimate business justification and resulted in the maintenance and entrenchment of Mallinckrodt's monopoly.

HN21 [¶] Further, like claims under § 1, a plaintiff alleging a § 2 claim must also allege an "antitrust injury." See O.K. Sand & Gravel, Inc. v. Martin Marietta Techs., Inc., 36 F.3d 565, 573 (7th Cir. 1994); see also Magnetaq Techs. Corp. v. Intamin, Ltd., 801 F.3d 1150, 1158, 1158 n.2 (9th Cir. 2015) (noting the § 2 requirement of antitrust injury under a conspiracy-to-monopolize theory specifically). As noted in the section concerning Rockford's § 1 claims, Rockford has satisfied that requirement. See Wagner, 121 F. Supp. 2d at 681 (analyzing "antitrust injury" under § 1 and § 2 together). Thus, at this stage, all the § 2 prongs are sufficiently pled, and accordingly, Rockford has stated a § 2 claim.

Accordingly, the court denies defendants' motions to dismiss Counts VI and VII as to Rockford, finding that Rockford has antitrust standing to bring these claims and has met its burden at the Rule 12 stage.<sup>15</sup> The court

---

<sup>15</sup> HN22 [¶] Plaintiffs also seek injunctive relief under § 16 of the Clayton Act, SAC ¶ 12, which provides in part that "[a]ny person, firm, corporation, or association shall be entitled to sue for and have injunctive relief . . . against threatened loss or grants defendants' [**38] motions to dismiss Counts VI and VII as to Acument without prejudice, and grants plaintiffs leave to replead to correct the deficiencies noted by the court related to Acument's antitrust standing to bring its federal antitrust claims if it can do so consistent with its obligations under Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

B. State-Law Antitrust and Consumer Protection Claims (Count VIII)

Plaintiffs bring various state-law antitrust and consumer protection claims against defendants. Defendants put forth three separate arguments as to why plaintiffs' state-law claims should be dismissed. Their first argument is that plaintiffs lack constitutional standing under Article III to [*758] bring claims of unnamed class members. Second, defendants claim that plaintiffs are not the "proper parties" to bring suit under AGC.<sup>16</sup> Third, defendants maintain that certain limitations germane to specific states implicated by plaintiffs' claims act as additional barriers to plaintiffs bringing suit under those states. The court will assess these arguments in turn.

1. Article III Standing for Claims of Unnamed Class Members

Although defendants [**39] do not dispute plaintiffs' Article III standing to pursue their federal claims, defendants challenge plaintiffs' Article III standing to bring state-law claims on behalf of the unnamed class members.<sup>17</sup> The issue before the court then is whether Article III standing is properly alleged for plaintiffs' state-law claims based in jurisdictions in which a named plaintiff is not alleged to have suffered injury and thus Rockford and Acument cannot be said to have personally experienced injury based on defendants' conduct. But first the court must decide whether it should rule on plaintiffs' Article III standing to represent these claims now or as an alternative defer that ruling until the class certification stage.

Courts across this country are split on this timing issue. See McDonnell v. Nature's Way Prods., LLC, No. 16 C 5011, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44875, 2017 WL 1149336, at \*5 \(N.D. Ill. Mar. 28, 2017\) (collecting cases and noting that "[c]ourts in this district . . . are divided as to whether these decisions require a plaintiff to establish standing at the pleading stage to pursue claims under state laws in which that plaintiff does not reside or cannot claim to have personally suffered an injury"); see also 1 WILLIAM B. RUBENSTEIN, NEWBERG ON CLASS ACTIONS § 2: 6 (5th ed. 2013) damage by a violation of the antitrust laws." 15 U.S.C. § 26. Aside from very brief and passing references in the SAC, see id. ¶¶ 12, 254, and their prayers for relief, plaintiffs only raise the issue of injunctive relief pursuant to its federal antitrust claims in its briefing opposing the motion to dismiss. HN23 [↑] Defendants do not dispute plaintiffs' claims for injunctive relief separate from their arguments opposing plaintiffs' §§ 1 and 2 claims.

---

Plaintiffs are correct to point out that Illinois Brick does not foreclose plaintiffs' equitable relief claims. See In re Broiler Chicken Antitrust Litig., 290 F. Supp. 3d 772, 813 \(N.D. Ill. 2017\) (quoting U.S. Gypsum Co. v. Ind. Gas Co., Inc., 350 F.3d 623, 627 \(7th Cir. 2003\). ("[T]he [in]direct-purchaser doctrine does not foreclose equitable relief."); Cargill, Inc. v. Monfort of Colo., Inc., 479 U.S. 104, 111 n.6, 107 S. Ct. 484, 93 L. Ed. 2d 427 \(1986\) (explaining that Clayton Act claims under § 16 do not implicate Illinois Brick because "standing under § 16 raises no threat of multiple lawsuits or duplicative recoveries"). And while plaintiffs' allegations concerning injunctive relief under § 16 of the Clayton Act must also allege antitrust standing in line with AGC, see Teamsters, 196 F.3d at 823, because the court has determined that Rockford satisfied the AGC factors with respect to its §§ 1 and 2 claims, the court finds that Rockford also has antitrust standing to sue defendants for injunctive relief under § 16. The court defers on ruling on Acument's antitrust standing under AGC until Acument repleads, if it chooses to do so.

<sup>16</sup> In California v. ARC Am. Corp., 490 U.S. 93, 109 S. Ct. 1661, 104 L. Ed. 2d 86 \(1989\), the Supreme Court held that state legislatures could pass laws "repealing" Illinois Brick (known as "Illinois Brick repealer statutes"), thus allowing for indirect plaintiffs to sue upstream antitrust defendants. Some of the states implicated in the SAC passed these statutes with the explicit intention of repealing Illinois Brick as applied to those respective states; other states passed antitrust or consumer protection statutes that effectively allow for such suits. Here, defendants put forth no argument that Illinois Brick works to prevent any indirect-purchaser suits in these states.

<sup>17</sup> The parties agree that Rockford and Acument have Article III standing to pursue state-law antitrust and consumer protection claims of Illinois and Tennessee, respectively.

(noting that the issue of whether a plaintiff [**40] may represent a class of another state's residents that plaintiff was not herself injured within is not a pure question of standing, but rather, a hybrid of both standing and class representation). Plaintiffs point to the decisions of courts that hold that, "at the pleading stage and prior to analysis of the class allegations under Rule 23," where a named plaintiff is able to establish Article III standing and injury-in-fact in its own jurisdiction, this "suffices to establish the named plaintiffs' standing to assert the claims of class members in other states." In re Broiler Chicken Antitrust Litigation, 290 F. Supp. 3d 772, 809-10 \(N.D. Ill. 2017\) ("[N]amed plaintiffs who represent a class must allege and show that they have personally been injured, not that injury has been suffered by other, unidentified members of the class to which they belong and which they purport to represent." (quoting [In re Plasma-Derivative Protein Therapies Antitrust Litig., No. MDL 2109, 09 C 7666, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2501, 2012 WL 39766, at \*6 \(N.D. Ill. Jan. 9, 2012\)\)\)\); see also \[Payton v. Cty. of Kane, 308 F.3d 673, 680 \\(7th Cir. 2002\\)\]\(#\) \(explaining that only "once a class is properly certified" should "standing requirements . . . be assessed with reference to the class as a whole" as opposed to "the individual named plaintiffs" \(emphasis added\)\); \[\*759\] \[Supreme Auto Trans. LLC v. Arcelor Mittal, 238 F. Supp. 3d 1032, 1038 \\(N.D. Ill. 2017\\)\]\(#\) \("For now, whether named plaintiffs can bring claims under the laws of other states and whether plaintiffs are adequate class representatives do not pose Article \[\*\*41\] III barriers to subject-matter jurisdiction."\).](#)

One court in this district discussed Halperin v. International Web Services, LLC, 123 F. Supp. 3d 999, 1009 \(N.D. Ill. 2015\), and noted that the defendant's argument in Halperin (that the plaintiff lacked standing to raise claims under the nine state consumer protection laws other than Illinois') was "more accurately characterized as an attack not on Halperin's Article III standing per se . . . but rather on his ability under Rule 23 to represent the multi-state class." In re Herbal Supplements Mktg. & Sales Practices Litig., No. 15-cv-5070, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 76207, 2017 WL 2215025, at \*6 \(N.D. Ill. May 19, 2017\) (St. Eve, J.) (emphasis in original). The court finds the analysis contained within Herbal Supplements persuasive. What defendants here are really challenging is the adequacy of Rockford and Acument to represent the unnamed class members' state-law antitrust claims. Plaintiffs' "capacit[ies] to represent individuals from other states depends upon obtaining class certification, and the standing issue would not exist but for their assertion of state law claims on behalf of class members in those states. These standing issues therefore arise from [plaintiffs'] attempt to represent the multistate class, making class certification issues 'logically antecedent' to the standing concerns." McDonnell, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44875, 2017 WL 1149336, at \*5. HN24 [↑] The court is persuaded that [**42] plaintiffs' argument adheres best to the Supreme Court's holding that "the standing issue focuses on whether the [named] plaintiff is properly before the court, not whether represented parties or absent class members are properly before the court," and applies that reasoning to this case. Lewis v. Casey, 518 U.S. 343, 395, 116 S. Ct. 2174, 135 L. Ed. 2d 606 \(1996\); accord. Morrison v. YTB Int'l, Inc., 649 F.3d 533, 535-36 \(7th Cir. 2011\); In re Fluidmaster, Inc., 149 F. Supp. 3d 940, 957-58 \(N.D. Ill. 2016\) (Dow, J.). Thus, the court need not address Article III standing with respect to claims based on injuries incurred by unnamed class members until some later appropriate stage of the proceedings.

2. Rockford's Antitrust Standing for State-Law Claims

Defendants also argue that the proximate-cause limitation under AGC applies to plaintiffs' attempt to bring state-law claims for the unnamed class members.<sup>18</sup> Unlike Article III standing, for the state-law antitrust and consumer protection claims, the parties do not direct the court to any authority that suggests the court should defer ruling on this issue until the Rule 23 stage. Thus, the court will determine this issue now.

Generally, in deciding whether to apply AGC to state-law antitrust claims, courts look to whether the relevant states' highest courts have ruled on the issue. Broiler Chicken, 290 F. Supp. 3d at 814-15 (citing ADT Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Lisle-Woodridge Fire Prot. Dist., 672 F.3d 492, 498 \(7th Cir. 2012\)). However, federal courts have tied themselves in knots attempting to interpret [**43] the decisions of state courts on this issue. See id.; Dairy Farmers, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84152, 2015 WL 3988488, at \*7; In re Lithium Ion Batteries Antitrust Litig., No. 13-MD-2420 YGR, 2014

---

<sup>18</sup> The parties put forth no argument that AGC is irrelevant to state-law consumer protection claims. For purposes of this order only, the court considers all of the state laws invoked by the SAC as state laws that implicate plaintiffs' antitrust standing.

360 F. Supp. 3d 730, *759 (2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12171, **43

U.S. Dist. LEXIS 141358, [*760] 2014 WL 4955377, at *9 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 2, 2014); see also Kelly S. Dwyer, With the Illinois Brick Wall Down, What's Left?: Determining Antitrust Standing Under State Law, 3 J. Bus. ENTREPRENEURSHIP & L. 255 (2010) (noting that the complexity of this issue has resulted in a "number of splintered opinions"). Many courts that embark upon the endeavor do so in relative cursory fashion, relying heavily on the parties' briefings. See, e.g., Arcelor, 238 F. Supp. 3d at 1038-39. Some courts eschew the task all-together, and instead assume arguendo that each state at issue has adopted the full AGC test and conclude that if plaintiffs' antitrust allegations pass muster under the full AGC test then it follows that they will comply with the "proper party" test of any state, including those that have less stringent requirements. See, e.g., Lithium, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 141358, 2014 WL 4955377, at *11 & n.13 (listing cases that have taken the same approach). Here, the court has already determined that Rockford satisfies the full AGC test for their federal claims. Thus, for Rockford, the court need not embark on the "back-breaking labor involved in deciphering the state of antitrust standing in each of th[e] states," Flash Memory, 643 F. Supp. 2d at 1153, because [**44] the court has already determined that plaintiffs satisfied the federal proximate-cause standard.<sup>19</sup> Courts especially take this approach where "[n]either party has provided the [c]ourt with the requisite, individualized analysis on a per state basis to enable the [c]ourt to render such a determination." Id. Defendants argue that Mallinckrodt "devoted over a page of argument to the issue, with supporting authorities." But nowhere in defendants' briefs is there a state-by-state analysis of how AGC interacts with the respective states' statutes; Mallinckrodt's only related argument to this point is a footnote summarily stating that "[a] number of [these] state courts have expressly adopted AGC or held that at least some of the AGC factors should be applied to state antitrust claims." Thus, because the court has already concluded that Rockford satisfies the AGC factors with respect to its federal claims, finding that it would be a "proper party" under AGC's proximate-cause analysis, the court presumes that Rockford would satisfy each states' "proper party" test.

3. Acument's Antitrust Standing for State-Law Claims

Conversely, the court finds that Acument would not [**45] meet even the least stringent state's "proximate cause" test. To reiterate this opinion's section on the application of AGC to Acument's federal antitrust claims, the SAC lacks sufficient allegations to allow the court to determine how Acument's injuries in Tennessee are connected to defendants' conduct. Thus, the court grants defendants' motions to dismiss Count VIII as it pertains to Acument. The court grants plaintiffs leave to replead to correct the deficiencies associated with Acument's "proper party" status concerning its state-law claims.

4. Statutory Limitations<sup>20</sup>

In addition to the aforementioned standing arguments, defendants also bring a [*761] litany of challenges to plaintiffs' state-law claims based on plaintiffs' failure to comply with or allege requirements particular to each state's antitrust laws. The twenty-four state statutes invoked in the SAC are those of Arizona, Arkansas, California, Florida, Hawaii, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, and Wisconsin.

<sup>19</sup> Without any analysis or citation to authority by any of the parties, the court notes in passing its strong skepticism that any state that passed an "Illinois Brick repealer" statute to make indirect-purchaser standing easier would have made that indirect-purchaser's antitrust standing harder under a "proximate cause" analysis. Thus, the court assumes that the federal AGC standard represents the most stringent "proper party" standard that could apply to a state's "proximate cause" analysis for a plaintiff's antitrust standing. See Lithium, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 141358, 2014 WL 4955377, at *11 & n.13.

<sup>20</sup> The court couches the language in this section as applying to both Rockford and Acument, but it is relevant to Acument only if it chooses to replead.

Defendants cite limitations specific to some of these states that [**46] defendants contend defeat most of plaintiffs' state-law claims. The court will address these specific limitations in turn.<sup>21</sup>

a. Arizona, California, Florida, Hawaii, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Tennessee, and Wisconsin

Defendants' briefing on this issue is cursory. Mallinckrodt simply argues that "[t]he antitrust laws of these states limit their reach to activities which occur within the state. Because Plaintiffs fail to allege conduct within those states that would violate the respective statutes, each claim should be dismissed." Similarly, for the consumer protection statutes, defendants argue that those statutes only concern "intrastate" activity. The court finds that plaintiffs have met their bare pleading requirements at this stage that unnamed class members purchased Acthar in these states. See SAC ¶¶ 260-266, 269-289, 293-336, 341-348, 353-356. Later stages in this litigation, including the Rule 23 stage, will allow the court to more definitively determine whether any unnamed class members purchased Acthar in these states.<sup>22</sup>

However, as noted [**47] in the previous section, the SAC does not sufficiently allege that Acument is a proper party to bring any antitrust or consumer protection claims (federal or state). Thus, with leave to replead, the court dismisses Count VIII to the extent Acument seeks to represent the claims of unnamed class members—including those in Tennessee.

b. Arkansas

HN25 The Arkansas Deceptive Trade Practices Act \(the "ADTPA"\) prohibits a variety of conduct, including "[d]eceptive and unconscionable trade practices." Ark. Code Ann. § 4-88-107\(a\). However, the ADTPA contains a "safe harbor" provision that does not apply the law to practices "which are subject to and comply with any rule, order, or statute administered by the Federal Trade Commission." Id. § 4-88-101\(1\). Defendants argue that because Mallinckrodt is subject to the consent order from the FTC complaint against it that it falls within the safe harbor provision. [*762] Thus, before determining whether the ADTPA covers defendants' conduct, the court must first determine whether the existence of the FTC consent order removes defendants' liability under the ADTPA.

Defendants do not cite any authority supporting its argument that the consent order between the FTC and Mallinckrodt—which defendants ask this [**48] court to ignore as evidence connected to a different argument pursuant to their motions to dismiss—falls within the statutory exemption of the ADTPA. In the court's view, the exemption appears inapplicable to the consent order here, as the safe harbor provision is meant to exempt "conduct that is permitted under laws administered" by the FTC, see DePriest v. AstraZeneca Pharm., L.P., 2009 Ark. 547, 351 S.W.3d 168, 176 \(Ark. 2009\), and defendants' alleged price-fixing and monopolization conduct was not permitted by the consent order, cf. Godfrey v. Toyota Motor N. Am., Inc., No. 07-5132, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 51762, 2008 WL 2397497, at \*3 \(W.D. Ark. June 11, 2008\) ("Clearly, the FTC regulations require the use of EPA estimates in fuel economy advertisements. . . . It is, therefore, no great jump for this Court to find that plaintiffs' claim under the ADTPA should be dismissed as the ADTPA has clearly exempted 'advertising or practices which are subject to and which comply with any rule, order, or statute administered by the Federal Trade Commission.'" (citations omitted) (emphasis added)). Thus, with no direction from the Supreme Court of Arkansas, the court will not apply the safe harbor provision to plaintiffs' claims, and will instead determine how the ADTPA relates to defendants' alleged conduct.

<sup>21</sup> The parties' arguments concerning these requirements are styled as arguments about whether plaintiffs have plausibly "stated a claim" with respect to each states' antitrust laws. Cf. Broiler Chicken, 290 F. Supp. 3d at 816 (discussing threshold issues concerning state antitrust laws on a motion to dismiss in terms of whether "Plaintiffs have failed to state claims"). But the court does not take the parties' arguments on these points to be on the "merits"; neither party engages the elements of any states' antitrust laws or whether the SAC contains allegations that sufficiently plead what is required for such elements. Rather, the court will address these arguments as pertaining to the threshold requirements for plaintiffs to bring claims under each specific state. See Dairy Farmers, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84152, 2015 WL 3988488, at \*33 ("[B]ecause Defendants do not allege that Indirect Plaintiffs failed to state a claim under the Arkansas, California, and Florida consumer-protection statutes (or at least Defendants failed to provide the relevant legal standards under those states' laws), the Court will not address such arguments.").

<sup>22</sup> For Kansas and Oregon, defendants offer no state-specific limitations.

HN26 [+] In Arkansas, unconscionable trade practices include "conduct violative of public policy or statute." [**49] Universal Coops., Inc. v. AAC Flying Serv., Inc., 710 F.3d 790, 795 (8th Cir. 2013). This requires something more than merely alleging that the price of a product was unfairly high. See State v. R & A Inv. Co., 336 Ark. 289, 296, 985 S.W.2d 299 (1999) ("Two important considerations are whether there is a gross inequality of bargaining power between the parties to the contract and whether the aggrieved party was made aware of and comprehended the provision in question."). While price-fixing or monopolization are not listed in the Act, the statute does contain a catch-all provision that proscribes "[e]ngaging in any other unconscionable, false, or deceptive act or practice in business, commerce, or trade[.]" Id. § 4-88-107(a)(10). Another court in this district has found that "allegations of price fixing . . . are not the kind of conduct prohibited under the[ ] statute" because price-fixing, within the meaning of the ADTPA, does not "affront[ ] the sense of justice, decency, or reasonableness." Dairy Farmers, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84152, 2015 WL 3988488, at *35 (quoting In re Graphics Processing Units Antitrust Litig., 527 F. Supp. 2d 1011, 1030 (N.D. Cal. 2007)); cf. Baptist Health v. Murphy, 365 Ark. 115, 128, 226 S.W.3d 800 (2006) (affirming as unconscionable for ADTPA purposes a hospital's policy of denying practice rights to physicians who held ownership interests in another local hospital, where the defendant hospital had the "upper hand because of exclusive-provider contracts" and the "power to disrupt the relationships between patients, who are at [the hospital's] [**50] mercy, with their physicians"). However, that same court found that monopolization claims are actionable under the ADTPA. Dairy Farmers, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84152, 2015 WL 3988488, at *33 ("[C]ourts have interpreted the catchall provision of the Arkansas Deceptive Trade Practices Act—which prohibits any 'unconscionable, false, or deceptive act or practice in business, commerce, or trade'—broadly so as to encompass monopolization claims." (citation omitted)) (citing Sheet Metal Workers [*763] Local 441 Health & Welfare Plan v. GlaxoSmithKline, PLC, 737 F. Supp. 2d 380, 404-05 (E.D. Pa. 2010)). Here, the court infers from the SAC that plaintiffs mean to incorporate its § 2 monopolization claims into their claims under Arkansas law. SAC ¶ 267. Accordingly, the court denies defendants' motions to dismiss plaintiffs' claims under the ADTPA.

c. Illinois

Defendants argue that plaintiffs cannot bring their claims under the Illinois Antitrust Act because, while it allows for recovery by indirect purchasers, it provides that "no person shall be authorized to maintain a class action in any court of this State for indirect purchasers asserting claims under this Act, with the sole exception of this State's Attorney General." 740 ILCS 10/7(2). Rockford contends that, under Shady Grove Orthopedic Associates, P.A. v. Allstate Insurance Co., 559 U.S. 393, 130 S. Ct. 1431, 176 L. Ed. 2d 311 (2010), this is a procedural rule that does not apply to class action claims brought in federal court.

In Shady Grove [**51], the Supreme Court held that a New York statute prohibiting class actions "in suits seeking penalties or statutory minimum damages" did not bar the class action in that case under New York law in federal court. See id. at 408. A plurality of the Court held that Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23 "neither change[s] plaintiffs' separate entitlements to relief nor abridge[s] defendants' rights; [but] alter[s] only how the claims are processed," and thus, the New York statute was a procedural, not substantive rule. Id. Importantly, Justice Stevens' concurrence would have allowed state procedural rules to control in federal court only when they are "part of a State's framework of substantive rights or remedies." Shady Grove, 559 U.S. at 419 (emphasis added); see Broiler Chicken, 290 F. Supp. 3d at 817 (noting that both the plurality and Justice Stevens' concurrence were "primarily focused on the fact that both Rule 23 and the New York statute governed when a class action was permissible, and this was a procedural, not substantive conflict").

HN27 [+] There is a split of authority on the issue of whether the Illinois Antitrust Act's class action prohibition is part of Illinois' "substantive rights or remedies." Some courts have answered in the affirmative. See, e.g., In re

360 F. Supp. 3d 730, *763L 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12171, **51

Opana ER Antitrust Litig., 162 F. Supp. 3d 704, 723 (N.D. Ill. 2016) (citing In re Wellbutrin XL Antitrust Litig., 756 F. Supp. 2d 670, 677 (E.D. Pa. 2010) ("The Illinois restrictions on indirect [**52] purchaser actions are intertwined with Illinois substantive rights and remedies.")); In re Lipitor Antitrust Litig., 336 F. Supp. 3d 395, 2018 WL 4006752, at *14 (D.N.J. 2018) ("[A] majority of courts have held that the Act is distinguishable from the New York law in Shady Grove and that it prohibits indirect purchaser class actions."); In re Digital Music Antitrust Litig., 812 F. Supp. 2d 390, 415-16 (S.D.N.Y. 2011). Others have not. See, e.g., Broiler Chicken, 290 F. Supp. 3d at 818 ("The availability of the class action procedure does not change the substantive rights or remedies available to [plaintiffs] under Illinois law."); In re EpiPen (Epinephrine Injection, USP) Mktg., Sales Practices & Antitrust Litig., 336 F. Supp. 3d 1256, 2018 WL 3973153, at *31 (D. Kan. 2018)); In re Propranolol Antitrust Litig., 249 F. Supp. 3d 712, 728 (S.D.N.Y. 2017); In re Aggrenox Antitrust Litig., No. 14-MD-2516(SRU), 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104647, 2016 WL 4204478, at *6 (D. Conn. Aug. 9, 2016)

While the court recognizes the split in authority on this issue, the court agrees with the reasoning of Aggrenox, which casts doubt on whether Justice Stevens' "framework of substantive rights or remedies" concurrence controls. The Court noted the doctrine from Marks v. United States, 430 U.S. 188, 97 S. Ct. 990, 51 L. Ed. 2d 260 [<sup>1</sup>*764] (1977)—that "[w]hen no single rationale garners a majority, the holding of the Court is that position taken by those Members who concurred in the judgments on the narrowest grounds," but "only when one opinion is a logical subset of other, broader opinions . . . a common denominator of the Court's reasoning," 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104647, [WL] at *5—and acknowledged [**53] that some courts have used it to find that Justice Stevens' concurrence controlled, see, e.g., Wellbutrin, 756 F. Supp. 2d at 675; Aggrenox, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104647, 2016 WL 4204478, at *6. Nevertheless, the Court pointed out that these courts did not address whether Stevens' concurrence was actually the "common denominator" of the judgment such that the Marks doctrine applies:

The Stevens concurrence is "narrower" than the position of the other Justices who made up the Shady Grove majority only in the sense that it would reject state procedural rules in fewer cases. It is not logically narrower, however, because it is not a logical subset of the opinion of the other Justices in the majority. Those Justices do not implicitly approve of its rationale for sometimes allowing state procedural rules to control—on the contrary, they explicitly reject that rationale—and it therefore does not represent the common denominator of the Court's reasoning. The courts that have taken the Stevens concurrence to be controlling have generally not addressed that problem . . . [E]ven though Stevens joined the majority to hold that Rule 23 trumps New York's class-action bar, he agreed with the dissent that some state procedural rules—when sufficiently intertwined with the state's substantive rights [**54] and remedies—can control in federal court. The Wellbutrin Court infers from that agreement that there were five votes for Stevens's approach. The problem is that no other Justice joined his concurrence, and even if we nevertheless infer agreement, the common denominator of a concurrence and a dissent does not support the judgment.

Aggrenox, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104647, 2016 WL 4204478, at *5-6. Thus, the Aggrenox Court concluded that "it may be that in a case where a state procedural rule is part of the state's framework of substantive rights, there simply is no controlling Supreme Court holding." 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104647, [WL] at *6.

HN28 [↑] But even to the extent that Justice Stevens' concurrence could be construed as persuasive "Marks-doctrine dicta," the Court found that the Illinois Antitrust Act did not alter the scope of any substantive right or remedy—and is thus not substantive for purposes of Shady Grove—"because any indirect purchaser procedurally blocked from participation in a class action would still have the same remedy in an individual action." Id. The Court acknowledged that the Illinois Antitrust Act's class action limitation hewed more closely to a particular substantive right (indirect-purchaser antitrust claims) than the New York state-law limitation in Shady Grove, but [**55] ultimately found that "if New York's state-law bar is not a procedural rule that alters the scope of a substantive right or remedy, then the narrower scope of Illinois's state-law bar does not make it one that does." HN29 [↑] Id.; see also In re TFT-LCD (Flat Panel) Antitrust Litig., No. M 07-1827 SI, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 165344, 2011 WL 13152270, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 24, 2011) (citing Califano v. Yamasaki, 442 U.S. 682, 699-700, 99 S. Ct. 2545, 61 L. Ed. 2d 176 (1979)) (Rule 23 explicitly empowers a federal court to certify a class in every case that satisfies its criteria. Like the rest of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 23 automatically applies in all civil actions and procedures in the United States district courts."). Thus, agreeing with the reasoning laid [*765] out in Aggrenox, defendants' motions to dismiss plaintiffs' class action antitrust claims based on the Illinois Antitrust Act are denied.

d. Arizona, Hawaii, Nevada, and Utah

With respect to plaintiffs' claims under Arizona, Hawaii, Utah, and Nevada, defendants argue as another basis for dismissal that plaintiffs' failure to plead compliance with the notice provisions of these states' antitrust statutes necessitates dismissal. Plaintiffs have represented to the court that they have made "post-filing efforts" to provide notice. Defendants offer no authority to suggest that late notice [**56] would require dismissal. See Broiler Chicken, 290 F. Supp. 3d at 817. One court assessing Hawaii's notice provision found that "Plaintiffs are correct that HN30↑ nothing in the statutory scheme suggests that defendants may use the statute as a shield to avoid answering for alleged anti-competitive behavior. Accordingly, defendants' motion to dismiss the claims under the Hawaii antitrust statute is denied." In re Aftermarket Filters Antitrust Litig., No. 08 C 4883, MDL Docket No. 1957, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104114, 2009 WL 3754041, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 5, 2009). The court agrees with this approach as to Hawaii as well as Arizona, Nevada, and Utah, and chooses to defer ruling on this issue until a later stage in these proceedings when the parties have had an opportunity to collect more facts to determine what these "post-filing efforts" have been and whether any failure by plaintiffs to adhere to these notice provisions prohibits their bringing of claims under these states' relevant statutes. Accordingly, the court denies defendants' motions to dismiss on this basis.

In sum, as to Rockford, the court denies defendants' motions to dismiss plaintiffs' state-law claims with respect to all twenty-four states named. As to Acument, the court grants defendants' motion to dismiss Count VIII without prejudice with leave to replead if [**57] Acument can properly do so. The court notes in passing that Rockford, and perhaps Acument, will be required at some later point in these proceedings to demonstrate that they have Article III standing to bring these claims by showing that Acthar was in fact purchased in these states.<sup>23</sup>

C. Breach of Contract (Count XII)

Rockford alleges that Express Scripts<sup>24</sup> failed to provide cost containment services as enumerated in the PBM Agreement and as understood by the parties when Express Scripts failed to push back against Mallinckrodt's increase of Acthar's price. SAC ¶ 243. Because of a choice-of-law provision in the PBM Agreement, Rockford's claim will be assessed under Illinois law. HN31↑ To prevail on its breach of contract claim, Rockford must demonstrate: "(1) the existence of a valid and enforceable contract; (2) substantial performance by the [plaintiff]; (3) a breach by defendants; and (4) resultant damages." Dual-Temp of Ill., Inc. v. Hench Control, Inc., 821 F.3d 866, 869 (7th Cir. 2016).

Express Scripts argues that the "cost containment" language, as "prefatory" language contained in the recitals section of the agreement, does not create a "binding obligation" capable of being breached. See [*766] McMahon v. Hines, 298 Ill. App. 3d 231, 237, 697 N.E.2d 1199, 232 Ill. Dec. 269 (1998); First Bank & Tr. Co. of Ill. v. Vill. of Orland Hills, 338 Ill. App. 3d 35, 45, 787 N.E.2d 300, 272 Ill. Dec. 485 (2003). Rockford argues that, while the term "cost containment" is not mentioned in [**58] the operative portion of the PBM Agreement, the "cost containment" term was part of the "PBM Services," which was mentioned throughout the operative part of the contract. Specifically, the portion of the PBM Agreement titled "RECITALS" states in part:

---

<sup>23</sup> As noted earlier in this opinion, plaintiffs make only scant references to their requests for injunctive relief. Relatedly, the court does not construe the SAC to be making any claims for injunctive relief pursuant to any of the state-law antitrust and consumer protection statutes invoked in the SAC.

<sup>24</sup> Rockford uses the names Express Scripts and ESI interchangeably in Counts XII through XV. Recognizing that ESI is the only defendant signatory to the PBM Agreement, the court will use the name Express Scripts to include ESI.

ESI, either directly or through its subsidiaries, engages in pharmacy benefit management services, including, among other things, pharmacy network contracting; pharmacy claims processing; mail and specialty drug pharmacy; cost containment, clinical, safety, adherence, and other like programs; and formulary and rebate administration ("PBM Services").

(emphasis added).

HN32 [↑] "Recitals to a contract provide explanations of those circumstances surrounding the execution of the contract." Id. Recitals are preliminary in nature and are generally not binding on the parties or "an effective part of their agreement unless referred to in the operative portion of their agreement." Id. Courts in Illinois look for the terms contained within the recitals to appear in the operative portions of the contract before assigning those terms binding power upon the parties. For example, in McMahon, the plaintiff filed an action for declaratory judgment seeking court [**59] approval to install a driveway over an easement owned by the defendants. 298 Ill. App. 3d at 233-34. The defendants objected, arguing that the plaintiff's proposed driveway would obliterate a curb that served as a boundary between the plaintiff's and defendants' properties for the length of the easement and which provided a means of water runoff. Id. The defendants claimed that the plaintiff was prohibited from removing the curb because the curb was part of their easement. Id. at 237. The appellate court rejected this argument, noting that in the instrument creating the defendants' easement the only mention of a curb was in the paragraphs containing recitals. Id. HN33 [↑] The court ruled that under Illinois law, recitals "are not binding obligations unless referred to in the operative portion of the contract." Id. (emphasis added). Because there was no mention of the curb in the operative language of the easement document, the court found that "the parties did not intend to include the curb as part of the easement." Id.; see also Wilson v. Wilson, 217 Ill. App. 3d 844, 852, 577 N.E.2d 1323, 160 Ill. Dec. 752 (1991) (holding that recitals are operative when preambles or introductions to agreements include language indicating as much); Am. Nat'l Bank & Tr. Co. of Chi. v. Chi. Title & Tr. Co., 134 Ill. App. 3d 772, 776-77, 481 N.E.2d 71, 89 Ill. Dec. 719 (1985) (holding that recitals became operative when the contract stated "[f]or and [**60] in consideration of the premises set forth in the foregoing Recitals"). Because the term "curb" appeared nowhere in the operative clauses, and because there was no indication within the recitals that any particular terms of the recitals were to be part of the operative clauses, the appellate court affirmed the trial court.

Here, there is uncertainty as to how the "cost containment" language is referenced to in the operative portion of the contract. It is true, as Rockford contends, that "cost containment" is one of the "PBM Services" noted in the recitals and the term "PBM Services" is referred to throughout the operative portion of the contract. Conversely, it is worth noting that, with the conspicuous omission of "cost containment," the other undertakings listed in [*767] the Recitals are specifically named in Section 2.4 of the Terms of Agreement.<sup>25</sup> "Cost containment" is never mentioned after the recitals. This may support the conclusion that any reference to "cost containment" was not intended by the parties to impose an actionable obligation on Express Scripts under the terms of the contract. In later proceedings, with the benefit of discovery and applicable rules of contract interpretation, the court [**61] may be able to determine whether "cost containment" programs were merely an example of what "PBM Services" may generally include or whether, and to what extent, they constitute an enforceable obligation of Express Scripts.<sup>26</sup> But, drawing all reasonable inferences in favor of Rockford, the court concludes that "cost containment" is alluded to in the operative terms of the PBM Agreement and therefore the court will not dismiss Rockford's claim based upon Express Scripts' "prefatory language" argument.<sup>27</sup>

<sup>25</sup> Section 2.4(a) of the PBM Agreement reads:

Formulary Adherence and Clinical Programs. ESI may provide clinical, safety, adherence, and other like programs as appropriate. The Clinical Addendum described in Exhibit A-2 sets forth certain available adherence, clinical, safety and/or trend programs that require additional fees hereunder. ESI will not implement any program for which Sponsor may incur an additional fee without Sponsor's prior written approval and election of such program.

<sup>26</sup> Even McMahon, on which Express Scripts relies, was not decided on a motion to dismiss.

<sup>27</sup> Further, Section III(c) of Exhibit A-1 of the PBM Agreement notes that "Specialty Products will be excluded from any price guarantees set forth in the agreement," and Acthar is listed as a Specialty Product. Should Rockford choose to replead, the court

Turning to another issue, HN34↑ under Illinois law contractual terms that are too vague or indefinite are not enforceable. A term that is too vague or indefinite is one that a court cannot, "under proper rules of construction and applicable principles [\[\*\*62\]](#) of equity . . . ascertain what the parties have agreed to do." Dawson v. Gen. Motors Corp., 977 F.2d 369, 373 \(7th Cir. 1992\) (quoting Acad. Chi. Publishers v. Cheever, 144 Ill. 2d 24, 29, 578 N.E.2d 981, 161 Ill. Dec. 335 \(1991\)); see also Pennington v. Travelex Currency Servs., Inc., 114 F. Supp. 3d 697, 703 \(N.D. Ill. 2015\) (finding that the promise of an "excellent" exchange rate was not enforceable); Barbara's Sales, Inc. v. Intel Corp., 227 Ill. 2d 45, 73, 879 N.E.2d 910, 316 Ill. Dec. 522 \(2007\) (holding that words of "puffery" such as a service that is "high-quality" or a price that a produce or service is the "best" are not actionable). Rockford does not explain the meaning of "cost containment." Instead, Rockford argues that Express Scripts already, in an unrelated case, admitted that "cost containment" is a definite term because in that case Express Scripts argued that the "goal" of its decision to end insurance coverage for certain medications was based on its effort to reduce costs. See Precision Rx Compounding, LLC v. Express Scripts Holding Co., No. 4:16-CV-0069 \(CEJ\), 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 112851, 2016 WL 4446801, at \*1-2 \(E.D. Mo. Aug. 24, 2016\). But Rockford's reference to this case in no way clarifies the meaning of "cost containment" in the context of the PBM Agreement, in large part because Precision Rx did not deal with any contract terms at all, let alone a contract term analogous to "cost containment."<sup>28</sup>

[*768] The court also wishes to bring the parties' attention to a discrepancy between the allegations of the SAC and the language of the PBM Agreement. [\[\*\*63\]](#) The SAC states that Express Scripts breached the contract by failing to provide cost containment services. SAC ¶ 83. However, this is at odds with the plain language of the contract. The contract states only that Express Scripts engages in pharmacy benefit management services, including cost containment programs. HN35↑ At this stage of the proceedings, the court must accept all of the well-pleaded allegations of the SAC as true; however, in a contract action, if the language of the contract is plainly inconsistent with the plaintiff's representations, the court may decline to afford the presumption of truth. "[W]here the allegations of a pleading are inconsistent with the terms of a written contract attached as an exhibit, the terms of the latter, fairly construed, must prevail over the averments differing therefrom." Citicorp Vendor Fin., Inc. v. ISA Pharmacy, Inc., No. 03 C 6896, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3275, 2004 WL 406985, at \*1 \(N.D. Ill. Mar. 3, 2004\) (quoting Foshee v. Daoust Constr. Co., 185 F.2d 23, 25 \(7th Cir. 1950\)). There remains a question as to how cost containment services, which are what the SAC maintains Express Scripts failed to provide, relate to cost containment programs, which the contract says is an activity of Express Scripts.

Therefore, the court dismisses Count XII without prejudice, and the court grants Rockford leave to replead if it can appropriately allege that [\[\*\*64\]](#) Express Scripts is in breach of their contract with Rockford by not engaging in cost containment programs. Further, should Rockford choose to replead this claim, it should specify what is meant by the contract term "cost containment . . . programs."

D. Breach of the Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing (Count XV)

The court turns to Rockford's claim based on an alleged breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. HN36↑ To state a claim for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in Illinois, a plaintiff must plausibly allege (1) that the existence of an enforceable contract (2) "breaching a specific duty expects Rockford to clarify that this Section does not operate to preclude its breach of contract claim in the event that Rockford can plausibly allege that "cost containment" is an actionable obligation contained within the PBM Agreement.

---

<sup>28</sup> Along these same lines, in order to conserve time and effort, the court wishes to draw the parties' attention to two other thorny issues in the breach of contract claim. The SAC charges that "ESI's failure to provide 'cost containment' repudiated its obligations under the ESI PBM Agreement." SAC ¶ 391 (emphasis added). Yet § 2.4(a) of the Agreement states only that "ESI may provide clinical, safety, adherence, and other like programs as appropriate." (emphasis added). Also, it is important to remember that the PBM Agreement applies to numerous other drugs besides Acthar. If Express Scripts engages in cost containment programs (whatever they may be) related to drugs other than Acthar, the question arises whether such involvement with other drugs would satisfy any "cost containment" obligation Express Scripts has under the PBM Agreement. At this point the court takes no position as to the parameters of Express Scripts' duties under the Agreement, but these are matters which should be addressed as soon as possible.

imposed by the contract other than the covenant of good faith and fair dealing"; (3) that defendant failed to exercise its contractual discretion reasonably and with proper motive; and (4) resultant damages. AAA Gaming LLC v. Midwest Elecs. Gaming, LLC, No. 16 CV 4997, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 151742, 2016 WL 6476549, at \*3 \(N.D. Ill. Nov. 2, 2016\).

HN37 [↑] However, in Illinois, "[e]very contract implies good faith and fair dealing between the parties to it, and where an instrument is susceptible of two conflicting constructions, one which imputes bad faith to one of the parties and the other does not, the latter construction should be adopted. This good-faith principle is used only as a [**65] construction aid in determining the intent of the contracting parties." Mid-W. Energy Consultants, Inc. v. Covenant Home, Inc., 352 Ill. App. 3d 160, 163, 815 N.E.2d 911, 287 Ill. Dec. 267 \(2004\) (citation [*769] omitted). "The obligation of good faith and fair dealing is used as an aid in construing a contract under Illinois law, but does not create an independent cause of action." McArdle v. Peoria Sch. Dist. No. 150, 705 F.3d 751, 755 \(7th Cir. 2013\); see also In re VTech Data Breach Litig., No. 15 CV 10889, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 103298, 2017 WL 2880102, at \*9 \(N.D. Ill. July 5, 2017\) ("Under Illinois law the covenant of good faith and fair dealing is not an independent source of duties for the parties to contract. The implied covenant is used to interpret a contract." (citation omitted)). Nor can it be used to contradict the express terms in a contract. Continental Bank, N.A. v. Everett, 964 F.2d 701, 705 \(7th Cir. 1992\). Rather, a plaintiff can plead breach of the implied covenant as a theory for a breach of contract cause of action—and not as a separate, independent cause of action—in the situations where it is being used as a "gap-filler" where a contract is otherwise silent on how the parties are to perform certain terms of the contract. See LSREF3 Sapphire Tr. 2014 v. Barkston Properties, LLC, No. 14 C 7968, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7931, 2016 WL 302150, at \*4 \(N.D. Ill. Jan. 25, 2016\) (rejecting a motion to dismiss a breach of contract claim under the theory of breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing where one party had a reasonable expectation that the breaching party would perform in a particular way based on their understanding of a relevant contractual term and alleged that [**66] the breaching party "took opportunistic advantage of [the injured party], dashed their reasonable expectations, and abused any discretion the contract may have afforded it"); AAA Gaming, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 151742, 2016 WL 6476549, at \*3 (allowing plaintiffs to amend their complaint to allege breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in the same cause of action as the breach of contract claim). However, courts only allow this when the "gap-filler" is used to prevent a party from abusing discretion outlined for them in the contract. Mid-W. Energy Consultants, Inc. v. Covenant Home, Inc., 352 Ill. App. 3d 160, 165, 815 N.E.2d 911, 287 Ill. Dec. 267 \(2004\) ("Illinois courts have recognized that HN38 [↑] a party who does not properly exercise contractual discretion breaches the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing that is in every contract. . . . In order to plead a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, a plaintiff must plead existence of contractual discretion." (emphasis added)). "Where the contract vests one of the parties with discretion in performing an obligation, and that party exercises that discretion in bad faith, unreasonable or in a manner inconsistent with the reasonable expectations of the parties, it breaches the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing." LSREF3, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7931, 2016 WL 302150, at \*4.

Here, Rockford's implied-covenant claim is [**67] deficient for several reasons. First, Rockford pleads it as an independent cause of action, which it cannot do. More importantly, even if plaintiffs replead these allegations as an alternative theory in connection with its breach of contract claim, the allegations as currently formulated lack a reference to any particular section of the PBM Agreement that discusses Express Scripts' discretion to effectuate "cost containment."<sup>29</sup> Thus, the court grants Express [**770] Scripts' motion to dismiss Count XV without prejudice, and grants Rockford leave to replead if it can sufficiently do so.

---

<sup>29</sup> Section 2.4(a) of the PBM Agreement notes that Express Scripts "may provide clinical, safety, adherence, and other like programs as appropriate." The Recitals section of the PBM Agreement suggests that these are the kinds of things that Express Scripts does. If Rockford can plausibly allege that these (or different) sections of the PBM Agreement imparts discretion upon Express Scripts, and such discretion specifically includes "cost containment," Rockford may be able to state a claim under the implied covenant theory. Of course, an unenforceable provision in a contract cannot be made enforceable by the application of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. As a result, Rockford still faces some of the obstacles noted in the previous breach of contract section related to the enforceability of the cost containment provisions of the PBM Agreement.

E. Promissory Estoppel (Count XIII)

In Count XIII, Rockford brings a claim against Express Scripts for promissory estoppel. Specifically, Rockford seeks enforcement of Express Scripts' promise to continue with its obligations under the PBM Agreement. SAC ¶ 396. HN39 [+] Promissory estoppel is a common-law "principle that a promise made without consideration may nonetheless be enforced to prevent injustice if the promisor should have reasonably expected the promisee to rely on the promise and if the promisee did actually rely on the promise to his or her detriment." Newton Tractor Sales, Inc. v. Kubota Tractor Corp., 233 Ill. 2d 46, 51, 906 N.E.2d 520, 329 Ill. Dec. 322 (2009) (quoting Black's Law Dictionary 591 (8th ed. 2004)). However, [**68] "[u]nder Illinois law, promissory estoppel and unjust enrichment are unavailable where the parties have entered into an express contract." Prodromos v. Poulos, 202 Ill. App. 3d 1024, 1032, 560 N.E.2d 942, 148 Ill. Dec. 345 (1991). Like plaintiffs' claims for unjust enrichment, Rockford may only plead promissory estoppel in the alternative to their breach of contract claim, such that no express contract may be invoked in its count for promissory estoppel. Guinn v. Hoskins Chevrolet, 361 Ill. App. 3d 575, 604, 836 N.E.2d 681, 296 Ill. Dec. 930 (2005); The Sharow Grp. v. Zausa Dev. Corp., No. 04 C 6379, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24497, 2004 WL 2806193, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 3, 2004).

In the SAC's section on promissory estoppel, Rockford seeks relief under a promissory estoppel theory that is based on the "terms of the ESI PBM Agreement." SAC ¶ 395; see also id. ¶¶ 396-397, 399. This is fatal to Rockford's claim. However, Rockford may attempt to replead and plausibly allege alternatively that there is not an enforceable express contract and that Express Scripts is liable to Rockford under a cause of action for promissory estoppel. Cohen v. Am. Sec. Ins. Co., 735 F.3d 601, 615 (7th Cir. 2013).

HN40 [+] To state a claim for the common-law doctrine of promissory estoppel, a plaintiff must prove that "(1) defendant made an unambiguous promise to plaintiff, (2) plaintiff relied on such promise, (3) plaintiff's reliance was expected and foreseeable by defendants, and (4) plaintiff relied on the promise to its detriment." Newton Tractor Sales, 233 Ill. 2d at 51. Here, the main deficiency in Rockford's pleading is [**69] with regard to the first prong. Rockford alleges that Express Scripts' conduct "constitutes a promise to perform under the terms" of the PBM Agreement. SAC ¶ 395. Rockford cites "cost containment" as one of these promises. Id. ¶ 397. But as discussed in the court's section on Rockford's breach of contract claim, the PBM Agreement's reference to "cost containment" is troublesome.

It is possible that Rockford may be able to point to an unambiguous promise made by Express Scripts within or outside the PBM Agreement that Rockford foreseeably relied on to its detriment. Thus, the court grants Express Scripts' motion to dismiss Count XIII without prejudice, and grants Rockford leave to replead if Rockford can properly do so.

F. Unjust Enrichment (Counts I-III)

Rockford brings claims against both Express Scripts (Count I) and Mallinckrodt (Count II) and Acument brings a claim against Mallinckrodt (Count III) for unjust enrichment. Specifically, plaintiffs allege [*771] that Mallinckrodt was unjustly enriched when plaintiffs paid "extremely high prices" for Acthar. See SAC ¶¶ 189, 198. Rockford also alleges that Express Scripts was unjustly enriched when it obtained "grossly inflated revenue" from its [**70] scheme with Mallinckrodt. See id. ¶ 182.

HN41 [+] Unjust enrichment is a product of common law that enshrines the principle that no one ought to enrich himself unjustly at the expense of another. Vill. of Bloomingdale v. CDG Enters., Inc., 196 Ill. 2d 484, 500, 752 N.E.2d 1090, 256 Ill. Dec. 848 (2001); Whitehaven Cnty. Baptist Church v. Holloway, 973 S.W.2d 592, 596 (Tenn. 1998). The doctrine enshrines both legal and equitable values, but at its core, properly alleged unjust enrichment claims involve situations in which the benefit the plaintiff is seeking to recover proceeded directly from him to the defendant. See id.; HPI Health Care Servs., Inc. v. Mt. Vernon Hosp., Inc., 131 Ill. 2d 145, 160-62, 545 N.E.2d 672, 137 Ill. Dec. 19 (1989).

HN42 Both Illinois and Tennessee permit a plaintiff to plead unjust enrichment as an alternative theory of liability. Cohen, 735 F.3d at 615 ("A plaintiff may plead as follows: (1) there is an express contract, and the defendant is liable for breach of it; and (2) if there is not an express contract, then the defendant is liable for unjustly enriching himself at my expense."); Meadow v. NIBCO, Inc., No. 3-15-1124, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 68903, 2016 WL 2986350, at *7 (M.D. Tenn. May 24, 2016) (finding that a plaintiff "can plead alternative theories, including unjust enrichment"). This is counter to defendants' wider-sweeping argument that a plaintiff may not plead both the existence of an enforceable contract and unjust enrichment in the same complaint. As such, the court will assess plaintiffs' claims under Illinois and Tennessee law, respectively.

1. Rockford's [**71] Claims Under Illinois Law (Counts I and II)

HN43 In order to state an unjust enrichment claim under Illinois law, a plaintiff must allege "a benefit mistakenly conferred, a benefit procured through wrongful conduct, and a benefit to which plaintiff has a better claim than the defendant for some other reason." In re Sears, Roebuck & Co. Tools Mktg. & Sales Practices Litig., No. 05 C 2623, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 92169, 2006 WL 3754823, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 18, 2006). In addition, Illinois law requires that relief under an unjust enrichment theory is obtainable only when there is no adequate remedy at law available to the plaintiff. Cohen, 735 F.3d at 615 ("Because it is an equitable remedy, unjust enrichment is only available when there is no adequate remedy at law."); Nesby v. Country Mut. Ins. Co., 346 Ill. App. 3d 564, 567, 805 N.E.2d 241, 281 Ill. Dec. 873 (2004) ("Because it is an equitable remedy, unjust enrichment is only available when there is no adequate remedy at law."). The lack of legal remedy requirement extends beyond Cohen and Nesby, both of which involved a legal remedy available through a contract. See Cleary v. Philip Morris Inc., 656 F.3d 511, 517 (7th Cir. 2011); Season Comfort Corp. v. Ben A. Borenstein Co., 281 Ill. App. 3d 648, 656, 655 N.E.2d 1065, 211 Ill. Dec. 682 (1995). Rockford has alleged a litany of conduct it claims entitles it to legal relief. See SAC ¶¶ 184, 192. Rockford cannot maintain an unjust enrichment claim when in that same claim it references legal remedies available to it. Rockford may plead in the alternative, but in doing so within that claim, it will have to plead that none of the many other [**72] causes of action in the SAC in which it alleges it is entitled to damages is viable. The court grants defendants' motions to dismiss Counts I and II without prejudice and grants Rockford leave to replead if it can [*772] sufficiently allege that it meets the elements of a properly stated unjust enrichment claim.

2. Acument's Claim Under Tennessee Law (Count III)

HN44 Under Tennessee law, the elements of an unjust enrichment claim are "1) [a] benefit conferred upon the defendant by the plaintiff; 2) appreciation by the defendant of such benefit; and 3) acceptance of such benefit under such circumstances that it would be inequitable for him to retain the benefit without payment of the value thereof." Freeman Indus., LLC v. Eastman Chem. Co., 172 S.W.3d 512, 525 (Tenn. 2005) (alteration in original). Additionally, Tennessee law dictates that a plaintiff seeking relief for unjust enrichment must demonstrate that he "exhausted all remedies against the person with whom the plaintiff enjoyed privity of contract." Spahr v. Leegin Creative Leather Prods., Inc., No. 2:07-CV-187, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 90079, 2008 WL 3914461, at *14 (E.D. Tenn. Aug. 20, 2008). Under Tennessee law, the issue of exhaustion must be addressed in the complaint. Id. This exhaustion of remedies requirement only applies to entities in privity with the plaintiff. As long as the plaintiff [**73] has satisfied that exhaustion obligation it can still recover against defendants with whom the plaintiff is not in privity. Id.

With respect to the requirement that Acument must allege that it has exhausted all remedies against CVS (the entity with whom Acument may enjoy privity of contract), the court notes that the SAC does not describe any contract that Acument might have with CVS with anywhere near the amount of specificity that it details Rockford's agreement with Express Scripts. Although that level of specificity may not be required at this stage, an explanation of the contents of such a contract would certainly assist the court in assessing the issue of exhaustion. Assuming that Acument is in privity of contract with CVS, Acument does not allege that it has exhausted any remedies against CVS. This is fatal to Acument's claim. HN45 The exhaustion requirement may be lifted if plaintiffs plausibly allege that such an effort would be "futile," but Acument has not done so. Id.; see Bristol Pres., LLC v. IGC-Bristol, LLC, No. 2:16-CV-360-TAV-MCLC, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 97937, 2017 WL 2773663, at \*5 \(E.D. Tenn. June 26, 2017\) (dismissing unjust enrichment claim where plaintiff failed to allege that it had exhausted all remedies against the entities in which it had privity [**74] of contract and failed to plead that doing so would be futile). Therefore, the court grants defendants' motions to dismiss Count III without prejudice, and grants Acument leave to replead to correct the deficiencies noted here if it can do so consistent with the proper pleading requirements.<sup>30</sup>

G. RICO (Counts IX-XI)

The following sections address plaintiffs' claims under RICO. For the reasons stated below, the court grants defendants' motions to dismiss Counts IX, X, and XI without prejudice.

1. § 1962\(c\) (Count IX)

In Count IX, plaintiffs allege that defendants violated 18 U.S.C. § 1962\(c\). HN46 [+] "A RICO plaintiff alleging a violation of § 1962\(c\) must show conduct of an enterprise through a pattern of racketeering activity," Lachmund v. ADM Inv'r Servs., Inc., 191 F.3d 777, 783 (7th Cir. 1999), and that she has been injured in her "business or property by reason of" the [*773] RICO violation, Sabrina Roppo v. Travelers Commercial Ins. Co., 869 F.3d 568, 590 (7th Cir. 2017).

A claim of a pattern of racketeering activity "requires at least two [predicate] acts of racketeering activity within a ten-year period. . . . '[R]acketeering activity' is defined to include, among other things, any act indictable under specified provisions of the United States Code, including 18 U.S.C. § 1341 (mail fraud) and 18 U.S.C. § 1343 (wire fraud)." Corley v. Rosewood Care Ctr., Inc. of Peoria, 142 F.3d 1041, 1048 (7th Cir. 1998).

Here, plaintiffs allege predicate acts of mail fraud under 18 U.S.C. § 1341 and wire fraud under 18 U.S.C. § 1343.<sup>31</sup> HN47 [+] The [**75] elements of mail fraud under § 1341 are: "(1) the defendant's participation in a scheme to defraud; (2) defendant's commission of the act with intent to defraud; and (3) use of the mails in furtherance of the fraudulent scheme." Williams v. Aztar Ind. Gaming Corp., 351 F.3d 294, 298-99 (7th Cir. 2003). The elements of wire fraud under § 1343 are similar: "a scheme to defraud, a false representation, and use of interstate communications." United States v. Pritchard, 773 F.2d 873, 876 (7th Cir. 1985). To "defraud" is to make a "false statement or material misrepresentation, or the concealment of a material fact." Williams, 351 F.3d at 299. Plaintiffs alleging mail and wire fraud as predicate acts to their RICO claims must allege "the identity of the person who made the misrepresentation, the time, place and content of the misrepresentation, and the method by which the misrepresentation was communicated to the plaintiff." Vicom, Inc. v. Harbridge Merchant Servs., Inc., 20 F.3d 771, 777 (7th Cir. 1994).

HN48 [+] When ruling on a Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) motion, the heightened pleading requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9\(b\) apply to allegations of mail and wire fraud in a civil RICO complaint. See Sabrina, 869 F.3d at 587 n.56. Further, in cases with multiple defendants, "Rule 9\(b\) requires a RICO plaintiff to plead sufficient facts to notify each defendant of his alleged participation in the scheme." Jazbec v. Hirsch, No. 08 CV 7275, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 96551, 2009 WL 3366970, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 14, 2009). The heightened pleading standard of Rule 9\(b\) serves an important purpose, to "ensure[ ] that a plaintiff ha[s] some basis for his accusations [**76] of fraud before making those accusations and thus discourages people from including such accusations in complaints simply to gain leverage for settlement or for other ulterior purposes." Uni\*Quality, Inc. v. Infotronx, Inc., 974 F.2d 918, 924 \(7th Cir. 1992\).

<sup>30</sup> The court notes in passing that plaintiffs' arguments offer little in support of their unjust enrichment actions. Should plaintiffs choose to replead these claims, plaintiffs should offer more fully-developed arguments or else run the risk of the court finding that they have abandoned their claims.

<sup>31</sup> The SAC labels its wire fraud claims as under 18 U.S.C. § 1345. However, that section provides for the Attorney General to commence civil actions to enjoin alleged RICO violations. This is inapplicable to plaintiffs'

The court agrees with defendants that plaintiffs' allegations concerning the predicate acts of mail or wire fraud are thin.<sup>32</sup> Plaintiffs allege that in 2007 defendants [*774] established the ASAP to "streamline[] and cover-up the use of mail and wires to commit fraud . . . and illegally profit from the . . . sale of Acthar," but this does little to satisfy the demands of Rule 9\(b\). SAC ¶ 360(a). HN49↑ It is true that plaintiffs need not show that every particular communication that they point out contained misrepresentations, because "even routine and innocent mailings can supply an element of the offense of mail fraud when they are used in the execution of the fraudulent scheme." Ruderman v. Freed, No. 14 C 9079, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 120441, 2015 WL 5307583, at \*3 \(N.D. Ill. Sept. 10, 2015\). But here, plaintiffs allege little more than the existence of a price-fix scheme and defendants' intent to misrepresent prices, which is different than alleging the "who, what, when, where and how" of an actual misrepresentation. DiLeo v. Ernst & Young, 901 F.2d 624, 627 \(7th Cir. 1990\). Plaintiffs call attention to the Acthar Start Forms mailed to existing and prospective patients and payors, [**77] see SAC ¶¶ 51, 362, 370, but do not specify what about those forms constitute a misrepresentation. Further, defendants' processing of prescriptions and payments related to Acthar does not evince fraud or deceit. See id. ¶ 366(d)-(f).

In the paragraph plaintiffs devote to delineating defendants' acts of mail fraud and wire fraud, plaintiffs allege that Express Scripts made fraudulent misrepresentations when it "explicitly advertised . . . that the ASAP Program would [provide] lower and affordable prices"; when Mallinckrodt and Express Scripts fraudulently stated "over the internet and through the mail that Rockford and the Class would receive affordable healthcare and contained costs of Acthar"; and when despite its "explicit promises" Express Scripts "refused to use its market strength and related bargaining power to convince Mallinckrodt to lower the price of Acthar." SAC ¶ 366(a)-(c). Plaintiffs are fatally deficient in specifying "the identity of the person who made the misrepresentation, the time, place and content of the misrepresentation, and the method by which the misrepresentation was communicated to the plaintiff." Vicom, 20 F.3d at 777.

Plaintiffs fall short in describing the manner in [**78] which Express Scripts explicitly advertised that the ASAP would provide lower and affordable sales prices, SAC ¶ 366(a), or when, where, how, or to whom Express Scripts made explicit promises to use its market strength and bargaining power to influence Mallinckrodt, id. ¶ 366(c). Nor do plaintiffs adequately explain in what way defendants fraudulently stated over the internet and through the mail that Rockford would receive contained costs for Acthar. Id. ¶¶ 82-83, 366(b). The SAC does not clarify what specifically was done over the internet and through the mail. If the parties are referring to Rockford's PBM Agreement with Express Scripts, from a review of the court's discussion in the breach of contract section, they should be able to anticipate formidable obstacles in relying on the cost containment language in the PBM Agreement to support an allegation of misrepresentation.

For the reasons stated in this section, the court grants defendants' motions to dismiss plaintiffs' § 1962\(c\) claims in Count IX without prejudice. In order to assist the parties should plaintiffs opt to replead a RICO violation, the court will also address the issue of RICO causation.

HN50↑ Proximate cause is one of the requirements [**79] of a cause of action for a RICO violation. See [Holmes v. Sec. Inv'r Prot. Corp., 503 U.S. 258, 268, 112 S. Ct. 1311, \[\*775\] 117 L. Ed. 2d 532 \(1992\)](#). Defendants argue, regarding the proximate-cause limitation, that courts in this district have "recognized that claims by third party

<sup>32</sup> In all of the counts of the SAC, plaintiffs incorporate every allegation of every preceding paragraph, and in Counts XIII and XIV, every allegation of every following paragraph. In the RICO context, this is an improper method of satisfying the heightened pleading requirement. See Slaney v. The Int'l Amateur Athletic Fed'n, 244 F.3d 580, 599 n.10 \(7th Cir. 2001\). But even beyond the RICO counts, the court does not assume any responsibility to wade through hundreds of paragraphs of pleadings comprising fifteen counts plus a request for injunctive to cull out paragraphs or fragments of paragraphs in an effort to assist plaintiffs in plausibly alleging their causes of action. This court has dismissed cases in certain circumstances on this basis, though the court declines to do so today. See Stanard v. Nygren, 658 F.3d 792, 800 \(7th Cir. 2011\) ("A federal court is not obligated to sift through a complaint to extract some merit when the attorney who drafted it has failed to do so himself.").

payors (TPPs) seeking to recoup 'losses' of prescription reimbursements pose proximate causation issues." The court agrees.

HN51[] The proximate cause limitation of a properly-pled RICO violation requires "some direct relation between the injury asserted and the injurious conduct alleged." Hemi Grp., LLC v. City of New York, N.Y., 559 U.S. 1, 9, 130 S. Ct. 983, 175 L. Ed. 2d 943 (2010) (plurality op.) (citing Holmes, 503 U.S. at 271-72). The "general tendency" in this context is for courts "not to go beyond the first step," id. at 10 (quoting AGC, 459 U.S. at 534), because "[m]ultiple steps, as we have detailed, separate the alleged fraud from the asserted injury," id. at 15. Courts have routinely dismissed § 1962(c) claims in drug cases where plaintiffs do not allege with specificity that defendants made misrepresentations directly to third-party payors like plaintiffs here. See, e.g., UFCW Local 1776 v. Eli Lilly & Co., 620 F.3d 121, 134 (2d Cir. 2010) (finding failure to allege that TPPs themselves relied on misrepresentations crucial to a lack of proximate cause); *In re Yasmin & Yaz (Drospirenone) Mktg., Sales Practices & Prods. Liab. Litig., No. 3:09-CV-20071-DRH, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 80758, 2010 WL 3119499, at *7 (S.D. Ill. Aug. 5, 2010)* (dismissing a § 1962(c) claim where there [**80] was no "mention [of] any alleged communication directed at or made to TPPs"). As stated above, it is unclear how either Mallinckrodt or Express Scripts communicated any "misrepresentations," let alone communications made directly, to either Rockford or Acument. Should plaintiffs choose to replead, in order to properly state a claim, plaintiffs must plausibly allege Mallinckrodt and/or Express Scripts communicated misrepresentations directly to plaintiffs.

2. § 1962(a) (Count X)

HN52[] As to Count X, "[a] section 1962(a) claim requires a showing that a defendant: (1) received income from a pattern of racketeering activity; (2) used or invested that income in the operation of an enterprise; and (3) caused the injury complained of by the use or investment of racketeering income in an enterprise." Rao v. BP Prods. N. Am., Inc., 589 F.3d 389, 398-99 (7th Cir. 2009). While prongs two and three are adequately pled, SAC ¶¶ 375, 377-378, as noted with respect to plaintiffs' § 1962(c) claims, the court finds that plaintiffs have not adequately alleged "racketeering activity," and thus, plaintiffs' claims under § 1962(a) must also fail as a matter of law. Id. at 398 (noting that plausibly alleging "racketeering activity" is a required element to state a claim under § 1962(a)). Consequently, the court grants defendants' motions to [**81] dismiss plaintiffs' § 1962(a) claims in Count X without prejudice.

3. § 1962(d) (Count XI)

HN53[] To state a claim under § 1962(d), a plaintiff must allege the existence of an "agreement to participate in an endeavor which, if completed, would constitute a violation" of RICO. United Food & Commercial Workers Unions and Emp's Midw. Health Benefits Fund v. Walgreen Co., 719 F.3d 849, 856 (7th Cir. 2013). This requires plaintiffs to allege that (1) the defendant agreed to facilitate the operation of an enterprise through a pattern of "racketeering activity," in violation of subsections (a), (b), or (c) of RICO, and (2) the defendant agreed to effectuate at least two predicate acts that create a pattern of racketeering activity. See DeGuelle v. Camilli, 664 F.3d 192, 204 (7th Cir. 2011). Because the court has already determined that plaintiffs have failed to sufficiently plead these two requirements, plaintiffs' claims under § 1962(d) in Count [*776] XI must also fail as a matter of law, and the court dismisses those claims without prejudice. Id. at 400. Thus, the court grants plaintiffs leave to replead to correct the deficiencies related to Counts IX, X, and XI if plaintiffs can appropriately do so.

H. Fraud and Conspiracy to Defraud (Counts IV and V)

Plaintiffs allege that defendants have committed common law fraud by making "material misrepresentations" that the prices they allegedly advertised for Acthar "represented the actual value" of Acthar [**82] when, in reality, those prices were "artificial" and "created and manipulated by the Defendants for the purpose of generating exorbitant revenue, thus constituting false representations.<sup>33</sup> SAC ¶¶ 204-206. HN54↑ Under Illinois law, the elements of common law fraud are: "(1) a false statement of a material fact; (2) knowledge or belief of falsity by the party making it; (3) intention to induce the other party to act or refrain from acting; (4) action by the other party in justifiable reliance on the truth of the statement; and (5) damage to the other party resulting from such reliance." Newton v. Aitken, 260 Ill. App. 3d 717, 720, 633 N.E.2d 213, 198 Ill. Dec. 751 \(1994\). Similarly, Tennessee law requires: "(1) an intentional misrepresentation of material fact, (2) knowledge of the representation's falsity, (3) an injury caused by reasonable reliance on the representation, and (4) the requirement that the misrepresentation involve a past or existing fact." Gray v. Bank of Am., N.A., No. 3:12-CV-105, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 109536, 2012 WL 3230387, at \*2 \(E.D. Tenn. Aug. 6, 2012\). Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9\(b\) applies to fraud claims. See Pirelli Armstrong Tire Corp. Retiree Med. Benefits Tr. v. Walgreen Co., 631 F.3d 436, 447 \(7th Cir. 2011\).

HN55↑ The heightened pleading standard of Rule 9\(b\) "forces the plaintiff to conduct a careful pretrial investigation and thus operates as a screen against spurious fraud claims." Intercounty Nat'l, 412 F.3d at 749. Plaintiffs' allegations in the SAC lack the requisite particularity imposed by [\[\*\*83\]](#) the heightened pleading standard. Plaintiffs are required to state "the identity of the person making the misrepresentation, the time, place, and content of the misrepresentation, and the method by which the misrepresentation was communicated to the plaintiff." Camasta v. Jos. A. Bank Clothiers, Inc., 761 F.3d 732, 737 \(7th Cir. 2014\).

Plaintiffs allege that defendants committed fraud in two different ways. First, plaintiffs allege that defendants misrepresented that the price for Acthar represented the real and fact-based prices for their drugs. SAC ¶ 204. Second, plaintiffs assert that defendants misrepresented the price for Acthar was a result of the efforts of Express Scripts—and, although it is not clear from the SAC, perhaps CVS—to provide cost containment. Id. ¶ 209.

As to the first manner of committing fraud, plaintiffs fail to sufficiently plead the factual information informing defendants of the "who, when, where, what, and how" components of a valid fraud claim. Instead, plaintiffs offer general allegations that because the "prices [for Acthar] were artificial prices," id. ¶ 206, "[d]efendants made material misrepresentations that those prices represented a calculation of real and fact-based prices for their drugs, and that they represented the [\[\*\*84\]](#) actual value [\[\*777\]](#) of the product in the marketplace," id. ¶ 204.

In regard to the second means of committing fraud, plaintiffs allege that the "cost containment" misrepresentations appear in Rockford's and the class' contracts with Express Scripts and Acument's and the class' contracts with CVS. Id. ¶ 209. As noted in the court's analysis of plaintiffs' breach of contract claim, Rockford's contract with Express Scripts furnishes only equivocal support for the proposition that Express Scripts assumed an obligation to provide for cost containment in its sale of Acthar to Rockford.<sup>34</sup> See id. ¶¶ 209. Plaintiffs stress that they paid inflated prices for Acthar. HN56↑ However, as Express Scripts points out, high prices do not in and of themselves constitute false representations. Thompson's Gas & Elec. Serv., Inc. v. BP Am. Inc., 691 F. Supp. 2d 860, 870 \(N.D. Ill. 2010\).<sup>35</sup>

<sup>33</sup> In ¶ 203 of the SAC, plaintiffs also allege that defendants' acts "violate the common law against negligent misrepresentation" in addition to fraud. "Negligent misrepresentation" is a separate cause of action from fraud in both Illinois and Tennessee. However, neither party addresses this claim in their briefs. Thus, the court concludes that neither plaintiff is pursuing a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation.

<sup>34</sup> As to Acument, the SAC suggests that Acument has "contracts" with CVS that provide for cost containment, SAC ¶ 209, that presumably support their contention that defendants made false representations that amount to fraud. Although it is unclear whether Acument is holding Express Scripts, Mallinckrodt, or perhaps a non-defendant, CVS, responsible for making the false representations. Plaintiffs have not provided any of these contracts and thus the court is unable to make any determination as to whether plaintiffs' allegations satisfy the heightened pleading requirements of Rule 9\(b\).

<sup>35</sup> Defendants also argue that plaintiffs have not adequately pled reliance. Plaintiffs allege that they and the class "justifiably relied upon false misrepresentations in purchasing and/or reimbursing Acthar at the amount charged by Express Scripts and CVS Caremark based on the price set by Mallinckrodt." SAC ¶ 208. But in this factual scenario that concerns only one manufacturer and one drug, the issue of the reasonableness of plaintiffs' reliance is problematic. Plaintiffs assert that they would not have paid or reimbursed the cost of Acthar if they were aware of the alleged misrepresentations. Id. ¶ 210. Are plaintiffs Further, in Count V, plaintiffs allege that defendants conspired to defraud plaintiffs and the class by causing them to pay more for Acthar than they otherwise would have paid. HN57 Under Illinois law, "to state a claim for civil conspiracy, the plaintiff must sufficiently allege that an underlying wrong existed." *Platinumel Commc'nns, LLC v. Zefcom, LLC, No. 08-CV-1062, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104746, 2008 WL 5423606, at \*8 \(N.D. Ill. Dec. 30, 2008\)*. Similarly, under Tennessee law, a "claim for civil conspiracy requires an underlying predicate tort allegedly committed" \*\*85 pursuant to the conspiracy." *Lane v. Becker, 334 S.W. 3d 756, 763 \(Tenn. Ct. App. 2010\)*. Because plaintiffs have not met their pleading requirements under Rule 9\(b\) for alleging fraud, plaintiffs' conspiracy to defraud claims must be dismissed as well. The court grants defendants' motions to dismiss Counts IV and V without prejudice and grants plaintiffs leave to replead to correct the deficiencies related to these claims if plaintiffs can sufficiently do so.

I. Declaratory Judgment (Count XIV)

HN58 Finally, regarding Rockford's claim for declaratory judgment in Count XIV, the declaratory judgment remedy "gives a means by which rights and obligations may be adjudicated in cases involving an actual controversy that has not reached the stage at which either party may seek a coercive remedy." 10A CHARLES ALAN WRIGHT & ARTHUR R. MILLER, FEDERAL PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE § 2751, pp. 568-70 (1983). Further, courts in this district routinely dismiss claims for declaratory judgment where the claim "substantially overlaps with Plaintiff's substantive claims." [*Cohn v. Guaranteed Rate \[\*778\] Inc., 130 F. Supp. 3d 1198, 1205 \(N.D. Ill. 2015\)*](#); see also *Amari v. Radio Spirits, Inc., 219 F. Supp. 2d 942, 944 \(N.D. Ill. 2002\)* ("Where the substantive suit would resolve the issues raised by the declaratory judgment action, the declaratory judgment action serves no useful purpose because the controversy has ripened and the uncertainty \*\*86 and anticipation of litigation are alleviated."). Here, plaintiffs are seeking coercive remedies along with their suit for declaratory judgment, and all the claims will be adjudicated at the same time. In this situation, the court sees no benefit in addressing the claim for declaratory judgment in addition to the coinciding causes of action. Therefore, the court dismisses Count XIV with prejudice.

III. CONCLUSION

For the above reasons, defendants' motions to dismiss are granted in part and denied in part. Count XIV is dismissed with prejudice. Counts I through V, IX through XIII, and XV are dismissed without prejudice. The court denies defendants' motions to dismiss Counts VI, VII, and VIII with respect to Rockford. Counts VI, VII, and VIII are dismissed without prejudice with respect to Acument. The court grants plaintiffs leave to replead within 45 days of the date of this order to correct the deficiencies as noted in this opinion.

Date: 1/25/2019

ENTER:

/s/ Frederick J. Kapala

FREDERICK J. KAPALA

District Judge

---

End of Document

---

saying that rather than pay exorbitant prices they would have left the Acthar patients without treatment? Regardless, at this juncture the court concludes that reliance is sufficiently pled.

Cox Auto., Inc. v. CDK Global, LLC (In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig.)

United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division

January 25, 2019, Decided; January 25, 2019, Filed

Case No. 18-cv-864; Case No. 18-cv-1058

Reporter

360 F. Supp. 3d 788 *; 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12147 **; 2019 WL 331257

IN RE DEALER MANAGEMENT SYSTEMS ANTITRUST LITIGATION, MDL 2817. This document relates to: Cox Automotive, Inc, et al. v. CDK Global, LLC, Case No. 18-cv-1058 (N.D. Ill.).

Prior History: Authenticom, Inc. v. CDK Global, LLC \(In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig.\), 313 F. Supp. 3d 931, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 80937, 2018 WL 2193236 \(N.D. Ill., May 14, 2018\)

Core Terms

---

dealers, integration, vendors, argues, third-party, antitrust, contracts, allegations, block, horizontal, providers, anticompetitive conduct, Sherman Act, purchasers, conspiracy claim, hostile, percent, competitors, fails, motion to dismiss, Cartwright Act, authorization, aftermarket, foreclosure, dealership, foreclosed, conspire, publicly, violates, switch

Counsel: [**1] For Authenticom, Inc., Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Derek Tam Ho, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Aaron Martin Panner, Joshua Hafenbrack, Kevin J. Miller, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Allison W Reimann, Godfrey & Kahn, Madison, WI; Daniel V. Dorris, David L. Schwarz, Joanna Tianyang Zhang, Michael N. Nemelka, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Jennifer L. Gregor, Kendall W Harrison, Mark W. Hancock, Godfrey & Kahn, S.C., Madison, WI; Samuel Issacharoff, New York, NY.

For Teterboro Automall, Inc., and on behalf of all others similarly situated doing business as Teterboro Chrysler Dodge Jeep RAM, Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Elizabeth Anne McKenna, Peggy J Wedgworth, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Milberg LLP, New York, NY; James E. Cecchi, Carella Byrne Cecchi Olstein Brody & Agnesso, P.C., Roseland, NJ; John David Hughes, PRO HAC VICE, Milberg Tadler Phillips Grossman LLP, New York City, NY; Justin Nicholas Boley, Kenneth A. Wexler, Wexler Wallace LLP, Chicago, IL; Leonard A Bellavia, PRO HAC VICE, Bellavia Blatt & Crossett, P.C., Mineola, NY. [**2]

For Hartley Buick GMC Truck, Inc., Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Robert N. Kaplan, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kaplan, Kilsheimer & Fox LLP, New York, NY; Arthur N. Bailey, PRO HAC VICE, Arthur N. Bailey & Associates, Jamestown, NY; Gary L. Specks, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, Highland Park, IL; Jonathan W. Cuneo, PRO HAC VICE, Cuneo Gilbert & LaDuca, LLP, Washington, DC; Marco Cercone, PRO HAC VICE, RUPP BAASE PFALZGRAF CUNNINGHAM LLC, Buffalo, NY; Victoria Romanenko, PRO HAC VICE, Cuneo Gilbert & LaDuca, LLP, Washington, DC.

For Motor Vehicle Software Corporation, Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Derek Tam Ho, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Aaron Martin Panner, Joshua Hafenbrack, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Daniel Jeffrey Friedman, Gary K Salomons, Gabriel Salomons LLP, Encino, CA; Joshua D. Branson, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Michael N. Nemelka, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Samuel Issacharoff, New York, NY.

For Kenny Thomas Enterprises, Inc, also known as Olathe Toyota, Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): [**3] Amy Marie Zeman, Michael Lawrence Schrag, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Gibbs Law Group LLP, Oakland, CA; Bloomfield Joshua, Eric H. Gibbs, Gibbs Law Group LLP, Oakland, CA; Justin Nicholas Boley, Kenneth A. Wexler, Wexler Wallace LLP, Chicago, IL; Mark H Troutman, Isaac Wiles Burkholder & Teetor LLC, Columbus, OH.

For Cox Automotive, Inc., Autotrader.com, Inc., Dealer Dot Com, Inc., Dealertrack, Inc., HomeNet, Inc., Kelley Blue Book Co. Inc., vAuto, Inc., VinSolutions, Inc., Xtime, Inc., Plaintiffs (1:18-cv-00864): Derek Tam Ho, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Aaron Martin Panner, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Daniel V. Dorris, David L. Schwarz, Michael N. Nemelka, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Daniel Guarnera, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Jennifer L. Gregor, Kendall W Harrison, Mark W. Hancock, Godfrey & Kahn, S.C., Madison, WI; Joshua Hafenbrack, Kevin J. Miller, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Samuel Issacharoff, New York, NY.

For Hoover Automotive, [**4] LLC, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated doing business as Hoover Dodge Chrysler Jeep of Summerville, Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Karen Halbert, Mike L. Roberts, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Roberts Law Firm, P.A., Little Rock, AR; Philip N Elbert, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Neal & Harwell, PLC, Nashville, TN; Charles F. Barrett, Neal & Harwell, PLC, Nashville, TN; Shawn M Raiter, Larson & King, LLP, St. Paul, MN; Peggy J Wedgworth, Milberg LLP, New York, NY.

For Massey Chrysler Center, Inc., individually and as representatives of the classes, Massey Automotive, Inc., individually and as representatives of the classes, Plaintiffs (1:18-cv-00864): Michael Stephen Dampier, PRO HAC VICE, The Dampier Law Firm, P.C., Fairhope, AL; Ralph Edward Massey, Jr., Clay Massey & Assoc PC, Mobile, AL.

For 440 Jericho Turnpike Sales LLC, on Behalf of Themselves, and on Behalf of All Others Similarly Situated, Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Peggy J Wedgworth, LEAD ATTORNEY, Milberg LLP, New York, NY; James E. Cecchi, Carella Byrne Cecchi Olstein Brody & Agnesso, P.C., Roseland, NJ; Justin Nicholas Boley, Kenneth A. Wexler, Wexler Wallace LLP, Chicago, IL; Leonard A Bellavia, PRO HAC VICE, Bellavia [**5] Blatt & Crossett, P.C., Mineola, NY.

For JCF Autos LLC, on Behalf of Themselves, and on Behalf of All Others Similarly Situated, Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Elizabeth Anne McKenna, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Milberg LLP, New York, NY; Peggy J Wedgworth, LEAD ATTORNEY, Milberg LLP, New York, NY; James E. Cecchi, Carella Byrne Cecchi Olstein Brody & Agnesso, P.C., Roseland, NJ; John David Hughes, PRO HAC VICE, Milberg Tadler Phillips Grossman LLP, New York City, NY; Justin Nicholas Boley, Kenneth A. Wexler, Wexler Wallace LLP, Chicago, IL; Leonard A Bellavia, PRO HAC VICE, Bellavia Blatt & Crossett, P.C., Mineola, NY.

For Patchogue 112 Motors LLC, on Behalf of Themselves, and on Behalf of All Others Similarly Situated, Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Peggy J Wedgworth, LEAD ATTORNEY, Milberg LLP, New York, NY; James E. Cecchi, Carella Byrne Cecchi Olstein Brody & Agnesso, P.C., Roseland, NJ; Justin Nicholas Boley, Kenneth A. Wexler, Wexler Wallace LLP, Chicago, IL; Leonard A Bellavia, PRO HAC VICE, Bellavia Blatt & Crossett, P.C., Mineola, NY.

For John O'Neil Johnson Toyota, LLC, Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): David Malcolm McMullan, Jr, BARRETT LAW GROUP, PA - Lexington, Lexington, MS; JOHN W BARRETT, [**6] DON BARRETT, PA, Lexington, MS; Robert A. Clifford, Clifford Law Offices, P.C., Chicago, IL; Shannon Marie McNulty, Clifford Law Offices, Chicago, IL; Sterling Starns, PRO HAC VICE, Barrett Law Group, P.A., Lexington, MS; Peggy J Wedgworth, Milberg LLP, New York, NY.

For Northtown Automotive Companies Inc., Cox Motors N.C. Inc., doing business as Cox Toyota, Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Gary L. Specks, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, Highland Park, IL; Robert N. Kaplan, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kaplan, Kilsheimer & Fox LLP, New York, NY.

For Baystate Ford Inc. Individually and on Behalf of All Others Similarly Situated, Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Frank Anthony Richter, LEAD ATTORNEY, Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd, Chicago, IL; Alexandra S. Bernay, Carmen A. Medici, Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd LLP, San Diego, CA; David W. Mitchell, Lonnie A. Browne, PRO HAC

VICE, Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd LLP, San Diego, CA; George Carlos Aguilar, PRO HAC VICE, Robbins Arroyo LLP, San Diego, CA; James E Barz, Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd LLP, Chicago, IL.

For F.G. Downing Developement, Inc., Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Kathleen Ellen Boychuck, LEAD ATTORNEY, Miller Law LLC, Chicago, IL; [**7] Andrew Szot, Lori Ann Fanning, Marvin Alan Miller, Matthew E Van Tine, Miller Law LLC, Chicago, IL.

For Bob Baker Volkswagen, Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Brian Morrison, PRO HAC VICE, Labaton Sucharow LLP, New York, NY; Christopher J McDonald, Labaton Sucharow LLP, New York, NY; Gregory Asciolla, Labaton Sucharow LLP-NY, New York, NY; Karin E. Garvey, PRO HAC VICE, Labaton Sucharow, LLP, New York, NY; Michael Thomas Layden, Richard J. Prendergast, Richard J. Prendergast, Ltd., Chicago, IL; Samuel Issacharoff, New York, NY.

For Pensacola Motor Sales, Inc., Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Brian M. Hogan, Douglas A Millen, Michael Jerry Freed, Robert J. Wozniak, Freed Kanner London & Millen, LLC, Bannockburn, IL; Joshua H. Grabar, PRO HAC VICE, Bolognese & Associates, Philadelphia, PA; Marc H. Edelson, Edelson & Associates, LLC, Doylestown, PA.

Motor Vehicle Software Corporation, Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864), Pro se.

Authenticom Inc., Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864), Pro se.

For Waconia Dodge, Inc., Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Anna M. Horning Nygren, Heidi M. Silton, Lockridge Grindal Nauen P.L.L.P., Minneapolis, MN; Bethany R. Turke, Wexler Wallace LLP, Chicago, IL; Daniel C Hedlund, Gustafson Gluek PLLC, [**8] Minneapolis, MN; Daniel John Walker, PRO HAC VICE, Berger Montague PC, Washington, DC; Justin Nicholas Boley, Kenneth A. Wexler, Wexler Wallace LLP, Chicago, IL; Michelle J. Looby, PRO HAC VICE, Gustafson Gluek PLLC, Minneapolis, MN; Thomas Arthur Doyle, Wexler Wallace LLP, Chicago, IL.

For Autoloop, Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Derek Tam Ho, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Aaron Martin Panner, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Michael N. Nemelka, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC.

For Loop LLC doing business as Autoloop, Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Collin Matthew Bruck Richard J. Prendergast, Ltd. Chicago, IL; Michael Thomas Layden, Richard J. Prendergast, Richard J. Prendergast, Ltd., Chicago, IL.

For Apex Motor Company doing business as Shearer Acura, Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Robert A. Clifford, Clifford Law Offices, P.C., Chicago, IL; Shannon Marie McNulty, Clifford Law Offices, Chicago, IL; Victoria Romanenko, Cuneo Gilbert & LaDuca, LLP, Washington, DC.

For Petri Imports, LLC, Marshall Chrysler Jeep Dodge, LLC, Cliff Harris Ford, Inc., H&H Continental Motors, Inc., [**9] Pitre, Inc., Continental Autos, Inc., Aca Motors, Inc., NV Autos, Inc., Warrensburg Chrysler Dodge Jeep, LLC, Naperville Zoom Cars, Inc., Waconia Dodge, Inc., Jim Marsh American Corporation, Cherry Hill Jaguar, Continental Class Motors, Inc., Jericho Turnpike Sales. LLC, Gregoris Motors, Inc., Kenny Thomas Enterprises, Inc., HDA Motors, Inc., 5800 Countryside, LLC, Plaintiffs (1:18-cv-00864): Peggy J Wedgworth, Milberg LLP, New York, NY.

For Baystate Ford, Inc., Plaintiff (1:18-cv-00864): Lonnie A. Browne, PRO HAC VICE, Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd LLP, San Diego, CA; Peggy J Wedgworth, Milberg LLP, New York, NY.

For CDK Global, LLC, Defendant (1:18-cv-00864): Andrew Stanley Marovitz, Britt Marie Miller, Matthew David Provance, Michael Anthony Scodro, Mayer Brown LLP, Chicago, IL; Jeffrey Allan Simmons, Foley & Lardner LLP, Madison, WI; John Nadolenco, Mayer, Brown & Platt, Los Angeles, CA; Joseph S Harper, Foley & Lardner, Madison, WI; MICHAEL MARTINEZ, MAYER BROWN LLP, NEW YORK, NY; Mark W. Ryan, Mayer Brown, Washington, DC; Michelle M. Umberger, Perkins Coie LLP, Madison, WI; William N. Reed, BAKER, DONELSON, BEARMAN, CALDWELL & BERKOWITZ, PC - Jackson, Jackson, MS.

For Reynolds and [**10] Reynolds Company, The, Defendant, Counter Claimant (1:18-cv-00864): Amar Shrinivas Naik Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP Four Embarcadero Center San Francisco, CA; Aundrea Kristine Gulley Gibbs & Bruns, L.L.P. Houston, TX; Brandon M. Lewis PRO HAC VICE Perkins Coie Madison, WI; Brian T. Ross Houston, TX; Brice A. Wilkinson Houston, TX; Caroline Ayres Teichner Perkins Coie LLP Chicago, IL; Charles

Grant Curtis, Jr. Amar Shrinivas Naik, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP, San Francisco, CA; Aundrea Kristine Gulley, Gibbs & Bruns, L.L.P., Kathy D. Patrick, Ross M. MacDonald, Houston, TX; Brandon M. Lewis, PRO HAC VICE, Perkins Coie, Madison, WI; Brian T. Ross, Brice A. Wilkinson, Houston, TX; Caroline Ayres Teichner, Kathleen A. Stetsko, Perkins Coie LLP, Chicago, IL; Dylan I. Ballard, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP, San Francisco, CA; James Landon McGinnis, PRO HAC VICE, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP, San Francisco, CA; Jesse Jonas Bair, John S. Skilton, Charles Grant Curtis, Jr., Perkins Coie LLP, Madison, WI; Justin David Patrick, Gibbs & Bruns, LLP, Houston, TX; Leo Caseria, PRO HAC VICE, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP, Los Angeles, CA; Michael P. A. [**11] Cohen, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton, LLP, Washington, DC; Michelle M. Umberger, Perkins Coie LLP, Madison, WI; TYLER BAKER, SHEPPARD MULLIN RICHTER & HAMPTON LLP, NEW YORK, NY; Dylan I. Ballard, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP Four Embarcadero Center San Francisco, CA; James Landon McGinnis, PRO HAC VICE, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP Four Embarcadero Center San Francisco, CA; Jesse Jonas Bair, Amar Shrinivas Naik, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP, San Francisco, CA; Aundrea Kristine Gulley, Gibbs & Bruns, L.L.P., Kathy D. Patrick, Ross M. MacDonald, Houston, TX; Brandon M. Lewis, PRO HAC VICE, Perkins Coie, Madison, WI; Brian T. Ross, Brice A. Wilkinson, Houston, TX; Caroline Ayres Teichner, Kathleen A. Stetsko, Perkins Coie LLP, Chicago, IL; Dylan I. Ballard, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP, San Francisco, CA; James Landon McGinnis, PRO HAC VICE, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP, San Francisco, CA; Jesse Jonas Bair, John S. Skilton, Charles Grant Curtis, Jr., Perkins Coie LLP, Madison, WI; Justin David Patrick, Gibbs & Bruns, LLP, Houston, TX; Leo Caseria, PRO HAC VICE, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP, Los Angeles, CA; Michael P. A. Cohen, Sheppard [**12] Mullin Richter & Hampton, LLP, Washington, DC; Michelle M. Umberger, Perkins Coie LLP, Madison, WI; TYLER BAKER, SHEPPARD MULLIN RICHTER & HAMPTON LLP, NEW YORK, NY; John S. Skilton, Amar Shrinivas Naik, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP, San Francisco, CA; Aundrea Kristine Gulley, Gibbs & Bruns, L.L.P., Kathy D. Patrick, Ross M. MacDonald, Houston, TX; Brandon M. Lewis, PRO HAC VICE, Perkins Coie, Madison, WI; Brian T. Ross, Brice A. Wilkinson, Houston, TX; Caroline Ayres Teichner, Kathleen A. Stetsko, Perkins Coie LLP, Chicago, IL; Dylan I. Ballard, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP, San Francisco, CA; James Landon McGinnis, PRO HAC VICE, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP, San Francisco, CA; Jesse Jonas Bair, John S. Skilton, Charles Grant Curtis, Jr., Perkins Coie LLP, Madison, WI; Justin David Patrick, Gibbs & Bruns, LLP, Houston, TX; Leo Caseria, PRO HAC VICE, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP, Los Angeles, CA; Michael P. A. Cohen, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton, LLP, Washington, DC; Michelle M. Umberger, Perkins Coie LLP, Madison, WI; TYLER BAKER, SHEPPARD MULLIN RICHTER & HAMPTON LLP, NEW YORK, NY; Justin David Patrick, Gibbs & Bruns, LLP Houston, TX; Kathleen [**13] A. Stetsko, Perkins Coie LLP Chicago, IL; Kathy D. Patrick Houston, TX; Leo Caseria, PRO HAC VICE, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP Los Angeles, CA; Michael P. A. Cohen, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton, LLP Washington, DC; Michelle M. Umberger, Perkins Coie LLP, Madison, WI; Ross M. MacDonald Houston, TX; TYLER BAKER, SHEPPARD MULLIN RICHTER & HAMPTON LLP NEW YORK, NY.

For Computerized Vehicle Registration, Inc. also known as CDK Vehicle Registration, Inc., Defendant (1:18-cv-00864): Britt Marie Miller, Michael Anthony Scodro, Mayer Brown LLP, Chicago, IL; John Nadolenco, Mayer, Brown & Platt, Los Angeles, CA; Mark W. Ryan, Mayer Brown, Washington, DC.

For XCELERATED, LLC, XCELERATED DATA LLC, PENSA LLC, Respondents (1:18-cv-00864): James Robert Irving, LEAD ATTORNEY, Bingham Greenebaum Doll LLP, Louisville, KY.

For Dominion Enterprises, Inc., Respondent (1:18-cv-00864): Deepti Bansal, Marc G Schildkraut, PRO HAC VICE, Cooley LLP, Washington, DC; Jeffrey Thomas Norberg, Neal & McDevitt, Northfield, IL.

For Authenticom, Inc., Counter Defendant (1:18-cv-00864): Derek Tam Ho, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Aaron Martin Panner, Kellogg, [**14] Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Allison W Reimann, Godfrey & Kahn, Madison, WI; Daniel V. Dorris, David L. Schwarz, Michael N. Nemelka, Joanna Tianyang Zhang, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Jennifer L. Gregor, Kendall W Harrison, Mark W. Hancock, Godfrey & Kahn, S.C., Madison, WI; Joshua Hafenbrack, Kevin J. Miller, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Samuel Issacharoff, New York, NY.

For CDK Global, LLC, Counter Claimant (1:18-cv-00864): Britt Marie Miller, Michael Anthony Scodro, Mayer Brown LLP, Chicago, IL; Jeffrey Allan Simmons, Foley & Lardner LLP, Madison, WI; John Nadolenco, Mayer, Brown & Platt, Los Angeles, CA; Joseph S Harper, Foley & Lardner, Madison, WI; MICHAEL MARTINEZ, MAYER BROWN LLP, NEW YORK, NY; Mark W. Ryan, Mayer Brown, Washington, DC; Matthew David Provance, Mayer Brown LLP, Chicago, IL; Michelle M. Umberger, Perkins Coie LLP, Madison, WI; William N. Reed, BAKER, DONELSON, BEARMAN, CALDWELL & BERKOWITZ, PC - Jackson, Jackson, MS.

For Cox Automotive, Inc., Autotrader.com, Inc., Dealer Dot Com, Inc., Dealertrack, Inc., Kelley Blue Book Co. Inc., vAuto, Inc., VinSolutions, [*15] Inc., Xtime, Inc., Plaintiffs (1:18-cv-01058): Aaron Martin Panner, Daniel V. Dorris, Daniel Guarnera, David L. Schwarz, Derek Tam Ho, Joshua Hafenbrack, Kevin J. Miller, Michael N. Nemelka, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Jennifer L. Gregor, Kendall W Harrison, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Godfrey & Kahn, S.c., Madison, WI.

For CDK Global, LLC, Defendant (1:18-cv-01058): Britt Marie Miller, LEAD ATTORNEY, Mayer Brown LLP, Chicago, IL; Jeffrey Allan Simmons, Foley & Lardner LLP, Madison, WI.

Judges: Robert M. Dow, Jr., United States District Judge.

Opinion by: Robert M. Dow, Jr.

Opinion

---

[*792] MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

Before the Court is Defendant CDK Global, LLC's motion to dismiss [71] the complaint filed by Plaintiffs (1) Cox Automotive, Inc., (2) Autotrader.com, Inc., (3) Dealer Dot Com, Inc., (4) Dealertrack, Inc., (5) HomeNet, Inc., (6) Kelley Blue Book Co., Inc., (7) vAuto, Inc., (8) VinSolutions, Inc., and (9) Xtime, Inc. For the reasons set forth below, the motion [71] is granted in part and denied in part.

I. Background<sup>1</sup>

Plaintiff Cox Automotive, Inc. ("Cox Automotive"), along with its subsidiaries (collectively, [*793] "Plaintiffs"), bring this action to remedy and enjoin purported [*16] ongoing antitrust and state law violations by Defendant CDK Global, LLC ("CDK" or "Defendant"). [Compl., at ¶ 1.]<sup>2</sup> Plaintiffs are vendors that provide automotive software solutions, including well-known applications like AutoTrader, Dealer.com, and Kelley Blue Book. [Id. at ¶¶ 6-7.] The data that dealers generate in operating their businesses—such as sales, inventory, service, and customer information—is the lifeblood of these applications. [Id. at ¶ 8.] Dealers store this data on a database that is part of separate enterprise software known as a Dealer Management System ("DMS"). [Id. at ¶ 48.] Virtually every franchised new car dealership in the United States now uses a DMS. [Id. at 50.] While dealers generate much of their data outside of the DMS in separate software solutions, as a practical matter, a substantial portion of dealer data is stored on the DMS. [Id.]

A. The DMS Market

---

<sup>1</sup> For the purposes of this motion to dismiss, the Court accepts as true all of Plaintiffs' well-pleaded factual allegations and draws all reasonable inferences in Plaintiffs' favor. Killingsworth v. HSBC Bank Nev., N.A., 507 F.3d 614, 618 (7th Cir. 2007).

<sup>2</sup> Unless otherwise noted, all references to the complaint are to the complaint filed in Case No. 18-cv-1058. [Cox Automotive, Inc., et al. v. CDK Global, LLC, Case No. 18-cv-1058, Dkt. 1 (N.D. Ill.).]

Defendant CDK and third-party The Reynolds and Reynolds Company ("Reynolds") provide DMS software and services to automobile dealerships throughout the United States. [Id. at ¶ 41.] Defendant and Reynolds together control approximately 75 percent of the DMS market when [**17] measured by number of dealers and approximately 90 percent when measured by number of vehicles sold. [Id. at ¶ 10.] Defendant alone controls approximately 45 percent of the DMS market. [Id.] Switching DMS providers presents significant logistical challenges and is highly disruptive to business operations. [Id. at ¶ 57.] It can take a dealership more than a year of preparation, staff training, and testing before a new DMS can be put into operation, all while the dealership is trying to sell and service cars. [Id.] The financial costs in terms of training and implementation are significant. [Id.] Defendant's own CEO publicly has recognized that dealers are hesitant to switch DMS providers because the process can take time and can be very difficult. [Id. at ¶ 58.]

B. The Dealer Data Integration Market

The dealer data integration market consists of services that provide access to dealer data on the DMS, including Defendant's and Reynolds's own in-house data integration services. [Id. at ¶ 65.] Data integrators may also provide value-enhancing services, such as putting data from different DMSs in a uniform format, performing data hygiene, and allowing granular control by dealers over which [**18] vendors receive which data. [Id.] Before a data integrator accesses dealer data on a DMS, they enter into contracts with dealers authorizing them to access the dealers' data. [Id. at ¶ 66.]

Vendors of software applications like Plaintiffs rely on data integrators to provide them with access to dealer data. [Id. at ¶¶ 62-65.] There once was a competitive market for data integration services. [Id. at ¶ 79.] Independent data integrators like Authenticom, Inc. ("Authenticom") competed with the offerings provided by Defendant and Reynolds. [Id.] Defendant welcomed that competition, stating: "We don't tell the dealer, if someone wants access to their data, they have to come to [CDK] to gain access to the data. It's ultimately the dealer's data." [Id. at ¶ 76.] [*794] In competition with independent integrators, Defendant provides data integration services through its Third-Party Access ("3PA") program, and Reynolds does the same through its Reynolds Certified Interface ("RCI") program. [Id. at ¶¶ 80, 87.] Defendant itself owns two independent integrators—DMI and IntegraLink—that provide data integration services across DMS platforms, including at one time for Reynolds dealers. [Id. at ¶¶ 83, 86.] [**19]

Defendant's top executives have repeatedly made public statements that dealers may grant data integrators rights to access their DMS. [Id. at ¶ 75.] For example, "Steve Anenen, CDK's longtime CEO, publicly stated that dealers have the right to grant third parties access to, and use of, their data. He told the industry publication Automotive News, 'We're not going to prohibit that or get in the way of that.'" [Id. (citation omitted).] He further stated, "I don't know how you can ever make the opinion that the data is yours to govern and to preclude others from having access to it, when in fact it's really the data belonging to the dealer. As long as they grant permission, how would you ever go against that wish?" [Id. (citation omitted).] The complaint identifies similar statements made by other CDK executives. [See, e.g., id. at ¶ 76.]

Consistent with those statements, prior to 2015, Defendant publicly touted its "open" system as one of the competitive advantages of its DMS. [Id. at ¶ 96.] Defendant issued press releases stressing that it "believes in the fair competitive environment and does not use its leverage through supply of the dealer management system to reduce competition through [**20] the restriction of data access." [Id.] By contrast, in 2009, Reynolds began selectively blocking third-party access to its DMS, and increased its blocking efforts in 2013. [Id.] Despite its blocking efforts, Defendant continued to hostilely access Reynolds's DMS. Defendant was successful in marketing its "open" DMS as a competitive advantage over the Reynolds DMS. [Id. at ¶ 97.] As a result, Defendant very slowly gained market share from Reynolds. [Id.] Reynolds's DMS market share declined from about 40 percent to 30 percent, with most dealers leaving Reynolds for Defendant. [Id.]

C. Alleged Conspiracy

In 2015, Defendant "closed" its system, coming as a complete surprise to Plaintiffs and others in the industry. [Id. at ¶ 98.] Before 2015, Plaintiffs used 3PA, DMI, IntegralLink, Superior Integrated Solutions, Inc. ("SIS"), and other commercial data integrators to access data for dealers using Defendant's DMS. [Id.] But after Defendant elected to close its system, Defendant made every effort to ensure that Plaintiff and other vendors could only integrate with dealer data through Defendant's 3PA program. [Id.] Plaintiffs contend that Defendant's change to a "closed" DMS was the result of [**21] a horizontal agreement with Reynolds.

In early 2015, Defendant and Reynolds entered into three written agreements that are central to this lawsuit. One of these agreements is a "Data Exchange Agreement"—also referred to as a "wind-down" agreement—pursuant to which Defendant agreed to wind down its data integration business on the Reynolds DMS, with Reynolds promising not to block Defendant's access to the Reynolds system during the wind-down period. [Id. at ¶ 106.] During that period, Reynolds agreed that Defendant could continue to extract dealer data just as it had before, using login credentials provided by the dealer. [Id.] As for other independent integrators, Defendant and Reynolds agreed that they would not assist any other party in accessing the [*795] other's DMS. [Id.] Defendant and Reynolds also agreed that they themselves would no longer access data on each other's DMS. [Id. at ¶ 107.] Defendant also agreed to coordinate the transition of Defendant's clients that needed access to data on Reynolds's DMS to Reynolds. [Id. at ¶ 108.]

The other two written agreements between Defendant and Reynolds "granted reciprocal access" to each other's data integration products—via the 3PA and [**22] RCI programs, respectively. [Id. at ¶ 112.] Under the agreements, Defendant's proprietary products and services could integrate with data on Reynolds's DMSs via RCI, and vice versa. [Id.] Reynolds received five free years of 3PA integration from Defendant, while Defendant had to pay for the data integration services from Reynolds. [Id.] Moreover, by signing up for 3PA, Reynolds agreed that it would integrate with data on Defendant's DMSs exclusively through 3PA, and not obtain data for its products and services from anywhere else. [Id.] Defendant agreed to the same in its integration contract with Reynolds for the RCI program. [Id.]

In addition to the written agreements, senior CDK and Reynolds executives have admitted that they agreed to restrict access to dealer data and destroy data integrators like Authenticom, SIS, and others. [Id. at ¶ 113.] During a May 2015 phone conversation with Authenticom's founder and CEO Steve Cottrell, Reynolds's Vice President of Data Services Robert Schaefer said that Reynolds had "made agreements with the other major DMS providers"—there only is CDK—"to support each other's third-party access agreements and to block independent integrators such as [**23] Authenticom." [Id.] Mr. Schaefer said that Authenticom should wind down its operations and leave the market. [Id.] On April 3, 2016, at an industry convention in Las Vegas, Defendant's former Vice President of Product Management Dan McCray stated that Defendant and Reynolds had agreed to "[l]ock [Authenticom] and the other third parties out," and that they were "working collaboratively to remove all hostile integrators from our DMS system." [Id. at ¶ 114.]

Defendant's public position has been that it closed its DMS as part of a cybersecurity initiative. [Id. at ¶ 150.] Plaintiffs acknowledge Defendant's claimed "security" justification but argue that it is pretextual. [Id. at ¶¶ 170-78.] According to Plaintiffs, a top-level CDK executive admitted in private conversation with a vendor that the rhetoric around "security" has "little credibility" and is primarily designed to force vendors to use Defendant for data integration. [Id. at ¶ 171.] Plaintiffs therefore claim that Defendant "closed" its DMS pursuant to its agreements with Reynolds in order to decrease competition in the data integration market, resulting in dramatically increased prices for data integration services. [Id. at [**24] ¶ 150-56.] For example, Plaintiffs allege that in July of 2015, Defendant proposed massive price increases of up to 900 percent. [Id. at ¶ 152.] Plaintiffs allege that price increases for data integration services have no corresponding increase in functionality or quality of service. [Id. at ¶ 28.] Given that Defendant's open system resulted in lower priced and better-quality data integration services, dealers preferred its "open" DMS. [Id. at ¶¶ 119-21, 144.] Dealers have openly complained about Defendant's decision to switch to a "closed" DMS. [Id. at ¶¶ 119-21.]

D. Alleged Exclusive Dealing

Shortly after entering into the Data Exchange Agreement, Defendant began "renegotiating" its contracts with vendors for 3PA access (actually, cancelling existing contracts and forcing vendors like Plaintiffs [*796] to sign new contracts). [Id. at ¶ 122.] Consistent with its decision to close its DMS, Defendant imposed exclusive dealing provisions that required vendors to use 3PA alone to integrate with data on Defendant's DMSs for all of their products and services. [Id.] CDK also took the new position that its existing contracts with dealers prohibited allowing data integrators to access its DMS. [Id. [*25]] When Plaintiffs pushed back on these changes, Defendant said there would be "little flexibility" because Defendant was going to impose the same changes on every vendor. [Id. at ¶ 124.] After Defendant began publicly threatening to terminate Plaintiffs' access to data on CDK's DMS, Plaintiffs finally agreed to Defendant's new 3PA terms. [Id. at ¶¶ 125, 129.] Plaintiffs allege, however, that they agreed to Defendant's new 3PA terms in reliance (at least in part) on Defendant's representation that no other vendor would pay less than Plaintiffs for integration services in the 3PA program and that Plaintiffs would receive Most Favored Nation status. [Id. at ¶ 126-29.]

Defendant also forced many of its dealers to extend their contracts by years by threatening to terminate their DMS service in less than 60 days unless they entered into years-long contracts instead of the month-to-month contracts previously used by many of the dealers. [Id. at ¶ 59.] Plaintiffs allege that dealers had no choice but to sign the lengthy extensions given the impossibility of switching DMS providers in such a short amount of time. [Id.]

II. Legal Standard

To survive a Federal Rule of Civil Procedure ("Rule") 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim [**26] upon which relief can be granted, the complaint first must comply with Rule 8(a) by providing "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief," Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2), such that the defendant is given "fair notice of what the *** claim is and the grounds upon which it rests." Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) (quoting Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 47, 78 S. Ct. 99, 2 L. Ed. 2d 80 (1957)) (alteration in original). Second, the factual allegations in the complaint must be sufficient to raise the possibility of relief above the "speculative level." E.E.O.C. v. Concentra Health Servs., Inc., 496 F.3d 773, 776 (7th Cir. 2007) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). "A pleading that offers 'labels and conclusions' or a 'formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do.'" Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). Dismissal for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) is proper "when the allegations in a complaint, however true, could not raise a claim of entitlement to relief." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 558. In reviewing a motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6), the Court accepts as true all of Plaintiffs' well-pleaded factual allegations and draws all reasonable inferences in Plaintiffs' favor. Killingsworth v. HSBC Bank Nev., N.A., 507 F.3d 614, 618 (7th Cir. 2007).

III. Analysis

A. Horizontal Conspiracy (Count I)

Plaintiffs brings a Section 1 horizontal conspiracy claim against Defendant based on agreements made between Defendant and Reynolds that Plaintiffs contend were designed to eliminate competition in the provision [**27] of dealer data integration services by "block[ing] all third-party access to their respective DMS[s]." [Compl., at ¶ 182.] Under established law, "joint efforts by a firm or firms to disadvantage competitors by either directly denying or persuading or coercing suppliers or customers to deny [*797] relationships the competitors need in the competitive struggle" are per se illegal. Toys "R" Us, Inc. v. F.T.C., 221 F.3d 928, 936 (7th Cir. 2000) (quoting Nw. Wholesale Stationers, Inc. v. Pac. Stationery & Printing Co., 472 U.S. 284, 294, 105 S. Ct. 2613, 86 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1985)); see also Klor's, Inc. v. Broadway-Hale Stores, Inc., 359 U.S. 207, 212, 79 S. Ct. 705, 3 L. Ed. 2d 741 (1959). In this case, Plaintiffs argue that Defendant conspired with Reynolds to (1) boycott and block independent data integrators such as Authenticom, and (2) divide the market for data integration services between each other. Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' horizontal conspiracy claim fails for a number of reasons.

First, Defendant argues that Plaintiffs are wrong about what the challenged agreements provide. Focusing on the written agreements between Defendant and Reynolds, Defendant argues that the "agreements effect only a wind-down of [Defendant's] hostile access to Reynold's DMS[.]" [72, at 13.] Although the 2015 written agreements between Defendant and Reynolds do not require that Defendant and Reynolds block third-party access on their own DMSs, as Judge St. Eve noted, the agreements [\[\*28\]](#) do "effectively require that CDK stop hostile access of Reynolds DMSs (for a period, at least) and, more importantly, expressly prohibit [Defendant and Reynolds] from assisting in the hostile access of one another's DMSs." In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 951. "Such a partial ceasefire and mutual forbearance between two rivals would make sense if * * * Defendants sought to 'support' one another's integration services to the exclusion of third-party integrators from the competition." Id. Furthermore, the alleged agreements between Defendant and Reynolds are not limited to the 2015 written agreements. Plaintiffs also allege that Defendant's executives admitted "that the companies agreed to block and thereby destroy third-party data integrators." [Compl., at ¶ 17.] "Defendants conspired to block integrators from accessing necessary data from the dealers—meaning, 'relationships' integrators 'need'—by (among other things) withholding authorization and disabling third-party credentials, so that Defendants, ultimately, could charge more for their integration services." In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 952. Such an agreement to block data integrators from the market plausibly is anticompetitive. Id.

Second, Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' Section 1 horizontal conspiracy [\[\*29\]](#) claim fails because Plaintiffs merely have alleged parallel conduct. "Tacit collusion, also known as conscious parallelism, does not violate Section 1 of the Sherman Act. Collusion is illegal only when based on agreement." In re Text Messaging Antitrust Litig., 782 F.3d 867, 879 \(7th Cir. 2015\). Defendant therefore argues that Plaintiffs' Section 1 claims fail because Plaintiffs fail to identify evidence that tends "to exclude the possibility" of independent conduct. 72, at 14 (quoting [Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 588, 106 S. Ct. 1348, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538 \(1986\) (internal quotation marks omitted)).] Although the Supreme Court has held "that a plaintiff must present evidence showing that defendants had a 'rational economic motive to conspire' and evidence 'that tends to exclude the possibility' of independent conduct to survive summary judgment[.]" In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 953 (quoting Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., 475 U.S. at 588), courts have held that such a showing is not necessary at the pleading stage. Id. (collecting cases).

Regardless, Plaintiffs plausibly have alleged a motive to conspire. Plaintiffs allege [\[\*798\]](#) that dealers preferred "open" DMSs and that several dealers complained when Defendant began blocking data integrators. [Compl., at ¶¶ 119-21.] It therefore is reasonable to infer that Defendant and Reynolds were motivated to conspire with each other so that they could close their systems to data integrators [\[\*30\]](#) without fear that their customers would turn to another provider.<sup>3</sup> In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 953. Furthermore, accepting Defendant's argument that Plaintiffs only have alleged parallel conduct would require that the Court ignore well-pleaded allegations that Defendant's executives admitted to the conspiracy. Such admissions are direct evidence of an illegal conspiracy. In re Text Messaging Antitrust Litig., 630 F.3d at 628 (recognizing "an admission by an employee of one of the conspirators" as direct evidence supporting a price-fixing case).

Third, Defendant argues that, to the extent Plaintiffs' horizontal conspiracy claim is based on a purported group boycott, Plaintiffs' claim is a "conceptually flawed" because Defendant does not "deal" with data integrators directly. Rather, data integrators are non-contracting third parties who bear no accountability to Defendant or Reynolds for undermining their systems' security and performance. Still, Plaintiffs allege that Defendant conspired with Reynolds to block data integrators from accessing necessary data from the dealers by withholding authorization to access their respective DMSs and by disabling third-party credentials, thereby inhibiting the relationship between the data integrators and the dealers. This is enough [**31] to establish anticompetitive conduct under Section 1. In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. at 952; see also Toys "R" Us, Inc., 221 F.3d at 936 (recognizing that "joint efforts by a firm or firms to disadvantage competitors by either directly denying or persuading or coercing suppliers or customers to deny relationships the competitors need in the competitive struggle" are per se illegal (quoting Nw. Wholesale Stationers, Inc., 472 U.S. at 294)).

<sup>3</sup> Defendant argues that Plaintiffs concede a number of points demonstrating that Defendant and Reynolds engaged in nothing more than permissible parallel conduct. [72, at 14.] For example, Defendant argues that the fact that Reynolds's decision to close its DMS preceded Defendant's decision to do the same by several years demonstrates that there was no illicit agreement between Reynolds and Defendant. [Id.] However, nothing prevented Reynolds from deciding to open its DMS. Indeed, given that Plaintiffs allege that Reynolds lost business to Defendant as a result of its closed DMS, Reynolds had the incentive to do so. While Defendant is free to argue that the purported concessions demonstrate that Defendant and Reynolds merely engaged in parallel conduct, the Court cannot ignore the well-plead allegations establishing a horizontal agreement and must draw all reasonable inferences in Plaintiffs' favor on a motion to dismiss. Killingsworth, 507 F.3d at 618.

Fourth, Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' horizontal conspiracy claim essentially amounts to "refusal to deal" claim, and a refusal to deal almost never amounts to an antitrust violation. However, concerted refusals to deal have long been forbidden under antitrust law. Klor's, Inc. v. Broadway-Hale Stores, Inc., 359 U.S. 207, 212, 79 S. Ct. 705, 3 L. Ed. 2d 741 \(1959\); see also Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 608 n.38, 105 S. Ct. 2847, 86 L. Ed. 2d 467 \(1985\) ("In considering the competitive effect of [a firm's] refusal to deal or cooperate ***

* it is not irrelevant to note that similar conduct carried out by the concerted action of three independent rivals with a similar share of the market would constitute a per se violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act."). As discussed above, Plaintiffs sufficiently have alleged concerted conduct, not just parallel conduct.

[*799] Finally, Defendant argues that—to the extent Plaintiffs' horizontal conspiracy claim is based on a market-division theory—Plaintiffs fail to allege that Defendant and Reynolds entered into [**32] an agreement to divide any market. Plaintiffs argue that they sufficiently have alleged such an agreement because their allegations establish that Defendant and Reynolds agreed that Defendant would be the sole provider of data integration services for dealers using Defendant's DMS and that Reynolds would be the sole provider of integration services for dealers using Reynolds's DMS. A market-division agreement is an agreement amongst competitors "to stay out of each other's territories." Blue Cross & Blue Shield United of Wisconsin v. Marshfield Clinic, 152 F.3d 588, 591 \(7th Cir. 1998\). Market-division agreements are per se illegal, United States v. Sealy, Inc., 388 U.S. 350, 358 n. 5, 87 S. Ct. 1847, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1238 \(1967\) (citation omitted), meaning that they fall within the category of agreements that "because of their pernicious effect on competition and lack of any redeeming virtue are conclusively presumed to be unreasonable and therefore illegal without elaborate inquiry as to the precise harm they have caused or the business excuse for their use." N. Pac. Ry. Co. v. United States, 356 U.S. 1, 5, 78 S. Ct. 514, 2 L. Ed. 2d 545 \(1958\). The Court sees no reason for the inclusion of an agreement to stop unauthorized access of a competitor's computer systems in that category. Indeed, Plaintiffs do not cite to—and the Court is not aware of—any cases treating the servicing and/or use of a competitor's product as a "territory" for the purposes of a market-division [**33] agreement. The Court therefore grants Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' horizontal conspiracy claim to the extent that it is based on a market-division theory but denies Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' horizontal conspiracy claim in all other respects.<sup>4</sup>

B. Exclusive Dealing (Count II)

Defendant also argues that Plaintiffs have not sufficiently alleged that Defendant engaged in exclusive dealing. "An exclusive dealing contract obliges a firm to obtain its inputs from a single source." Paddock Publ'ns, Inc. v. Chicago Tribune Co., 103 F.3d 42, 46 \(7th Cir. 1996\). "The objection to exclusive-dealing agreements is that they deny outlets to a competitor during the term of the agreement." Roland Mach. Co. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 749 F.2d 380, 393 \(7th Cir. 1984\). Because of the procompetitive benefits of exclusive dealing (e.g., increasing allocative efficiency, preventing free-riding), courts analyze exclusive dealing claims under the rule of reason. In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 956-57. Plaintiffs argue that Defendant has engaged in exclusive dealing by preventing dealers and vendors (such as Plaintiffs) from working with independent data integrators (such as Authenticom).

---

<sup>4</sup> CDK also argues that Plaintiffs' market-division claim fails because Plaintiffs do not allege a market-division agreement "among competitors at the same market level[.]" 72, at 15-16 (quoting [Cal. ex rel. Harris v. Safeway, Inc., 651 F.3d 1118, 1137 \(9th Cir. 2011\).)] However, Defendant does not identify what is necessary to make such a showing. Here, Plaintiffs allege that Reynolds and CDK were both competitors in the data integration market. [See, e.g., Compl., at ¶ 2.] Plaintiffs further allege that Defendant and Reynolds each provide data integration services for their respective DMSs. Without an explanation by Defendants as to why these allegations are insufficient, the Court declines to address this undeveloped argument at this time.

To the extent that Plaintiffs seek to bring an exclusive dealing claim based on Defendant's contracts with dealers, Plaintiffs fail to state a claim. Plaintiffs do not [*800] allege or even [**34] argue that Defendant requires dealers to purchase and use its DMS exclusively, which is necessary to state a claim for exclusive dealing. VBR Tours, LLC v. Nat'l R.R. Passenger Corp., 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 130455, 2015 WL 5693735, at \*12 \(N.D. Ill. Sept. 28, 2015\) (dismissing exclusive dealing claim where there was "no exclusivity").

To the extent that Plaintiffs seek to bring an exclusive dealing claim based on Defendant's contract with vendors, however, Plaintiffs state a claim for exclusive dealing. Plaintiffs allege that "[a]s a condition of participating in CDK's 3PA data integration service, vendors must generally agree to use 3PA exclusively for all of the vendors' products and services." [Compl., at ¶ 20; see also id. at ¶¶ 122-23, 132-34.] Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' exclusive dealing claim fails because 3PA is a "managed interface" that is part of CDK's DMS, not a separate product." [160, at 15.] According to Defendant, there is no separate market for data integration services because the "peculiar characteristics" of 3PA "preclude any finding that it is a separate product." [Id.] However, Defendant fails fully to develop this argument. Although Defendant identifies two relevant factors for determining a product market (i.e., "separate demand" and "the products peculiar characteristics and [**35] uses"), Defendant does not even address other relevant factors such as "distinct customers, distinct prices, sensitivity to price changes, and specialized vendors." Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, 370 U.S. 294, 325, 82 S. Ct. 1502, 8 L. Ed. 2d 510 \(1962\). Of the two factors identified by Defendant, only one (i.e., the products peculiar characteristics and uses) arguably support a finding of a separate product. The other relevant factors appear to weigh in favor of finding a separate market for data integration services.<sup>5</sup> For example, as Defendant repeatedly recognizes, it is not the dealers that purchase data integration services. There are distinct customers and distinct prices for data integration services. Furthermore, based on the fact-intensive nature of the product-market inquiry, the issue generally is not properly resolved on a motion to dismiss. Ploss v. Kraft Foods Grp., Inc., 197 F.Supp.3d 1037, 1070 \(N.D. Ill. 2016\) ("Courts should dismiss antitrust claims based on a market argument only when it is certain that the alleged relevant market clearly does not encompass all interchangeable substitute products"); accord Avnet, Inc. v. Motio, Inc., 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 120449, 2015 WL 5307515, at \*4 \(N.D. Ill. Sept. 9, 2015\) ("[b]ecause market definition is a deeply fact-intensive inquiry, courts hesitate to grant motions to dismiss for failure to plead a relevant product market") (quoting Todd v. Exxon Corp., 275 F.3d 191, 199-200 \(2d Cir. 2001\)) (alteration in original)).

Finally, [**36] Defendant argues that even if Plaintiffs sufficiently allege an exclusive dealing claim—which the Court concludes Plaintiffs have done with respect to Defendant's contract with vendors—Plaintiffs fail to allege substantial foreclosure. [72, at 21.] "[E]xclusive dealing arrangements violate antitrust laws only when they foreclose competition in a substantial share of the line of commerce at issue[.]" [Republic Tobacco Co. v. N. Atl. \[\*\*801\] Trading Co., 381 F.3d 717, 737-38 \(7th Cir. 2004\)](#) (citing Tampa Electric Co. v. Nashville Coal Co., 365 U.S. 320, 320-27, 81 S. Ct. 623, 5 L. Ed. 2d 580 \(1961\)). Defendant argues that Plaintiffs have not alleged substantial foreclosure because (1) there are no allegations that Defendant's vendor contracts foreclosed Plaintiffs from a substantial share of any market, and (2) any argument that hostile integrators are excluded by the contracts "would fail because hostile integrators are still able to deal with DMS providers covering a sizeable portion of the market for car dealership DMS services." [72, at 21.] In its response brief, Plaintiffs appear to concede the former argument, focusing on allegations that the foreclosure caused by the agreements raised prices for data integration services and therefore reduced output below competitive levels. Specifically, Plaintiffs allege that Defendant's anticompetitive conduct dramatically raised [**37] integration fees for software vendors, often doubling or even tripling the price. [Compl., at ¶¶ 149-155, 157, 161.]

---

<sup>5</sup> In the Authenticom decision, Judge St. Eve described the data-integration market and the DMS market as separate markets based on similar allegations. In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 940. The Court sees no reason to change course based on Defendant's current arguments, especially given that Plaintiffs have alleged that Defendant itself treats its data-integration services as a separate product from its DMS. [See, e.g., Compl., at ¶ 67 ("In its 2015 10-K, CDK described its data integration services as 'a stand-alone product' separate from 'the core Dealer Management System.'" (citation omitted)).]

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs lack antitrust standing to challenge the foreclosure of independent integrators such as Authenticom, but Defendant does not cite to any authority for that proposition. Defendant therefore has waived this argument by failing fully to develop it.<sup>6</sup> United States v. Berkowitz, 927 F.2d 1376, 1384 (7th Cir. 1991) ("We repeatedly have made clear that perfunctory and undeveloped arguments, and arguments that are unsupported by pertinent authority, are waived[.]" (citations omitted)). In its reply, Defendant identifies specific factual allegations regarding the foreclosure of hostile integrators it contends are lacking in the complaint. [160, at 16 n.7.]

These belated arguments are not persuasive. With respect to Defendant's antitrust standing argument, as a purchaser of data integration services, Plaintiffs have antitrust standing to challenge anticompetitive conduct resulting in increased prices for such services. Warner Mgmt. Consultants, Inc. v. Data Gen. Corp., 545 F. Supp. 956, 963 (N.D. Ill. 1982) ("It is well-settled that direct purchasers of a product the price of which has been inflated by anticompetitive conduct have standing to sue under the antitrust laws." (collecting cases)). [**38] Here, Plaintiffs allege that they were forced to pay increased fees for data integration services. [Compl., at ¶¶ 149-155, 157.]

With respect to Defendant's argument regarding the sufficiency of Plaintiffs' allegations of foreclosure, Plaintiffs sufficiently have alleged that the exclusive-dealing contracts foreclose a substantial portion of the data-integration market, resulting in increased prices. CDK and Reynolds together control approximately 75 percent of the DMS market by number of dealers and approximately 90 percent when measured by number of vehicles sold. [Compl., at ¶ 10.] CDK alone controls approximately 45 percent of the DMS market. [Id.] Plaintiffs further allege that "with the two dominant DMS providers agreeing to block independent integrators, it would be impossible for competing data integrators to survive." [Id. at ¶ 104.] Indeed, vendors like Plaintiffs are forced to pay supracompetitive prices for data integration services because they need to be able to service [*802] dealers who have CDK or Reynolds as their DMS providers. Vendors are likely only willing to pay such prices because Authenticom (the only other remaining data integrator) is foreclosed from competing for [**39] that business. These allegations raise a reasonable inference that Authenticom is foreclosed from competing in a substantial portion of the data-integration market. In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 957 (concluding that similar allegations were sufficient to establish that the "exclusive-dealing contracts [foreclosed] a substantial portion of the data-integration market"); see also Pipe Fittings Direct Purchaser Antitrust Litig., 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 29865, 2013 WL 812143, at *19 (D.N.J. Mar. 5, 2013) ("The question of whether the alleged exclusive dealing arrangements foreclosed a substantial share of the line of commerce is a merits question not proper for the pleading stage."). Plaintiffs therefore sufficiently have alleged an exclusive dealing claim based on Defendant's contract with vendors.

C. Unlawful Tying (Count III)

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' Section 1 tying claim fails because such a claim requires that the buyer of the tying product and the tied product be the same. "A tying arrangement is 'an agreement by a party to sell one product but only on the condition that the buyer also purchases a different (or tied) product, or at least agrees that he will not purchase that product from any other supplier.'" Eastman Kodak Co. v. Image Tech. Servs., Inc., 504 U.S. 451, 461-62, 112 S. Ct. 2072, 119 L. Ed. 2d 265 (1992) (quoting N. Pac. Ry. Co. v. United States, 356 U.S. 1, 5-6, 78 S. Ct. 514, 2 L. Ed. 2d 545 (1958)). "Such an arrangement violates § 1 of the Sherman Act if the seller has appreciable economic power in the tying product [**40] market and if the arrangement affects a substantial volume of commerce in the tied market." Batson v. Live Nation Entm't, Inc., 746 F.3d 827, 832 (7th Cir. 2014) (quoting Eastman Kodak, 504 U.S. at 462) (internal quotation marks omitted). "[T]he essential characteristic of an invalid tying arrangement lies in the seller's exploitation of its control over the tying product to force the buyer into the purchase of a tied product that the buyer either did not want at all." Jefferson Par. Hosp. Dist. No. 2 v. Hyde, 466

---

<sup>6</sup> In its opening brief, Defendant merely asserts that "it is doubtful that [Plaintiffs] have standing" to challenge the exclusion of data integrators. [72, at 21.] Defendant does not, however, affirmatively argue the point. Instead, Defendant asserts that an exclusive dealing claim based on the foreclosure of hostile integrators would fail because hostile integrators still were able to deal with DMS providers covering a sizeable portion of the market for car dealership DMS services. [Id.] Still, Defendant does not provide any authority or factual support for that assertion.

360 F. Supp. 3d 788, *8021 (2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12147, **40

U.S. 2, 12, 104 S. Ct. 1551, 80 L. Ed. 2d 2 (1984), abrogated on other grounds by Illinois Tool Works Inc. v. Indep. Ink, Inc., 547 U.S. 28, 126 S. Ct. 1281, 164 L. Ed. 2d 26 (2006).

Here, Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' tying claim fails because the dealers buy the tying product (i.e., the DMS) but not the tied product (i.e., integration services). Plaintiffs argue that because dealers pay a portion of the integration fees (which are passed on by the vendors) and make the purchasing decision for both the DMS and the integration service, dealers functionally are the purchasers of both the tied and tying products. In support of that argument, Plaintiffs cite to Dos Santos v. Columbus-Cuneo-Cabriini Med. Ctr., 684 F.2d 1346, 1354 (7th Cir. 1982). In that case, the Seventh Circuit noted that a patient might not be the real purchaser of anesthesiology services "[b]ecause the patient generally takes no part in the selection of a particular anesthesiologist" and "because the expense of anesthesia services to the patient is ordinarily at least partially [**41] insured or otherwise payable by a third party[.]" Id. at 1354. However, the court in Dos Santos also noted that the patient does not make "any significant economic decision" in that regard. Id. (emphasis added).

Although Plaintiffs allege that a vendor must receive authorization from the dealer before a data integrator can access the dealer's data, this does not establish that vendors such as Plaintiffs do not make any [*803] significant economic decision in selecting data integration services. Nor does the fact that some costs are passed on to dealers establish that the dealers are the actual purchasers of the data integration services. In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 961. Plaintiffs reliance on Dos Santos, which was not even a tying case, therefore is misplaced. The Court recognizes that "formalistic distinctions rather than actual market realities are generally disfavored in antitrust law." Eastman Kodak, 504 U.S. at 466-67. Still, Plaintiffs' allegations do "not plausibly suggest that dealers, not vendors, make the economic choice about which integrator to use and suffer the consequences of those decisions." In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 961 (dismissing tying claim) (citations omitted). Accordingly, the Court grants Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' tying claim.<sup>7</sup>

D. Rule of Reason [**42]

Defendant argues that, even assuming Plaintiffs sufficiently allege the kind of conduct that requires a rule of reason analysis under Section 1, its conduct rested on a clear and important business justification: the need to protect its system and the data on that system from cybersecurity threats.<sup>8</sup> [Compl., at ¶ 170.] However, whether challenged conduct has a procompetitive effect on balance so as to survive scrutiny under a rule-of-reason analysis presents a factual issue that cannot be resolved at this stage of the case. Cook Inc. v. Boston Sci. Corp., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17331, 2002 WL 335314, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 28, 2002) ("The rule of reason entails a complex inquiry into the surrounding circumstances that is not susceptible to resolution on a motion to dismiss[.]"); Watkins v. Smith, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 165762, 2012 WL 5868395, at *7 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 19, 2012) ("The rule-of-reason inquiry requires, at the motion to dismiss stage, that the plaintiff identify the relevant market affected by the challenged conduct and allege an actual adverse effect on competition in the identified market.").

Furthermore, Plaintiffs specifically allege that Defendant's security justification is pretextual. [Compl., at ¶¶ 170-78.] For example, Plaintiffs allege that "a top-level CDK executive admitted in private conversation with a vendor that the rhetoric around 'security' has 'little credibility' and [**43] is primarily designed to force vendors to use CDK for data integration." [i.d. at ¶ 171.] Accepting all of Plaintiffs' well-pleaded factual allegations and drawing all reasonable <sup>7</sup> When the Seventh Circuit reviewed the preliminary injunction entered in the Authenticom case, the Seventh Circuit indicated that it was "dubious in the extreme" that the alleged conduct of Defendant and Reynolds "amounts to tying, rather than simply participation at two levels of the market[]." Authenticom, Inc. v. CDK Glob. LLC, 874 F.3d 1019, 1026 (7th Cir. 2017). For the reasons discussed above, the Court reaches the same conclusion with respect to the allegations currently before the Court.

<sup>8</sup> As noted by Plaintiffs [126, at 20-21], Defendant does not appear to be arguing that Plaintiffs have failed to allege an actual adverse effect on competition in the identified market.

inferences in Plaintiffs' favor, Plaintiffs sufficiently have alleged that Defendant's proffered justification for the challenged conduct is pretextual.<sup>9</sup>

Finally, Plaintiffs have identified discovery materials supporting the argument that the objective of the challenged conduct "is to prevent and/or severely inhibit non-approved access to DMS forcing vendors into the 3PA or other CDK approved access programs and capture additional [*804] revenue opportunities." [126-1 (Ex. 16 (CDK-0843493)), at 214 (emphasis added).] This evidence further supports Plaintiffs' arguments against dismissal. Geinosky v. City of Chicago, 675 F.3d 743, 745 n.1 (7th Cir. 2012) ("A party appealing a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal may elaborate on his factual allegations so long as the new elaborations are consistent with the pleadings." (collecting cases)).

B. Section 2 Claim (Count IV)

1. Brand Specific Aftermarkets

To prevail on its Section 2 claim, Plaintiffs must demonstrate that Defendant has monopoly power in the relevant market. Here, Plaintiffs allege that Defendant has monopolized a brand-specific "Dealer Data Integration aftermarket" limited [**44] to its own DMS. [Compl., at ¶ 208.] "In rare circumstances, a single brand of a product or service can constitute a relevant market for antitrust purposes." PSKS, Inc. v. Leegin Creative Leather Prods., Inc., 615 F.3d 412, 418 (5th Cir. 2010) (citation omitted). The seminal case setting forth the circumstances under which such a claim may be viable is Eastman Kodak Co. v. Image Tech. Servs., Inc., which held that a brand-specific aftermarket can constitute a relevant market for antitrust purposes when consumers effectively are "locked-in" that brand's market because of structural barriers and/or commercial realities (e.g., high transaction costs for switching brands). 504 U.S. at 461-62. The Seventh Circuit has made clear, however, that firms with market power are not "forbidden to deal in complementary products[.]" Schor v. Abbott Labs., 457 F.3d 608, 614 (7th Cir. 2006). Rather, what Eastman Kodak holds is that firms with market power cannot deal in complementary products in "ways that take advantage of customers' sunk costs." Id. Courts therefore have found "that an Eastman Kodak claim depends on the consumer's unawareness of the supplier's aftermarket power and its terms when it purchased the primary-market product." In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 962-63 (collecting cases); see also Schor, 457 F.3d at 614 (recognizing same).

Turning to the facts of this case, Plaintiffs plausibly allege an Eastman [**45] Kodak claim. Plaintiffs allege that dealers are "locked in" Defendant's DMS. [Compl., at ¶¶56-60, 207.] In support of that assertion, Plaintiffs allege that "switching costs are high" and "[s]witching DMS providers presents significant logistical challenges and is highly disruptive to business operations." [Id. at ¶ 57.] "It can take a dealership over a year of preparation, staff training, and testing before a new DMS can be put into operation, all while the dealership is trying to dell and service cars." [Id.] Indeed, Plaintiffs allege that Defendant's own CEO publicly has recognized that dealers are hesitant to switch DMSs because the process can take time and can be very difficult. [Id. at ¶ 58.]

Defendant argues that because of its contractual bars on third-party DMS access, dealers were aware of its aftermarket power and its terms when they purchased contract with Defendant. [72, at 24.] However, Plaintiffs repeatedly allege that Defendant publicly took the position that it permitted access by third-party integrators. [Compl., at ¶¶ 75-77.] For example, Plaintiffs allege that "CDK's top executives have repeatedly made public statements that dealers may grant data integrators rights [**46] to access their DMS." [Id. at ¶ 75.] "Steve Anenen, CDK's longtime CEO, publicly stated that dealers have the right to grant third parties access to, and use of, their data. He told the industry publication Automotive News, 'We're not going to prohibit that or get in the way of that.'" [Id. (citation omitted).] He further stated, "I don't know how you [*805] can ever make the opinion that the data is yours to govern and to preclude others from having access to it, when in fact it's really the data belonging to the dealer. As long as they grant permission, how would you ever go against that wish?" [Id. (citation omitted).] The complaint identifies similar statements made by other CDK executives. [See, e.g., id. at ¶ 76.]

---

<sup>9</sup> The Supreme Court has recognized that whether a justification is a pretext can be evaluated under the rule of reason analysis. Nw. Wholesale Stationers, Inc., 472 U.S. at 297.

Defendant nonetheless argues that dealers could not be justified in relying on these representations given contrary language in their contracts with Defendant. [160, at 19.] In making this argument, Defendant cites to cases recognizing that "[a] party is not justified in relying on representations outside of or contrary to the written terms of a contract he or she signs when the signer is aware of the nature of the contract and had a full opportunity to read it." Cromeens, Holloman, Sibert, Inc. v. AB Volvo, 349 F.3d 376, 394 (7th Cir. 2003). However, [**47] it is not apparent from the face of the complaint that Defendant's contracts with dealers contradict these representations. Although Defendant's contract with dealers permitted dealers to authorize its agents to access the DMS [Compl., at ¶¶ 20, 74, 82], it is not clear whether third-party data integrators were acting as the dealers' agents. Defendant argues in a footnote that Plaintiffs have not plausibly alleged that the data integrators are the agents of dealers [72, at 10 n.2], but Plaintiffs do not need to anticipate factual defenses that Defendant may raise regarding their claim. Richards v. Mitcheff, 696 F.3d 635, 637 (7th Cir. 2012) ("Complaints need not anticipate defenses and attempt to defeat them." (citing Gomez v. Toledo, 446 U.S. 635, 100 S. Ct. 1920, 64 L. Ed. 2d 572 (1980))). Although discovery ultimately may demonstrate that data integrators were contractually prohibited from accessing Defendant's DMS, based on the well-pleaded obligations in the amended complaint it is plausible that dealers believed that they could authorize third-party integrators to access their DMSs, especially in light of public statements by CDK executives indicating that dealers had such authority. Accordingly, CDK plausibly has alleged an Eastman Kodak claim.<sup>10</sup>

Defendant further argues that Plaintiffs cannot complain [**48] about the alleged foreclosure of competition in the dealer-data-integration aftermarket for Defendant's DMS because any hostile integration of its DMS is unlawful under the Computer Fraud and Abuse Act ("CFAA"). [72, at 25.] However, as Defendant notes, whether a data integrator violates the CFAA depends in part on whether the data integrator "accesses a computer without authorization or exceeds authorized access[.]" [72, at 25 (quoting 18 U.S.C. § 1030(a)(2)(C)) (internal quotation marks omitted).] And, as discussed above, it is not at all clear from the complaint that data integrators lacked authorization to access Defendant's DMS. Given Plaintiffs' allegations regarding Defendant's repeated and unequivocal statements indicating that it permitted third-party integrator access, the allegations in the complaint support the contrary conclusion. Furthermore, whether data integrators violated the CFAA is a question of fact that cannot be determined based on the pleadings alone.<sup>11</sup> In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 949 (rejecting similar argument with respect to purported violations of the CFAA and related state laws by Authenticom). Plaintiffs therefore sufficiently have alleged that Defendant has monopoly power in the relevant market—namely, a brand-specific [**49] dealer data integration aftermarket limited to its own DMS.

2. Anticompetitive Conduct

To state a claim for monopolization under Section 2, a plaintiff must allege that defendant engaged in predatory or anticompetitive conduct. Mercatus Grp., LLC v. Lake Forest Hosp., 641 F.3d 834, 854 (7th Cir. 2011) (holding that a claim for monopolization under Section 2 requires that the defendant "willfully acquired or maintained that power by means other than the quality of its product, its business acumen, or historical accident"). Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' Section 2 claim fails because it is premised on an alleged refusal to deal, which does not amount to predatory or anticompetitive conduct under the Supreme Court's decision in Verizon Communications Inc. v. Law Offices of Curtis v. Trinko, LLP, 540 U.S. 398, 124 S. Ct. 872, 157 L. Ed. 2d 823 (2004).

---

<sup>10</sup> The Court notes that the complaint indicates that Defendant later revoked any authorization. Still, according to the allegations in the complaint, dealers already using Defendant's DMS were effectively locked in their purchase. [Compl., at ¶¶ 56-60, 207.]

<sup>11</sup> Although Plaintiffs did not make this argument, the Court also notes that "a plaintiff's wrongdoing is not a defense to an antitrust suit." In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 946.

Plaintiffs recognize that their Section 2 claim would fail if it were based on a refusal to deal,<sup>12</sup> but argue that their Section 2 claim is based on the predatory conduct that serves as the basis of their Section 1 claims. A defendant violates "Section 2" of the Sherman Act *** [if it] 'has acquired or maintained his strategic position, or sought to expand [its] monopoly, or expanded it by means of those restraints of trade which are cognizable under [Section] 1.'" Fin. & Sec. Prods. Ass'n v. Diebold, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 45409, 2005 WL 1629813, at *4 (N.D. Cal. July 8, 2005) (quoting United States v. Griffith, 334 U.S. 100, 106, 68 S. Ct. 941, 92 L. Ed. 1236 (1948)); see also Gumwood HP Shopping Partners, L.P. v. Simon Prop. Grp., Inc., 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 92133, 2013 WL 3214983, at *7 (N.D. Ind. Mar. 13, 2013) ("Where defendant has engaged in unlawful restraint of trade that would independently violate [**50] Section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, it is well established that it also violates Section 2 if it acquires or maintains a monopoly by means of that restraint of trade." (citing Griffith, 334 U.S. at 106)). Although a unilateral refusal to deal alone does not establish an antitrust violation, that does not mean that other anticompetitive conduct is insulated because it involves a refusal to deal. Glaberson v. Comcast Corp., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 62672, 2006 WL 2559479, at *10 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 31, 2006) ("Trinko does not provide a basis for insulating claims based on well-established examples of anticompetitive conduct, such as horizontal market allocations, from judicial review.").<sup>13</sup> Because Plaintiffs plausibly have alleged a horizontal conspiracy claim [*807] and an exclusive dealing claim,<sup>14</sup> Plaintiffs sufficiently have alleged anticompetitive conduct sufficient to state a claim under Section 2. Accordingly, the Court denies Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' Section 2 monopolization claim.

D. Cartwright Act and California Unfair Competition Law (Counts V, VI, and VII)

Defendant argues that the dismissal of Plaintiffs' Sherman Act claims would be fatal to their antitrust-related claim under the Cartwright Act. "[B]ecause the Cartwright Act is patterned after the federal Sherman Act and both have their roots in the common law, [**51] federal cases interpreting the Sherman Act are applicable in construing the Cartwright Act." In re Copper Antitrust Litig., 436 F.3d 782, 802 (7th Cir. 2006) (internal quotation marks omitted) (quoting Oakland-Alameda Cnty. Builders' Exch. v. F.P. Lathrop Constr. Co., 4 Cal. 3d 354, 93 Cal. Rptr. 602, 482 P.2d 226, 231 n. 3 (Cal. 1971)). Thus, Plaintiffs' Cartwright Act claim rises or falls with Plaintiffs' Sherman Act claims. Similarly, to the extent that Plaintiffs seek to bring a claim under the "unlawful" prong of the California Unfair Competition Law ("UCL"), Plaintiffs' claim depends on allegations of antitrust violations and therefore also rises or falls with Plaintiffs' Sherman Act claims. Because Plaintiffs sufficiently have alleged claims under the Sherman Act, Plaintiffs' claims under the Cartwright Act and the California UCL survive.<sup>15</sup> Accordingly, Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' Cartwright Act and California UCL claims is denied.

<sup>12</sup> The parties' agreement on this issue is supported by case law, as there is "no antitrust duty to deal *** in selling services to [ ] competitors in the retail market." In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 955 (citing Pac. Bell Tel. Co. v. Linkline Commc'n, Inc., 555 U.S. 438, 450, 129 S. Ct. 1109, 172 L. Ed. 2d 836 (2009)); see also Schor, 457 F.3d at 610 ("[A]ntitrust law does not require monopolists to cooperate with rivals by selling them products that would help the rivals to compete. Cooperation is a problem in antitrust, not one of its obligations." (internal citation omitted)); Authenticom, Inc. v. CDK Global, LLC, 874 F.3d 1019, 1025 (7th Cir. 2017) ("Even monopolists are almost never required to assist their competitors[.]") (citation omitted)).

<sup>13</sup> Defendant notes that Glaberson and another case cited by Plaintiffs do not address Section 2 claims. However, Plaintiffs cite these cases for the proposition that Trinko is limited to refusal-to-deal claims and does not insulate a defendant who engages in other misconduct from liability.

<sup>14</sup> To the extent that Plaintiffs' Section 2 claim rests on allegations of a horizontal conspiracy, Defendant contends Plaintiffs are limited to bringing a Section 1 claim. But Defendant does not cite to any authority holding that violations of Section 1 are insufficient to establish anticompetitive conduct for the purposes of Section 2. As noted above, the case law supports the contrary position.

<sup>15</sup> Plaintiffs also argue that they have stated a claim under the "unfair prong" of the California UCL. [126, at 28.] Plaintiffs do not, however, identify what conduct it contends satisfies the "unfair prong" of the California UCL. Because Plaintiffs sufficiently have alleged violations of the Sherman Act, however, Plaintiffs' California UCL claim survives.

E. California Unfair Practices Act

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs fail to state a claim under California's Unfair Practices Act ("CUPA"). California's Unfair Practices Act ("UPA") makes unlawful the "secret payment or allowance of rebates * * * or unearned discounts * * * or secretly extending to certain purchasers special services or privileges not extended to all purchasers purchasing upon like terms and conditions." Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045. Defendant [**52] argues that Plaintiffs have not sufficiently alleged (1) a secret discount, or (2) injury caused by the purported secret discount [72, at 30], which is necessary to state a claim for a violation of Section 17045 of the CUPA.

The Court agrees that Plaintiffs have not sufficiently alleged injury caused by any purported discount given to Reynolds. Plaintiffs allege that the fee waiver given to Reynolds places Plaintiffs' applications "at a severe competitive disadvantage in the market place," which Plaintiffs contend is sufficient to establish injury under Section 17045 of the CUPA. [126, at 30.] However, a plaintiff bringing a claim under Section 17045 of the CUPA must allege an actual injury in addition to a competitive disadvantage. Am. Booksellers Ass'n, Inc. v. Barnes & Noble, Inc., 135 F. Supp. 2d 1031, 1043 \(N.D. Cal. 2001\) (finding "a tendency to destroy competition" but granting summary judgment for failure to establish "actual injury"); cf. Diesel I\*8081 Elec. Sales & Serv., Inc. v. Marco Marine San Diego, Inc., 16 Cal. App. 4th 202, 213, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62 \(1993\) (plaintiff established actual injury by showing that "its gross sales and profits drastically declined"). Because Plaintiffs have not done so here, Plaintiffs CUPA claim fails.

Furthermore, Plaintiffs' allegation of a severe competitive disadvantage relates to the alleged conspiracy between Defendant and Reynolds. [Compl., at ¶ 28.] Thus, even if allegations of a competitive disadvantage were sufficient to [**53] state a claim, Plaintiffs fail sufficiently to allege a competitive disadvantage caused by the purported secret discount. Accordingly, the Court grants Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' CUPA claim.

F. Fraudulent Inducement (Count VIII), Breach of Contract (Count IX), and Defamation (Count XI)

Defendant also moves to dismiss Plaintiffs' fraudulent inducement claim, breach of contract claim, and defamation claim. However, neither party addresses what law applies to these claims. Furthermore, neither party addresses the elements of these claims. Given that the parties have not fully developed their arguments, the Court declines to address the sufficiency of Plaintiffs' allegations with respect to these claims. Doherty v. City of Chicago, 75 F.3d 318, 324 \(7th Cir. 1996\) ("Given our adversary system of litigation, it is not the role of this court to research and construct the legal arguments open to parties, especially when they are represented by counsel.") (citation omitted)); Waldock v. M.J. Select Glob., Ltd., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 38001, 2005 WL 3542527, at \*14 \(N.D. Ill. Dec. 27, 2005\) ("[W]ithout engaging in a choice-of-law analysis, they 'have failed to lay the proper ground work for the court to address their argument.'" (quoting In re Air Crash Disaster, at Sioux City, Iowa, on July 19, 1989, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17538, 1991 WL 268656, at \*2 \(N.D. Ill. Dec. 4, 1991\))). Accordingly, the Court denies Defendant's motion [**54] to dismiss Plaintiffs' fraudulent inducement claim, breach of contract claim, and defamation claim. Waldock v. M.J. Select Glob., Ltd., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 38001, 2005 WL 3542527, at \*14 \(N.D. Ill. Dec. 27, 2005\) (denying motion to dismiss claim because defendants failed to lay the proper ground work for the court to address their argument); McDaniel v. Loyola Univ. Med. Ctr., 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 120042, 2014 WL 4269126, at \*6 \(N.D. Ill. Aug. 28, 2014\) (denying motion to dismiss claims that were not supported by case law or legal authority).

IV. Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, Defendant's motion to dismiss [71] Plaintiffs' complaint is granted in part and denied in part.

Date: January 25, 2019

/s/ Robert M. Dow, Jr.

Robert M. Dow, Jr.

United States District Judge

---

End of Document

In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., MDL 2817

United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division

January 25, 2019, Decided; January 25, 2019, Filed

Case No. 18-cv-864

Reporter

362 F. Supp. 3d 510 *; 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12157 **

IN RE DEALER MANAGEMENT SYSTEMS ANTITRUST LITIGATION, MDL 2817. This document relates to: THE DEALERSHIP CLASS ACTION

Prior History: Authenticom, Inc. v. CDK Global, LLC \(In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig.\), 313 F. Supp. 3d 931, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 80937, 2018 WL 2193236 \(N.D. Ill., May 14, 2018\)

Core Terms

---

Plaintiffs', dealers, arbitration, vendors, argues, antitrust, courts, antitrust claim, integration, damages, allegations, consumer protection, dealerships, purchasers, consumers, parties, harmonization, providers, software, motion to dismiss, class action, injunctive relief, anti trust law, Interface, indirect, denies, third-party, horizontal, contracts, anticompetitive conduct

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

HN1[] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

To survive a Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, the complaint first must comply with Fed. R. Civ. P. 8\(a\) by providing a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief, Fed. R. Civ. P. 8\(a\)\(2\), such that the defendant is given fair notice of what the claim is and the grounds upon which it rests. Second, the factual allegations in the complaint must be sufficient to raise the possibility of relief above the speculative level. A pleading that offers labels and conclusions or a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do. Dismissal for failure to state a claim under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) is proper when the allegations in a complaint, however true, could not raise a claim of entitlement to relief. In reviewing a motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12\(b\)\(6\), the court accepts as true all of plaintiffs' well-pleaded factual allegations and draws all reasonable inferences in plaintiffs' favor.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Arbitration > Arbitrability

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Arbitration > Federal Arbitration Act > Scope

HN2 Arbitration, Arbitrability

Pursuant to the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA), 9 U.S.C.S. §1 et seq., a contract evidencing a transaction involving commerce to settle by arbitration a controversy thereafter arising out of such contract or transaction shall be valid, irrevocable, and enforceable, save upon such grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract. 9 U.S.C.S. § 2. The effect of the section is to create a body of federal substantive law of arbitrability, applicable to any arbitration agreement within the coverage of the FAA. Section 2 of the FAA is a congressional declaration of a liberal federal policy favoring arbitration agreements, notwithstanding any state substantive or procedural policies to the contrary. Thus, when the parties have agreed to arbitrate some matters pursuant to an arbitration clause, the law's permissive policies in respect to arbitration counsel that any doubts concerning the scope of arbitral issues should be resolved in favor of arbitration. An order to arbitrate the particular grievance should not be denied unless it may be said with positive assurance that the arbitration clause is not susceptible of an interpretation that covers the asserted dispute.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Arbitration > Arbitrability

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Contract Conditions & Provisions > Arbitration Clauses

HN3 Arbitration, Arbitrability

Unless the parties clearly and unmistakably provide otherwise, the question of whether the parties agreed to arbitrate is to be decided by the court, not the arbitrator.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Arbitration > Federal Arbitration Act > Arbitration Agreements

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Contract Conditions & Provisions > Arbitration Clauses

HN4 Federal Arbitration Act, Arbitration Agreements

A party cannot be required to submit to arbitration any dispute which he has not agreed so to submit. However, the mere fact that parties are not signatories to an agreement does not defeat their right to compel arbitration. Still, arbitration agreements apply to nonsignatories only in rare circumstances.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Arbitration > Federal Arbitration Act > Arbitration Agreements

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Contract Conditions & Provisions > Arbitration Clauses

HN5 Federal Arbitration Act, Arbitration Agreements

State law governs who is bound by agreements to arbitrate.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Contract Conditions & Provisions > Arbitration Clauses

Contracts Law > ... > Affirmative Defenses > Estoppel > Equitable Estoppel

362 F. Supp. 3d 510, *510L 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12157, **12157

HN6 Contract Conditions & Provisions, Arbitration Clauses

Under Illinois law, a party cannot enforce an arbitration agreement under an equitable estoppel theory without detrimental reliance.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Arbitration > Arbitrability

Contracts Law > ... > Affirmative Defenses > Estoppel > Equitable Estoppel

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Contract Conditions & Provisions > Arbitration Clauses

HN7 Arbitration, Arbitrability

Under Ohio law, detrimental reliance is necessary to invoke the doctrine of equitable estoppel. The same contractual and estoppel principles apply to determining what parties are bound by an agreement to arbitrate.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Arbitration > Arbitrability

Contracts Law > ... > Affirmative Defenses > Estoppel > Equitable Estoppel

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Contract Conditions & Provisions > Arbitration Clauses

HN8 Arbitration, Arbitrability

Traditional state-law principles such as assumption, agency, and estoppel apply to determining when a contract such as an agreement to arbitrate can be enforced against non-parties. Thus, the court looks to Ohio's traditional equitable estoppel principles to determine when an arbitration agreement can be enforced against a nonsignatory under Ohio law.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Arbitration > Waiver

HN9 Arbitration, Waiver

Despite the federal policy favoring arbitration, a contractual right to arbitration can be waived. A waiver of a contractual right to invoke arbitration can be implied or express. For waiver of the right to arbitrate to be inferred, the court must determine that, considering the totality of the circumstances, a party acted inconsistently with the right to arbitrate. Although a variety of factors may be considered, diligence or a lack thereof should weigh heavily in the court's determination of whether a party implicitly waived its right to arbitrate. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit therefore has directed courts to consider whether the party seeking arbitration did all it could reasonably have been expected to do to make the earliest feasible determination of whether to proceed judicially or by arbitration. Other considerations include whether the allegedly defaulting party participated in litigation, substantially delayed its request for arbitration, or participated in discovery. Still, waiver is not lightly inferred; the strong federal policy favoring enforcement of arbitration agreements impresses upon a party asserting waiver a heavy burden.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Arbitration > Waiver

HN10 [blue document icon] Arbitration, Waiver

When a party chooses to proceed in a judicial forum, there is a rebuttable presumption that the party has waived its right to arbitrate.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Arbitration > Waiver

HN11 [blue document icon] Arbitration, Waiver

Although a showing of prejudice is not required in order to find waiver of the right to arbitrate, it is relevant.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Purchasers > Indirect Purchasers

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

HN12 [blue document icon] Purchasers, Indirect Purchasers

A federal antitrust plaintiff may not seek damages based on alleged supracompetitive prices passed through by a purchaser earlier in the distribution chain. Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois forbids a customer of the purchaser who paid a cartel price to sue the cartelists, even if his seller—the direct purchaser from the cartelists—passed on to him some or even all of the cartel's elevated price. This is because when defendants sell to a third party who could recover for any injury it suffers as a direct purchaser, there is no need for separate and duplicative suits for implicit overcharges claimed further downstream. Where a plaintiff's injury is derivative of a more direct injury to some other person, and that person would have a strong motivation to pursue its own antitrust claim against the defendant, standing is not likely to exist.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

HN13 [blue document icon] Standing, Requirements

Antitrust standing examines the connection between the asserted wrongdoing and the claimed injury to limit the class of potential plaintiffs to those who are in the best position to vindicate the antitrust violation. Regardless of whether an antitrust plaintiff has constitutional standing, at the pleadings stage a district court must make a further determination whether the plaintiff is a proper party to bring a private antitrust action. The U.S. Supreme Court announced six factors to consider in assessing whether an antitrust plaintiff is the proper party to proceed under the antitrust laws: (1) the causal connection between the violation and the harm; (2) the presence of improper motive; (3) the type of injury and whether it was one Congress sought to redress; (4) the directness of the injury; (5) the speculative nature of the damages; and (6) the risk of duplicate recovery or complex damage apportionment. For injunctive relief, the speculative nature of the damages and risk of duplicate recoveries factors drop out of the analysis, but the need to establish antitrust standing remains. The broad proposition is that a party cannot recover when others more directly injured are better able to state a claim.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

HN14 [blue document icon] Standing, Requirements

The U.S. Supreme Court did not hold that Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters (AGC) categorically bars federal antitrust claims—even claims seeking injunctive relief—whenever more directly-affected purchasers seek the same injunctive relief that the more-remote plaintiff demands. The Court recognized that the fact that the alleged conspiracy operated in the separate but related futures market did not necessarily doom the indirect purchaser plaintiffs' claims. Furthermore, other courts in the Northern District of Illinois have concluded that when damages are not at issue, as long as the plaintiffs' alleged injury is not remote but is directly attributable to the conspiracy, the injury satisfies AGC.

362 F. Supp. 3d 510, *510L 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12157, **12157

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Sherman Act

HN15 [blue icon] Standing, Requirements

When injunctive relief alone is at issue, some factors—namely the speculative nature of the damages and the risk of duplicate recoveries or complex damages apportionment—do not apply to the antitrust standing analysis. Courts should protect against multiple lawsuits for damages and duplicative recoveries by examining factors such as the potential for duplicative recovery, the complexity of apportioning damages, and the existence of other parties that have been more directly harmed, to determine whether a party is a proper plaintiff under § 4 of the Sherman Act. Because claims for injunctive relief do not present a risk of multiple lawsuits for damages and duplicative recoveries, those factors are not relevant to the antitrust standing analysis for claims seeking injunctive relief. The fact is that one injunction is as effective as 100, and, concomitantly, that 100 injunctions are no more effective than one.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Cartels & Horizontal Restraints > Sherman Act

HN16 [blue icon] Cartels & Horizontal Restraints, Sherman Act

For purposes of horizontal conspiracy claims, evidence of retardation of innovation and subsequent decrease in the quality of products potentially available to consumers, if believed, could qualify as a harm to competition and consumers.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Cartels & Horizontal Restraints > Sherman Act

HN17 [blue icon] Cartels & Horizontal Restraints, Sherman Act

Tacit collusion, also known as conscious parallelism, does not violate § 1 of the Sherman Act. Collusion is illegal only when based on agreement. Although a plaintiff must present evidence showing that defendants had a rational economic motive to conspire and evidence that tends to exclude the possibility of independent conduct to survive summary judgment, courts have held that such a showing is not necessary at the pleading stage.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing > Exclusive Dealing

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Sherman Act

HN18 [blue icon] Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing, Exclusive Dealing

362 F. Supp. 3d 510, *510L 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12157, **12157

An exclusive dealing contract obliges a firm to obtain its inputs from a single source. The objection to exclusive-dealing agreements is that they deny outlets to a competitor during the term of the agreement. Because of the procompetitive benefits of exclusive dealing (e.g., increasing allocative efficiency, preventing free-riding), courts analyze exclusive dealing claims under the rule of reason.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Horizontal Market Allocation

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN19 [blue icon] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Horizontal Market Allocation

Courts should dismiss antitrust claims based on a market argument only when it is certain that the alleged relevant market clearly does not encompass all interchangeable substitute products; because market definition is a deeply fact-intensive inquiry, courts hesitate to grant motions to dismiss for failure to plead a relevant product market.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing > Exclusive Dealing

HN20 [blue icon] Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing, Exclusive Dealing

Exclusive dealing arrangements violate antitrust laws only when they foreclose competition in a substantial share of the line of commerce at issue.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing > Exclusive Dealing

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Sherman Act

HN21 [blue icon] Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing, Exclusive Dealing

Whether challenged conduct has a procompetitive effect on balance so as to survive scrutiny under a rule-of-reason analysis is a factual issue for trial.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

HN22 [blue icon] Private Actions, State Regulation

Courts applying Alaska, California, Florida, and South Carolina law have held that consumer protection claims based on the same factual allegations as a failed antitrust claim must likewise be dismissed.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

HN23 [blue icon] Private Actions, State Regulation

South Carolina courts interpret the state's antitrust laws consistent with federal law.

362 F. Supp. 3d 510, *510L 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12157, **12157

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

**HN24** [blue icon] Standing, Requirements

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit has explained that Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters sets forth factors to consider whether a plaintiff satisfies the proximate cause (i.e., antitrust standing) requirement implicit in every antitrust case.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

**HN25** [blue icon] Standing, Requirements

While most states model their antitrust statutes and jurisprudence on federal law, they are under no obligation to do so. Still, many states have harmonization provisions—which can either be statutory or derived from common law—that provide that the state's antitrust laws are to be read in harmony with federal antitrust laws. Even though all but one state at issue has a harmonization provision, many states expressly have rejected Illinois Brick's bar on indirect purchaser claims by enacting repealer statutes' abrogating the Supreme Court's prohibition on indirect-purchaser actions as articulated in Illinois Brick.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

**HN26** [blue icon] Standing, Requirements

The presence of a statutory harmonization provision (either statutory or common law), absent any countervailing statutory law or case law from a state appellate court, is sufficient to permit a district court to apply federal antitrust-standing law—including Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters claims brought under that state's antitrust laws. Absent countervailing authority, it would be odd to read an exception into a state's harmonization provision. The fact that so many states took action in response to Illinois Brick shows that states are quite capable of rejecting federal antitrust law when they see fit to do so.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

**HN27** [blue icon] Standing, Requirements

The adoption of an Illinois Brick repealer statute does not preclude the application of Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters (AGC). The Illinois Brick and AGC analyses are analytically distinct. It is one thing to say that a state is willing to allow someone other than a direct purchaser to have the opportunity to shoulder the burden of showing proximate causation; it is quite another thing to say that the state has thrown both the direct-purchaser rule and proximate causation out the window. States with Illinois Brick-repealer statutes have not replaced one per se rule with another, so that all indirect-purchaser suits can proceed no matter how far removed the purchasers are from the production process and no matter how speculative the damages award would be. The court therefore cannot assume—absent some in-state authority to the contrary—that states that have enacted Illinois Brick repealers also have abandoned AGC's antitrust standing requirement. The application of AGC to a plaintiff's claims ultimately is a question of state law.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

Civil Procedure > Preliminary Considerations > Federal & State Interrelationships > Erie Doctrine

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

HN28 [] Standing, Requirements

In deciding whether to apply Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters to state-law antitrust claims, the federal district court looks to whether the relevant state supreme court or state legislature has spoken to the issue. In the absence of guiding decisions by the state's highest court, federal courts consult and follow the decisions of intermediate state appellate courts unless there is a convincing reason to predict that the state's highest court would disagree.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

Civil Procedure > Preliminary Considerations > Federal & State Interrelationships > Erie Doctrine

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

HN29 [] Standing, Requirements

At least one court in the District of Columbia has applied Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters despite its Illinois Brick repealer statute. Absent any binding District of Columbia authority to the contrary, such decision and the deferential harmonization provision remain the best indicators of how the District of Columbia Court of Appeals (the highest court in the District of Columbia) would address the issue.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

HN30 [] Private Actions, State Regulation

Iowa courts have interpreted the state's harmonization provision, *Iowa Code Ann. § 553.2*, narrowly. The purpose of Iowa's antitrust harmonization statute was to achieve uniform application of the state and federal laws prohibiting monopolistic practices, not to define who can sue under antitrust law.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

HN31 [] Standing, Requirements

Although the Iowa Supreme Court has rejected the application of Illinois Brick to Iowa competition law, the Iowa Supreme Court has continued to apply Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

HN32 [blue icon] Private Actions, State Regulation

Courts have recognized that Maine's antitrust statute parallels federal law and therefore have analyzed state claims according to federal law.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

HN33 [blue icon] Standing, Requirements

The Supreme Court of Nebraska has applied Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters (AGC) despite the state's repealer statute, noting that Illinois Brick and AGC are analytically distinct.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

HN34 [blue icon] Standing, Requirements

The New Mexico Supreme Court has not addressed whether Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters (AGC) applies to claims under the New Mexico Antitrust Act, but a New Mexico appellate court has concluded that AGC applies.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

HN35 [blue icon] Standing, Requirements

In light of South Dakota's harmonization statute and absent any state-law authority to the contrary, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois concludes that South Dakota would apply Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters to claims under South Dakota law.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

HN36 [blue icon] Standing, Requirements

Absent any authority to the contrary, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois concludes that Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters applies to claims brought under Vermont law in light of Vermont's harmonization statute.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

HN37 [blue icon] Private Actions, State Regulation

Wisconsin courts traditionally look to federal law to interpret substantive violations of the Wisconsin antitrust statutes.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

HN38 [blue icon] Standing, Requirements

Even though Wisconsin does not have a harmonization statute, the fact that courts have long applied federal law to Wisconsin antitrust claims convinces the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois that the Wisconsin Supreme Court likely would apply Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters to antitrust claims brought under Wisconsin law.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Sherman Act

HN39 [blue icon] Standing, Requirements

Although claims brought under the laws of the states in which no named plaintiff purchased goods must be dismissed for lack of U.S. Const. art. III standing, the trend has been to treat the issue as one of statutory standing that can be deferred until class certification. This trend is consistent with recent U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit caselaw holding that the question of who is authorized to bring an action under a statute is one of statutory interpretation; it does not implicate Article III or jurisdiction.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Scope

HN40 [blue icon] Trade Practices & Unfair Competition, State Regulation

The Delaware Consumer Fraud Act, Del. Code Ann. tit. 6, § 2512, requires that the relevant conduct occur in part or wholly within the State. § 2512.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Scope

HN41 [blue icon] Trade Practices & Unfair Competition, State Regulation

North Carolina's Unfair Trade Practices Act reaches only conduct causing a substantial in-state injury, not merely an incidental one. When plaintiffs do not allege that any wrongful conduct occurred in North Carolina, allegations that indirect purchasers paid inflated prices are not sufficient to establish a substantial, in-state injury.

362 F. Supp. 3d 510, *510L 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12157, **12157

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Scope

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

HN42[] Trade Practices & Unfair Competition, State Regulation

A civil plaintiff filing an action under Wisconsin's antitrust act must allege that (1) actionable conduct, such as the formation of a combination or conspiracy, occurred within the state, even if its effects are felt primarily outside Wisconsin; or (2) the conduct complained of substantially affects the people of Wisconsin and has impacts in the state, even if the illegal activity resulting in those impacts occurred predominantly or exclusively outside the state.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Scope

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN43[] Trade Practices & Unfair Competition, State Regulation

Massachusetts's consumer protection statute requires that the actions and transactions constituting the alleged unfair method of competition or the unfair or deceptive act or practice must have occurred primarily and substantially in Massachusetts. Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 93A, § 11. However, the burden of proof shall be upon the person claiming that such transactions and actions did not occur primarily and substantially within the commonwealth. As this presents a factual question, a § 11 cause of action, attacked via a motion to dismiss, should survive a primarily and substantially challenge so long as the complaint alleges that the plaintiff is located, and claims an injury, in Massachusetts.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Scope

HN44[] Trade Practices & Unfair Competition, State Regulation

New Hampshire's consumer protection act applies only to the conduct of any trade or commerce within that state. RSA 358-A:2.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > State Regulation

HN45[] Private Actions, State Regulation

Alabama's antitrust statute regulates conduct occurring intrastate.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Scope

HN46[] Trade Practices & Unfair Competition, State Regulation

The law is well settled that the TTPA applies only to tangible goods, not intangible services. The U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois declines to conclude that software does not constitute a tangible good under the TTPA.

362 F. Supp. 3d 510, *510L 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12157, **12157

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Scope

HN47 [blue icon] State Regulation, Claims

Indirect users can bring claims under the TPPA.

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Appellate Briefs

HN48 [blue icon] Appeals, Appellate Briefs

Arguments raised for the first time in reply briefs are ordinarily waived, and rightly so given the lack of opportunity for the other party to respond to them.

Civil Procedure > Special Proceedings > Class Actions

Civil Procedure > Preliminary Considerations > Federal & State Interrelationships > Erie Doctrine

HN49 [blue icon] Special Proceedings, Class Actions

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that Fed. R. Civ. P. 23-not the New York class action bar-applies in federal court. Justice Scalia's plurality decision took the position that properly enacted federal rules of procedure always apply in federal court. Justice Stevens's concurring opinion took the position that properly enacted federal rules generally apply in federal court, unless the federal rule would displace a state law that is procedural in the ordinary use of the term but is so intertwined with a state right or remedy that it functions to define the scope of the state-created right. Although the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit has not squarely addressed which opinion controls, it otherwise has indicated that Justice Scalia's plurality sets forth the controlling legal standard.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Claims

Civil Procedure > Special Proceedings > Class Actions

Civil Procedure > Preliminary Considerations > Federal & State Interrelationships > Erie Doctrine

HN50 [blue icon] State Regulation, Claims

Colorado's Consumer Protection Act (CCPA) bars class claims for money damages. Colo. Rev. Stat. § 6-1-113\(2\). However, whether the federal procedural rule allowing class actions (i.e., Fed. R. Civ. P. 23) trumps the state-law bar on class actions under the CCPA depends on the two-step analysis established by the U.S. Supreme Court in Shady Grove.

Civil Procedure > Preliminary Considerations > Federal & State Interrelationships > Erie Doctrine

Civil Procedure > Special Proceedings > Class Actions > Notice of Class Action

HN51 [blue icon] Federal & State Interrelationships, Erie Doctrine

If there is no conflict between Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 and state notice requirements, then the state notice requirements would apply.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Claims

HN52 [+] State Regulation, Claims

To state a claim under the Arkansas Deceptive Trade Practices Act, plaintiffs must allege a consumer-oriented act.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Scope

HN53 [+] State Regulation, Claims

The Georgia Fair Business Practices Act (GFBPA) makes unlawful unfair or deceptive acts or practices in the conduct of consumer transactions and consumer acts or practices in trade or commerce but limits the definition of "consumer" to a natural person and "consumer transactions" to those that are primarily for personal, family, or household purposes. O.C.G.A. §§ 10-1-393(a), 10-1-392\(a\)\(6\), 10-1-392\(a\)\(10\). Although business entities may bring suit under the GFBPA, the allegedly deceptive actions and practices that are the subject of the suit must be those directed at natural persons.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Scope

HN54 [+] State Regulation, Claims

The Arkansas Deceptive Trade Practices Act (ADTPA) prohibits unconscionable, false, or deceptive business practices without reference to unfair business practices. Ark. Code Ann. § 4-88-107\(a\)\(10\). The ADTPA further notes that the deceptive and unconscionable trade practices listed are in addition to and do not limit the types of unfair trade practices at common law or under other statutes of the state. Ark. Code Ann. § 4-88-107\(b\). Courts therefore have concluded that claims under the ADTPA are limited to instances of false representation, fraud, or the improper use of economic leverage in a trade transaction. An unconscionable act is an act that affronts the sense of justice, decency, or reasonableness.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Claims

HN55 [+] State Regulation, Claims

A plaintiff may state a claim under the New Mexico consumer protection statute by pleading that defendant either acted in a way that (1) took advantage of the lack of knowledge, ability, experience or capacity of a person to a grossly unfair degree; or (2) resulted in a gross disparity between the value received by a person and the price paid. N.M. Stat. § 57-12-2\(E\) (2016). Nothing in the statute or in caselaw from New Mexico limits consumer protection claims to those involving grossly unequal bargaining power.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > Requirements for Complaint

HN56[] Complaints, Requirements for Complaint

Plaintiffs need only plead facts, not legal theories, in their complaints.

Counsel: [**1] For Authenticom, Inc., Plaintiff: Derek Tam Ho, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Aaron Martin Panner, Joshua Hafenbrack, Kevin J. Miller, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Allison W Reimann, Godfrey & Kahn, Madison, WI; Daniel V. Dorris, David L. Schwarz, Joanna Tianyang Zhang, Michael N. Nemelka, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Jennifer L. Gregor, Godfrey & Kahn SC, Madison, WI; Kendall W Harrison, Godfrey & Kahn, S.c., Madison, WI; Mark W. Hancock, Godfrey & Kahn, S.C., Madison, WI; Samuel Issacharoff, New York, NY.

For Teterboro Automall, Inc., and on behalf of all others similarly situated doing business as, Teterboro Chrysler Dodge Jeep RAM, Plaintiff: Elizabeth Anne McKenna, Peggy J Wedgworth, LEAD ATTORNEYS, PRO HAC VICE, Milberg LLP, New York, NY; James E. Cecchi, Carella Byrne Cecchi Olstein Brody & Agnesso, P.C., Roseland, NJ; John David Hughes, PRO HAC VICE, Milberg Tadler Phillips Grossman LLP, New York City, NY; Justin Nicholas Boley, Kenneth A. Wexler, Wexler Wallace Llp, Chicago, IL; Leonard A Bellavia, PRO HAC VICE, Bellavia [**2] Blatt & Crossett, Pc, Mineola, NY.

For Hartley Buick GMC Truck, Inc., Plaintiff: Robert N. Kaplan, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kaplan, Kilsheimer & Fox LLP, New York, NY; Arthur N. Bailey, PRO HAC VICE, Arthur N. Bailey & Associates, Jamestown, NY; Gary L. Specks, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, Highland Park, IL; Jonathan W. Cuneo, PRO HAC VICE, Cuneo Gilbert & LaDuka, LLP, Washington, DC; Marco Cercone, Victoria Romanenko, PRO HAC VICE, RUPP BAASE PFALZGRAF CUNNINGHAM LLC, Buffalo, NY.

For Motor Vehicle Software Corporation, Plaintiff: Derek Tam Ho, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Aaron Martin Panner, Joshua Hafenbrack, Joshua D. Branson, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Daniel Jeffrey Friedman, Gary K Salomons, GabrielSalomons LLP, Encino, CA; Michael N. Nemelka, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Samuel Issacharoff, New York, NY.

For Kenny Thomas Enterprises, Inc, also known as Olathe Toyota, Plaintiff: Amy Marie Zeman, Michael Lawrence Schrag, LEAD ATTORNEYS, PRO HAC VICE, Gibbs Law Group LLP, Oakland, CA; Bloomfield Joshua, Eric H. Gibbs, [**3] Gibbs Law Group LLP, Oakland, CA; Justin Nicholas Boley, Kenneth A. Wexler, Wexler Wallace Llp, Chicago, IL; Mark H Troutman, Isaac Wiles Burkholder & Teetor LLC, Columbus, OH.

For Cox Automotive, Inc., Plaintiff: Derek Tam Ho, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Aaron Martin Panner, Joshua Hafenbrack, Kevin J. Miller, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Daniel V. Dorris, David L. Schwarz, Michael N. Nemelka, Daniel Guarnera, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Jennifer L. Gregor, Godfrey & Kahn SC, Madison, WI; Kendall W Harrison, Godfrey & Kahn, S.c., Madison, WI; Samuel Issacharoff, New York, NY.

For Autotrader.com, Inc., Dealer Dot Com, Inc., Dealertrack, Inc., Plaintiffs: Derek Tam Ho, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Aaron Martin Panner, Joshua Hafenbrack, Kevin J. Miller, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Daniel V. Dorris, David L. Schwarz, Michael N. Nemelka, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Daniel [**4] Guarnera, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Jennifer L. Gregor, Godfrey & Kahn SC, Madison, WI; Kendall W Harrison, Godfrey & Kahn, S.c., Madison, WI.

For HomeNet, Inc., Kelley Blue Book Co. Inc., vAuto, Inc., VinSolutions, Inc., Xtime, Inc., Plaintiffs: Derek Tam Ho, LEAD ATTORNEY, Aaron Martin Panner, Joshua Hafenbrack, Kevin J. Miller, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Daniel V. Dorris, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C.; Daniel Guarnera, David L. Schwarz, Michael N.

Nemelka, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC. Jennifer L. Gregor, Godfrey & Kahn SC, Madison, WI; Kendall W Harrison, Godfrey & Kahn, S.c., Madison, WI.

For Hoover Automotive, LLC, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated doing business as Hoover Dodge Chrysler Jeep of Summerville, Plaintiffs: Karen Halbert, Mike L. Roberts, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Roberts Law Firm, P.A., Little Rock, AR; Philip N Elbert, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Charles F. Barrett, Neal & Harwell, PLC, Nashville, TN; Shawn M Raiter, Larson & King, LLP, St. Paul, [**5] MN; Peggy J Wedgworth, Milberg LLP, New York, NY.

For Massey Chrysler Center, Inc., individually and as representatives of the classes, Massey Automotive, Inc., individually and as representatives of the classes, Plaintiffs: Michael Stephen Dampier, PRO HAC VICE, The Dampier Law Firm, P.C., Fairhope, AL; Ralph Edward Massey, Jr., Clay Massey & Assoc PC, Mobile, AL.

For 440 Jericho Turnpike Sales LLC, on Behalf of Themselves, and on Behalf of All Others Similarly Situated, Patchogue 112 Motors LLC, on Behalf of Themselves, and on Behalf of All Others Similarly Situated, Plaintiff: Peggy J Wedgworth, LEAD ATTORNEY, Milberg LLP, New York, NY; James E. Cecchi, Carella Byrne Cecchi Olstein Brody & Agnesso, P.C., Roseland, NJ; Justin Nicholas Boley, Kenneth A. Wexler, Wexler Wallace LLP, Chicago, IL; Leonard A Bellavia, PRO HAC VICE, Bellavia Blatt & Crossett, P.C., Mineola, NY.

For JCF Autos LLC, on Behalf of Themselves, and on Behalf of All Others Similarly Situated, Plaintiff: Elizabeth Anne McKenna, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Milberg LLP, New York, NY; Peggy J Wedgworth, LEAD ATTORNEY, Milberg LLP, New York, NY; James E. Cecchi, Carella Byrne Cecchi Olstein Brody & Agnesso, P.C., Roseland, [**6] NJ; John David Hughes, PRO HAC VICE, Milberg Tadler Phillips Grossman LLP, New York City, NY; Justin Nicholas Boley, Kenneth A. Wexler, Wexler Wallace LLP, Chicago, IL; Leonard A Bellavia, PRO HAC VICE, Bellavia Blatt & Crossett, P.C., Mineola, NY.

For John O'Neil Johnson Toyota, LLC, Plaintiff: David Malcolm McMullan, Jr., BARRETT LAW GROUP, PA - Lexington, Lexington, MS; JOHN W BARRETT, DON BARRETT, PA, Lexington, MS; Robert A. Clifford, Clifford Law Offices, P.C., Chicago, IL; Shannon Marie McNulty, Clifford Law Offices, Chicago, IL; Sterling Starns, PRO HAC VICE, Barrett Law Group, P.A., Lexington, MS.

For Northtown Automotive Companies Inc., Plaintiff: Gary L. Specks, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, Highland Park, IL; Robert N. Kaplan, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kaplan, Kilsheimer & Fox LLP, New York, NY.

For Cox Motors N.C. Inc. doing business as Cox Toyota, Plaintiff: Gary L. Specks, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, Highland Park, IL Robert N. Kaplan, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kaplan, Kilsheimer & Fox LLP, New York, NY.

For Baystate Ford Inc. Individually and on Behalf of All Others Similarly Situated, Plaintiff: Frank Anthony Richter, LEAD ATTORNEY, James [**7] E Barz, Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd, Chicago, IL; Alexandra S. Bernay, Carmen A. Medici, Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd LLP, San Diego, CA; David W. Mitchell, Lonnie A. Browne, PRO HAC VICE, Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd LLP, San Diego, CA; George Carlos Aguilar, PRO HAC VICE, Robbins Arroyo LLP, San Diego, CA.

For F.G. Downing Developement, Inc., Plaintiff: Kathleen Ellen Boychuck, LEAD ATTORNEY, Andrew Szot, Lori Ann Fanning, Marvin Alan Miller, Matthew E Van Tine, Miller Law LLC, Chicago, IL.

For Bob Baker Volkswagen, Plaintiff: Brian Morrison, Karin E. Garvey, PRO HAC VICE, Christopher J McDonald, Gregory Asciolla, Labaton Sucharow LLP, New York, NY; Michael Thomas Layden, Richard J. Prendergast, Richard J. Prendergast, Ltd., Chicago, IL; Samuel Issacharoff, New York, NY.

For Pensacola Motor Sales, Inc., Plaintiff: Brian M. Hogan, Douglas A Millen, Michael Jerry Freed, Robert J. Wozniak, Freed Kanner London & Millen, LLC, Bannockburn, IL; Joshua H. Grabar, PRO HAC VICE, Bolognese & Associates, Philadelphia, PA; Marc H. Edelson, Edelson & Associates, LLC, Doylestown, PA.

Motor Vehicle Software Corporation, Plaintiff, Pro se.

Motor Vehicle Software Corporation, Plaintiff, Pro se.

Authenticom [**8] Inc., Plaintiff, Pro se.

For Waconia Dodge, Inc., Plaintiff: Anna M. Horning Nygren, Heidi M. Silton, Lockridge Grindal Nauen P.L.L.P., Minneapolis, MN; Bethany R. Turke, Thomas Arthur Doyle, Wexler Wallace LLP, Chicago, IL; Daniel C Hedlund, Gustafson Gluek PLLC, Minneapolis, MN; Daniel John Walker, PRO HAC VICE, Berger Montague PC, Washington, DC; Justin Nicholas Boley, Kenneth A. Wexler, Wexler Wallace LLP, Chicago, IL; Michelle J. Looby, PRO HAC VICE, Gustafson Gluek PLLC, Minneapolis, MN.

For Autoloop, Plaintiff: Derek Tam Ho, LEAD ATTORNEY, Aaron Martin Panner, Michael N. Nemelka, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC.

For Loop LLC doing business as Autoloop, Plaintiff: Collin Matthew Bruck, Richard J. Prendergast, Ltd., Chicago, IL; Michael Thomas Layden, Richard J. Prendergast, Richard J. Prendergast, Ltd., Chicago, IL.

For Apex Motor Company doing business as Shearer Acura, Plaintiff: Robert A. Clifford, Shannon Marie McNulty, Victoria Romanenko, Clifford Law Offices, P.C., Chicago, IL.

For Petri Imports, LLC, Marshall Chrysler Jeep Dodge, LLC, Cliff Harris Ford, Inc., H&H Continental Motors, Inc., Pitre, Inc., Continental Autos, Inc., Aca Motors, Inc., [**9] NV Autos, Inc., Warrensburg Chrysler Dodge Jeep, LLC, Naperville Zoom Cars, Inc., Waconia Dodge, Inc., Jim Marsh American Corporation, Cherry Hill Jaguar, Continental Class Motors, Inc., Jericho Turnpike Sales. LLC, Gregoris Motors, Inc., Kenny Thomas Enterprises, Inc., HDA Motors, Inc., 5800 Countryside, LLC, Plaintiffs: Peggy J Wedgworth, Milberg LLP, New York, NY.

For Baystate Ford, Inc., Plaintiff: Lonnie A. Browne, PRO HAC VICE, Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd LLP, San Diego, CA; Peggy J Wedgworth, Milberg LLP, New York, NY.

For CDK Global, LLC, Defendant: Andrew Stanley Marovitz, Britt Marie Miller, Matthew David Provance, Michael Anthony Scodro, Mayer Brown LLP, Chicago, IL; Jeffrey Allan Simmons, Foley & Lardner LLP, Madison, WI; John Nadolenco, Mayer, Brown & Platt, Los Angeles, CA; Joseph S Harper, Foley & Lardner, Madison, WI; MICHAEL MARTINEZ, MAYER BROWN LLP, NEW YORK, NY; Mark W. Ryan, Mayer Brown, Washington, DC; Michelle M. Umberger, Perkins Coie LLP, Madison, WI; William N. Reed, BAKER, DONELSON, BEARMAN, CALDWELL & BERKOWITZ, PC - Jackson, Jackson, MS.

For Reynolds and Reynolds Company The, Defendant, Counter Claimant: James Landon McGinnis, PRO HAC VICE, Amar Shrinivas [**10] Naik, Dylan I. Ballard, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP, San Francisco, CA; Audrea Kristine Gulley, Gibbs & Bruns, L.L.P., Houston, TX; Brandon M. Lewis, PRO HAC VICE, Perkins Coie, Brice A. Wilkinson, Madison, WI; Brian T. Ross, Houston, TX; Caroline Ayres Teichner, Kathleen A. Stetsko, Perkins Coie LLP, Chicago, IL; Charles Grant Curtis, Jr., Jesse Jonas Bair, John S. Skilton, Michelle M. Umberger, Perkins Coie LLP, Madison, WI; Justin David Patrick, Gibbs & Bruns, LLP, Houston, TX; Kathy D. Patrick, Houston, TX; Leo Caseria, PRO HAC VICE, Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP, Los Angeles, CA; Michael P. A. Cohen Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton, LLP, Washington, DC; Ross M. MacDonald, Houston, TX; TYLER BAKER, SHEPPARD MULLIN RICHTER & HAMPTON LLP, NEW YORK, NY.

For Computerized Vehicle Registration, Inc., also known as CDK Vehicle Registration, Inc., Defendant: Britt Marie Miller, Mayer Brown LLP, Chicago, IL; John Nadolenco, Mayer, Brown & Platt, Los Angeles, CA; Mark W. Ryan, Mayer Brown, Washington, DC.

For XCELERATED, LLC, XCELERATED DATA LLC, PENSA LLC, Respondents: James Robert Irving, LEAD ATTORNEY, Bingham Greenebaum Doll LLP, Louisville, KY.

For Dominion Enterprises, [**11] Inc., Respondent: Deepti Bansal, Marc G Schildkraut, PRO HAC VICE, Cooley LLP, Washington, DC; Jeffrey Thomas Norberg, Neal & McDevitt, Northfield, IL.

For Authenticom, Inc., Counter Defendant: Derek Tam Ho, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Aaron Martin Panner, Joshua Hafenbrack, Kevin J. Miller, PRO HAC VICE, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Allison W Reimann, Godfrey & Kahn, Madison, WI; Daniel V. Dorris, David L. Schwarz, Joanna Tianyang Zhang, Michael N. Nemelka, Kellogg, Hansen, Todd, Figel & Frederick, P.L.L.C., Washington, DC; Jennifer L. Gregor, Godfrey & Kahn SC, Madison, WI;

Kendall W Harrison, Godfrey & Kahn, S.c., Madison, WI; Mark W. Hancock, Godfrey & Kahn, S.C., Madison, WI; Samuel Issacharoff, New York, NY.

For CDK Global, LLC, Defendant: Andrew Stanley Marovitz, Britt Marie Miller, Matthew David Provance, Michael Anthony Scodro, Mayer Brown LLP, Chicago, IL; Jeffrey Allan Simmons, Foley & Lardner LLP, Madison, WI; John Nadolenco, Mayer, Brown & Platt, Los Angeles, CA; Joseph S Harper, Foley & Lardner, Madison, WI; MICHAEL MARTINEZ, MAYER BROWN LLP, NEW YORK, NY; Mark W. [**12] Ryan, Mayer Brown, Washington, DC; Michelle M. Umberger, Perkins Coie LLP, Madison, WI; William N. Reed, BAKER, DONELSON, BEARMAN, CALDWELL & BERKOWITZ, PC - Jackson, Jackson, MS.

Judges: Robert M. Dow, Jr., United States District Judge.

Opinion by: Robert M. Dow, Jr.

Opinion

---

[*519] MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

Before the Court are Defendant CDK Global, LLC's motion to compel arbitration and stay claims, or, in the alternative, to [*520] dismiss the dealership consolidated class action complaint [262], and Plaintiffs' unopposed motions for leave to submit supplemental authority [366; 420]. Plaintiffs' unopposed motions for leave to submit supplemental authority [366; 420] are granted. The Court considers those submissions as well as Defendant's responses (in its reply and in its own supplemental brief) in ruling on the pending motion to dismiss. For the reasons set forth below, Defendant's motion to dismiss in favor of arbitration is denied, and its alternative motion to dismiss is granted in part and denied in part.

I. Background<sup>1</sup>

Defendants CDK Global, LLC ("CDK") and Reynolds and Reynolds Company ("Reynolds") provide Dealer Management System ("DMS") software and services to automobile dealerships throughout the United States, [*13] including in Illinois. [198 (Compl.), at ¶¶ 51-52.] In addition to providing DMS services, CDK and Reynolds also provide data integration services ("DIS") indirectly to dealerships throughout the United States, including in Illinois. [Id.] Plaintiffs are automobile dealerships across the country who are purchasing and/or who have purchased DMS services from CDK or Reynolds. [Id. at ¶¶ 26-50.] Plaintiffs purport to bring this class action against Defendants CDK and Reynolds for alleged violations of the Sherman Act and state antitrust and consumer protection laws. [Id. at 5.] Plaintiffs allege that Defendants unlawfully colluded and conspired to restrain and/or eliminate competition by charging supracompetitive prices in the markets for: (1) DMS software services; and (2) DIS. [Id. at ¶ 1.]

A. The DMS Market

The DMS, sometimes described as the "central nervous system" for dealerships, is an enterprise software system designed specifically for automobile dealerships. [Id. at ¶ 3.] The DMS functions as the dealerships' central database and repository of all its operational information, including information regarding sales, financing, inventory management (both vehicles and parts), repair and service, [*14] accounting, payroll, human resources, marketing, and car manufacturer certifications. [Id. at ¶¶ 3, 61.] The physical storage of the data is either onsite at the

---

<sup>1</sup> For the purposes of this motion to dismiss, the Court accepts as true all of Plaintiffs' well-pleaded factual allegations and draws all reasonable inferences in Plaintiffs' favor. Killingsworth v. HSBC Bank Nev., N.A., 507 F.3d 614, 618 (7th Cir. 2007).

dealerships, at private data centers operated by the DMS provider, or with cloud-based data storage companies. [Id. at ¶61.] The DMS includes a database and data storage component that allows dealerships to enter and store data in real time. [Id. at ¶ 3.]

Switching DMS providers is difficult, expensive, and disruptive to a dealership's business. [Id. at ¶ 4.] Changing DMS providers requires entirely new hardware and software. [Id.] It can cost as much as $50,000 up front to change DMS providers. [Id.] It typically takes dealerships a year or more to prepare for changing DMS providers. [Id.] In November 2016, CDK's CEO acknowledged that "switching DMS providers can be very difficult. It [is] quite a process [to] change and takes time, which is part of the reason that many dealers are hesitant to switch." [Id. at ¶ 66.] Switching DMS providers is not only a costly and lengthy procedure, it is also extremely risky. [Id. at ¶ 67.] Dealers store vital data on their DMSs, and access to their data is crucial to the daily operation [**15] of their business. [Id.] DMS providers control access to dealers' DMSs and can restrict or deny access to the DMSs, severely [*521] crippling the dealers' businesses as retribution for changing DMS providers. [Id.]

CDK and Reynolds are in the business of providing DMS software and services to dealerships like Plaintiffs. [Id. at ¶ 2.] Together they control approximately 75 percent of the United States DMS market measured by the number of franchised automobile dealerships using their systems, with CDK controlling approximately 45 percent of the DMS market and Reynolds controlling approximately 30 percent of the DMS market. [Id.] The remaining 25 percent is divided among other smaller DMS providers that typically service smaller dealerships in niche submarkets. [Id. at ¶ 2 n.1.] CDK and Reynolds have even higher market shares when measured by revenue, with CDK having approximately $2.2 billion in total annual revenue and Reynolds having approximately $1.7 billion in total annual revenue. [Id.]

Both CDK and Reynolds have previously indicated that dealers own the data on their DMSs. For example, Steve Annen (CDK's former CEO) stated, "I don't know how you can ever make the opinion that the data [**16] is yours to govern and to preclude others from having access to it, when in fact it's really the data belonging to the dealer. As long as they grant permission, how would you ever go against that wish?" [Id. at ¶ 74.] Howard Gardner (CDK's Vice President of Data Strategy) has stated that CDK "has always understood that dealerships own their data and enjoy having choices on how best to share and utilize that data with others." [Id.] Matt Parsons (CDK's Vice President of Sales and Marketing) has stated, "We're not going to limit the ability of a dealer to give an ID to someone else to, in essence, dial into their system. That is the dealer's right. We have no right to tell them they can't do that." [Id.] Similarly, Reynolds spokesman Tom Schwartz stated that "[t]he data belongs to the dealers. We all agree on that." [Id.]

B. The DIS Market

CDK and Reynolds also provide DIS separate from their DMS offerings. [Id. at ¶ 5.] CDK's data integration service is known as Third Party Access ("3PA"), and Reynolds's data integration service is known as Reynolds Certified Interface ("RCI"). [Id. at ¶ 71.] Although 3PA and RCI only provide DIS for Defendants' respective DMSs, CDK also owns two independent [**17] data integrators—Digital Motorworks ("DMI") and IntegraLink—that provide DIS with respect to data stored on others' DMSs (e.g., Reynolds) as well. [Id. at ¶ 76.] DIS are critical to the proper functioning of dealerships. [Id. at ¶ 5.] DIS enable dealers and third-party software application providers (also known as vendors) to extract, organize, and integrate the dealers' data on their DMSs into a usable format. [Id.]

To effectively run their dealerships, dealers engage vendors to provide necessary services such as inventory management, customer relationship management, warranty services, repair orders, and electronic vehicle registration and titling. [Id.] For example, a dealer might engage a vendor to electronically register new automobiles upon sale. [Id. at ¶ 73.] In providing services to dealers, vendors need to access and utilize DMS data. [Id.] A single dealership typically uses multiple vendors, with each vendor requiring access to the dealership's data stored on its DMS. [Id.] Vendors generally engage DIS providers that charge vendors for their services. [Id. at ¶ 5.] Although vendors have the dealers' authorization to access and utilize the data on their DMSs, vendors generally [**18] cannot obtain access to the data in a usable format directly from dealers. [Id. at ¶ 75.] To access and utilize dealer data, vendors engage [*522] data integrators to extract, format, and organize the data. [Id.] The data integrators access the data stored on the DMS and convert it into a form suitable for the specific service provided by the vendor. [Id.]

Historically, the DIS market was active, with numerous DIS providers competing to provide affordable, secure, and reliable access to DMS data for dealerships and vendors. [Id. at ¶ 6.] In 2006, Reynolds began selectively and sporadically blocking data integrators from accessing dealer data on the Reynolds DMS by disabling data integrators' dealer-created login credentials. [Id. at ¶ 77.] CDK differentiated itself and the CDK DMS from Reynolds by publicly touting the openness of its DMS. [Id.] CDK repeatedly vowed (including in public statements by its CEO and top marketing officers) that it would not block independent data integrators from accessing dealer data on its DMS. [Id.] CDK marketed its "open" system directly to dealers and issued press releases stressing that it "believes in the fair competitive environment and does not use its [**19] leverage through supply of the dealer management system to reduce competition through the restriction of data access." [Id. at ¶ 78.] CDK was successful in marketing its "open" DMS to dealers as a competitive advantage over the Reynolds DMS, and dealers purchased DMS services from CDK based in large part on CDK's public representations about the openness of its DMS. [Id.] As a result, CDK gained market share from Reynolds. [Id.] In 2013, Reynolds began vigorously blocking data integrators. [Id. at ¶ 79.] CDK, however, continued to allow open access to its DMSs and to compete with Reynolds. [Id.]

C. Alleged Agreement

Despite CDK's success in wresting market share away from Reynolds, its biggest competitor in the DMS market, competition between Reynolds and CDK suddenly ceased in 2015. [Id. at ¶ 80.] Plaintiff alleges that this was the result of horizontal agreements between CDK and Reynolds to restrain competition in the DMS and DIS markets. Specifically, CDK and Reynolds agreed to cooperate in closing their respective DMSs. [Id. at ¶ 81.] In February 2015, CDK and Reynolds entered into three written agreements: (1) the Data Exchange Agreement or "Wind Down" Agreement; (2) the 3PA Agreement; [**20] and (3) the RCI Agreement. [Id. at ¶ 82.]

The Data Exchange Agreement provides that CDK is to wind down its data integration business on Reynolds's DMS. [Id. at ¶ 83.] In other words, CDK would stop providing services to dealers relating to the third-party integration of data stored on Reynolds's DMS. [Id.] At the same time, Reynolds agreed not to block CDK's access to Reynolds's DMS during the wind-down period, which lasts until 2020. [Id.] During that wind-down period, Defendants agreed that CDK could continue to extract dealer data from Reynolds's DMS. [Id. at ¶ 84.] At the same time, under § 4.2 of the Data Exchange Agreement, CDK was to notify its vendor clients of its intent to wind down its data integration related to Reynolds's DMS. [Id.] Under § 4.4 of the Data Exchange Agreement, CDK was to assist and cooperate with Reynolds's efforts to communicate with CDK's vendor clients and transition them to RCI. [Id.] In connection with that effort, CDK agreed to provide Reynolds with full information about the vendors CDK served, including their names, DMS numbers, store numbers, branch numbers, user logins, specific data access provided by CDK, data interfaces, the frequency of the data provided, the deadlines for data delivery, and the format of the data. [Id. [**21] at ¶ 85.] The Data Exchange Agreement also includes a "Prohibition on Knowledge Transfer and DMS Access" provision, whereby CDK and Reynolds each agreed not to provide DIS [*523] with respect to data on the other's DMS. [Id. at ¶ 86.]

The two other written agreements made by Defendants in February 2015 were (1) the 3PA Agreement; and (2) the RCI Agreement. [Id. at ¶ 87.] These two agreements, collectively referred to as the "Data Integration Agreements," provided CDK and Reynolds reciprocal access to each other's DIS programs—the 3PA and RCI programs, respectively. [Id.] In the agreements, Reynolds received five free years of 3PA access. [Id. at ¶ 88.] Reynolds also agreed to access CDK's DMS exclusively through 3PA, and further agreed that it would not "otherwise access, retrieve, license, or otherwise transfer any data from or to a CDK system (including, without limitation, pursuant to any 'hostile interface') for itself or any other entity" or contract with any third parties to access the system. [Id.] The Data Integration Agreements also provided that CDK and Reynolds would deny data integrators access to each other's DMSs. [Id. at ¶ 89.]

Plaintiffs also allege that Defendants agreed to [**22] force vendors to use Defendants (or their affiliates) to access their respective DMSs. [Id. at ¶ 171.] As evidence of this agreement, the complaint references an April 2016 conversation between Dan McCray (CDK's Vice President of Product Management) and Stephen Cottrell (CEO of Authenticom, a competing data integrator), in which Mr. McCray stated:

[W]e've entered into an agreement with Reynolds and Reynolds, okay? That agreement specifically says that we're going to support each other's third party interfaces, and we're working collaboratively to remove all hostile integrators from our DMS system.

[Id. at ¶ 101.] Similarly, in March 2015, Robert Schaefer (Reynolds's Vice President of OEM Relations, Data Services, and Security) told Mr. Cottrell: "We've made agreements with the other major DMS providers to support each other's third-party access agreements and to block independent integrators such as Authenticom." [Id. at ¶ 100.]

Defendants have claimed that their agreements with each other serve an important business justification: the need to protect their systems and the data on those systems from cybersecurity threats. However, Plaintiffs allege that Defendants' security justification [**23] is pretextual. [Id. at ¶¶ 153-64.] Plaintiffs allege that "Automotive News reported that '[a] vendor executive who asked not to be named called the data-access cost a surcharge under the guise of data security.'" [Id. at ¶ 155.] Along the same lines, a CDK employee has made statements indicating that the security justification really was a "message" used by Defendants to justify increased fees, stating "[i]f we are going with security as our message, I feel we MUST incorporate language into our contract * * * I feel a discussion around what these additional security items will be is warranted—once we have agreement on these security items it will help us update the managed data services agreement and further refine our message to the market." [Id. at ¶ 156.] Plaintiffs have identified similar statements indicating that the claimed security justification was pretextual. [Id. at ¶¶ 157-64.]

Plaintiffs allege that CDK and Reynolds have been able to impose massive price increases on vendors as a result of their agreements. [Id. at ¶ 134.] These increased fees are passed on to dealers. [Id.] Vendors have acknowledged that they pass increased data integration fees on to dealers. [Id. at ¶ [**24] 135.] For example, a vendor informed a dealer that it was raising the fees it charged the dealer by $500 a month as a result of CDK's higher integration fees. [Id. at ¶ 141.] Plaintiffs also allege that the agreements between [*524] CDK and Reynolds have decreased the functionality of their DMSs. The dealers' ability to freely access their own data on their DMSs through third-parties was an important feature of their DMSs and their functionality. [Id. at ¶ 148.] Through their unlawful conduct, however, Defendants eliminated this feature, thereby restraining competition and increasing prices paid by the dealers for their DMSs. [Id. at ¶ 149.]

D. Alleged Exclusive Dealing

Plaintiffs also allege that CDK began canceling and renegotiating its 3PA vendor contracts to impose exclusive dealing provisions on vendors shortly after entering the Data Exchange Agreement. [Id. at ¶ 111.] These new 3PA contracts (also referred to as the "Managed Interface Agreements") required vendors to use 3PA if they wished to integrate CDK DMS data. [Id.] To ensure that vendors signed on to the new contracts, CDK sent an initial letter to dealers warning that access to its DMS by third-party integrators would cease. [**25] [Id. at ¶ 112.] Subsequently, in September 2015, CDK sent dealers a letter indicating that it "intend[ed] to remove the majority of unauthorized third party [sic] access methods by Dec 31, 2016." [Id. at ¶ 112.] CDK employees were instructed that if any vendor failed to migrate to 3PA by December 31, 2016, the vendor's access to CDK's DMS would be disabled. [Id.] Plaintiffs allege that vendors agreed to the Managed Interface Agreements under threat of losing access to necessary data. [Id. at ¶ 113.]

The Managed Interface Agreements contained provisions explicitly prohibiting vendors from obtaining dealer data from anyone other than CDK. [Id. at ¶ 114.] The contracts were entered on a vendor-by-vendor basis, not an application-by-application basis, so if a vendor wanted to use CDK's integration services for one application, the vendor also had to use CDK's product for all of its other applications. [Id.] The contracts states: "Vendor agrees that it will, beginning on the date CDK certifies the use of the first Application with the CDK Interface System, access data on, and provide data to, CDK Systems exclusively through the Managed Interface System [a.k.a. 3PA] * * *

[and] will not (i) [**26] * * * transfer any data from or to a CDK System * * * or (ii) contract with * * * any third party * * * to * * * transfer any data from or to a CDK System." [Id.]

The Managed Interface Agreement also includes what Plaintiffs characterize as a pricefixing agreement, which provides that a vendor "shall never indicate in any way to any CDK Vendor Client that any increase in any price charged by [v]endor to any CDK Vendor Client is in reaction to, or in any other way associated with, any modification in the price charged by CDK hereunder with respect to [v]endor's use of the CDK Interface System." [Id. at ¶ 119.] The contract also states that the vendor "shall not include any 'interface' fee, DMS access fee or any other similar fee related to the use of the CDK Interface System in any of its invoices to its customers [dealers] or otherwise include any direct or indirect indication to its customers (in its invoices or otherwise) of the fees charged by CDK hereunder." [Id.] In a March 3, 2016 internal email, one CDK employee stated, "CDK's position is that the vendor should include the integration in the price of their product as a cost of doing business and not something they line item with [**27] the dealer. Line iteming of integration fees along with claims of high DMS fees by vendors (most of them exaggerated) only leads to questions from our dealers about what CDK actually charges for integration." [Id.]

E. Reynolds Arbitration Agreement

Six named Plaintiffs (collectively the "Reynolds Dealers") signed agreements [*525] that oblige them to resolve certain claims against Reynolds in Dayton, Ohio. Relevant to this order is a binding arbitration provision included in every Reynolds Dealers' contract. The provision states in relevant part:

Any disputes between us related directly or indirectly to an Order<sup>2</sup> will be settled by binding arbitration * * * under the American Arbitration Association Rules * * * It does not matter whether the controversy is based on contract, tort, strict liability, or other legal theory. * * * The arbitration will be held in Dayton, Ohio.

[255-9, at 12.] Both CDK and Reynolds moved to dismiss Plaintiffs' claims in favor of arbitration pursuant to this arbitration agreement or, in the alternative, dismiss Plaintiffs' claims for failure to state a claim. Defendant Reynolds subsequently withdrew its motion. Before the Court is the motion to dismiss filed by Defendant [**28] CDK.<sup>3</sup>

II. Legal Standard

HN1 To survive a Federal Rule of Civil Procedure ("Rule") 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, the complaint first must comply with Rule 8(a) by providing "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief," Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2), such that the defendant is given "fair notice of what the * * * claim is and the grounds upon which it rests." Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) (quoting Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 47, 78 S. Ct. 99, 2 L. Ed. 2d 80 (1957)) (alteration in original). Second, the factual allegations in the complaint must be sufficient to raise the possibility of relief above the "speculative level." E.E.O.C. v. Concentra Health Servs., Inc., 496 F.3d 773, 776 (7th Cir. 2007) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). "A pleading that offers 'labels and conclusions' or a 'formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do.'" Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). Dismissal for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) is proper "when the allegations in a complaint, however true, could not raise a claim of entitlement to relief." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 558. In reviewing a motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6), the Court accepts as true all of Plaintiffs' well-pleaded factual allegations and draws all reasonable inferences in Plaintiffs' favor. Killingsworth v. HSBC Bank Nev., N.A., 507 F.3d 614, 618 (7th Cir. 2007).

---

<sup>2</sup> "Order" is defined as "the Master Agreement and/or an Exhibit that has been accepted by [Reynolds]." [255-10, at 3.]

<sup>3</sup> Because Reynolds withdrew its motion, all references to Defendant below are to Defendant CDK.

III. Analysis

A. Arbitration

Although there is no agreement between Plaintiffs and Defendant to arbitrate Plaintiffs' claims, Defendant argues that the Reynolds [**29] Dealers' agreement to arbitrate with Reynolds covers the claims at issue in this case and extends to the claims brought against CDK under the doctrine of equitable estoppel. Plaintiffs argue that (1) its claims are outside the scope the arbitration agreement, (2) CDK has not shown that it is entitled to invoke the doctrine of equitable estoppel, and (3) CDK has waived any right to seek arbitration of Plaintiffs' claims.

Before turning to the merits of these arguments, some discussion of the federal policy favoring arbitration is warranted. HN2[↑] Pursuant to the Federal Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C. §§ 1 et seq. [*526] ("FAA"), "a contract evidencing a transaction involving commerce to settle by arbitration a controversy thereafter arising out of such contract or transaction * * * shall be valid, irrevocable, and enforceable, save upon such grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract." 9 U.S.C. § 2. "The effect of the section is to create a body of federal substantive law of arbitrability, applicable to any arbitration agreement within the coverage of the [FAA]." Moses H. Cone Mem'l Hosp. v. Mercury Const. Corp., 460 U.S. 1, 24, 103 S. Ct. 927, 74 L. Ed. 2d 765 (1983); see also Int'l Ins. Agency Servs., LLC v. Revios Reinsurance U.S., Inc., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22229, 2007 WL 951943, at *2 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 27, 2007) ("Arbitrability is governed by federal law." (citation omitted)). Section 2 of the FAA is "a congressional declaration of a liberal federal policy favoring [**30] arbitration agreements, notwithstanding any state substantive or procedural policies to the contrary." Moses H. Cone, 460 U.S. at 24. Thus, "[w]hen the parties have agreed to arbitrate some matters pursuant to an arbitration clause, the law's permissive policies in respect to arbitration counsel that any doubts concerning the scope of arbitral issues should be resolved in favor of arbitration." Local 73, Serv. Emples. Int'l Union v. UChicago Argonne, LLC, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13967, 2011 WL 635862, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 11, 2011) (quoting Granite Rock Co. v. Int'l Bhd. Of Teamsters, 561 U.S. 287, 298, 130 S. Ct. 2847, 177 L. Ed. 2d 567 (2010)). "[A]n order to arbitrate the particular grievance should not be denied unless it may be said with positive assurance that the arbitration clause is not susceptible of an interpretation that covers the asserted dispute." Int'l Bhd. of Elec. Workers, Local 21 v. Illinois Bell Tel. Co., 491 F.3d 685, 687-88 (7th Cir. 2007) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). With these principles in mind, the Court turns to the merits of the parties' arguments regarding the Reynolds Dealers' arbitration agreement with Reynolds.

i. Arbitrability

CDK moves for dismissal of the Reynolds Dealers' claims against it in favor of arbitration. As a threshold issue, the Court must address whether the issue of arbitrability properly is before this Court. Reynolds argued that the issue of arbitrability itself was subject to arbitration pursuant its agreements with the Reynolds Dealers. [255, at 21-23.] In their omnibus response [**31] to Defendants' motions to dismiss, Plaintiffs argue that agreements to arbitrate the issue of arbitrability only are binding on signatories. [358, at 34.] CDK therefore would not be entitled to invoke Reynolds's agreement to arbitrate arbitrability of Plaintiffs' substantive claims. Kramer v. Toyota Motor Corp., 705 F.3d 1122, 1127 (9th Cir. 2013) ("Given the absence of clear and unmistakable evidence that Plaintiffs agreed to arbitrate arbitrability with nonsignatories, the district court had the authority to decide whether the instant dispute is arbitrable." (citation omitted)); Nat'l Oilwell Varco, L.P. v. Sadagopan, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1080, 2018 WL 276364, at *2 (S.D. Tex. Jan. 3, 2018) ("The cases that do address using equitable estoppel to allow a nonsignatory to an arbitration agreement to enforce that agreement against a signatory treat this gateway issue as for the court to determine, except in circumstances not present here."); see also AT&T Technologies, Inc. v. Communications Workers of America, 475 U.S. 643, 649, 106 S. Ct. 1415, 89 L. Ed. 2d 648 (1986) HN3[↑] ("Unless the parties clearly and unmistakably provide otherwise, the question of whether the parties agreed to arbitrate is to be decided by the court, not the arbitrator." (collecting cases)). CDK does not respond to this argument or otherwise argue that it is entitled to the benefit of Reynolds's agreement to arbitrate arbitrability.<sup>4</sup> [*527] Accordingly, the Court proceeds on the assumption that the Court has authority [***32] to address the threshold issue of the arbitrability of Plaintiffs' claims against CDK.

ii. Equitable Estoppel

HN4[] CDK argues that because the Reynolds Dealers' claims relate to their contracts with Reynolds, in which the Reynolds Dealers agreed to arbitrate certain claims against Reynolds, the Reynolds Dealers also must arbitrate their related claims against CDK. "[A] party cannot be required to submit to arbitration any dispute which he has not agreed so to submit." United Steelworkers of Am. v. Warrior & Gulf Nav. Co., 363 U.S. 574, 582, 80 S. Ct. 1347, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1409 (1960). Arbitration "is a matter of consent, not coercion." Volt Information Sciences v. Board of Trustees, 489 U.S. 468, 479, 109 S. Ct. 1248, 103 L. Ed. 2d 488 (1989). However, the "mere fact" that parties are not "signatories to [an] agreement does not defeat their right to compel arbitration." Hoffman v. Deloitte & Touche, LLP, 143 F. Supp. 2d 995, 1004 (N.D. Ill. 2001). Still, "[a]rbitration agreements apply to nonsignatories only in rare circumstances." I Sports v. IMG Worldwide, Inc., 157 Ohio App. 3d 593, 2004- Ohio 3631, 813 N.E.2d 4, 8 (Ohio Ct. App. 2004). Here, CDK contends that the Reynolds Dealers are bound to arbitrate their claims against CDK under the doctrine of equitable estoppel.

HN5[] State law governs who is bound by agreements to arbitrate. Arthur Andersen LLP v. Carlisle, 556 U.S. 624, 630, 129 S. Ct. 1896, 173 L. Ed. 2d 832 (2009). The parties dispute whether Ohio law or Illinois law applies to CDK's estoppel argument. CDK contends that Ohio law applies because Reynolds's contract with the Reynolds Dealers is governed by Ohio law. Plaintiffs contend that Illinois law applies because equitable [***33] estoppel is a tort doctrine and Illinois law applies under the most significant relationship test to tort claims brought in Illinois courts. The Court need not decide which state's law applies, however, as the outcome is the same under both Illinois and Ohio law. Coexist Found., Inc. v. Fehrenbacher, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 101705, 2016 WL 4091623, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 2, 2016) ("The Court need not decide which state's law applies as the outcome is the same under both."), aff'd, 865 F.3d 901 (7th Cir. 2017).

HN6[] Under Illinois law, a party cannot enforce an arbitration agreement under an equitable estoppel theory without detrimental reliance. Warciak v. Subway Restaurants, Inc., 880 F.3d 870, 872 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 138 S. Ct. 2692, 201 L. Ed. 2d 1076 (2018) (applying Illinois law); see also Ervin v. Nokia, Inc., 349 Ill. App. 3d 508, 517, 812 N.E.2d 534, 285 Ill. Dec. 714 (2004). Here, CDK does not even argue that it can establish detrimental reliance. Accordingly, CDK cannot invoke equitable estoppel under Illinois law.

HN7[] Similarly, under Ohio law, detrimental reliance is necessary to invoke the doctrine of equitable estoppel. Ohio State Bd. of Pharmacy v. Frantz, 51 Ohio St. 3d 143, 555 N.E.2d 630, 633 (Ohio 1990) ("The party claiming the estoppel must have relied on conduct of an adversary in such a manner as to change his position for the worse and that reliance must have been reasonable."); Glidden Co. v. Lumbermens Mut. Cas. Co., 112 Ohio St. 3d 470, 2006- Ohio 6553, 861 N.E.2d 109, 119 (Ohio 2006) ("Equitable estoppel does not apply when there is no actual or constructive fraud and no detrimental reliance[.]"). [*528] The same contractual and estoppel principles apply to determining what parties are bound by an [***34] agreement to arbitrate. Warciak v. Subway Restaurants, Inc., 880 F.3d 870, 872 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 138 S. Ct. 2692, 201 L. Ed. 2d 1076 (2018);<sup>5</sup> Judge v. Unigroup, Inc., 2017

---

<sup>4</sup> Although CDK adopts the arguments advanced by Reynolds in support of the application of the arbitration agreement, Reynolds did not need to address whether the threshold issue of arbitrability applies to nonsignatories, as Reynolds was a signatory. And CDK's own briefs do not address the issue.

<sup>5</sup> CDK argues that Warciak is distinguishable because it involved the application of Illinois law. HN8[] However, in Warciak, the Seventh Circuit cited to the Supreme Court's decision in Arthur Andersen LLP v. Carlisle, 556 U.S. 624, 129 S. Ct. 1896, 173 L. Ed. 2d 832 (2009), for the proposition that traditional state-law principles such as assumption, agency, and estoppel apply to determining when a contract such as an agreement to arbitrate can be enforced against nonparties. Warciak, 880 F.3d at 872.

U.S. Dist. LEXIS 145576, 2017 WL 3971457, at *5 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 8, 2017) (holding that Ohio law requires detrimental reliance to compel arbitration with a nonsignatory of an arbitration agreement).

CDK has not cited to any authority indicating that the Ohio courts would apply a different equitable estoppel standard in the context of enforcing arbitration agreements against nonsignatories.<sup>6</sup> The only Ohio case cited by CDK is I Sports v. IMG Worldwide, Inc., which recognizes that other courts have enforced arbitration agreements against nonsignatories when (1) a signatory must rely on the terms of the written agreement to assert claims against a non-signatory, or (2) the signatory alleges substantially interdependent and concerted misconduct by the non-signatory and one or more signatories. 157 Ohio App. 3d 593, 2004- Ohio 3631, 813 N.E.2d 4, 9 (Ohio App. Ct. 2004). However, the court in I Sports concluded that the nonsignatory did not satisfy either standard. The Court therefore did not affirmatively conclude that either showing was sufficient to invoke equitable estoppel under Ohio law.<sup>7</sup> Even if a nonsignatory has to show that the signatory relied on the written terms of the contract or that the signatory alleges substantially interdependent misconduct [**35] in order to enforce an arbitration agreement, that does not mean that detrimental reliance also is not required. As the Seventh Circuit has explained, even in the arbitration context, "the court must apply traditional state promissory estoppel principles to decide whether a non-party should be bound by the terms of another's contract." Warcia, 880 F.3d at 872. Because detrimental reliance is required to invoke equitable estoppel under Ohio law, and because CDK does not even argue that it can show detrimental reliance, CDK cannot invoke equitable estoppel under Ohio law to force the Reynolds Dealers to arbitrate their claims against CDK.

[*529] iii. Waiver

The Reynolds Dealers also argue that CDK waived any right to seek arbitration of their claims by failing diligently to assert its claimed right to arbitrate. HN9 [↑] "Despite the federal policy favoring arbitration, a contractual right to arbitration can be waived." Kawasaki Heavy Indus. v. Bombardier Rec. Prods., 660 F.3d 988, 994 (7th Cir. 2011) (citing St. Mary's Med. Ctr. of Evansville, Inc. v. Disco Aluminum Prods. Co., Inc., 969 F.2d 585, 587 (7th Cir. 1992)). A waiver of a contractual right to invoke arbitration can be implied or express. Cabinetree of Wisconsin v. Kraftmaid Cabinetry, 50 F.3d 388, 390 (7th Cir. 1995). "For waiver of the right to arbitrate to be inferred, [the Court] must determine that, considering the totality of the circumstances, a party acted inconsistently with the [**36] right to arbitrate." Kawasaki Heavy Indus., 660 F.3d at 994.

"Although a variety of factors may be considered, diligence or a lack thereof should weigh heavily in the court's determination of whether a party implicitly waived its right to arbitrate." Halim v. Great Gatsby's Auction Gallery, Inc., 516 F.3d 557, 562 (7th Cir. 2008) (citation omitted). The Seventh Circuit therefore has directed courts to consider whether "the party seeking arbitration * * * [did] all it could reasonably have been expected to do to make the earliest feasible determination of whether to proceed judicially or by arbitration[.]" Smith v. GC Servs. Ltd. P'ship, 907 F.3d 495, 499 (7th Cir. 2018) (quoting Cabinetree of Wisconsin, 50 F.3d at 391 (internal quotation marks omitted)). Other considerations "include whether the allegedly defaulting party participated in litigation,

---

Thus, pursuant to Arthur Andersen and Warcia, the Court looks to Ohio's traditional equitable estoppel principles to determine when an arbitration agreement can be enforced against a nonsignatory under Ohio law.

<sup>6</sup> CDK notes that Plaintiffs fail to address the cases they cited to in their opening brief in which courts held that allegations of a conspiracy or joint venture between signatory and non-signatory defendants, including in the antitrust context, were sufficient to equitably estop the signatory plaintiff to arbitrate claims against the non-signatory defendant. [266, at 25 n.5.] However, none of those cases purported to apply Ohio law. Furthermore, all of those cases were decided before the Supreme Court made clear that state law governs who is bound by agreements to arbitrate. Arthur Andersen LLP, 556 U.S. at 630.

<sup>7</sup> The only Ohio case cited by the court in I Sports was Gerig v. Kahn, which held that a signatory to a contract may enforce an arbitration provision against a nonsignatory seeking a declaration of the signatories' rights and obligations under the contract. 95 Ohio St. 3d 478, 2002- Ohio 2581, 769 N.E.2d 381, 385-86 (Ohio 2002). However, the Ohio Supreme Court later limited Gerig to situations "when a nonparty is 'seeking a declaration of the signatories' rights and obligations under the contract." Henderson v. Lawyers Title Ins. Corp., 108 Ohio St. 3d 265, 2006- Ohio 906, 843 N.E.2d 152, 161 (Ohio 2006).

substantially delayed its request for arbitration, or participated in discovery." Halim, 516 F.3d at 562. Still, "waiver is not lightly inferred; the strong federal policy favoring enforcement of arbitration agreements impresses upon a party asserting waiver a heavy burden." Williams v. Katten, Muchin & Zavis, 837 F. Supp. 1430, 1442 (N.D. Ill. 1993) (quoting St. Mary's Med. Ctr. of Evansville, Inc., 969 F.2d at 590); see also Dickinson v. Heinold Secs., Inc., 661 F.2d 638, 641 \(7th Cir. 1981\) ("a 'waiver of arbitration is not lightly to be inferred'" (quoting Midwest Window Sys., Inc. v. Amcor Indus., Inc., 630 F.2d 535, 536 \(7th Cir. 1980\)).

In this case, all relevant factors weigh in favor of finding that CDK waived any right to arbitrate the Reynolds Dealers' claims against it. To begin, CDK did not assert its intent to arbitrate at the "earliest feasible" [**37] time. CDK argues that it moved to compel arbitration at the earliest possible opportunity—when it filed its opening motion to dismiss. However, CDK earlier could have asserted its intent to arbitrate, just as Reynolds has done throughout this lawsuit. The first dealership class action, Teterboro Automall, Inc. v. CDK Global, LLC, Case No. 2:17-cv-08714 (D.N.J.), was filed on October 19, 2017. Although Reynolds asserted its intent to arbitrate when it and CDK moved for transfer and consolidation of the cases against them, CDK did not make any similar reservation. HN10 [↑] "[W]hen a party chooses to proceed in a judicial forum, there is a rebuttable presumption that the party has waived its right to arbitrate." Kawasaki, 660 F.3d at 996. Along the same lines, CDK participated in discovery without making clear that its participation in discovery was not a waiver of its now-claimed right to arbitrate.<sup>8</sup> Cf. Kawasaki Heavy Indus., 660 F.3d at 998 (finding no waiver where the defendant "mentioned its desire to arbitrate at every turn"). While it may not be necessary for a defendant expressly to reserve its right to arbitrate whenever it participates in discovery, in light of CDK's failure to assert its intent to arbitrate until July 2018, CDK acted inconsistent [**38] with the intent to arbitrate.

HN11 [↑] Furthermore, although a showing of prejudice is not required in order to find waiver, it is relevant. Kawasaki, 660 F.3d at 995. Here, CDK argues that the Reynolds dealers would not be prejudiced as a result of CDK's delay in asserting its intent to arbitrate, but it is difficult to see how litigating a complex class action and participating in extensive discovery in court only to have litigation come to a halt would not be prejudicial to Plaintiffs. CDK argues that the Reynolds Dealers were not prejudiced because discovery from the dealers is relevant to many claims and issues raised in other MDL cases. 378, at 11 (citing [Dickinson v. Heinold Sec., 661 F.2d 638, 642 \(7th Cir. 1981\).)] However, CDK—not the Plaintiffs—are parties to the other MDL cases. Thus, although it may have been necessary for CDK to participate in discovery regardless of whether it arbitrated its claims against the Reynolds Dealers, the Reynolds Dealers would not have had to participate in discovery (at least as a party). Given CDK's substantial delay in invoking its intent to arbitrate, forcing the Reynolds Dealers to arbitrate now would be highly prejudicial. Accordingly, even if CDK could invoke the doctrine of equitable estoppel to force the Reynolds dealers [**39] to arbitrate their claims, CDK waived its right to do so.

B. Antitrust Standing

i. Damages

HN12 [↑] Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' federal antitrust claims for damages (Counts I, III, and V) should be dismissed under Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720, 97 S. Ct. 2061, 52 L. Ed. 2d 707 \(1977\), which holds that a federal antitrust plaintiff may not seek damages based on alleged supracompetitive prices passed through by a purchaser earlier in the distribution chain. As the Seventh Circuit recently summarized, Illinois Brick "forbids a customer of the purchaser who paid a cartel price to sue the cartelists, even if his seller—the direct purchaser from

---

<sup>8</sup>To be sure, the Court is not saying that Defendant's participation in discovery alone is the basis for finding waiver. Defendant could have participated in discovery while reserving its right to arbitrate. Given the simplicity of Defendant's arbitration argument (i.e., Plaintiffs must arbitrate all claims relating to their contract with Reynolds), however, it does not appear as though Defendant's delay was necessary for Defendant to be able to determine which of Plaintiffs' claims are or are not arbitrable. Thus, Defendant's participation in discovery without any reservation of its right to arbitrate until July 2018 was inconsistent with the intent to arbitrate.

the cartelists—passed on to him some or even all of the cartel's elevated price." *Motorola Mobility LLC v. AU Optronics Corp.*, 775 F.3d 816, 821 \(7th Cir. 2015\). This is because when defendants "sell to a third party who *** could recover for any injury" it suffers as a direct purchaser, there is no need for separate and duplicative suits for "implicit overcharges" claimed further downstream. *Loeb Indus., Inc. v. Sumitomo Corp.*, 306 F.3d 469, 482 \(7th Cir. 2002\). "[W]here a plaintiff's injury is derivative of a more direct injury to some other person, and that person would have a strong motivation to pursue its own antitrust claim against the defendant, standing is not likely to exist." *In re Dairy Farmers of Am., Inc. Cheese Antitrust Litig.*, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 119962, 2013 WL 4506000, at \*9 \(N.D. Ill. Aug. 23, 2013\) ("DFA I") (citing *Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois*, 431 U.S. 720, 97 S. Ct. 2061, 52 L. Ed. 2d 707 \(1977\)).

According to Defendant, because Plaintiffs are indirect purchasers [**40] of data integration services, Plaintiffs are not proper [*531] federal antitrust Plaintiffs under Illinois Brick. Plaintiffs implicitly recognize that their Sherman Act claims would be barred by Illinois Brick to the extent that their purported antitrust injuries are derivative of more direct injuries to participants or direct consumers in the DIS market. Plaintiffs argue, however, that Defendant erroneously conflates their status as indirect purchasers in the DIS market with their status as direct purchasers in the DMS market.

The Court agrees that Plaintiffs' horizontal conspiracy claim (Count I) is—at least to some extent—based on alleged anticompetitive conduct in the DMS market, as Plaintiffs allege that its DMS lost functionality and is worth less as a result of CDK's agreements with Reynolds. Defendant argues that this alleged diminution in value and functionality is just the flip side of the purported inability to access data integration in the DIS market.<sup>9</sup> However, Plaintiffs allege misconduct in the DMS market resulting in harm in the DMS market. Specifically, Plaintiffs allege that CDK and Reynolds, competitors in the DMS market, agreed not to compete with each other in certain respects [*41] (i.e., permitting third-party DMS access) resulting in DMSs with less value and inferior functionality. Plaintiffs therefore allege anticompetitive conduct in the DMS market.

To the extent that Plaintiffs seek to recover alleged supracompetitive prices passed through vendors, however, the Court agrees that Plaintiffs' claims are barred by Illinois Brick. Although Plaintiffs argue that their exclusive dealing claim based on vendor contracts relates to alleged anticompetitive conduct in the DMS market, Plaintiffs' exclusive dealing claim is based on their status as indirect purchasers in the DIS market. Indeed, in arguing that it sufficiently has alleged substantial foreclosure, as necessary to state a claim for exclusive dealing under federal law, Plaintiffs argue that they sufficiently have alleged substantial foreclosure in the DIS market. Similarly, Plaintiffs' Section 2 claims are based on alleged monopolistic conduct by Defendant in the DIS market—not the DMS market. As noted by the Seventh Circuit, in relation to the DMS market, "neither Reynolds nor CDK is a monopolist." *Authenticom, Inc. v. CDK Glob., LLC*, 874 F.3d 1019, 1025 \(7th Cir. 2017\). Thus, Plaintiffs' exclusive dealing claim based on vendor contracts and Plaintiffs' Section 2 monopoly claim are barred by [*42] Illinois Brick. The Court grants Defendant's motion to dismiss Count II and Count V. Furthermore, to the extent that Plaintiffs seek to bring a horizontal conspiracy claim based on agreements to restrain competition in the DIS market, Plaintiffs' horizontal conspiracy claim fails under Illinois Brick and Plaintiffs may not proceed under that theory.

ii. Injunctive Relief

Defendant also argues that Plaintiffs lack antitrust standing to bring claims for injunctive relief under the Sherman Act and therefore moves to dismiss Counts II and IV. HN13 Antitrust standing "examines the connection between the asserted wrongdoing and the claimed injury to limit the class of potential plaintiffs to those who are in the best position to vindicate the antitrust infraction." *Greater Rockford Energy & Tech. Corp. v. Shell Oil Co.*, 998 F.2d 391, 395 \(7th Cir. 1993\) [*532] (citations omitted). In *Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters*, 459 U.S. 519, 103 S. Ct. 897, 74 L. Ed. 2d 723 \(1983\) ("AGC"), the <sup>9</sup> Defendant also argues that the Plaintiffs' argument that the alleged conspiracy deprived the DMS market of a "primary point of differentiation" between CDK and Reynolds fails because the 2015 Agreements do not prohibit either party from allowing hostile integration at any time. [266, at 29.] As discussed below, however, the Court would have to ignore the Plaintiffs' well-pleaded allegations to accept that argument.

---

Supreme Court held that regardless of whether an antitrust plaintiff has "constitutional standing," at the pleadings stage a district court "must make a further determination whether the plaintiff is a proper party to bring a private antitrust action." Id. at 535 & n.31. The Court announced six factors to consider in assessing whether an antitrust plaintiff is the proper party to proceed under the antitrust [**43] laws: "(1) the causal connection between the violation and the harm; (2) the presence of improper motive; (3) the type of injury and whether it was one Congress sought to redress; (4) the directness of the injury; (5) the speculative nature of the damages; and (6) the risk of duplicate recovery or complex damage apportionment." Loeb Indus., Inc. v. Sumitomo Corp., 306 F.3d 469, 484 (7th Cir. 2002) (citing AGC, 459 U.S. at 537-45). For injunctive relief, the "speculative nature of the damages" and "risk of duplicate recoveries" factors drop out of the analysis, DFA I, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 119962, 2013 WL 4506000, at *9, but the need to establish antitrust standing remains. See Cargill, Inc. v. Monfort of Colo., Inc., 479 U.S. 104, 110-11, 107 S. Ct. 484, 93 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1986) (requiring party seeking injunctive relief to show antitrust standing). "The 'broad proposition' emanating from AGC is that 'a party cannot recover when others more directly injured are better able to state a claim.'" In re Dairy Farmers of Am., Inc. Cheese Antitrust Litig., 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84152, 2015 WL 3988488, at *6 (N.D. Ill. June 29, 2015) ("DFA II") (quoting Loeb Indus., Inc. v. Sumitomo Corp., 306 F.3d 469, 489 (7th Cir. 2002)). Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' federal antitrust claims seeking injunctive relief fail under AGC because there are more directly-affected purchasers that can—and in this case are—seeking the same injunctive relief.

Plaintiffs argue that Defendant's AGC argument fails with respect to Defendants' conspiracy directed towards the DMS market because Plaintiffs—as direct purchasers of Defendant's DMS—are the most "directly-affected" [**44] purchasers." Defendant does not dispute that—to the extent that Plaintiffs' claims are based on anticompetitive conduct in the DMS market—Plaintiffs' claims are not barred by AGC. As discussed above, however, Defendant contends that Plaintiffs' federal antitrust claims actually are based on alleged anticompetitive conduct in the DIS market, not the DMS market. Because Plaintiffs' federal horizontal conspiracy claims are based—at least to some extent—on alleged anticompetitive conduct in the DMS market, as discussed above, the Court denies Defendant's motion to dismiss such claims pursuant to AGC.

However, Plaintiffs' exclusive dealing claim for injunctive relief (Count IV) is based on alleged anticompetitive conduct in the DIS market. Plaintiffs nonetheless argue that when plaintiffs "do not seek damages for their Sherman Act claim, it is inconsequential that there are more 'immediate victims' of the scheme." [358, at 56 (quoting In re Broiler Chicken Antitrust Litig., 290 F. Supp. 3d 772, 814 (N.D. Ill. 2017) (internal quotation marks omitted)).] Still, under AGC, the Court must consider the directness of the injury. Defendant contends that AGC bars federal antitrust claims—even claims seeking injunctive relief—when more directly-affected purchasers seek the [**45] same injunctive relief that the more-remote plaintiff demands. In making that argument, Defendant relies on DFA I, which held that downstream participants in the retail market failed to satisfy the directedness prong of AGC. 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 119962, 2013 WL 4506000. In that case, [*533] the plaintiffs alleged that defendants conspired to buy all of the available long positions in three months' worth of Class III milk futures contracts on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange in an effort to gain control of those markets and sell their positions at an unreasonably high price. *2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 119962, [WL] at *1*. Plaintiffs alleged that they were injured by defendants' actions when they purchased finished products at artificially inflated prices. Id. But plaintiffs were "downstream participants in a retail market *** separate from the allegedly restrained market" and "the allegedly price-fixed products *** [were] not even components of the products that [the plaintiffs] purchased." *2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 119962, [WL] at *12-13*. This Court therefore concluded that plaintiffs failed to satisfy the directness factor of the antitrust standing analysis. Id. The Court noted that the plaintiffs' injury was "not alleged to be a necessary step in furthering the ends of the conspiracy involving the two relevant markets." *2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 119962, [WL] at *11*. In [**46] fact, the causal link between the alleged anticompetitive conduct and the antitrust injury was attenuated; "there [were] numerous links in the chain of distribution before a finished dairy product reache[d] a retailer, including transactions between the retailer and its distributors or wholesalers, between distributors or wholesalers and manufacturers of cheese products, and between manufacturers and milk producers." *2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 119962, [WL] at *14*.

The Court did not hold, however, that AGC categorically bars federal antitrust claims—even claims seeking injunctive relief—whenever more directly-affected purchasers seek the same injunctive relief that the more-remote plaintiff demands.<sup>10</sup> The Court recognized that "the fact that the alleged conspiracy operated in the separate but related futures market [did] not necessarily doom the indirect purchaser plaintiffs' claims." Id. HN14

Furthermore, other courts in this district have concluded that "[w]hen damages are not at issue, as long as the plaintiffs' alleged injury is not 'remote' *** but is directly attributable to the conspiracy, the injury satisfies AGC." In re Broiler Chicken Antitrust Litig., 290 F. Supp. 3d 772, 814 (N.D. Ill. 2017).

Here, Plaintiffs claimed injury is not so remote as to bar their claims for injunctive relief. The [\[\*\*47\]](#) first four AGC factors (the factors relevant to Plaintiffs' injunctive relief claims)—including the directness factor—weigh in favor of finding that Plaintiffs have antitrust standing to pursue their federal antitrust claims for injunctive relief. Plaintiffs purchase the services of vendors who are consumers in the DIS [\[\*534\]](#) market and who rely on DIS to provide their applications to dealers. Furthermore, the DIS market is closely related to and dependent on the DMS market in which Plaintiffs are consumers. Plaintiffs' injury therefore was a necessary step in furthering the ends of the conspiracy in the relevant markets. Furthermore, Plaintiffs allege that vendors have passed on overcharges directly to dealers. Thus, unlike DFA I, the causal link between the alleged anticompetitive conduct and the antitrust injury is not attenuated. Defendant does not argue that the presence of an improper motive is lacking. Nor does Defendant argue that Plaintiffs' claimed injuries are not the type of injuries Congress sought to redress in the Sherman Act. Although Defendant does dispute that Plaintiffs satisfy the directness factor—relying extensively on DFA I—the Court finds DFA I distinguishable for [\[\*\*48\]](#) the reasons discussed above. Accordingly, the Court denies Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' federal antitrust claims for injunctive relief (Counts II and IV) under AGC.

C. Failure to State a Claim Under Federal Law

i. Horizontal Conspiracy Claims (Counts I-II)

Plaintiffs bring Section 1 horizontal conspiracy claims against Defendant based on agreements made between CDK and Reynolds that—according to Plaintiffs—amount to agreements to restrain competition in the DMS and DIS markets. With respect to the DMS market, Plaintiffs allege that Defendant and Reynolds are "horizontal competitors" that both possess "dominant positions" in the DMS market. [198, at ¶¶ 170, 177.] Plaintiffs further allege that Defendant and Reynolds agreed to restrain competition in that market by agreeing to "reduce the functionality of CDK's DMS (including dealerships' ability to freely access their DMS data through authorized persons)." [Id. at ¶ 171; see also ¶¶ 148-49 (Dealerships' ability to access their data on DMS through third parties "was an important feature of the DMS and its functionality," and Defendants unlawfully "eliminated this feature of the DMS and its functionality.").] With respect to the DIS [\[\*\*49\]](#) market, Plaintiffs allege that Defendants agreed that CDK would stop hostilely accessing Reynolds's DMS. Defendants also agreed that they would not assist in the hostile access of one another's DMSs. Still, Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' allegations of a horizontal conspiracy are insufficient to state a claim for a number of reasons.

<sup>10</sup> Because the Court was applying the AGC factors to claims for damages and for injunctive relief, the Court addressed all relevant AGC factors. HN15 However, as recognized by the Court, "[w]hen injunctive relief alone is at issue, some factors—namely the speculative nature of the damages and the risk of duplicate recoveries or complex damages apportionment—do not apply to the antitrust standing analysis." DFA I, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 119962, 2013 WL 4506000, at \*9 (citation omitted). This is consistent with Cargill, Inc. v. Monfort of Colorado, Inc., 479 U.S. 104, 107 S. Ct. 484, 93 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1986), in which the Supreme Court recognized that courts should protect against multiple lawsuits for damages and duplicative recoveries by examining factors such as "the potential for duplicative recovery, the complexity of apportioning damages, and the existence of other parties that have been more directly harmed, to determine whether a party is a proper plaintiff under § 4." Id. at 111 n.6. Because claims for injunctive relief do not present a risk of multiple lawsuits for damages and duplicative recoveries, the Supreme Court indicated that those factors are not relevant to the antitrust standing analysis for claims seeking injunctive relief. Id. "[T]he fact is that one injunction is as effective as 100, and, concomitantly, that 100 injunctions are no more effective than one." Id. (quoting Hawaii v. Standard Oil Co. of Cal., 405 U.S. 251, 261, 92 S. Ct. 885, 31 L. Ed. 2d 184 (1972)) (internal quotation marks omitted)).

First, Defendant argues that Plaintiffs are wrong about what the challenged agreements provide. Focusing on the language of the written agreements between Defendant and Reynolds, Defendant argues that the "agreements merely wind-down CDK's hostile access to Reynolds's DMS." [266, at 33.] According to Defendant, "[t]hey do not divide any market, restrain any competition, or say anything about CDK's or Reynolds's third-party access policies (which either company could change tomorrow)." Id.; see also Authenticom, 874 F.3d at 1025 ("nothing in the 2015 agreements forbade CDK itself from allowing access to its own data integration system").

To be sure, the 2015 written agreements between Defendant and Reynolds do not expressly require that Defendant and Reynolds block third-party access on their own DMSs. Yet, as noted by Judge St. Eve in the Authenticom case, the agreements do "effectively [**50] require that CDK stop hostile access of Reynolds DMSs (for a period, at least) and, more importantly, expressly prohibit [Defendant and Reynolds] from assisting in the hostile access of one another's DMSs." In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 951. As [*535] Judge St. Eve also noted, "[s]uch a partial ceasefire and mutual forbearance between two rivals would make sense if * * * Defendants sought to 'support' one another's integration services to the exclusion of third-party integrators from the competition." In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d 931, 951 \(N.D. Ill. 2018\). The anticompetitive effects of this "partial ceasefire" and "mutual forbearance between two rivals" were not limited to the DIS market. The alleged horizontal agreement is between two competitors in the DMS market. CDK and Reynolds—"horizontal competitors" and possessors of "dominant positions" in the DMS market—agreed to restrain competition in that market by agreeing to "reduce the functionality of CDK's DMS (including dealerships' ability to freely access their DMS data through authorized persons)." [198 (Compl.), ¶¶ 170-71.] HN16 Evidence of "retardation of innovation and subsequent decrease in the quality of [products] potentially available to consumers, if believed, could qualify as a harm to competition and consumers." [**51] Aventis Envtl. Sci. USA LP v. Scotts Co., 383 F. Supp. 2d 488, 504 \(S.D.N.Y. 2005\). Plaintiffs allege such a decrease in the quality of the products they purchased from Defendant here.

Furthermore, the alleged agreements between Defendant and Reynolds are not necessarily limited to the 2015 written agreements. Plaintiffs claim that Defendant's executives admitted to an agreement between Defendant and Reynolds to block third-party access of their respective DMSs. For example, in April 2016, CDK's Vice President of Product Management, Dan McCray, told Authenticom's CEO Stephen Cottrell:

[W]e've entered into an agreement with Reynolds and Reynolds, okay? That agreement specifically says that we're going to support each other's third party interfaces, and we're working collaboratively to remove all hostile integrators from our DMS system.

[198 (Compl.), at ¶ 101.] CDK's argument that Plaintiffs only have alleged an agreement to winddown CDK's hostile access to Reynolds's DMS therefore fails, as it ignores Plaintiffs' well-pleaded allegations of a horizontal agreement beyond the written agreements between Defendant and Reynolds.

In the Authenticom matter, Defendant argued that the court should disregard these allegations because the best evidence of CDK's and Reynolds's [**52] agreement is their written contracts. Judge St. Eve found that argument unconvincing, concluding that the argument "backfire[d]" because it "suggests that [CDK and Reynolds] (or at least their executives) thought that the 2015 Agreements aimed to 'block' third-party integrators." [176, at 29.] CDK argues that conclusion was erroneous because using allegations of oral statements to inform the meaning of a written contract would upset the established contractual canon that oral evidence may not supplement a fully integrated, written agreement. [266, at 37 n.13 (citing 11 Williston on Contracts § 33:1 (4th ed. 2018)).]

However, to the extent the statements made by Defendant's and Reynolds's executives refer to the 2015 written agreements, the Court agrees that they indicate that the aim of those agreements was to block third-party integrators. The Court would not expect that CDK and Reynolds would identify that intent in the text of the contract, but that does not mean the parties' statements regarding their intent is being used to interpret the parties' obligations under the contract. Indeed, although the Seventh Circuit recognized that the 2015 written agreements "do not explicitly state [**53] that defendants will work together to eliminate third-party data integrators, the agreements have that effect [*536] * * * After the agreements, there is little room in the market for third-party integrators." Authenticom, Inc., 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 109409, 2017 WL 3017048 at \*6. Regardless, as Judge St. Eve also noted, in order to accept Defendant's argument, the Court would have to infer that Defendant's and Reynolds's executives were referring to the written agreements—as opposed to an extracontractual agreement—requiring that the Court make an inference in Defendant's favor, which the Court cannot do at the motion to dismiss stage. Furthermore, to the extent that the statements made by CDK's and Reynolds's executives are not reflected in the agreement, it reasonable can be inferred that there was an extracontractual agreement between CDK and Reynolds. Again, the Court would not expect CDK and Reynolds to memorialize all aspects of the alleged anticompetitive agreement in their written agreements. The Court must make this reasonable inference at the motion to dismiss stage.

Second, Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' Section 1 horizontal conspiracy claim fails because Plaintiffs merely have alleged parallel conduct. HN17 [↑] "Tacit collusion, also known as conscious parallelism, [**54] does not violate section 1 of the Sherman Act. Collusion is illegal only when based on agreement." In re Text Messaging Antitrust Litig., 782 F.3d 867, 879 \(7th Cir. 2015\). Defendant therefore argues that Plaintiffs' Section 1 claims fail because Plaintiffs fail to identify "evidence that 'tends to exclude the possibility' of independent conduct." 260, at 14 (quoting [Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 588, 106 S. Ct. 1348, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538 \(1986\).)] Although the Supreme Court has held "that a plaintiff must present evidence showing that defendants had a 'rational economic motive to conspire' and evidence 'that tends to exclude the possibility' of independent conduct to survive summary judgment[,"] In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 953 (quoting Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., 475 U.S. at 588), courts have held that such a showing is not necessary at the pleading stage. Id. (collecting cases).

Regardless, Plaintiffs plausibly have alleged a motive to conspire. Plaintiffs allege that dealers preferred CDK's "open" DMS and that Reynolds therefore lost market share in the DMS market when it closed its DMS. [198 (Compl.), at ¶¶ 7, 77-78.] It therefore is reasonable to infer that Defendant and Reynolds were motivated to conspire with each other so that they could close their systems to data integrators without fear that their customers would turn to another provider.<sup>11</sup> In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 953. Furthermore, accepting Defendant's argument that Plaintiffs only [**537] have [**55] alleged parallel conduct would require that the Court ignore well-pleaded allegations that Defendant's executives admitted to the conspiracy. Such admissions are direct evidence of an illegal conspiracy. In re Text Messaging Antitrust Litig., 630 F.3d 622, 628 \(7th Cir. 2010\) (recognizing "an admission by an employee of one of the conspirators" as direct evidence supporting a price-fixing case). Accordingly, the Court denies Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' horizontal conspiracy claims (Counts I-II).

ii. Exclusive Dealing (Counts III-IV)

Defendant also argues that Plaintiffs have not sufficiently alleged that Defendant engaged in exclusive dealing. HN18 [↑] "An exclusive dealing contract obliges a firm to obtain its inputs from a single source." Paddock Publ'ns, Inc. v. Chicago Tribune Co., 103 F.3d 42, 46 \(7th Cir. 1996\). "The objection to exclusive-dealing agreements is that they deny outlets to a competitor during the term of the agreement." Roland Mach. Co. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 749 F.2d 380, 393 \(7th Cir. 1984\). Because of the procompetitive benefits of exclusive dealing (e.g., increasing allocative efficiency, preventing free-riding), courts analyze exclusive dealing claims under the rule of reason. In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 956-57.

---

<sup>11</sup> Defendant argues that such a motive is not plausible because it would not risk treble-damages liability in exchange for Reynolds's mere agreement to continue doing what it already had done for years. [266, at 34.] Defendant also argues that Plaintiffs concede a number of points demonstrating that Defendant and Reynolds engaged in nothing more than permissible parallel conduct. [Id.] For example, Defendant argues that the fact that Reynolds's decision to close its DMS preceded Defendant's decision to do the same by several years demonstrates that there was no illicit agreement between CDK and Reynolds. [Id.] However, nothing prevented Reynolds from deciding to open its DMS. Indeed, given that Plaintiffs allege that Reynolds lost business to Defendant as a result of its closed DMS, Reynolds had the incentive to do so. While Defendant is free later to argue that the purported concessions demonstrate that Defendant and Reynolds merely engaged in parallel conduct, the Court cannot ignore the well-pled allegations of a horizontal agreement and must draw all reasonable inferences in Plaintiffs' favor on a motion to dismiss. Killingsworth, 507 F.3d at 618.

Plaintiffs argue that Defendant has engaged in exclusive dealing by preventing vendors from working with independent data integrators (such as Authenticom). Plaintiffs allege that "Defendants [**56] have utilized their control of the DMS market to impose exclusive dealing provisions on Vendors. These exclusive dealing provisions necessitate that any Vendor doing business with CDK or Reynolds cannot contract with any other independent DIS provider, and these exclusive dealing provisions are purportedly infinite in duration." [198 (Compl.), at ¶ 13.]

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' exclusive dealing claim fails because 3PA is a "'managed interface' that is part of CDK's DMS," not a separate product. [266, at 38.] However, Defendant fails fully to develop this argument. For example, Defendant does not even discuss the relevant consideration for determining a product market, such as separate demand, the products peculiar characteristics and uses, "distinct customers, distinct prices, sensitivity to price changes, and specialized vendors." Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, 370 U.S. 294, 325, 82 S. Ct. 1502, 8 L. Ed. 2d 510 \(1962\). These factors appear to weigh in favor of finding a separate market for data integration services.<sup>12</sup> For example, it is not the dealers that purchase data integration services. HN19 There are therefore distinct customers and distinct prices for data integration services. Furthermore, based on the fact-intensive nature of the product-market inquiry, the [**57] issue generally is not properly resolved on a motion to dismiss. Ploss v. Kraft Foods Grp., Inc., 197 F.Supp.3d 1037, 1070 \(N.D. Ill. 2016\) ("Courts should dismiss antitrust claims based on a market argument only when it is certain that the alleged relevant market clearly does not encompass all interchangeable substitute products"); accord Avnet, Inc. v. Motio, Inc., 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 120449, 2015 WL 5307515, at \*4 \(N.D. Ill. Sept. 9, 2015\) ("[b]ecause market definition is a deeply fact-intensive inquiry, courts hesitate to grant motions to dismiss for failure to plead a relevant product market" (quoting Todd v. Exxon Corp., 275 F.3d 191, 199-200 \(\*538\) \(2d Cir. 2001\)) (alteration in original)).

Finally, Defendant argues that even if Plaintiffs sufficiently allege exclusive dealing, Plaintiffs fail to allege substantial foreclosure. [266, at 38-39.] HN20 "[E]xclusive dealing arrangements violate antitrust laws only when they foreclose competition in a substantial share of the line of commerce at issue[.]" Republic Tobacco Co. v. N. Atl. Trading Co., 381 F.3d 717, 737-38 \(7th Cir. 2004\) (citing Tampa Electric Co. v. Nashville Coal Co., 365 U.S. 320, 320-27, 81 S. Ct. 623, 5 L. Ed. 2d 580 \(1961\)). Defendant argues that Plaintiffs have not alleged substantial foreclosure because (1) there are no allegations that Defendant's vendor contracts foreclosed Plaintiffs from a substantial share of any market, and (2) any argument that hostile integrators are excluded by the contracts "would fail because hostile integrators are still able to deal with DMS providers covering a sizeable portion of the market [**58] for car dealership DMS services." [266, at 38-39.] In its response brief, Plaintiffs appear to concede the former argument, focusing on allegations that the foreclosure caused by the agreements raised prices for data integration services, which Plaintiffs allege were passed onto Plaintiffs. [198 (Compl.), at ¶¶ 149-155, 157, 161.] Defendant argues that Plaintiffs lack antitrust standing to challenge the foreclosure of independent integrators such as Authenticom. As discussed above, to the extent that Plaintiffs seek damages, that is true and the Court grants Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs exclusive dealing claim for damages (Count III) on that basis.

Still, Plaintiffs have standing to pursue their exclusive dealing claim for injunctive relief, and Plaintiffs have alleged facts sufficient to establish substantial foreclosure. Specifically, Plaintiffs allege that CDK and Reynolds together control approximately 75 percent of the DMS market, with CDK alone controlling approximately 45 percent. [198 (Compl.), at ¶ 2.] With the two dominant DMS providers agreeing to block independent data integrators, CDK and Reynolds have been able to charge supracompetitive prices for data integration [**59] services. [198 (Compl.), at ¶¶ 144, 185.] Vendors are forced to pay supracompetitive prices for data integration services because they need to be able to service dealers who have CDK or Reynolds as their DMS providers. Vendors are likely only willing to pay such prices because competitors like Authenticom are foreclosed from competing for that business. These allegations are sufficient to establish foreclosure at the pleading stage. In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 957 (concluding that similar allegations were sufficient to establish at the motion to dismiss stage that the "exclusive-dealing contracts [foreclosed] a substantial portion of the data-integration market"); see also In

---

<sup>12</sup> In the Authenticom decision, Judge St. Eve described the data-integration market and the DMS market as separate markets based on similar allegations. In re Dealer Mgmt. Sys. Antitrust Litig., 313 F. Supp. 3d at 940. The Court sees no reason to change course based on the cursory argument raised by Defendant now.

362 F. Supp. 3d 510, *538 (2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12157, **59

re Ductile Iron Pipe Fitting Direct Purchaser Antitrust Litig., 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 29865, 2013 WL 812143, at *19 (D.N.J. Mar. 5, 2013) ("The question of whether the alleged exclusive dealing arrangements foreclosed a substantial share of the line of commerce is a merits question not proper for the pleading stage."). Accordingly, Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' exclusive dealing claim for injunctive relief (Count IV) is denied.

iii. Rule of Reason

Defendant argues that, even assuming that Plaintiffs sufficiently allege the kind of conduct that requires a rule-of-reason analysis under Section 1, its conduct rested on a clear and important business justification: the need to protect \*\*60 its system and the data on that system from cybersecurity threats. [198 (Compl.), at ¶ 154.] HN21 However, whether challenged conduct has a procompetitive effect on balance \*539 so as to survive scrutiny under a rule-of-reason analysis is a factual issue for trial. Cook Inc. v. Boston Sci. Corp., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17331, 2002 WL 335314, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 28, 2002) ("The rule of reason entails a complex inquiry into the surrounding circumstances that is not susceptible to resolution on a motion to dismiss[.]"); Watkins v. Smith, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 165762, 2012 WL 5868395, at *7 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 19, 2012) ("The rule-of-reason inquiry requires, at the motion to dismiss stage, that the plaintiff identify the relevant market affected by the challenged conduct and allege an actual adverse effect on competition in the identified market."). Furthermore, Plaintiffs specifically allege that Defendant's security justification is pretextual. [198 (Compl.), at ¶¶ 153-64.] Accepting all of Plaintiffs' well-pleaded factual allegations and drawing all reasonable inferences in Plaintiffs' favor, Plaintiffs sufficiently have alleged that Defendant's proffered justification for the challenged conduct is pretextual. According, whether Defendant's conduct is justified under a rule-of-reason analysis cannot be determined at the motion to dismiss stage.

D. State Claims Dependent on Federal Antitrust Claims \*\*61

Because Plaintiffs' state antitrust claims parallel their federal antitrust claims [266, at 44 n.19 (collecting sources)], Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' state antitrust claims (Counts VI-XXXI) fail in lockstep with the federal claims asserted in Counts I through V. Defendant also argues that at least four of the consumer protection claims fail for the same reason. HN22 Courts applying Alaska, California, Florida, and South Carolina law have held that consumer protection claims based on the same factual allegations as a failed antitrust claim must likewise be dismissed. Alaska Gasline Port Auth. v. ExxonMobil Corp., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 41245, 2006 WL 1718195, at *3 n.24 (D. Alaska June 19, 2006) (Alaska); In re Wellpoint, Inc., Out-of-Network UCR Rates Litig., 903 F. Supp. 2d 880, 927-28 (C.D. Cal. 2012) (California); In re Broiler Chicken Antitrust Litig., 290 F. Supp. 3d 772, 819 (N.D. Ill. 2017) (Florida); In re Aggrenox Antitrust Litig., 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104647, 2016 WL 4204478, at *9 (D. Conn. Aug. 9, 2016) (South Carolina). Because Plaintiffs' federal antitrust claims survive (at least to some extent), the Court denies Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' state antitrust claims and consumer protection claims under Alaska, California, Florida, and South Carolina law for failure to allege a federal antitrust violation.

E. Application of Illinois Brick to South Carolina Claim

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' antitrust claims under South Carolina law also should be dismissed under Illinois Brick.<sup>13</sup> HN23 South Carolina courts interpret the state's antitrust laws consistent with federal law. \*\*62 In re Microsoft Corp. Antitrust Litig., 401 F. Supp. 2d 461, 463 (D. Md. 2005) ("South Carolina has long adhered to a policy of following federal precedents in matters relating to state trade regulation enforcement.") (quoting Drs.

---

<sup>13</sup> Defendant also argues that Plaintiffs' claim under Illinois law should be dismissed because the Illinois Antitrust Act provides that only the Illinois Attorney General may bring a class action asserting indirect purchaser claims. See 740 Ill. Comp. Stat. 10/7(2). Because Illinois otherwise allows indirect purchaser claims, see id., the Court views the limit on class actions to be a kind of class action bar, which the Court addresses below.

Steuer & Latham, P.A. v. Nat'l Med. Enters., 672 F. Supp. 1489, 1521 (D.S.C. 1987), aff'd, 846 F.2d 70 (4th Cir. 1988); S.C. Cotton Growers' Co-op. Ass'n v. English, 135 S.C. 19, 133 S.E. 542, 543 (S.C. 1926) (looking to federal case law to construe South Carolina's antitrust statute). Because South Carolina has not enacted an Illinois Brick repealer statute, the Court grants Defendant's motion for dismissal of Plaintiffs' South Carolina antitrust claim (Count XXV).<sup>14</sup>

F. AGC and Related State-Law Causation Requirements

i. Applicability of AGC

Plaintiffs argue that AGC does not apply to state-law claims of indirect purchasers who participate in the market that was restrained. However, neither the Supreme Court nor the Seventh Circuit has limited the application of AGC to certain kinds of antitrust claims. HN24[] To the contrary, the Seventh Circuit has explained that AGC sets forth factors to consider whether a plaintiff satisfies the proximate cause (i.e., antitrust standing) requirement implicit in every antitrust case. Supreme Auto Transp., LLC v. Arcelor Mittal USA, Inc., 902 F.3d 735, 743 (7th Cir. 2018) ("Proximate causation is an essential element that plaintiffs must prove in order to succeed on any of their claims."). To be sure, this is not to say that AGC bars such claims. Whether AGC applies and whether \*\*63 AGC bars Plaintiffs' state law claims are different.

Although the Court concludes that AGC's antitrust standing requirement applies in all federal antitrust cases, that does not answer whether AGC applies to Plaintiffs' claims under state law. HN25[] "While most states model their antitrust statutes and jurisprudence on federal law, they are under no obligation to do so." Supreme Auto Transp., LLC v. Arcelor Mittal USA, Inc., 902 F.3d 735, 743 (7th Cir. 2018) (citing California v. ARC Am. Corp., 490 U.S. 93, 102, 109 S. Ct. 1661, 104 L. Ed. 2d 86 (1989)). Still, many states have harmonization provisions—which can either be statutory or derived from common law—that provide that the state's antitrust laws are to be read in harmony with federal antitrust laws. Even though all but one state at issue has a harmonization provision, many states expressly have rejected Illinois Brick's bar on indirect purchaser claims by enacting "repeater statutes" abrogating the Supreme Court's prohibition on indirect-purchaser actions as articulated in Illinois Brick. DFA II, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84152, 2015 WL 3988488, at \*6. The key question is how, if at all, these repeater statutes impact the Court's application of AGC under each state's law.

Plaintiffs argue generally that the adoption of an Illinois Brick repealer forecloses the application of AGC because AGC borrowed the reasoning of Illinois Brick. HN26[] Although some courts have adopted \*\*64 that position, see, e.g., Broiler Chicken, 290 F. Supp.3d at 815-16, this Court rejected that position in DFA II, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84152, 2015 WL 3988488, at \*6. In that case, this Court held "that the presence of a statutory harmonization provision (either statutory or common law), absent any countervailing statutory law or case law from a state appellate court, is sufficient to permit a district court to apply federal antitrust-standing law—including AGC—to claims brought under that state's antitrust laws." [2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84152, \[WL\] at \*4](#). In reaching that conclusion, the Court noted that, absent countervailing authority, it would be odd to read an exception into a state's harmonization provision. Id. The Court also noted that "[t]he fact that so many states took action in response to Illinois Brick shows that states are quite capable of rejecting federal antitrust law when they see fit to do so." [2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84152, \[WL\] at 6](#). This position is supported by recent Seventh Circuit case law.

In Supreme Auto Transport, LLC v. Arcelor Mittal USA, Inc., the Seventh Circuit recognized that the adoption of an Illinois Brick repealer statute did not preclude \*\*541 the application of AGC. 902 F.3d 735, 744 \(7th Cir. 2018\). HN27[] In reaching that conclusion, the Seventh Circuit explained how the Illinois Brick and AGC analyses are analytically distinct, stating that "[i]t is one thing to say \*\*65 that a state is willing to allow someone other than a direct purchaser to have the opportunity to shoulder the burden of showing proximate causation; it is quite another thing to say that the state has thrown both the direct-purchaser rule and proximate causation out the window." Id. States with Illinois Brick-repealer statutes have not "replaced one per se rule with another," so that all indirect-purchaser suits can proceed "no matter how far removed the purchasers are from the production process and no matter how speculative the damages award would be." Id. at 743-44. The Court therefore cannot assume—absent some in-state authority to the contrary—that states that have enacted Illinois Brick repealers also have abandoned AGC's antitrust standing requirement. Still, because the application of AGC to Plaintiffs' claims ultimately is a question of state law, the Court must examine whether any of the states under which Plaintiffs have brought antitrust claims would apply a different standard.

---

<sup>14</sup> Indeed, Plaintiffs do not even respond to Defendant's Illinois Brick argument under South Carolina law, implicitly conceding its merit of the argument.

The Court therefore must now "undertake the back-breaking labor involved in deciphering the state of antitrust standing in each" relevant state to determine whether to apply AGC to Plaintiffs' claims. In re Flash Memory Antitrust Litig., 643 F. Supp. 2d at 1153. This [**66] Court has already conducted that analysis with respect to claims brought under California, Kansas, Michigan, New York, and North Carolina law,<sup>15</sup> concluding that AGC applies. DFA II, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84152, 2015 WL 3988488, at *11. The Court now turns to analyzing whether AGC applies to Plaintiffs' claims under the laws of other states not already addressed.<sup>16</sup>

1. District of Columbia

Harmonization Provision: "It is the intent of the Council of the District of Columbia that in construing this chapter, a court of competent jurisdiction may use as a guide interpretations given by federal courts to comparable antitrust statutes." D.C. Code Ann. § 28-4515.

[*542] Illinois Brick Repealer Statute: "Any indirect purchaser in the chain of manufacture, production, or distribution of goods or services, upon proof of payment of all or any part of any overcharge for such goods or services, shall be deemed to be injured[.]" D.C. Code Ann. § 28-4509(a).

Analysis: HN29 At least one court in the District of Columbia has applied AGC despite its Illinois Brick repealer statute. Peterson v. Visa U.S.A. Inc., 2005 D.C. Super. LEXIS 17, 2005 WL 1403761, at *5 (D.C. Super. Ct. Apr. 22, 2005). Absent any binding District of Columbia authority to the contrary, the Peterson decision and the deferential harmonization provision remain the best indicators of how the District [**67] of Columbia Court of Appeals (the highest court in the District of Columbia) would address the issue, and both lean in favor of applying AGC to Plaintiffs' antitrust claim under District of Columbia law.

<sup>15</sup> Plaintiffs argue that the Court's analysis regarding North Carolina law in DFA II is incorrect, citing to a North Carolina appellate court decision that declined to apply AGC where the product at issue was a component of the product purchased by indirect purchasers. [358, at 97 n.79 (citing Teague v. Bayer AG, 195 N.C. App. 18, 671 S.E.2d 550 (N.C. Ct. App. 2009)).] However, in DFA II, the Court acknowledged Teague, but found a lower-court decision—Crouch v. Crompton Corp., 2004 NCBC LEXIS 6, 2004 WL 2414027 (N.C. Super. Oct. 28, 2004)—to be more well-reasoned and a better reflection of that the North Carolina Supreme Court would do when given the opportunity to address the issue. DFA II, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84152, 2015 WL 3988488, at *15. In Crouch, the court applied "a modified version of the AGC test to determine antitrust standing that retains the proximate-cause inquiry inherent in AGC while still respecting Illinois Brick's ban on indirect-purchaser actions." Id. (summarizing Crouch, 2004 NCBC LEXIS 6, 2004 WL 2414027). The parties do not address whether Plaintiffs' claim under North Carolina satisfied the modified AGC test applied in Crouch. Given that the Court finds that Plaintiffs satisfy the more stringent federal AGC standard, as discussed below, Plaintiffs also would satisfy the modified AGC test applied in Crouch.

<sup>16</sup> HN28 In deciding whether to apply AGC to state-law antitrust claims, the Court looks to whether the relevant state supreme court or state legislature has spoken to the issue. See Erie R.R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188 (1938); Jean v. Dugan, 20 F.3d 255, 260 (7th Cir. 1994). "In the absence of guiding decisions by the state's highest court, [federal courts] consult and follow the decisions of intermediate [state] appellate courts unless there is a convincing reason to predict [that] the state's highest court would disagree." ADT Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Lisle-Woodridge Fire Prot. Dist., 672 F.3d 492, 498 (7th Cir. 2012).

2. Iowa

Harmonization Provision: "This chapter shall be construed to complement and be harmonized with the applied laws of the United States which have the same or similar purpose as this chapter. This construction shall not be made in such a way as to constitute a delegation of state authority to the federal government, but shall be made to achieve uniform application of the state and federal laws prohibiting restraints of economic activity and monopolistic practices." Iowa Code Ann. § 553.2.<sup>17</sup>

Illinois Brick Repealer Statute: None. However, the Iowa Supreme Court has rejected the application of Illinois Brick to Iowa competition law. Comes v. Microsoft Corp., 646 N.W.2d 440, 446 (Iowa 2002).

HN31 [↑] Analysis: Although the Iowa Supreme Court has rejected the application of Illinois Brick to Iowa competition law, the Iowa Supreme Court has continued to apply AGC. Southard v. Visa U.S.A. Inc., 734 N.W.2d 192, 198 (Iowa 2007) ("We think the AGC test is more reflective of the legal context within which the Iowa legislature enacted Iowa's competition law. Therefore, we apply the AGC factors to determine whether the plaintiffs may recover [**68] under Iowa law."). Given that there is no indication that Iowa law has changed since that decision, AGC applies to Plaintiffs' antitrust claim under Iowa law.

3. Maine

HN32 [↑] Harmonization Provision: None. However, courts have recognized that Maine's antitrust statute parallels federal law and therefore have analyzed state claims according to federal law. Tri-State Rubbish, Inc. v. Waste Mgmt., Inc., 998 F.2d 1073, 1081 (1st Cir. 1993) ("The Maine antitrust statutes parallel the Sherman Act[.]" (citing Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 10, §§ 1101 et seq.)).

Illinois Brick Repealer Statute: "Any person, including the State or any political subdivision of the State, injured directly or indirectly in its business or property by any other person or corporation by reason of anything forbidden or declared to be unlawful by section 1101, 1102 or 1102-A, may sue for the injury in a civil action." Me. Rev. Stat. tit. 10, § 1104(1).

[*543] Analysis: One Maine trial court has applied AGC despite Maine's Illinois Brick repealer statute, but ignored the directness factor in its analysis. *Knowles v. Visa U.S.A., 2004 Me. Super. LEXIS 227, 2004 WL 2475284, at *6 (Me. Super. Oct. 20, 2004)* ("In light of Maine's Illinois Brick repealer, the next factor-directness or remoteness of the asserted injury-should be disregarded entirely in any inquiry as to standing under Maine's antitrust laws."). In that case, however, the court appears to have assumed that the directness inquiries automatically weighs [**69] against finding antitrust standing whenever there are more directly injured parties. Id. This Court does not read the directness factor so narrowly. Nor does the Court see any basis for concluding that the Maine Supreme Judicial Court would apply AGC so narrowly. Accordingly, the Court will consider all AGC factors in analyzing Plaintiffs' claim under Maine law.

4. Nebraska

Harmonization Provision: "When any provision of sections 59-801 to 59-831 and sections 84-211 to 84-214 or any provision of Chapter 59 is the same as or similar to the language of a federal antitrust law, the courts of this state

<sup>17</sup> HN30 [↑] The Court notes that Iowa courts have interpreted the state's harmonization provision narrowly. Comes v. Microsoft Corp., 646 N.W.2d 440, 446 (Iowa 2002) (noting that the purpose of Iowa's antitrust harmonization statute was to "achieve uniform application of the state and federal laws prohibiting monopolistic practices," not to define who can sue under antitrust law). Given that the Iowa Supreme Court has applied AGC, however, this narrow interpretation has no impact on the Court's analysis.

362 F. Supp. 3d 510, *543L 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12157, **69

in construing such sections or chapter shall follow the construction given to the federal law by the federal courts." Neb. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 59-829.

Illinois Brick Repealer Statute: "Any person who is injured in his or her business or property by any other person or persons by a violation of sections 59-801 to 59-831, whether such injured person dealt directly or indirectly with the defendant, may bring a civil action in the district court in the county in which the defendant or defendants reside or are found, without respect to the amount in controversy, and shall recover actual damages or liquidated damages in an amount which bears a reasonable relation to the actual damages which have been [**70] sustained and which damages are not susceptible of measurement by ordinary pecuniary standards and the costs of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee." Neb. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 59-821.

HN33 Analysis: The Supreme Court of Nebraska has applied AGC despite the state's repealer statute, noting that Illinois Brick and AGC are analytically distinct. Kanne v. Visa U.S.A. Inc., 272 Neb. 489, 723 N.W.2d 293, 300 \(Neb. 2006\); see also Tackit v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., 2004 WL 2475281, at *1 (Neb. Dist. Ct. Oct. 19, 2004) (applying AGC to claim under Nebraska Unlawful Restraint of Trade Act). Accordingly, the Court will apply AGC to Plaintiffs' claims under Nebraska law.

5. New Mexico

Harmonization Provision: "Unless otherwise provided in the Antitrust Act, the Antitrust Act shall be construed in harmony with judicial interpretations of the federal antitrust laws. This construction shall be made to achieve uniform application of the state and federal laws prohibiting restraints of trade and monopolistic practices." N.M. Stat. Ann. § 57-1-15.

Illinois Brick Repealer Statute: "[A]ny person threatened with injury or injured in his business or property, directly or indirectly, by a violation of Section 57-1-1 or 57-1-2 NMSA 1978 may bring an action for appropriate injunctive relief, up to threefold the damages sustained and costs and reasonable attorneys' fees." N.M. Stat. Ann. § 57-1-3\(A\).

Analysis: HN34 The New Mexico Supreme Court has not addressed whether AGC [**71] applies to claims under the New Mexico Antitrust Act \("NMAA"\), but a New Mexico appellate court has concluded that AGC applies. Nass-Romero v. Visa U.S.A. Inc., 2012- NMCA 058, 279 P.3d 772, 776 \(N.M. Ct. App. 2012\) (applying AGC to claim brought under the NMAA); see also New Mexico J\*5441 Oncology v. Presbyterian Healthcare Servs., 169 F. Supp. 3d 1204, 1206 \(D.N.M. 2016\) (assuming without discussion that AGC applied to claim under NMAA). Accordingly, the Court will apply AGC to Plaintiffs' claims under New Mexico law.

6. South Dakota

Harmonization Provision: "It is the intent of the Legislature that in construing this chapter, the courts may use as a guide interpretations given by the federal or state courts to comparable antitrust statutes." S.D. Codified Laws § 37-1-22.

Illinois Brick Repealer Statute: "No provision of this chapter may deny any person who is injured directly or indirectly in his business or property by a violation of this chapter the right to sue for and obtain any relief afforded under § 37-1-14.3. In any subsequent action arising from the same conduct, the court may take any steps necessary to avoid duplicative recovery against a defendant." S.D. Codified Laws § 37-1-33.

Analysis: The parties do not cite—and the Court has not found—any South Dakota case addressing whether AGC applies to claims brought under the South Dakota Deceptive Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Statute. Federal courts to have addressed [**72] the issue have been split. Compare In re Flash Memory Antitrust Litig., 643 F. Supp. 2d 1133, 1151-53 \(N.D. Cal. 2009\) (declining to apply AGC), with In re Aftermarket Auto. Lighting Prods. Antitrust Litig., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 133088, 2009 WL 9502003, at \*6 \(C.D. Cal. July 6, 2009\) (concluding that South Dakota would apply AGC). HN35↑ In light of South Dakota's harmonization statute and absent any state-law authority to the contrary, the Court concludes that South Dakota would apply AGC to claims under South Dakota law.

7. Vermont

Harmonization Provision: "It is the intent of the General Assembly that in construing this section and subsection 2451a(h) of this title, the courts of this State shall be guided by the construction of federal antitrust law and the Sherman Act, as amended, as interpreted by the courts of the United States." Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9, § 2453a\(c\).

Illinois Brick Repealer Statute: "In any action for damages or injury sustained as a result of any violation of State antitrust laws, pursuant to section 2453 of this title, the fact that the State, any public agency, political subdivision, or any other person has not dealt directly with a defendant shall not bar or otherwise limit recovery. The Court shall take all necessary steps to avoid duplicate liability, including the transfer or consolidation of all related actions." Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9, § 2465.

Analysis: The Vermont Supreme Court has not addressed whether AGC applies to antitrust claims brought under [*73] Vermont law. The only Vermont appellate court to have addressed the issue concluded that the Vermont Supreme Court would apply AGC. HN36↑ Absent any authority to the contrary, the Court again concludes that AGC applies to claims brought under Vermont law in light of Vermont's harmonization statute.

8. Wisconsin

HN37↑ Harmonization Provision: None. However, caselaw indicates that courts are to look to federal courts for guidance in interpreting Wisconsin antitrust law. See, e.g., Ashley Furniture Indus., Inc. v. Packaging Corp. of Am., 275 F. Supp. 3d 957, 968-69 \(W.D. Wis. 2017\) (noting that "Wisconsin courts traditionally look to federal law to interpret substantive violations of the Wisconsin antitrust statutes").

[*545] Illinois Brick Repealer Statute: "Except as provided under par. (b), any person injured, directly or indirectly, by reason of anything prohibited by this chapter may sue therefor and shall recover threefold the damages sustained by the person and the cost of the suit, including reasonable attorney fees." Wis. Stat. Ann. § 133.18 \(1\)\(a\).

Analysis: The Wisconsin Supreme Court has not addressed whether AGC applies under Wisconsin antitrust law, nor has any appellate court in Wisconsin. However, one trial court has concluded that Wisconsin's higher courts would apply AGC. Other federal courts have relied on this decision [*74] to conclude that AGC applies under Wisconsin law. See, e.g., In re G-Fees Antitrust Litig., 584 F. Supp. 2d 26, 42 \(D.D.C. 2008\). But other federal courts have reached the opposite conclusion. See, e.g., Los Gatos Mercantile, Inc. v. E.I. Dupont De Nemours & Co., 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 106292, 2015 WL 4755335, at \*19 \(N.D. Cal. Aug. 11, 2015\). HN38↑ Even though Wisconsin does not have a harmonization statute, the fact that courts have long applied federal law to Wisconsin antitrust claims convinces the Court that the Wisconsin Supreme Court likely would apply AGC to antitrust claims brought under Wisconsin law.

9. Other States

Plaintiffs also bring claims under states that have harmonization provisions and Illinois Brick-repealer statutes, but in which no in-state court has addressed the applicability of AGC. Specifically, Plaintiffs bring claims under the laws of Alabama, Arizona, Hawaii, Mississippi, New Hampshire, Oregon, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Utah, and West Virginia. As discussed above, "the presence of a statutory harmonization provision (either statutory or common law), absent any countervailing statutory law or case law from a state appellate court, is sufficient to permit a district court to apply federal antitrust-standing law—including AGC—to claims brought under that state's antitrust laws." DFA II, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84152, 2015 WL 3988488, at \*6.

ii. Application

Now that the Court has addressed in which states AGC applies, the Court [**75] must determine whether Plaintiffs' claims fail under AGC. As discussed above, under AGC, the Court must consider: "(1) the causal connection between the violation and the harm; (2) the presence of improper motive; (3) the type of injury and whether it was one Congress sought to redress; (4) the directness of the injury; (5) the speculative nature of the damages; and (6) the risk of duplicate recovery or complex damage apportionment." Loeb, 306 F.3d at 484 (citing AGC, 459 U.S. at 537-45).

The Court already has addressed the first four factors above. With respect the speculative nature of the damages, Plaintiffs sufficiently have alleged that costs have been passed on to dealers. Indeed, Plaintiffs have cited to examples of vendors specifically connecting fee increases to Defendant's allegedly anticompetitive conduct. [See, e.g., 198 (Compl.), at ¶ 141.] Because the causal link between the alleged misconduct and Plaintiffs' claimed harm is short, these allegations are sufficient to state a claim at the pleading stage. In re TFT-LCD \(Flat Panel\) Antitrust Litig., 586 F. Supp. 2d 1109, 1124 \(N.D. Cal. 2008\) ("The Court finds that, as a pleading matter, plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged that overcharges are passed on to consumers, and that such overcharges can be traced through the relatively short distribution chain."). [**76]

That leaves the risk of duplicative recovery. With respect to the DIS market, the Court recognizes that there are other parties that have been more directly [**546] harmed by the alleged misconduct by Defendant. Still, it cannot be true that state antitrust claims are categorically barred whenever other parties have been more directly harmed. Such an application of AGC would in effect "'repeal' the Illinois Brick 'repealers,' as it is difficult to image an indirect purchaser ever having antitrust standing under [such a] formulation." In re Optical Disk Drive Antitrust Litig., 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 101763, 2011 WL 3894376, at \*11 \(N.D. Cal. Aug. 3, 2011\). Again, given that the causal link between the alleged misconduct and Plaintiffs' claimed harm is short, the Court finds it likely that damages can reasonably be apportioned among Plaintiffs and others more directly harmed. Discovery ultimately may reveal that such apportionment cannot be done with reasonable accuracy. However, there is no indication based on the information before the Court that is the case here. Accordingly, taking all of the AGC factors into account, the Court concludes that Plaintiff sufficiently has alleged proximate causation.

This conclusion is consistent with the Seventh Circuit's decision in Supreme Auto Transp., LLC v. Arcelor Mittal USA, Inc., 902 F.3d 735, 744 \(7th Cir. 2018\). In that case, indirect purchasers of end-user [**77] consumer products containing steel (including clothes washers, automobiles, barbecue grills, air conditioners, and snow blowers), filed an amended complaint asserting state-law claims based on an alleged antitrust conspiracy among steel manufacturers to increase steel prices. See [2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 101763, \[WL\] at \*3](#). Although the Seventh Circuit ultimately found that the plaintiffs' claims were barred for failure to allege sufficient facts to establish antitrust standing (i.e., proximate causation), the Court indicated that antitrust standing would be satisfied if the plaintiffs alleged sufficient facts to establish that their claimed injuries still were "fairly traceable to the defendant steel manufacturers." [2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 101763, \[WL\] at \*6](#). The Seventh Circuit reasoned:

There are many suits that satisfy ordinary principles of proximate causation but nevertheless would be barred under federal law by Illinois Brick's direct-purchaser requirement. This very case provides an example: many if not all Illinois-Brick repealer states would have allowed Supreme Auto's original complaint to go forward. That first complaint alleged injury based on the purchase of steel rods and similar items from distributors who, in turn, had purchased those same items from [**78] the defendants. The original complaint involves an indirect purchase (and so would be barred by Illinois Brick at the federal level) where the alleged injury is still fairly traceable to the defendant steel manufacturers.

The amended complaint is a different story. It alleges that plaintiffs purchased steel only insofar as it was one among many components of other more complex products, all of which have gone through numerous manufacturing alterations and lines of distribution. In many of these products, steel is not even a primary or necessary ingredient. We cannot imagine—and plaintiffs have not told us—how one might tackle the task of tracing the effect of an alleged overcharge on steel through the complex supply and production chains that gave rise to the consumer products at issue here. The district court thus appropriately ruled that the claims asserted here were too remote to support a claim under the different state laws plaintiffs invoked.

2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 101763, [WL] at *6-7. Defendant attempts to distinguish Supreme Auto by noting that the original complaint—which the Seventh Circuit indicated sufficiently alleged proximate cause—involved the "traditional indirect-purchaser" [*547] relationship in which the indirect [**79] purchaser buys the same item produced by the defendant through a distributor. [378, at 25.] Still, in Supreme Auto, the Seventh Circuit relied on the fact that the defendant's product "was not even a primary or necessary ingredient" in the purchased product and that defendant's product had "gone through numerous manufacturing alterations and lines of distribution." Although DIS is not a component part of the vendor services purchased by Plaintiffs, it certainly is a necessary ingredient to such services. Furthermore, there is only one link in the chain (i.e., vendors) between dealers and data integrators. The Court recognizes that the allegations of proximate cause in this case fall somewhere in between the allegations in the original and amended complaints in Supreme Auto. Nevertheless, the allegations here are enough to establish at the motion to dismiss stage that Plaintiffs' claimed harms are fairly traceable to the alleged misconduct by Defendant.<sup>18</sup> Accordingly, Plaintiffs have alleged sufficient facts to establish proximate causation at the motion to dismiss stage.

iii. Application of Other State-Law Standing and Remoteness Doctrines

Defendant argues that—to the extent that Plaintiffs' [**80] claims are not subject to AGC—they nonetheless remain subject to general state-law causation requirements. [266, at 50-51 n. 26 (collecting authorities).] Because Defendant does not argue that any of these standards are more stringent than AGC, which Plaintiffs have satisfied at the motion to dismiss stage, the Court denies Defendant's motion to dismiss any of Plaintiffs' state-law claims based on the other state-law causation and remoteness standards cited by Defendant.

G. Failure to State a Claim Under State Law (Counts VI-L)

i. No Operations or Purchases

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs cannot bring claims under the laws of states that are unrelated to any named Plaintiffs' place of business or commercial operations. The named Plaintiffs are twenty-five car dealerships doing business in eleven states: Illinois, Kansas, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Nevada, and South Carolina. Plaintiffs nonetheless seek to advance claims under the laws of Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Delaware, the District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Iowa, Maine, Michigan, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Carolina, North Dakota, [**81] Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, [*548] Tennessee, Utah, Vermont, West Virginia, and Wisconsin.

<sup>18</sup> Defendant also cites to cases across the country finding that AGC or similar causation standards barred consumer litigation against Visa and Mastercard, who allegedly required merchants using their credit cards to accept their debit cards as well. In those cases, however, the plaintiffs did not allege that they overpaid for goods or services either directly or indirectly from Defendant. Rather, the plaintiffs claimed that merchants increased the prices of all goods sold (goods not related in any way to defendants) to account for the increased fees charges for debit services. They did not allege that they overpaid for purchases of debit processing services, either directly or indirectly. See, e.g., Kanne v. Visa U.S.A. Inc., 272 Neb. 489, 723 N.W.2d 293, 299 (Neb. 2006) ("Appellants do not and cannot allege that they overpaid for purchases of debit processing services from merchants."); Nass-Romero v. Visa U.S.A. Inc., 2012- NMCA 058, 279 P.3d 772, 778 (N.M. Ct. App. 2012) ("Plaintiff is neither a consumer nor a competitor in the market allegedly being restrained by Defendants and does not appear in that chain of distribution; thus, she cannot be identified as a consumer of the service provided by Visa and MasterCard. Plaintiff, instead, is a consumer of goods sold by merchants who happen to be part of the affected market."). Here, on the other hand, Plaintiffs are indirect purchasers of DIS.

HN39 [↑] Although courts (including this Court) have held that claims "brought under the laws of the states in which no named [plaintiff] purchased goods" must be dismissed for lack of Article III standing, see, e.g., DFA I, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 119962, 2013 WL 4506000, at \*7-8 (citing In re Potash Antitrust Litig., 667 F. Supp. 2d 907, 922 (N.D. Ill. 2009)); In re Plasma-Derivative Protein Therapies Antitrust Litig., 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2501, 2012 WL 39766, at *6. (N.D. Ill. Jan. 9, 2012), the trend has been to treat the issue as one of statutory standing that can be deferred until class certification. See Langan v. Johnson & Johnson Consumer Companies, Inc., 897 F.3d 88, 96 (2d Cir. 2018) ("We fail to see how the fact that the defendant's wrongful conduct impacted customers in two states rendered the injuries of the Massachusetts consumers somehow more indefinite than the identical injuries of the Connecticut consumers." (footnote omitted)); Muir v. Nature's Bounty \(De\), Inc., 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128738, 2018 WL 3647115, at *7 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 1, 2018) (noting that the "weight of recent authority points" against analyzing standing to bring class actions by legal theory); In re Loestrin 24 Fe Antitrust Litig., 261 F. Supp. 3d 307, 359 (D.R.I. 2017) (recognizing trend); see also Morrison v. YTB Int'l, Inc., 649 F.3d 533, 536 (7th Cir. 2011) ("That a plaintiff's claim under his preferred legal theory fails has nothing to do with subject-matter jurisdiction[.]" (citing Bell v. Hood, 327 U.S. 678, 66 S. Ct. 773, 90 L. Ed. 939 (1946))). This trend is consistent with recent Seventh Circuit caselaw holding that "the question of who is authorized [**82] to bring an action under a statute is one of statutory interpretation; it does not implicate Article III or jurisdiction." Woodman's Food Market, Inc. v. Clorox Co., 833 F.3d 743, 750 (7th Cir. 2016). Accordingly, at this stage, the Court denies Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' state-law claims in states where no named Plaintiff operates for lack of Article III standing.

ii. Territorial Conduct/Effect

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' claims under Delaware, Massachusetts, North Carolina, Wisconsin, and New Hampshire law (Counts XXII, XXXI, XXXVI, XXXIX, and XLIII) should be dismissed for failure to allege any significant in-state conduct or injury. As noted by Defendant, those states all require some territorial conduct and/or affect to bring a claim under those statutes. HN40 [↑] To begin, the Delaware Consumer Fraud Act, 6 Del. § 2512, requires that the relevant conduct "occur 'in part or wholly within this State.'" Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. AIG Life Ins. Co., 901 A.2d 106, 117 (Del. 2006) (quoting 6 Del. § 2512). Although Plaintiffs allege that Defendant and certain Plaintiffs are incorporated in Delaware [198 (Compl.), Compl. ¶¶ 27, 41, 51], that does not establish that any relevant conduct occurred in Delaware.<sup>19</sup> The only allegation that even arguably addresses conduct in Delaware does so in a conclusory manner. [Id. at ¶ 584 ("Defendants' [**83] conduct substantially affected commerce and consumers in Delaware throughout the Class Period. In addition, Defendants have fraudulently concealed their actions from Plaintiffs and members of the Delaware Class.").]<sup>20</sup> Because Plaintiffs have not [*549] sufficiently alleged conduct occurring in Delaware, the Court grants Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' claim under the Delaware Consumer Fraud Act (Count XXXVI).

HN41 [↑] Similarly, North Carolina's Unfair Trade Practices Act reaches only conduct causing a "'substantial' in-state injury," not "merely an 'incidental'" one. In re Refrigerant Compressors Antitrust Litig., 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 50737, 2013 WL 1431756, at *18-19 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 9, 2013) (citing The 'In' Porters, S.A. v. Hanes Printables, Inc., 663 F. Supp. 494, 502 (M.D.N.C. 1987)); Merck & Co., Inc. v. Lyon, 941 F. Supp. 1443, 1463 (M.D.N.C. 1996)). When plaintiffs do not allege that any wrongful conduct occurred in North Carolina, allegations that indirect purchasers payed inflated prices are not sufficient to establish a substantial, in-state injury. Because Plaintiffs have alleged no more here, the Court grants Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' claim under North Carolina's Unfair Trade Practices Act (Count XXII).

---

<sup>19</sup> Plaintiffs do not argue that being incorporated in Delaware is sufficient to establish conduct occurring in Delaware for the purposes of the Delaware Consumer Fraud Act. Nor do Plaintiffs cite to any cases indicating that such a showing is sufficient.

<sup>20</sup> In support of its claim under Delaware law, Plaintiffs also cite to an allegation that Defendant "violated the Delaware Consumer Fraud Act, 6 Del. Code § 2511, et seq.", through their unfair and/or deceptive practices." [198 (Compl.), at ¶ 578.] However, that allegation does not identify any conduct occurring in Delaware.

HN42 [+] The Wisconsin Supreme Court also has made clear that "[a] civil plaintiff filing an action under Wisconsin's antitrust act must allege that (1) actionable conduct, such as the formation of a combination or conspiracy, occurred within [**84] this state, even if its effects are felt primarily outside Wisconsin; or (2) the conduct complained of 'substantially affects' the people of Wisconsin and has impacts in this state, even if the illegal activity resulting in those impacts occurred predominantly or exclusively outside this state." *Olstad v. Microsoft Corp., 2005 WI 121, 284 Wis. 2d 224, 700 N.W.2d 139, 158 \(Wis. 2005\)* (quoting *State v. Allied Chem. & Dye Corp., 9 Wis. 2d 290, 101 N.W.2d 133, 134 \(1960\)*). Plaintiffs argue that the Wisconsin Supreme Court has rejected the view that Wisconsin's antitrust statute applies only to intrastate conduct. [356, at 106-07 (citation omitted).] Still, Plaintiffs fail entirely to explain how their allegations are sufficient to satisfy either standard set forth in Olstad. Accordingly, the Court grants Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' Wisconsin antitrust claim (Count XXXI).

HN43 [+] Massachusetts's consumer protection statute requires that the "actions and transactions constituting the alleged unfair method of competition or the unfair or deceptive act or practice" must have "occurred primarily and substantially" in Massachusetts. *Mass. Gen. Laws Ch. 93A, § 11*. However, "the burden of proof shall be upon the person claiming that such transactions and actions did not occur primarily and substantially within the commonwealth." Id. "As this presents a factual question, 'a section [**85] eleven cause of action, attacked via a motion to dismiss, should survive a 'primarily and substantially' challenge so long as the complaint alleges that the plaintiff is located, and claims an injury, in Massachusetts.'" *SCVNNGR, Inc. v. eCharge Licensing, LLC, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 135408, 2014 WL 4804738, at \*6 \(D. Mass. Sept. 25, 2014\)* (quoting *Back Bay Farm, LLC v. Collucio, 230 F.Supp.2d 176, 188 \(D. Mass. 2002\)*). Because Plaintiffs make such allegations here [198 (Compl.), at ¶¶ 27, 605-617], the Court denies Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' Massachusetts consumer protection claim (Count XXXIX) for failure to allege that the challenged conduct occurred primarily and substantially in Massachusetts.

HN44 [+] Finally, New Hampshire's consumer protection act applies only to "the conduct of any trade or commerce within" that state. *N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 358-A:2*. "[C]ourts interpreting New Hampshire's consumer protection law disagree as to whether a nationwide scheme in which plaintiffs play a higher price in the state is sufficient to satisfy the statute's requirements." *In re Niaspan Antitrust Litig., 42 F. Supp. 3d 735, 761 \(E.D. Pa. 2014\)* (quoting [*550] *In re Ductile Iron Pipe Fittings \("DIPF"\) Indirect Purchaser Antitrust Litig., 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 142466, 2013 WL 5503308, at \*22 \(D.N.J. Oct. 2, 2013\)* (internal quotation marks omitted)). Although both parties cite to cases supporting their respective positions on whether Plaintiffs' allegations of conduct of trade or commerce within New Hampshire are sufficient to state a claim, neither party addresses the split in authority or why the Court [**86] should follow the cases supporting their respective positions. Accordingly, a definitive ruling on this issue would be premature. The Court thus denies Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' New Hampshire consumer protection claim (Count XLIII) on that basis.

iii. Intrastate Conduct

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' claims under Alabama and Tennessee law fail because those claims are limited to purely (or at least predominantly) intrastate conduct. HN45 [+] Alabama's antitrust statute regulates conduct occurring intrastate. *Sheet Metal Workers Local 441 Health & Welfare Plan v. GlaxoSmithKline, PLC, 737 F. Supp. 2d 380, 429 \(E.D. Pa. 2010\)* (concluding that "antitrust violations as claimed by the plaintiffs [did] not violate Alabama's antitrust statute because they involve[d] interstate, and not purely intrastate, conduct"); see also *Abbott Lab. v. Durrett, 746 So. 2d 316, 339 \(Ala. 1999\)* (Alabama antitrust laws "regulate monopolistic activities that occur 'within this state'—within the geographic boundaries of [the] state."). Plaintiffs appear to concede that their Alabama antitrust claim fails for this reason, failing entirely to address Defendant's argument. Accordingly, the Court grants Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' Alabama antitrust claim (Count VI) for failure to allege intrastate conduct.

The Court also grants Defendant's [**87] motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' antitrust claim under the *Tennessee Trade Practices Act \(the "TTPA"\)* (Count XXVII). "[V]arious courts have interpreted the scarce Tennessee authority [on the intrastate standard requirement] to espouse different tests for whether Tennessee's antitrust statute applies." *Sherwood v. Microsoft Corp., 2003 Tenn. App. LEXIS 539, 2003 WL 21780975, at \*15 \(Tenn. Ct. App. July 31,* 2003). Some courts have held that plaintiffs must allege that the challenged conduct occurred "predominately intrastate" in order to state a claim under Tennessee law. See, e.g., Lynch Display Corp. v. Nat'l Souvenir Ctr., Inc., 640 S.W.2d 837, 840 (Tenn. Ct. App. 1982) ("The Tennessee antitrust law applies to transactions which are predominantly intrastate in character."). However, other courts have held that plaintiffs must allege that the challenged conduct had a "substantial effect" in Tennessee in order to state a claim under Tennessee law. See, e.g., Sherwood v. Microsoft Corp., 2003 Tenn. App. LEXIS 539, 2003 WL 21780975, at *1 (Tenn. Ct. App. July 31, 2003) ("[T]he Tennessee Trade Practices Act applies to activity that has substantial effects on commerce within the state[.]"). The Court need not decide which standard applies, as Plaintiffs have not even alleged sufficient facts to satisfy even the less stringent standard (i.e., that challenged conduct had a substantial effect in Tennessee). Indeed, Plaintiffs have not identified any Tennessee-specific allegations supporting its claim. [**88] Accordingly, Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' Tennessee antitrust case (Count XXVII) for failure to allege sufficient intrastate conduct is granted.

iv. Intangible Services

Defendant also argues that Plaintiffs' claim under TTPA (Count XXVII) fails because that statute does not apply to services. HN46 "The law is well settled that the TTPA applies only to tangible goods, not intangible services." Bennett v. Visa U.S.A. Inc., 198 S.W.3d 747, 751 (Tenn. Ct. I<sup>*551</sup> App. 2006). Plaintiffs argue that the software constitutes a tangible good under the TTPA. In support of that argument, Plaintiffs cite to Sherwood v. Microsoft Corp., in which the Tennessee Court of Appeals allowed a TTPA claim based on the purchase of computer software to proceed. 2003 Tenn. App. LEXIS 539, 2003 WL 21780975, at *1 (Tenn. Ct. App. July 31, 2003). Although Sherwood did not specifically address whether software constitutes a tangible good, the court gave no indication that it had any doubts about the applicability of the TTPA to the purchase of software. Furthermore, in other contexts, courts have concluded that software is a tangible good. See, e.g., Simulados Software, Ltd. v. Photon Infotech Private, Ltd., 40 F. Supp. 3d 1191, 1199 (N.D. Cal. 2014) ("Generally, courts have found that mass-produced, standardized, or generally available software, even with modifications and ancillary services included in the agreement, is a good that is covered by the UCC."); [**89] Advent Sys. Ltd. v. Unisys Corp., 925 F.2d 670, 675-76 (3d Cir. 1991) ("The topic has stimulated academic commentary with the majority espousing the view that software fits within the definition of a 'good' in the U.C.C."). Given these authorities, the Court declines to conclude that software does not constitute a tangible good under the TTPA.<sup>21</sup>

Defendant also argues that even if software constitutes a tangible good under the TTPA, Plaintiffs cannot bring a TTPA claim based on the purchase of software because they do not actually use the data integration software. However, Defendant does use DMS software. Furthermore, it is not clear that a party directly must use software to bring a claim under the TTPA. Defendant has not cited to any authority in support of that argument. HN47 In fact, the cases cited by the parties indicate the indirect users can bring claims under the TTPA. See, Sherwood, 2003 Tenn. App. LEXIS 539, 2003 WL 21780975, at *29-30. Accordingly, Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' TTPA claim for failure to allege a tangible good is denied.

v. Alleged Antitrust Conduct Not Covered

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' claims under Arkansas's and West Virginia's consumer protection statutes (Counts XXX and XXXIII) fail because those consumer protection statutes do not apply to traditional antitrust conduct. [**90] With respect to Plaintiffs' consumer protection claim under Arkansas law, Defendant's motion is denied. The only authority in support of this argument cited in Defendant's opening brief was In re Dynamic Random Access Memory (DRAM) Antitrust Litig., 516 F. Supp. 2d 1072 (N.D. Cal. 2007), which actually concluded that indirect purchaser suits alleging antitrust violations could also state claims under the Arkansas Deceptive Trade <sup>21</sup> Despite the lack of Tennessee authority on point, the Court would have appreciated a fulsome explanation as to why software should or should not be considered a tangible good under the TTPA. Although the Court would have entertained any such argument on a motion for summary judgment, the Court already is dismissing Plaintiffs TTPA claim for failure to allege sufficient intrastate conduct. The issue therefore is moot.

---

Practices Act ("ADTPA"). In its reply brief, Defendant also notes that the ADTPA does not explicitly prohibit "unfair competition" at all. 378, at 28 (citing [Ark. Code Ann. § 4-88-107.)] Defendant also asserts that "Arkansas law recognizes the remoteness doctrine' as applied to claims under the ADTPA, favoring suits by those directly injured over more-indirect victims." Id. (quoting [DFA II, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84152, 2015 WL 3988488, at \*17.)] Because Defendant first raised these arguments in its reply brief and because Defendant fails fully to develop these arguments, the Court will not consider them at this time. Peterson v. Vill. of Downers Grove, 103 F. Supp. 3d 918, 925 \(\*552\) \(N.D. Ill. 2015\) HN48 [↑] ("Arguments raised for the first time in reply briefs are ordinarily waived, and rightly so given the lack of opportunity for the other party to respond to them." (citing Carroll v. Lynch, 698 F.3d 561, 564 n. 2 \(7th Cir. 2012\)); Argyropoulos v. City of Alton, 539 F.3d 724, 738 \(7th Cir. 2008\) (finding "perfunctory and undeveloped" argument waived)). Defendant therefore has not established that antitrust conduct is not covered by the ADTPA. [**91] Accordingly, the Court denies Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' ADTPA claim (Count XXXIII) on that basis.

Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' West Virginia consumer protection claim (Count XXX) on the basis that antitrust violations are not covered under the West Virginia statute also is denied. There does not appear to be any in-state authority regarding the application of West Virginia's consumer protection statute in the antitrust context. As the parties note, out-of-state authorities are split regarding whether anticompetitive conduct can be challenged under the statute. Compare In re Dynamic Random Access Memory \(DRAM\) Antitrust Litig., 516 F. Supp. 2d 1072, 1118 \(N.D. Cal. 2007\), with In re Packaged Seafood Prods. Antitrust Litig., 242 F. Supp. 3d 1033, 1087 \(S.D. Cal. 2017\).

In In re Packaged Seafood, the court recognized authority concluding that West Virginia's consumer protection statute does not cover anticompetitive conduct such as price fixing, but nonetheless disregarded those decisions, noting that "none of [those] courts had the benefit of the West Virginia Legislature's 2015 amendment to the WVCCPA intending that 'in construing this article, the courts be guided by the policies of the Federal Trade Commission and interpretations given by the Federal Trade Commission and the federal courts to Section 5\(a\)\(1\) of the Federal Trade Commission Act.'" 242 F. Supp. 3d at 1087 (quoting [**92] W. Va. Code § 46A-6-101). Defendant does not argue that the challenged conduct does not constitute "unfair or deceptive acts or practices" under Section 5\(a\)\(1\) of the Federal Trade Commission Act. Rather, Defendant argues that case was decided erroneously because "that amendment should not be read to so drastically expand the scope of the statute, especially where the dealers identify no West Virginia authority saying it does." [378, at 27-28.] But Defendant does not explain how the court's application of the 2015 amendment to the WVCCPA in In re Seafood drastically expanded the scope of the statute. Nor does Defendant explain how the courts application of the 2015 amendment to the WVCCPA in In re Seafood was incorrect. Given the plain language of the 2015 amendment to the WVCCPA, the Court agrees with the reasoning of In re Seafood and concludes that the WVCCPA prohibits anticompetitive conduct.<sup>22</sup> Accordingly, the Court denies Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' WVCCPA claim (Count XXX) on the basis that antitrust violations are not covered.

vi. Class Actions Not Authorized

Defendant similarly argues that Plaintiffs are precluded from pursuing a [*553] class action under the consumer protection statutes [**93] of Alaska, Arkansas, Georgia, Illinois, and South Carolina because of class action bars. Although it is true that Alaska, Arkansas, Georgia, and South Carolina bar the kind of class action claims that Plaintiffs seek to bring here, see Alaska Stat. § 45.50.531\(b\); Ark. Code Ann. § 4-88-113\(f\)\(1\)\(B\); Ga. Code Ann. §

---

<sup>22</sup> Defendant's memorandum in support of its motion to dismiss does cite to one district court case from California for the proposition that West Virginia's consumer protection statute does not cover antitrust violations. 266, at 57 (citing See [In re Dynamic Random Access Memory \(DRAM\) Antitrust Litig., 516 F. Supp. 2d 1072, 1118 \(N.D. Cal. 2007\).)] However, that case was decided before the 2015 amendment to the WVCCPA. For that reason and for the reasons discussed above, the Court finds the reasoning in In re Packed Seafood to be more persuasive.

10-1-399(b); 740 Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. 10/7(2); S.C. Code Ann. § 39-5-140(a), Plaintiffs brought their claims in federal court—not state court.

In Shady Grove Orthopedic Associates, P.A. v. Allstate Insurance Co., the Supreme Court had to address whether a New York class action bar conflicted with Rule 23 and, if so, whether the federal rule or the state rule applied. 559 U.S. 393, 130 S. Ct. 1431, 176 L. Ed. 2d 311 (2010). HN49 [↑] The Supreme Court held that Rule 23—not the New York class action bar—applied in federal court. Id. Justice Scalia's plurality decision took the position that properly enacted federal rules of procedure always apply in federal court. Id. at 410. Justice Stevens's concurring opinion took the position that properly enacted federal rules generally apply in federal court, unless the federal rule "would displace a state law that is procedural in the ordinary use of the term but is so intertwined with a state right or remedy that it functions to define the scope of the state-created right." Shady Grove Orthopedic Assocs., P.A. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 559 U.S. 393, 423, 130 S. Ct. 1431, 176 L. Ed. 2d 311 (2010).

Some courts have treated Justice Stevens's opinion as the controlling opinion, as it provides [**94] the narrowest grounds for the Supreme Court's decision. See, e.g., James River Ins. Co. v. Rapid Funding, LLC, 658 F.3d 1207, 1217 (10th Cir. 2011). Although the Seventh Circuit has not squarely addressed which opinion controls, it otherwise has indicated that Justice Scalia's plurality sets forth the controlling legal standard. See Sawyer v. Atlas Heating & Sheet Metal Works, Inc., 642 F.3d 560, 564 (7th Cir. 2011) (Shady Grove "holds that Rule 23 applies to all federal civil suits, even if that prevents achieving some other objective that a court thinks valuable"); State Farm Life Ins. Co. v. Jonas, 775 F.3d 867, 869 (7th Cir. 2014) ("[F]ederal procedures govern in federal litigation[.]" (citing Shady Grove, 559 U.S. 393, 130 S. Ct. 1431, 176 L. Ed. 2d 311)). Even if Justice Stevens's plurality opinion applied, Defendant has not identified any authority for concluding that the class action bars at issue are so intertwined with a state-created right or remedy as to justify finding that it trumps Rule 23 under Justice Stevens's analysis.<sup>23</sup> Accordingly, the Court denies Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' class claims under Alaska, Arkansas, Georgia, and South Carolina based on the relevant class action bars in those states.

vii. No Damages Claim

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' claims under California's Unfair Competition Law (Counts VIII and XXXIV) and Colorado Consumer Protection Act (XXXV) fail because those causes of action are equitable in nature and do not allow for the recovery [**95] of damages. With respect to Plaintiffs' claims under California Unfair Competition Law ("UCL"), it is true—as Plaintiffs concede—that damages cannot be recovered under California's UCL. In re Tobacco II Cases, 46 Cal. 4th 298, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559, 207 P.3d 20, 29 (Cal. 2009). Plaintiffs argue, however, that they can proceed on their UCL claims to obtain injunctive relief and/or restitution. Defendant [*554] does not dispute that assertion, which is supported by case law. Id. at 29 ("[P]laintiffs are generally limited to injunctive relief and restitution."); see also Vasic v. PatentHealth, L.L.C., 171 F. Supp.3d 1034, 1041 (S.D. Cal. 2016) ("An order for restitution is one compelling a UCL defendant to return the money obtained through the unfair business practice."). Furthermore, Count VIII also is brought under "the Cartwright Act, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 16700 et seq., [which] was modeled after the Sherman Act." Cnty. of Tuolumne v. Sonora Cnty. Hosp., 236 F.3d 1148, 1160 (9th Cir. 2001). Defendant does not contest that damages are not recoverable under the Cartwright Act. Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 16750 ("Any person who is injured * * * may sue * * * and recover three times the damages sustained[.]"). Accordingly, the Court denies Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' claims under California's Unfair Competition Law (Counts VIII and XXXIV) based on the lack of availability of damages.

HN50 [↑] Colorado's Consumer Protection Act bars class claims for money damages. Colo. Rev. Stat. § 6-1-113(2) (noting defendants are liable for damages [**96] "[e]xcept in a class action"); In re MyFord Touch Consumer Litig., 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 179487, 2016 WL 7734558, at *26 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 14, 2016) ("Colorado law prohibits class actions for monetary damages based on the Consumer Protection Act."). Defendant cites to one case from the Northern District of California—Davidson v. Apple, Inc., 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 137707, 2018 WL 2325426, at *11

---

<sup>23</sup> Because the Court would reach the same conclusion under the standards set forth in the plurality and in the concurrence, the Court need not address which standard applies.

\(N.D. Cal. May 8, 2018\)—in which the court held that it would be inappropriate to "overlook the statute's plain language" in the absence of any Colorado authority "actually holding that the CCPA bar is inapplicable or explaining why the CCPA bar can be ignored." Id. However, as noted by the court in Davidson, whether the federal procedural rule allowing class actions (i.e., Rule 23) trumps the state-law bar on class actions under the CCPA depends on the two-step analysis established by the Supreme Court in Shady Grove. Neither party here has engaged in such an analysis. To the extent that Defendant relies on the court's analysis in Davidson, that decision lacks persuasive force. To begin, the court in Davidson indicated that it was not inclined to overlook the statute's plain language absent any Colorado decision actually holding that the CCPA bar is inapplicable or explaining why the CCPA bar can be ignored. But Colorado courts would have no reason to engage in a Shady Grove analysis. Furthermore, the Davidson court [**97] noted some uncertainty regarding the proper application of Shady Grove. Davidson, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 137707, 2018 WL 2325426, at \*11 (discussing cases reaching different conclusions regarding the proper application of Shady Grove to the CCPA's class action bar). Without the benefit of thorough briefing on this issue, the Court declines to rule at this time on whether Plaintiffs' CCPA claim for damages is barred under Shady Grove.

viii. Notice Requirements Unsatisfied

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' Hawaii antitrust claim and Georgia, New Jersey, and West Virginia<sup>24</sup> consumer protection claims (Counts X, XXXVIII, XLIV, and XLIX) fail because those statutes carry notice requirements—as to either the defendants or the state attorney general—that Plaintiffs here do not allege that they satisfy. Ga. Code Ann. § 10-1-399\(b\); Haw. Rev. Stat. § 480-13.3\(a\)\(1\); N.J. Stat. Ann. § 56:8-20; W. Va. Code § 46A-6-106\(c\). The parties dispute whether the notice requirements apply in federal court, but the parties fail to engage in a full analysis of the relevant legal standards.

[*555] To begin, neither party sufficiently addresses whether there is a conflict between Rule 23 (or any other federal rule) and these state notice requirements.<sup>25</sup> HN51 If there is no conflict, then the state notice requirements would apply. Hahn v. Walsh, 762 F.3d 617, 631 \(7th Cir. 2014\) ("If there is no conflict, then our inquiry ends because there is no need to displace [**98] any rule."). Courts have reached different conclusions on that issue. Compare In re Lipitor Antitrust Litig., 336 F.Supp.3d 395, 415 \(D.N.J. 2018\) ("[T]he Court finds that Rule 23 is not 'sufficiently broad' to cover the state statutory notice provisions."); In re Asacol Antitrust Litig., 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 94605, 2016 WL 4083333, at \*15 \(D. Mass. July 20, 2016\) (same), with In re Restasis \(Cyclosporine Ophthalmic Emulsion\) Antitrust Litig., 355 F. Supp. 3d 145, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 194161, 2018 WL 5928143, at \*6 \(E.D.N.Y. Nov. 13, 2018\) (holding that Rule 23 and state notice provisions conflict and applying the Shady Grove analysis).

The parties also fail sufficiently to engage in any analysis under Shady Grove. For example, the parties do not address which opinion in Shady Grove is controlling. Plaintiffs appear to take the position advanced in Justice Scalia's plurality—namely, that federal procedural rules always apply. But Plaintiffs provide no argument as to why that opinion should control. To the extent that Justice Stevens's opinion controls, the parties do not address whether and to what extent each state's notice requirement "is so intertwined with a state right or remedy that it functions to define the scope of the state-created right." Shady Grove, 559 U.S. at 423. Without the benefit of briefing on these complex questions, the Court declines to rule on the applicability of state-law notice requirements in federal lawsuits.

---

<sup>24</sup> Defendant has withdrawn its argument that notice is required to bring a claim under Alaska's consumer protection statute. [378, at 28 n.11.]

<sup>25</sup> Defendant does cite to one case which held that the state notice requirements applied because there was no conflict with Rule 23, but only did so in its reply brief. 378, at 28 (citing [In re Asacol Antitrust Litig., 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 94605, 2016 WL 4083333, at \*14-15 \(D. Mass. July 20, 2016\).)] Plaintiffs do not address the issue at all, but cannot be faulted for not doing so, as Defendant did not raise the issue in its opening brief.

ix. Insufficient Tie to Consumers

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' consumer protection claims under Arkansas and Georgia law [**99] fail because Plaintiffs fail to allege a sufficient connection to consumers or consumer-related conduct. HN52[] To state a claim under the Arkansas Deceptive Trade Practices Act ("ADTPA"), plaintiffs must allege a "consumer-oriented act." Apprentice Info. Sys., Inc. v. DataScout, LLC, 2018 Ark. 149, 544 S.W.3d 536, 539 \(Ark. 2018\) (quotations omitted). In support of its argument for dismissal, Defendant cites to Apprentice, a decision by the Arkansas Supreme Court, which held that there was no such consumer-oriented act where the parties "were competitors in the market of selling counties' public data" and where the plaintiff "sued over its thwarted business model, not a specific harm to consumers." Id. at 539-40. Defendant argues that Plaintiffs similarly have not alleged a specific harm to consumers. However, unlike Apprentice, Plaintiffs are not competitors with Defendant. Furthermore, Defendant's argument assumes that Plaintiffs are not "consumers" under the ADTPA. Without any argument or authority addressing whether Plaintiffs are "consumers" under the ADTPA, the Court cannot determine whether Plaintiffs sufficiently have alleged a consumer-oriented act. Accordingly, the Court denies Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' claim under the ADTPA (Count XXXIII) for failure to allege sufficient [**100] consumer ties without prejudice to raising the argument in the future.

[*556] With respect to Plaintiffs' claim under the Georgia Fair Business Practices Act \("GFBPA"\), however, the Court agrees that Plaintiffs have not alleged that they are consumers as the term is used under that statute. HN53[] The GFBPA makes unlawful "[u]nfair or deceptive acts or practices in the conduct of consumer transactions and consumer acts or practices in trade or commerce" but limits the definition of "consumer" to "a natural person" and "consumer transactions" to those that are "primarily for personal, family, or household purposes." Ga. Code Ann. §§ 10-1-393(a), 10-1-392\(a\)\(6\), \(10\). Although business entities may bring suit under the GFPPA, "the allegedly deceptive actions and practices that are the subject of the suit must be those directed at natural persons." Forth v. Walgreen Co., 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 39212, 2018 WL 1235015, at \*10 \(N.D. Ill. Mar. 9, 2018\). Plaintiffs fail entirely to explain how the deceptive actions and practices alleged here are directed at natural persons. Accordingly, the Court grants Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs GFBPA claim (Count XXXVIII) for failure to allege sufficient consumer ties.

x. No "Unfairness" Claim

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' claim under the Arkansas consumer protection statute (Count XXXIII) [**101] fails because the dealers have not alleged the type of extreme conduct covered by that statute. HN54[] As this Court has previously noted, the Arkansas Deceptive Trade Practices Act ("ADTPA") prohibits "'unconscionable, false, or deceptive' business practices without reference to 'unfair' business practices." See DFA II, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84152, 2015 WL 3988488, at \*35 (citing Ark. Code Ann. § 4-88-107\(a\)\(10\)). The ADTPA further notes that "[t]he deceptive and unconscionable trade practices listed in this section are in addition to and do not limit the types of unfair trade practices at common law or under other statutes of this state." Ark. Code Ann. § 4-88-107\(b\) (emphasis added). Courts—including this Court—therefore have concluded that claims under the ADTPA are limited to "instances of false representation, fraud, or the improper use of economic leverage in a trade transaction." Universal Coops., Inc. v. AAC Flying Serv., Inc., 710 F.3d 790, 795-96 \(8th Cir. 2013\); see also DFA II, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84152, 2015 WL 3988488, at \*35. "An 'unconscionable' act is an act that 'affront[s] the sense of justice, decency, or reasonableness.'" Universal Coops., 710 F.3d at 795 (citation omitted).

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' claim under the ADTPA should be dismissed because Plaintiffs fail to allege the kind of fraudulent and/or unconscionable acts necessary to bring a claim under the ADTPA. Plaintiffs do not contend that they have made such allegations, but they argue nonetheless [**102] that in their ADTPA claim should be allowed in light of the intention for the ADTPA to be construed liberally. [358, at 110 (citations omitted).] Although Plaintiffs note that courts are split regarding whether antitrust claims can be brought under the ADTPA 358, at 110 n.95 (citing [In re Lidoderm Antitrust Litig., 103 F. Supp. 3d 1155, 1166-67 \(N.D. Cal. 2015\))]], Plaintiffs make no efforts to explain why the Court's previous application of Arkansas law was incorrect. Accordingly, Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs ADTPA claim (Count XXXIII) for failure to allege fraudulent and/or unconscionable acts is granted.

xi. Grossly Unequal Bargaining Power Not Alleged

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' claim under New Mexico's consumer protection statute (Count XLV) requires that Plaintiffs plead "grossly unequal bargaining power," which Defendant contends Plaintiffs fail sufficiently to allege. HN55 [↑] Although one court has held that allegations of grossly unequal bargaining power are [*557] necessary to state a claim under New Mexico's consumer protection statute, *In re Graphics Processing Units Antitrust Litig., 527 F. Supp. 2d 1011, 1029-30 \(N.D. Cal. 2007\)*, other courts have reached the opposite conclusion. *Ashton Woods Holdings LLC v. USG Corp. \(In re Domestic Drywall Antitrust Litig.\), 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 90619, 2016 WL 3769680, at \*10 \(E.D. Pa. July 13, 2016\)* ("[T]he New Mexico statute does not require a plaintiff to plead grossly unequal bargaining power."). The Court finds the reasoning of the latter category cases to [**103] be more persuasive. A plaintiff may state a claim under the New Mexico Act by pleading that defendant either acted in a way that "(1) [took] advantage of the lack of knowledge, ability, experience or capacity of a person to a grossly unfair degree; or (2) result[ed] in a gross disparity between the value received by a person and the price paid." *N.M. Stat. § 57-12-2\(E\)* (2016). Nothing in the statute or in caselaw from New Mexico limits consumer protection claims to those involving grossly unequal bargaining power. Accordingly, the Court denies Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' claim under New Mexico's consumer protection statute (Count XLV) for failure to allege grossly unequal bargaining power.

xii. Failure To Allege Specific Violation

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' claim under the *Nevada Deceptive Trade Practices Act* (Count XLII) should be dismissed because Plaintiffs fail to identify the specific aspects of the statute that they contend CDK violated. In support of that argument, Defendant cites to a case from the District of Nevada in which the court granted a motion to dismiss a Nevada Deceptive Practices Act claim with leave to amend where the plaintiffs failed to identify "which kinds of violations [**104] are alleged." *In re Zappos.com, Inc., 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128155, 2013 WL 4830497, at \*6 \(D. Nev. Sept. 9, 2013\)*. However, it is not clear from that opinion whether the plaintiffs in that case failed to cite to the specific statutory provision or failed substantively to identify the challenged conduct. Defendant appears to read Zappos as taking the latter position, as Defendant does not argue that Plaintiffs' factual allegations are insufficient. HN56 [↑] To the extent that Zappos stands for the proposition that plaintiffs must cite the specific statutory authority on which it relies to state a claim, the Court finds Zappos unpersuasive in light of Seventh Circuit case law making clear that "[p]laintiffs need only plead facts, not legal theories, in their complaints." *Reeves ex rel. Reeves v. Jewel Food Stores, Inc., 759 F.3d 698, 701 \(7th Cir. 2014\)* (citing *Hatmaker v. Mem'l Med. Ctr., 619 F.3d 741, 742 \(7th Cir. 2010\)*). Indeed, the court in Zappos did not cite to any authority indicating that such allegations are necessary. Accordingly, the Court denies Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' claim under the Nevada Deceptive Trade Practices Act (Count XLII) for failure to identify the specific statutory provision upon which Plaintiffs' claim relies.

IV. Conclusion

Plaintiffs' unopposed motions for leave to submit supplemental authority [366; 420] are granted. In regard to Defendant's other motion [262], Defendant's motion to compel [**105] arbitration is denied, and its alternative motion to dismiss is granted in part and denied in part.

Date: January 25, 2019

/s/ Robert M. Dow, Jr.

Robert M. Dow, Jr.

United States District Judge

---

End of Document

United States v. Sanchez

United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit

January 16, 2019**, Argued and Submitted, San Francisco, California; January 25, 2019, Filed

No. 17-10519, No. 17-10528, No. 18-10113

Reporter

760 Fed. Appx. 533 *; 2019 U.S. App. LEXIS 2567 **; 2019-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P80,656; 2019 WL 325151

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff-Appellee, v. JAVIER SANCHEZ, Defendant-Appellant.UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff-Appellee, v. GREGORY CASORSO, Defendant-Appellant.UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff-Appellee, v. MICHAEL MARR, Defendant-Appellant.

Notice: PLEASE REFER TO FEDERAL RULES OF APPELLATE PROCEDURE RULE 32.1 GOVERNING THE CITATION TO UNPUBLISHED OPINIONS.

Subsequent History: Rehearing denied by, En banc United States v. Sanchez, 2019 U.S. App. LEXIS 9865 \(9th Cir. Cal., Apr. 3, 2019\)

US Supreme Court certiorari denied by Sanchez v. United States, 2020 U.S. LEXIS 439 \(U.S., Jan. 13, 2020\)

Prior History: [**1] Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of California. D.C. No. 4:14-cr-00580-PJH-2, D.C. No. 4:14-cr-00580-PJH-3, D.C. No. 4:14-cr-00580-PJH-1. Phyllis J. Hamilton, Chief Judge, Presiding.

United States v. Sanchez, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6128 \(N.D. Cal., Jan. 12, 2018\)

Disposition: AFFIRMED.

Core Terms

---

rigging, bid, indictment, antitrust, competitors, entities, proposed instruction, instruct a jury, district court, per se rule, irreconcilable, intervening, overbroad, evidentiary presumption, per se violation, plain error, Price-fixing, instructions, bid-rigging, convictions, decisions, commerce, conspire, purposes, restrain, rights

LexisNexis® Headnotes

---

Governments > Courts > Judicial Precedent

HN1 Courts, Judicial Precedent

---

** The panel unanimously concludes this case is suitable for decision without oral argument. See Fed. R. App. P. 34(a)(2).

A three-judge panel of an appellate court is bound by prior circuit law unless the reasoning or theory of the prior circuit authority is clearly irreconcilable with the reasoning or theory of intervening higher authority.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act

Criminal Law & Procedure > Trials > Defendant's Rights

HN2 [down arrow] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

In Manufacturers' decision, the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit held that applying the per se rule in a criminal antitrust case did not violate the defendant's constitutional rights.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Jury Instructions > Particular Instructions > Theory of Defense

HN3 [down arrow] Particular Instructions, Theory of Defense

A defendant is entitled to have the judge instruct the jury on his or her theory of defense, provided that it is supported by the law and has some foundation in the evidence.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Indictments > Amendments & Variances > Constructive Amendments

HN4 [down arrow] Amendments & Variances, Constructive Amendments

There is no constructive amendment when the indictment simply contains superfluously specific language describing alleged conduct irrelevant to the defendant's culpability under the applicable statute, and, in such cases, convictions can be sustained if the proof upon which they are based corresponds to the offense that was clearly described in the indictment.

Counsel: For UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff - Appellee (17-10519, 17-10528): Elieka Patchen, Attorney, Micah L. Rubbo, Albert Bilog Sambat, Esquire, Trial Attorney, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, Antitrust Division, San Francisco, CA; Merry Jean Chan, Assistant U.S. Attorney, Alexis Jane Loeb, Trial Attorney, USAO, San Francisco, CA; Adam D. Chandler, Robert Nicholson, U.S. Department of Justice, Washington, DC; James Joseph Fredricks, Jonathan Lasken, U.S. Department of Justice, Washington, DC.

For JAVIER SANCHEZ, Defendant - Appellant (17-10519): Dennis P. Riordan, Riordan & Horgan, San Francisco, CA.

For GREGORY CASORSO, Defendant - Appellant (17-10528): Dennis P. Riordan, Riordan & Horgan, San Francisco, CA.

For UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff - Appellee (18-10113): Micah L. Rubbo, Albert Bilog Sambat, Esquire, Trial Attorney, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, Antitrust Division, San Francisco, CA; Adam D. Chandler, James Joseph Fredricks, Jonathan Lasken, Kristen Ceara [**2] Limarzi, Attorney, Robert Nicholson, U.S. Department of Justice, Washington, DC.

For MICHAEL MARR, Defendant - Appellant (18-10113): Dennis P. Riordan, Riordan & Horgan, San Francisco, CA.

Judges: Before: CLIFTON and FRIEDLAND, Circuit Judges, and ADELMAN, *** District Judge.

---

*** The Honorable Lynn S. Adelman, United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Wisconsin, sitting by designation.

Opinion

---

[*535] MEMORANDUM*

Defendants Michael Marr, Javier Sanchez, and Gregory Casorso appeal their jury convictions for conspiring to suppress and restrain competition by rigging bids in property foreclosure sales in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1, which prohibits "contract[s], combination[s] . . . , or conspirac[ies]" that unreasonably "restrain[] trade or commerce."

1. We are bound by United States v. Manufacturers' Ass'n of Relocatable Bldg. Industry, 462 F.2d 49 \(9th Cir. 1972\). See Miller v. Gammie, 335 F.3d 889, 893 \(9th Cir. 2003\) (en banc) (holding that HN1 [↑] a three-judge panel of this court is bound by prior circuit law unless "the reasoning or theory of [the] prior circuit authority is clearly irreconcilable with the reasoning or theory of intervening higher authority"). HN2 [↑] In Manufacturers', we held that applying the per se rule in a criminal antitrust case did not violate the defendant's constitutional rights. Manufacturers' Ass'n, 462 F.2d at 52. Defendants' argument that Manufacturers' is clearly irreconcilable with intervening Supreme Court antitrust decisions is unpersuasive, because the Supreme Court [**3] has continued to recognize categories of per se violations. See Ohio v. American Express Co., 138 S. Ct. 2274, 2283, 201 L. Ed. 2d 678 \(2018\) ("A small group of restraints are unreasonable per se."); F.T.C. v. Actavis, Inc., 570 U.S. 136, 161, 133 S. Ct. 2223, 186 L. Ed. 2d 343 \(2013\) (noting that "it is per se unlawful to fix prices under antitrust law"); Texaco Inc. v. Dagher, 547 U.S. 1, 5, 126 S. Ct. 1276, 164 L. Ed. 2d 1 \(2006\) ("Price-fixing agreements between two or more competitors, otherwise known as horizontal price-fixing agreements, fall into the category of arrangements that are per se unlawful." (emphasis added)). Defendants' argument that Manufacturers' is clearly irreconcilable with intervening Supreme Court decisions relating to mandatory evidentiary presumptions in criminal law is irrelevant, because Manufacturers' held that the per se rule is not an evidentiary presumption at all. Manufacturers' Ass'n, 462 F.2d at 52. The district court therefore did not err in instructing the jury under the per se rule.

[*536] 2. Defendants' proposed jury instruction, which would have instructed the jury that two entities are not competitors for purposes of Section 1, and therefore cannot conspire, if they are engaged in a joint venture, lacked support in the law or in the facts of this case. See United States v. Thomas, 612 F.3d 1107, 1120 \(9th Cir. 2010\) (HN3 [↑]) "A defendant is entitled to have the judge instruct the jury on [his or her] theory of defense, provided that it is supported by the law and has some foundation in the evidence." [**4] (quoting United States v. Mason, 902 F.2d 1434, 1438 \(9th Cir. 1990\)). That Defendants cooperated with other persons and entities for purposes of rigging bids does not mean they were not competitors. See Am. Needle, Inc. v. Nat'l Football League, 560 U.S. 183, 191, 130 S. Ct. 2201, 176 L. Ed. 2d 947 \(2010\) (explaining that even "members of a legally single entity" have been held to have "violated § 1 when the entity was controlled by a group of competitors and served, in essence, as a vehicle for ongoing concerted activity"). Thus, the district court did not err in rejecting the proposed instruction. See Thomas, 612 F.3d at 1120-21 (explaining that this court reviews de novo the question whether a proposed instruction was supported by law, and "for abuse of discretion whether there is a factual foundation for a proposed instruction").

3. Defendants did not preserve their argument that the district court's instruction defining bid rigging was overbroad. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 30 ("A party who objects to any portion of the [jury] instructions . . . must inform the court of the specific objection and the grounds for the objection before the jury retires to deliberate."). We thus review for plain error. See Fed R. Crim. P. 52\(b\); Puckett v. United States, 556 U.S. 129, 135, 129 S. Ct. 1423, 173 L. Ed. 2d 266 \(2009\) (outlining four prongs to plain error review). Here, even assuming the portion of the instruction that Defendants claim was overbroad should not have been included, it did not affect Defendants' [**5] substantial rights because the bid-rigging conduct Defendants were accused of clearly fell within the core of the instruction, not the allegedly overbroad part.

---

* This disposition is not appropriate for publication and is not precedent except as provided by Ninth Circuit Rule 36-3.

4. To the extent Defendants have argued that the district court's instructions amounted to a constructive amendment of their indictment, that argument fails. The indictment clearly stated that Defendants were accused of bid rigging. That the indictment also quoted Standard Oil in generally describing the Sherman Act violation—i.e., rigging bids in unreasonable restraint of trade and commerce—does not alter the fact that the bid-rigging charge was a charge of a per se antitrust violation. See United States v. Ward, 747 F.3d 1184, 1191 \(9th Cir. 2014\) (explaining that HN4↑ there is no constructive amendment "when the indictment simply contains superfluously specific language describing alleged conduct irrelevant to the defendant's culpability under the applicable statute," and that "[i]n such cases, convictions can be sustained if the proof upon which they are based corresponds to the offense that was clearly described in the indictment"); see also United States v. Joyce, 895 F.3d 673, 679 \(9th Cir. 2018\) (holding that bid rigging was a per se violation and that "the district court did not err by refusing to permit [the defendant] to introduce [**6] evidence of the alleged ameliorative effects of his conduct," in an appeal by another co-conspirator involved in the same scheme as Defendants here).

AFFIRMED.

---

End of Document

Dreamstime.com, LLC v. Google, LLC

United States District Court for the Northern District of California

January 28, 2019, Decided; January 28, 2019, Filed

No. C 18-01910 WHA

Reporter

2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13408 *; 2019-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P80,664; 2019 WL 341579

DREAMSTIME.COM, LLC, a Florida LLC, Plaintiff, v. GOOGLE, LLC, a Delaware LLC; and DOES 1-10, Defendants.

Subsequent History: Motion granted by, in part, Motion denied by, in part, Claim dismissed by Dreamstime.com, LLC v. Google, LLC, 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 94573, 2019 WL 2372280 \(N.D. Cal., June 5, 2019\)

Summary judgment granted by Dreamstime.com, LLC v. Google, LLC, 470 F. Supp. 3d 1082, 2020 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 117312, 2020 WL 3630390 \(N.D. Cal., July 3, 2020\)

Affirmed by Dreamstime.com, LLC v. Google LLC, 2022 U.S. App. LEXIS 33550, 2022 WL 17420930 \(9th Cir. Cal., Dec. 6, 2022\)

Core Terms

---

advertising, stock, online, images, amended complaint, monopoly, photography, rivals, website, customers, consumers, ranking, search engine, alleges, photographs, campaigns, relevant market, motion to dismiss, antitrust, competitors, monopolize, unfairness, policies, traffic, users, anticompetitive conduct, good faith, leveraging, asserting, breached

Counsel: [*1] For Dreamstime.com, LLC, A Florida LLC, Plaintiff: Donald Ross Pepperman, Jaime W Marquart, Baker Marquart LLP, Los Angeles, CA; James D Bailey, PRO HAC VICE, Bailey Duquette P.C., New York, NY.

For Google, LLC, Defendant: Brian M. Willen, Wilson Sonsini, New York, NY; John Edward Mellyn, III, Wilson Sonsini Goodrich and Rosati PC, Washington, DC; Jonathan M. Jacobson, Wilson Sonsini Goodrich & Rosati, New York, NY; Joshua H Soven, Wilson Sonsini Goodrich Rosati, Washington, DC; Kelly Marie Knoll, Wilson Sonsini Goodrich and Rosati, Palo Alto, CA.

Judges: WILLIAM ALSUP, UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE.

Opinion by: WILLIAM ALSUP

Opinion

---

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART MOTION TO DISMISS

INTRODUCTION

In this antitrust action, plaintiff accuses defendant of using its monopoly power to discriminate against plaintiff. Defendant now moves to dismiss all claims. For the reasons stated below, the motion to dismiss is GRANTED IN PART AND DENIED IN PART.

STATEMENT

1. THE PARTIES.

Defendant Google, LLC owns and operates the world's largest internet search engine using a number of proprietary algorithms that Google claims will help consumers find pages with relevant information. When you type a word search into the Google search [*2] bar, Google's product responds by producing lines of results drawn from all over the internet. Google shows approximately ten lines of results per page and provides as many pages as needed to show the hits. As potential hits can run into the thousands, a website's ranking on Google's line of results has a direct, measurable impact on the amount of web traffic to that website. In a nearby tab to the Google search bar, Google also operates a search engine for images ("Google Images"). An essential driver of web traffic to Google, Google Images has become the biggest repository of images in the world (Dkt. No. 50 at ¶¶ 2, 4, 18-20, 26).

Google has partnered with two photography businesses, Shutterstock as of July 2016 and Getty Images as of February 2018, who together represent 70% of the stock photography market. Google's partnership agreement with Shutterstock in particular provides Google license to integrate Shutterstock's library of hundreds of millions of online images into its search advertising network. Google then uses those images together with advertisements running through Google's advertising platforms, further driving web traffic through Google while also providing Shutterstock [*3] with free advertising for their images. Nowhere does the amended complaint allege that these agreements prohibit Shutterstock and Getty Images from also dealing with Google's rivals, Yahoo! and/or Bing — stating solely that "Yahoo! and Bing are unable to obtain the same access to licensed stock photos for their competing ad networks." That inability may simply be due to the absence of any deal (as yet) between Shutterstock and Getty Images on the one hand, and Yahoo! and Bing on the other (id. at ¶¶ 32-34, 50, 104).

Plaintiff Dreamstime is a heavyweight in image repositories in the stock photography industry. A supplier of high-quality digital images since 2000, Dreamstime has a repository of millions of high-quality stock images. As of March 2018, Dreamstime had 20 million registered members (and counted clients in the Fortune 100 companies), more than 400 thousand contributing photographers, and over 75 million photos, illustrations, clip art images, and vectors (id. at ¶ 28).

2. SPONSORED ADS.

Google does not charge its search engine users money. Rather, companies pay Google to have advertisements for their websites prominently displayed in Google's search results. These are sponsored [*4] ads. The complaint estimates that this advertising program (called AdWords by Google) accounts for over 80% of Google's revenue. Google's share of the United States online search advertising market is approximately 80%. To use AdWords, advertisers must agree to several adhesive agreements (id. at ¶¶ 23, 66-68).

The AdWords program uses an auction system to determine which advertisements are shown and how much each advertisement costs. Advertisers bid for relevant search term keywords such as "stock photo" or "digital image" and AdWords then allegedly assigns each advertisement a "quality score" based on multiple factors such as: the quality of the advertiser's website, the click-through rate (the percentage of users who not only viewed the ad but also clicked on it), and relevance to the search keywords. Each time a Google user enters search terms that include relevant keywords, the AdWords program determines which of the competing advertisements to display (id. at ¶¶ 67, 71-73).

In 2004, Dreamstime entered into the AdWords Agreement with Google, paying Google to display its advertisements on Google, and engaging in several different marketing campaigns to promote its advertisements [*5] with the best combination of quality score, bid amount, and resulting customer acquisitions. Dreamstime paid Google daily to determine which of its advertisements are the most effective and to increase its circulation accordingly. Dreamstime subsequently saw a predictable and steady number of customers resulting from these campaigns (id. at ¶¶ 74-77).

3. DREAMSTIME PLUMMETS ON GOOGLE SEARCH.

Dreamstime relies heavily on online search engines and search engine advertising to build its name recognition and generate new customers. Indeed, roughly two-thirds of Dreamstime's customers come to Dreamstime's website by way of a search-engine result. Consistent with Dreamstime's AdWords spending, from approximately 2005 to 2015, Dreamstime consistently ranked in the top three in Google's line of search results for searches related to stock photography, never appearing lower than the first page. Dreamstime's website traffic during that time also reflected that many people who searched "online stock photography" on Google used and purchased stock photographs from Dreamstime (id. at ¶¶ 29, 38-40).

In 2015, however, Dreamstime's search ranking on Google plummeted (this order pauses here to note that [*6] Google's agreement with Shutterstock was announced in July 2016). For example, Dreamstime's rank on Google for the generic search term "stock photos" in June 2017 sank from what had been either the second or third overall result down to the fourth page. Such a drop in Google search results can be catastrophic for businesses; falling from page one to page two alone reduces website traffic by 95%, according to the amended complaint. In April 2016, Dreamstime's fall in Google's search ranking had taken a quantifiable toll, as the number of new Dreamstime customers who signed up and made a purchase within one month fell by 30% from that point the prior year (id. at ¶¶ 40-44).

4. DREAMSTIME'S ATTEMPTED SOLUTIONS.

In an effort to steer away from the impending iceberg, Dreamstime followed every guideline and suggestion provided by Google's documentation to boost Dreamstime's rankings on Google search. Specifically, Dreamstime switched to https and http2, disavowed links, improved website quality, diversity, and quantity of content, invested in dedicated hardware for a caching system, and dramatically increased the crawl rate and number of pages on the site. When those efforts did not restore [*7] Dreamstime's ranking, Dreamstime also invested numerous development hours to rebuild its entire site to be mobile-friendly, diverted resources from other projects in its business plan and doubled its hosting costs, engaged with and followed the advice of external agencies, hired its own in-house Search Engine Optimization expert, spent millions of dollars on website hosting to increase the content on its website by adding more images, and launched a second website — Megapixl.com — to get more exposure. Dreamstime also spent millions of dollars on new Google AdWords campaigns (increasing its budget by 50%) both for itself and for Megapixl.com. Still, Dreamstime's Google rank continued to decline through the end of 2017 and Megapixl.com did not gain traction (id. at ¶¶ 63-64, 77-78, 105).

To date, no one, including "guru" search engine optimization companies, have identified any issues with Dreamstime's site that would explain how Dreamstime came to be marginalized in Google's search rankings. To its knowledge, Dreamstime improved every metric critical to search ranking: Dreamstime's user engagement improved over the relevant period, Dreamstime's bounce rate (a metric that indicates the [*8] percentage of people who land on a web page and then leave without clicking anywhere else on the website) has declined, and the average amount of time users spend on Dreamstime's website has stayed constant. Yet, Dreamstime's growth has slowed by approximately 50% since its peak (id. at ¶¶ 60, 64, 105).

This drop in rankings, moreover, continues to be unique to Google's search engine: a recent search demonstrated Dreamstime's search ranking for "stock images" was fifth on Bing's search engine, fourth on Yahoo!'s search engine, and third on Baidu's search engine. On Google's search engine, by contrast, Dreamstime found itself ninety-first, behind websites such as an obscure site with only 30,000 free images (compared with Dreamstime's more than two million free images), yet another site with only 140 images total, and a blog article that had not been updated since 2014 entitled "Stock Photos That Don't Suck." Yet, when comparing Dreamstime to Google's partner Shutterstock by measure of accuracy, Dreamstime returned completely accurate, if not more accurate results than companies like Shutterstock. Dreamstime continues to maintain it has no internal answers for these vast discrepancies [*9] in search results (id. at ¶¶ 41, 44, 55-58).

5. SUBVERSION BY GOOGLE IN DREAMSTIME'S ADVERTISING CAMPAIGNS.

Dreamstime contends that throughout this time, Dreamstime's advertising campaigns were actively subverted. Specifically, Google canceled Dreamstime's most successful advertising campaigns without notice or explanation and willy-nilly suspended Dreamstime's account based on accusations of policy violations. Google also prevented Dreamstime from running its advertisements altogether (but simultaneously allowed the exact same advertisements to be placed by Dreamstime's competitors). Most subversively, Google caused Dreamstime's daily spending limits to be exceeded systemically and on a regular basis by over-delivering on the advertisement campaigns (using more of the allocated advertising budget in a shorter period of time) (id. at ¶¶ 8, 79-80, 86, 90-91, 172).

Moreover, Google selectively applied its policies to Dreamstime's detriment. For example, Google removed Dreamstime's mobile application because it featured lingerie photographs but allowed Google partner Shutterstock's mobile application to remain active despite featuring explicitly nude photographs. In another example of selective [*10] policy enforcement, Google removed Dreamstime's lowest cost per acquisition advertisements but allowed Dreamstime's high cost per acquisition display advertisements of the same type to remain active (translating to more income for Google) (id. at ¶¶ 53, 81, 86, 93).

The amended complaint is silent as to whether or not Dreamstime continued to win its AdWords campaigns for search terms. Dreamstime eventually determined that the spending on AdWords did not help Dreamstime's search ranking, and so, "Dreamstime recently resolved to significantly lower its advertising spending" (id. at ¶ 65 n.26).

6. THIS ACTION.

Dreamstime filed this lawsuit in March 2018 asserting four claims for relief: (1) violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2; (2) breach of contract; (3) breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing; and (4) violations of Section 17200 of the California Business and Professions Code (Dkt. No. 1). Google moved to dismiss all claims (Dkt. No. 25). At oral argument (following full briefing), the undersigned judge provided Dreamstime an opportunity to amend the complaint before issuing an order on Google's motion to dismiss. Dreamstime elected to amend (Dkt. No. 44).

In September 2018, Dreamstime timely filed the amended complaint, asserting [*11] the same four claims for relief (Dkt. No. 50). Google again moved to dismiss (Dkt. No. 53), and following full briefing (Dkt. Nos. 60, 61), another hearing was held in December 2018. Orders subsequently issued seeking clarification from both Dreamstime and Google (Dkt. Nos. 66, 70). Having received clarifications from both sides, this order follows (Dkt. Nos. 68, 69, 71).

ANALYSIS

"To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 \(2009\) (quotations omitted). A claim is facially plausible "when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Id. at 678. Plausibility requires pleading facts, as opposed to conclusory allegations or the "formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action," Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 \(2007\), and must rise above the mere conceivability or possibility of unlawful conduct that entitles the pleader to relief. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678-79. "Where a complaint pleads facts that are merely consistent with a defendant's liability, it stops short of the line between possibility and plausibility of entitlement to relief." Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (citation [*12] and quotation omitted). Nor is it enough that the complaint is "factually neutral"; rather, it must be "factually suggestive." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557 n.5.

1. MONOPOLY MAINTENANCE UNDER SECTION 2 OF THE SHERMAN ACT.

Section 2 of the Sherman Act prohibits monopolization, attempted monopolization, and conspiracies to monopolize. More specifically, Section 2 provides that "[e]very person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of a felony." 15 U.S.C. §2.

The original complaint appeared to allege an unlawful monopoly leveraging theory based on the market for online stock photography and its dependence on the online search advertising market which Google purportedly monopolized. But both in Dreamstime's briefing and when directly asked during the first oral argument in September 2018, Dreamstime explicitly disavowed any such leveraging theory stating: "we are not alleging a two-market monopoly leveraging theory." Instead, Dreamstime insisted "it's a simple, straightforward monopoly maintenance case in which Google, with a market share of 70 percent plus, has maintained that [*13] monopoly power and abused it . . ." (Dkt. No. 49 at 37, 38).

But even the maintenance theory had not been adequately alleged. The Court thus gave Dreamstime another chance to revise the unwieldy complaint to set forth its antitrust theory, observing that the best shot for Dreamstime appeared to be a leveraging claim. Dreamstime accepted the opportunity to amend, but the amended complaint made clear: "Dreamstime is advancing a traditional monopoly maintenance antitrust claim" (Dkt. No. 50 at ¶ 111). Later, Dreamstime affirmatively disavowed any leveraging theory: "plaintiff Dreamstime is not asserting a separate Section 2 of the Sherman Act two-market 'monopoly leveraging' claim" (Dkt. No. 68 at 1). It is plain that plaintiff foresees asserting a leveraging theory, attempting instead (for whatever reason) to pigeonhole this claim under the guise of unlawful monopoly maintenance.

The amended complaint alleges a relevant product market of online search advertising (Dkt. No. 50 at ¶ 119). Dreamstime's monopoly maintenance theory centers on an intertwined relationship between stock photographs and the online search advertising market. That is, stock photographs "are a critical component of search-based [*14] display ads (ads that include pictures related to keyword searches). The use of stock photos in search-based display ads allows online search advertisers to create high-quality, engaging display ads that pop up when users enter certain keywords" (id. at ¶ 2b). Google purportedly therefore maintains its monopoly in the online search advertising market by taking "control over online stock photo supply . . . to sell in its advertising network, giving it a crucial competitive advantage over its competitors, such as Yahoo! and Bing" (id. at ¶ 4). Moreover, "[n]ow that Google has access to all of Shutterstock and Getty Images' stock photos, it has instantly become one of the largest distributors of stock photos to customers looking to use those photos in online ads" which "provide it with a key advantage over its online search advertising competitors, by allowing it to integrate hundreds of millions of licensed images into its search advertising network" (id. at ¶¶ 32, 34). Critically, Google then targets Dreamstime and other stock photography companies "by removing an important supplier of stock photos for search advertisers" (id. at ¶ 7).

As Google's rivals in the online search advertising [*15] market have their own image services that have failed to gain traction, Google's monopoly in online search advertising is further secured:

Competition in online search advertising is harmed by Google's promotion of Google Images over Dreamstime and others. Google's competitors, such as Bing and Yahoo!, offer competing search and image services. However, they have been unable to achieve the volume of traffic and associated historical data capable of allowing their image-based services to compete with Google Images. Google's elimination of Dreamstime and other stock photography websites enhances and entrenches Google Images' dominance and secures its competitive advantages over Bing and Yahoo!.

(id. at ¶ 102). As alleged in the amended complaint, therefore, Google's mechanism for restricting competition in the online search advertising market is to exclude Dreamstime and other stock photography companies from engaging in both Google's search function and sponsored ads:

Google intends to restrict competition among itself, Yahoo! and Bing, and to extend its dominance over chief rivals. Its vehicle for doing so is the exclusion of Dreamstime and several other non-partner stock photography [*16] websites . . . As these tactics injure competition in Google's market, they simultaneously cause material injuries to Dreamstime and other stock photo suppliers in the form of decreased or eliminated visibility in Google's search and ad results, overcharges for AdWords, lost revenue, lost customers, potential search engine optimization ("SEO") penalties, and loss of goodwill.

(id. at ¶ 10). In other words, the importance of stock photographs to Google means vanquishing smaller rivals in the stock photography industry:

Google has undertaken its . . . exclusionary conduct with the . . . purpose of maintaining and abusing its monopoly in the online search advertising market (by increasing Google Images' dominance and increasing its own stock photo offerings within its ad network) and to vanquish . . . smaller rivals in the online stock photography industry . . . Google's conduct discourages, prevents and/or precludes consumers from finding, accessing and/or buying services from Dreamstime and other online stock photo repositories directly, which in the long-run would erode Google's standing as the first place to go via its Google Images feature to search for . . . stock photos on the Internet. [*17]

(id. at ¶¶ 125, 126). In sum, Dreamstime has most recently clarified the theory as follows:

[P]laintiff Dreamstime is alleging that defendant Google is a monopolist and has engaged in an overall scheme consisting of various predatory and exclusionary acts to maintain its monopoly position in the online search advertising relevant market. This conduct is directed at harming Dreamstime as a consumer/participant of services in the online search advertising market. This conduct simultaneously harms competition and consumers, and enhances Google's monopoly in the online search advertising market . . . As Dreamstime has alleged, its exclusion harms competition and consumers and enhances Google's monopoly in the online search advertising market notwithstanding that Dreamstime does not directly compete with Google in that market. While not a direct competitor in the online search advertising market, Dreamstime does compete for the same web traffic and offers similar functions to Google (in particular, Google Images) with respect to image-related searches, and its exclusion is a means by which Google increases its image-related search dominance and therefore its foothold in the online search [*18] advertising market.

(Dkt. No. 68 at 1-2).

Dreamstime's theory, however, fails because it does not plausibly allege harm to competition in the relevant market. As the Supreme Court has made clear: "the possession of monopoly power will not be found unlawful unless it is accompanied by an element of anticompetitive conduct." Verizon Communications Inc. v. Law Offices of Curtis V. Trinko, LLP, 540 U.S. 398, 407, 124 S. Ct. 872, 157 L. Ed. 2d 823 (2004) (emphasis added). Our court of appeals defines anticompetitive conduct as "behavior that tends to impair the opportunities of rivals and either does not further competition on the merits or does so in an unnecessarily restrictive way." Cascade Health Solutions v. PeaceHealth, 515 F.3d 883, 894 (9th Cir. 2008) (citing Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 605 n.32, 105 S. Ct. 2847, 86 L. Ed. 2d 467 (1985)).

Dreamstime alleges the following eight predatory acts committed by Google, which, taken as a whole, purportedly combine to impose anticompetitive conduct: (1) rigging the AdWords auction bidding process to control the purchase of Google's AdWords advertising services; (2) downgrading and distorting Dreamstime's online search ranking (raising Dreamstime's costs of competing and threatening to drive it out of business); (3) favoring contractual partners (Shutterstock and Getty Images) with opportunities not available to other smaller stock photography suppliers; (4) selectively enforcing its rules and terms governing its online [*19] AdWords advertising program to disadvantage Dreamstime, thereby further undermining its ability to supply stock photos to its customers and Google's rivals; (5) elevating inconsequential websites ahead of Dreamstime and other online stock photography repositories; (6) suspending Dreamstime's mobile application purportedly for policy violations (that the application did not violate), and later de-indexing Dreamstime's mobile application for the most common searches for stock photos within the Google Play Store; (7) allowing users to bypass Dreamstime's licensed images and obtain them directly on Google Images without paying for them; and (8) engaging in unlawful activity to capture and use privacy protected data of its consumers and advertisers (Dkt. No. 50 at ¶ 133).

But the pattern of conduct that appears to be predatory here, is not in and of itself injurious to competition in the relevant market. The theory advanced by plaintiff is that Dreamstime is a victim of a series of predatory acts — but the only harm to competition alleged is that it hurt Dreamstime and Dreamstime's ability to act as a consumer in that market. In the auction process, it would be to the advantage of Google [*20] to have more bidders. Facialy, it does not make sense that Google would want to benefit from losing a customer.

What would make sense, is that Dreamstime is a potential competitor to Google in the online search advertising market with respect to images. Dreamstime could have its own search engine for images and sell sponsored ads and thus compete with Google as a rival. But Dreamstime has expressly disavowed that theory (Dkt. No. 68 at 1).*

Taking the synergistic effect of the alleged predatory acts together as an overall scheme, this maintenance theory still does not succeed as a Section 2 monopolization claim as "there can be no synergistic result" if none of the acts alleged is an antitrust violation. *Cal. Computer Prods. v. Int'l Bus. Machs., Corp.*, 613 F.2d 727, 746 \(9th Cir. 1979\). Although "a finding of some slight wrongdoing in certain areas need not by itself add up to a violation," Dreamstime still needs to meet every element of the antitrust claim. *City of Anaheim v. S. Cal. Edison Co.*, 955 F.2d 1373, 1376 \(9th Cir. 1992\). A showing of anticompetitive conduct is missing.

Much of the amended complaint focuses on the mistreatment of Dreamstime as a customer of Google in the online search advertising market. But such mistreatment, even by a monopolist, does not necessarily reduce competition in the relevant market. It is true that [*21] "reduction of competition does not invoke the Sherman Act until it harms consumer welfare." *Rebel Oil Co., Inc. v. Atlantic Richfield Co.*, 51 F.3d 1421, 1433 \(9th Cir. 1995\) (citations omitted). But showing harm to one customer does not on its own demonstrate anticompetitive conduct. As one leading treatise states: "[t]he real intent of a consumer welfare test is to identify practices that both exclude rivals from the market and harm consumers." The treatise further illustrates:

Suppose that Microsoft, which has a monopoly in its Windows operating system, should develop a new version that was particularly buggy and prone to crashes. Clearly, consumers as a group would be harmed because they have a few good alternatives to Windows. But developing a bad version of Windows is not a monopolistic practice because no one is excluded. Microsoft's mistake . . . might simply impose harm on consumers until Microsoft fixed the problems and restored the status quo, but the one thing that the practice would clearly not do is exclude rivals from the market. As a result, the practice is not 'monopolistic,' even though it causes consumer harm.

Phillip E. Areeda & Herbert Hovenkamp, *Antitrust Law* ¶ 651 (4th ed. 2015) (emphasis added). Although this example differs from the predatory [*22] acts alleged in the amended complaint in that Google is purportedly acting nefariously here, the fatal flaw in both theories remains the same: by destroying Dreamstime, no rival and no competition has been excluded from the online search advertising market, and therefore, no anticompetitive conduct has been adequately alleged.

To circumvent this problem, Dreamstime engages in some sleight of hand. Dreamstime asserts itself in the amended complaint not only as a customer whose welfare has been harmed, but also as a competitor to Google for web traffic and stock photographs. The relevant market alleged, however, is sponsored ads, not stock photographs. Dreamstime has repeatedly made clear, it is not, nor does it intend to be, a rival to Google in the relevant market: the online search advertising market (see Dkt. No. 68). Although Google may have reduced competition on the merits in the online stock photography market or "the online search advertising market for photography for images" (as the district judge asked Dreamstime at the December 2018 hearing), Dreamstime disavowed any such relevant market, insisting that the relevant market is "online search advertising, and we are in that [*23] market as a participant because we are a contractual customer of Google" (Dkt. No. 65 at 23).

---

*This theory is suggested by language in the amended complaint (see, e.g., Dkt. No. 50 at ¶¶ 36, 126). At oral argument in December 2018, the district judge asked Dreamstime whether or not this was its theory. Dreamstime dodged the question at the time (Dkt. No. 65 at 4) ("Well, we think we should have been a stronger competitor in the image market, not taking Google head on in the search market"), but later affirmatively disavowed the theory: "plaintiff Dreamstime is not alleging it is a future potential or actual direct competitor to defendant Google (or Yahoo! or Bing) in the online search advertising market" (Dkt. No. 68 at 1).

Scrutinizing the predatory actions alleged that are broader than mere harm to Dreamstime results in the same conclusion and do not "exclude[] some potential," or "limit[] some actual, competition." United States v. United Shoe Machinery Corp., 110 F. Supp. 295, 343 (D. Mass. 1953) (Judge Charles Wyzanski), aff'd per curiam, 347 U.S. 521, 74 S. Ct. 699, 98 L. Ed. 910 (1954). In fact, some alleged conduct are more likely to have the opposite impact. The rigging of the AdWords bidding process and the general selective enforcement of Google's rules, for example, are more likely to steer customers towards existing rivals or to foster competition by encouraging others to enter the market.

Turning to the sole remaining alleged predatory act, Google's capturing of data, Dreamstime has not demonstrated that this data is captured through a means other than Google's "ability, economies of scale, research, natural advantages, and adaptation to inevitable economic laws." Ibid. Although the data collection likely gives Google an advantage in the online search advertising market over its rivals, a monopolist utilizing its competitive advantage does not equate to anticompetitive conduct. Trinko, 540 U.S. at 415-16. Other than couching the data collection practice [*24] as "unlawful," Dreamstime has not specified how or in what way Google's data collection practice is anticompetitive.

Despite not listed as part of the eight predatory acts alleged in the amended complaint, this order pauses to explore the following possibility grounded in the facts alleged in the amended complaint: if, as Dreamstime states, it is true that the pipeline of stock photographs is the mechanism by which Google maintains its monopoly in the online search advertising market, then agreements between Google and stock photography companies streamlining that pipeline further allow Google to maintain its strength in the relevant market. This strength is further aided by Google's vast trove of data, including data shared between Shutterstock/Getty Images and Google as part of their agreements (Dkt. No. 50 at 103-104). This conduct, moreover, causes antitrust injury by increasing spending in the AdWords bidding campaigns for stock photography sites such as Dreamstime.

Even this conduct, however, would not be anticompetitive. Returning to the Supreme Court's opinion in Trinko: "Firms may acquire monopoly power by establishing an infrastructure that renders them uniquely suited to serve [*25] their customers." Trinko, 540 U.S. at 407. A company providing a platform for businesses to sell advertisements must be expected to efficiently produce the best possible product to its customers. Thus, if in the online search advertising market, this means making stock photographs readily available to businesses seeking to advertise, a company will likely attempt to enter into agreements to make those stock photographs as available as possible. The use of data and the securing of these agreements here are efficient business transactions that do not "attempt[] to exclude rivals on some basis other than efficiency." Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 605, 105 S. Ct. 2847, 86 L. Ed. 2d 467 (1985) (citations omitted) (emphasis added). The Sherman Act, moreover, "does not restrict the long recognized right of [a] trader or manufacturer engaged in an entirely private business, freely to exercise his own independent discretion as to parties with whom he will deal." United States v. Colgate & Co., 250 U.S. 300, 307, 39 S. Ct. 465, 63 L. Ed. 992, 1919 Dec. Comm'r Pat. 460 (1919).

Of course, Google could not enter into an agreement that violates Section 1 of the Sherman Act (agreements in unreasonable restraint of trade). But a Section 1 violation is not alleged here. Under Section 2, nothing Dreamstime has alleged demonstrates that Google has maintained its monopoly by engaging in conduct to "chill[] vigorous competition" in the [*26] relevant market. American Needle, Inc. v. National Football League, 560 U.S. 183, 190, 130 S. Ct. 2201, 176 L. Ed. 2d 947 (2010). Google may position itself to leap ahead of its rivals in the relevant market on the merits. It is telling that not a single fact in this 76-page first amended complaint (with 19 exhibits attached) specifies how Google's rivals or potential rivals are denied online search advertising market share due to the agreements between Google and Shutterstock/Getty Images. Dreamstime has not met its burden to show that the reason Google's rivals are unable to obtain the same access to licensed photos as Google is because of Google's anticompetitive action. Again, for all the amended complaint alleges, Shutterstock and Getty Images are perfectly free to enter into licensing arrangements with Yahoo! and Bing.

Nor do the antitrust laws require Google to enter into those same agreements with every stock photography company in the world. Or, as the Supreme Court stated: "The Sherman Act is indeed the Magna Carta of free enterprise, but it does not give judges carte blanche to insist that a monopolist alter its way of doing business whenever some other approach might yield greater competition." Trinko, 540 U.S. at 415-16 (emphasis in original) (quotations and citations omitted). Dreamstime's amended complaint [*27] misses a critical element in failing to allege a plausible monopoly maintenance claim — namely, injury to competition in the online search advertising market. The antitrust claim is dismissed without leave to amend.

2. BREACH OF CONTRACT.

To allege a breach of written contract, a plaintiff must plead: (1) the existence of a contract; (2) plaintiff's performance or excuse of performance; (3) defendant's breach; and (4) damages. See Oasis West Realty, LLC v. Goldman, 51 Cal. 4th 811, 821, 124 Cal. Rptr. 3d 256, 250 P.3d 1115 (2011). Dreamstime alleges Google breached two contracts: (1) the AdWords Agreement and (2) the Google Play Agreement.

Under the AdWords Agreement, Dreamstime alleges that Google breached its contract by providing Dreamstime advertising campaigns that did not work and did not meet Dreamstime's expectations, applied its policies and procedures unevenly towards Dreamstime, cancelled some of Dreamstime's ad campaigns for violating stated policies that the ad campaigns did not violate, and overcharged and overdelivered the ad campaigns (Dkt. No. 50 at ¶ 169). As to the Google Play Agreement, Dreamstime alleges that Google breached the agreement both by removing Dreamstime's mobile Buyer App from the Google Play app store unfairly and by de-indexing Dreamstime's Buyer [*28] App for common search terms (id. at ¶ 171).

Dreamstime's requirement at this stage is solely to identify with specificity the contractual obligations allegedly breached by Google sufficient to put Google on notice of the claims and plausibly allege a right to relief. See Kaar v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 71475, 2016 WL 3068396 (N.D. Cal. 2016) (Judge William Alsup). Dreamstime does so. In the amended complaint, Dreamstime alleges that the AdWords Agreement incorporated by reference the AdWords program policies, various FAQ answers, and support pages describing Google's policies. Taking the amended complaint as true, these policies provide in part that overdelivery is a breach of contract, that Google "intended the policies and descriptions of the services Google was to provide to apply equally to all who executed it," and that the policies include a specific list of prohibited conduct that would subject an advertisement to rejection or removal (such as "ads that mislead or trick the user into interacting with them[,]" and that "an account may be suspended if you have several violations or a serious violation") (Dkt. No. 50 at ¶¶ 164-167). As to the policies incorporated by reference into the Google Play Agreement, the amended complaint provides the specific [*29] policy section (Section 8.3) that Dreamstime is alleging Google breached.

Thus, the listings made by Dreamstime in the amended complaint are "enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007). The amended complaint accordingly puts Google on notice as to what provisions of the AdWords and Google Play Agreements have been breached.

Google contends provisions in the agreements undercut Dreamstime's theories for recovery, rendering the theories implausible. It is true that both the AdWords Agreement and Google Play Agreement contain "catch-all" provisions that may undercut the viability of the alleged claims (Dkt. No. 50 at Exh. F Section 1, 8, 12; Exh. O). But Google cites no authority requiring resolution at this stage. At this juncture, Google has been adequately notified of the provisions and facts at issue. The breach of contract claim may move forward.

3. BREACH OF IMPLIED GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING.

"[I]n every contract there is an implied covenant that neither party shall do anything which will have the effect of destroying or injuring the right of the other party to receive the fruits of the contract." Locke v. Warner Bros., Inc., 57 Cal. App. 4th 354, 363, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 921 \(1997\) (citations and quotations omitted). The undersigned has previously held that "absent [*30] those limited cases where a breach of a consensual contract term is not claimed or alleged, the only justification for asserting a separate cause of action for breach of the implied covenant is to obtain a tort recovery." See, e.g., Total Recall Techs. v. Luckey, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5659, 2016 WL 199796, at \*6 \(N.D. Cal. Jan. 16, 2016\) (citations omitted).

As alleged in the amended complaint, however, this action plausibly may be one of the aforementioned limited cases. Enough has been shown to support the notion that Google took affirmative steps to frustrate the purpose of the agreements. See Cobb v. Ironwood Country Club, 233 Cal. App. 4th 960, 966, 183 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282 \(2015\). For example, Google pretended to work to resolve purported "policy issues" with Dreamstime's ads while actually subverting and frustrating the ability of Dreamstime to realize the benefits of its contract. Google also is alleged to apply a double standard to Dreamstime's low cost and high cost advertising campaigns and a double standard in Google's treatment of Dreamstime compared to Dreamstime's competitors.

Further, the alleged conduct may go beyond the reach of a breach of contract claim. After all, a possibility exists that in scrutinizing the AdWords and Google Play Agreements, the "catch-all" provisions included therein would undercut any potential claim for breach of contract (Dkt. No. [*31] 50 at Exh. F Section 1, 8, 12; Exh. O). Dreamstime's cause of action of the breach of implied good faith and fair dealing therefore may move forward.

4. VIOLATION OF SECTION 17200.

Section 17200 of the California Business and Professions Code provides a remedy for unlawful, unfair, and fraudulent activity. The amended complaint alleges claims under all three prongs. The claim under the unlawful prong is derivative of the breach of contract and breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing and therefore may move forward.

Turning to the unfairness prong, California courts have applied unfairness under two different tests: Cel-Tech and South Bay. Our court of appeals has applied both tests. See, e.g., Hodsdon v. Mars, Inc., 891 F.3d 857, 865-67 \(9th Cir. 2018\). Cel-Tech held that to be unfair under the unfairness prong, the alleged conduct must be "tethered to some legislatively declared policy" or have some effect on competition. Cel-Tech Communications, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Telephone Co., 20 Cal.4th 163, 186-87, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 \(1999\). Under South Bay, a challenged business practice qualifies as unfair when the practice is "immoral, unethical, oppressive, unscrupulous or substantially injurious to consumers." South Bay Chevrolet v. General Motors Acceptance Corporation, 72 Cal. App. 4th 861, 886-87, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301 \(1999\) (citation omitted).

Here, applying both tests, the unfairness prong is satisfied. Dreamstime plausibly alleges that Google, for example, pretended to work in good faith to resolve purported "policy issues" with [*32] Dreamstime's ads while actually intending at all times to remove them arbitrarily. Such action, taken as true, both plausibly breaches the contract through the breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing thereby tethering the alleged conduct to a legislatively declared policy and is a sufficiently alleged unscrupulous behavior substantially injurious to Dreamstime. Allegations under the unfairness prong may therefore move forward.

Turning to the fraud prong, Dreamstime alleges that Google mislead Dreamstime with various false assertions as to its ad campaigns. Indeed, the complaint documents numerous times Google falsely told Dreamstime the ad campaigns were working as they were supposed to (Dkt. No. 50 at ¶¶ 78, 90).

To determine if the elements of fraud have been pleaded to state a cause of action, the court looks to state law. In California, the elements of a cause of action for fraud are: "(a) misrepresentation (false representation, concealment, or nondisclosure); (b) knowledge of falsity (or 'scienter'); (c) intent to defraud, i.e., to induce reliance; (d) justifiable reliance; and (e) resulting damage." *Kearns v. Ford Motor Co.*, 567 F.3d 1120, 1126 \(9th Cir. 2009\) (citing *Engalla v. Permanente Med. Group*, 15 Cal.4th 951, 974, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843, 938 P.2d 903 \(1997\)) (emphasis in original). *Rule 9\(b\)*'s heightened pleading [*33] standards apply here. See *Kearns*, 567 F.3d at 1125. Under *Rule 9\(b\)*, a pleading is sufficient if it identifies the circumstances constituting fraud so that a defendant can prepare an adequate answer from the allegations. *Moore v. Kayport Package Exp., Inc.*, 885 F.2d 531, 540 \(9th Cir. 1989\). The false statements alleged in the amended complaint that Dreamstime relied on to pour more money into its AdWords campaign, at the very least, sufficiently put Google on notice of the circumstances constituting fraud. The claim for fraud has therefore been pled with sufficient particularity and may move forward.

CONCLUSION

For the above-stated reasons, Google's motion to dismiss is GRANTED IN PART AND DENIED IN PART. The motion to dismiss is granted as to the antitrust claim without leave to amend. The motion to dismiss is denied as to the breach of contract claim, the breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing claim, and the Section 17200 claims.

The answer is due within 10 calendar days. Both sides should be taking discovery and preparing themselves for summary judgment and/or trial. Reasonable discovery relevant to the allowed claims shall be permitted even if it is also relevant to the Section 2 claim. Further leave to amend will be allowed only if further investigation or discovery reveals facts [*34] not previously known that would change the analysis.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Dated: January 28, 2019.

/s/ William Alsup

WILLIAM ALSUP

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

---

End of Document

In re Payment Card Interchange Fee & Merch. Disc. Antitrust Litig.

United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York

January 28, 2019, Decided; January 28, 2019, Filed

05-MD-1720 (MKB) (JO)

Reporter

330 F.R.D. 11 *; 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13481 **; 2019-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P80,657; 2019 WL 359981

IN RE PAYMENT CARD INTERCHANGE FEE AND MERCHANT DISCOUNT ANTITRUST LITIGATION. This document refers to: ALL ACTIONS

Prior History: In re Payment Card Interchange Fee & Merch. Disc. Antitrust Litig., 398 F. Supp. 2d 1356, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25950 \(J.P.M.L., Oct. 19, 2005\)

Core Terms

---

settlement, Notice, class member, settlement agreement, class plaintiff, preliminary approval, final approval, Superseding, class action, merchants, damages, parties, class certification, interchange, factors, risks, Plaintiffs', injunctive relief, predominance, Branded, courts, proposed settlement, antitrust, weigh, Cards, terms, negotiations, mediators, certification, cases

Counsel: [**1] For Payment Card Interchange Fee and Merchant Discount Antitrust Litigation, In Re: Linda P. Nussbaum, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nussbaum Law Group, PC, New York, NY; Alexandra S. Bernay, Carmen A. Medici, David W. Mitchell, PRO HAC VICE, Coughlin Stoia Geller Rudman & Robbins LLP, San Diego, CA; Benjamin R. Nagin, Sidley Austin LLP, New York, NY; D. Cameron Baker, Coughlin Stoia Geller Rudman & Robbins LLP, San Francisco, CA; Dennis Stewart, Hulett Harper Stewart LLP, San Diego, CA; Ryan W. Marth, PRO HAC VICE, Eric P. Barstad, Robins Kaplan LLP, Minneapolis, MN; Eric H. Grush, Sidley Austin LLP, Chicago, IL; Gary R. Carney, Jr., Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, New York, NY; H. Laddie Montague, Berger & Montague, P.C., Philadelphia, PA; Jonah H Goldstein, PRO HAC VICE, Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd LLP, San Diego, CA; K. Craig Wildfang, Robins Kaplan L.L.P., Minneapolis, MN; Merrill G. Davidoff, Beger & Montague, P.C., Philadelphia, PA; Patrick Joseph Coughlin, Robbins Geller, New York, NY; Stacey Slaughter, Robins, Kaplan, Miller & Ciresi L.L.P., Minneapolis, MN; Thomas J. Undlin, Robins Kaplan, L.L.P., Minneapolis, MN.

For Mr Gary Friedman, Movant: Gary B. Friedman, LEAD ATTORNEY, [**2] Friedman Law Group LLP, New York, NY.

For Eastern Watch Co., Robert Gardner, Karla F. Solis, D.D.S., Inc. d/b/a LA Holistic Dentistry, The Perfect Sidekick, LLC, Movants: David S. Preminger, Keller Rohrback LLP, New York, NY.

For Aldi Inc., Movant: Jerome F. Buch, John Robert Schleppenbach, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Seyfarth Shaw LLP, Chicago, IL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Jetro Holding, Inc. et al v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 05-cv-4520 JG-JO, Plaintiff: K. Craig Wildfang, Robins Kaplan L.L.P., Minneapolis, MN; Jeffrey Isaac Shinder, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; Thomas M. Campbell, Smith Campbell, LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action National Association of Convenience Stores et al v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 05-cv-4521 JG-JO, Plaintiffs in civil action National Grocers Association et al v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 05-cv-5207 JG-JO, Plaintiffs: Jeffrey Isaac Shinder, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox &

Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; Thomas M. Campbell, Smith Campbell, LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, [**3] PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Supervalu Inc. v. Visa U.S.A. Inc. et al 05-cv-4650 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Thomas M. Campbell, Smith Campbell, LLP, New York, NY; David P. Germaine, Joseph Michael Vanek, PRO HAC VICE, Vanek Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Paul E. Slater, Sperling Slater & Spitz, Chicago, IL; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; Robert C. Mason, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Publix Supermarkets, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A. Inc. et al 05-cv-4677 -JG-JO, Plaintiffs in civil action Raley's v. Visa U.S.A. Inc. et al 05-cv-4799 JG-JO, Plaintiffs: Thomas M. Campbell, Smith Campbell, LLP, New York, NY; David P. Germaine, Joseph Michael Vanek, PRO HAC VICE, Vanek Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Paul E. Slater, Sperling Slater & Spitz, Chicago, IL; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Seaway Gas & Petroleum, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 05- cv-4728-JG-JO, Plaintiff: [**4] Jeffrey M Norton, LEAD ATTORNEY, Newman Ferrara LLP, New York, NY; Donald A. Broggi, Scott & Scott, LLC., San Diego, CA; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; Thomas M. Campbell, Smith Campbell, LLP, New York, NY; Walter W. Noss, Scott Scott, LLC, Chagrin Falls, OH; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action East Goshen Pharmacy, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5073 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Patrick A. Klingman, Shepherd Finkelman Miller & Shah, LLC, Chester, CT; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; Thomas M. Campbell, Smith Campbell, LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action American Booksellers Association v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 05-cv-5319 JG-JO, Plaintiff: K. Craig Wildfang, Robins Kaplan L.L.P., Minneapolis, MN; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; Thomas M. Campbell, Smith Campbell, LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Rookies, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-CV-5069 JG-JO, Plaintiffs [**5] in civil action Baltimore Avenue Foods, LLC v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5080 JG-JO, Plaintiffs in civil action Hyman v. VISA International Service Association, Inc. 05-cv- 5866 JG-JO, Plaintiffs in civil action Hy-Vee, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 05-cv-3925-JG-JO, Plaintiffs in civil actionPhotos Etc. Corp. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5071JG-JO, Plaintiffs in civil action Dr. Roy Hyman, et al v. Visa International Service Association, Inc., et al . 05-cv-5866 JG-JO, Plaintiffs in civil action G.E.S. Bakery, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., et al. 05-cv-5879 JG-JO, Plaintiffs in Twisted Spoke v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., et al. 05-cv-5881 JG-JO, Plaintiffs in civil action 518 Restaurant Corp. v. American Express Travel Related Services Co., Inc., et al. 05-cv-5884 JG-JO, Plaintiffs: Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Jasperson v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5070 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Brian N. Toder, Jeffrey D. Bores, Karl Cambronne, Stewart C. Loper, Chestnut & Cambronne, P.A., Minneapolis, MN; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay [**6] Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in Civil action Animal Land, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc 05-cv-5074 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Mark Reinhardt, LEAD ATTORNEY, Reinhardt Wendorf & Blanchfield, St. Paul, MN; Craig Gordon Harley, Yeshimebet Abebe, Chitwood Harley Harnes, LLP, Atlanta, GA; Dean Martin Solomon, Levitt & Kaizer, New York, NY; Gary B. Friedman, Friedman Law Group LLP, New York, NY; James M. Wilson, Jr., Faruqi & Faruqi, LLP, New York, NY; Noah Shube, New York, NY; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Bonte Wafflerie, LLC v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5083 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Robert S. Kitchenoff, LEAD ATTORNEY, Weinstein Kitchenoff & Asher; Patricia I. Avery, Wolf Popper LLP, New York, NY; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; Robert D. Greenbaum, Robert D. Greenbaum & Associates LLC, Philadelphia, PA; Steven A. Asher, Weinstein Kitchenoff & Asher, Philadelphia, PA; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Broken Ground, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5082 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William J. Ban, Barrack, Rodos & Bacine, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Fairmont Orthopedics & Sports Medicine, PA v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5076 JG JO, Plaintiff: Jason S. Kilene, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Gustafson Gluek PLLC, Minneapolis, MN; Dennis Stewart, Hulett Harper Stewart LLP, San Diego, CA; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Tabu Salon & Spa, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5072 JG-JO, Plaintiff: H. Laddie Montague, Michael J. Kane, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Berger & Montague, P.C., Philadelphia, PA; Merrill G. Davidoff, Beger & Montague, P.C., Philadelphia, PA; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Lakeshore Interiors v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5081JG JO, Plaintiff: Carmen B. Copher, Charles N. Nauen, Darla Jo Boggs, Karen Hanson Riebel, [*8] Rachel J. Christiansen, Richard A. Lockridge, William A. Gengler, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Lockridge Grindal Nauen P.L.L.P., Minneapolis, MN; W. Joseph Bruckner, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Lockridge Grindal Nauen P.L.L.P., Minneapolis, MN; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Parkway Corp. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5077 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Hadley P Roeltgen, Robert J. LaRocca, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Kohn Swift & Graf, Philadelphia, PA; Jason L. Solotaroff, LEAD ATTORNEY, Giskan Solotaroff Anderson & Stewart LLP, New York, NY; Joshua D. Snyder, PRO HAC VICE, Boni Zack & Snyder LLC, Bala Cynwyd, PA; Kate Reznick, Michael J. Boni, Boni & Zack, LLC, Bala Cynwyd, PA; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action NuCity Publications, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5075 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Dennis Stewart, Hulett Harper Stewart LLP, San Diego, CA; Donald L. Perelman, Fine, Kaplan and Black, R.P.C., Philadelphia, PA; Joseph Goldberg, Freedman Boyd Daniels Hollander [*9] Goldberg & Cline, P.A., Albuquerque, NM; Leslie Hurst, Lerach Coughlin, et al., San Diego, CA; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Lee et al v. Visa U.S.A. Inc. et al 05-cv-3800 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Jerald M. Stein, LEAD ATTORNEY, Law Office of Jerald M. Stein, New York, NY; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Resnick Amsterdam & Leshner P.C. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 05-cv-3924 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Ann D. White, Ann D. White Law Office, Jenkintown, PA; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Meijer, Inc. et al v. Visa U.S.A. Inc. et al 05-cv-4131-JG-JO, Plaintiff: Linda P. Nussbaum, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nussbaum Law Group, PC, New York, NY; David P. Germaine, Joseph Michael Vanek, PRO HAC VICE, Vanek Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL; Paul E. Slater, Sperling Slater & Spitz, Chicago, IL; Richard J. Kilsheimer, [*10] Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; Robert N. Kaplan, Kaplan, Kilsheimer & Fox, LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Lepkowski v. Mastercard International Incorporated et al 05-cv-4974 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; Tracey L. Kitzman, Friedman Law Group, LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Kroger Co. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5078 JG-JO, Plaintiff: William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Barry L. Refsin, Hangley Aronchick Segal & Pudlin, Philadelphia, PA; Eric Bloom, Hangle Aronchick Segal & Pudlin, Harrisburg, PA; Richard A. Arnold, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Fitlife Health Systems of Arcadia, Inc. v. Mastercard International Incorporated et al 05-cv-5153 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Francis J. Balint, Bonnett Fairbourn Friedman & Balint, P.C., Phoenix, AZ; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY. [**11] William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Harris Stationers, Inc., et al. v. Visa International Service Association, et al. 05-cv-5868 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Joseph R. Saveri, LEAD ATTORNEY, Lieff, Cabraser, Heimann & Bernstein, LLP, San Francisco, CA; Daniel M. Bradley, Richardson, Patrick, Westbrook & Brickman, LLC, Charleston, SC; Daniel O. Myers, Richardson, Patrick, Westbrook & Brickman, LLC, Mount Pleasant, SC; Kimberly Keevers Palmer, Richardson, Patrick, Westbrook & Brickman, LLC, Charleston, SC; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY. William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Performance Labs, Inc. v. American Express Travel Related Services Co., Inc., et al. 05-cv-5869 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Jonathan J. Lerner, Starr, Gern, Davison & Rubin, P.C., Roseland, NJ; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY. William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Discount Optics, Inc., et al. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., et al. 05-cv-5870 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Jason S. Hartley, LEAD ATTORNEY, [**12] PRO HAC VICE, Hartley LLP, San Diego, CA; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY. William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action LDC, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., et al 05-cv-5871 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Dennis Stewart, Hulett Harper Stewart LLP, San Diego, CA; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Leeber Cohen, M.D. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., et al. 05-cv-5878 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Bernard Persky, Robins Kaplan LLP, New York, NY; Douglas Thompson, Finkelstein Thompson LLP, Washington, DC; Gregory Scott Asciola, Labaton Sucharow, New York, NY; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Connecticut Food Association, Inc., et al. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., et al. 05-cv-5880 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Joe R. Whatley, Jr., LEAD ATTORNEY, Whatley Drake & Kallas LLC, New York, NY; Charles S. Hellman, Dubner, Hartley & O'Connor LLC, New York, NY; J. Douglas Richards, Pomerantz Haudek Block Grossman [**13] & Gross LLP, New York, NY; Michael M. Buchman, Motley Rice LLC, New York, NY; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; Richard P. Rouco, Quinn Connor Weaver Davies & Rouco, Birmingham, AL; Ryan G. Kriger, Milberg Weiss Bershad & Schulman LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Lombardo Bros., Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-5882 JG-JO, Plaintiffs in civil action Abdallah Bishara, etc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5883 JG-JO, Plaintiffs: Dianne M. Nast, NastLaw LLC, Philadelphia, PA; Erin Burns, NastLaw LLC, Philadelphia, PA; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action The Kroger Co., et al. v. MasterCard Inc., et al., 06-cv-0039 JG-JO, Plaintiff: William Jay Blechman, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Barry L. Refsin; Eric Bloom, Hangle Aronchick Segal & Pudlin, Harrisburg, PA; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Rite Aid Corporation et al. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al. 05-cv-5352 JGJO, Plaintiff: Ashely M. Chan, [**14] Barry L. Refsin, Hangle Aronchick Segal & Pudlin, Philadelphia, PA; Eric Bloom, Hangle Aronchick Segal & Pudlin, Harrisburg, PA; Kenneth G. Walsh, Kirby McInerney LLP, New York, NY; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

Plaintiffs in civil action Fringe, Inc. v. Visa, U.S.A., Inc et al 05-cv-4194 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Jayne A. Goldstein, PRO HAC VICE, Shepherd Finkelman Miller & Shah LLP, Fort Lauderdale, FL; Lee Albert, Mager & Goldstein LLP, Philadelphia, PA; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Bi-Lo, LLC. et al v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 06-cv-2532 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Ashely M. Chan, Barry L. Refsin, Hangle Aronchick Segal & Pudlin, Philadelphia, PA; Eric Bloom, Hangle Aronchick Segal & Pudlin, Harrisburg, PA; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Bi-Lo, LLC. et al v. Mastercard Incorporated et al 06-cv-2534 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Ashely [**15] M. Chan, Barry L. Refsin, Hangle Aronchick Segal & Pudlin, Philadelphia, PA; Barry L. Refsin; Eric Bloom, Hangle Aronchick Segal & Pudlin, Harrisburg, PA; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY. William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action 06-cv-5583, Esdacy, INC. v. Visa USA, INC. et al, Plaintiff: Angus Macaulay Lawton, Jonathan Craig Smith, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Joyce Law Firm, Charleston, SC; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For QVC, Inc., Plaintiff: L. Webb Campbell, II, Sherrard & Roe PLC, Nashville, TN; Paul E. Slater, Sperling Slater & Spitz, Chicago, IL; Phillip F. Cramer, Sherrard & Roe PLC, Nashville, TN; Richard J. Kilsheimer, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Payless ShoeSource, Payless Shoe Source, Inc., Plaintiff: J. Douglas Richards, LEAD ATTORNEY, Pomerantz Haudek Block Grossman & Gross LLP, New York, NY; Michael M. Buchman, Motley Rice LLC, New York, NY; Geoffrey Holmes Kozen, Robins Kaplan LLP, Minneapolis, [**16] MN; Michelle Catherine Zolnoski, Motley Rice LLC, New York, NY UNITED STATES; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For GMRI, Inc., Plaintiff: K. Craig Wildfang, LEAD ATTORNEY, Robins Kaplan L.L.P., Minneapolis, MN; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Capital Audio Electronics, Inc., Plaintiff: Christopher J McDonald, Jay L. Himes, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Labaton Sucharow LLP, New York, NY; Morissa Robin Falk, LEAD ATTORNEY, Labaton Sucharow, New York, NY; Bruce H. Levinson, Law Offices of Bruce Levinson, New York, NY; Geoffrey Holmes Kozen, Robins Kaplan LLP, Minneapolis, MN; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; William V. Reiss, Robins Kaplan LLP, New York, NY.

For NATSO, Inc., Plaintiff: Adam Owen Glist, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY; David Balto, Law Offices of David Balto, Washington, DC; Jeffrey Isaac Shinder, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY; William Jay Blechman, PRO HAC VICE, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Plaintiffs in civil action BKS. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 09-cv-2264-JG-JO, Plaintiff: Carroll H. Ingram, LEAD ATTORNEY, INGRAM & ASSOCIATES, Hattiesburg, MS; [**17] Jennifer Ingram Wilkinson, PRO HAC VICE, Ingram Wilkinson, PLLC, Hattiesburg, MS; John Corlew, PRO HAC VICE, Corlew, Munford & Smith, PLLC, Jackson, MS; John F Hawkins, PRO HAC VICE, Hawkins Gibson, PLLC, Jackson, MS.

For Plaintiffs in civil action Gulfside Casino Partnership. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 09-cv-03225 JG-JO, Plaintiff: Jennifer Ingram Wilkinson, Ingram Wilkinson, PLLC.

For Keith Superstores, BKS, INC., BKS of LA, Inc. d/b/a KEITH SUPERSTORES, and KEITHCO PETROLEUM, INC., Keithco Petroleum, Inc.. BKS, INC., BKS of LA, Inc. d/b/a KEITH SUPERSTORES, and KEITHCO PETROLEUM, INC., Plaintiffs: John F Hawkins, PRO HAC VICE, Hawkins Gibson, PLLC, Jackson, MS.

For National Community Pharmacists Association, National Cooperative Grocers Association, Plaintiffs: Daniel Hume, Kirby McInerney LLP, New York, NY; David E. Kovel, Kirby McInerney LLP, New York, NY; Eric Citron, Goldstein & Russell P.C., Bethesda, MD; Jeffrey Isaac Shinder, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY; Meghan Joan Summers, Kirby McInerney LLP, New York, NY; Thomas Goldstein, Goldstein & Russell, P.C., Bethesda, MD.

For Coborn's Incorporated, D'Agostino Supermarkets, Plaintiffs: Adam Owen Glist, Constantine Cannon LLP, [**18] New York, NY; Jeffrey Isaac Shinder, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY.

For Affiliated Foods Midwest, Plaintiff: Adam Owen Glist, Jeffrey Isaac Shinder, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY.

For Robersons Fine Jewelry, Inc., Plaintiff: Jerrold S. Parker, Parker & Waichman, LLC, Great Neck, NY.

For Gielen Enterprises, Inc., Rice Palace, Inc.; Tobacco Plus, Inc.; Plaintiff: Arun Srinivas Subramanian, LEAD ATTORNEY, Susman Godfrey LLP, New York, NY.

For Plaintiffs in Delta Airlines Inc et al v. Visa Inc et al, 1:13-cv-04766-JG-JO, Plaintiff: Richard E. Norman, Crowley Norman LLP, Houston, TX.

For Cox Communications, Inc., Cox Enterprises, Inc., Cox Media Group LLC, G6 Hospitality LLC, Live Nation Entertainment Inc, Manheim Inc, Motel 6 Operating LP, Plaintiffs: Brian R Strange, Keith L Butler, LEAD ATTORNEYS, PRO HAC VICE, Strange and Carpenter, Los Angeles, CA.

For Manheim Inc, Plaintiff: Brian R Strange, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Strange and Carpenter, Los Angeles, CA.

For Kum & Go, L.C., Sheetz, Inc., Susser Holdings Corporation, The Pantry, Inc., Plaintiffs: Donald R. Hall, Jr., Frederic S. Fox, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP, New York, NY; Donald Matt Mattson Keil, LEAD [**19] ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Keil & Goodson PA, Texarkana, AR; George L McWilliams, LEAD ATTORNEY, Texarkana, TX; John C Goodson, LEAD ATTORNEY, Keil & Goodson PA, Texarkana, AR; Matthew Powers McCahill, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer, LLP, New York, NY; Robert N. Kaplan, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kaplan, Kilsheimer & Fox, LLP, New York, NY.

For Plaintiffs in Target Corporation, et al. v. Visa Inc., et al., 13-cv-03477, Plaintiff: Amanda McMurray Roe, PRO HAC VICE, Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP, Cleveland, OH; James A. Wilson, Kimberly Weber Herlihy, Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease, LLP (Columbus), Columbus, OH.

Plaintiffs in Civil Action Target Corporation, et al. v. Visa Inc. et al., 13-cv-4442, Plaintiff, Pro se.

For DSW, Inc., Plaintiff: Jason A. Zweig, Hagens Berman Sobol Shapiro LLP, New York, NY.

Jetblue Airways Corporation, Plaintiff, Pro se.

Plaintiffs in Civil Action 7-Eleven Inc., et al. v. Visa Inc. et al, 1:13-cv-05746-JG-JO, Plaintiff, Pro se.

For Sunoco, Inc. (R&M), Plaintiff: Arthur Christopher Young, LEAD ATTORNEY, Jessica S. Russell, Pepper Hamilton LLP, Philadelphia, PA; Edwin M. Buffmire, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Jackson Walker LLP, Dallas, TX; Robert [**20] Hickok, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Pepper Hamilton, LLP, Philadelphia, PA; Stephanie L. Jonaitis, LEAD ATTORNEY, Pepper Hamilton LLP, Princeton, NJ.

Minnesota Twins LLC, Plaintiff, Pro se.

For CHS Inc., Leons Transmission Service, Inc, Traditions, Ltd, Plaintiffs: H. Laddie Montague, LEAD ATTORNEY, Berger & Montague, P.C., Philadelphia, PA; K. Craig Wildfang, LEAD ATTORNEY, Robins Kaplan L.L.P., Minneapolis, MN; Geoffrey Holmes Kozen, Robins Kaplan LLP, Minneapolis, MN.

Leons Transmission Service, Inc, Plaintiff, Pro se.

For Google Inc., Google Payment Corporation, Plaintiffs: David T Moran, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Jackson Walker, Dallas, TX.

For Bass Pro Group, LLC, American Sportsman Holdings Co., Bass Pro Outdoor World, LLC, Bass Pro Shops White River Conference & Education Center, LLC, BPIP, LLC, BPS Direct, LLC, Big Cedar, LLC, Fryingpan River Ranch, LLC, Islamorada Fish Company Kansas, LLC, Islamorada Fish Company Texas, LLC, Islamorada Fish Company, LLC, Sportman's Distribution Co. of GA, LLC, Sportsman's Specialty Group, LLC, TMBC Corp. of Canada, Tracker Marine Financial Services, LLC, Tracker Marine Retail, LLC, Tracker Marine, LLC, Travis Boats & Motors Baton Rouge, LLC, [**21] Charming Charlie LLC, City of Scottsdale, Starving Students, Inc., Crocs Retail, LLC, Crocs, Inc., East Coast Waffles, Inc., Ethan Allen Global, Inc., Ethan Allen Interiors, Inc., Ethan Allen Miami, LLC, Ethan Allen Operations, Inc., Ethan Allen Realty, LLC, Plaintiffs: Richard E. Norman, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Crowley Norman LLP, Houston, TX.

For Ethan Allen Retail, Inc., Ethan Allen.com, Inc., Fury, Inc., Grand America Hotel Company, Crab Addison, Inc., BHHT Entertainment, Inc., BHHT Private Club - Plano TX, Board of Trustees of the University of Arkansas acting for University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, Bite, Inc., Jibbitz, LLC, Lake Avenue Associates, Inc., Love's Travel Stops & Country Stores, Inc., Lucky Brand Dungarees Stores, Inc., Little America Hotel Company, Little America Hotels and Resorts Inc., Lizzy Mae, Inc., Ethan Allen (Canada) Inc., Manor House, Inc., Joe's Crab Shack - Abingdon MD, Inc., Joe's Crab Shack - Alabama Private Club, Inc., Joe's Crab Shack - Anne Arundel MC, Inc., Joe's Crab Shack - Hunt Valley MD, Inc., Joe's Crab Shack - Kansas, Inc., Joe's Crab Shack - Maryland, Inc., Joe's Crab Shack - Texas Inc., Joe's Crab Shack -Redondo Beach, Inc., JCS Monmouth [**22] Mall - NJ, LLC, Mid South Waffles, Inc., Midwest Waffles, Inc., Ignite Restaurant Group, Inc., Ignite Restaurants - New Jersey, Inc., Scandinavian Airlines System Denmark-, Norway-Sweden, Scandinavian Airlines of North America Inc., Sinclair Oil Corporation, Snowbasin Resort Company, Stuart Weitzman Holdings, LLC, Stuart Weitzman IP, LLC, Sun Valley Company, Sportsman's Specialty Group, LLC, Stuart Weitzman Retail Stores, LLC, Stuart Weitzman, LLC, New West Jeanswear Holding LLC, formerly known as Jones Holding Inc., Nine West Development LLC, formerly known as Nine West Development Corporation, Nine West Holdings, Ocean Minded, Inc., One Jeanswear Group, Inc., Ozark Waffles, LLC, Jones Distribution Corporation, Jones Investment Co., Inc., Jones Management Service Company, TMBC, LLC, Tiffany and Company, doing business as Tiffany & Co., Twin Liquors, LP, Waffle House, Inc., Westgate Hotel Company, William-Sonoma Inc., Ross Dress for Less, Inc., 1-800 Contacts, Inc., doing business as Glasses.com, doing business as South Valley Optical, GES Inc., dba Food Giant, Henry Oil Company of Tennessee, Savings Carolina Division, Plaintiffs: Richard E. Norman, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Crowley [**23] Norman LLP, Houston, TX.

For Electronic Payment Systems, LLC, Plaintiff: Scotty P. Krob, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Krob Law Office, LLC, Greenwood Village, CO.

For Bravo Foods, CFL Pizza, CGS Sales, Captain Development Co, Cary Oil, Cusick Corporation, Delta Sonic Carwash Systems, Epping Forest Yacht Club, GT Petroleum, Gate Fuel Service, Gate Petroleum Company, High Plains Pizza, North American Financial Group, Ponte Vedra Corporation, Ponte Vedra Lodge, River Club, The, Stinker Stores, Plaintiffs: Brent O. Hatch, Shaunda L. McNeill, LEAD ATTORNEYS, HATCH JAMES & DODGE, SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For Casey's Marketing Company, Casey's Retail Company, Casey's Services Company, Plaintiffs: Brent O. Hatch, Shaunda L. McNeill, LEAD ATTORNEYS, HATCH JAMES & DODGE, SALT LAKE CITY, UT; James Michael Evangelista, Evangelista Worley LLC, Atlanta, GA.

For CTC LLC Diamond Jim's, CTC LLP Crossroads Travel Center, Captain Development Co, Carolina Pizza Co, Crossroads Cafe, DC's Eastgate, DHCC LLC, DJ Casinos, Daland Corporation, Great Lakes Convenience, HN LLC, Hi-Noon Petroleum, MRC Hi-Noon, MTG Managment, Mackinaw Food Services, Michigan Pizza Service, Northfield Restaurant, Peru Pizza, Pester Marketing, [**24] TTM Montana LLC, TriConn, Triple S Oil, doing business as, Mr. Gas, Virginia Pizza, WGN, Champlain Oil, Coco Mart, doing business as, Jiffy Mart, Columbia Basin Pizza Hut, Emerald City Pizza, J.D. Streett & Company, Kath Fuel Oil Service, Las Vegas Pizza, Pizza Hut of Southeast Kansas, Slidell Oil, Space Age Fuel, Spokane Valley Pizza, TB of America, By-Lo Oil, CNH Food, Canton Pizza, Capital Pizza Huts, Capital Pizza Huts of Vermont, Capital Pizza of New Hampshire, Columbian Pizza, Craig Food Stores, Dash In Food Stores, Delmarva Oil, Downs Energy, Elyria Pizza, Fastrip Oil, Flyers Energy, G.E. Junghans Discount Liquor, Geuga Pizza, Golden Dollar, HJB Convenience, Heart of Texas Pizza, Herdrich Petroleum, J&J Golf, JAG Convenience, JNH Food, Jaco Hill Company, Jamieson Hill Company, Kocomo Pizza, Lacombe Chevron Travel Center, Lawrence Oil, Leonard E Belcher Inc, Liberty Pizza, M2R, Mission Trail Oil, Mountain View Pizza, NJ Capital Furnishings, North Coast Pizza, Oklahoma Magic, Painesville Pizza, Pete's of Erie, Plaid Pantries, Pliska Golf, Pliska Investments, Popingo's Convenience Stores, Potomac Energy Holdings, RKS Ventures, Redding Oil, Reid Companies, Reid Petroleum, Reid [**25] Stores, Robinson Oil, Plaintiffs: Brent O. Hatch, Shaunda L. McNeill, LEAD ATTORNEYS, HATCH JAMES & DODGE, SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For SMO, Salem Pizza, Schmitt Sales, Seaside Pizza, Shop Quik Stores, Sky of Jenks, Slidell Oil, Southern Maryland Oil, Space Age Fuel, Speedie Mart, Speedy Q Markets, Spencer Companies, Tri Star Marketing, Trico Pizza, Valley Petroleum, WK Capital Enterprises, Wallis Oil Company, Wallis Petroleum, Wayne Pizza, Wayne

Pizza of Ohio, Wills Group, The, Plaintiffs: Brent O. Hatch, Shaunda L. McNeill, LEAD ATTORNEYS, HATCH JAMES & DODGE, SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For Jetro Cash & Carry, Plaintiff: Daniel Hume, David E. Kovel, Meghan Joan Summers, Kirby McInerney LLP, New York, NY; Eric Citron, Goldstein & Russell P.C., Bethesda, MD.

For National Association of Truck Stop Operators, National Grocers Association, Plaintiffs: Daniel Hume, David E. Kovel, Meghan Joan Summers, Kirby McInerney LLP, New York, NY; Eric Citron, Thomas Goldstein, Goldstein & Russell P.C., Bethesda, MD.

For Calloway Oil Company, E-Z Stop Foodmarts, Inc., Plaintiffs: James Michael Evangelista, Evangelista Worley LLC, Atlanta, GA.

For Aloha Petroleum, LTD, Plaintiff: Edwin M. Buffmire, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO [**26] HAC VICE, Jackson Walker LLP, Dallas, TX; Robert Hickok, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Jessica S. Russell, Pepper Hamilton, LLP, Philadelphia, PA.

For CMP Consulting Serv., Inc., Generic Depot 3, Inc. d/b/a Prescription Depot, PureOne, LLC d/b/a Salon Pure, Plaintiffs: Daniel Lawrence Berger, Deborah A. Elman, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Grant & Eisenhofer P.A., New York, NY; Robert G. Eisler, Grant & Eisenhofer P.A., Wilmington, DE.

For DDMB 2, LLC d/b/a Emporium Logan Square, DDMB, Inc. d/b/a Emporium Arcade Bar, Plaintiffs: Daniel Lawrence Berger, Deborah A. Elman, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Grant & Eisenhofer P.A., New York, NY; Robert G. Eisler, Grant & Eisenhofer P.A., Wilmington, DE; Steven A. Kanner, FREED KANNER LONDON & MILLEN LLC, Bannockburn, IL.

For Runcentral, LLC, Plaintiff: Daniel Lawrence Berger, Deborah A. Elman, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Grant & Eisenhofer P.A., New York, NY; Kevin B. Love, Hanzman Criden Love, P.A., Miami, FL; Robert G. Eisler, Grant & Eisenhofer P.A., Wilmington, DE.

Breaux Mart Supermarkets, Inc., Plaintiff, Pro se.

Champagne's Quality Foods, Inc., Plaintiff, Pro se.

Claiborne Fresh Market, LLC, Plaintiff, Pro se.

Coleman Oil Company, LLC, Plaintiff, Pro se.

Franks Supermaket #3, Plaintiff, [**27] Pro se.

Franks Supermarket #2, Inc., Plaintiff, Pro se.

Franks Supermarket #3, Inc., doing business as, Franks Supermaket #5, Plaintiff, Pro se.

Franks Supermarket #4, Inc., Plaintiff, Pro se.

Harrison Fresh Market, LLC, Plaintiff, Pro se.

Kenilworth Supermarket, Inc., Plaintiff, Pro se.

Longview Enterprises, Inc., Plaintiff, Pro se.

M L Robert II, LLC, Plaintiff, Pro se.

M Robert Enterprises, Inc., Plaintiff, Pro se.

Mackenthun's Supermarkets, Inc., Plaintiff, Pro se.

Marketfare Annunciation, LLC, Plaintiff, Pro se.

Marketfare Canal, LLC, Plaintiff, Pro se.

Marketfare N Broad, LLC, Plaintiff, Pro se.

Marketfare St. Claude, LLC, Plaintiff, Pro se.

Matherne's LLC, Plaintiff, Pro se.

Matherne's Supermarket at Riverlands, LLC, Plaintiff, Pro se.

Potash Bros., Inc., Plaintiff, Pro se.

Potash-Hancock, Inc., Plaintiff, Pro se.

Sandburg Supermart, Inc., Plaintiff, Pro se.

Sopranos Supermarkets, LLC, Plaintiff, Pro se.

Supermarket Operations, Inc., Plaintiff, Pro se.

Techau's, Inc., Plaintiff, Pro se.

For Equitable Relief Class, Plaintiff: Hugh Sandler, Nussbaum Law Group, P.C., New York, NY; Michael J. Freed, Freed Kanner London & Millen LLC, Bannockburn, IL.

For Grove Liquors LLC, Palero Food Corp. and Cagueyes [**28] Food Corp., Strouk Group LLC, Plaintiffs: Armen Zohrabian, LEAD ATTORNEY, Robbins Geller Rudman and Dowd LLP, San Francisco, CA; John William Devine, LEAD ATTORNEY, Robert J Kuntz, Jr., LEAD ATTORNEY, Lawrence Dean Goodman, Devine Goodman Rasco Watts-FitzGerald, LLP, Coral Gables, FL; Lonnie Anthony Browne, Thomas E. Egler, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Robbins Geller Rudman and Dowd LLP, San Diego, CA.

For Herc Rentals Inc., Royal Caribbean Cruises LTD., Hertz Corporation, Plaintiffs: Robert D.W. Landon, III, LEAD ATTORNEY, KENNY NACHWALTER, P.A., Miami, FL; Joshua Barton Gray, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Washington, DC.

For Hertz Corporation, Herc Rentals Inc., Royal Caribbean Cruises LTD., Plaintiffs: Robert D.W. Landon, III, LEAD ATTORNEY, KENNY NACHWALTER, P.A., Miami, FL.

For Broadway Grill, Inc., Plaintiff: Anne Marie Murphy, Joseph W. Cotchett, Mark Cotton Molumphy, LEAD ATTORNEY, Cotchett, Pitre & McCarthy, LLP, Burlingame, CA; Alexander E. Barnett, Cotchett, Pitre & McCarthy, LLP, New York, NY.

Kohlberg Kravis & Roberts Co., Plaintiff, Pro se.

For Luby's Fuddruckers Restaurants, LLC, Plaintiff: David Edwards Wynne, Scott G. Burdine, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Burdine Wynne LLP, Houston, TX; Kenneth R. Wynne, [**29] LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Burdine Wynne LLP, Houston, TX.

Luby's Inc., Plaintiff, Pro se.

For Expedia, Inc., Natm Buying Corporation, Tractor Supply Company, Plaintiffs: Joseph Michael Vanek, Vanek, Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL.

Oneota Community Food Co-op, Intervenor Plaintiff, Pro se.

For Defendants in civil action Jetro Holding, Inc. et al v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 05-cv-4520 JG-JO, Defendants in civil actionNational Association of Convenience Stores et al v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 05-cv-4521 JG-JO, Defendants: Mark E. Tully, LEAD ATTORNEY, Goodwin Procter, LLP, Boston, MA; Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Peter S. Julian, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; William Harry Rooney, LEAD ATTORNEY, Willkie Farr & Gallagher LLP, New York, NY; Andrew J. McDonald, Pullman & Comley, LLC, Stamford, CT; Brian A. Herman, Morgan, Lewis & Bockuis, LLP, New York, NY; David Sapir Lesser, Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale & Dorr, LLP, New York, NY; Douglas Melamed, Washington, Dc, WA; Eric H. Grush, Sidley Austin LLP, Chicago, IL; Erica Fenby, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kara Kennedy, Alston & Bird LLP, Atlanta, GA. Gary R. Carney, Jr., Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, [**30] New York, NY; James T. Shearin, Pullman & Comley, LLC, Bridgeport, CT; James M. Sulentic, John P. Passarelli, Kutak Rock LLP, Omaha, NE; Jonathan B. Orleans, Pullman & Comley LLC, Bridgeport, CT; Joseph W. Clark, Jones Day, Washington, DC; Kenneth A. Gallo, PRO HAC VICE, Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, Washington, DC; Lisl J. Dunlop, Shearman & Sterling, New York, NY; Mark P. Ladner, Morrison & Foerster, New York, NY; Michael Edward Johnson, Alston & Bird LLP, New York, NY; Michael B. Miller, Morrison & Foerster LLP, New York, NY; Robert Donald Carroll, Goodwin Procter LLP, Boston, MA; Robert C. Mason, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, New York, NY; Teresa T. Bonder, Alston &

Bird, LLP, Atlanta, GA; Valerie C. Williams, ALSTON & BIRD LLP, Atlanta, GA; William Kolasky, Washington, DC, WA.

For Defendants in civil action Supervalu Inc. v. Visa U.S.A. Inc. et al 05-cv-4650 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Publix Supermarkets, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A. Inc. et al 05-cv-4677-JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Seaway Gas & Petroleum, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 05-cv-4728 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Raley's v. Visa U.S.A. Inc. et al 05-cv-4799- JG-JO, Defendants in civil [**31] action East Goshen Pharmacy, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc 05-cv-5073-JG-JO, Defendants: Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; Gary R. Carney, Jr., Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, New York, NY; Kenneth A. Gallo, PRO HAC VICE, Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, Washington, DC; Robert C. Mason, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, New York, NY.

For Defendants in civil action National Grocers Association et al v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 05-cv- 5207 JG -JO, Defendants in civil action American Booksellers Association v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 05-cv-5319 JG -JO, Defendants: Mark E. Tully, LEAD ATTORNEY, Robert Donald Carroll, Goodwin Procter, LLP, Boston, MA; Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Peter S. Julian, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; William Harry Rooney, LEAD ATTORNEY, Willkie Farr & Gallagher LLP, New York, NY; Andrew J. McDonald, Pullman & Comley, LLC, Stamford, CT; Brian A. Herman, Morgan, Lewis & Bockius, LLP, New York, NY; David Sapir Lesser, Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale & Dorr, LLP, New York, NY; Douglas Melamed, William Kolasky, Washington, DC, WA; Eric H. Grush, Sidley Austin [**32] LLP, Chicago, IL; Erica Fenby, PRO HAC VICE, Kara Kennedy, Alston & Bird LLP, Atlanta, GA; Gary R. Carney, Jr., Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, New York, NY; James T. Shearin, Jonathan B. Orleans, Pullman & Comley, LLC, Bridgeport, CT; James M. Sulentic, John P. Passarelli, Kutak Rock LLP, Omaha, NE; Joseph W. Clark, Jones Day, Washington, DC; Kenneth A. Gallo, PRO HAC VICE, Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, Washington, DC; Mark P. Ladner, Morrison & Foerster, New York, NY; Michael Edward Johnson, Alston & Bird LLP, New York, NY; Michael B. Miller, Morrison & Foerster LLP, New York, NY; Robert C. Mason, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, New York, NY; Teresa T. Bonder, Valerie C. Williams, ALSTON & BIRD LLP, Atlanta, GA.

For Defendants in civil action Rookies, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5069-JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Jasperson v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5070-JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Animal Land, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5074-JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Bonte Wafflerie, LLC v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5083 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Broken Ground, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5082 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action [**33] Baltimore Avenue Foods, LLC v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5080 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Fairmont Orthopedics & Sports Medicine, PA v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5076-JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Tabu Salon & Spa, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5072 -JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Lakeshore Interiors v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5081 JGJO, Defendants in civil action Parkway Corp. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5077-JG-JO, Defendants in civil action NuCity Publications, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5070-JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Hyman v. VISA International Service Association, Inc. 05-cv-5866 JG -JO, Defendants in civil action Lee et al v. Visa U.S.A. Inc. et al 05-cv-03800, Defendants: Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; Gary R. Carney, Jr., Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, New York, NY; Robert C. Mason, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, New York, NY.

For Defendants in civil action Resnick Amsterdam & Leshner P.C. v. Visa U.S.A. Inc. et al, 05-cv-3924 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Hy-Vee, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al 05-cv-03925 JG-JO, Defendants in civil case Fitlife Health Systems of Arcadia, [**34] Inc. v. Mastercard International Incorporated et a 05-cv-5153 JG-JO, Defendants: Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; Gary R. Carney, Jr., Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, New York, NY; Kenneth A. Gallo, PRO HAC VICE, Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, Washington, DC.

For Defendants in civil action Meijer, Inc. et al v. Visa U.S.A. Inc. et al 05-cv-4131 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Kroger Co. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5078 JG-JO, Defendants: Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; Gary R. Carney, Jr., Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, New York, NY; Robert C. Mason, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, New York, NY.

For Defendants in civil action Lepkowski v. Mastercard International Incorporated et al 05-cv-4974-JG-JO, Defendant: Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY;

Gary R. Carney, Jr., Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, New York, NY; Jonathan Mitchell Jacobson, Wilson Sonsini Goodrich & Rosati, PC, New York, NY; Paul W. Bartel, II, Davis, Polk and Wardwell, New York, NY.

For [**35] Defendants in civil action Photos Etc. Corp. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5071-JG-JO, Defendant: Mark E. Tully, LEAD ATTORNEY, Goodwin Procter, LLP, Boston, MA; Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Peter S. Julian, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; Andrew J. McDonald, Pullman & Comley, LLC, Stamford, CT; David Sapir Lesser, Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale & Dorr, LLP, New York, NY; Douglas Melamed, Washington, DC, WA; Eric H. Grush, Sidley Austin LLP, Chicago, IL; Erica Fenby, PRO HAC VICE, Kara Kennedy, Teresa T. Bonder, Valerie C. Williams, Alston & Bird LLP, Atlanta, GA; Gary R. Carney, Jr., Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, New York, NY; James M. Sulentic, John P. Passarelli, Kutak Rock LLP, Omaha, NE; Jonathan B. Orleans, Pullman & Comley LLC, Bridgeport, CT; Joseph W. Clark, Jones Day, Washington, DC; Lis J. Dunlop, Shearman & Sterling, New York, NY; Michael Edward Johnson, Alston & Bird LLP, New York, NY; Michael B. Miller, Morrison & Foerster LLP, New York, NY; Robert Donald Carroll, Goodwin Procter LLP, Boston, MA; William Kolasky, Washington, DC, WA.

For Defendants in civil action Rite Aid Corporation et al. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al. 05-cv-5352 [**36] JG-JO, Defendant: Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; Robert C. Mason, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, New York, NY.

For Defendants in civil action The Kroger Co., et al. v. MasterCard Inc., et al., 06-cv-0039 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Performace Labs, Inc. v. American Express Travel Related Services Co., Inc., et al 05-cv-5869 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Discount Optics, Inc., et al. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., et al. 05-cv-5870 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action LDC, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. et al. 05-cv-5871 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action G.E.S. Bakery, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., et al. 05-cv-5879 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Leeber Cohen, M.D. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., et al. 05-cv-5878 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Twisted Spoke v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., et al. 05-cv-5881 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Lombardo Bros., Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5882 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action Abdallah Bishara, etc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. 05-cv-5883 JG-JO, Defendants in civil action JGSA, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., et al 05-cv-5885, Defendants in civil action Fringe, Inc. v. Visa, U.S.A., Inc. et al 05-cv-4194 JG-JO, [**37] Defendants: Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; Gary R. Carney, Jr., Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, New York, NY.

For Defendants in civil action Harris Stationers, Inc., et al. v. Visa International Service Association, et al. 05-cv-5868 JG-JO, Defendant: Joshua N. Holian, LEAD ATTORNEY, Latham & Watkins, San Francisco, CA; Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; Eric H. Grush, Sidley Austin LLP, Chicago, IL; Erica Fenby, PRO HAC VICE, Kara Kennedy, Teresa T. Bonder, Valerie C. Williams, Alston & Bird LLP, Atlanta, GA; Gary R. Carney, Jr., Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, New York, NY; Joseph W. Clark, Jones Day, Washington, DC; Michael Edward Johnson, Alston & Bird LLP, New York, NY; Michael B. Miller, Morrison & Foerster LLP, New York, NY; Richard P. Jeffries, Kutak Rock LLP, Omaha, NE.

For Defendants in civil action Dr. Roy Hyman, et al. v. Visa International Service Association, Inc., et al. 05-cv-5866, Defendant: Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; Gary R. Carney, Jr., Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, [**38] Wharton & Garrison, LLP, New York, NY; Joseph W. Clark, Jones Day, Washington, DC; Michael B. Miller, Morrison & Foerster LLP, New York, NY.

For Defendants in civil action Connecticut Food Association, Inc., et al. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., et al 05-cv-5880 JG-JO, Defendant: Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; Eric H. Grush, Sidley Austin LLP, Chicago, IL; Gary R. Carney, Jr., Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, New York, NY; Michael B. Miller, Morrison & Foerster LLP, New York, NY.

For Defendants in civil action 518 Restaurant Corp. v. American Express Travel Related Services Co., et al. 05-cv-5884 JG-JO, Defendant: Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY.

For HSBC Bank USA, N.A., Defendant: David Sapir Lesser, Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale & Dorr, LLP, New York, NY; Perry Lange, Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale and Dorr, Washington, DC.

For Capital One Bank, Defendant: Abby Faith Rudzin, Andrew J. Frackman, LEAD ATTORNEYS, O'Melveny & Myers LLP, New York, NY; John Zavitsanos, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Ahmad Zavitsanos et al, Houston, TX; Jordan Lyn Warshauer, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO [*39] HAC VICE, Ahmad, Zavitsanos, Anaipakos, Alavi & Mensing P.C., Houston, TX.

For Capital One F S B, Defendant: Abby Faith Rudzin, Andrew J. Frackman, LEAD ATTORNEYS, O'Melveny & Myers LLP, New York, NY.

For Capital One Financial Corp, Defendant: Abby Faith Rudzin, Andrew J. Frackman, LEAD ATTORNEYS, O'Melveny & Myers LLP, New York, NY; Jamie Alan Aycock, LEAD ATTORNEY, AZA, Houston, TX; John Zavitsanos, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Ahmad Zavitsanos et al, Houston, TX.

For Wells Fargo & Company, Defendant: Charles Bedford Hampton, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, McGuireWoods LLP, Houston, TX; Peter Abraham Nelson, LEAD ATTORNEY, Patterson Belknap Webb & Tyler LLP, New York City, NY; Robert P. LoBue, LEAD ATTORNEY, Terra Hittson, Patterson, Belknap, Webb & Tyler LLP, New York, NY; Benjamin R. Rossen, Patterson Belknap Webb & Tyler, New York, NY.

For National City Bank of Kentucky, National City Corporation, Defendants: Frederick N. Egler, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Reed Smith, Pittsburgh, PA.

For Mastercard Incorporated, Mastercard International Incorporated, Defendants: Donna M. Ioffredo, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Craig Benson, Heather C. Milligan, Jarred A. Klorfein, Lina Dagnew, Paul Eric [*40] Chaffin, Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison LLP, Washington, DC; Gary R. Carney, LEAD ATTORNEY, Paul Weiss Rifkind Wharton & Garrison, LLPNY, New York, NY; Kenneth A. Gallo, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, Washington, DC; Tynan Butchard, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Baker Botts LLP, Houston, TX; Alex Michael Hyman, Robert Joseph O'Loughlin, III, Sarah Ripa, Zachary Dietert, Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison LLP, New York, NY; Bruce Alan Birenboim, Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, New York, NY; Gary R. Carney, Jr., Kelly Dodge Garcia, Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, LLP, New York, NY; Michelle Katherine Parikh, Paul Weiss Rifkind Wharton & Garrison LLP, Washington, DC; Matthew Duff Turner, Armstrong Teasdale LLP-JCMO.

For HSBC Finance Corporation, HSBC North America Holdings, Inc, Defendants: David Sapir Lesser, Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale & Dorr, LLP, New York, NY; Perry Lange, Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale and Dorr, Washington, DC.

For Citibank N A, Citicorp, Citigroup Inc, Defendants: Benjamin R. Nagin, LEAD ATTORNEY, Ada Asante Davis, Eamon Paul Joyce, Samuel Sung-Ook Choi, Thomas Andrew Paskowitz, Sidley Austin [*41] LLP, New York, NY; David Graham, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood LLP, Chicago, IL.

For Chase Bank USA, N.A., Defendant: Noelle M Reed, LEAD ATTORNEY, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, Houston, TX; Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Boris Bershteyn, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; Kamali P Willett, Skadden Arps Slate Meagher & Flom, New York, NY; Linda Wong Cenedella, Skadden Arps, New York, NY.

For JP Morgan Chase & Co., Defendant: Noelle M Reed, LEAD ATTORNEY, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, Houston, TX; Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Boris Bershteyn, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; Kamali P Willett, Skadden Arps Slate Meagher & Flom, New York, NY.

For Fifth Third Bancorp, Defendant: Eliot Fielding Turner, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Norton Rose Fulbright US LLP, Houston, TX; Benjamin G. Stewart, Keating Muething & Klekamp, PLL, Cincinnati, OH; Brenna L. Penrose, Keating Muething & Klekamp PLL, Cincinnati, OH; Charles M. Miller, Joseph M. Callow, Trenton B. Douthett, Keating Muething & Klekamp PLL, Cincinnati, OH; Drew M. Hicks, Richard L. Creighton, Keating Muething & Klekamp, Cincinnati, OH.

For Bank Of America, N.A., [*42] Defendant: Adam James Hunt, LEAD ATTORNEY, Michael B. Miller, Morrison & Foerster LLP, New York, NY; Jeffrey K. Rosenberg, Mark P. Ladner, Robert James Baehr, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Morrison & Foerster, New York, NY.

For Visa International Service Association, Defendant: Blair Eden Kaminsky, LEAD ATTORNEY, Demian Alexander Ordway, Michael Shuster, Richard J. Holwell, Holwell Shuster & Goldberg LLP, New York, NY; Jayme Alyse Jonat, Robert J. Morrow, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Holwell Shuster Goldberg LLP, New York, NY; Lee L. Kaplan, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Smyser Kaplan & Veselka, LLP, Houston, NY; Mark R. Merley, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Karen Otto, Ron Ghatan, Arnold & Porter LLP, Washington, DC; Robert John Vizas, LEAD ATTORNEY, Arnold and Porter LLP, San Francisco, CA; Sharon D. Mayo, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, San Francisco, CA; Zachary Adam Kerner, LEAD ATTORNEY, Holwell Shuster & Goldberg, New York, NY; Laura J. Butte, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer, Washington, DC; Robert S. Jones, Rosemary Szanyi, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, Washington, DC; Robert C. Mason, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, New York, NY.

For Visa U.S.A. Inc., Defendant: Blair Eden [**43] Kaminsky, LEAD ATTORNEY, Demian Alexander Ordway, Michael Shuster, Richard J. Holwell, Holwell Shuster & Goldberg LLP, New York, NY; Jayme Alyse Jonat, Robert J. Morrow, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Holwell Shuster Goldberg LLP, New York, NY; Lee L. Kaplan, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Smyser Kaplan & Veselka, LLP, Houston, NY; Mark R. Merley, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Karen Otto, Ron Ghatan, Arnold & Porter LLP, Washington, DC; Robert C. Mason, LEAD ATTORNEY, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, New York, NY; Robert John Vizas, LEAD ATTORNEY, Arnold and Porter LLP, San Francisco, CA; Sharon D. Mayo, PRO HAC VICE, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, San Francisco, CA; Zachary Adam Kerner, LEAD ATTORNEY, Holwell Shuster & Goldberg, New York, NY; Anthony D. Boccanfuso, Arnold & Porter, New York, NY; Laura J. Butte, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer, Washington, DC; Robert S. Jones, Rosemary Szanyi, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, Washington, DC.

For Bank of America Corporation, Defendant: Adam James Hunt, LEAD ATTORNEY, Michael B. Miller, Morrison & Foerster LLP, New York, NY; Eliot Fielding Turner, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Norton Rose Fulbright US LLP, Houston, TX; Jeffrey K. Rosenberg, Mark P. Ladner, [**44] Robert James Baehr, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Morrison & Foerster, New York, NY; Layne E. Kruse, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Fulbright & Jaworski LLP, Houston, TX.

For Texas Independent Bancshares, Inc., Defendant: Dennis R Bettison, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Bettison Doyle et al, Galveston, TX; Adam S. Mocciole, Pullman & Comley, LLC, Bridgeport, CT.

For First National Bank of Omaha, Defendant: Eliot Fielding Turner, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Norton Rose Fulbright US LLP, Houston, TX.

For Barclays Financial Corp., Defendant: James P. Tallon, Shearman & Sterling, New York, NY.

For Chase Paymentech Solutions, LLC, Defendant: Kamali P Willett, Skadden Arps Slate Meagher & Flom, New York, NY.

For Wachovia Bank, NA., Wachovia Corporation, Defendants: Peter Abraham Nelson, Robert P. LoBue, LEAD ATTORNEY, Terra Hittson, Patterson Belknap Webb & Tyler LLP, New York, NY.

For Discover Financial Services, Defendant: Dana Lynn Cook-Milligan, Winston and Strawn LLP, San Francisco, CA; Elizabeth P Papez, Winston and Strawn LLP, Washington, DC; Eva W. Cole, Jeffrey L. Kessler, Johanna Rae Hudgens, Winston & Strawn LLP, New York, NY; James Franklin Herbison, Winston and Strawn LLP, Chicago, IL; Sean D. Meenan, [**45] PRO HAC VICE, Jeanifer Ellen Parsigian, Winston and Strawn, San Francisco, CA.

For Unlimited Vacations and Cruises Inc, Top Gun Wrecker, Orange County Bldg Materials, Bishop, Defendants: John Jacob Pentz, III, LEAD ATTORNEY, John J. Pentz, Esq., Sudbury, MA.

For Daviss Donuts and Deli, Defendant: John Jacob Pentz, III, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, John J. Pentz, Esq., Sudbury, MA.

For Lane Courkamp, Permier Enterprises Group, Defendants: Daniel L. Brown, Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton, New York, NY.

For Class Action Recovery Service, Defendant: Dennis M. Campbell, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Mershon, Sawyer, Johnston, Dunwody & Cody, Miami, FL.

For Refund Recovery Services, LLC, Defendant: Robert M. Gardner, PRO HAC VICE, Gardner Law Office, Burnsville, MN.

For Electronic Payment Systems, LLC, Electronic Payment Systems, LLC, Defendants: Scotty P. Krob, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Krob Law Office, LLC, Greenwood Village, CO.

For Jonbro, Defendant: Brent O. Hatch, Shaunda L. McNeill, LEAD ATTORNEYS, HATCH JAMES & DODGE, SALT LAKE CITY, UT.

For Visa Europe Limited, Defendant: Demian Alexander Ordway, Robert C. Mason, Holwell Shuster & Goldberg LLP.

For Visa Europe Services Inc., Defendant: [**46] Demian Alexander Ordway, Holwell Shuster & Goldberg LLP, New York, NY; Robert C. Mason, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, New York, NY.

For Visa Inc., Defendant: Blair Eden Kaminsky, Demian Alexander Ordway, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Holwell Shuster & Goldberg LLP, New York, NY; Jayme Alyse Jonat, Robert J. Morrow, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Holwell Shuster Goldberg LLP, New York, NY; Lee L. Kaplan, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Smyser Kaplan & Veselka, LLP, Houston, NY; Mark R. Merley, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Karen Otto, Ron Ghatan, Arnold & Porter LLP, Washington, DC; Robert John Vizas, LEAD ATTORNEY, Arnold and Porter LLP, San Francisco, CA; Sharon D. Mayo, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, San Francisco, CA; Zachary Adam Kerner, LEAD ATTORNEY, Holwell Shuster & Goldberg, New York, NY; Laura J. Butte, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer, Washington, DC; Robert S. Jones, Rosemary Szanyi, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, Washington, DC; Robert C. Mason, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, New York, NY.

For Capital One Bank, (USA), N.A., Defendant: Abby Faith Rudzin, Andrew J. Frackman, LEAD ATTORNEYS, O'Melveny & Myers LLP, New York, NY; Jamie Alan Acock, LEAD ATTORNEY, AZA, Houston, [**47] TX; John Zavitsanos, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Ahmad Zavitsanos et al, Houston, TX; Jordan Lyn Warshauer, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Ahmad, Zavitsanos, Anaipakos, Alavi & Mensing P.C., Houston, TX.

For Chase Manhattan Bank USA, N.A., Defendant: Kamali P Willett, Skadden Arps Slate Meagher & Flom, New York, NY.

For Citibank (South Dakota), N.A., Defendant: David Graham, Sidley Austin Brown & Wood LLP, Chicago, IL.

For JP Morgan Chase Bank, N.A., Defendant: Noelle M Reed, LEAD ATTORNEY, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, Houston, TX; Peter Edward Greene, LEAD ATTORNEY, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP, New York, NY; Kamali P Willett, Skadden Arps Slate Meagher & Flom, New York, NY.

For Barclays Bank Delaware, Defendant: Brent Lockhart Brown, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Cotten Schmidt Abbott LLP, Fort Worth, TX; Brian Calandra, James Tallon, LEAD ATTORNEYS, PRO HAC VICE, Shearman & Sterling LLP, New York, NY.

For BA Merchant Services LLC, formerly known as National Processing, Inc, Defendant: Adam James Hunt, LEAD ATTORNEY, Morrison & Foerster LLP, New York, NY; Eliot Fielding Turner, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Norton Rose Fulbright US LLP, Houston, TX; Layne E. Kruse, [**48] LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Fulbright & Jaworski LLP, Houston, TX; Mark P. Ladner, Robert James Baehr, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Morrison & Foerster, New York, NY.

For MBNA America Bank, N.A., Defendant: Adam James Hunt, LEAD ATTORNEY, Morrison & Foerster LLP, New York, NY; Mark P. Ladner, Robert James Baehr, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Morrison & Foerster, New York, NY.

For HSBC Finance Corporation, Defendant: Bradley C Weber, Roger Brian Cowie, LEAD ATTORNEYS, PRO HAC VICE, Locke Lord LLP, Dallas, TX; David Sapir Lesser, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale & Dorr, LLP, New York, NY; Perry A Lange, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Wilmer Hale, Washington, DC.

For HSBC North America Holdings Inc, Defendant: Bradley C Weber, Roger Brian Cowie, LEAD ATTORNEYS, PRO HAC VICE, Locke Lord LLP, Dallas, TX; David Sapir Lesser, LEAD ATTORNEY, Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale & Dorr, LLP, New York, NY; Perry A Lange, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Wilmer Hale, Washington, DC.

For PNC Financial Services Group, Inc., Defendant: Bruce Allen Blefeld, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Reed Smith LLP, Houston, TX; Edward William Duffy, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, ReedSmith LLP, Houston, TX; Frederick N. Egler, LEAD [**49] ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Reed Smith, Pittsburgh, PA.

For Suntrust Bank, Suntrust Banks Inc, Defendants: Jared M Slade, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Alson Bird LLP, Dallas, TX.

For Wells Fargo Bank N.A., Defendant: Robert P. LoBue, Patterson, Belknap, Webb & Tyler LLP, New York, NY.

For Wells Fargo Merchant Services, LLC, Defendant: Charles Bedford Hampton, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, McGuireWoods LLP, Houston, TX.

For Visa Inc., Defendant: Blair Eden Kaminsky, LEAD ATTORNEY, Demian Alexander Ordway, Holwell Shuster & Goldberg LLP, New York, NY; Daniel M. Meyers, LEAD ATTORNEY, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, Chicago, IL; Nina Rachel Kanovitch, LEAD ATTORNEY, Holwell Shuster & Goldberg, New York, NY.

For Discover, ThirdParty Defendant: Matthew L. Cantor, LEAD ATTORNEY, Constantine Cannon, P.C., New York, NY.

MNZ Inc, Interpleader, Pro se.

HealthSource Pharmacy III B Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

HealthSource Pharmacy III Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

HealthSource Pharmacy II Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

HealthSource Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Johnson Family Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Home Convalescent Aids, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Peace Pharmacy, Interested [**50] Party, Pro se.

Citizens Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Fort Thomas Drug Center, Interested Party, Pro se.

Rocky Mountain Pharmacy of Estes Park, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hieber's Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Newts Pharmacy LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Turner Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

Shannon Hills Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Faulkenberg Harth, Interested Party, Pro se.

Medical Towers Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Downtown Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

Monument Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Jack's Market Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hayden Family Pharmacy, P.C., Interested Party, Pro se.

WHJ Enterprises, Interested Party, Pro se.

Arrochar Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

J&J Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

DJH, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Kiowa County Pharmacy, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Abeldt's Gaslight Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Charlie's Drug, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Thornville Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Emporium Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hillcrest Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Anson Plaza Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

The Drug Store, Interested Party, Pro se.

Jim & Phil's Family Pharmacy [**51] LTD., Interested Party, Pro se.

Victory Tampa Medical Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Medicap Pharmacy 8209, Interested Party, Pro se.

Larimore Drug and Gift, Interested Party, Pro se.

RG Drug Corp, Interested Party, Pro se.

Portes Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Douglas & Ogden Medical Center Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Olde Towne Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Oakdale Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Todds Discount Drugs, Interested Party, Pro se.

Lo Cost Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Stoll's Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

DeBlaquiere Ent. Inc., doing business as White Cross Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Soldotna Professional Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Medicine Plus, Interested Party, Pro se.

Maddox Drugs, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kiefer Inc. D.B.A. Watson's City Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

Park Plaza Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Blende Drug Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Clinic Drug, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

St Bernard Drugs #2 LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

The Apothecary, Interested Party, Pro se.

Almadad Inc. DBA / Bronx Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kelley Drug & Selections, Interested Party, Pro se. [**52]

A & H Stores, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Golden Rock Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Medicap Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Village Drug Shop of Athens Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Elm Plaza Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Mt. Olympus Compounding, Interested Party, Pro se.

Reliable Discount Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Millers of Wyckoff, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Sellersville Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Chads Payless Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Super Saver Pharmacy #4, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Super Saver Pharmacy #3, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Super Saver Pharmacy #2, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Super Saver Pharmacy LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Camacho Pharmacy Supply, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Estherville Drug, Inc. DBA Estherville, Snyder Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

Carrollwood Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

E Street Discount Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Noble Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Main Street Drug & Lakeside Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Econo-Med Pharmacy, Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Cottrill's Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Union City Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Medical [**53] Pharmacy & Supply, Interested Party, Pro se.

Waverly Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Marengo Community Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Rider Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Quincy Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Harvard Family Physicians Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hoffman Drug-True Value, Interested Party, Pro se.

RP Healthcare, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

VM Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Evans Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

BPRS, Inc. dba Avenue Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Sooner Pharmacy of Davis, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

USave Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Plateau Drugs, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Bissell Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Valley Mission Homecare Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Bird's Hill Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Duncan's Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

E&M Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Anthony Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

M&M Pharmacy Corp dba Continental Drugs, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wilson Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Bridges & James, Inc., DBA, Wannamaker Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

Sherry's Discount Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

RPB Pharmacy, Inc., [**54] DBA Pharmahealth Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Pharmahealth Heuthorn, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Pharmahealth Long Term Care, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Seitz Drug Company, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

P&S Pharmacy LLC dba Wurtsboro Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

McLoud Clinic Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Mark's Family Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Minooka Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Seeley Swan Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Parkhill Pharmacy, Inc. dba, Lopez Island Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Turtle Lake Rexall Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

Osborn Drugs, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Hayen Pharmacies, P.A. dba Paul's Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Millersburg Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Perry Drug, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Liberty Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

Pharmacy Services, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Greenville Drug Store, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Family Pharmacy & Med Serv International, Interested Party, Pro se.

Standard Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Standard Pharmacy @ HealthFirst, Interested Party, Pro se.

Paris Apothecary, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Johnson Drug aka Johnson Compounding [**55] and Wellness Center, Interested Party, Pro se.

Apothecare Pharmacy LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Lamas Drug, Inc. DBA Barre Family Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Acton Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Towne Pharmacy of Rincon, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Perham Health Retail Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Loris Drug Store, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Adams Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Headrick's Drug Store, Interested Party, Pro se.

Malheur Drug, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Great Oak Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Thompson Pharmacy & Medical, Interested Party, Pro se.

Lexar Corporation, Interested Party, Pro se.

Scepter Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Focus Respiratory, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Headland Discount Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hartig Drug Company, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Doganieros Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Marshland Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Tuttle's Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Professional Pharmacy LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Prescription Center LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

North Pole Prescription Lab. Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Peak Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, [**56] Pro se.

Mifflintown Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Dollex Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Dunes Family Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Roberds Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

East End Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Hankinson Drug, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

J.E. Pierce Apothecary and Compound, Interested Party, Pro se.

Weatherly Area Community Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Nash Drugs, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Matthewson Drug Co., Interested Party, Pro se.

City Drug Co, Interested Party, Pro se.

MedPark Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Tanglewood Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

RJT Pharmacy, Inc. DBA The Medicine Shoppe #0500, Interested Party, Pro se.

Gateway Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Family Pharmacy of Dover, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

The Compounding Shoppe, Interested Party, Pro se.

The Medicine Shoppe, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wood Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Mill Run Community Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Jonestown Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Healthlink Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Pharma LLC DBA Sebring Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Fisherville Pharmacy, LLC, Interested Party, [**57] Pro se.

Bucklow Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Immediate Pharmaceutical Services, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Towne Drugs Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Discount Drug Mart, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Star Medical Center Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Holst Pharmacy d/b/a The Medicine Store, Interested Party, Pro se.

Krittenbrink Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Pharm-A-Save Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Sumpter Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Medicap Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Pineland Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Yorkville Drugstore, Interested Party, Pro se.

Ider Discount Drugs, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Donlon Healthmart Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

R&M Drugs, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hawco, Inc. dba Ver Helst Drug Center, Interested Party, Pro se.

West Pointe Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Minersville Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Orange Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kansas Pharmacy LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Catoosa Family Pharmacy, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Four Star Drug of Bethany, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Trumm Drug, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Lindsay Drug Co., Inc., Interested Party, Pro [**58] se.

Elliott Plaza Pharmacy, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Valley Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Inola Drug Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Family Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

Bouvier Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Brown's Main Street Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Langston Drug Store, Interested Party, Pro se.

Ron's Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

WPR Food Enterprises, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Lawson Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Powell Foods of 104th Street, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Los Ebanos Pharmacies and Home Health Care, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Robert Fox Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wilderness Center Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Doctors Park Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Louis Morgan Drugs No. 5 Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Vet's Oil Company Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kems Pharmacy/optiMed Pharmacy/D&C enterprise Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Elkton Family Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

MJKL Enterprises, MJKL Enterprises Midwest, Pizza Revolucion, and Frontier Star, Interested Party, Pro se.

Clayton Hometown Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Patient Care Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Stop-N-Go [**59] Foodmart, Interested Party, Pro se.

Elmer Hometown Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Lindberg Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Lindenwold Hometown Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Trader Gus Shell, Interested Party, Pro se.

Central Avenue Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Matlack Hometown Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Riverside Hometown Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Buy For Less Discount Pharmacy dba Sheridan Express Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Spruce Mountain Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Byard-Mercer Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Community Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Total Care Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Glenview Apothecary Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

The Medicine Shoppe, Interested Party, Pro se.

Dairyland Depot, Interested Party, Pro se.

Jordan Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Medicine Shoppe and Washington Healthmart Medford Food Co-op, Interested Party, Pro se.

Gore Green County Drug, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

The Medicine Shoppe, Interested Party, Pro se.

Nicson, Inc. and Abrams BP, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Family Pharmacy of Chester LLC dba Victor Drugs Healthmart, Interested Party, Pro se.

Prairie Drug, [**60] Interested Party, Pro se.

Westpark Discount Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

The Country Squire Disc. Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Mike Biehl D.B.A. Golden Sands Mini Mart, Interested Party, Pro se.

City Limits C-Store, Interested Party, Pro se.

Glen Ed Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Trilogy Health Care, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Upper Darby Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Double Quick Inc., Gresham Service Stations and Tobacco Quick, Interested Party, Pro se.

Coleman Oil Company, Interested Party, Pro se.

Vanderheyden Enterprise LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

S&K Med Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

M.W.S. Enterprises, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Jon's Drug Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Peakside Pharmacy Care Center, Interested Party, Pro se.

Thompson Oconto Enterprises Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Nord's Pharmacy & Gifts Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Gresham Petroleum Co., Gresham McPherson Oil Co., Quick 7 Star, Triple Stop, One Stop Market, Windham Service Station, and Byrd Service Station, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kidd Healthmart Drug Co., Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Pilot Travel Centus LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

R&Q Corporation, Interested Party, [**61] Pro se.

MTG Management Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Lawrence Drug Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Kidsmeds Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Dundee Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

R&R Health Care Solutions, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Salem Crossroads Apothecary, Interested Party, Pro se.

Jeffrey P. Biddle Inc. dba Village Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Investing Associates Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Keystone Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Meadow Valley Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Golden Cove Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Quick Check Convenience Store, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Tunkhannock Compounding Center, Interested Party, Pro se.

Pill Box Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Quick Check Corp., Interested Party, Pro se.

Kirk's Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Winola Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kirk's Pharmacy at Sunrise, Interested Party, Pro se.

Konicki Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Steaks N Stuff Lincoln, Interested Party, Pro se.

IDM Pharmacy/Dollar Maven, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kirk's Pharmacy at Hartland, Interested Party, Pro se.

Towne Drugs Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Country Yankee Grocer, Interested Party, Pro se.

Goody Koontz [**62] Drug Store Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Yorkville Drugstore, Interested Party, Pro se.

Getman-Apothecary Shoppe, Interested Party, Pro se.

Pharmacy World Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

FMS Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Leon's Medical Clinic Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

By-Lo Oil Co., Speedy Q Markets, Inc. Craig Food Stores, Inc. and Lawrence Oil Co., Interested Party, Pro se.

English Plaza Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Shop-N-Go, Interested Party, Pro se.

Montevallo Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

Brighton-Eggert Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

RTTF Enterprises, Interested Party, Pro se.

Northern Bedford Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Brabham Oil Co., Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

J&S Professional Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Hampton Allied Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Esco Drug Co., Interested Party, Pro se.

North Scranton CFM LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Little Five Points Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Galva Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Thrifty Drug Stores, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Nebraska Grocery Industry Association, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Southall Pharmacy, PLLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Dusini Drug Inc., Interested [**63] Party, Pro se.

Bull City Homebrew, Interested Party, Pro se.

Foster's Eastside Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hartig Drug Company, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Corner Pharmacy, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Madison Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Curtis Convenience Stores, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Reed's Family Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Island Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Liebe Drug Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Suburban Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Speedy Car Wash, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Pharmacy Center, Interested Party, Pro se.

Thrifty Way Pharmacy of St. Martinville, Interested Party, Pro se.

Mission Trail Oil Co., Interested Party, Pro se.

Robinson Oil Corp., Interested Party, Pro se.

Schmidt Oil Co., Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Fabulous Freddy's, Interested Party, Pro se.

Northwest Petroleum, LP, Interested Party, Pro se.

Braker Park, LP, Interested Party, Pro se.

Farmacia CDT Cayey, Interested Party, Pro se.

M & D Star Drug Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

LeeMak 529, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

LeeMak Jarrell, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

LeeMak Normandy, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

LeeMak Lakeline, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

LeeMak [**64] Teravista, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Westbrook Park Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Galeton Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

LeeMak St John, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

LeeMak Wilson, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Corkreans The Pharmacist, Interested Party, Pro se.

LeeMak Beechnut, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Canby Drug & Gifts, Interested Party, Pro se.

Weick's Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

North Dallas Petroleum, LP, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hideg Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Toms One Stop, Interested Party, Pro se.

Main Street Apothecary, Interested Party, Pro se.

LB Metcalf, Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Bolton's Pharmacy II, Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Old Corner Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

Island Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

David Michael Foods Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Minersville Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Jeffrey Michael Foods Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

William Michael Foods Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Ken's Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Cynthia D Lee Enterprises Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

OrangeSubway Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Stilwell Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hometown Subways, LLC, Interested Party, Pro [**65] se.

Medic Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Johnston Drug, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Randy's Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

C & B Warehouse Distributing, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

The Corner Drug Store, Interested Party, Pro se.

P & P Marketplace dba Pump & Pantry, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hospital Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Trag Industries Incorporated, Interested Party, Pro se.

Linden Drug Co., Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Hometown subways, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Doyle's Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

Redinger Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Trinity & Zamora Investments Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Dunaway's Imperial Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Ike's 25th Street Exxon, Interested Party, Pro se.

Ike's Airport Garage, Interested Party, Pro se.

Zitomer - Z Chemists - Thriftway Far Rockaway Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

Ikes Airport Sunoco, Interested Party, Pro se.

Friends Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Ike's Shell, Interested Party, Pro se.

Valley Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Five J's Service CO LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Bob Johnson's Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Subway #14951, Interested Party, Pro se.

Tahoka [**66] Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

Ross Fogg Fuel Oil Company, Interested Party, Pro se.

Prescriptions Compounding Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hoagies, Inc. dba Subway, Interested Party, Pro se.

Budny Humidifier, Interested Party, Pro se.

Eagle Petroleum, Interested Party, Pro se.

Budny Fuel Oil Company, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hometown Subways, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

JW Pierson Co, Interested Party, Pro se.

Super Subways Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Mazzo Oil, Interested Party, Pro se.

Vatterman's Sand Point Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

GMD Services, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Theraderm, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Deull Fuel Company, Interested Party, Pro se.

Z-Stop Drugs, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Lakeview Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

LeMars Subway Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Foulk's Service Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Smith Drug, PLLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

TMB Corporation, Interested Party, Pro se.

jada prooperties, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hominy Rexall, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Jasland, Inc dba Subway Sandwich Shop, Interested Party, Pro se.

Merwin Long Term Care, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

V & P Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Rushville [**67] Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Puckett Discount Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

marty inc dba subway, Interested Party, Pro se.

WB Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

marty inc dba subway, Interested Party, Pro se.

South Miami Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

South Miami Pharmacy II, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

South Miami Pharmacy Compounding, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hutton Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Payne Family Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Greenwood-Stearns Enterprises, Interested Party, Pro se.

GDK Enterprises, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Harvard Family Physicians Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

SVG Enterprises Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Subway of Ozarks Eldon, Interested Party, Pro se.

Martin's Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Quick Meds Express Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Subco Enterprises Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Martin's Pharmacy in Piggly Wiggly, Interested Party, Pro se.

Medicap Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

nchise Owner, Interested Party, Pro se.

Eichelberger Subs Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Medicap Pharmacy #8011, Interested Party, Pro se.

Spurgeon's 66 Service, Interested Party, Pro se.

Medicap Pharmacy #8036, Interested [**68] Party, Pro se.

VCM Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Oberlin Subway Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Medicap Pharmacy #8043, Interested Party, Pro se.

Clairmont Development, Inc dba Subway #23607, Interested Party, Pro se.

Bomber, Inc. DBA Subway, Interested Party, Pro se.

Medicap Pharmacy #8052, Interested Party, Pro se.

Medicap Pharmacy #8057, Interested Party, Pro se.

Clairmont Capital Corp dba Subway #23529, Interested Party, Pro se.

subway, Interested Party, Pro se.

Lo Cost Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

NB Subs, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Lo Cost Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Getzville Subs, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Blount Discount Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Medicap Pharmacy #8287, Interested Party, Pro se.

DeBlaquiere Ent. Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Terrence J McMorrow dba Subway, Interested Party, Pro se.

Mullins Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Sioux Falls Subway, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Leier Investments, Inc. DBA Subway Sandwiches, Interested Party, Pro se.

Joslyn's Food Center, Interested Party, Pro se.

RCM Subs, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

F & M Morton Co, Interested Party, Pro se.

D. Gigme, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Sherman Enterprises [**69] Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Terrence McMorrow dba Subway, Interested Party, Pro se.

North Coast Subway Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

J A Hoover Associates Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Discover Subway Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Dinero Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

SharJen Inc. d/b/a Subway, Interested Party, Pro se.

JL Subs Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Scott County Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Newport Subway Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Nicholasville Pharmacy Services Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

North Bernen Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Subway stores 228089 and 39268, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kenmar Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Poole's Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

T&M Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Five Rivers Subs Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

E&L Subway Sandwich Shop Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Howell Mill Pharmacy, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Eagleridge Subs Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Moore Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Murphy Subs Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Moden-Giroux Inc. dba Thee Barker Store, Interested Party, Pro se.

Subway #27630, Interested Party, Pro se.

Massachusetts Independent Pharmacists [**70] Association, Interested Party, Pro se.

Summit Park Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Keyes Drug, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

West Pueblo Subs Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Lockport Pharmacy Inc. dba Lockport Home Medical Equipment, Interested Party, Pro se.

Gibsons Pharmacy / Medical Arts Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Moden-Giroux Inc. dba Transit Hill Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Great Oak Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Rosenkrans Pharmacy Inc. dba Hilton Family Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

MNZ Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Rosenkrans Pharmacy Inc. dba Oakfield Family Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Pueblo Subway Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Rosenkrans Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Hipp Drug, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hyde Druge Store, Interested Party, Pro se.

D & G Duncan Ent. Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Tura's Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

KRSNA Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Letourneau's Pharmacy Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Cayucos Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Keystone Pharmacy Alliance, Interested Party, Pro se.

Thorson LLC dba Subway, Interested Party, Pro se.

Bridges & James Inc. dba Wannamaker Drug, Interested Party, [**71] Pro se.

Subway #36165, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

R&S Drug Stores, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

TDC Enterprises, LP, Interested Party, Pro se.

Pasadena Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Satdad Subway, Interested Party, Pro se.

Sai Subway, Interested Party, Pro se.

Motihera Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Bragdon & Company Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

SKV Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

GM Towers, Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Highhouse Oil Co., Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Riggs Oil Company, Interested Party, Pro se.

Vandegrift Investment Corp., Interested Party, Pro se.

Convenient Food Mart #175, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

FEBE Brothers, Ltd., Interested Party, Pro se.

Genaud Drugs LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

MH Commonwealth, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Denville Sub LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Haledon Sub LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

The Learning Tree, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Yorkville Drugstore, Interested Party, Pro se.

Cochran Brothers Co., Interested Party, Pro se.

Towne Drugs, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Woolpets, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Indeliciae LLC dba Ebenezer Books, Interested Party, Pro se.

Northgate Cinema, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Kwik Chek [**72] Food Stores, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Pennsylvania Toy Academy & Party Shop, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Wymore Superette, Interested Party, Pro se.

Lowry's Books, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wymore Liquor LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Cusick Corporation, Interested Party, Pro se.

Vintners Distributors, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Midwest Petroleum Company, Interested Party, Pro se.

Nakash Enterprises, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Panama Mainstreet Corp., Interested Party, Pro se.

Dougs Hometown Foods, Interested Party, Pro se.

Stompin Grounds Plus, Inc. dba Aunt Bea's Pantry, Interested Party, Pro se.

Doc's Deli'licious, Interested Party, Pro se.

Collamer Stop & Shop, Interested Party, Pro se.

Jimmy Kwik Store, Interested Party, Pro se.

Citgo Quick Mart, Interested Party, Pro se.

Mason Corporation, Interested Party, Pro se.

Westhall Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Dragon's Toy Box LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

GPMS Inc. dba Wind Up Here, Interested Party, Pro se.

Clark's Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Pedretti, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Dabblers LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Sperring Enterprises Inc. dba Burlingame Valero, Interested Party, Pro se.

Family Rexall Drug, Interested [**73] Party, Pro se.

Thomas Myers, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hollin Hall Automotive Services, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Parker's, Interested Party, Pro se.

Don Ritter Group - Ritter Express Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

TSP Enterprises LLC dba Dorsett Mobil, Interested Party, Pro se.

Just Imagine Toys, Interested Party, Pro se.

Mabardy Oil Inc. Salisbury Mini Mart Inc., Seabrook One Stop, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Steaks N' Stuff PI, Interested Party, Pro se.

Book House of Stuyveant Plaza, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Pester Marketing, Interested Party, Pro se.

Moody Book Corporation, Interested Party, Pro se.

kiddywampus, Interested Party, Pro se.

Thompson Oconto Enterprises, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Stevenson's Hi-Pointe Standard Service Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Clifford's Pet Specialties, Interested Party, Pro se.

More Than Convenience, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kay Jays Doll Shoppe, Interested Party, Pro se.

Calico cat Toy Shoppe, Interested Party, Pro se.

Nutfield Trading, LLC dba Troy Country Store, Interested Party, Pro se.

Sutton Superette, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Buddy's Mini-Marts, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wayside South LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Children's [**74] World Uniform Supply, Interested Party, Pro se.

Integrity Auto, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wayside, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Captus LLC dba Earth Explorer Toys, Interested Party, Pro se.

Mazen Owydat, Interested Party, Pro se.

Inter Island Petroleum, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Melrose Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Flowerama, Interested Party, Pro se.

Play Clothes, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Home Oil Company, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Ports Petroleum Co., Interested Party, Pro se.

Steve's Madhouse Market Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Meeks Mart, Interested Party, Pro se.

Driver Heating Oil, Inc, Interested Party, Pro se.

Pyramid Books, Interested Party, Pro se.

E & S Service LLC dba Community Exxon, Interested Party, Pro se.

Waters Auto Centers Inc. dba McCausland Auto Center & dba Kirkwood Service Center, Interested Party, Pro se.

Degen Properties, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Texas Trail Market, Interested Party, Pro se.

Swarthmore College Bookstore, Interested Party, Pro se.

Franchisee 7-Eleven, Interested Party, Pro se.

Medicap Pharmacy, Interested Party, Pro se.

Citgo Quik Mart, Interested Party, Pro se.

In Gathering, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

PL Squared, Inc., Interested [**75] Party, Pro se.

City of De Pere, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hansen's AutoCare, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Dollar General Corporation, Interested Party, Pro se.

The Trading Post LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Tommy Bahama Group, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

The Association of Kentucky Fried Chicken Franchisees, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Sugartown Worldwide LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Oxford Industries, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Sheetz, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Waffle House, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Ozark Waffles, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

East Coast Waffles, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Mid South Waffles, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Midwest Waffles, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Pizzoli LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Pilot Travel Centers LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

National Association of Convenience Stores, Interested Party, Pro se.

C.N. Brown Company, Interested Party, Pro se.

Tommy Bahama R&R Holdings, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Northbrook Seafood LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Melcar, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Petterino's LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Eiffel Tower LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Vegas Tapas LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

One [**76] Fin, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Water Tower Place Restaurants LP, Interested Party, Pro se.

Hough Petroleum Corp., Interested Party, Pro se.

Bob Brandi Stations, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Eat in the Mall Too, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Tucci of Arizona, LP, Interested Party, Pro se.

Vegas Tapas LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Reston Canteen LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

For Little Pub Holdings, LLC, Interested Party: Sherli Shamtoub, PRO HAC VICE, Brownstein Hyatt Farber Schreck, LLP, Los Angeles, CA.

For Dollar General Corporation, Interested Party: Joseph Michael Vanek, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Vanek, Vickers & Masini, P.C., Chicago, IL.

For National Association of Convenience Stores, Interested Party: Daniel Hume, David E. Kovel, Meghan Joan Summers, Kirby McInerney LLP, New York, NY; Eric Citron, Thomas Goldstein, Goldstein & Russell P.C., Bethesda, MD.

Labone, Inc. DBA Tucci Benuccch, Interested Party, Pro se.

Labone Limited Partnership, Interested Party, Pro se.

Dearborn Hubbard LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Tucci of Minnesota, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Joe's Stone Crab of Chicago LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Joe's of Las Vegas LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Phase [**77] One LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Make It Special LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Shaw's Schaumburg LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Vegas Tapas LLC, DBA Stripburger, Interested Party, Pro se.

LGO Santa Monica LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

L. Woods LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

M Street Kitchen LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Lettuce Entertain You Enterprises, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Lettuce Entertain You Enterprises, Inc. DBA Lettuce Frequent Diner's Club, Interested Party, Pro se.

Lettuce Wine Club LLC, DBA Lettuce Wine Cellars, Interested Party, Pro se.

Phase One LLC, DBA M Burger, Interested Party, Pro se.

OVS LLC, DBA M Burger Ontario, Interested Party, Pro se.

M Burger Thompson LLC, DBA M Burger Thompson, Interested Party, Pro se.

Just B'Claws, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Water Tower Place Restaurants LP, DBA M Burger Water Tower, Interested Party, Pro se.

M Street Kitchen LLC, DBA M Street Kitchen, Interested Party, Pro se.

Just B'Claws, Inc., DBA Shaw's Crab House - Chicago, Interested Party, Pro se.

Jessica's High Ceilings, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

The Crepe Stand LLC, DBA Magic Pan Crepe Stand, Interested Party, Pro se.

Magic Pan Northbrook LLC, DBA Magic Pan Crepe Stand, [**78] Interested Party, Pro se.

Osteria Wheeling LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Magic Pan - Ridgedale LLC, DBA Magic Pan Crepe Stand - Ridgedale, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kremeworks Hawaii LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Water Tower Place Restaurants LP, DBA Mity Nice Grill, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kremeworks Oregon LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Mon Ami Bethesda LLC, DBA Mon Ami Gabi - Bethesda, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kremeworks Oregon LLC, DBA Krispy Kreme- Clackamas, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kremeworks Oregon LLC, DBA Krispy Kreme- Beaverton, Interested Party, Pro se.

La Creme, Inc., DBA Mon Ami Gabi - Chicago, Interested Party, Pro se.

Mon Ami Bethesda LLC, DBA Mon Ami Gabi - Bethesda, Interested Party, Pro se.

Mon Ami Gabi Development LLC, DBA Mon Ami Gabi - Oakbrook, Interested Party, Pro se.

Mon Ami Reston LLC, DBA Mon Ami Gabi - Reston, Interested Party, Pro se.

NFG Salem, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

NFG Portland, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

NFG Seattle, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

French Cafe LLC, DBA Mon Ami Gabi, Interested Party, Pro se.

Seal Pizza, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Nacional LLC, DBA NACIONAL 27, Interested Party, Pro se.

OVS LLC, DBA OSTERIA VIA STATO/PIZZARIA, Interested [**79] Party, Pro se.

EMB State LP, DBA PAPAGUS - CHICAGO, Interested Party, Pro se.

Papagus Oakbrook, Inc., DBA PAPAGUS - OAKBROOK, Interested Party, Pro se.

Petterino's LLC, DBA PETTERINO'S, Interested Party, Pro se.

Oak Brook Seafood LLC, DBA REEL CLUB, Interested Party, Pro se.

Lettuce Entertain You Enterprises, Inc., DBA RJ GRUNTS, Interested Party, Pro se.

River North Italian LLC, DBA RPM ITALIAN, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wildfire Eden Prairie LLC, DBA WILDFIRE - EDEN PRAIRIE, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wildfire Glenview LLC, DBA WILDFIRE - GLENVIEW, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wildfire, Inc., DBA WILDFIRE - LINCOLNSHIRE, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wildfire, Inc., DBA WILDFIRE - OAK BROOK, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wildfire Schaumburg LLC, DBA WILDFIRE - SCHAUMBURG, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wildfire Tysons LLC, DBA WILDFIRE - TYSON, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wow Bao Jackson LLC, DBA WOW BAO - JACKSON, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wow Bao Jackson LLC, DBA WOW BAO WIRELESS - JACKSON, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wow Bao 225 LLC, DBA WOW BAO-MICHIGAN, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wow Bao State Lake LLC, DBA WOW BAO - STATE AND LAKE, Interested Party, Pro se.

Wow Bao Buns LLC, DBA WOW BAO - WATERTOWER, Interested [**80] Party, Pro se.

Kremeworks Washington LLC, DBA KRISPY KREME - ISSAQAH, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kremeworks Washington LLC, DBA KRISPY KREME - SPOKANE, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kremeworks Washington LLC, DBA KRISPY KREME - NORTH SEATTLE, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kremeworks Washington LLC, DBA KRISPY KREME - SODO, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kremeworks Washington LLC, DBA KRISPY KREME - BURLINGTON, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kremeworks Washington LLC, DBA KRISPY KREME - TACOMA, Interested Party, Pro se.

Kremeworks Washington LLC, DBA KRISPY KREME - PUYALLUP, Interested Party, Pro se.

Payson Professional Management Corp., Interested Party, Pro se.

MCL Main & Alma Restaurant, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Citgo Quik Mart, Interested Party, Pro se.

Christina Wallerstein, Interested Party, Pro se.

MCL Catalina Restaurant, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Tucson Restaurants, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

MCL Tucson Alvernon Restaurant, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Lincoln Skyline Deli, Interested Party, Pro se.

MCL Gilbert Road Restaurants, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

MCL Happy Valley Restaurant, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

MCL Camp Verde Restaurant, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Showtop Restaurants, [**81] Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

MCL River & LaCholla Restaurant, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Cumberland Farms, Inc & Gulf Oil Limited, Interested Party, Pro se.

MCL Country Club Restaurant, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

MCL Prescott Restaurants, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

MCL Enterprises, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

MCL Whiteriver Restaurant, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Watermark Donut Company DBA Dunkin Donuts, Interested Party, Pro se.

Epstein Porter 2, LLC DBA Dunkin Donuts, Interested Party, Pro se.

Epstein Porter 1, LLC DBA Dunkin Donuts, Interested Party, Pro se.

David Michael's Salon, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Zuri, Inc. DBA Dunkin Donuts / Baskin Robbins, Interested Party, Pro se.

Division "L" DBA Dunkin Donuts, Interested Party, Pro se.

Western "L" DBA Dunkin Donuts, Interested Party, Pro se.

Jordan Pizza, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Dakota Direct Furniture, LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Maverik, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Equilon Enterprises LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Motiva Enterprises LLC, Interested Party, Pro se.

Shimurima II, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Shimurima, Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Gourmet Catalog Inc., Interested Party, Pro se.

Old Warsaw [**82] Restaurant, Interested Party, Pro se.

Swarovski, Interested Party, Pro se.

For Managed Care Advisory Group, Inc., Interested Party: Joe R. Whatley, Jr., LEAD ATTORNEY, Patrick J. Sheehan, Whatley Drake & Kallas LLC, New York, NY.

For Heartland Payment Systems, Inc., Interested Party: Jason Brown, Ropes & Gray LLP, New York, NY; Seth C. Harrington, Ropes & Gray LLP, Boston, MA.

For Spectrum Settlement Recovery LLC, Interested Party: Eric L. Lewis, Lewis Baach PLLC, Washington, DC.

For Listed Entities, Interested Party: Deborah E. Arbabi, PRO HAC VICE, Daniel A. Sasse, Crowell & Moring LLP, Irvine, CA; Kelly T. Currie, Crowell & Moring, LLP, New York, NY.

For Class Action Recovery Services, Interested Party: Dennis M. Campbell, LEAD ATTORNEY, Mershon, Sawyer, Johnston, Dunwody & Cody, Miami, FL.

For Claims Compensation Bureau, LLC, Interested Party: Brian Dale Graifman, LEAD ATTORNEY, Borah, Goldstein, Altschuler, Nahins & Goldstein, P.C., New York, NY.

For Stephen Greiner, Interested Party: Stephen William Greiner, LEAD ATTORNEY, Willkie Farr & Gallagher LLP, New York, NY.

For Gary Friedman, Interested Party: Gary B. Friedman, LEAD ATTORNEY, Friedman Law Group LLP, New York, NY.

For PNC Bank [**83] National Association, Interested Party: Frederick N. Egler, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Reed Smith, Pittsburgh, PA; Jennifer P Snyder, Dilworth Paxson LLP, Philadelphia, PA.

For Carlson Transportation, Inc., Interested Party: Frederick N. Egler, LEAD ATTORNEY, Reed Smith, Pittsburgh, PA; Hae Sung Nam, Kaplan, Kilsheimer & Fox, LLP, New York, NY.

For Boss Dental Care PLLC, Interested Party: Anne Kristin Fornecker, LEAD ATTORNEY, Hilliard Munoz Gonzales LLP, Corpus Christi, TX; Bart D. Cohen, LEAD ATTORNEY, Berger & Montague, P.C., Philadelphia, PA; Donald S. Nation, Matthew C. Weiner, Steve D. Shadowen, LEAD ATTORNEYS, PRO HAC VICE, Hilliard & Shadowen LLP, Austin, TX; Linda P. Nussbaum, LEAD ATTORNEY, Nussbaum Law Group, PC, New York, NY; Brian M. Hogan, Michael J. Freed, PRO HAC VICE, Robert J. Wozniak, Freed Kanner London & Millen LLC, Bannockburn, IL; Daniel Lawrence Berger, Deborah A. Elman, Grant & Eisenhofer P.A., New York, NY; Robert G. Eisler, Grant & Eisenhofer P.A., Wilmington, DE.

For rue21, Inc., Interested Party: Carter Hoel, Meyer Darragh Bebenek & Eck, PLLC, Pittsburgh, PA.

For rue21, Inc., Interested Party: Edward G. Brandenstein, Paul Robinson, Meyer Darragh [**84] Buckler Bebenek & Eck, P.L.L.C., Pittsburgh, PA.

For Financial Recovery Strategies, Inc., Interested Party: Eric Todd Kanefsky, LEAD ATTORNEY, Calcagni & Kanefsky, Newark, NJ.

For The Clearing House Payments Company L.L.C. ("TCH"), Interested Party: Mary Gail Gearns, Richard S. Taffet, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Morgan Lewis & Bokius LLP, New York, NY.

For ATMIA, ATMIA, Amicus: Anthony Joseph Staltari, LEAD ATTORNEY, Manatt, Phelps & Phillips, LLP, New York, NY; Benjamin G. Shatz, LEAD ATTORNEY, Manatt, Phelps & Phillips, LLP, Los Angeles, CA.

For Paypal, Inc., Amicus: Francis Michael Curran, LEAD ATTORNEY, McCormick & O'Brien, LLP, New York, NY.

For Amici Objecting States, Amici Objecting States, Amicus: Robert Lee Hubbard, New York Attorney General's Office, Attorney General's Office, New York, NY.

For Verifone, Inc., Subpoenaed third part, Material Witness: Karen P. Anderson, LEAD ATTORNEY, VeriFone, Inc., San Jose, CA.

For Auriemma Consulting Group, Inc., Objector: Lita B. Wright, Storch Amini & Munves, P.C., New York, NY.

For A & D Wine Corp and other Objectors, Objector: Jerrold S. Parker, LEAD ATTORNEY, Parker & Waichman, LLC, Great Neck, NY.

For Home Depot U.S.A., Inc., Objector: Alicia K. Cobb, [**85] LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan, LLP-WA, Seattle, WA; Benjamin W. Thorpe, LEAD ATTORNEY, Bondurant, Mixson & Elmore, LLP, Atlanta, GA; Deborah K. Brown, LEAD ATTORNEY, Quinn Emanuel, New York, NY; Frank M. Lowrey, Ronan P. Doherty, LEAD ATTORNEYS, PRO HAC VICE, Bondurant Mixson & Elmore, LLP, Atlanta, GA; Steig David Olson, Stephen R. Neuwirth, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan LLP, New York, NY.

For American Express Co., Objector: Philip C. Korologos, LEAD ATTORNEY, Eric Brenner, Boies, Schiller & Flexner LLP, New York, NY; Rory Ann Leraris, LEAD ATTORNEY, Cravath Swaine & Moore LLP, New York, NY.

For First Data Corporation, First Data Government Solutions, First Data Merchant Services Corporation, TASQ Technology, Inc., TRS Recovery Services Inc., Telecheck Services Inc., Objectors: Jason A. Yurasek, Perkins Coie LLP, San Francisco, CA.

For Landers McClarty Ford Chrysler Dodge Jeep, Landers McClarty Nissan, Landers McClarty Dodge Chrysler Jeep, Landers Dodge Chrysler Jeep, Tri-Lakes Motors, Burleson Nissan, Bel Air Honda, Landers McClarty Toyota Scion, Nissan of Fort Worth, Landers McClarty Chevrolet, Landers McClarty Huntsville Dodge Chrysler [**86] Jeep, Mercedes Benz of Huntsville, Landers McClarty Nissan of Huntsville, Landers McClarty Subaru, Lees Summit Dodge Chrysler Jeep Ram, Lees Summit Nissan, Olathe Dodge Chrysler Jeep, Waxahachie Dodge Chrysler Jeep, Waxahachie Ford-Mercury, Landers Harley-Davidson Hot Springs, Landers Harley-Davidson Little Rock, Lander Harley-Davidson Conway, Landers Auto Group No. 1 d/b/a Landers Scion, Landers Auto Group No. 1 d/b/a Landers Toyota, Landers Auto Group No. 1 d/b/a The Boutique at Landers Toyota, Landers Chrysler Jeep Dodge, LLC, Landers Chrysler Dodge Jeep d/b/a Landers Pre-Owned, Landers Chrysler Dodge Jeep d/b/a Landers Suzuki, A&D Wine Corp., A&Z Restaurant Corp., 105 Degrees, LLC, The Pantry Restaurant Group, LLC, PPT Inc., d/b/a Graffitis Restaurant, Sansoles Tanning Salon, Greenhaws, Inc., Dons Pharmacy, Incorporated, Gossett Motor Cars, Inc.- Tennessee, Gossett Motor Cars, Inc. - Georgia, JB Cook, LLC d/b/a Downtown Oil & Lube, Storage World Limited Partnership, LLC, Leisure Landing RV Park, Pinnacle Valley Liquor Store, Inc., Landers Brothers Auto No. 2, LLC f/d/b/a Landers Buick Pine Bluff, Landers Brothers Auto No. 3, LLC f/d/b/a Landers Hyundai Pine Bluff, Landers Brothers [**87] Auto No. 4, LLC f/d/b/a Landers Honda Jonesboro, Landers Brothers Auto No. 5, LLC f/d/b/a Landers Chrysler Dodge Jeep Pine Bluff, Landers Brothers Auto Group, Inc. f/d/b/a Landers Honda Pine Bluff, The Tennis Shoppe, Inc., The Grady Corporation (Bentonville Location) d/b/a Whole Hog Barbeque, The Grady Corporation II (Fayetteville Location) d/b/a Whole Hog Barbeque, Coulson Oil Company, Diamond State Oil, LLC, Superstop Stores, LLC, PetroPlus, LLC, Port Cities Oil, LLC, New Mercury, LLC, New Vista, LLC, New Neptune, LLC, SVI Security Solutions, Objectors: Jerrold S. Parker, Parker & Waichman, LLC, Great Neck, NY.

For National ATM Council, Inc., ATMs Of The South, Inc., Objectors: Don Allen Resnikoff, Washington, DC.

For Business Resource Group, Inc., Cabe & Cato, Inc., Just Atms, Inc., Wash Water Solutions, Inc., ATM Bankcard Services, Inc., Meiners Development Company of Lee's Summit, Missouri, LLC, represented by Don Allen Resnikoff, Mills-Tel Corp., Scot Gardner d/b/a SJI, Selman Telecommunications Investment Group, LLC, represented by Don Allen Resnikoff, Turnkey ATM Solutions, LLC, Trinity Holdings Ltd., Inc., T & T Communications Inc. & Randall N. Bro d/b/a T & B Investments, represented [**88] by Don Allen Resnikoff, Objectors: Don Allen Resnikoff, Washington, DC.

For Target Corporation, Macy's, Inc., J.C. Penney Corporation, Inc., Big Lots Stores, Inc., Ascena Retail Group, Inc., Abercrombie & Fitch Co., Saks Incorporated, Chico's FAS, Inc., American Signature, Inc., Objectors: Michael J. Canter, LEAD ATTORNEY, Alycia Nadine Broz, PRO HAC VICE, Kenneth J. Rubin, Mitchell A. Tobias, Nina I. Webb-Lawton, Robert N. Webner, Timothy B. McGranor, Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP, Columbus, OH; Douglas Robert Matthews, James A. Wilson, Kimberly Weber Herlihy Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease, LLP

(Columbus), Columbus, OH; Gregory Alan Clarick, Isaac Berkman Zaur, Nicole L. Gueron, Clarick Gueron Reisbaum LLP, New York, NY.

For The Gap, Inc., Dillard's, Inc., Bob Evans Farms, Inc., CKE Restaurants, Inc., Papa John's International, Inc., Objectors: Gregory Alan Clarick, Isaac Berkman Zaur, Nicole L. Gueron, Clarick Gueron Reisbaum LLP, New York, NY; Jeffrey Isaac Shinder, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY.

For Limited Brands, Inc., The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc., Boscov's Department Store, LLC, American Booksellers Association, National Association of College Stores, Objectors: [*89] Gregory Alan Clarick, Isaac Berkman Zaur, Nicole L. Gueron, Clarick Gueron Reisbaum LLP, New York, NY.

For National Retail Federation, Objector: Andrew G. Celli, Jr, LEAD ATTORNEY, Emery, Celli, Brinckerhoff & Abady LLP, New York, NY; Diane Lee Houk, Emery Celli Brinckerhoff & Abady LLP, New York, NY; Gregory Alan Clarick, Isaac Berkman Zaur, Nicole L. Gueron, Clarick Gueron Reisbaum LLP, New York, NY.

For Valuevision Media, Inc., Royal Caribbean Cruises LTD., Objectors: Cheryl L. Davis, Menaker & Herrmann LLP, New York, NY.

For American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc., Objector: Philip C. Korologos, LEAD ATTORNEY, Eric Brenner, Boies, Schiller & Flexner LLP, New York, NY; Rory Ann Leraris, LEAD ATTORNEY, Cravath Swaine & Moore LLP, Worldwide Plaza, New York, NY.

For Travel Impressions, Ltd., Objector: Philip C. Korologos, LEAD ATTORNEY, Eric Brenner, Boies, Schiller & Flexner LLP, New York, NY.

For American Express Publishing Corp., Objector: Philip C. Korologos, LEAD ATTORNEY, Eric Brenner, Boies, Schiller & Flexner LLP, New York, NY.

For U.S. Public Research Interest Group, Objector: Robert L. Begleiter, Schlam, Stone & Dolan, LLP, New York, NY.

For Kevan McLaughlin, Objector: [*90] John W. Davis, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Law Office of John W. Davis, San Diego, CA.

For office depot, Objector: Gregory Alan Clarick, Clarick Gueron Reisbaum LLP, New York, NY.

For Discover Financial Services, Objector: Jennifer M. Selendy, Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan LLP, New York, NY.

For The City of Oakland, California, Academy, Ltd., Aldo US Inc., Barnes & Nobles, Inc, Best Buy Enterprise Services, Inc., BJ's Wholesale Club, Inc., Carter's, Inc., Costco Wholesale Corporation, Crate & Barrel Holdings, Inc., Darden Restaurants, Inc., David's Bridal, Inc., Dillard's, Inc., General Nutrition Corporation, Genesco Inc., The Gymboree Corporation, Ikea North America Services, LLC, J. Crew Group, Inc., Kwik Trip, Inc., Lowe's Companies, Inc., Michaels Stores, Inc., National Railroad Passenger Corporation (Amtrak), Nike, Inc., Panera, LLC, Petco Animal Supplies, Inc., Petsmart, Inc., RaceTrac Petroleum, Inc., Sears Holdings Corporation, Starbucks Corporation, Thermo Fisher Scientific Inc., The Wendy's Company, Alon USA Energy, Inc., Recreational Equipment, Inc., Cardtronics, Inc., Family Dollar, Inc., Barnes & Noble College Booksellers, LLC, Drury Hotels Company, LLC, Marathon Petroleum [*91] Company LP, Objectors: Jeffrey Isaac Shinder, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY.

For 7-Eleven Inc., Objector: David Alan Scupp, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY; Jeffrey Isaac Shinder, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY.

For Retail Industry Leaders Association, Objector: David G. Trachtenberg, LEAD ATTORNEY, Trachtenberg Rodes & Friedberg LLP, New York, NY; Michael C Rakower, LEAD ATTORNEY, Rakower Lupkin PLLC, New York, NY; Andrew G. Celli, Jr, Emery, Celli, Brinckerhoff & Abady LLP, New York, NY; Jeffrey Isaac Shinder, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY.

For Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., Objector: Drew Hansen, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Susman Godfrey L.L.P., Seattle, WA; Jeffrey Isaac Shinder, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY; John D. Comerford, Dowd Bennett LLP, Saint Louis, MO.

For Roundy's Supermarkets, Inc., Objector: William Jay Blechman, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Miami, FL; Jeffrey Isaac Shinder, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY; Joshua Barton Gray, Kenny Nachwalter, P.A., Washington, DC.

For WellPoint, Inc., Objector: Robert N. Webner, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kenneth J. Rubin, Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP, Columbus, OH; Isaac Berkman Zaur, Clarick Gueron [**92] Reisbaum LLP, New York, NY.

For Bon-Ton Stores, Inc., Objector: Michael J. Canter, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kenneth J. Rubin, Mitchell A. Tobias, Nina I. Webb-Lawton, Robert N. Webner, Timothy B. McGranor, Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP, Columbus, OH; Alycia Nadine Broz, PRO HAC VICE, Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP, Columbus, OH; Douglas Robert Matthews, James A. Wilson, Kimberly Weber Herlihy, Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease, LLP (Columbus), Columbus, OH; Gregory Alan Clarick, Clarick Gueron Reisbaum LLP, New York, NY.

For Kohl's Corporation, L Brands, Inc., Luxottica U.S. Holdings Corp., Office Depot, Inc., OfficeMax Incorporated, Staples, Inc., TJX Companies, Inc., Objectors: Michael J. Canter, LEAD ATTORNEY, Kenneth J. Rubin, Mitchell A. Tobias, Nina I. Webb-Lawton, Robert N. Webner, Timothy B. McGranor, Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP, Columbus, OH; Alycia Nadine Broz, PRO HAC VICE, Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP, Columbus, OH; Douglas Robert Matthews, James A. Wilson, Kimberly Weber Herlihy, Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease, LLP (Columbus), Columbus, OH; Gregory Alan Clarick, Clarick Gueron Reisbaum LLP, New York, NY; Isaac Berkman Zaur, Clarick Gueron Reisbaum LLP, New [**93] York, NY.

For Speedway LLC, Martin's Super Markets, Inc., Whole Foods Market Group, Inc., Stein Mart, Inc., Dick's Sporting Goods, Inc., Foot Locker, Inc., Zappos.com, Inc., Amazon.com, Inc., Panda Restaurant Group, Inc., P.C. Richard & Son, Inc., YUM! Brands, Inc., HMSHost Corporation, Objectors: Jeffrey Isaac Shinder, Constantine Cannon LLP, New York, NY.

For The Iron Barley Restaurant, Objector: Steve A. Miller, LEAD ATTORNEY, Steve A. Miller, P.C., Denver, CO.

For SuperTest Service Stations of IN, Inc., Objector : Christopher Braun, PRO HAC VICE, Tonya Bond, PRO HAC VICE, Plews Shadley Racher & Braun LLP, Indianapolis, IN.

For Restoration Hardware, Inc., Objector: Joe Vecchione Demarco, DeVore & DeMarco LLP, New York, NY.

For Teatro Dallas, Objector: Dennis Dean Gibson, Gibson Law Firm, Dallas, TX.

For Vicente Consulting LLC, Objector: Edward F Siegel, Law Offices of Edward F. Siegel, Denver, CO.

For Dell Inc., Objector: James B. Niehaus, LEAD ATTORNEY, Gregory R. Farkas, Frantz Ward LLP, Cleveland, OH.

For Maison Weiss Inc., Objector: James Warren, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Carroll Warren & Parker PLLC, Jackson, MS.

For Temple Eagle Partners LLC, Objector: David Stein, LEAD ATTORNEY, [**94] Samuel & Stein, New York, NY.

For Fiesta Restaurant Group, Inc., Objector: Sanford H. Greenberg, LEAD ATTORNEY, Greenberg Freeman LLP, New York, NY.

For Auto Europe Holdings, Inc., Hertz UK Limited, Objectors: Brian A. Ratner, Hausfeld LLP, Washington, DC.

For Blue Cross Blue Shield entities, Objector: Adam P. Feinberg, Anthony F. Shelley, Miller & Chevalier Chartered, Washington, DC.

For Barneys New York, Boston Market Corporation, Objectors: Cheryl L. Davis, Menaker & Herrmann LLP, New York, NY.

For The Egg Store, Objector: Roger J. Maldonado, Balber Pickard Battistoni Maldonado & Van Der Tuin, PC, New York, NY.

For T-Mobile USA, Inc., Objector: Arun Srinivas Subramanian, LEAD ATTORNEY, Susman Godfrey LLP, New York, NY.

For Hermes of Paris, Inc., 99 Only Stores, Smart & Final Holdings, Inc., Objectors: Alyse Fiori Stach, LEAD ATTORNEY, Proskauer Rose LLP, New York, NY.

For Metropolitan Transportation Authority, Objector: Daniel Louis Russo, Metropolitan Transportation Authority, New York, NY.

For City of New York, Objector: Amy Nkemka Okereke, LEAD ATTORNEY, New York City Law Department, Office of the Corporation Counsel, Affirmative Litigation Division, New York, NY; Melanie C.T. Ash, LEAD [**95] ATTORNEY, New York City Law Department, New York, NY.

For Jon M Zimmerman, Objector: Joshua R. Furman, LEAD ATTORNEY, Joshua R. Furman Law Corp., Sherman Oaks, CA.

For DFS Services, LLC, Discover Home Loans, Inc., Discover Bank, Objectors: Jennifer M. Selendy, Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan LLP, New York, NY.

MILK JUG, Objector, Pro se.

Market Street Fast Serv Inc, Objector, Pro se.

For Buc-ee's Ltd, Objector: William R. H. Merrill, Susman Godfrey LLP (TX), Houston, TX.

For R&M Objectors, Objectors: Jerrold S. Parker, Parker & Waichman, LLC, Great Neck, NY.

For Falls Auto Gallery dba Falls Car Collection, Objector: Sam P. Cannata, LEAD ATTORNEY, Cannata Phillips LPA, Cleveland, OH.

For Temple Eagle Partners LLC, Objector: David Stein, LEAD ATTORNEY, Samuel & Stein, New York, NY.

For Serve Virtual Enterprises, Inc, Amex Assurance Company, Accertify, Inc, ANCA 7 LLC, doing business as Vente Privee, USA, Objectors: Donald L. Flexner, LEAD ATTORNEY, PRO HAC VICE, Boies, Schiller & Flexner LLP, New York, NY; Eric Brenner, John Francis LaSalle, Philip C. Korologos, LEAD ATTORNEYS, Boies Schiller & Flexner LLP, New York, NY.

For State of Arizona, State of California, Objectors: Robert Lee Hubbard, [**96] LEAD ATTORNEY, New York Attorney General's Office, Attorney General's Office, New York, NY.

Judges: MARGO K. BRODIE, United States District Judge.

Opinion by: MARGO K. BRODIE

Opinion

---

[*18] MEMORANDUM & ORDER

MARGO K. BRODIE, United States District Judge:

A putative Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) class of over twelve million nationwide merchants brought an antitrust action under the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1 and 2, and state antitrust laws, against Defendants Visa and Mastercard networks, as well as various issuing and acquiring banks.<sup>1</sup> See In re Payment Card Interchange Fee & Merch. Disc. Antitrust

---

<sup>1</sup> The putative Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) class sought relief in the form of monetary damages, and brought the action along with a separate class that sought equitable relief. (See First Consolidated Am. Class Action Compl. 1, Docket Entry No. 317.) At the earliest stages of this litigation, multiple class actions, as well as individual lawsuits by large retailers, were filed against the Defendants. All actions were consolidated together into a multi-district litigation in 2005 (the "MDL"). See In re Payment Card Interchange Fee & Merch. Disc. Antitrust Litig., 986 F. Supp. 2d 207, 220 n.12 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) ("Interchange Fees I"). Since the initial Litig., 986 F. Supp. 2d 207, 213, 223 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) ("Interchange Fees I"), rev'd and vacated, 827 F.3d 223 (2d Cir. 2016) ("Interchange Fees II"); (First Consolidated Am. Class Action Compl., Docket Entry No. 317.) Plaintiffs are merchants that accept(ed) Visa-and Mastercard-branded cards, and have alleged that Defendants harmed competition and charged the merchants supracompetitive fees by creating unlawful contracts and rules and by engaging in various antitrust conspiracies.<sup>2</sup> See id. at 213; Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 228-29.

[*19] Plaintiffs sought both injunctive and monetary relief, and after years of litigation, former District Judge John Gleeson approved a settlement for an injunctive relief class and a monetary damages relief class, see Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 216 n.7, 240, which was vacated by the Second Circuit on June 30, 2016, and remanded to this Court, Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 227, 229.<sup>3</sup> After additional extensive discovery and renegotiations, the named representatives of the damages class (the "Rule 23(b)(3) Class Plaintiffs") and Defendants reached a new and separate settlement agreement.

Currently before the Court is the Rule 23(b)(3) Class Plaintiffs' Motion for Class Settlement Preliminary Approval. The Rule 23(b)(3) Class Plaintiffs and Defendants move for preliminary approval of the settlement and preliminary certification of a settlement class under Rule 23(b)(3) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. (Notice of Rule 23(b)(3) Class Pls. Mot. and Mot. for Class Settlement [*98] Prelim. Approval ("Mot. for Prelim. Approval"), Docket Entry No. 7257.) In support of the motion, interim class counsel for the Rule 23(b)(3) class ("Rule 23(b)(3) Class Counsel" or "Class Counsel") submitted a memorandum of law, a superseding Rule 23(b)(3) class settlement agreement ("Superseding Settlement Agreement") — with amended escrow agreements, a proposed Notice Plan, proposed Class Notices, and a proposed Plan of Administration and Distribution, among other items (the "Settlement Documents") — and the declarations of two mediators who facilitated settlement discussions.<sup>4</sup> consolidation, a number of matters have been continuously added to the MDL, which now involves over seventy associated cases.

<sup>2</sup> In general, in a credit card transaction, a "merchant receives the purchase price minus two fees: the 'interchange fee' that the issuing bank charge[s] the acquiring bank and the 'merchant discount fee' that the acquiring bank charge[s] the merchant." Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 228. As previously summarized by the Second Circuit, Plaintiffs challenged several credit card network rules as anticompetitive:

The "default interchange" fee applies to every transaction on the network (unless the merchant and issuing bank have entered into a separate agreement). The "honor-all-cards" rule requires merchants to accept all Visa or MasterCard credit cards if they accept any of them, regardless of the differences [*97] in interchange fees. Multiple rules prohibit merchants from influencing customers to use one type of payment over another, such as cash rather than credit, or a credit card with a lower interchange fee. These "anti-steering" rules include the "no-surcharge" and "no-discount" rules, which prohibit merchants from charging different prices at the point of sale depending on the means of payment.

Id. at 228-29. "Plaintiffs allege[d] that these [anticompetitive] rules were adopted pursuant to unlawful agreements among the banks and Visa [and MasterCard]," and "that the banks owned and effectively operated Visa and MasterCard, such that Visa and MasterCard were unlawful 'structural conspiracies' or 'walking conspiracies' with respect to their network rules and practices." Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 220-21. For a further explanation of credit card transactions and interchange fees, see id. at 214-15. As discussed infra, some of these challenged rules have been altered as a result of changes in the credit card industry, and some have been altered as a result of a prior settlement in this action.

<sup>3</sup> Following remand, the two putative classes — the Rule 23(b)(2) injunctive class, and the Rule 23(b)(3) damages class — have been proceeding separately, and are each represented by separate counsel. (See Mem. and Order dated Nov. 30, 2016 ("Interim Class Counsel Order"), Docket Entry No. 6754.)

<sup>4</sup> (See Mem. in Supp. of Rule 23(b)(3) Class Pls. Mot. for Class Settlement Prelim. Approval ("Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval"), Docket Entry No. 7257-1; Superseding and Am. Definitive Class Settlement Agreement of the Rule 23(b)(3) Class Pls. and the Defs. ("Superseding Settlement Agreement"), Docket Entry No. 7257-2; Amended and Restate Class Settlement Cash Escrow Agreement, annexed to Superseding Settlement Agreement as App. C; Amended and Restated Class Settlement Interchange Escrow Agreement, annexed to Superseding Settlement Agreement as App. D; Notice Plan, annexed to Superseding Settlement Agreement as App. F; Settlement Class Notices, annexed to Superseding Settlement Agreement as

For the reasons discussed below, on January 24, 2019, the Court granted the Motion for Class Settlement Preliminary Approval (the "January 24, 2019 Order"). (Prelim. Approval Order, Docket Entry No. 7361.)

Table of Contents

- I. Background
  - a. Prior settlement approval and class certification
  - b. The Second Circuit's reversal
  - c. Relevant subsequent proceedings
  - d. Class Plaintiffs' allegations
  - e. Rule 23(b)(3) Motion for Class Settlement Preliminary Approval
  - f. Objections to preliminary approval and class certification
  - g. Hearing on the Superseding Settlement Agreement and subsequent filings
  - h. Preliminary approval of the Superseding Settlement Agreement
- II. [**99] Discussion
  - a. Preliminary approval of a proposed settlement
  - i. Preliminary approval standards
  - ii. Preliminary approval factors
    - iii. The Court will likely approve the proposed settlement
  - 1. Adequate representation by class representatives and class counsel
    - A. Adequacy of class representatives
      - (1) The named Rule 23(b)(3) Class Plaintiffs suffer the same injury as the putative class members and have an interest in vigorous pursuit of the claims
      - (2) The Rule 23(b)(3) Class Plaintiffs' interests are not antagonistic to the putative class members
    - B. Adequacy of class counsel
  - 2. Arms-length negotiations
  - 3. Adequate relief for the class
    - A. Costs, risks, and delay of trial and appeal
      - (1) The complexity, expense, and likely duration of the litigation
      - (2) The risks of establishing liability
      - (3) The risks of establishing damages
      - (4) The risks of maintaining the class through the trial
    - B. Effectiveness of distributing relief to the class
    - C. The terms of any proposed award of attorneys' fees
    - D. Release from liability
      - (1) The releases in the Original Settlement Agreement
      - (2) The release in the Superseding Settlement Agreement
      - (3) Analysis of the new release
  - 4. Equitable treatment of class members relative to one another
  - [**100] 5. The ability of Defendants to withstand a greater judgment
  - 6. The range of reasonableness of the settlement in light of the best possible recovery and all the attendant risks of litigation

b. Certification of settlement class

i. Rule 23(a) requirements

1. Numerosity
2. Commonality
3. Typicality
4. Adequate representation
5. Ascertainability

ii. Rule 23(b)(3) requirements

1. Predominance
2. Superiority

c. Appointment of Class Counsel

d. Notice Plan and Plan of Allocation and Distribution

e. Final approval procedure

III. Conclusion

[*20]

I. Background

The Court assumes familiarity with the facts and extensive procedural history as set forth in Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d 207; Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d 223; In re Payment Card Interchange Fee & Merch. Disc. Antitrust Litig., No. 05-MD-1720, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 160045, 2017 WL 4325812, \(E.D.N.Y. Sept. 27, 2017\), order set aside, No. 05-MD-1720, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 148316, 2018 WL 4158290 \(E.D.N.Y. Aug. 30, 2018\); and In re Payment Card Interchange Fee & Merch. Disc. Antitrust Litig., No. 05-MD-1720, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 170103, 2017 WL 4620988 \(E.D.N.Y. Oct. 13, 2017\). The Court therefore provides only a summary of the relevant facts and procedural history.

a. Prior settlement approval and class certification

On November 27, 2012, Judge Gleeson granted preliminary approval of a jointly submitted class settlement agreement (the "Original Settlement Agreement"). In re Payment Card Interchange Fee & Merch. Disc. Antitrust Litig., No. 05-MD-1720, 2012 WL 12929536, at *1 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 27, 2012). Judge Gleeson [*101] also provisionally certified two separate classes for settlement purposes only, (1) a mandatory Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) settlement class seeking injunctive relief, from which class members could not opt out; and (2) a Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) class seeking damages, [*21] from which class members could opt out.<sup>5</sup> See id. at *1-2. After issuance of notice to the class and an allotted period for putative class members to object to or opt out of the settlement, on April 11, 2013, the parties moved for final approval of the settlement. (Notice of Mot. and Mot. for Class Pls. Final Approval of Settlement, Docket Entry No. 2111.)

---

<sup>5</sup> Under Rule 23, members of a class certified under Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) are afforded "opt-out" rights, or the right to exclude themselves from the class. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(c\)\(2\)\(B\)\(v\). No such rights are afforded under Rule 23 to classes certified under Rule 23\(b\)\(2\).

After holding a fairness hearing on September 12, 2013, Judge Gleeson granted final approval of the Original Settlement Agreement on December 13, 2013<sup>6</sup> ("final approval decision" or "prior settlement approval"). See Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 213, 240. Under the terms of the Original Settlement Agreement, the Defendants agreed to pay a cash award of $7.25 billion, before reductions for opt outs and other expenses, to the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) class members, and to implement reforms of the Defendants' rules and practices to settle the claims of the Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) class members.<sup>7</sup> Id. at 213, 217.

b. The Second Circuit's reversal

On June 30, 2016, the Second Circuit vacated the settlement, and remanded [\[\*102\]](#) for further proceedings. Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 240. Objectors to the settlement and plaintiffs that chose to opt out of the class prior to final approval argued on appeal that the "class action was improperly certified and that the settlement was unreasonable and inadequate." Id. at 227. The Second Circuit agreed that the class was improperly certified — holding that the class certification requirement of adequate representation under Rule 23\(a\)\(4\) had not been satisfied.<sup>8</sup> Id. The Court found that an inherent conflict of interest existed because a single set of counsel represented both the \(b\)\(2\) and \(b\)\(3\) class interests. See id. at 233-35.

Because of the conflict, the Court concluded that "members of the (b)(2) class were inadequately represented . . ." Id. at 231. Relying on Supreme Court precedent, the [\[\*22\]](#) Second Circuit held that settlement classes that consist of holders of present claims, such as the \(b\)\(3\) class seeking monetary relief for past harm, and holders of future claims, such as the \(b\)\(2\) class seeking injunctive relief to reform current and future rules and policies of the Defendants, must be divided "into homogenous subclasses . . . with separate representation." Id. at 234 (quoting Ortiz v. Fibreboard Corp., 527 U.S. 815, 856, 119 S. Ct. 2295, 144 L. Ed. 2d 715 \(1999\)).

<sup>6</sup> To assist with his determination, Judge Gleeson appointed an economic and legal expert, Dr. Alan O. Sykes of New York University School of Law, to aid the court in weighing the settlement agreement and accompanying expert reports because "[t]he proponents of the settlement disagree[d] strongly with the objectors over the economic value of the proposed settlement to the class members, and specifically over the benefits of the proposed rules changes to the merchant class." See Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 218. Dr. Sykes filed his written analysis with the court on August 28, 2013. (Report from Court Appointed Expert Professor Alan O. Sykes ("Sykes Report"), Docket Entry No. 5965.)

<sup>7</sup> The reforms included, among other things, "Visa and MasterCard rule modifications to permit merchants to surcharge on Visa- or MasterCard-branded credit card transactions at both the brand and product levels"; "[a]n obligation on the part of Visa and MasterCard to negotiate interchange fees in good faith with merchant buying groups"; "[a]uthorization for merchants that operate multiple businesses under different 'trade names' or 'banners' to accept Visa and/or MasterCard at fewer than all of its businesses"; and "[t]he locking-in of the reforms in the Durbin Amendment [of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act of 2010] and the DOJ [United States Department of Justice] consent decree with Visa and MasterCard, even if those reforms are repealed or otherwise undone." Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 217. The Durbin Amendment "limited the interchange fee that issuing banks could charge for debit card purchases, and allowed merchants to discount debit card purchases relative to credit card purchases." Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 229. In the DOJ consent decree, "after an investigation assisted by the information developed by the [P]laintiffs," and following lawsuits that the Department of Justice initiated against Visa, Mastercard, and American Express in 2010, Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 215, "Visa and MasterCard agreed to remove their rules prohibiting merchants from product-level discounting of credit and debit cards," id.; see also Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 229 ("pursuant to a consent decree with the Department of Justice in 2011, Visa and Mastercard agreed to permit merchants to discount transactions to steer consumers away from credit cards use. None of these developments affected the honor-all-cards or no-surcharging rules, or the existence of a default interchange fee.").

<sup>8</sup> In particular, the Second Circuit found that unitary representation of the classes violated Rule 23\(a\)\(4\) — the class certification requirement that representative parties adequately protect the interests of the class — and the Due Process Clause, which requires that named plaintiffs in a class action adequately protect the interests of absent class members. Id. at 228, 231 (citations omitted).

The Second Circuit also found that the issues stemming from unitary [**103] representation were exacerbated by the inability of members of the (b)(2) class to opt out of the settlement or from their release of claims against the Defendants. See *id. at 231, 234*; *id. at 241* (Leval, J., concurring). The Court expressed further concern that the injunctive relief secured for the (b)(2) class would not apply uniformly to benefit all (b)(2) class members. See *id. at 238*. For example, the Court noted that (b)(2) merchants that operated in certain states would be prohibited from surcharging costs to customers at the point of sale, as permitted under the Original Settlement Agreement, while merchants that operated in other states would not be prohibited from doing so. See *id. at 230-31* (noting that "[t]he incremental value and utility of surcharging relief is limited, however, because many states, including New York, California, and Texas, prohibit surcharging as a matter of state law." (citations omitted)); *id. at 238-39* ("A significant proportion of merchants in the (b)(2) class are either legally or commercially unable to obtain incremental benefit from the primary relief . . . and class counsel knew at the time the Settlement Agreement was entered into that this relief was virtually worthless to vast numbers of class members."). [**104]<sup>9</sup>

Despite these significant concerns, the Second Circuit did not abrogate Judge Gleeson's analysis in its entirety, and the majority of its concerns were circumscribed to representation and relief afforded to the (b)(2) injunctive class. The Court acknowledged the due diligence and extensive time and labor that accompanied the final approval process, stating:

Discovery included more than 400 depositions, 17 expert reports, 32 days of expert deposition testimony, and the production of over 80 million pages of documents. The parties fully briefed a motion for class certification, a motion to dismiss supplemental complaints, and cross-motions for summary judgment. Beginning in 2008, the parties participated in concurrent settlement negotiations assisted by well-respected mediators. At the end of 2011, the district judge and the magistrate judge participated in the parties' discussions with the mediators. In October 2012, after several more marathon negotiations with the mediators (including one more with the district court and magistrate judges), the parties executed the [Original] Settlement Agreement.

*Id. at 229.*

c. Relevant subsequent proceedings

After remand, [**105] on August 11, 2016, the Court held a case management conference to discuss, among other items, the Second Circuit's decision. (See Minute Entry dated Aug. 11, 2016, Docket Entry No. 6654.) In order to address the Second Circuit's concerns regarding unitary representation of the classes, on November 30, 2016, pursuant to *Rule 23\(g\)\(3\)*, the Court appointed two separate groups of interim co-lead counsel to represent (1) merchants seeking certification under *Rule 23\(b\)\(2\)* for injunctive relief, and (2) merchants seeking certification under *Rule 23\(b\)\(3\)* for monetary damages.<sup>10</sup> See [*\*23\] In re Payment Card Interchange Fee & Merch. Disc. Antitrust Litig., 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 160045, 2017 WL 4325812, at \*4.*](#) The Court appointed the Nussbaum Law Group, P.C., Hilliard & Shadowen LLP, Freed Kanner London & Millen LLC, and Grant & Eisenhofer P.A. to serve as interim *Rule 23\(b\)\(2\)* Class Counsel for the merchants seeking injunctive relief, and appointed Robins Kaplan LLP, Berger & Montague P.C., and Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd LLP (the "Robins Group") to serve as interim *Rule 23\(b\)\(3\)* Class Counsel for the merchants seeking damages relief — the same three firms that represented the entire consolidated class in the proceedings before Judge Gleeson. (See Mem. and Order dated Nov. 30, 2016 ("Interim Class Counsel Order") 1, Docket Entry No. 6754.)

<sup>9</sup> The Court notes that the landscape of state no-surcharging laws is changing. For example, in 2017, the Supreme Court held that a New York state statute that prohibited merchants from imposing a surcharge on customers using credit cards regulated speech, and remanded the matter to the Second Circuit to determine whether such speech regulation violates the *First Amendment*. See *Expressions Hair Design v. Schneiderman, --- U.S. ---, 137 S. Ct. 1144, 1146, 197 L. Ed. 2d 442 \(2017\)*. In addressing a similar California statute, the Ninth Circuit recently held that the statute violated *First Amendment* commercial free speech rights. *Italian Colors Restaurant v. Becerra, 878 F.3d 1165, 1179 \(9th Cir. 2018\)*.

<sup>10</sup> Magistrate Judge James Orenstein, who has been ably managing the discovery and other matters in this litigation for many years, decided the Class Counsel motions.

On March 31, 2017, Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) Class Counsel filed \*\*106 a complaint on behalf of the Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) representative class plaintiffs, and a putative Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) class. (Equitable Relief Class Action Compl., Docket Entry No. 6910.) On October 30, 2017, Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Counsel filed a Third Consolidated Amended Class Action Complaint ("TAC") on behalf of named Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) representative class plaintiffs ("Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Plaintiffs" or "Class Plaintiffs"), and a putative Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) class.<sup>11</sup> (Third Consolidated Am. Class Action Compl., Docket Entry No. 7123 ("TAC").) According to the TAC, the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Plaintiffs include: Photos Etc. Corporation; Traditions, Ltd.; Capital Audio Electronics, Inc.; CHS, Inc.; Crystal Rock, LLC;<sup>12</sup> Discount Optics, Inc.; Leon's Transmission Service, Inc.; Parkway Corp.; and Payless, Inc. (See TAC ¶ 2.) All seek to represent a class certified under Rules 23\(a\) and \(b\)\(3\). (Id. ¶ 66.)

d. Class Plaintiffs' allegations

The TAC alleges that Defendants<sup>13</sup> — in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act \(15 U.S.C. § 1\), Section 7 of the Clayton Act \(15 U.S.C. § 18\), the California Cartwright Act \(Section 16700 et seq.\) of the California Business and Professions Code, and the California Unfair Competition Law \(Section 17200 et seq.\) of the California [\[\*\*107\]](#) Business and Professions Code) — entered into "contracts, combinations, conspiracies, and understandings" that harmed competition and the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Plaintiffs through supracompetitive fixed prices, unfair acts and practices, and unreasonable restraints of trade. (TAC ¶¶ 4-5, 408-516.) Class Plaintiffs allege that these practices have resulted in a common antitrust injury to an entire class of merchants, and they seek damages under Section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15. (Id. ¶¶ 27, 112, 115.)

e. Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Motion for Class Settlement Preliminary Approval

After engaging in renewed discovery and mediation efforts, the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Plaintiffs and Defendants reached an agreement in principle on June 7, 2018. (See Decl. [\*24] of K. Craig Wildfang ("Wildfang Decl.") ¶¶ 201-39, Docket Entry No. 7257-3.) On September 19, 2018, Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Counsel, on behalf of Class Plaintiffs, moved the Court for preliminary approval of the Superseding Settlement Agreement and preliminary certification of a Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) settlement class. (See Mot. for Prelim. Approval; Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval.)

The Superseding Settlement Agreement defines the proposed Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) putative class to include:

[a]ll persons, businesses, and other entities that have accepted any Visa-Branded \*\*108 Cards and/or Mastercard-Branded Cards in the United States at any time from January 1, 2004 to the Settlement Preliminary

<sup>11</sup> In 2017, Class Plaintiffs moved to amend their Complaint. (See Class Pls. Mot. for Leave to Amend Compl., Docket Entry No. 6880.) On August 30, 2018, after finding that the amended pleadings related back to earlier complaints under Rule 15\(c\), the Court affirmed Plaintiffs' ability "to amend the Complaints to assert an alternative, two-sided market theory following the Second Circuit's decision in United States v. Am. Express Co., 838 F.3d 179 (2d Cir. 2016), aff'd sub nom. Ohio v. Am. Express Co., --- U.S. ---, 138 S. Ct. 2274, 2285, 201 L. Ed. 2d 678 (2018)." In re Payment Card Interchange Fee & Merch. Disc. Antitrust Litig., No. 05-MD-1720, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 148316, 2018 WL 4158290, at *3 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 30, 2018). In United States v. American Express Company, the Second Circuit held that "[t]he District Court erred in excluding the market for cardholders from its relevant market definition." 838 F.3d at 197.

<sup>12</sup> On April 27, 2018, the Court dismissed the claims and actions of Crystal Rock, LLC without prejudice. (Stipulation and Order of Dismissal dated Apr. 27, 2018, Docket Entry No. 7197 (stating, however, that "[a]ll discovery taken of Crystal Rock, LLC . . . will remain in the factual record").) As a result, Crystal Rock, LLC is not listed as a Class Plaintiff in the Superseding Settlement Agreement, and the Court does not consider the facts as to Crystal Rock, LLC in this Memorandum and Order. (See Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶ 3(ii); TAC ¶ 14.)

<sup>13</sup> In the TAC, the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Plaintiffs list the Defendants as "Visa U.S.A., Inc., Visa International Service Association, and Visa, Inc. ('Visa'), MasterCard International Incorporated ('MasterCard'), and the other Defendants named in th[e] Complaint ('Bank Defendants') . . ." (See TAC ¶ 2.)

Approval Date, except that the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Settlement Class shall not include (a) the Dismissed Plaintiffs, (b) the United States government, (c) the named Defendants in this Action or their directors, officers, or members of their families, or (d) financial institutions that have issued Visa-Branded Cards or Mastercard-Branded Cards or acquired Visa-Branded Card transactions or Mastercard-Branded Card transactions at any time from January 1, 2004 to the Settlement Preliminary Approval Date.

(Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶ 4.) All class members will have the right to "opt out" — or exclude themselves — from participation in the class and from being bound by the terms of the Superseding Settlement Agreement. (See id. ¶ 39(f); Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval 2.)

The Superseding Settlement Agreement provides for an award of as much as approximately $6.26 billion in relief before opt-out reductions and expense takedowns<sup>14</sup> — a figure that Class Counsel believes is the largest cash settlement in antitrust class action history. (Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval 1; Wildfang Decl. [**109] ¶ 3.) Putative class members that do not opt out of the settlement will "receive the same benefit — a pro rata share of the monetary fund based on the interchange fees attributable to their transactions during the class period . . ." (Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval 2; Plan of Administration and Distribution I-2, 3.)

In return, the class members will release the claims raised in the TAC. Specifically, class members will release "claims arising out of or relating to conduct or acts that were alleged or raised or that could have been alleged or raised relating to the subject matter of this litigation," (id. at 2), that have accrued through the date of the Court's preliminary approval of the settlement, i.e., January 24, 2019, and that "accrue no later than five years after the Settlement Final Date . . .," (Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶ 31(a) (stating that class members "fully, finally, and forever . . . release [Defendants] from . . . claims . . . that have accrued as of the Settlement Preliminary Approval Date or accrue no later than five years after the Settlement Final Date arising out of or relating to any conduct . . . alleged or otherwise raised . . . or that could have been [**110] alleged or raised . . . or arising out of or relating to a continuation or continuing effect of any such conduct . . . .").<sup>15</sup> The released claims also encompass claims that were or could have been alleged in this action relating to, among other things, interchange fees, anti-steering rules, and honor-all-card rules. (See id. ¶ 31(b)(i–vi).)

The Superseding Settlement Agreement does not release the right of any Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) class member to participate in the Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) action, "solely as to injunctive relief claims . . ."<sup>16</sup> (See id. ¶ 34(a); see also [*25] Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval 23 ("the release does not bar the injunctive relief claims asserted in the pending proposed Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) class action . . . Nothing in the release affects in any way the scope of injunctive relief which the [Rule 23\(b\)\(2\)] Plaintiffs and proposed class can seek.").)

f. Objections to preliminary approval and class certification

---

<sup>14</sup> Although reductions from the $6.25 billion figure will be made in accordance with the number of class members that choose to exclude themselves from the settlement, the award figure will not be reduced below approximately $5.56 billion. (See Mem. in Supp. or Prelim. Approval 1.)

<sup>15</sup> "Settlement Final Date" is defined as the business day after the affirmation by any appeals court of this Court's final approval of the proposed settlement. (See Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶ (3)(ss).) According to Class Counsel, this effectively means that "[t]he release will bar claims that have accrued within five years following . . . the exhaustion of all appeals." (Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval 23.)

<sup>16</sup> The Court notes that documents and filings refer to the Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) action in a variety of ways. The Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) action is proceeding in this MDL as Barry's Cut Rate Stores Inc. et al. v. Visa, Inc., et al., No. 05-MD-01720. The action is sometimes referred to as "Barry's" and the class is sometimes referred to as the "equitable relief class." For the purposes of consistency across opinions, the Court uses the terms "Rule 23\(b\)\(2\)" and "injunctive relief" to refer to the action, as opposed to "Barry's" and "equitable relief."

After a November 1, 2018 status conference with the parties, on November 6, 2018, the Court ordered that "[a]ny objections to the proposed class settlement . . . be filed, in writing, on or before November 20, 2018."<sup>17</sup> (Order dated Nov. 6, 2018.) On November [**111] 20, 2018, the Court received three sets of objections from (1) Leathers Enterprises, Inc.; (2) Fikes Wholesale Inc., Midwest Petroleum Company, and Slidell Oil Company, LLC; and (3) the National Association of Shell Marketers, the Petroleum Marketers Association of America, and the Society of Independent Gasoline Marketers of America (collectively, the "Branded Operators").<sup>18</sup> The Branded Operators own and/or operate gas stations and convenience stores that sell petroleum products that are produced and branded by major oil refiners such as Shell and ConocoPhillips. (Mem. in Opp'n to Prelim. Approval 1.) They raised several concerns in their submissions to the Court.

First, the Branded Operators argue that preliminary settlement approval should not be granted because an intra-class conflict exists and class members will have competing claims over funds for the same merchant transactions. The Branded Operators contend that the major oil companies will attempt to make claims for funds that the Branded Operators are allegedly owed. (Mem. in Opp'n to Prelim. Approval 7-8.) They argue that "[u]nless it is clear who will receive distributions from the settlement for the transaction accepted [**112] by Branded Operators, class members will not know whether they can or should participate in the settlement or opt out." (Id. at 3.)

Second, the Branded Operators argue that Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Counsel is not adequately representing them because of "dueling class members." (See id. at 14-18 ("class counsel is inherently conflicted based on its representation of a class that contains dueling class members.").)

Third, the Branded Operators express concern that some portion of them have been excluded from the class. (Id. at 19 ("the Defendants have been allowing the Oil Brands to negotiate opt-out settlement agreements on behalf of all of their branded operators without the consent of the operators.").) For example, the Branded Operators refer to a list submitted by "Valero,"<sup>19</sup> which [*26] "identifies more than 400 branded operators that are now purportedly excluded from the [Superseding Settlement Agreement]." (Id. at 19-20.) The Branded Operators argue that there will be a "failure to notify" hundreds of class members as a result of these exclusion lists. (Id. at 5.)

<sup>17</sup> Prior to the November 1, 2018 status conference, on October 30, 2018, the Court received a letter, notifying the Court of an intention to object to preliminary approval of the Superseding Settlement Agreement. (Letter notice of intention to object to proposed settlement dated Oct. 30, 2018 ("Letter of Intention to Object"), Docket Entry No. 7280.) On November 15, 2018, Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Counsel filed a response to the October 30, 2018 letter. (Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Counsel's response to Branded Operators' letter of October 30 dated Nov. 15, 2018 ("Class Counsel's Nov. 15 Response"), Docket Entry No. 7294.) On November 23, 2018, Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Counsel filed a response to the objections that were ultimately filed on November 20, 2018. (Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Counsel's Response to Objections to Class Settlement Dkts. 7299, 7300, 7301 dated Nov. 23, 2018 ("Class Counsel's Nov. 23 Response"), Docket Entry No. 7303.)

<sup>18</sup> (See Statement of Obj. Regarding the Proposed Class Settlement by Leathers Enterprises, Inc., Docket Entry No. 7299; Mem. in Opp'n to Prelim. Approval of Class Settlement ("Mem. in Opp'n to Prelim. Approval"), Docket Entry No. 7300; Statement of Obj. Regarding the Proposed Class Settlement by the National Association of Shell Marketers, the Petroleum Marketers Association of America, and the Society of Independent Gasoline Marketers of America, Docket Entry No. 7301.)

<sup>19</sup> Valero Energy Corporation and Valero Marketing and Supply Company are listed as Dismissed Plaintiffs. (See Dismissed Plaintiffs, annexed to Superseding Settlement Agreement as App. B.) "Dismissed Plaintiffs," as defined in the Superseding Settlement Agreement, means:

the individual plaintiffs and former opt-out plaintiffs that have dismissed with prejudice an action against any Defendant and that are listed in Appendix B [of the Superseding Settlement [\[\*\*113\]](#) Agreement], and any additional persons, businesses, or other entities included in an exclusion request that those plaintiffs previously submitted to the Class Administrator in connection with the [Original] Settlement Agreement.

(Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶ 3(t).) The Branded Operators object to the fact that the content of the exclusion requests have not been disclosed to the Court or putative class members, and have not been included with the proposed class notice. (See Mem. in Opp'n to Prelim. Approval 20.)

In addition to the Branded Operator filings, on December 3, 2018, the Court received a letter from Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) Class Counsel on behalf of the injunctive relief Class Plaintiffs, expressing concern that the Superseding Settlement Agreement only preserves injunctive relief claims in the Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) injunctive relief action, instead of injunctive, declaratory, or other equitable relief claims. (See Letter from Equitable Relief Plaintiffs re Language in Settlement Agreement ("Letter re Language in Settlement Agreement"), Docket Entry No. 7313 (pointing out that the claims otherwise released in the Superseding Settlement Agreement include "injunctive, declaratory, or other equitable relief," while the claims preserved for pursuit in the Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) action are "solely . . . injunctive relief claims[,]"; and expressing the desire to "avoid a release that is broader than the . . . claims preserved" by the Superseding Settlement Agreement).)

The Court addresses the concerns of the Branded Operators \*\*114 and Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) Class Counsel infra.

g. Hearing on the Superseding Settlement Agreement and subsequent filings

On December 6, 2018, the Court held a hearing on the Superseding Settlement Agreement. (See Hrg Tr., Docket Entry No. 7331.) The Court discussed with the parties, among other things, the concerns of Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) Class Counsel regarding the preservation of injunctive, declaratory, and other equitable relief claims, (id. at 3:19-7:2), the Branded Operators' objections, (id. at 7:11-17:9), the Court's concerns regarding the terms of the Superseding Settlement Agreement, (id. at 17:14-28:23), and the factors of consideration for preliminary approval and class certification for the purposes of settlement, (id. at 32:7-38:20).

At the conclusion of the hearing, the Court informed the parties that it would approve the proposed settlement subject to the discussions had at the hearing, and requested that the parties submit a revised proposed preliminary approval order and Class Notices based on those discussions. (See id. at 38:18-38:22; see also Minute Entry dated Dec. 6, 2018, Docket Entry No. 7327 (instructing parties to incorporate clarifying language in the Class Notices to the putative class and instructing \*\*115 Class Counsel to "submit all relevant updated documents to the Court for review.").)

On January 15, 2019, in light of the discussions held at the hearing, Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Counsel, Counsel for Visa, and Counsel for Mastercard, jointly submitted a letter to the Court, with revised versions of a proposed preliminary approval order, and proposed Class Notices. (Letter dated Jan. 15, 2019 ("January 15, 2019 Letter"), Docket Entry No. 7354; Proposed Revised Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Settlement Prelim. Approval Order ("Proposed Prelim. Approval Order"), Docket Entry No. 7354-1; Revised Class Notices, annexed to Proposed Prelim. Approval Order as Ex. 1.) Pursuant to the Court's request, Class Counsel also drafted and submitted a Notice of Exclusion to be sent to Dismissed Plaintiffs — i.e., entities and their affiliates that have previously dismissed their lawsuits against the Defendants — in order to notify the Dismissed Plaintiffs that they will be ineligible to receive settlement funds. (See Notice of Exclusion from Class Action Settlement ("Notice of Exclusion"), annexed to Proposed Prelim. Approval Order as Ex. 2.) [\[27\]](#) Shortly thereafter, on January 18, 2019, Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) Class Counsel submitted a letter to the Court, noting that, \*\*116 based on the "representations" in the January 15, 2019 Letter and the revised versions of the proposed preliminary approval order and Class Notices regarding the scope of the release in the Superseding Settlement Agreement, the Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) Class Plaintiffs "would not be filing an objection to the proposed [Superseding Settlement Agreement]." (Letter dated Jan. 18, 2019, Docket Entry No. 7359.) The Court understands this to mean that the adjustments made to the proposed preliminary approval order and Class Notices have alleviated Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) Class Counsel's concern noted in Section I.f supra, surrounding the preservation of injunctive relief claims in the Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) action.

h. Preliminary approval of the Superseding Settlement Agreement

On January 24, 2019, the Court preliminarily approved the Superseding Settlement Agreement and preliminarily granted class certification for the purposes of settlement, appointed Class Counsel and the Class Administrator, and approved the proposed Notice Plan, Class Notices, and Plan of Administration and Distribution. (Prelim. Approval Order.)

II. Discussion

a. Preliminary approval of a proposed settlement

Rule 23\(e\) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure sets forth the standards and procedures that apply to class action settlements. Under Rule 23\(e\), a court [**117] may grant final approval of a proposed settlement "only after a hearing and only on finding that it is fair, reasonable, and adequate." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(e\)\(2\) (emphasis added); see also Charron v. Wiener, 731 F.3d 241, 247 (2d Cir. 2013). A class action settlement approval procedure typically occurs in two stages: (1) preliminary approval — where "prior to notice to the class, a court makes a preliminary evaluation of fairness," and (2) final approval — where "notice of a hearing is given to the class members, [and] class members and settling parties are provided the opportunity to be heard on the question of final court approval." In re LIBOR-Based Fin. Instruments Antitrust Litig., No. 11-CV-5450, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 180481, 2016 WL 7625708, at *2 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 21, 2016) (citing In re NASDAQ Mkt.-Makers Antitrust Litig., 176 F.R.D. 99, 102 (S.D.N.Y. 1997)); see also In re Initial Pub. Offering Sec. Litig., 243 F.R.D. 79, 87 (S.D.N.Y. 2007) ("Review of a proposed class action settlement generally involves a two-step process: preliminary approval and a subsequent 'fairness hearing.' The court first must review the proposed terms of settlement and make a preliminary determination on the fairness, reasonableness and adequacy of the settlement terms.").

During the preliminary approval stage, a court "must review the proposed terms of settlement and make a preliminary determination on the fairness, reasonableness and adequacy of the settlement terms." In re Initial Pub. Offering Sec. Litig., 243 F.R.D. at 87. The judicial role in reviewing a proposed settlement is demanding. Zink v. First Niagara Bank, N.A., 155 F. Supp. 3d 297, 308 (W.D.N.Y. 2016) (noting that such review "is [**118] demanding because the adversariness of litigation is often lost after the agreement to settle." (quoting Martin v. Cargill, Inc., 295 F.R.D. 380, 383-84 (D. Minn. 2013)).

Even where parties have reached agreement in the class settlement context, courts need not grant preliminary approval, and have denied motions for class settlement preliminary approval. See, e.g., Patterson v. Premier Construction Co. Inc., No. 15-CV-00662, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4845, 2017 WL 122986, at *2 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 12, 2007); Oladapo v. Smart One Energy, LLC, No. 14-CV-7117, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 187299, 2017 WL 5956907, at *16 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 9, 2017), report and recommendation adopted, No. 14-CV-7117, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 197039, 2017 WL 5956770 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 30, 2017). Courts should remain mindful, however, "of the 'strong judicial policy in favor of settlements, particularly in the class action context.'" Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Visa U.S.A., Inc. \("Wal-Mart Stores"\), 396 F.3d 96, 116 (2d Cir. 2005) (quoting In re PaineWebber Ltd. P'ships Litig., 147 F.3d 132, 138 (2d Cir. 1998)).

[*28] i. Preliminary approval standards

New amendments to Rule 23 took effect on December 1, 2018. These amendments alter the standards that guide a court's preliminary approval analysis.<sup>20</sup> Prior to the amendments, Rule 23 did not specify standards for courts to follow when deciding whether to grant preliminary approval. Instead, courts in the Second Circuit interpreted Rule 23 to require a determination of whether the proposed settlement fell "within the range of possible final approval." See In re Payment Card Interchange Fee & Merch. Disc. Antitrust Litig., No. 05-MD-1720, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 153637, 2012 WL 5989763, at *1 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 24, 2012) ("Preliminary approval is appropriate where the proposal appears to be the product of serious negotiation [**119] and further appears to be within the range of possible final approval." (citing In re NASDAQ Mkt.-Makers Antitrust Litig., 176 F.R.D. at 102)); see also In re Traffic Exec. Ass'n,

---

<sup>20</sup> Among other things, the new amendments set forth standards under Rule 23\(e\)\(1\)\(B\)\(i-ii\) that a district court must ensure are met prior to a grant of preliminary approval of a proposed settlement, and factors under Rule 23\(e\)\(2\) that a district court must now consider when evaluating whether to grant final approval of a proposed settlement. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(e\).

627 F.2d 631, 634 (2d Cir. 1980) (suggesting that for preliminary approval, a court need only find "probable cause to submit the [settlement] to class members . . . ." (internal citation omitted)); Davis v. J.P. Morgan Chase & Co., 775 F. Supp. 2d 601, 607 (W.D.N.Y. 2011) ("A proposed settlement of a class action should be . . . preliminarily approved where it 'appears to be the product of serious, informed, non-collusive negotiations, has no obvious deficiencies, does not improperly grant preferential treatment to class representatives or segments of the class and falls within the range of possible approval.'" (quoting In re NASDAQ MKT.-Makers Antitrust Litig., 176 F.R.D. at 102)); Menkes v. Stolt-Nielsen S.A., 270 F.R.D. 80, 101 (D. Conn. 2010) (quoting Reade-Alvarez v. Eltman, Eltman & Cooper, P.C., 237 F.R.D. 26, 33 (E.D.N.Y. 2006)) (same).

Under the new Rule 23(e), in weighing a grant of preliminary approval, district courts must determine whether "giving notice is justified by the parties' showing that the court will likely be able to: (i) approve the proposal under Rule 23(e)(2); and (ii) certify the class for purposes of judgment on the proposal." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(1)(B)/(i–ii) (emphasis added). Because Rule 23(e)(2) sets forth the factors that a court must consider when weighing final approval, it appears that courts must assess at the preliminary approval stage whether the parties have shown that the court will likely [**120] find that the factors weigh in favor of final settlement approval. This standard appears to be more exacting than the prior requirement.<sup>21</sup>

ii. Preliminary approval factors

To guide its analysis during the preliminary approval stage in determining whether it will likely approve a proposal under Rule 23(e)(2), the Court looks to the factors contained in the text of Rule 23(e)(2), which a court must consider when weighing final approval. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(2) ("If the proposal would bind class members, the court may approve it only after a hearing and only on finding that it is fair, reasonable, and adequate after considering" the factors set forth in Rule 23(e)(2)). Although the factors apply to final approval, the Court looks to them to determine whether it will likely grant final approval based on the information currently before the Court.

Prior to the December 1, 2018 amendments, Rule 23(e)(2) was silent on the factors that courts needed to assess when weighing final approval — the Rule only required that courts hold a final fairness hearing and find the proposed settlement to be "fair, reasonable, and adequate." District courts therefore looked to guidance from, and factors set [*29] forth in, circuit law and treatises in making the assessment. Courts [**121] in the Second Circuit have traditionally considered nine factors, known as the Grinnell factors, to assist in weighing final approval and determining whether a settlement is substantively "fair, reasonable, and adequate." These factors are:

- (1) the complexity, expense and likely duration of the litigation;
- (2) the reaction of the class to the settlement;
- (3) the stage of the proceedings and the amount of discovery completed;
- (4) the risks of establishing liability;
- (5) the risks of establishing damages;
- (6) the risks of maintaining the class through the trial;
- (7) the ability of the defendants to withstand a greater judgment;
- (8) the range of reasonableness of the settlement fund in light of the best possible recovery; and
- (9) the range of reasonableness of the settlement fund to a possible recovery in light of all the attendant risks of litigation.

In re Initial Pub. Offering Sec. Litig., 260 F.R.D. 81, 88 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) (citing City of Detroit v. Grinnell Corp., 495 F.2d 448, 463 (2d Cir. 1974), abrogated on other grounds by Goldberger v. Integrated Res., Inc., 209 F.3d 43 (2d Cir. 2000); D'Amato v. Deutsche Bank, 236 F.3d 78, 86 (2d Cir. 2001)).

The amended Rule 23(e)(2) requires courts to consider whether:

- (A) the class representatives and class counsel have adequately represented the class;

---

<sup>21</sup> It appears that a "likelihood standard" now guides a district court's analysis of whether to grant preliminary approval. That is, a district court must assess whether the parties have shown that the court will likely be able to grant final approval and certify the class. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 advisory committee's note to 2018 amendment ("The decision to give notice of a proposed settlement to the class is an important event. It should be based on a solid record supporting the conclusion that the proposed settlement will likely earn final approval after notice and an opportunity to object.").

- (B) the proposal was negotiated at arm's length;
- (C) the relief provided for the class is adequate, taking into account:
  - (i) the costs, risks, and delay of trial and **122 appeal;
  - (ii) the effectiveness of any proposed method of distributing relief to the class, including the method of processing class-member claims, if required;
  - (iii) the terms of any proposed award of attorney's fees, including timing of payment; and
  - (iv) any agreement required to be identified under Rule 23\(e\)\(3\); and
- (D) the proposal treats class members equitably relative to each other.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(e\)\(2\). Paragraphs (A) and (B) constitute the "procedural" analysis factors, and examine "the conduct of the litigation and of the negotiations leading up to the proposed settlement." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 advisory committee's note to 2018 amendment. Paragraphs (C) and (D) constitute the "substantive" analysis factors, and examine "[t]he relief that the settlement is expected to provide to class members . . ." Id.

The Court understands the new Rule 23\(e\) factors to add to, rather than displace, the Grinnell factors. See id. ("The goal of this amendment is not to displace any factor, but rather to focus the court and the lawyers on the core concerns of procedure and substance that should guide the decision whether to approve the proposal."). Indeed, there is significant overlap between the Grinnell factors and the Rule 23\(e\)\(2\)\(C-D\) factors, as they both guide a court's substantive, as opposed to procedural, **123 analysis. Accordingly, the Court considers both sets of factors below in its analysis of whether the Court will likely find that the proposed settlement is fair, reasonable, and adequate, and grant final approval.

iii. The Court will likely approve the proposed settlement

The Court first considers the Rules 23\(e\)\(2\) factors, and then considers additional Grinnell factors not otherwise addressed by the Rule 23\(e\)\(2\) factors.<sup>22</sup> The only factor that the Court does not fully address below is the second Grinnell factor — "the reaction of the class to the settlement." The Court has considered this factor to the limited extent possible at the preliminary approval stage, through its consideration of the objections received prior to the preliminary approval *30 hearing.<sup>23</sup>

After consideration of all relevant factors in issuing the January 24, 2019 Order, the Court concluded for the following reasons that based on the record before it, it will likely grant final approval of the proposed settlement.<sup>24</sup>

<sup>22</sup> The Court finds that the following Grinnell factors do not appear to be addressed by the Rule 23\(e\)\(2\) factors: the ability of the defendants to withstand a greater judgment; the range of reasonableness of the settlement fund in light of the best possible recovery; and the range of reasonableness of the settlement fund to a possible recovery in light of all the attendant risks of litigation.

<sup>23</sup> The Court notes that, based on the objections received during the preliminary approval process, as compared to the objections received during the prior preliminary approval process for the Original Settlement Agreement before Judge Gleeson, it appears that the class' reaction to the Superseding Settlement Agreement is more favorable, as the Court has received fewer objections both in volume and substance. (See, e.g., Objecting Pls. Opp'n to Class Pls. Mot. for Prelim. Approval of Proposed Class Settlement, Docket Entry No. 1681 (objecting to preliminary approval on behalf of the majority of the named plaintiffs in the action); Amicus Br. From ATMIA Challenging Prelim. Approval of Class Settlement, Docket Entry No. 1683 (objecting to preliminary approval on behalf of the ATM Industry Association on the basis that the definition of the settlement class was overbroad, the scope of the injunctive relief, and the breadth of the release); Am. Retailers & Merchants' Obj. to Proposed Class Settlement Agreement, Docket Entry No. 1701 (objecting to preliminary approval on behalf of a wide range of businesses, including retailers, restaurants, oil companies, and pharmacies, and objecting on the basis that the size of the settlement fund was inadequate, that the release was excessive and overbroad, that the attorneys' fees were excessive, and that the injunctive relief was inadequate).)

1. Adequate representation by class representatives and class counsel

"Determination of adequacy typically 'entails inquiry as to whether: (1) plaintiff's interests are antagonistic to the interest of other [**124] members of the class and (2) plaintiff's attorneys are qualified, experienced and able to conduct the litigation.'" Cordes & Co. Fin. Servs. v. A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc., 502 F.3d 91, 99 (2d Cir. 2007) (quoting Baffa v. Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Sec. Corp., 222 F.3d 52, 60 (2d Cir. 2000)).<sup>25</sup>

In its review of the prior settlement approval, the Second Circuit concluded "that class members of the (b)(2) class were inadequately represented in violation of both Rule 23\(a\)\(4\) and the Due Process Clause." Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 231. The Second Circuit held that the "class representatives had interests antagonistic to those of some of the class members they were representing," because the (b)(3) damages class "would want to maximize cash compensation for past harm," while the (b)(2) injunctive class "would want to maximize restraints on network rules to prevent harm in the future," and thus, "[t]he class counsel and class representatives who negotiated and entered into [*31] the Settlement Agreement were in the position to trade diminution of (b)(2) relief for increase of (b)(3) relief." Id. at 233-34 (holding that the Supreme Court's decisions in Amchem Prods. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) and Ortiz, 527 U.S. 815, 119 S. Ct. 2295, 144 L. Ed. 2d 715, require separate representation when a class can be divided between members that hold present claims, and members that hold future claims). In addition, the Second Circuit held that the issue of unitary representation was exacerbated "because the [**125] members of the worse-off (b)(2) class could not opt out." Id. at 234.

The structural defect of unitary representation no longer exists — the \(b\)\(2\) and \(b\)\(3\) classes now have separate interim Class Counsel, with the Robins Group serving as interim Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Counsel. (See Interim Class Counsel Order.) The (b)(2) and (b)(3) classes also now have separate class representatives, i.e., Class Plaintiffs. (See Equitable Relief Class Action Complaint ¶ 2; TAC ¶ 2.) The named Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Plaintiffs seek to represent a finite class that desires and will receive the same type of relief — damages for past harm. (See Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶¶ 4, 27-28.) Thus, all Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Plaintiffs and members of the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) class will have the same incentive to "maximize cash compensation for past harm." Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 233. Moreover, the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) class will have "opt out" rights. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(c\)\(2\)\(B\)\(v\).

<sup>24</sup> Although both the Rule 23\(e\) and Grinnell factors are meant to guide a court's final approval analysis, as alluded to supra, in consideration of the new Rule 23 likelihood standard applicable to the preliminary approval process, the Court looked to these final approval factors in determining whether the Court will likely grant final approval. The Court nevertheless recognizes that it cannot engage in a complete analysis at the preliminary approval stage, and, as other courts in this Circuit have held, "it is not necessary to exhaustively consider the factors applicable to final approval" at this stage. In re Platinum & Palladium Commodities Litig., No. 10-CV-3617, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 96457, 2014 WL 3500655, at *12 (S.D.N.Y. July 15, 2014). Critical information as to whether a proposed settlement is fair, reasonable, and adequate, will be obtained through the notice and opt-out process, and the final fairness hearing.

<sup>25</sup> This adequate representation factor is nearly identical to the Rule 23\(a\)\(4\) prerequisite of adequate representation in the class certification context. As a result, the Court looks to Rule 23\(a\)\(4\) case law to guide its assessment of this factor. As a prerequisite to bringing a class action, Rule 23\(a\)\(4\) requires that "the representative parties will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(a\)\(4\); see also Amchem Prods. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 592, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed. 2d 689 (1997) ("To gain certification under Rule 23\(b\)\(3\), a class must satisfy the requirements of Rule 23\(a\), among them, that named class representatives will fairly and adequately protect class interests."). In addition, because this factor guides the Court's analysis of the procedural, as opposed to substantive fairness of the settlement, see Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 advisory committee's note to 2018 amendment, the Court also looks to case law that assesses the procedural fairness of proposed settlements, see, e.g., In re Giant Interactive Group., Inc. Securities Litigation, 279 F.R.D. 151, 160 (S.D.N.Y. 2011) (noting that when evaluating whether a proposed settlement is fair, reasonable, and adequate, "a Court must consider 'both the settlement's terms and the negotiating process leading to settlement,' that is, it must review the settlement for both procedural and substantive fairness," and noting that the Grinnell factors are used to guide a court's analysis of substantive fairness (quoting Wal-Mart Stores, 396 F.3d at 116)).

For these and the following reasons, the Court finds that the bifurcation of the (b)(2) and (b)(3) classes and their Class Counsel sufficiently addresses the Second Circuit's concern and that this factor will likely weigh in favor of a grant of final approval.

A. Adequacy of class representatives

One of the purposes of assessing adequate representation is to "uncover conflicts [**126] of interest between named parties and the class they seek to represent." Amchem Prods., Inc., 521 U.S. at 625. "[A] class representative must be part of the class and possess the same interest and suffer the same injury as the class members." Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes ("Dukes"), 564 U.S. 338, 348-49, 131 S. Ct. 2541, 180 L. Ed. 2d 374 (2011) (citations and quotations omitted). The analysis of whether a class representative is adequate "is twofold: the proposed class representative must have an interest in vigorously pursuing the claims of the class, and must have no interests antagonistic to the interests of other class members." Denney v. Deutsche Bank AG, 443 F.3d 253, 268 (2d Cir. 2006). In addition to the adequate representation requirement of Rule 23(a)(4) and Rule 23(c)(2)(A), "[t]he Due Process Clause . . . requires that the named plaintiff at all times adequately represent the interests of the absent class members." Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 231 (quoting Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Shutts, 472 U.S. 797, 812, 105 S. Ct. 2965, 86 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1985)).

(1) The named Rule 23(b)(3) Class Plaintiffs suffer the same injury as the putative class members and have an interest in vigorous pursuit of the claims

The proposed Rule 23(b)(3) putative class consists of a group of merchants that accepted Visa-and/or Mastercard-branded cards at any point during a finite time period — from January 1, 2004 to the settlement preliminary approval date, i.e., January 24, 2019. (See Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶ 4.) The Rule 23(b)(3) Class Plaintiffs seek [**127] to challenge the same allegedly unlawful conduct that they claim has harmed them — Defendants' imposition of "supracompetitive interchange and merchant-discount fees on purchases using Visa-and/or Mastercard-Branded cards, and anti-steering and other restraints that have injured them." (TAC ¶¶ 10-13, 15-18.) This alleged harm would apply to all members of the putative class.

The Second Circuit did not conclude that members of the Rule 23(b)(3) class were inadequately represented. Rather, the Second Circuit was concerned that the Rule 23(b)(3) Class Plaintiffs had too much incentive to maximize their own interests, at the expense of the interests of the (b)(2) class. See Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 233-34. Because of the formal separation of the (b)(3) [*32] and (b)(2) classes and named Class Plaintiffs, the Court finds that it is unlikely that the Rule 23(b)(3) Class Plaintiffs are operating at the expense of the putative class members.

The named Rule 23(b)(3) Class Plaintiffs represent a wide-range of business interests and experience, including internet-based photography finishing services, retail furniture, wholesale and retail consumer electronics, agricultural cooperative ownership and product supply of farm stores, gas stations, and convenience stores, wholesale optical [**128] supplies, automotive transmission servicing, automobile parking, and shoe retail. (TAC ¶¶ 10-13, 15-18.) They have their principal places of business in California, Minnesota, New York, Florida, Pennsylvania, and Kansas. (Id.) All Class Plaintiffs currently operate businesses that continue to accept payment by Visa and Mastercard credit and debit cards. (Id.)

The Rule 23(b)(3) Class Plaintiffs therefore represent a diverse array of business locations and interests, but seek the same type of redress for the same type of harms. The Court will likely find at the final approval stage that the named Rule 23(b)(3) Class Plaintiffs adequately represent the putative class members.

(2) The Rule 23(b)(3) Class Plaintiffs' interests are not antagonistic to the putative class members

Generally, "not every potential disagreement between a representative and the class members will stand in the way of a class suit." In re Visa Check/MasterMoney Antitrust Litig., 280 F.3d 124, 145 (2d Cir. 2001) (citation and quotation marks omitted). "A conflict or potential conflict alone will not . . . necessarily defeat class certification — the conflict must be 'fundamental.'" Denney, 443 F.3d at 268 (citing In re Visa Check/MasterMoney Antitrust Litig., 280 F.3d at 145 and holding that no conflict existed where all members of the class could be identified and those members had the opportunity to opt out, even [**129] where the class representatives already knew the amount of IRS penalties leveled against them but members of the class did not).

The fundamental conflict identified by the Second Circuit no longer exists. The Rule 23(b)(3) Class Plaintiffs are no longer "in the position to trade diminution of (b)(2) relief for increase of (b)(3) relief," Interchange Fees II, 827 F. 3d at 234, because the classes have been separated, there is no overlap between the named representative Class Plaintiffs in the (b)(3) and (b)(2) classes, and the Superseding Settlement Agreement only provides for monetary, and not injunctive relief. In addition, all of the Class Plaintiffs are operating businesses that continue to be subject to the complained-of conduct by Defendants. They have every incentive to negotiate for the highest damages figure possible, especially as they will continue to incur the complained-of monetary injuries. See In re Glob. Crossing Sec. & ERISA Litig., 225 F.R.D. 436, 453 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) (finding class plaintiffs to be adequate representatives where "[a]ll share[d] the common goal of maximizing recovery.").

The Court further finds that the "conflict" raised by the Branded Operators — that certain putative class members may have competing claims — does not rise to the level of a "fundamental" conflict sufficient [**130] for the Court to find that Rule 23(b)(3) Class Plaintiffs have not adequately represented the Branded Operators.<sup>26</sup> The Court agrees with Rule 23(b)(3) Class Counsel that the conflict does not amount to an "intra-class conflict," because the Superseding Settlement Agreement "does not treat groups of class members differently." (Class Counsel's Nov. 15 Response 2.)

[*33] Rather, as Class Counsel notes, the Branded Operators' concerns appear to stem from a contractual issue regarding the ownership of claims. (Id.; see also Class Counsel's Nov. 23 Response at 1.) Thus, because the conflict is not between class members, but between entities disputing who has the right to claim class status, there is no intra-class conflict or inadequate representation; Class Counsel and Class Plaintiffs are not responsible to, and do not represent, the entity that loses the dispute over the right to claim settlement funds.

The main case relied upon by the Branded Operators is inapposite. The Branded Operators cite to Amchem and argue that "[a] settlement class cannot be certified where it includes class members with competing claims." (Mem. in Opp'n to Prelim. Approval 3, 3 n.6.) However, the [**131] cited portion of Amchem discusses the need for separate representatives for subclasses, similar to the manner in which the Second Circuit discussed the need for separate representation in this case. (Id. at 3 n.6 (citing Amchem Prod., Inc., 521 U.S. at 627 (citation omitted))). Amchem is not a case about competing claims. Rather, it is a case about different types, and risk, of injuries. Subclasses were deemed necessary in Amchem — a case about asbestos exposure where certification was sought for settlement purposes only — because of the disparity between the plaintiffs that were injured, and the plaintiffs that had been exposed to asbestos, but had not yet had any injury manifest. See Amchem Prod., Inc., 521 U.S. at 609 ("class members in this case were exposed to different asbestos-containing products, in different ways, over

---

<sup>26</sup> The Court acknowledges that the issue of competing claims is a genuine issue that will need to be addressed in the future. At the hearing on the Superseding Settlement Agreement, the Court heard from the parties on the matter, and expressed the belief that the issue could be taken care of through a subsequent administrative process. (Hrg Tr. 11:16-11:18.) The Court notes that a nearly identical issue arose in In re Visa Check/Mastermoney Antitrust Litigation, 297 F. Supp. 2d 503 (E.D.N.Y. 2003). There, the court appointed a special master to resolve disputes over claims that did "not fit within the category of challenges contemplated by the Settlement Agreement and Plan of Allocation." See In re Visa Check/Mastermoney Antitrust Litig., No. 96 CV-5238 (E.D.N.Y.), Order dated Jan. 19, 2006, Docket Entry No. 1244.

different periods, and for different amounts of time; some suffered no physical injury, others suffered disabling or deadly diseases.").<sup>27</sup>

For these reasons, the Court will likely find at the final approval stage, that the named Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Plaintiffs' interests are not antagonistic to members of the class.

B. Adequacy of class counsel

"A court reviewing a proposed settlement must pay close attention to the negotiating process, to ensure [**132] that . . . plaintiffs' counsel have possessed the experience and ability, and have engaged in the discovery, necessary to effective representation of the class's interests." D'Amato, 236 F.3d at 85 (citation and internal quotations omitted); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 advisory committee's note to 2018 amendment ("the nature and amount of discovery in this or other cases, or the actual outcomes of other cases, may indicate whether counsel negotiating on behalf of the class had an adequate information base . . . ."). A district "[c]ourt must evaluate adequacy of representation by considering . . . whether class counsel is qualified, experienced, and generally able to conduct the litigation." In re Glob. Crossing Sec. & ERISA Litig., 225 F.R.D. at 453 (citation omitted). In D'Amato, the Second Circuit upheld a district court's determination of adequacy of class counsel where the district court noted counsels' experience, involvement in other similar litigation, and knowledge in the area of complex class actions. See id. at 85-86.

The Robins Group represented the entire consolidated class in the proceedings before Judge Gleeson. In holding that representation in the prior settlement was inadequate, the Second Circuit clarified that it "expressly d[id] not impugn the motives or acts of class counsel. [**133] Nonetheless, class counsel was charged with an inequitable task." Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 234. As noted, the inadequacy resulted from unitary representation and the incentive to trade maximization of benefits for one class over benefits to the other class. Id. at 236 ("Structural [*34] defects in this class action created a fundamental conflict between the (b)(3) and (b)(2) classes and sapped class counsel of the incentive to zealously represent the latter." (emphasis added)).

In acknowledging the concerns raised by objectors to the Original Settlement Agreement, Judge Gleeson noted that the record "demonstrates beyond any reasonable doubt that the negotiations were adversarial and conducted at arm's length by extremely capable counsel." Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 222. When weighing competing applications to become interim class counsel for the (b)(3) class after the Second Circuit's remand, Judge Orenstein concluded that:

in the circumstances of this litigation, the Robins Group is in the best position to continue to represent the interests of the Damages Class. They have already demonstrated their ability to work cooperatively with the court and with the other non-lead counsel, they have the support of a larger and more diverse group of clients, and those [**134] clients collectively advance a broader array of the legal theories at issue in this litigation.
(Interim Class Counsel Order 4.)

The Court agrees with this assessment. Although the Second Circuit held that Class Counsel's representation was inadequate, the structural barrier that created the conflict of interest has been removed. Since 2006, the Robins Group has ardently represented a variety of plaintiffs' groups in this action. (See Pretrial Order dated Feb. 24, 2006, Docket Entry No. 279.). All three law firms that comprise the Robins Group have extensive antitrust class action litigation experience. (See Mem. in Support re Co-Lead Counsel's Appl. for Continued Leadership of the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class, Ex. A, Docket Entry No. 6665-1); see also Godson v. Eltman, Eltman, & Cooper, P.C., No. 11-CV-764, 328 F.R.D. 35, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 182034, 2018 WL 5263071, at \*4 \(W.D.N.Y. Oct. 23, 2018\) (finding class counsel's representation to be adequate where class counsel had "significant experience litigating cases" in the relevant field and had served as counsel in numerous class actions). Class Counsel has also negotiated what they believe is the largest antitrust settlement in history. See Wal-Mart Stores, 396 F.3d at 117 (noting that representation quality is determined best by looking at results and highlighting that plaintiffs' counsel had produced what was at the time the largest [**135] antitrust settlement in history (internal citations omitted)).

<sup>27</sup> In addition to citing Amchem, the Branded Operators also reference the Second Circuit's decision to overturn the prior settlement approval, to support their argument that the Superseding Settlement Agreement should not be preliminarily approved "because it includes class member with competing claims for settlement proceeds for the same merchant transactions." (See, e.g., Mem. in Opp'n to Prelim. Approval 7, 14.) As summarized in other Sections of this opinion the conflict recognized in the Second Circuit's decision concerned the issue of unitary representation for two separate classes, and involved concern over an entire class potentially receiving "nothing." This does not provide support for the Branded Operator's concern regarding competing class members' contractual or other rights to receive settlement funds.

In the representation before Judge Gleeson, the Robins Group engaged in discovery that resulted in "more than 400 depositions, the production and review of more than 80 million pages of documents, the exchange of 17 expert reports, and a full 32 days of expert deposition testimony." Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 215. Since the Second Circuit's reversal, the Robins Group has engaged in new discovery efforts and has taken or participated in over 170 additional depositions, (id. ¶¶ 210-11), reviewed millions of additional documents, (id. ¶ 219), and facilitated the production of updated expert reports, (id. ¶¶ 224-28). In addition, new negotiations between the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Plaintiffs and the Defendants lasted for over a year. (Wildfang Decl. ¶¶ 232-39.)

For these reasons, the Court will likely deem the Robins Group's representation to be adequate at the final approval stage.<sup>28</sup>

2. Arms-length negotiations

"A 'presumption of fairness, adequacy, and reasonableness may attach to a class settlement reached in arm's-length negotiations between experienced, capable counsel after meaningful discovery.'" [**35] Wal-Mart Stores, 396 F.3d at 116 (quoting Manual for Complex Litigation (Third) § 30.42 (1995)); cf. Ann. Manual for Complex Litigation (Fourth) § 21.612 (2018) ("If, by contrast, the [**136] case is filed as a settlement class action . . . with little or no discovery, it may be more difficult to assess the strengths and weaknesses of the parties' claims and defenses.").

Although the Second Circuit held that "even 'an intense, [protracted], adversarial mediation, involving multiple parties,' including 'highly respected and capable' mediators and associational plaintiffs, does not 'compensate for the absence of independent representation,'" the Court nevertheless acknowledged that "a court-appointed mediator's involvement in pre-certification settlement negotiations helps to ensure that the proceedings were free of collusion and undue pressure." Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 235 (first quoting In re Literary Works in Electronic Databases Copyright Litigation, 654 F.3d 242, 252-53 \(2d Cir. 2011\); and then quoting D'Amato, 236 F.3d at 85); see also 2 McLaughlin on Class Actions § 6:7 (15th ed. 2018) ("A settlement reached after a supervised mediation receives a presumption of reasonableness and the absence of collusion." (citing cases)).

As set forth above, the parties have engaged in protracted discovery for over a decade. In addition, two highly qualified mediators have assisted both sets of settlement negotiations in this action. The Honorable Edward A. Infante, a former Chief Magistrate Judge and current mediator, became involved [**137] in 2008 to mediate a first round of settlement negotiations in this action. (Infante Decl. ¶ 1-2.) Eric Green, a retired Boston University School of Law professor and current full-time mediator, became involved in 2009 to mediate a first round of settlement negotiations for a subset of Plaintiffs in this action.<sup>29</sup> (Green Decl. ¶ 1, 5-6.)

<sup>28</sup> The Court finds the Branded Operators' argument that Class Counsel has not adequately represented the Branded Operators unconvincing. (See generally Mem. in Opp'n to Prelim. Approval 15-18.) The Branded Operators' argument rests on the assumption that "[C]lass [C]ounsel is inherently conflicted based on its representation of a class that contains dueling class members." (Id. at 15.) As elaborated upon elsewhere in this opinion, the Court finds that disagreement over the right to the funds does not amount to an intra-class conflict that would affect the Court's adequate representation analysis. The Branded Operators' argument assumes that they are class members deserving of Class Counsel's representation, which may not be the case, pending the outcome of any dispute over who has rights to settlement funds. Class Counsel does not have a duty to represent the Branded Operators in their dispute with other entities over which entities hold those rights.

Since the separation of the (b)(2) and (b)(3) classes, both mediators have been involved "in the (b)(3) class action to restart mediation for the damage claims only." (Infante Decl. ¶ 12.) Over the course of more than a year, the parties have engaged in twelve "mediation sessions," including six day-long sessions. (See id. ¶¶ 13-25.) On June 2, 2018, the mediators issued a mediators' proposal to the parties, and on June 5, 2018, received "unanimous consent" from the parties to move forward. (Infante Decl. ¶ 26; Green Decl. ¶ 11.) "The settlement negotiations were extended, extraordinarily complicated, and contentious. On several occasions the discussions were on the verge of collapsing." (See Infante Decl. ¶ 31.) "[C]ounsel involved in these mediation sessions are among the most knowledgeable, sophisticated and accomplished attorneys in the fields [**138] of antitrust, class actions, and complex litigation." (Green Decl. ¶ 10.) Both mediators state that Rule 23(b)(3) class counsel at all times emphasized the need to be independent from any Rule 23(b)(2) class claims resolution, and at no time were (b)(2) Class Counsel involved in the Rule 23(b)(3) class negotiations. (Infante Decl. ¶ 30; Green Decl. ¶ 12.)

Accordingly, the Court finds that this factor will likely weigh in favor of granting final approval.

3. Adequate relief for the class

In assessing whether the settlement provides adequate relief for the putative class under Rule 23(e)(2)(C), the Court is directed to consider:

- (i) the costs, risks, and delay of trial and appeal; (ii) the effectiveness of any proposed method of distributing relief to the class, including the method of processing class-member claims, if required; (iii) the terms of any proposed award of attorney's fees, including timing of payment; and (iv) any agreement required to be identified under Rule 23(e)(3).<sup>30</sup>

[*36] Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(2)(C)(i-iv). As one district court has noted, "[i]f the class settlement does not provide effectual relief to the class . . . then the class representatives have failed in their duty under Rule 23 to fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class." Scott v. Weig, No. 15-CV-9691, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83645, 2018 WL 2254541, at *4 (S.D.N.Y. May 17, 2018) (quoting In re Subway Footlong Sandwich Marketing and Sales Practice Litig., 869 F.3d 551, 556 (7th Cir. 2017) (citation omitted)).

The [**139] first factor — costs, risks, and delay of trial and appeal — subsumes several Grinnell factors, which the Court considers below. The Court also considers the proposed release from liability as an additional factor under this section, as it affects the determination of the fairness, reasonableness, and adequacy of class relief.

For the following reasons, the Court finds that this factor will likely weigh in favor of granting final approval.

A. Costs, risks, and delay of trial and appeal

Under this Rule 23(e)(2) factor, "courts may need to forecast the likely range of possible classwide recoveries and the likelihood of success in obtaining such results." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 advisory committee's note to 2018

<sup>29</sup> Green also served as a settlement mediator in In re Visa Check/Mastermoney Antitrust Litigation, 297 F. Supp. 2d 503 (E.D.N.Y. 2003), a class action antitrust case brought by merchants against Visa and Mastercard, where the Second Circuit affirmed the district court's approval of the settlement and plan of allocation. See also Wal-Mart Stores, 396 F.3d at 117 (affirming the district court's agreement with Green's opinion that the proceedings operated with procedural integrity).

<sup>30</sup> As to the fourth factor, the Court confirmed at the hearing that there are no agreements under Rule 23(e)(3) that the Court must review. (Hrg Tr. 33:9-33:17.)

amendment. This assessment implicates several Grinnell factors, including: (i) the complexity, expense and likely duration of the litigation; (ii) the risks of establishing liability; (iii) the risks of establishing damages; and (iv) the risks of maintaining the class through the trial. The Court uses these Grinnell factors to guide its assessment of whether the Court will likely find that this Rule 23\(e\)\(2\) factor will weigh in favor of granting final approval.

(1) The complexity, expense, and likely duration of the litigation

[**140] "Settlement is favored if settlement results in 'substantial and tangible present recovery, without the attendant risk and delay of trial.'" Sykes v. Mel Harris & Assocs., LLC, No. 09-CV-8486, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 74566, 2016 WL 3030156, at \*12 \(S.D.N.Y. May 24, 2016\) (quoting In re Am. Bank Note Holographics, Inc., 127 F. Supp. 2d 418, 425 \(S.D.N.Y. 2001\)). "[C]lass action suits' in general 'have a well-deserved reputation as being most complex.'" In re Sumitomo Copper Litig., 189 F.R.D. 274, 281 \(S.D.N.Y. 1999\) (quoting Cotton v. Hinton, 559 F.2d 1326, 1331 \(5th Cir. 1977\)). In particular, "[f]ederal antitrust cases are complicated, lengthy, and bitterly fought." Wal-Mart Stores, 396 F.3d at 118 (quoting Weseley v. Spear, Leeds & Kellogg, 711 F. Supp. 713, 719 \(E.D.N.Y. 1989\)).

This case is complex and costly. The present litigation has been active for over a decade, and has involved litigation in both district and appellate courts. The proposed class include millions of putative members, and encompasses alleged injuries from 2004, approximately fourteen years ago. (See Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶ 4.) The first phase of MDL discovery alone involved 370 depositions, and multiple expert reports, and according to Class Counsel, "Class Plaintiffs have reviewed and analyzed more than 65 million pages of documents." (Wildfang Decl. ¶¶ 53, 115; Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval 13.) Class Counsel's lodestar figure of attorneys' fees through November of 2012 approximated $160 million. In re Payment Card Interchange Fee & Merch. Disc. Antitrust Litig., 991 F. Supp. 2d 437, 439 \(E.D.N.Y. 2014\). In the litigation prior to the Original Settlement Agreement, the parties filed several motions, including Daubert motions, class certification motions, motions to dismiss, and motions for summary judgment, which the Court never decided. See Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 222. "[E]ven if [Class] Plaintiffs were to prevail at trial, post-trial motions and the potential [**141] for appeal could prevent the class members from obtaining any recovery for several years, if at all." Sykes, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 74566, 2016 WL 3030156, at \*12 (citations omitted).

Because of the complexity and difficulty of the issues in this case, it requires, and would continue to require, costly counsel and experts, and a wealth of time. This subfactor will likely weigh in favor of granting final approval.

(2) The risks of establishing liability

"This factor does not require the Court to adjudicate the disputed issues or [*37] decide unsettled questions; rather, the Court need only assess the risks of litigation against the certainty of recovery under the proposed settlement." In re Glob. Crossing Sec. & ERISA Litig., 225 F.R.D. at 459 (citing In re Austrian & German Bank Holocaust Litig., 80 F. Supp. 2d 164, 177 \(S.D.N.Y. 2000\), aff'd sub nom. D'Amato, 236 F.3d 78). "Courts approve settlements where plaintiffs would have faced significant legal and factual obstacles to proving their case." Id.

Based on the fact that the parties have briefed motions to dismiss, Daubert motions, class certification motions, and motions for summary judgment, Class Counsel has had to consider the requirements for and risks of establishing liability in this case. If the case were to proceed to trial, many of these motions would have to be relitigated, and they present challenges to recovery. Indeed, "[t]hese motions would have [**142] to be briefed and argued again, given the significant legal and factual developments, and additional discovery since their original briefing and argument over six years ago." (Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval 14.)

Moreover, Defendants have previously raised affirmative defenses to liability (and have moved to dismiss the complaint), which also weighs in favor of settlement.<sup>31</sup> (See generally Mem. in Support of Mot. to Dismiss Second Consolidated Am. Class Action Complaint, Docket Entry No. 1171); see also Ayzelman v. Statewide Credit Servs. Corp., 242 F.R.D. 23, 27 (E.D.N.Y. 2007) (finding that the risk of establishing liability weighed in favor of settlement approval where "defendants . . . presented several affirmative defenses through which they may avoid liability.").

In assessing the risks of further litigation, Charles B. Renfrew<sup>32</sup> has highlighted Defendants' intention to exclude as inadmissible one of Plaintiffs' economic experts, warning that:

[i]f this testimony is excluded there may be little, if any, evidence to establish plaintiffs' theory that they suffered injury or measurable damages as a result of the establishment of the default interchange rates and merchant acceptance rules, or that the establishment of definitive interchange rates and merchant acceptance rates had an anti-competitive effect in any marked degree to Class Plaintiffs.

(Decl. of Charles B. Renfrew as to the Risks of Litigation ("Renfrew Decl.") ¶¶ 33-34, Docket Entry No. 2111-4.) Renfrew raises other hurdles that the Class Plaintiffs would likely face, including the effect that the Visa and Mastercard initial public offerings would have on their theories of anticompetitive behavior. (Id. ¶¶ 49-55); see also Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 226 (noting that after the commencement of the initial action, "both Visa and MasterCard came out from under the control of their member banks. The IPOs that accomplished that result strengthened the defendants' argument that they were no longer structural [**144] or 'walking' conspiracies, and thus that the setting of interchange fees cannot constitute horizontal price-fixing.").<sup>33</sup> Renfrew further notes the [*38] issue of whether the release from a prior settlement agreement covers the scope of the Class Plaintiffs' claims. (Renfrew Decl. ¶¶ 56-64). Although Renfrew does not assess the merits of Class Plaintiffs' or Defendants' arguments, and equally emphasizes that litigation risks exist for Defendants, his submission highlights that there is substantial litigation risk for Class Plaintiffs'.

Similarly, Dr. Alan O. Sykes, the independent economic expert appointed by Judge Gleeson for the purposes of assessing the Original Settlement Agreement, highlighted the litigation risks that Plaintiffs will likely face, concluding that Class Plaintiffs "face a substantial probability of securing little or no relief at the conclusion of trial." (Sykes Report 3.) In particular, Dr. Sykes found that the Class Plaintiffs would "face considerable difficulty" in establishing that certain practices such as default interchange and honor-all-card rules cause anticompetitive harm that outweighs any procompetitive benefits, if the "rule of reason" rather than the "per [**145] se rule" were ultimately applied to determine liability, which is yet another hurdle that Class Plaintiffs would face in litigating their case.<sup>34</sup> (Id.

<sup>31</sup> As summarized by Class Counsel, Defendants previously moved to dismiss on the following bases:

(i) that the release in the In re Visa Check case released all of Class Plaintiffs' damages and injunctive-relief claims; (ii) that the complaint failed to allege a "restraint on trade" sufficiently to state a claim under § 1 of the Sherman Act; (iii) that the complaint failed to allege a "plausible" inter-network conspiracy under Bell Atlantic v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007); (iv) that Twombly barred the complaint's allegations of post-IPO conspiracies within Visa and Mastercard; and (v) that Class Plaintiffs' claims were barred by the doctrine [**143] of Illinois Brick.

(Wildfang Decl. ¶ 107.) Although raising affirmative defenses in and of itself weighs in favor of settlement, the Court does not take a position on whether Defendants would be successful on such defenses. Instead, the Court simply acknowledges that the existence of affirmative defenses presents risk to Class Plaintiffs.

<sup>32</sup> In support of the Original Settlement Agreement, Class Plaintiffs submitted a declaration from former District Judge Charles B. Renfrew, assessing the risks of further litigation. (See Decl. of Charles B. Renfrew as to the Risks of Litigation ("Renfrew Decl."), Docket Entry No. 2111-4.)

<sup>33</sup> "[I]n 2008 and 2006, respectively, initial public offerings ('IPOs') converted [Visa and Mastercard] from a consortium of competitor banks into single-entity, publicly traded companies with no bank governance." Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 215.

<sup>34</sup> In weighing antitrust liability, courts apply either the rule of reason, or the per se rule in determining whether restraints of trade violate Section 1 of the Sherman Act. Under a rule of reason analysis, courts weigh whether the alleged anticompetitive harm at 3, 7-8.) Class Plaintiffs dispute the findings of Dr. Sykes' report, and the Court draws no conclusions based on his findings. However, Dr. Sykes' report and his conclusion that the putative class would "face considerable difficulty" indicates the risk Class Plaintiffs face in litigating these claims.

Further, since the prior motions were briefed and argued, several important legal and factual developments may increase the risk that Class Plaintiffs face in establishing liability. Of particular concern to Class Counsel is the Supreme Court's recent decision in Ohio v. American Express Company, U.S., 138 S. Ct. 2274, 201 L. Ed. 2d 678 (2018) ("American Express"). Class Counsel states that the case "represents the first time the Supreme Court has analyzed the conduct of a credit card network towards both its cardholders and merchants as a single so-called two-sided market, not as two separate markets (cardholders and merchants). For the first time, the Court applied a market analysis where changes on one side of the platform, say merchant [**146] fees, were analyzed for their impact on the other side of the platform, cardholder products." (Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval 14.) Thus, Class Plaintiffs would need to prove harm in this new, two-sided market, consisting of both merchants and cardholders, and would perhaps face greater difficulty in proving that the procompetitive justifications of interchange [*39] fees outweigh their harm.<sup>35</sup> (See, e.g., Sykes Report 18 ("an important body of theoretical work on two-sided markets suggests that it may be socially desirable for prices to be higher on the side of the market that is less price sensitive."); id. at 24 ("a question arises as to how damages should be conceptualized in a two-sided market").)

In addition to the Supreme Court's American Express decision, other developments in the payment card markets may increase Class Plaintiffs' legal uncertainty and affect whether Class Plaintiffs will be able to prove ongoing antitrust claims and injuries. For example and as noted supra n.7, the Durbin Amendment to the Dodd-Frank Act passed in 2010, which creates a cap on interchange fees for debit card transactions and "other important relief, such as requiring issuing banks to enable debit cards to be processed over at least two competing [**147] networks, allowing merchants to provide discounts to consumers for payment by cash, check, or debit card, in lieu of credit cards, and allowing merchants to place a minimum purchase amount of up to $10.00 on credit-card transactions." (Wildfang Decl. ¶ 91.) Further, a 2008 United States Department of Justice investigation into the rules and conduct of Visa and Mastercard "led to a consent decree that provided another important benefit to merchants by reforming . . . Visa and MasterCard's point-of-sale rules." (Id. ¶ 98). While the Court makes no finding as to how these issues could ultimately affect Class Plaintiffs' case, it finds that these developments introduce additional risks to Class Plaintiffs.

For these reasons, the Court finds that this subfactor will likely weigh in favor of granting final approval.

outweighs the procompetitive benefits of the behavior at issue. See Leegin Creative Leather Prods. v. PSKS, Inc., 551 U.S. 877, 877, 127 S. Ct. 2705, 168 L. Ed. 2d 623 (2007) ("The rule distinguishes between restraints with anticompetitive effect that are harmful to the consumer and those with procompetitive effect that are in the consumer's best interest."); see also Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 227 (noting that in this action, "the prospect that [the networks' rules] anticompetitive effects remain outweighed by [their] procompetitive ones is real."). In contrast, some antitrust restraints are deemed per se unlawful. See United States v. Apple, Inc., 791 F.3d 290, 314 (2d Cir. 2015) (noting that in contrast to "vertical" agreements, "horizontal" agreements . . . which involve coordination 'between competitors at the same level of [a] market structure,' . . . with limited exceptions, [are deemed] per se unlawful." (first citing and quoting Anderson News, L.L.C. v. Am. Media, Inc., 680 F.3d 162, 182 (2d Cir. 2012); and then citing Leegin Creative Leather Prod. Inc., 551 U.S. at 893)). Although for the purposes of this opinion the Court need not make a finding as to whether the rule of reason or per se rule would apply in determining antitrust liability, the Court notes that Judge Gleeson found that "the setting of default interchange fees would almost certainly be evaluated under the Rule of Reason." Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 227. Similarly, in Ohio v. Am. Express Co., both parties acknowledged, and the Supreme Court affirmed, that American Express' antisteering provisions constituted vertical restraints "i.e., restraints imposed by agreement between firms at different levels of distribution," that should be assessed under the rule of reason test. Ohio v. Am. Express Co. ("American Express"), 138 S. Ct. at 2284 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted); see also Allied Tube & Conduit Corp. v. Indian Head, Inc., 486 U.S. 492, 501, 108 S. Ct. 1931, 100 L. Ed. 2d 497 (1988) (noting that given the potential for "significant procompetitive benefits," standard-setting by private associations is typically evaluated under the rule of reason).

<sup>35</sup> The Court expressly does not draw any conclusion regarding how the Supreme Court's decision in American Express might impact Class Plaintiffs' claims if the case were to proceed to trial, and only acknowledges that the case affects the overall assessment of risk.

(3) The risks of establishing damages

"[T]he history of antitrust litigation is replete with cases in which antitrust plaintiffs succeeded at trial on liability, but recovered no damages, or only negligible damages, at trial, or on appeal." Wal-Mart Stores, 396 F.3d at 118; see also In re Sumitomo Copper Litig., 189 F.R.D. at 283 ("Even outside of the particularly risky proof of damages in commodity price manipulation cases, the history of litigation is replete [**148] with cases in which plaintiffs succeeded at trial on liability, but recovered no damages, or only disappointing damages, at trial, or on appeal." (citing cases)).

As Judge Gleeson noted in his final approval decision, "[e]ven if liability is established, Class Plaintiffs would still face the problems and complexities inherent in proving damages to the jury . . . . These damages-related issues may not be insurmountable, but they are formidable." Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 229. The parties previously submitted competing expert reports on damages, and at a trial, damages would likely be heavily contested. Dr. Sykes concluded that "plaintiffs face considerable difficulty in proving their damages . . . , " (Sykes Report 3), and that the approaches they used would be "subject to substantial challenges," (id. at 23-25). In assessing the risks of proving damages, former Judge Renfrew also predicted that "[i]t will be a battle of experts . . ." (Renfrew Decl. ¶ 33.) He noted that "Defendants have moved to exclude as inadmissible, the opinion of plaintiffs' economic expert, Dr. Alan S. Frankel regarding . . . injury and damages attributed to the challenged conduct of defendants . . . . Dr. Frankel's testimony is highly supportive of [**149] Class Plaintiffs' theory and is some of the strongest evidence that they have as to essential elements of their antitrust claims."<sup>36</sup> (Id.)

Based on the opinions of multiple experts, there will be risks associated with establishing damages in this case. The Court finds that this subfactor will likely weigh in favor of granting final approval.

(4) The risks of maintaining the class through the trial

Although the "risk of maintaining a class through trial is present in [every] [*40] class action," see Guippone v. BH S&B Holdings LLC, No. 09-CV-1029, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 134899, 2016 WL 5811888, at \*7 \(S.D.N.Y. Sept. 23, 2016\) (citation omitted), "this factor [nevertheless] weighs in favor of settlement" where "it is likely that defendants would oppose class certification" if the case were to be litigated, Garland v. Cohen & Krassner, No. 08-CV-4626, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 136622, 2011 WL 6010211, at \*8 \(E.D.N.Y. Nov. 29, 2011\) (citation omitted); see also In re Bear Stearns Companies, Inc. Sec., Derivative, & ERISA Litig., 909 F. Supp. 2d 259, 268-69 \(S.D.N.Y. 2012\) ("The risk that Defendants could in fact succeed in their efforts to decertify the class militates in favor of settlement approval.").

Class Plaintiffs previously moved for class certification over Defendants' objection, but the Court never ruled on the motion, instead approving the Original Settlement Agreement. If the case were to proceed to trial, Defendants could — and likely would — move for decertification of any class that the Court might ultimately certify. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(c\)\(1\)\(C\) ("An order that grants [**150] or denies class certification may be altered or amended before final judgment."); (Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶ 4 ("Defendants will not oppose, the Court's certification of a settlement class, for settlement purposes only" (emphasis added)); Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶ 64(e) (noting that in the event of termination, "Defendants shall revert to their position before the execution of the . . . [Superseding Settlement Agreement], including with respect to the appropriateness of class certification.")) Although Class Counsel has provided enough information for the Court to determine that it will likely be able to certify the class at the final approval stage for settlement purposes, there is no guarantee that the class could be certified if the parties proceeded with the litigation, and Defendants have indicated that they are only consenting to class certification for the purposes of settlement. See, e.g., Reade-Alvarez v. Eltmann, Eltmann, & Cooper, P.C., No. 04-CV-2195, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 89226, 2006 WL 3681138, at \*6 \(E.D.N.Y. Dec. 11, 2006\) ("The parties stipulated to class certification for settlement purposes only. If the class action were litigated, however, it is likely that defendants would oppose certification." (citation omitted)); In re NASDAQ Mkt.-Makers Antitrust Litig., 187 F.R.D. 465, 476-77 (S.D.N.Y. 1998) (noting that "there is no guarantee that this class [**151] would not be decertified before or during trial" and stating that "if the Class were to be decertified at trial, or if class certification were to be reversed on appeal, the class members (other than a few dozen plaintiffs) would recover nothing at all").

---

<sup>36</sup> The Court notes that the Supreme Court's recent decision in American Express, 138 S. Ct. 2274, 201 L. Ed. 2d 678, may increase the difficulty Class Plaintiffs face in proving damages.

For these reasons, the Court finds that this subfactor will likely weigh in favor of granting final approval.

B. Effectiveness of distributing relief to the class

This factor requires courts to look at "the method of processing class-member claims." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(2)(C)(ii). "A claims processing method should deter or defeat unjustified claims, but the court should be alert to whether the claims process is unduly demanding." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 advisory committee's note to 2018 amendment. The method used in the present action is set forth primarily in the Plan of Administration and Distribution. (Plan of Administration and Distribution.)

"To warrant approval, the plan of allocation must also meet the standards by which the settlement was scrutinized — namely, it must be fair and adequate . . . An allocation formula need only have a reasonable, rational basis, particularly if recommended by experienced and competent class counsel." In re WorldCom, Inc. Sec. Litig., 388 F. Supp. 2d 319, 344 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) (internal citations and quotation marks omitted). [**152] "[N]umerous courts have held . . . [that] a plan of allocation need not be perfect." In re EVCI Career Colleges Holding Corp. Sec. Litig., No. 05-CV-10240, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 57918, 2007 WL 2230177, at *11 (S.D.N.Y. July 27, 2007) (collecting cases).

Class Counsel, who are experienced and competent in complex class actions, prepared the Plan of Administration and Distribution. Under its terms, the Class Administrator will estimate the interchange fees paid by each claimant during the class period, and each claimant will receive a pro rata share of the settlement fund based on its interchange fees paid. (Plan of Administration and Distribution [*41] I-2.) Claimants will have the opportunity to "contest the accuracy of the statement or estimates" made by the Class Administrator. (See id. at I-7, 8, 13.) If the Court grants final approval, and once claims are estimated, the Class Administrator will disseminate a claim form. (Id. at I-10.) According to Class Counsel, the majority of the claim form can be "pre-populated" with data provided by Visa and potentially other Defendants. (Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval 40.) Once a claim form is received, the Class Administrator will commence its audit, and "[c]laimants whose claims are denied, or who disagree with the final calculation of their claims, may challenge such denials or final calculations [**153] in writing, together with supporting documentation, mailed or emailed to the Class Administrator within thirty days after receipt of the notice of the denial or final calculation . . . ." (See Plan of Administration and Distribution I-13.) A website containing relevant documents and forms in multiple languages, and telephone support will be available to "obtain information and request documents related to the claims process." (See id. at I-13, 14.)

The Court finds that at this stage, the Plan of Administration and Distribution appears to be an effective form of relief distribution, and that this factor will likely weigh in favor of granting final approval. See In re Visa Check/Mastermoney Antitrust Litig., 297 F. Supp. 2d 503, 519 (E.D.N.Y. 2003) (approving allocation plan where "Class members will receive an award of money from the [settlement funds] directly proportional to their debit and credit purchase volume (as well as online debit transactions) during the Class period"); Shapiro v. JPMorgan Chase & Co., No. 11-CV-7961, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 37872, 2014 WL 1224666, at *13 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 24, 2014) (approving an allocation plan where the settlement amount, less administration costs, would be distributed on a pro rata basis of net losses); In re Initial Pub. Offering Sec. Litig., 671 F. Supp. 2d 467, 475 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) (same).

C. The terms of any proposed award of attorneys' fees

Class Counsel "intend to apply for an Attorneys' Fee Award in a reasonable amount not to [**154] exceed ten percent (10%) of the Total Cash Consideration and for Expense Awards comprising all reasonable expenses and costs incurred not to exceed $40 million." (Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶ 57.)

"Courts may award attorneys' fees in common fund cases under either the 'lodestar' method or the 'percentage of the fund' method." Wal-Mart Stores, 396 F.3d at 121 (citing Goldberger, 209 F.3d 43). However, "[t]he trend in this Circuit is toward the percentage method, which 'directly aligns the interests of the class and its counsel and provides a powerful incentive for the efficient prosecution and early resolution of litigation.'" Id. (internal citation omitted) (quoting In re Lloyd's Am. Trust Fund Litig., No. 96-CV-1262, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22663, 2002 WL 31663577, at \*25 \(S.D.N.Y. Nov. 26, 2002\)). Although the percentage method is an appropriate method by which to award attorneys' fees, the lodestar method "remains useful as a baseline even if the percentage method is eventually chosen." Goldberger v. Integrated Res., Inc., 209 F.3d 43, 50 \(2d Cir. 2000\).

In cases with large settlement awards, courts have noted that smaller percentage awards of attorneys' fees are reasonable. See, e.g., Wal-Mart Stores, 396 F.3d at 106, 123 (upholding a district court's award of $220,290,160.44, which amounted to 6.5 percent of a $3.05 billion settlement fund, or a 3.5 multiplier of the lodestar amount, and noting that "the sheer size of the instant fund makes a smaller percentage [**155] appropriate"); see also Goldberger, 209 F.3d at 52-53 (holding that a percentage fee award of roughly four percent did not constitute an abuse of discretion, reasoning that "empirical analyses demonstrate that in cases like this one, with recoveries of between $50 and $75 million, courts have traditionally accounted for these economies of scale by awarding fees in the lower range of about 11% to 19%" (citations omitted)); Ann. Manual for Complex Litigation (Fourth) § 14.121 (2018) (noting that in "mega-cases" such as this, where "large settlements or awards serve as the basis for calculating a percentage, courts have often found considerably lower percentages of recovery to be appropriate." (citing Krell v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. \(In re Prudential Ins. Co. Am. Sales Practice Litig. Agent Actions\), 148 F.3d 283, 339-40 \(3d Cir. 1998\)).

[*42] The proposal by Class Counsel to seek up to ten percent of any settlement is comparable to the percentage of attorneys' fees previously awarded by Judge Gleeson in this action.<sup>37</sup> See In re Payment Card Interchange Fee & Merch. Disc. Antitrust Litig., 991 F. Supp. 2d at 439-40 (granting a $544.8 award of attorneys' fees and a $27,037,716.97 request for expenses where the settlement fund after reductions for opt outs amounted to approximately $5.7 billion).<sup>38</sup> The Court is aware that Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Counsel have expended enormous time and effort in litigating this action and should be rewarded for those efforts.<sup>39</sup>

<sup>37</sup> Judge Gleeson based his award in part on the "enormous" risk that Class Counsel undertook in bringing the litigation. In re Payment Card Interchange Fee, 991 F. Supp. 2d at 441. He also found the injunctive relief that accompanied the monetary fund to weigh in favor of a larger attorney fee award because "the settlement constitutes a significant step toward remedying the merchants' complaints about interchange rates in Visa and MasterCard credit card transactions . . . . [and because] the merchants' newly acquitted ability to surcharge the use of credit cards at the product level has great value." Id.; id. at 442 ("When the rules changes are combined with the massive damages fund, the settlement must be labeled a significant success."). He determined that a lodestar multiplier of 3.41, for a lodestar amount of approximately $160 million, was reasonable. Id. at 447-48.

<sup>38</sup> While Class Counsel's representation that they will seek "up to ten percent" of the fund for attorneys' fees is not unreasonable, the Court notes that case law suggests that larger settlements warrant lower percentages of attorneys' fee awards. Because "up to ten percent" suggests that the amount Class Counsel will seek could vary from one through ten percent, this factor does not weigh against granting preliminary approval of the settlement.

<sup>39</sup> Although on appeal the Second Circuit noted that "Class [C]ounsel stood to gain enormously if they got the deal done," Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 234, the Court was concerned with Class Counsel's lack of financial motivation to achieve greater gains for the (b)(2) class because "counsel got more money for each additional dollar they secured for the (b)(3) class." Id. Such a conflict no longer exists, and Class Counsel's sole duty in negotiating the current settlement is to maximize recovery for the (b)(3) class.

Accordingly, the Court finds that this subfactor [**156] does not weigh against preliminary approval. The Court will engage in a full analysis at the final approval stage or thereafter, taking into consideration the "mega-case" nature of the suit, as well as the six Goldberger factors.<sup>40</sup>

D. Release from liability

"The law is well established in this Circuit and others that class action releases may include claims not presented and even those which could not have been presented as long as the released conduct arises out of the 'identical factual predicate' as the settled conduct."<sup>41</sup> Wal-Mart Stores, 396 F.3d at 107 (citing TBK Partners, Ltd. v. W. Union Corp., 675 F.2d 456, 460 \(2d Cir. 1982\)); see also TBK Partners, Ltd. v. W. Union Corp., 675 F.2d at 460 (setting forth the "identical factual predicate" standard and noting that the Court had "previously 'assume(d) that a settlement could properly be framed so as to prevent class members from subsequently asserting claims relying on a legal theory different from that relied upon in the class action complaint but depending upon the very same set of facts.'") (alteration in original) (quoting National Super Spuds, Inc. v. New York Mercantile Exchange, 660 F.2d 9, 18 n.7 \(2d Cir. 1981\)).

"Broad class action settlements are common, since defendants and their cohorts would otherwise face nearly limitless liability from related lawsuits in jurisdictions throughout the country." [*43] Wal-Mart Stores, 396 F.3d at 106. However, releases cannot be boundless; "[p]laintiffs in [**157] a class action may release claims that were or could have been pled in exchange for settlement relief' . . . [but] this authority 'is limited by the 'identical factual predicate' and 'adequacy of representation' doctrines.'" Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 236-37 (quoting Wal-Mart Stores, 396 F.3d at 106). Courts have denied preliminary approval where releases from liability are deemed to be overly broad. See, e.g., Oladapo, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 187299, 2017 WL 5956907, at \*15 (taking issue with the release for using the phrase "similar conduct" and finding it unacceptable that "the proposed release would extend to all claims that arise out of or relate to 'the conduct alleged in the Complaints or similar conduct.'") (quoting the release)); Karvaly v. eBay, Inc., 245 F.R.D. 71, 88 \(E.D.N.Y. 2007\) (expressing dismay that "[a]s written, the release would constitute a waiver of claims completely unrelated to this action that could be brought under any of the statutes or common-law theories that are alleged in the Second Amended Complaint.").

In vacating the prior settlement approval, the Second Circuit expressed concern over the Original Settlement Agreement's broad release provisions, noting that Class Plaintiffs' authority to "release claims that were or could have been pled in exchange for settlement relief' . . . 'is limited by the 'identical factual [**158] predicate' and 'adequacy of representation' doctrines.'" Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 236-37 (quoting Wal-Mart Stores, 396 F.3d at 106).

(1) The releases in the Original Settlement Agreement

In the Original Settlement Agreement negotiated on behalf of both the (b)(2) and (b)(3) classes, the parties negotiated a separate release for each class. (See Original Settlement Agreement ¶¶ 31-38, 66-74.) Both releases required the classes to "expressly and irrevocably waive, and fully, finally, and forever settle, discharge and release

<sup>40</sup> Courts in the Second Circuit apply the six Goldberger v. Integrated Res., Inc., 209 F.3d 43 \(2d Cir. 2000\) factors in determining whether a fee is reasonable in common fund cases: "(1) the time and labor expended by counsel; (2) the magnitude and complexities of the litigation; (3) the risk of the litigation . . . ; (4) the quality of representation; (5) the requested fee in relation to the settlement; and (6) public policy considerations." Id. at 50 (citation and quotation marks omitted). The Court also notes that it will not necessarily adopt the graduated schedule that Judge Gleeson developed to calculate the previous attorney fee award. See In re Payment Card Interchange Fee, 991 F. Supp. 2d at 445.

<sup>41</sup> Although this is not an official Rule 23\(e\)\(2\) or Grinnell factor, analysis of the release provision of the Superseding Settlement Agreement will assist in determining whether relief is adequate for the class. The Court also separately discusses the release provision because of the concerns raised by the Second Circuit in its decision to vacate the prior settlement approval.

[Defendants] from any and all manner of claims, demands, actions, suits and causes of action, whether individual, class, representative, parens patriae, or otherwise in nature . . ." (Id. ¶¶ 33, 68.) The (b)(2) class released "relief relating to the period after the date of the Court's entry of the Class Settlement Preliminary Approval Order," (id. ¶ 68), while the (b)(3) class released relief "which could have been alleged from the beginning of time until the date of the Court's" preliminary approval, (id. ¶ 33).

The Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) class as defined in the Original Settlement Agreement consisted of persons, businesses and other entities that had accepted Visa-and/or Mastercard-branded Cards at any point between January 1, 2004 and the settlement [\[\*159\]](#) preliminary approval date. (Original Settlement Agreement ¶ 2(a).) Thus, the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) class was comprised of a finite class of merchants already in existence. In addition, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(c\)\(2\)\(B\)\(vi\), members of the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) class had an opportunity to exclude themselves from the class, or opt out, while class members certified under Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) were offered no such relief.

The Second Circuit found the releases to be evidence of inadequate representation, determining that that holders of present claims such as the (b)(3) class, and holders of future claims such as the (b)(2) class, could not be jointly represented. See Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 231; id. at 236-37 ("the bargain that was struck between relief and release on behalf of absent class members is so unreasonable that it evidences inadequate representation.").

Ultimately, the Second Circuit was primarily concerned about the release with respect to the (b)(2) class, and not the (b)(3) class. As discussed in Sections I.b and II.a.iii.3.D, supra, the Court was concerned that the (b)(3) class benefitted from the Original Settlement Agreement at the expense of the (b)(2) class. See, e.g., id. at 240 (Leval, J., concurring) (taking issue with the terms of the settlement because "one class of Plaintiffs accepts substantial payments [\[\*160\]](#) . . . in return for which they compel Plaintiffs in another class, who receive no part of the Defendants' payments, to give up forever their potentially valid claims, without ever having an opportunity to reject the settlement by opting out of the class"). The Second Circuit expressed concern that the "[m]erchants in the (b)(2) class that accept American Express or operate in states that prohibit surcharging gain no appreciable [\[\*44\]](#) benefit from the settlement, and merchants that begin business after July 20, 2021 gain no benefit at all."<sup>42</sup> Id. at 238. The (b)(2) class release effectively meant that merchants that came into existence after the preliminary settlement approval date would be barred by the release from ever bringing certain claims, without having been a part of the process, and the Second Circuit expressed concern that some of the (b)(2) merchants "actually received nothing" for the release of their claims. Id. The Court compared the release before it to the res judicata issues presented in Stephenson v. Dow Chemical Company, 273 F.3d 249 \(2d Cir. 2001\), *aff'd in part, vacated in part, 539 U.S. 111, 123 S. Ct. 2161, 156 L. Ed. 2d 106 (2003), which involved a class action settlement fund that provided compensation for persons injured by Agent Orange, who discovered their injury prior to 1994. The panel [\[\*161\]](#) in Stephenson held that the two individual plaintiffs had not been adequately represented because the settlement extinguished their claims without affording them access to recovery, simply because they discovered their injury after 1994. Id. ("Because the prior litigation purported to settle all future claims, but only provided for recovery for those whose death or disability was discovered prior to 1994, the conflict . . . [with] the class representatives becomes apparent. No provision was made for post-1994 claimants, and the settlement fund was permitted to terminate in 1994."); see also Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 238 (analyzing Stephenson and noting that "[t]he two challengers could not have been adequately represented if their class representative negotiated a settlement and release that extinguished their claims without affording them any recovery.").*

(2) The release in the Superseding Settlement Agreement

The release from liability in the Superseding Settlement Agreement Release and Covenant Not to Sue ("Release Provision") reads in pertinent part:

---

<sup>42</sup> The Original Settlement Agreement provided "that all of the injunctive relief will terminate on July 20, 2021." Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 230.

The Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Settlement Class Releasing Parties hereby expressly and irrevocably waive, and fully, finally, and forever settle, discharge, and release the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Settlement Class [**162] Released Parties from, any and all manner of claims, demands, actions, suits, and causes of action, whether individual, class, representative, parens patriae, or otherwise in nature, for damages, restitution, disgorgement, interest, costs, expenses, attorneys' fees, fines, civil or other penalties, or other payment of money, or for injunctive, declaratory, or other equitable relief, whenever incurred, whether directly, indirectly, derivatively, or otherwise, whether known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, in law or in equity, that any Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Settlement Class Releasing Party ever had, now has, or hereafter can, shall, or may have and that have accrued as of the Settlement Preliminary Approval Date or accrue no later than five years after the Settlement Final Date arising out of or relating to any conduct, acts, transactions, events, occurrences, statements, omissions, or failures to act of any Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Settlement Class Released Party that are or have been alleged or otherwise raised in the Action, or that could have been alleged or raised in the Action relating to the subject matter thereof, or arising out of or relating to a continuation or continuing effect of any such conduct, acts, transactions, [**163] events, occurrences, statements, omissions, or failures to act. For avoidance of doubt, this release shall extend to, but only to, the fullest extent permitted by federal law.

(Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶ 31(a).)

The Release Provision broadly releases claims arising out of certain rules challenged in the litigation and other rules that are substantially similar. It specifies that the (b)(3) class members agree to release "any claims arising out of or relating to" the allegations of the (b)(3) class including "any interchange fees, interchange rates, or any Rule of any Visa Defendant or MasterCard Defendant relating to interchange fees," (id. ¶ 31(b)(i)), "any . . . 'honor all cards' rules . . . [or] rules or conduct relating to routing options regarding acceptance technology for mobile, e-commerce, or online payments, or [*45] development and implementation of tokenization standards," (id. ¶ 31(b)(iii).) It further specifies that reference to these rules "mean those rules as they are or were in place on or before the Settlement Preliminary Approval Date and rules in place thereafter that are substantially similar . . . ." (Id. ¶ 31(c) (emphasis added).)

In addition, although the Release [**164] Provision releases class members' ability to seek injunctive relief generally, it does not release a Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) class member's participation in the (b)(2) injunctive action, "solely as to injunctive relief claims alleged" in that action. (Id. ¶ 34(a).)<sup>43</sup> Specifically, the Release Provision does not release:

A Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) [class member's] continued participation, as a named representative or non-representative class member, in Barry's Cut Rate Stores, Inc., et al. v. Visa, Inc., et al., MDL No. 1720 Docket No. 05-md-01720-MKB-JO ("Barry's"), solely as to injunctive relief claims alleged in Barry's. As to all such claims for injunctive relief in Barry's, the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) [class members] retain all rights pursuant to Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure which they have as a named representative plaintiff or absent class member in Barry's except the right to initiate a new separate action before five years after the Settlement Final Date. Nothing in this Paragraph shall be read to enlarge, restrict, conflict with, or affect the terms of any release or judgment to which any Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Settlement Class Releasing Party may become bound in Barry's, and nothing in the release in Paragraphs 29-33 above shall be interpreted to enlarge, restrict, conflict with, or affect the [**165] request for injunctive relief that the plaintiffs in Barry's may seek or obtain in Barry's.

<sup>43</sup> Although (b)(2) Class Counsel originally expressed concern regarding the scope of "injunctive relief claims" that are preserved under the Superseding Settlement Agreement, (see Letter re Language in Settlement Agreement), following the parties' adjustments to the proposed preliminary approval order and the Class Notices, which further explain the extent to which such claims are preserved, (b)(2) Class Counsel subsequently informed the Court that it "would not be filing an objection to the proposed [Superseding Settlement Agreement]." (Letter dated Jan. 18, 2019.) The Class Notices now expressly state that with respect to the (b)(2) injunctive relief action, the Release Provision in the Superseding Settlement Agreement does not release "injunctive relief claims," nor does it release "the declaratory relief claims that are a predicate for the injunctive relief claims." (Revised Class Notices G1-4, G2-11; Prelim. Approval Order ¶ 31.) Injunctive relief claims are claims that are understood "to prohibit or require certain conduct." (Id. at G1-4, G1-5, G2-11; Prelim. Approval Order ¶ 31.) The Class Notices further explain that claims for injunctive relief do "not include claims for payment of money, such as damages, restitution, or disgorgement." (Revised Class Notices G1-4, G1-5, G2-11; see also Prelim. Approval Order ¶ 31.) The Court approves and adopts this understanding of "injunctive relief claims."

(Id.)

As in the release for the (b)(3) class under the Original Settlement Agreement, the Superseding Settlement Agreement's Release Provision applies only to merchants who accepted Visa-branded cards or Mastercard-branded cards between January 1, 2004 and the January 24, 2019 Settlement Preliminary Approval Date. (See Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶ 4.) It is consistent with the release deemed acceptable in Wal-Mart Stores, because the "injured parties may obtain remuneration from the settlement fund if they accepted Visa or MasterCard within a finite period . . . ." Wal-Mart Stores, 396 F.3d at 110.

However, unlike the (b)(3) release in the Original Settlement Agreement, which "fully, finally, and forever settle[d], discharge[d] and release[d]" the Defendants from claims, (Original Settlement Agreement ¶ 33), the Release Provision of the Superseding Settlement Agreement "is limited in duration" and only bars "claims that have accrued within five years following the Court's approval of the settlement and the exhaustion of all appeals." (Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval 23; see also Superseding Settlement Agreement [**166] ¶ 31(a).)

(3) Analysis of the new release

The Court understands the Release Provision to mean that, apart from any injunctive relief claims that are raised in the Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) injunctive relief action, and unless individual members choose to opt out, the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) class members release certain rights that have already accrued or that [*46] will accrue up to five years after all appeals have been resolved in this action, that are based on rules that are the same or "substantially similar" to the rules in place on January 24, 2019, the date of preliminary approval. At the hearing, the Court clarified its understanding as to what was being released, and asked the parties to include such clarifying language in the Class Notices. (See Hrg Tr. 18:7-19:6, 23:8-24:13.)

As agreed to at the hearing, on January 15, 2019, the parties submitted revised Class Notices to the Court, which clarify the terms of the Release Provision. (Revised Class Notices.) According to these revised Class Notices, the Release Provision bars:

Claims based on conduct and rules that were alleged or raised in the litigation, or that could have been alleged or raised in the litigation relating to its subject matter. This includes any claims based on [**167] interchange fees, network fees, merchant discount fees, no-surcharge rules, no-discounting rules, honor-all-cards rules, and certain other conduct and rules. These claims are released if they already have accrued or accrue in the future up to five years following the court's approval of the settlement and the resolution of all appeals.

(Id. at G1-3, G1-4, G2-10.) The Release Provision further bars:

Claims based on rules in the future that are substantially similar to — i.e., do not change substantively the nature of — the above-mentioned rules as they existed as of preliminary approval of the settlement. These claims based on future substantially similar rules are released if they accrue up to five years following the court's approval of the settlement and the resolution of all appeals.<sup>44</sup>

(Id. at G1-4, G2-10.)

<sup>44</sup> The parties also adjusted the Class Notices to clarify that the Release Provision does not extinguish, among other things: "[c]laims based on conduct or rules that could not have been alleged or raised in the litigation;" "[c]laims based on future rules that are not substantially similar to rules that were or could have been alleged or raised in the litigation;" and/or "claims that accrue more than five years after the court's approval of the settlement and the resolution of any appeals." (See Class Notices G1-4, G2-10.)

At the hearing, the parties also clarified that the Release Provision as written is meant to comport with the Second Circuit's "identical factual predicate" test, despite using different language. (See Hr'g Tr. 20:19–24:6.) Paragraph 31(a) of the Release Provision states that the "release shall extend to, but only to, the fullest extent permitted by federal law." (Superseding \*\*168 Settlement Agreement ¶ 31(a).) In addition, paragraph 34(c) of the Release Provision states that "references to rules identified in [the Release Provision] mean those rules as they are or were in place on or before the Settlement Preliminary Approval Date and rules in place thereafter that are substantially similar.<sup>45</sup> (Id. ¶ 34(c).) The parties have expressed that while the language is different, the Release Provision should not be read to release any rules or conduct not based on an identical factual predicate. (See Defs. Letter to the Court dated Dec. 4, 2018, 1, Docket Entry No. 7314; see also Class Counsel's Letter to the Court dated Dec. 5, 2018, 3, Docket Entry No. 7316 ('the reference to 'federal law' in Paragraph 31(a), incorporates the Identical Factual Predicate doctrine. The parties chose to refer to 'federal law' rather than the Identical Factual Predicate doctrine, however, because some courts use different language to describe the scope of the law.); Revised Class Notices G1-4, G2-10 (noting that the Superseding Settlement Agreement's "resolution and release of these claims is intended to be consistent with and no broader than federal law on the identical factual predicate \*\*169 doctrine.").)

[\[\*47\]](#) As to the "substantially similar" language, Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Counsel has clarified to the Court that the parties included this phrase to ensure that Defendants are protected from suit in the event of a minor change such as a "word" or "punctuation," but further clarified that a substantive change to a rule could perhaps be challenged under the identical factual predicate test to allows for claims to be brought that are based on the substantive change. (See Hr'g Tr. 26:24-28:19.)

Having clarified the parties' intent with regard to the language in the Release Provision, the Court is satisfied that the terms of the release comport with the Second Circuit's standards. To ensure that putative class members understand what rights they are releasing, the parties have included language in the Class Notices to clarify the scope of the Release Provision and to clarify that it comports with the identical factual predicate test. (Revised Class Notices G1-3, G1-4, G2-10; see also Hr'g Tr. 23:8-24:17, 26:13-26:16, 28:9-28:11.)

Because the terms of the Release Provision comport with the Second Circuit's identical factual predicate test, and does not implicate the issues that the Second Circuit \*\*170 raised in relation to the (b)(2) release in the Original Settlement Agreement, the Court will likely find that the Release Provision as written, in conjunction with the clarifying information in the Class Notices, permits a finding that the Superseding Settlement Agreement is fair, reasonable, and adequate at the final approval stage.

4. Equitable treatment of class members relative to one another

Consideration under this Rule 23\(e\)\(2\) factor "could include whether the apportionment of relief among class members takes appropriate account of differences among their claims, and whether the scope of the release may affect class members in different ways that bear on the apportionment of relief." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 advisory committee's note to 2018 amendment.

For the reasons set forth in Section II.a.iii.3.B, supra, the Court finds that the pro rata distribution scheme is sufficiently equitable. See also Meredith Corp. v. SESAC, LLC, 87 F. Supp. 3d 650, 667 \(S.D.N.Y. 2015\) (finding that a pro rata allocation plan "appear[ed] to treat the class members equitably . . . and has the benefit of simplicity"). Further, the scope of the release applies uniformly to putative class members, and does not appear to affect the apportionment of the relief to class members, apart from securing the opportunity [**171] to participate in the (b)(2) action. Accordingly, the Court finds that this factor will likely weigh in favor of granting final approval.

<sup>45</sup> Some courts have expressed concern that the term "similar" when used in releases is broader than the Second Circuit's identical factual predicate test. See Oladapo, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 187299, 2017 WL 5956907, at \*6 (expressing concern that the settlement agreement "released not only claims arising out of conduct alleged in the Complaint, but also claims arising out of any 'similar' conduct"). Dr. Sykes, the court-appointed expert, also expressed concern that the inclusion of the phrase "'substantially similar' conduct or rules raises a danger of adverse, unintended consequences in a technologically dynamic industry." (See Sykes Report 49-51.)

5. The ability of Defendants to withstand a greater judgment

Undoubtedly, Defendants can withstand a greater judgment. Defendants have agreed to pay a maximum settlement award of $6.26 billion. (Memo. in Support of Mot. for Prelim. Approval 1.) Although the agreed upon payment is objectively a large sum of money, it is less so when viewed in perspective. By 2005, "interchange fee revenue paid by merchants to Visa and Mastercard card-issuing banks had risen to over $30 billion per year." (Wildfang Decl. ¶ 13.) In under one decade, one retailer alone — Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. — "paid approximately $5.6 billion in interchange fees for payment card transactions on the Visa and MasterCard networks." (Wal-Mart's Obj. to the Proposed Settlement, Docket Entry No. 2644.) Defendants do not dispute that they could withstand a greater judgment.

Although the Court finds that this factor weighs against a grant of final approval, it does not necessarily preclude a finding that the settlement is fair. See Charron v. Pinnacle Grp. N.Y. LLC, 874 F. Supp. 2d 179, 201 \(S.D.N.Y. 2012\) ("A defendant[s] ability to withstand a greater judgment, standing [**172] alone, does not suggest that the settlement is unfair." (citation and internal quotation marks omitted) (alteration in original)).

6. The range of reasonableness of the settlement in light of the best possible recovery and all the attendant risks of litigation

The range of reasonableness of the settlement in light of the best possible recovery, [*48] and the range of reasonableness of the settlement fund to a possible recovery in light of all the attendant risks of litigation, are two Grinnell factors that are often combined for the purposes of analysis. See, e.g., Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 229–230; Godson v. Eltman, Eltman, & Cooper, P.C., 328 F.R.D. 35, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 182034, 2018 WL 5263071, at \*12–13; Ferrick v. Spotify USA Inc., No. 16-CV-8412, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 86083, 2018 WL 2324076, at \*5–6 \(S.D.N.Y. May 22, 2018\).

"In considering the reasonableness of the settlement fund, a court must compare "the terms of the compromise with the likely rewards of litigation." Godson, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 182034, 2018 WL 5263071, at \*12 (quoting In re Citigroup Inc. Sec. Litig., 965 F. Supp. 2d 369, 384 \(S.D.N.Y. 2013\) (citation omitted)). "In order to calculate the 'best possible' recovery, the Court must assume complete victory on both liability and damages as to all class members on every claim asserted against each defendant in the Action." Teachers' Ret. Sys. of Louisiana v. A.C.L.N., Ltd., No. 01-CV-11814, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8608, 2004 WL 1087261, at \*5 \(S.D.N.Y. May 14, 2004\). The range of reasonableness is "a range which recognizes the uncertainties of law and fact in any particular case and the concomitant risks and costs necessarily inherent in taking any litigation to completion." [**173] Wal-Mart Stores, 396 F.3d at 119 (quoting Newman v. Stein, 464 F.2d 689, 693 \(2d Cir. 1972\)).

The monetary settlement award could be as much as $6.26 billion, but will be no less than approximately $5.56 billion after the opt-out reductions, which the parties represent is "the largest ever class settlement fund in an antitrust action." (See Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval at 1, 7; id. at 1 n.1.) A large settlement figure, however, does not mandate a finding that the award falls within a range of reasonableness. The Court notes that the entire amount of the settlement award will not be distributed to claimants, as attorneys' fee awards, taxes, class exclusion takedown payments, and administrative fees — rising to hundreds of millions of dollars — will be deducted from the maximum settlement fund figure. (See Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶¶ 19–25, 27.)

The Court looks to information in the record to estimate what the best possible recovery might be in this case.<sup>46</sup> Assuming Class Plaintiffs can establish liability and recover damages, based on the expert reports exchanged in 2009 and 2010, the parties presented competing figures for what the best possible recovery would be. From 2004 to 2008 alone, for example, Class Plaintiffs' claim that they can attribute over $100 billion [**174] in damages to Defendants' unlawful conduct. (See Mot. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval 18-19.) For the same period, Defendants contend that they would be responsible for no more than $661 million in damages. (Id. at 18.) When analyzing the terms of the Original Settlement Agreement, Judge Gleeson found that the figure agreed to, $7.25 billion, "represent[ed] approximately 2.5% of total interchange fees paid by class members during the class period, and thus 2.5% of the largest possible estimate of actual damage to merchants." Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 229. Despite the $7.25 billion figure, objectors argued that the amount represented "only a few months of interchange fee collections" when divided among the millions of merchants that could claim damages. (See Sykes Report 47 (noting that such a statement "appear[s] to be correct").) The [*49] same is true of the settlement currently before the Court.

However, "the fact that a proposed settlement may only amount to a fraction of the potential recovery does not, in and of itself, mean that the proposed settlement is grossly inadequate and should be disapproved." Grinnell, 495 F.2d at 455. "There is no reason, at least in theory, why a satisfactory [**175] settlement could not amount to a hundredth or even a thousandth part of a single percent of the potential recovery." Id. at 455 n.2; see also Morris v. Affinity Health Plan, Inc., 859 F. Supp. 2d 611, 621 \(S.D.N.Y. 2012\) ("It is well-settled that a case settlement amounting to only a fraction of the potential recovery will not per se render the settlement inadequate or unfair."); Davis v. J.P. Morgan Chase & Co., 827 F. Supp. 2d 172, 178 \(W.D.N.Y. 2011\) ("[I]t is more important to assess the judgment in light of plaintiffs' claims and the other factors.").

Although the Superseding Settlement Agreement only provides for $6.5 billion, which may be only several months of interchange fees, the Court finds that this settlement figure falls within a range of reasonableness for the following reasons.

First, the Court finds it pertinent that the Second Circuit did not take issue with the monetary relief secured for the (b)(3) class in the Original Settlement Agreement. See Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 240 (expressing concern that the (b)(2) class would be forced to give up claims forever with no opportunity to opt out, while "one class of Plaintiffs accepts substantial payments from the Defendants" (Leval, J., concurring)).

Second, the Court notes that while the members of the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) class are required to release certain rights to claims in return for damages, putative members of the (b)(3) class [**176] can opt out at will and pursue their own actions. In addition, those members of the (b)(3) class that are also members of the Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) injunctive relief class action are not prohibited from participating in that action to secure injunctive relief. (See Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶ 34(a).) Thus, the Superseding Settlement Agreement does not prohibit recovery of additional structural relief in the future.

Third, since the commencement of this lawsuit in 2005, several forms of injunctive relief related to the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Plaintiffs' claims have been secured. Although this injunctive relief does not constitute consideration for the purposes of settling the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Plaintiffs' claims, the value of such injunctive relief cannot be ignored in assessing the range of reasonableness of this settlement. The Court notes that the Visa and Mastercard rule changes secured in the Original Settlement Agreement remain in effect today. (Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval 28.) These changes include, among others, permitting "merchants to surcharge on Visa-or Mastercard-branded credit card transactions at both the brand and product levels," and "[a]n obligation on the part of Visa and MasterCard to negotiate interchange [**177] fees in good faith with merchant buying groups." Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 217. The injunctive relief secured in the prior settlement approval was valued by Class Plaintiffs' expert to be worth at least $26 billion. (See Renfrew Decl. ¶ 17 ("[I]n addition to the monetary recovery, the Class Plaintiffs achieved significant modifications to the existing rules, which according to Plaintiffs' expert Frankel are estimated to be worth at a minimum $26+ billion.").) These forms of relief serve to partially address Plaintiffs' claims regarding supracompetitive interchange fees and anti-steering restraints.

<sup>46</sup> Class Counsel should use their best efforts to provide the best possible recovery estimate when seeking final approval of the settlement. The Court recognizes, however, that it may be a difficult figure to generate, and, ultimately, this information, while helpful in assessing this factor, is not absolutely necessary. See, e.g., In re Facebook, Inc., IPO Sec. and Derivative Litig., No. 12-MD-2389, 343 F. Supp. 3d 394, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 199829, 2018 WL 6168013, at \*13 \(S.D.N.Y. Nov. 26, 2018\) (finding that although "particularized evidence ha[d] not been adduced to support a 'best possible' judgment, the agreed-upon figure [was] reasonable in light of the substantial risks to recovery."); In re LIBOR-Based Fin. Instruments Antitrust Litig., 327 F.R.D. 483, 2018 WL 3677875, at \*8 \(S.D.N.Y. 2018\) (finding in a complex antitrust conspiracy action that calculation of recoverable damages was "particularly complex" and therefore concluding "that an assessment of the 'best possible recovery' would be of little value in assessing the substantive fairness of the settlement."); see also Frank v. Eastman Kodak Co., 228 F.R.D. 174, 186 \(W.D.N.Y. 2005\) ("The determination whether a settlement is reasonable does not involve the use of a 'mathematical equation yielding a particularized sum.'" (quoting In re Austrian & German Bank Holocaust Litig., 80 F. Supp. 2d at 178)).

Fourth, as one district Court has aptly stated, "the history of antitrust litigation is replete with cases in which antitrust plaintiffs succeeded at trial on liability, but recovered no damages, or only negligible damages, at trial or on appeal." In re NASDAQ Mkt.-Makers Antitrust Litig., 187 F.R.D. at 476 (collecting cases). As set forth in Section II.a.iii.3.A, supra, the Court believes that there is a significant risk of proceeding with the action in light of the attendant risks and complexities of proving liability and damages, and maintaining the class action. See also In re Glob. Crossing Sec. & ERISA Litig., 225 F.R.D. at 461 ("Due to the complexities inherent in this case, the certainty of this settlement amount has to be judged in [**178] this context of the legal and practical obstacles to obtaining a large recovery.").

[*50] Accordingly, the Court finds that these Grinnell factors will likely weigh in favor of granting final approval.

In sum, for the foregoing reasons, the Court finds that under the Rule 23\(e\)\(2\) and the Grinnell factors, preliminary approval of the settlement is warranted because the Court will likely find the Superseding Settlement Agreement to be fair, reasonable, and adequate at the final approval stage.

b. Certification of settlement class

In 2009, the parties submitted motions to the Court on the issue of class certification. On November 19, 2009, Judge Orenstein heard oral argument on the motions, but reserved making a recommendation at that time. (See Minute Entry dated Nov. 23, 2009, Docket Entry No. 1319.) After the parties informed the Court of their intent to settle the case, the Court deemed the class certification motions withdrawn without prejudice. (See Order dated July 17, 2012.)

The parties sought preliminary certification of the following class under subsection Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) for the purposes of settlement only:

All persons, businesses, and other entities that have accepted any Visa-Branded Cards and/or Mastercard-Branded [**179] Cards in the United States at any time from January 1, 2004 to the Settlement Preliminary Approval Date, except that the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Settlement Class shall not include (a) the Dismissed Plaintiffs, (b) the United States government, (c) the named Defendants in this Action or their directors, officers, or members of their families, or (d) financial institutions that have issued Visa-Branded Cards or Mastercard-Branded Cards or acquired Visa-Branded Card transactions or Mastercard-Branded Card transactions at any time from January 1, 2004 to the Settlement Preliminary Approval Date.

(Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶ 4.)

"The ultimate decision to certify the class for purposes of settlement cannot be made until the hearing on final approval of the proposed settlement." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 advisory committee's note to 2018 amendment. When deciding whether to grant preliminary approval, district courts must determine whether "giving notice is justified by the parties' showing that the court will likely be able to . . . certify the class for purposes of judgment on the proposal." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(e\)\(1\)\(B\)\(ii\) (emphasis added). The Court therefore looks to the factors for class certification to make this determination.

"Before approving a class settlement [**180] agreement, a district court must first determine whether the requirements for class certification in Rule 23\(a\) and \(b\) have been satisfied." In re Am. Int'l Grp., Inc. Sec. Litig., 689 F.3d 229, 238 (2d Cir. 2012). "This applies even to conditional certification for settlement purposes only." See Tart v. Lions Gate Entm't Corp., No. 14-CV-8004, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 139266, 2015 WL 5945846, at *1 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 13, 2015) (citing Long v. HSBC USA Inc., No. 14-CV-6233, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 122655, 2015 WL 5444651, at *5 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 11, 2015)).

"To obtain certification of a class action for money damages, a plaintiff must satisfy prerequisites of numerosity, commonality, typicality, and adequacy of representation," pursuant to Rule 23\(a\), and "must also establish that questions of law or fact common to class members predominate over any questions affecting only individual members, and that a class action is superior to other available methods for fairly and efficiently adjudicating the controversy," pursuant to Rule 23\(b\)\(3\). Amgen Inc. v. Connecticut Ret. Plans & Tr. Funds, 568 U.S. 455, 460, 133 S. Ct. 1184, 185 L. Ed. 2d 308 (2013); Sykes v. Mel S. Harris & Assocs. LLC, 780 F.3d 70, 80 (2d Cir. 2015). In addition to the explicit requirements of Rule 23\(a\), the class must satisfy the implied requirement of ascertainability. In re Petrobras Sec., 862 F.3d 250, 266 (2d Cir. 2017). "Rule 23 does not set forth a mere pleading standard." Dukes, 564 U.S. at 350. "The party seeking class certification must affirmatively demonstrate . . . compliance with the Rule, and a district court may only certify a class if it is satisfied, after a rigorous analysis, that the requirements of Rule 23 are met." In re Am. Int'l Grp., Inc. Sec. Litig., 689 F.3d at 237-38 (quotation marks and citations omitted); see also [*51] Myers v. Hertz Corp., 624 F.3d 537, 547 (2d Cir. 2010) ("The party seeking class certification bears the burden [**181] of establishing by a preponderance of the evidence that each of Rule 23's requirements has been met." (citations omitted)).

Assessment of class certification in the settlement context invokes a "responsibility imposed upon [the courts] to exercise independent judgment for the protection of class absentees." In re Traffic Exec. Ass'n-E. Railroads, 627 F.2d at 634 (citation omitted). Under Supreme Court guidance, consideration of problems that would occur in managing the class are relaxed in the settlement context, while the other requirements of Rule 23 must receive undiluted, if not heightened, scrutiny, even where a proposed settlement has been deemed fair, reasonable and adequate:

Confronted with a request for settlement-only class certification, a district court need not inquire whether the case, if tried, would present intractable management problems . . . for the proposal is that there be no trial. But other specifications of the Rule — those designed to protect absentees by blocking unwarranted or overbroad class definitions — demand undiluted, even heightened, attention in the settlement context. Such attention is of vital importance, for a court asked to certify a settlement class will lack the opportunity, present when a case is litigated, to [**182] adjust the class, informed by the proceedings as they unfold.

Amchem Prod., Inc., 521 U.S. at 620 (citations omitted); see also In re Literary Works, 654 F.3d 242 ("When a court is asked to certify a class and approve its settlement in one proceeding, the class-certification rule requirements designed to protect absent class members demand undiluted, even heightened, attention."); Denney, 443 F.3d at 270 ("Before certification is proper for any purpose — settlement, litigation, or otherwise — a court must ensure that the requirements of Rule 23\(a\) and \(b\) have been met. These requirements should not be watered down by virtue of the fact that the settlement is fair or equitable." (citing In re Ephedra Products Liab. Litig., 231 F.R.D. 167, 169-70 (S.D.N.Y. 2005))); Amchem Prod., Inc., 521 U.S. at 620 n.16 (disapproving a settlement class in a multi-party asbestos litigation and noting that "[s]ettlement, though a relevant factor, does not inevitably signal that class-action certification should be granted more readily than it would be were the case to be litigated."). Nevertheless, "[t]he Second Circuit has emphasized that Rule 23 should be given liberal rather than restrictive construction, and it seems beyond peradventure that the Second Circuit's general preference is for granting rather than denying class certification." Espinoza v. 953 Assocs. LLC, 280 F.R.D. 113, 124 (S.D.N.Y. 2011) (quoting Gortat v. Capala Bros., Inc., 257 F.R.D. 353, 361 (E.D.N.Y. 2009), aff'd, 568 F. App'x 78 (2d Cir. 2014)).

In issuing the January 24, 2019 Order, the Court concluded for the [**183] following reasons, that based on the record before it, it will likely be able to certify the proposed class at the final approval stage.

i. Rule 23(a) requirements

The Court first addresses whether Class Plaintiffs have presented sufficient information to suggest that the Court will likely be able to "certify the class for purposes of judgment on the proposal" under the explicit Rule 23(a) requirements of numerosity, commonality, typicality, and adequacy of representation, and the implied factor of ascertainability.

1. Numerosity

In order to proceed as a class action, the class must be "so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(1). "[N]umerosity is presumed at a level of [forty] members." Consol. Rail Corp. v. Town of Hyde Park, 47 F.3d 473, 483 (2d Cir. 1995).

Class Plaintiffs have satisfied the numerosity requirement. At the time of the final approval hearing in 2013, "class counsel reported that the class was composed of about 12 million merchants." Interchange Fees II, 827 F.3d at 235. The proposed class still consists of "millions of [m]erchants." (TAC ¶ 4.)

[*52] 2. Commonality

Under Rule 23(a)(2), there must be "questions of law or fact common to the class." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(2); see also Marisol A. v. Giuliani, 126 F.3d 372, 376 (2d Cir. 1997) ("The commonality requirement is met if plaintiffs' grievances share a common question of law or fact."). A question is common if it is "capable [**184] of classwide resolution — which means that determination of its truth or falsity will resolve an issue that is central to the validity of each one of the claims in one stroke." Dukes, 564 U.S. at 350. "[I]t is not enough to raise questions at such a high level of generality that they become common to the class." Tart v. Lions Gate Entm't Corp., 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 139266, 2015 WL 5945846, at *2 (citing Dukes, 564 U.S. at 350). Instead, plaintiffs must demonstrate "the capacity of a classwide proceeding to generate common answers apt to drive the resolution" of the case. Dukes, 564 U.S. at 350.

"Commonality requires the plaintiff to demonstrate that the class members have suffered the same injury." Id. at 349-50. "The claims for relief need not be identical for them to be common," instead, "Rule 23(a)(2) simply requires that there be issues whose resolution will affect all or a significant number of the putative class members. Where the same conduct or practice by the same defendant gives rise to the same kind of claims from all class members, there is a common question." Johnson v. Nextel Commc'n Inc., 780 F.3d 128, 137 (2d Cir. 2015) (citations and quotation marks omitted). "Even a single common legal or factual question will suffice" to prove commonality. Dukes, 564 U.S. at 357; Freeland v. AT&T Corp., 238 F.R.D. 130, 140 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) (citing In re Agent Orange Prod. Liab., 818 F.2d 145, 166-67 (2d Cir. 1987)). "Numerous courts have held that allegations concerning the existence, scope, and efficacy of an alleged antitrust conspiracy present important common [**185] questions sufficient to satisfy the commonality requirement of Rule 23(a)(2)." In re Platinum & Palladium Commodities Litig., No. 10-CV-3617, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 96457, 2014 WL 3500655, at *9 (S.D.N.Y. July 15, 2014) (quoting In re NASDAQ Mkt.-Makers Antitrust Litig., 169 F.R.D. 493, 509 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) (collecting cases)).

In their original class certification briefing, Defendants did not contest the issue of commonality. (See Redacted Defs. Corrected. Mem. of Law in Opp'n to Pls. Mot. for Class Certification Docket Entry No. 1166; Class Certification Hrg Tr. 45:1, Docket Entry No. 1406 ("the defendants do not contest commonality").) Class Plaintiffs' overarching claims are that the Defendants conspired to fix prices and impose supracompetitive interchange fees on merchants that accept Visa and Mastercard debit and credit cards, and through certain anticompetitive restrictions, have prevented those merchants from protecting themselves. Thus, Class Plaintiffs represent a putative class that has suffered an alleged common harm: payment of supracompetitive interchange fees. Unlike in Dukes, where the class plaintiffs failed to show that the defendant, Wal-Mart, had a uniform discrimination policy,

Class Plaintiffs point to specific policies and rules that they allege causes them uniform harm, such as the setting of default interchange fees, honor-all-card rules, and anti-steering restraints.<sup>47</sup> (See TAC ¶ 170 [**186] (citing to Visa and Mastercard's honor-all-card rules that they enforce on merchants); id. ¶ 177 (citing to Visa and Mastercard's prior no-surcharge rules).)

Although even a single common question is sufficient, Class Plaintiffs identify several questions that are common to the putative class, and that would generate common answers, including whether Visa and Mastercard, and their respective member banks, including the Bank Defendants, (1) collectively fixed and set interchange fees in violation [*53] of antitrust law; (2) collectively imposed anti-steering rules that disincentivized merchants from steering paying customers to other payment methods, thereby protecting Defendants from competitive pressure to lower interchange fees; and (3) continued the alleged behavior after becoming publicly-owned corporations. (See Mem. in Supp. of Mot. for Prelim. Approval 27-28.) If this case were to proceed to trial, these questions would need to be determined on a classwide basis, regardless of how each merchant was individually affected.

In addition, the putative class members' injuries raise common questions because they derive from a unitary course of alleged conduct, specifically, [**187] that Defendants collectively fixed suprareactive interchange fees, and collectively imposed and enforced rules and restrictions on merchants. See In re Air Cargo Shipping Servs. Antitrust Litig., No. 06-MD-1175, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 180914, 2014 WL 7882100, at *30 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 15, 2014), report and recommendation adopted, No. 06-MD-1775, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 90402, 2015 WL 5093503 (E.D.N.Y. July 10, 2015) (citation omitted) (noting that common questions "are often present where there are legal or factual disputes pertaining to the defendants' 'unitary course of conduct,' since such questions tend to give rise to answers that are broadly applicable to the entire class."); see also Sykes, 780 F.3d at 84 (upholding the district court's decision that the commonality requirement was satisfied where the district court found that "plaintiffs' injuries derive from defendants' alleged unitary course of conduct" of fraudulently procuring default judgments). Further, resolving the question of whether Defendants collectively set these fees would "resolve an issue that is central to the validity of each one of the claims in one stroke." Dukes, 564 U.S. at 350.

The questions that Class Plaintiffs raise are fundamental to both the outcome of the case, and would generate common answers that would assist in determining the resolution of Class Plaintiffs' claims. The Court will likely find that commonality [**188] is met at the final approval stage.

3. Typicality

The typicality prong of Rule 23(a)(3) requires that "the claims or defenses of the representative parties [be] typical of the claims or defenses of the class." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(3). The typicality requirement "is satisfied when each class member's claim arises from the same course of events and each class member makes similar legal arguments to prove the defendant's liability." Shahriar v. Smith & Wollensky Rest. Grp., Inc., 659 F.3d 234, 252 (2d Cir. 2011) (quoting Robidoux v. Celani, 987 F.2d 931, 936 (2d Cir. 1993)); In re Flag Telecom Holdings, Ltd. Sec. Litig., 574 F.3d 29, 35 (2d Cir. 2009). "The commonality and typicality requirements often 'tend to merge into one another, so that similar considerations animate analysis' of both." Brown v. Kelly, 609 F.3d 467, 475 (2d Cir. 2010) (quoting Marisol A., 126 F.3d at 376). "The purpose of typicality is to ensure that class representatives have the incentive to prove all the elements of the cause of action which would be presented by the individual members of the class were they initiating individualized actions." Floyd v. City of New York, 283 F.R.D. 153, 175 (S.D.N.Y. 2012) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). "Since the claims only need to share the same essential characteristics, and need not be identical, the typicality requirement is not highly demanding." In re Platinum &

---

<sup>47</sup> In Dukes, the Supreme Court found that the class plaintiffs alleging discrimination on the basis of gender did not satisfy the commonality requirement of Rule 23(a)(2), because they had not offered evidence that Wal-Mart operated under a policy of discrimination. Dukes, 564 U.S. at 355 ("The only corporate policy that the plaintiffs' evidence convincingly establishes is Wal-Mart's 'policy' of allowing discretion by local supervisors over employment matters. On its face, of course, that is just the opposite of a uniform employment practice that would provide the commonality needed for a class action.").

Palladium Commodities Litig., 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 96457, 2014 WL 3500655, at *9 (quoting Bolanos v. Norwegian Cruise Lines Ltd., 212 F.R.D. 144, 155 (S.D.N.Y. 2002)).

The Court will likely find that the typicality requirement is met at the final approval stage. Class Plaintiffs allege, on behalf of the putative class, that they were harmed [**189] by the same course of events — Defendants' unlawful price fixing of interchange fees and restraints of trade. See In re Air Cargo Shipping Servs. Antitrust Litig., 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 180914, 2014 WL 7882100, at *31 ("Here, the plaintiffs allege that the defendants engaged in a global conspiracy to fix prices, so it is nearly tautological that the class representatives will rely on the same factual and legal arguments to establish the defendants' liability."). The Class Plaintiffs all currently operate businesses that continue to accept payment by Visa and [*54] Mastercard credit and debit cards, and represent a diverse array of merchant and business interests. (See TAC ¶¶ 10-13, 15-18.) Although the Class Plaintiffs represent a diverse array of interests, they seek redress for the same type of harms due to the same course of conduct.

4. Adequate representation

For the reasons set forth in Section II.a.iii.1, supra, the Court will likely find that the Class Plaintiffs and Class Counsel have provided adequate representation to the Rule 23(b)(3) putative class.

5. Ascertainability

Rule 23(a) contains an implied requirement of ascertainability. In re Petrobras Sec., 862 F.3d at 266 ("Most circuit courts of appeals have recognized that Rule 23 contains an implicit threshold requirement that the members of a proposed class be readily identifiable, often characterized [**190] as an 'ascertainability' requirement."). Unlike other circuits, the Second Circuit does not have a "heightened" requirement of ascertainability — it only requires that a "class be defined using objective criteria that establish a membership with definite boundaries," and does not require "administrative feasibility" of identifying each class member based on that objective criteria. Id. (distinguishing the Second Circuit's approach to ascertainability from circuits with a heightened ascertainability requirement); Ebin v. Kangadis Food Inc., 297 F.R.D. 561, 567 (S.D.N.Y. 2014) ("The standard for ascertainability is 'not demanding' and is 'designed only to prevent the certification of a class whose membership is truly indeterminable.'" (quoting Gortat v. Capala Bros., Inc., 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35451, 2010 WL 1423018, at *2 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 9, 2010)); Charron v. Pinnacle Grp. N.Y. LLC, 269 F.R.D. 221, 229 (S.D.N.Y. 2010) ("To be ascertainable, the class must be 'readily identifiable, such that the court can determine who is in the class and, thus, bound by the ruling.'" (quoting McBean v. City of N.Y., 260 F.R.D. 120, 132-33 (S.D.N.Y. 2009)); In re Methyl Tertiary Butyl Ether ("MTBE") Prod. Liab. Litig., 209 F.R.D. 323, 337 (S.D.N.Y. 2002). "The ascertainability requirement, as defined in this Circuit, asks district courts to consider whether a proposed class is defined using objective criteria that establish a membership with definite boundaries." In re Petrobras Sec., 862 F.3d at 269.

The proposed class is defined using the objective criteria of merchants that have accepted [**191] Visa-and/or Mastercard-branded cards. (Superseding Settlement Agreement ¶ 4.) The membership's boundaries are definite in that the proposed class only includes merchants that accepted such cards during a defined period of time — January 1, 2004 through January 24, 2019, the date that the proposed class settlement received preliminary approval. Id. As a result, the Court will likely find that the ascertainability requirement is met at the final approval stage.

ii. Rule 23(b)(3) requirements

In addition to satisfying the Rule 23(a) requirements, certification must be appropriate under Rule 23(b). Comcast Corp. v. Behrend, 569 U.S. 27, 34, 133 S. Ct. 1426, 185 L. Ed. 2d 515 (2013). Certification under Rule 23(b)(3) requires both that (1) "questions of law or fact common to class members predominate over any questions affecting only individual members," and that (2) "a class action is superior to other available methods for fairly and efficiently adjudicating the controversy." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(b\)\(3\); Amgen Inc., 568 U.S. at 460; Sykes, 780 F.3d at 80.

Under Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) generally, matters pertinent to both of these requirements — that common questions predominate, and that a class action is superior — include:

- (A) the class members' interests in individually controlling the prosecution or defense of separate actions; (B) the extent and nature of any litigation concerning the controversy already begun [**192] by or against class members; (C) the desirability or undesirability of concentrating the litigation of the claims in the particular forum; and (D) the likely difficulties in managing a class action.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(b\)\(3\)\(A-D\). However, "[s]ome inquiries essential to litigation class certification are no longer problematic in the settlement context." In re Am. Int'l Grp., Inc. Sec. Litig., 689 F.3d at 239 (quoting [*55] Sullivan v. DB Invs., Inc., 667 F.3d 273, 335 \(3d Cir. 2011\) (Scirica, J., concurring) (citing Amchem Prod., Inc., 521 U.S. at 620)). As noted in Section II.b, supra, in the class settlement context, a district court "need not inquire whether the case, if tried, would present intractable management problems, for the proposal is that there be no trial." Amchem Prod., Inc., 521 U.S. at 620 (citing Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(b\)\(3\)\(D\)).

1. Predominance

"The 'predominance inquiry tests whether proposed classes are sufficiently cohesive to warrant adjudication by representation.'" Tyson Foods, Inc. v. Bouaphakeo, 136 S. Ct. 1036, 1045, 194 L. Ed. 2d 124 \(2016\) (quoting Amchem Prod., Inc., 521 U.S. at 623). According to the Supreme Court:

This calls upon courts to give careful scrutiny to the relation between common and individual questions in a case. An individual question is one where "members of a proposed class will need to present evidence that varies from member to member," while a common question is one where "the same evidence will suffice for each member to make a prima facie showing [or] the issue [**193] is susceptible to generalized, class-wide proof."

Id. (quoting 2 Newberg on Class Actions § 4:50 at 196-97 (5th ed. 2012)).

Predominance is satisfied "if resolution of some of the legal or factual questions that qualify each class member's case as a genuine controversy can be achieved through generalized proof, and if these particular issues are more substantial than the issues subject only to individualized proof." Roach v. T.L. Cannon Corp., 778 F.3d 401, 405 \(2d Cir. 2015\) (internal quotation marks omitted) (quoting UFCW Local 1776 v. Eli Lilly & Co., 620 F.3d 121, 131 \(2d Cir. 2010\)). Typically, common issues predominate when liability is determinable on a class-wide basis, even where class members have individualized damages. See In re Visa Check/MasterMoney Antitrust Litig., 280 F.3d at 139; see also Tyson Foods, Inc., 136 S. Ct. at 1045 ("When 'one or more of the central issues in the action are common to the class and can be said to predominate, the action may be considered proper under Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) even though other important matters will have to be tried separately, such as damages . . . .'" (citing 7AA C. Wright, A. Miller, & M. Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1778 at 123-24 (3d ed. 2005) (footnotes omitted))).

While more demanding than commonality, Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) "does not require a plaintiff seeking class certification to prove that each elemen[t] of [her] claim [is] susceptible to classwide proof." Amgen Inc., 568 U.S. at 468 (citations and internal quotation [**194] marks omitted) (emphasis and alterations in original). Instead, a class plaintiff is only required to show that "questions common to the class predominate, [and] not that those questions will be answered, on the merits, in favor of the class." Id. at 459. Thus, Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) contemplates the presence of individual questions as long as those questions do not predominate over the common questions which affect the class as a whole. Sykes, 780 F.3d at 81-82 (citing Messner v. Northshore Univ. HealthSystem, 669 F.3d 802, 815 \(7th Cir. 2012\)). "If the most substantial issues in controversy will be resolved by reliance primarily upon common proof, class certification will generally achieve the economies of litigation that Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) envisions." In re Air Cargo Shipping Servs. Antitrust Litig., 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 180914, 2014 WL 7882100, at \*36.

"While predominance may be difficult to demonstrate in mass tort cases, such as Amchem, in which the 'individual stakes are high and disparities among class members great,' it is a 'test readily met in certain cases alleging consumer or securities fraud or violations of the antitrust laws.'" In re Am. Int'l Grp., Inc. Sec. Litig., 689 F.3d at 240 (quoting Amchem Prod., Inc., 521 U.S. at 625). In the context of antitrust class actions, "allegations of the existence of a price-fixing conspiracy are susceptible to common proof . . ." In re Air Cargo Shipping Servs. Antitrust Litig., 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 180914, 2014 WL 7882100 at *37 (quoting Cordes, 502 F.3d at 105).

[*56] In addition, "the predominance inquiry will sometimes be easier to satisfy in the settlement context." In re Am. Int'l Grp., Inc. Sec. Litig., 689 F.3d at 241; see also In re Petrobras Secs. Litig., 317 F. Supp. 3d 858, 870 (S.D.N.Y. 2018) ("[T]he [*195] predominance requirement differs between trial and settlement." (citation omitted)). Because predominance and manageability overlap, "the existence of a settlement that eliminates manageability problems can alter the outcome of the predominance analysis." In re Am. Int'l Grp., Inc. Sec. Litig., 689 F.3d at 242 (citing In re Initial Pub. Offering Sec. Litig., 226 F.R.D. 186, 195 n.51 (S.D.N.Y. 2005)); In re Nat. Football League Players' Concussion Injury Litig., 307 F.R.D. 351, 380 (E.D. Pa. 2015) ("[S]ettlement itself allows common issues to predominate. [C]ourts are more inclined to find the predominance test met in the settlement context." (second alteration in original) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted)); see also 2 Newberg on Class Actions § 4:63 (5th ed. 2018) ("in settlement class actions, because manageability need not be a concern, predominance — the main focus of manageability — recedes in importance as well . . . Courts therefore regularly certify settlement classes that might not have been certifiable for trial purposes because of manageability concerns.").

For example, in In re Am. Int'l Grp., Inc. Sec. Litig., the Second Circuit vacated a district court's denial of class certification in a preliminary approval decision. 689 F.3d at 241. There, the district court had held that a settlement class of securities purchasers had to satisfy the fraud-on-the-market presumption — which in the context of a litigation [*196] class would spare the plaintiffs from having to prove individual reliance on misrepresentations — in order to demonstrate predominance. In re Am. Int'l Grp., Inc. Sec. Litig., 689 F.3d at 241. In reaching its holding, the district court had relied upon a class certification decision from a Second Circuit litigation case rather than a settlement case. Id. at 241-42. In reversing the decision, the Second Circuit concluded that in the settlement context, failure to satisfy the fraud-on-the-market presumption did "not necessarily preclude a finding of predominance." Id. at 242-43.

Class Plaintiffs raise numerous common questions that are essential to the claims of all putative class members, including whether Defendants conspired to engage in anticompetitive price fixing of interchange fees, and enforced rules and policies that hindered the introduction of competition that would reduce the interchange fees. (See Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval 36 (citing Pls. Mem. of Law in Supp. of Class Pls. Mot. for Class Certification, Docket Entry No. 1165).) For many of the common questions that Class Plaintiffs raise, "the same evidence will suffice for each [class] member" in proving antitrust violation and injury.<sup>48</sup> Tyson Foods, Inc., 136 S. Ct. at 1045 (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). In [*197] particular, the question of whether Defendants conspired to collectively impose and fix interchange fees is a common question that requires generalized proof to answer — common

<sup>48</sup> Class Counsel asserts that the following issues associated with Class Plaintiffs claims present common questions that would rely on class-wide evidence:

- (1) whether Defendants' conspired to fix and impose interchange fees, including whether Defendants require merchants to pay fixed interchange so as to fix the price of card acceptance services at supra-competitive levels; (2) whether Class Plaintiffs' price-fixing claims would be analyzed under the per se rule or the rule of reason; (3) whether the imposition [*198] of the anti-steering rules insulated fixed interchange fees from competitive pressure; (4) the anticompetitive effects and procompetitive effects, if any, of Defendants' conduct; (5) the relevant market; (6) whether Defendants had market power; (7) whether Defendants willfully maintained monopoly power; (8) whether the restructuring agreements that resulted in Mastercard's and Visa's initial public offerings, and the IPOs themselves, are antitrust violations; (9) whether the NaBanco decision applies to the claims in this case; and (10) whether the Illinois Brick indirect purchaser doctrine is a defense to Plaintiffs' claims.

(Mem. in Supp. of Prelim. Approval 36-37 (internal citations omitted) (citing Pls. Mem. of Law in Supp. of Class Pls. Mot. for Class Certification).)

evidence for all class members would be needed to prove a conspiracy to fix interchange fees. See Cordes, 502 F.3d at 107 (finding that "[b]ecause each class member allegedly suffered the same type of injury," i.e., overcharges paid in a [*57] price-fixing conspiracy, "the legal question of whether such an injury is 'of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful,' is a common one." (quoting Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-Brunswick Corp., 429 U.S. 477, 489, 97 S. Ct. 690, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701 (1977)); In re LIBOR-Based Fin. Instruments Antitrust Litig., 299 F. Supp. 3d 430, 590 (S.D.N.Y 2018) (concluding that "the existence of a conspiracy is a common question" and noting that Defendants did not dispute that the existence of a price-fixing conspiracy was susceptible to common proof).

Although individual class members would be impacted to different degrees by the alleged behavior, these individual issues, such as differences in individual damages assessments, are largely minimized in the settlement context. The common questions in this action appear to predominate over individual questions regarding the individual effect of such a conspiracy because the general proof needed to answer those questions — for example, the existence of the alleged conspiracy — is far more essential than the individualized proof necessary to determine individual harm. [**199] See generally In re NASDAQ Mkt.-Makers Antitrust Litig., 169 F.R.D. at 518 ("Courts repeatedly have held that the existence of a conspiracy is the predominant issue in price fixing cases, warranting certification of the class even where significant individual issues are present."). As noted supra, the Court need not consider aspects of manageability in the settlement context, which erases concerns that might otherwise be considered in a predominance analysis, and makes a finding of predominance more likely. See, e.g., Amgen Inc., 568 U.S. at 470 (upholding class certification in a securities action "[b]ecause the question of materiality is common to the class"); In re Petrobras Sec. Litig., 317 F. Supp. 3d at 870 (preliminarily certifying a settlement class in a securities action where all plaintiffs "claim[ed] injury by reason of the same conduct, defendants' purported misrepresentations and omissions [were] common to all, plaintiffs' proof of intent would not differ between class members, and all class members . . . suffered an identical kind of injury"); Mayhew v. KAS Direct, LLC, No. 16-CV-698, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 106680, 2018 WL 3122059, at \*6 \(S.D.N.Y. June 26, 2018\) (preliminarily certifying a settlement class in a consumer products case and finding that "issues of proof regarding whether defendants' product labeling was false and misleading and would have deceived a reasonable consumer are common to all members of the class, [**200] and predominate over any issues any individual class member may have"); In re Initial Pub. Offering Sec. Litig., 226 F.R.D. at 195 n.51 (noting that "[i]n this case, the removal of [the manageability] factor from consideration alleviates the predominance defect").

For these reasons, the Court will likely find that common questions predominate at the final approval stage.

2. Superiority

A class action may be maintained under Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) if a class action is "superior to other available methods for fairly and efficiently adjudicating the controversy." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(b\)\(3\). To satisfy the superiority requirement, the moving party must show that the class action presents economies of "time, effort and expense, and promote[s] uniformity of decision." In re U.S. Foodservice Inc. Pricing Litig., 729 F.3d 108, 130 (2d Cir. 2013). The superiority requirement is designed to avoid "repetitious litigation and possibility of inconsistent adjudications." In re Air Cargo Shipping Servs. Antitrust Litig., 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 180914, 2014 WL 7882100, at *64 (citing D'Alauro v. GC Servs. Ltd. P'ship, 168 F.R.D. 451, 458 (E.D.N.Y. 1996)).

Individual trials for a putative class of millions of members under any circumstance, but especially after thirteen years of litigation, would be far less efficient, and far more costly and repetitious than continuing to proceed as a class action. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(b\)\(3\) (stating that "the extent and nature of any litigation concerning the controversy already begun by or against class members" is pertinent to the superiority [**201] determination). The Court finds that the superiority requirement will likely be met at the final approval stage.

[*58] In sum, for the foregoing reasons, the Court finds that under Rules 23\(a\) and 23\(b\)\(3\), that preliminary certification of the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) settlement class, for the purposes of settlement only, is warranted because the Court will likely be able to certify the class at the final approval stage.

c. Appointment of Class Counsel

When a district court certifies a class, it must appoint class counsel. In doing so, a court must consider:

- (i) the work counsel has done in identifying or investigating potential claims in the action; (ii) counsel's experience in handling class actions, other complex litigation, and the types of claims asserted in the action; (iii) counsel's knowledge of the applicable law; and (iv) the resources that counsel will commit to representing the class.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1)(A)(i–iv).

For the reasons set forth in Sections II.a.iii.1 and II.a.iii.2, supra, the Court finds that to date, the Robins Group has fairly and adequately represented the putative class in accordance with Rule 23\(g\). The Robins Group was first appointed as co-lead Interim Class Counsel over a decade ago, (Wildfang Decl. ¶ 24), and has been deemed competent [\[\*\*202\]](#) by this Court numerous times. The Court, in the January 24, 2019 Order, therefore appointed Robins Kaplan LLP, Berger & Montague P.C., and Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd LLP to serve as Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) Class Counsel.

d. Notice Plan and Plan of Allocation and Distribution

Class Counsel submitted for the Court's review a Notice Plan and two Notices — a short "Publication Notice," and a Long Form Notice. (Notice Plan; Revised Class Notices.)

Once a court has determined that "giving notice is justified by the parties' showing that the court will likely be able to" approve the proposed settlement and certify the class, the court "must direct notice in a reasonable manner to all class members who would be bound by the proposal . . ." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(e\)\(1\)\(B\)\(i–ii\). "For any class certified under Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) — or upon ordering notice under Rule 23\(e\)\(1\) to a class proposed to be certified for purposes of settlement under Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) — the court must direct to class members the best notice that is practicable under the circumstances." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23\(c\)\(2\)\(B\). This includes "individual notice to all members who can be identified through reasonable effort." Id. Notice may be made by "United States mail, electronic mean, or other appropriate means," and:

must clearly and concisely state in plain, easily [\[\*\*203\]](#) understood language: (i) the nature of the action; (ii) the definition of the class certified; (iii) the class claims, issues, or defenses; (iv) that a class member may enter an appearance through an attorney if the member so desires; (v) that the court will exclude from the class any member who requests exclusion; (vi) the time and manner for requesting exclusion; and (vii) the binding effect of a class judgment on members under Rule 23\(c\)\(3\).

Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B)(i–vii).

"The standard for the adequacy of a settlement notice in a class action under either the Due Process Clause or the Federal Rules is measured by reasonableness." Wal-Mart Stores, 396 F.3d at 113–14 (citations omitted). "[N]otice must fairly apprise the prospective members of the class of the terms of the proposed settlement and of the options that are open to them in connection with the proceeding." Id. at 114 (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). In addition, notice "is adequate if it may be understood by the average class member." Id. (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). "There are no rigid rules for determining whether a settlement notice to the class satisfies constitutional or Rule 23\(e\) requirements." Charron v. Pinnacle Grp. N.Y. LLC, 874 F. Supp. 2d 179, 191 \(S.D.N.Y. 2012\), aff'd sub nom. Charron, 731 F.3d 241.

"Courts in this Circuit have explained that a Rule 23 Notice will satisfy due [\[\*\*204\]](#) process when it 'describe[s] the terms of the settlement generally,' " "inform[s] the class about the allocation of attorneys' fees, and provide[s] specific information regarding the date, time, and place of the final approval hearing." Id. at 191 (alteration in original) (first citing [\[\*59\]](#) In re Michael Milken & Assocs. Sec. Litig., 150 F.R.D. 57, 60 \(S.D.N.Y. 1993\); and then citing *Clark v. Ecolab Inc., Nos. 07-CV-8623, 04-CV-4488, and 06-CV-5672, 2009 WL 6615729, at \*6, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 108736, at \*22 \(S.D.N.Y. Nov. 17, 2009\)*.

Both the Publication Notice and the Long Form Notice satisfy each of the Rule 23\(c\)\(2\)\(B\) requirements and adequately notify class members of the proposed settlement. The Publication Notice describes basic information in plain, clear terms, including the class claims, the class definition, potential attorneys' fees and expense awards, the date and location of the final approval fairness hearing, and merchant rights including opt-out and objection rights. (See Revised Class Notices, G1-1 to G1-5.) The Long Form Notice includes frequently asked questions and the full text of the release. (See Revised Class Notices, G2-4 to G2-24.) The Court therefore finds the Class Notices to be sufficient and reasonable. See *Hall v. ProSource Techs., LLC, No. 14-CV-2502, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 53791, 2016 WL 1555128, at \*5 \(E.D.N.Y. Apr. 11, 2016\)* (finding notice sufficient where the notice and claim form "described essential and relevant information in plain terms, including . . . [**205] . the terms of the Settlement Agreement . . . and the various rights of potential class members, such as the right to opt out of the Settlement Class or object to the instant Final Approval Motion.").

The Court also finds reasonable the manner in which the notices will be provided. The "Long Form Notice will be sent via First Class mail," and "an Email Notice will also be sent" to available email addresses. (Decl. of Cameron R. Azari, Esq. on Proposed Settlement Class Notice Program ("Azari Decl.") ¶ 13, annexed to Superseding Settlement Agreement as App. F.) To determine who will receive individualized notice, the Class Administrator "will work with the settling parties to develop a notice database using the extensive database developed for the proposed 2012 settlement, combined with additional data provided by Visa and MasterCard, and 2013-forward acquirer records."<sup>49</sup> (Azari Decl. ¶ 23.) During the first attempt to certify the class, "[t]he Class Administrator notified class members of the terms of the proposed settlement through a mailed notice and publication campaign that included more than 20 million mailings and publication in more than 400 publications." *Interchange Fees I, 986 F. Supp. 2d at 217.*

The same website that was used in the prior settlement process — www.PaymentCardSettlement.com — will be maintained as the case website and contain relevant deadlines and documents, including the Superseding Settlement Agreement, the Long Form Notice, and "all papers filed in connection with the motions for approval of the class settlement and any motions for attorneys' fees, expenses, or service awards, and answers to frequently asked questions (FAQs)." (Azari Decl. ¶ 49.) The website will be available in English, Spanish, Chinese, Japanese, Korean, Russian, Thai, and Vietnamese, (id.), and is listed in both Notices as a resource. (See, e.g., Revised Class Notices G1-2, G2-1.)

The only objections to the Notice Plan were filed by the Branded Operators. Because of the existence of exclusion lists, the Branded Operators warned that there would be a "failure to notify" hundreds of class members, and expressed concern that the Branded Operators' rights to participate in the class would be excluded "without even providing these class members with notice that identifies them as excluded." (Mem. in Opp'n [**207] to Prelim. Approval 5, 21; see generally *id. at 19-21.*) The Court has addressed these objections. First, at the hearing, Class Counsel assured the Court that the Branded Operators would in fact receive notice. (Hrg Tr. 9:1-9:13; id. at 9:5-9:7 (clarifying that "[t]he exclusion list isn't to exclude [potential class members] from getting notice; it would be potentially down the road that [potential [*60] class members] may not be able to make a claim from the settlement fund.").) Second, the Court further requested that Class Counsel send notice of exclusion to persons, businesses, or other entities found on any exclusion list. (Id. at 13:9-13:18; see also Notice of Exclusion; Prelim. Approval Order ¶¶ 12, 15.) Third, "a Long Form Notice will be mailed to all persons who request one via the toll-free phone number or by mail or email." (Azari Decl. ¶ 26.)

---

<sup>49</sup> In addition to individualized notice, notice will be published in targeted language publications, general media, newspaper, and business publications, including, among other locations, the New York Times, Forbes [**206], the Wall Street Journal, National Geographic, Sports Illustrated, People, and People en Español. (Azari Decl. ¶¶ 29-35.) "The combined, measured media notice effort is estimated to reach 80.4% all U.S. Adults aged 18+ with an average frequency of 2.8 times, 84.2% of all US Business Owners with an average frequency of 3.2 times; and 84.4% of all US Adults in Business and Finance Occupations, with an average frequency of 3.4 times." (Id. ¶ 22.) Banner advertisements will also be placed on websites. (Id. ¶¶ 36-42.)

For the foregoing reasons the Court found the Notice Plan and proposed Class Notices to be reasonable and constitute "the best notice that is practicable under the circumstances." See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B). In the January 24, 2019 Order, the Court therefore approved the method of notice to be provided to the Rule 23(b)(3) class members as set forth in the Notice Plan, and approved [**208] the Class Notices. The Court also approved Epiq Systems, Inc. as the Settlement Administrator to perform duties in accordance with the Superseding Settlement Agreement.

e. Final approval procedure

The Court has set forth a schedule with deadlines for the mailing and publication of the Class Notices and the notice of exclusion, exclusion and opt out requests, submission of written statements of objection, submission of notices of intention to appear at the final approval hearing, submission of motions for class settlement final approval, filing of the Class Administrator report, submission of responses to objections, and the final approval hearing. (See Prelim. Approval Order.)

The Court will hold the final approval hearing at 10:00 AM on Thursday, November 7, 2019.

III. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, on January 24, 2019, the Court preliminarily approved the Superseding Settlement Agreement and preliminarily granted class certification for the purposes of settlement, appointed Class Counsel and the Class Administrator, and approved the proposed Notice Plan, Class Notices, and Plan of Administration and Distribution.

Brooklyn, New York

Dated: January 28, 2019

SO ORDERED:

/s/ MKB

MARGO K. [**209] BRODIE

United States District Judge

---

End of Document

Westinghouse Air Brake Techs. Corp. v. Siemens Mobility, Inc.

United States District Court for the District of Delaware

January 29, 2019, Decided; January 29, 2019, Filed

Civil Action No. 17-1687-LPS-CJB

Reporter

330 F.R.D. 143 *; 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14849 **; 2019 WL 359220

WESTINGHOUSE AIR BRAKE TECHNOLOGIES CORPORATION (d/b/a WABTEC CORPORATION), Plaintiff, v. SIEMENS MOBILITY, INC., Defendant.

Prior History: Westinghouse Air Brake Techs. Corp. v. Siemens Indus., 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129670 \(D. Del., Aug. 2, 2018\)

Core Terms

---

Counterclaims, patent, antitrust, sever, patent infringement, occurrence, factors, infringes, judicial economy, question of law, allegations, technology, discovery, parties, amend

Counsel: [**1] For Westinghouse Air Brake Technologies Corporation, doing business as Wabtec Corporation, Plaintiff: Steven L. Caponi, LEAD ATTORNEY, K&L Gates LLP, Wilmington, DE; Alan L. Barry, PRO HAC VICE; John M. Majoras, PRO HAC VICE; Kathleen Wallace, PRO HAC VICE; Laura D. Gradel, PRO HAC VICE.

For Siemens Mobility Inc., Defendant: Karen Jacobs, LEAD ATTORNEY, Stephen J. Kraftschik, Morris, Nichols, Arsh & Tunnell LLP, Wilmington, DE; Chahira Solh, PRO HAC VICE; Jacob Z. Zambrzycki, PRO HAC VICE; John S. Gibson, PRO HAC VICE; Kent A. Gardiner, PRO HAC VICE; Sima Namiri-Kalantari, PRO HAC VICE.

For Westinghouse Air Brake Technologies Corporation, Counter Defendant: Stephen J. Kraftschik, Morris, Nichols, Arsh & Tunnell LLP, Wilmington, DE.

For Siemens Mobility Inc., Counter Claimant: Karen Jacobs, LEAD ATTORNEY, Stephen J. Kraftschik, Morris, Nichols, Arsh & Tunnell LLP, Wilmington, DE; Jacob Z. Zambrzycki; Stephen J. Kraftschik.

For Westinghouse Air Brake Technologies Corporation, Counter Defendant: Steven L. Caponi, LEAD ATTORNEY, K&L Gates LLP, Wilmington, DE; Alan L. Barry; John M. Majoras; Kathleen Wallace; Laura D. Gradel.

Judges: Christopher J. Burke, UNITED STATES MAGISTRATE JUDGE.

Opinion by: Christopher [**2] J. Burke

Opinion

---

[*145] MEMORANDUM ORDER

Presently pending before the Court in this patent infringement case is Plaintiff Westinghouse Air Brake Technologies Corporation's ("Plaintiff" or "Wabtec") motion seeking severance of certain of Defendant Siemens Mobility, Inc.'s ("Defendant" or "Siemens") counterclaims, pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 21. (D.I. 146) Siemens opposes the Motion. For the reasons set forth below, Plaintiff's Motion is GRANTED.

I. BACKGROUND

A. Procedural Background

On April 21, 2016, Siemens filed suit against Wabtec in this Court, alleging that Wabtec infringed a number of Siemens' patents concerning various aspects of positive train control ("PTC") technology. See Siemens Mobility Inc. v. Westinghouse Air Brake Technologies Corp. d/b/a/ Wabtec Corp., Civil Action No. 16-284-LPS (D. Del.) (hereafter, the "16-284 Action"). Thereafter, Wabtec filed counterclaims in the 16-284 Action, including counterclaims asserting that Siemens infringes the three asserted patents that are now at issue in the instant action: United States Patent Nos. 7,398,140 (the "140 Patent"), 8,175,764 (the "764 Patent") and 8,478,463 ("463 Patent") (the "asserted patents"). (D.I. 56, 16-284 Action) Siemens moved to sever those counterclaims from the 16-284 Action, and the Court granted Siemens' [**3] severance motion on August 17, 2017. Instead of re-filing the patent infringement allegations in an affirmative Complaint in this District, however, on September 8, 2017, Wabtec filed such a Complaint in the United [*146] States District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania ("Western District of Pennsylvania"). (D.I. 1 at ¶¶ 1, 21-23) That filing gave rise to the instant action. On September 19, 2017, Wabtec filed a First Amended Complaint, containing similar infringement allegations as to the three asserted patents. (D.I. 14)

Soon after, Siemens moved to transfer venue for the instant action back to this District. (D.I. 19) The Western District of Pennsylvania Court granted that transfer motion on November 20, 2017. (D.I. 34) On November 30, 2017, Chief Judge Leonard P. Stark referred the instant case to the Court to, inter alia, resolve any matters related to scheduling, and any motions to dismiss, stay or transfer venue. (D.I. 38) And on December 15, 2017, Siemens filed its Answer to the First Amended Complaint; that Answer included six counterclaims (all related to at least one of the asserted patents) that are not at issue with the instant Motion. (D.I. 42 at 17-29)

About seven [**4] months later, on July 19, 2018, Siemens filed a motion seeking leave to amend its counterclaims. This motion (the "motion to amend") sought to add four counterclaims alleging violations of U.S. antitrust law (the "antitrust counterclaims"), one alleging a violation of the Lanham Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1125(a)(1)(B), and one alleging a violation of the Delaware Deceptive Trade Practices Act, 6 Del. C. § 2531 et seq. ("DDTPA"), (together, the "Amended Counterclaims"). (D.I. 107 & exs. A-B) Wabtec opposed the motion to amend, but on October 3, 2018, Chief Judge Stark issued an order granting that motion. (D.I. 142) In doing so, Chief Judge Stark found that: (1) the motion to amend was not untimely; (2) Wabtec had not shown that the Amended Counterclaims were futile; and (3) the addition of the Amended Counterclaims to the instant case would not unfairly prejudice Wabtec as "their addition to this case, which still has ample time left for discovery, is more likely to promote the just, speedy, and relatively inexpensive resolution of the parties' disputes than would the initiation of yet another case between these parties." (Id.) Chief Judge Stark ruled that Wabtec "may, if it wishes, file a motion to sever under Rule 21, motion to dismiss [the Amended [**5] Counterclaims] under Rule 12, or particularized objections to requested discovery, but discovery on all claims and counterclaims will proceed unless and until any such motion is granted or other relief is ordered." (Id.)

Thereafter, on October 18, 2018, Wabtec filed the instant Motion seeking severance of the Amended Counterclaims, (D.I. 146), along with a motion seeking dismissal of the Amended Counterclaims ("the motion to dismiss"), (D.I. 148). Chief Judge Stark later referred the instant Motion to the Court for resolution, (D.I. 160), and briefing on the instant Motion was completed on November 12, 2018, (D.I. 168).<sup>1</sup>

B. Factual Background

---

<sup>1</sup> On October 30, 2018, Wabtec additionally filed a motion seeking a protective order and a stay of discovery regarding the Amended Counterclaims, pending resolution of the instant Motion and the motion to dismiss. (D.I. 156) The Court subsequently denied that motion on January 8, 2019. (D.I. 180)

Wabtec develops, manufactures and sells PTC technology, which is used to construct collision avoidance systems in trains. (D.I. 14 at ¶¶ 24-25) In 2008, Congress enacted the Rail Safety Improvement Act ("RSIA") which required all Class I railroads and passenger rail operators to implement a mandatory PTC collision avoidance system. (Id. at ¶ 25) Wabtec owns the asserted patents, which, as was previously noted above, are patents to aspects of PTC technology. (Id. at ¶¶ 21-23)

Siemens also develops, manufactures and sells PTC technology, specifically the Trainguard [**6] PTC system, which includes the Trainguard PTC Onboard Unit ("OBU"). (Id. at ¶¶ 59-60) With its affinuative patent claims here, Wabtec is asserting that Siemens directly, indirectly and willfully infringes the asserted patents by making, using, offering to sell, selling, and/or importing the Trainguard PTC and/or the Trainguard PTC OBU. (Id. at ¶¶ 87, 101, 115)

