

Date and Time: Tuesday, October 17, 2023 9:17:00 AM CST

Job Number: 208207595

Documents (100)

1. C.A. Westel de Venez. v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16857

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

2. Union Carbide Corp. v. Florida Power & Light Co., 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21203

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

3. Virtual Maintenance v. Prime Computer, 11 F.3d 660

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

4. Ashmore v. Northeast Petroleum Div., 843 F. Supp. 759

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

5. R.W. Int'l Corp. v. Welch Food, 13 F.3d 478

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

6. Stamatakis Indus. v. Beatrice Foods Co., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 550

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

7. Balaklaw v. Lovell, 14 F.3d 793

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

8. Davis v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13257

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

9. Appraisers Coalition v. Appraisal Inst., 845 F. Supp. 592

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

10. MCM Partners v. Boscarino, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1824

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022
11. Kabealo v. Huntington Nat'l Bank, 17 F.3d 822
Client/Matter: -None-
Search Terms: "antitrust law"
Search Type: Natural Language
Narrowed by:
Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022
12. TEC Cogeneration v. Florida Power & Light Co., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6313
Client/Matter: -None-
Search Terms: "antitrust law"
Search Type: Natural Language
Narrowed by:
Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022
13. Crown Homes, Inc. v. Landes, 22 Cal. App. 4th 1273
Client/Matter: -None-
Search Terms: "antitrust law"
Search Type: Natural Language
Narrowed by:
Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022
14. Phoenix Elec. Co. v. Nat'l Elec. Contrs. Ass'n, 867 F. Supp. 925
Client/Matter: -None-
Search Terms: "antitrust law"
Search Type: Natural Language
Narrowed by:
Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022
15. Sessions Tank Liners v. Joor Mfg., 17 F.3d 295
Client/Matter: -None-
Search Terms: "antitrust law"
Search Type: Natural Language
Narrowed by:
Content Type	Narrowed by
Cases	Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline: Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

16. New Orleans Pelicans Baseball, Inc. v. National Ass'n of Professional Baseball Leagues, Inc., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21468

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

17. Centennial Sch. Dist. v. Independence Blue Cross, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2098

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

18. Massachusetts Sch. of Law v. ABA, 846 F. Supp. 374

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

19. Sebastian Int'l, Inc. v. Longs Drug Stores Corp., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6632

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

20. Advanced Health-Care Servs. v. Giles Memorial Hosp., 846 F. Supp. 488

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

21. Hudson Motors Partnership v. Crest Leasing Enters., 845 F. Supp. 969

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

22. Servicetrends v. Siemens Medical Sys., 870 F. Supp. 1042

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

23. Carlson & Erickson Builders v. Lampert Yards, 183 Wis. 2d 220

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

24. THK Am., Inc. v. NSK, Ltd., 157 F.R.D. 660

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

25. Segura v. Abbott Labs., 873 S.W.2d 399

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

26. Caribe Bmw v. Bayerische Motoren Werke Aktiengesellschaft, 19 F.3d 745

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

27. Bell Atl. Business Sys. Servs. v. Hitachi Data Sys. Corp., 849 F. Supp. 702

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

28. Bieter Co. v. Blomquist, 848 F. Supp. 1446

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

29. Automotive Prods. PLC v. Tilton Eng'g, Inc., 855 F. Supp. 1101

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

30. Blackburn v. Sweeney, 850 F. Supp. 758

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

31. Mfrs. Life Ins. Co. v. Superior Court, 23 Cal. App. 4th 1629

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

32. In re Belmac Corp. Sec. Litig., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21584

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

33. Schueller v. Norman, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20969

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

34. Oki Distrib. v. Amana Refrigeration, Inc., 850 F. Supp. 637

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

35. American Agric. Movement v. Board of Trade, 848 F. Supp. 814

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

36. Ehredt Underground v. Commonwealth Edison Co., 848 F. Supp. 797

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Narrowed by

Cases

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

37. Panache Broad. v. Richardson Elecs., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4830

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

38. Thompson Everett, Inc. v. National Cable Advertising, L.P., 850 F. Supp. 470

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

39. State ex rel. Fisher v. Louis Trauth Dairy, 856 F. Supp. 1229

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

40. Seabury Management v. Professional Golfers' Ass'n of Am., 878 F. Supp. 771

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

41. Yeager's Fuel v. Pennsylvania Power & Light Co., 22 F.3d 1260

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

42. Breaux Bros. Farms v. Teche Sugar Co., 21 F.3d 83

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

43. Lee v. Life Ins. Co. of N. Am., 23 F.3d 14

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

44. Protectoseal Co. v. Barancik, 23 F.3d 1184

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

45. ACQUAIRE v. BEVERAGE, INC., 24 F.3d 401

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

46. Pastore v. Bell Tel. Co., 24 F.3d 508

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

47. DU-BRO FOODS INC. -against- ARON STREIT INC., et al., 1994 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 762

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

48. Maui Trucking v. Operating Eng'r's Local Union No. 3, 37 F.3d 436

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

49. Hairston v. Pacific-10 Conference, 893 F. Supp. 1485

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

50. Petrocco v. Dover Gen. Hosp. & Med. Ctr., 273 N.J. Super. 501

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

51. In re Brand Name Prescription Drugs Antitrust Litig., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7146

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

52. Massachusetts Sch. of Law v. American Bar Ass'n, 853 F. Supp. 843

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

53. Roth v. Rhodes, 25 Cal. App. 4th 530

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

54. K.M.B. Warehouse Distrib. v. Walker Mfg. Co., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7253

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

55. Nghiem v. NEC Elec., 25 F.3d 1437

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

56. Sullivan v. Tagliabue, 25 F.3d 43

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

57. Heisen v. Pacific Coast Bldg. Prods., 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 14332

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Narrowed by

Cases

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

58. Phoenix Bit & Tool v. Texaco, 879 S.W.2d 277

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

59. Advo, Inc. v. Philadelphia Newspapers, 854 F. Supp. 367

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

60. Breaux Bros. Farms, Inc. v. Teche Sugar Co., 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 40949

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

61. Poindexter v. American Bd. of Surgery, 911 F. Supp. 1510

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

62. Bond v. Cedar Rapids Television Co., 518 N.W.2d 352

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

63. Syscomm Int'l Corp. v. Synoptics Communications, 856 F. Supp. 135

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

64. Tice v. Hoff, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 16407

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

65. Diskin v. Daily Racing Form, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9129

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

66. Reiman v. Garcia, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 17195

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

67. National Basketball Ass'n v. Williams, 857 F. Supp. 1069

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

68. Morgenstern v. Wilson, 29 F.3d 1291

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

69. USS-POSCO Indus. v. Contra Costa County Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council, 31 F.3d 800

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

70. Manufacturers Life Ins. Co. v. Superior Court, 32 Cal. App. 4th 821

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

71. Roy B. Taylor Sales v. Hollymatic Corp., 28 F.3d 1379

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

72. Staudinger v. Educational Comm'n for Foreign Medical Graduates, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10580

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

73. Northlake Mktg. & Supply v. Glaverbel S.A., 861 F. Supp. 653

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

74. Valley Disposal v. Central Vt. Solid Waste Management Dist., 31 F.3d 89

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

75. United States v. Airline Tariff Publ'g Co., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11904

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

76. Allen-Myland, Inc. v. IBM Corp., 33 F.3d 194

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

77. American Ass'n of Cruise Passengers v. Cunard Line, 31 F.3d 1184

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

78. New York v. Panex Indus., 860 F. Supp. 977

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Narrowed by

Cases

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

79. Vinci v. Waste Management, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12071

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

80. Leyba v. Renger, 874 F. Supp. 1229

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

81. Hammes v. AAMCO Transmissions, 33 F.3d 774

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

82. County of Stanislaus v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21032

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

83. Picker Int'l v. Leavitt, 865 F. Supp. 951

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

84. Willman v. Heartland Hosp. E., 34 F.3d 605

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

85. S-2 Yachts v. WMJB Marine, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14725

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

86. Serfecz v. Jewel Food Stores, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12239

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

87. G.E.E.N. Corp. v. Southeast Toyota Distrib., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21553

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

88. TCA Bldg. Co. v. Northwestern Resources Co., 861 F. Supp. 1366

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

89. Aa All Star Enters., 173 B.R. 343

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

90. Armbruster Prods. v. Wilson, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 24796

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

91. Stelwagon Mfg. Co. v. Tarmac Roofing Sys., 862 F. Supp. 1361

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

92. Data Gen. Corp. v. Grumman Sys. Support Corp., 36 F.3d 1147

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

93. Bob Nicholson Appliance v. Maytag Co., 883 F. Supp. 321

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

94. General Devices v. Bacon, 888 S.W.2d 497

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

95. Pine Ridge Recycling v. Butts County, 864 F. Supp. 1338

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

96. O.K. Sand & Gravel v. Martin Marietta Technologies, 36 F.3d 565

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

97. Sullivan v. NFL, 34 F.3d 1091

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

98. D'Last Corp. v. Ugent, 863 F. Supp. 763

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type
Cases

Narrowed by
Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

99. Norcen Energy Resource v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21347

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Narrowed by

Cases

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

100. Valley Drive Sys. v. EMPI, Inc., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13233

Client/Matter: -None-

Search Terms: "antitrust law"

Search Type: Natural Language

Narrowed by:

Content Type

Cases

Narrowed by

Practice Areas & Topics: Antitrust & Trade Law; Timeline:
Oct 01, 1991 to Dec 31, 2022

C.A. Westel de Venez. v. American Tel. & Tel. Co.

United States District Court for the Southern District of New York

November 30, 1993, Decided ; November 30, 1993, Filed

90 Civ. 6665 (PKL)

Reporter

1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16857 *

C.A. WESTEL DE VENEZUELA, Plaintiff, v. AMERICAN TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANY and AT&T INTERNATIONAL, INC., Defendants.

Core Terms

enterprise, defendants', subject matter jurisdiction, alleges, replead, motion to dismiss, fraudulent, scheme to defraud, unfair competition, predicate act, Sherman Act, particularity, employees, wire, racketeering activity, inter alia, Clayton Act, terminal, mail

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > General Overview

HN1[] Private Actions, Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations

The heart of any Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, 18 U.S.C.S. §§ 1961-68, complaint is the allegation of a pattern of racketeering activity.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN2[] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

The court's task on a Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) motion is not to rule on the merits of plaintiffs' claims, but to decide whether, presuming all factual allegations of the complaint to be true, and drawing all reasonable inferences in the plaintiff's favor, the plaintiff could prove any set of facts which would entitle him to relief.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > General Overview

HN3 Private Actions, Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations

The requirement of proximate cause, a legal concept derived from tort law, is also applicable to claims under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, 18 U.S.C.S. §§ 1961-68. This doctrine is described as traditionally requiring some direct relation between the injury asserted and the injurious conduct alleged. Thus, a plaintiff who complained of harm flowing merely from the misfortunes visited upon a third person by the defendant's acts was generally said to stand at too remote a distance to recover.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Fraud > Wire Fraud > Elements

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Fraud Against the Government > Mail Fraud > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Fraud Against the Government > Mail Fraud > Elements

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Fraud > Wire Fraud > General Overview

HN4 Wire Fraud, Elements

The law of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit is that an element of both mail and wire fraud is the defendant's knowing participation in a scheme to defraud.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > Elements

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > General Overview

HN5 Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act, Elements

Under § 1962(c) of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), 18 U.S.C.S. §§ 1961-68, a corporate entity may not be simultaneously the "enterprise" and the "person" who conducts the affairs of the enterprise through a pattern of racketeering activity. In a § 1962(c) prosecution, the named RICO defendant and the alleged enterprise cannot be the same; they must be separate entities.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > General Overview

HN6 Heightened Pleading Requirements, Fraud Claims

Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\) provides that in all averments of fraud or mistake, the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake shall be stated with particularity. Malice, intent, knowledge, and other condition of mind of a person may be averred generally. Though, in accordance with the explicit language of rule 9\(b\), knowledge may be averred generally, in the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit plaintiffs must plead the factual basis which gives rise to a "strong inference" of fraudulent intent.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > General Overview

HN7 [down] Pleadings, Heightened Pleading Requirements

Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) requires that where more than one defendant is named, the complaint shall inform each defendant of the nature of his alleged participation in fraud.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > Preliminary Proceedings > Entry of Pleas > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > General Overview

HN8 [down] Pleadings, Heightened Pleading Requirements

To plead an association in fact a plaintiff must plead facts establishing an enterprise that is separate and distinct from the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, 18 U.S.C.S. §§ 1961-68, persons. Moreover, the courts of the Second Circuit have closely scrutinized pleadings alleging associations-in-fact of a corporation and its employees or of affiliated corporations.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Amendment of Pleadings > Leave of Court

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Amendment of Pleadings > General Overview

HN9 [down] Amendment of Pleadings, Leave of Court

Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a) provides that leave to amend pleadings shall be freely given when justice so requires.

Counsel: [*1] ROSNER & GOODMAN, New York, New York, Jonathan Rosner, Esq., of counsel, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

ANDERSON KILL OLICK & OSHINSKY, P.C., New York, New York, Rudolph W. Giuliani, Esq., of counsel, Mark L. Weyman, Esq., of counsel, Steven Cooper, Esq., of counsel, Alon M. Markowitz, Esq., of counsel, Attorneys for Defendants.

Judges: Leisure

Opinion by: PETER K. LEISURE

Opinion

OPINION AND ORDER

LEISURE, District Judge:

This is an action for violation of section 1962(c) of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"), 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961-68. Defendants have moved this Court for an order dismissing the Second Amended Complaint pursuant to Rules 12\(b\) \(1\), 12\(b\) \(6\) and 9\(b\) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. For the reasons stated below, defendants' motion to dismiss the Second Amended Complaint pursuant to Rule 12\(b\) \(6\) is granted.

BACKGROUND

The plaintiff, C.A. Westel de Venezuela ("Westel"), is a Venezuelan corporation that manufactured, distributed and serviced telecommunications, computer, and data terminal equipment on behalf of the defendants American Telephone and Telegraph Company ("AT&T") and AT&T international, Inc. ("ATTI") until [*2] approximately early 1990. The instant suit arises out of this business relationship. The history of this suit is briefly summarized below.

I. THE PRIOR COMPLAINTS

Westel commenced this action in October 1990, asserting claims for attempted monopolization under section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2, unfair competition, and violations of RICO. With respect to the Sherman Act claim, Westel asserted that the defendants had attempted to monopolize the Venezuelan market for telecommunications, computer and data terminal equipment and services. In January 1991, defendants moved to dismiss the complaint on various grounds. Defendants argued, inter alia, that the Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction with respect to the Sherman Act claim in light of 15 U.S.C. § 6a, which limits the applicability of American antitrust law to foreign commerce.

Westel did not file papers in opposition to defendants' motion to dismiss the complaint but instead, in May 1991, filed an Amended Complaint. Westel's Amended Complaint included claims for unfair competition and violations of RICO but did not include the Sherman Act [*3] claim, which Westel conceded was foreclosed by 15 U.S.C. § 6a.

Westel alleged in its Amended Complaint that the defendants sought to enter into and dominate the market for telecommunications, computer and data equipment and services in Venezuela, and in so doing: (1) engaged in acts of unfair competition, including the misappropriation of technology, proprietary business information, business opportunities and employees of Westel; and (2) violated RICO by devising a scheme to defraud Westel through, inter alia, fraudulent representations and promises transmitted via the United States Postal Service or via wire, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1341 (relating to mail fraud) and 18 U.S.C. § 1343 (relating to wire fraud).

Defendants moved to dismiss the unfair competition claim for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\); in light of considerations of comity; and for failure to join indispensable parties, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(7\). Defendants moved to dismiss the RICO claim for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, [*4] pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(1\); in light of considerations of comity; and for failure to plead fraud with particularity, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\).

On August 17, 1992 this Court dismissed Westel's claim of unfair competition, finding that Venezuela had no law of unfair competition and that United States law was not applicable to Westel's claim. In addition, the Court dismissed Westel's RICO claim pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\) for failure to plead fraud with particularity, though the Court rejected defendants' motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.

II. THE SECOND AMENDED COMPLAINT

On September 25, 1992, Westel filed the Second Amended Complaint. According to the Second Amended Complaint, AT&T initiated business discussions with Westel in 1976 because it was seeking an established Venezuelan company to represent it in marketing telecommunications, computer and data terminal equipment and services in Venezuela. In October 1977, as a result of these discussions, Westel became an authorized representative of AT&T to promote, market, distribute, sell and service AT&T products in Venezuela.

At about the same time, according to Westel, the United [*5] States Department of Justice brought an antitrust action against AT&T that AT&T allegedly concluded could lead to a diminishment of its revenues. Consequently, at some point either prior to initiating a business relationship with Westel or sometime thereafter, AT&T devised a scheme to defraud Westel in order to replace its otherwise diminishing revenues. In essence, AT&T's scheme was first to misappropriate Westel's technology, personnel and business opportunities and then to eliminate Westel as a competitor by destroying its business reputation and weakening its financial condition. The fraud was effected by, "inter alia, false and fraudulent pretenses, representations and promises transmitted by, inter alia, the mails, wire and other means and instrumentalities of interstate and foreign commerce." Second Amended Complaint at P 6.

Westel alleges that the defendants' fraud spanned the period from the inception of AT&T's business relationship with Westel in 1977 to its termination 13 years later in April, 1990 and beyond. The defendants' fraud therefore involved actions in a number of areas including the following: (1) AT&T's System 75 and Dimension PABX systems; (2) Westel's [*6] direct inward dialing service; (3) Westel's annual business plan; (4) AT&T's establishment of a Venezuelan subsidiary, AT&T Andinos, S.A. ("AT&T Andinos"); (5) opportunities for Westel and defendants jointly to engage in various projects with or for the Venezuelan national telephone company, Compania Anonima Nacional Telefonos de Venezuela; (6) AT&T's exertion of "economic pressure" upon Westel; and (7) AT&T's efforts to induce certain Westel employees to terminate their employment with Westel and undertake employment with AT&T, and to appropriate to itself certain Westel customers.

Westel contends that this conduct involved repeated acts of wire and mail fraud and constituted a violation of Section 1962(c) of RICO. Westel identifies ATTI and AT&T Andinos, among others, as RICO persons and defendant AT&T as the RICO enterprise. See Second Amended Complaint at PP 88-89.

Defendants have moved to dismiss the Second Amended Complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(1\); for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\); and for failure to plead fraud with particularity pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\). Defendants have also moved pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(f\) to strike certain portions of the Second Amended Complaint. Westel opposes these motions in all respects.

DISCUSSION

I. SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION

As a threshold matter, the defendants urge this Court to reconsider its prior holding that subject matter jurisdiction exists over Westel's RICO claim. See C.A. Westel de Venezuela V. American Tel. & Tel. Co, No. 90 Civ. 6665, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12301, 46-47 (August 17, 1992). In that decision, this Court rejected the defendants' argument that the "conduct" and "effects" test used to assess subject latter jurisdiction in securities law cases was applicable in the RICO context, relying on Alfadda v. Fenn, 935 F.2d 475 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 116 L. Ed. 2d 656, 112 S. Ct. 638 (1991), a decision by the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit (the "Second Circuit"):

The Second Circuit's Alfadda opinion suggests that, in determining whether this Court has subject matter jurisdiction with respect to Westel's RICO claim, the Court should not apply the "conduct" and [*8] "effects" tests as articulated in the securities law context, but rather should examine the nature of Westel's allegations of a pattern of racketeering activity and the predicate acts that constitute the racketeering activity . . . Because Westel has alleged predicate acts -- using the mails or wires in furtherance of defendant's scheme or artifice to defraud Westel of its money and property -- that occurred in the United States, these predicate acts serve as a basis for subject matter jurisdiction with respect to Westel's Rico claim.

Westel at 46-47. The defendants urge this Court to reconsider this holding.

The defendants argue that, since the RICO statute is silent as to its extraterritorial application, the Court should look to the Clayton Act for guidance. The defendants note that the Supreme Court has recognized that "Congress modeled § 1964(c) on the civil-action provision of the federal antitrust laws, § 4 of the Clayton Act . . .", Holmes v. Securities Investor Protection Corp., 117 L. Ed. 2d 532, 112 S. Ct. 1311, 1317 (1992), and has therefore sometimes turned to the Clayton Act for guidance when the RICO statute is silent on a particular issue. See, [*9] e.g., Agency Holding Corp. v. Malley-Duff & Associates, Inc. 483 U.S. 143, 145, 97 L. Ed. 2d 121, 107 S. Ct. 2759 (1987) (applying 4-year statute of limitations applicable under Clayton Act civil enforcement actions to RICO civil enforcement actions). Based upon this line of cases, the defendants argue that the Court should apply the "effects" test which Courts have borrowed from the Sherman Act and used to determine subject matter jurisdiction over extraterritorial Clayton Act claims. This test, set forth in Section 7 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 6a, requires that the alleged conduct have had "a direct, substantial, and reasonably foreseeable effect" on United States domestic, import or export commerce.

The defendants advance various policy arguments in favor of their position that are not without merit. However, the defendants have failed to convince the Court that the Second Circuit's opinion in Alfadda does not control the outcome of this case. Both the facts and the language of Alfadda make clear that the Second Circuit had very much before it the question that this Court faces today -- namely, when there exists subject matter jurisdiction [*10] over a RICO suit brought by foreign plaintiffs who were injured abroad. Alfadda involved securities law and RICO claims by investors who alleged that their ownership stakes in a corporation had been fraudulently diluted by the sale of stock to third parties in contravention to an offering prospectus. See 935 F.2d at 477. The plaintiffs were residents and nationals of Saudi Arabia and Bahrain. The defendants were two French banks, two Netherlands Antilles companies, and two United States citizens. Id. at 476. The District Court had held that it did not have subject matter jurisdiction because "the fraud was perpetrated by placing the misleading prospectus into the plaintiffs' hands outside the United States." See Alfadda v. Fenn, 751 F. Supp. 1114, 1118 (S.D.N.Y. 1990). However, the Second Circuit reversed, finding subject matter jurisdiction.

The Second Circuit noted that HN1[] the "heart of any RICO complaint is the allegation of a pattern of racketeering activity." Id. at 479 (quoting Agency Holding, 483 U.S. at 154). The Second Circuit found that the [*11] plaintiffs had pled a pattern of racketeering activity in the United States since the subsequent sales that diluted the plaintiffs' stakes "were predicate acts which occurred primarily in the United States, and hence, serve as a basis of subject matter jurisdiction for the RICO claims." Alfadda, 935 F.2d at 480.

Similarly, this Court finds subject matter jurisdiction over the RICO action at bar. As in Alfadda, Westel has alleged that at least two participants in the RICO enterprise, AT&T and ATTI, committed predicate acts within the United States. Thus, the Court finds no basis for reconsidering its conclusion that this Court has subject matter jurisdiction over plaintiff's RICO claim.¹

[*12] II. THE DEFENDANTS' 12(b)(6) MOTION

Defendants move this Court to dismiss the Second Amended Complaint pursuant to 12(b)(6) alleging a variety of pleading defects. HN2[] "The court's task on a Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) motion is not to rule on the merits of plaintiffs' claims, but to decide whether, presuming all factual allegations of the complaint to be true, and drawing all reasonable inferences in the plaintiff's favor, the plaintiff could prove any set of facts which would entitle him to relief." Weiss v. Wittcoff, 966 F.2d 109, 112 (2d Cir. 1992) citations omitted).

A. Proximate Cause

¹ The defendants urge this Court, as an alternative to dismissing for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, to certify this question for appeal pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1292\(b\). This motion is moot in light of this Court's decision to grant defendants' motion to dismiss the complaint pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\).

The defendants argue that Westel has failed to meet its obligation under 1964(c) to allege facts showing that Westel suffered an injury "by reason of" the defendants' RICO violations, citing Holmes v. Securities Investor Protection Corp., 117 L. Ed. 2d 532, 112 S. Ct. 1311, 1317 \(1992\). In Holmes, the Supreme Court found that HN3[¹] the requirement of proximate cause, a legal concept derived from tort law, was also applicable to claims under RICO. Id. at 1318, 1322. The Court described this doctrine as traditionally requiring "some [*13] direct relation between the injury asserted and the injurious conduct alleged." Id. at 318. Thus, "a plaintiff who complained of harm flowing merely from the misfortunes visited upon a third person by the defendant's acts was generally said to stand at too remote a distance to recover." Id.

In the case at bar, Westel has clearly pled RICO violations that were the proximate cause of injuries to Westel. Westel is not a "third person" with respect to the defendants' conduct. Rather, the predicate acts alleged by Westel are fraudulent statements made to Westel. Moreover, these statements were allegedly made for the very purpose of inducing Westel to enter into and continue contractual relations so that the defendants could, inter alia, misappropriate proprietary information and destroy Westel's business reputation. Plainly, these type of allegations meet the requirements of proximate cause as set forth in Holmes.

B. The Defendants' Knowledge

The defendants maintain that Westel's pleadings are defective for failure to allege that the defendants knowingly participated in a scheme to defraud Westel.

The defendants properly state HN4[¹] the law of this Circuit that an element [*14] of both mail and wire fraud is the defendant's knowing participation in a scheme to defraud. See United States v. Rodolitz, 786 F.2d 77, 80 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 826, 93 L. Ed. 2d 52, 107 S. Ct. 102 (1986); United States v. Precision Medical Laboratories, Inc., 593 F.2d 434, 443-44 \(2d Cir. 1978\). The Court finds, however, that the Second Amended Complaint adequately alleges knowing participation by AT&T and ATT. Westel alleges that AT&T "devised a scheme and artifice to defraud and obtain money and property of Westel." Second Amended Complaint at P 6. Moreover, as part of this scheme, Westel alleges various knowing misrepresentations including, for example, that AT&T "falsely represented . . . that Westel would be authorized to manufacture AT&T product in Venezuela" when in fact "AT&T did not intend to authorize Westel to manufacture" such equipment. Id. at P 28-29. The Court finds these allegations suggest that AT&T purposely and knowingly participated in a scheme to defraud.

To find that the Second Amended Complaint also alleges scienter on the part of ATT, the Court must exercise considerable generosity [*15] in its reading thereof, but the Court does so find. Paragraph 28(B) of the Second Amended Complaint alleges that "ATT president Robert Sageman falsely represented to Westel" that certain telephone equipment would function in Venezuela.² Among the definitions of the term "falsely" are "dishonestly" and "deceitfully". See Websters Third New International Dictionary, (1981) at 819. This Court finds that, generously interpreted, this paragraph alleges that ATT purposely and knowingly participated in the scheme to defraud through intentional misrepresentations to Westel.

C. Plaintiff's Allegation that AT&T is the [*16] Enterprise

Finally, defendants argue that the Second Amended Complaint is defective because it names AT&T as the RICO enterprise.

In Bennett v. United States Trust Co., 770 F.2d 308 \(2d Cir. 1985\), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1058, 88 L. Ed. 2d 776, 106 S. Ct. 800 (1986), the Second Circuit held that HN5[¹] "under section 1962(c) a corporate entity may not be simultaneously the 'enterprise' and the 'person' who conducts the affairs of the enterprise through a pattern of racketeering activity." 770 F.2d at 315. In reaching its decision, the Second Circuit followed the clear majority of circuit courts that had addressed the issue. See id. Bennet was reaffirmed in United States v. Gelb, 881 F.2d 1155, 1164 \(2d Cir. 1989\) ("In a section 1962(c) prosecution, the named RICO defendant and the alleged enterprise cannot be the same; they must be separate entities.").

² Westel also alleges in paragraph 6 of the Second Amended Complaint that "Defendant AT&T, alone and in concert with the predecessor of ATT, devised a scheme and artifice to defraud and obtain money and property of Westel . . ." However, Westel nowhere explains what it means by the predecessor of ATT nor by what legal theory a corporation may be held liable for the acts of such a "predecessor."

In Bennet, though the defendant U.S. Trust had been explicitly identified in the complaint as the RICO "enterprise," it had not been identified as a section 1962(c) "person." However, the Second Circuit reasoned that "because U.S. Trust is named [*17] as the defendant, we interpret the complaint to name U.S. Trust as the section 1962(c) 'person'." Bennet, 770 F.2d at 315 n.2. Consequently, since U.S. Trust was interpreted to be both the "person" and the "enterprise" under section 1962(c), the Court dismissed the complaint. Bennet, 770 F.2d at 315.

In the instant case Westel's RICO claim suffers from the same defect as that identified in Bennet. Westel's complaint states that defendant AT&T is the RICO enterprise. See Second Amended Complaint at P 88. Moreover, while Westel does not name defendant AT&T as a "person" in the Second Amended Complaint, the complaint must be so construed because AT&T is named as a defendant. Thus, Westel's claim is clearly defective.

Westel argues that Bennet does not establish that a corporation cannot be named as both an enterprise and a defendant, claiming that the Courts of this Circuit have repeatedly misstated the holding of Bennet. See, e.g., Richter v. Sudman, 634 F. Supp. 234, 240 \(S.D.N.Y. 1986\) ("Since they are being sued, the named defendants are considered the RICO 'persons' . . . [*18] . . ."). Westel urges upon this Court, instead, the view taken by the United States District Court for the Western District of Michigan that purportedly interprets Bennet. However, the case to which Westel cites, Ross v. Omobusch, Inc., 607 F. Supp. 835, 837-38 \(W.D. Mich. 1984\) does not discuss Bennet v. United States Trust Co., 770 F.2d 308 \(2d Cir. 1985\), decided a year after Ross, but rather an Eighth Circuit case named Bennet v. Berg, 685 F.2d 1053 \(8th Cir. 1982\)

Westel establishes no basis for departing with the clear holding of Bennet. Accordingly, this Court finds that Westel's Second Amended Complaint improperly identifies AT&T as the RICO enterprise and dismisses this complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted.

III. THE DEFENDANTS' 9(b) MOTION

The defendants contend that Westel has failed to plead fraud with the requisite particularity required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\). This HNC Rule provides that "in all averments of fraud or mistake, the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake shall be stated with particularity. Malice, intent, knowledge, [*19] and other condition of mind of a person may be averred generally."

The purpose of Rule 9\(b\) is "to provide a defendant with fair notice of a plaintiff's claim, to safeguard a defendant's reputation from 'improvident charges of wrongdoing,' and to protect a defendant against the institution of a strike suit." See O'Brien v. National Property Analysts Partners, 936 F.2d 674, 676 \(2d Cir. 1991\). Though, in accordance with the explicit language of Rule 9\(b\), knowledge may be averred generally, the Second Circuit has consistently held that plaintiffs must "plead the factual basis which gives rise to a 'strong inference' of fraudulent intent." Id. (quoting Wexner v. First Manhattan Co., 902 F.2d 169, 172 \(2d Cir. 1990\)). The defendants contend that Westel has failed to plead facts that give rise to a strong inference of fraudulent intent.

Westel has plainly been responsive to the Court's prior dismissal of the Amended Complaint for failure to plead fraud with particularity by providing greater detail in its Second Amended Complaint concerning the defendants' alleged fraudulent statements. However, the Court is troubled by [*20] the question of scienter, particularly in light of the paucity of facts regarding the participation of ATTI representatives in the scheme to defraud. The Second Amended Complaint makes only two references to specific acts by ATTI and these references provide a meager basis for inferring fraudulent intent on the part of ATTI. See Second Amended Complaint at PP 28(B), 41(A).

Moreover, the Section "Scienter: Reasons For AT&T's False Representations," both in its title and content, addresses itself only to the motive for fraud by AT&T.³

Westel counters that it does not know whether the employees it alleges committed various acts are employees of AT&T or ATTI and that rule 9\(b\)'s requirement is relaxed where information is peculiarly within the knowledge of a defendant, citing Di Vittorio v. Equidyne Extractive Indus., Inc., 822 F.2d 1242, 1247 (2d Cir. 1987). [*21] However, HN7⁴ Rule 9\(b\) requires that where more than one defendant is named, the complaint shall "inform each defendant of the nature of his alleged participation in fraud." Id. Westel is correct that the requirements of 9(b) are somewhat relaxed as to information that is peculiarly within the defendant's knowledge. See id. However, whether this requirement may be relaxed to the extent of not requiring Westel to specify whether or not the fraudulent acts in question were even committed by employees of ATTI is unclear.⁴

This Court concludes that [*22] it is the wiser course to decline to reach the defendants' 9(b) motion at this juncture. Because the Court has concluded that Westel has improperly named AT&T as both a RICO person and the RICO enterprise, Westel will be required, if it repleads, to identify a RICO enterprise that is not also a RICO person. Westel has a number of options in identifying the RICO enterprise and the RICO persons and the choice Westel makes may significantly alter the repledged complaint. In light of this possibility, this Court declines to reach the defendants' 9(b) motion.

IV. DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO STRIKE CERTAIN PORTIONS OF THE COMPLAINT

The Court also declines to reach the defendants' motion to strike certain portions of the Second Amended Complaint since this matter is rendered moot by the Court's decision to dismiss the complaint.

IV. PERMISSION TO REPLEAD

The defendants urge this Court to deny Westel an opportunity to replead. The defendants note that this is the third failed effort by Westel to properly plead a claim against them.⁵ The defendants argue that "despite Westel's efforts to amplify its pleadings and increase the volume thereof (now 56 pages), Westel remains unable to [*23] refute the simple fact that [it cannot transform] business dealings conducted in Venezuela into viable claims under United States laws and in a United States Court." Memorandum of Law In Support of Defendants' Motion to Dismiss, dated November 23, 1992, at 42-43.

This Court is not unmindful of the defendants' concerns nor unaware of the obstacles Westel faces in properly pleading a claim. Westel may seek, for example, to replead its claim by alleging an enterprise "associated in fact". See United States v. Huber, 603 F.2d 387, 393-94 (2d Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 927, 63 L. Ed. 2d 759, 100 S. Ct. 1312 (1980) (a group of corporations may constitute a "group of individuals associated in fact" under section 1961\(4\) of RICO). HN8⁶ To plead an association in fact, however, a plaintiff must plead facts establishing [*24] an enterprise that is "separate and distinct from the RICO persons." Center Cadillac, Inc. v. Bank Leumi Trust Co., 808 F. Supp. 213, 236 (S.D.N.Y. 1992); see Fustok v. Conticommodity Services, Inc., 618 F. Supp. 1074, 1076 (S.D.N.Y. 1985). Moreover, the Courts of this Circuit have closely scrutinized pleadings alleging associations-in-fact of a corporation and its employees or of affiliated corporations. See, e.g., Official Publications, Inc. v. Kable News Co., 775 F. Supp. 631, 635-36 \(S.D.N.Y. 1991\) (a corporation and its principal officers cannot form an enterprise); Center Cadillac v. Bank Leumi Trust Co., 808 F. Supp. 213, 236 \(S.D.N.Y. 1992\) (association in fact properly pled where plaintiff alleged continuing participation of employee in enterprise after leaving employ of corporate defendant); Fustok, 618 F. Supp. at 1076 (finding association of related corporations where plaintiff pled facts that "separated and distinguished [the RICO enterprise] from the . . . named defendants."). In addition, Westel's claim for the purposes [*25] of opposing defendants' 9(b) motion that it cannot distinguish between acts of AT&T and ATTI may tend to undermine any effort by it to plead that there is an enterprise that is not identical with AT&T itself.

³ This section makes one reference to ATTI but only alludes to subsequent paragraphs of the complaint containing the two allegations already noted. See Second Amended Complaint at P 21(B).

⁴ At least some support for such a relaxed approach is nonetheless provided in Luce v. Edelstein, 802 F.2d 49 (2d Cir. 1986), in which the Second Circuit held that "no specific connection between fraudulent representation in [an] Offering Memorandum and particular defendants is necessary where, as here, defendants are insiders or affiliates participating in the offer of the securities in question." Id. at 55.

⁵ Westel voluntarily replied after AT&T moved to dismiss Westel's first complaint. The Amended Complaint was then dismissed by this Court pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\) and 12\(b\)\(6\).

Thus, the Court is cognizant of various obstacles that Westel may face in seeking to replead its claim. However, this Court cannot conclude that Westel will not be able to plead a claim under RICO. Moreover, HN9 Fed. R. Civ. P. 15\(a\) provides that leave to amend pleadings "shall be freely given when justice so requires." See Devaney V. Chester, 813 F.2d 566, 569 \(2d Cir. 1987\). Thus the Court grants Westel permission to replead.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated above, defendants' motion to dismiss the Second Amended Complaint pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) is hereby granted. In order to provide Westel with ample time to carefully consider both whether and how to replead its claim, the Court grants Westel 30 days from the date of this Opinion and Order in which to replead. In the event that Westel does not replead its claim within such time, the Clerk of the Court is hereby directed to enter judgment in favor of defendants.

SO ORDERED

New [*26] York, New York

November 30, 1993

Peter K. Leisure

U.S.D.J.

End of Document

Union Carbide Corp. v. Florida Power & Light Co.

United States District Court for the Middle District of Florida, Tampa Division

December 8, 1993, Decided ; December 8, 1993, Filed

CASE NO. 88-1622-CIV-T-21C

Reporter

1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21203 *

UNION CARBIDE CORPORATION, a New York corporation, Plaintiff v. FLORIDA POWER & LIGHT COMPANY, a Florida corporation, and FLORIDA POWER CORPORATION, a Florida corporation, Defendants Disposition: [*1] Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment DENIED. Plaintiff's Motion for Partial Summary Judgment DENIED. Defendants DIRECTED to file a response to Plaintiff's Motion to Substitute Parties on or before December 20, 1993, in the absence of which the Court will take Plaintiff's Motion under advisement and rule thereon. Amicus Curiae Florida Public Service Commission's Motion for Leave to File Response to Union Carbide's Notice Re: Ticor DENIED as MOOT, as all parties and amicus participants have submitted revised memoranda to the Court. Defendants' Motion to Strike Section III of Plaintiff's Response Re: Supplemental Authority DENIED as MOOT, as all parties have submitted revised memoranda to the Court.

Core Terms

territorial, maps, boundary line, service area, electric, facilities, state action, antitrust, immunity, approve, parties, territorial boundary, summary judgment, anticompetitive, supervision, state policy, articulated, genuine, regulation, customers, provide a service, witness testimony, public interest, witnesses, allocate, displace, retail

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Appropriateness

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Movant Persuasion & Proof

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Nonmovant Persuasion & Proof

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Motions for Summary Judgment > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

HN1 [blue icon] Entitlement as Matter of Law, Appropriateness

Summary judgment is appropriate only when the court is satisfied that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(c\). In making this determination, the court must view all of the evidence in a light most favorable to the non-moving party. The burden of establishing the absence of a genuine issue is on the moving party. However, the burden extends only to facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law. Factual disputes that are irrelevant or unnecessary will not be counted. Once this burden is met, the non-moving party must go beyond the pleadings and by her own affidavits, or by the depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, designate specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. However, a plaintiff need only present evidence from which a jury might return a verdict in its favor in order to survive a summary judgment motion.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > General Overview

Governments > Local Governments > Administrative Boards

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > Scope

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > General Overview

HN2 Antitrust & Trade Law, Exemptions & Immunities

The state action immunity doctrine provides that federal antitrust laws do not apply to proscribe anticompetitive conduct undertaken by or directed to be undertaken by a state. The doctrine may also preclude antitrust attack on private conduct taken pursuant to state regulation.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

HN3 Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

The United States Supreme Court has established a two part test to determine when private conduct regulated by state law is immune from antitrust attack. To establish immunity, a party must show 1) that the challenged restraint on competition is one clearly articulated and affirmatively expressed as state policy and (2) that the policy is actively supervised by the state itself. Compliance with both parts of this test ensures that the state will be responsible for the anticompetitive activity it has sanctioned and undertaken to control. Additionally, both parts of the test ensure that the particular anticompetitive mechanism operates because of a deliberate and intentional state policy.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

HN4 Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

A clearly articulated state policy under the first part of the Midcal test will exist when the state intends to displace competition in a particular field with a regulatory structure. In some instances, a state legislature will expressly state its intent to displace competition in a given area. However, a clearly articulated policy can also be established if a state statute authorizes an agency to regulate the area and provides for a regulatory scheme that inherently displaces unfettered business freedom.

Administrative Law > Separation of Powers > Jurisdiction

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electricity Distribution & Transmission > General Overview

Governments > Local Governments > Administrative Boards

Communications Law > Regulators > US Federal Communications Commission > Jurisdiction

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > Authorities & Powers

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN5 Separation of Powers, Jurisdiction

Fla. Stat. § 366.04 provides in part that, in the exercise of its jurisdiction, the Florida Public Utilities Commission (commission) shall have power over electric utilities for the following purposes: to approve territorial agreements between and among rural electric cooperatives, municipal electric utilities, and other electric utilities under its jurisdiction and to resolve, upon petition of a utility or on its own motion, any territorial dispute involving service areas between and among rural electric cooperatives, municipal electric utilities, and other electric utilities under its jurisdiction. The commission shall further have jurisdiction over the planning, development, and maintenance of a coordinated electric power grid throughout Florida to assure an adequate and reliable source of energy for operational and emergency purposes in Florida and the avoidance of further uneconomic duplication of generation, transmission, and distribution facilities.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > State Regulation

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > General Overview

HN6 Energy & Utilities, State Regulation

The state has comprehensive control over competition among its retail utility service providers.

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Buying & Selling of Power

Governments > Local Governments > Administrative Boards

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN7 Utility Companies, Buying & Selling of Power

An individual has no organic, economic or political right to service by a particular utility merely because he deems it advantageous to himself. Larger policies are at stake than one customer's self-interest, and those policies must be enforced and safeguarded by the Florida Public Utilities Commission.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > State Regulation

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > General Overview

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Boundaries

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN8 [] Energy & Utilities, State Regulation

Florida, through its legislation, regulation, and judicial holdings and pronouncements, has demonstrated its intent to displace competition in the field of retail electric service with a regulatory mechanism to designate territorial boundaries. As such, Florida has a clearly articulated and affirmatively expressed state policy as contemplated by the first element of Midcal's test for state action immunity.

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN9 [] Energy & Utilities Law, Antitrust Issues

Under Florida's policy of non-competition, the validity of a territorial agreement is premised on Florida Public Utilities Commission approval.

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Governments > Local Governments > Boundaries

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN10 [] Energy & Utilities Law, Antitrust Issues

Fla. Stat. ch. 366 recognizes that the Florida Public Utilities Commission (commission) must examine actual and potential competition between utility companies to resolve territorial disputes. The commission will establish territorial boundaries based on factors including population, the degree of urbanization of the area, its proximity to other urban areas, and the present and reasonably foreseeable future requirements of the area for other utility services. Fla. Stat. § 366.04\(e\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

HN11 [] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

For purposes of determining whether a private conducted regulated by state law is immune from antitrust attack, a court will examine several factors to assess a state's participation in operative decisions relating to the anticompetitive conduct at issue. A state cannot simply authorize the anticompetitive activity, then enforce the decisions of individual parties made pursuant to its authorization. A state must help to establish the anticompetitive practice, or must review private decisions made pursuant to state authorization. Courts will further examine whether the state monitors conditions in the relevant market and engages in pointed reexamination of the program. If an examination of these factors reveals that the state has effective control over all decisions being challenged in the antitrust action, the second element of Midcal's test will be established.

Governments > Local Governments > Boundaries

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Governments > Local Governments > Duties & Powers

Governments > State & Territorial Governments > Boundaries

HN12 [blue icon] Local Governments, Boundaries

Utilities may initially negotiate the territorial boundaries to be submitted to the Florida Public Utilities Commission for approval. However, such private conduct constitutes part of Florida's contemplated scheme for establishment of boundaries.

Counsel: For UNION CARBIDE, plaintiff: Marvin E. Barkin, Keith E. Rounsville, Trenam, Kemker, Scharf, Barkin, Frye, O'Neill & Mullis, P.A., Tampa, FL USA. James D. McGibbon, Dulany L. O'Roark, III, Sutherland, Asbill & Brennan, Atlanta, GA USA. Nathan P. Eimer, William H. Baumgartner, Sidley & Austin, Chicago, IL. Donald I. Baker, Earle O. O'Donnell, Karen L. Grimm, Judy A. Center, Sutherland, Asbill & Brennan, Washington, DC.

For FLORIDA P&L, defendant: J. T. Blount, Florida Power & Light [*2] Co., Miami, FL USA.

For FLORIDA POWER CORP., defendant: Robert L. Ciotti, Carlton, Fields, Ward, Emmanuel, Smith & Cutler, P.A., Tampa, FL USA. Benjamin H. Hill, III, Hill, Ward & Henderson, P.A., Tampa, FL USA. Daniel M. Gribbon, James R. Atwood, Covington & Burling, Washington, DC USA. Albert H. Stephens, Florida Power Corporation, St. Petersburg, FL.

For FLORIDA PUBLIC, movant: Susan F. Clark, Florida Public Service Commission, Tallahssee, FL USA.

For TAMPA ELECTRIC CO., movant: Michael A. Fogarty, Glenn, Rasmussen & Fogarty, Tampa, FL USA.

For CLAY ELECTRIC COOPER, T. B. MILLICAN, movants: John Harry Haswell, Chandler, Gray, Lang, Haswell & Enwall, P.A., Gainesville, FL USA.

For FLORIDA PUBLIC, amicus: Richard Bellak, Fowler, White, Gillen, Boggs, Villareal & Bunker, P.A., Tallahassee, FL USA.

Judges: RALPH W. NIMMONS, JR., UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE.

Opinion by: RALPH W. NIMMONS, JR.

Opinion

ORDER

This cause comes before the Court on Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgement (Dkt. # 10) and on Plaintiff's Motion for Partial Summary Judgment (Dkt. # 32). This Order will address these Motions and several additional motions pending herein.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

[*3] Plaintiff Union Carbide¹ brought this antitrust action against Defendants Florida Power Corporation ("FPC") and Florida Power and Light ("FPL") in October of 1988. Plaintiff alleges that a territorial agreement between FPL and FPC, pursuant to which FPL provides retail electric service to Plaintiff's plant in Brevard County, constitutes a division of territories by competitors in violation of federal and state antitrust laws.

The alleged unlawful agreement stems from negotiations between Defendants in the late 1950s and early 1960s. It appears that Defendants initiated discussions because they were concerned about the convergence of their utility [*4] facilities due to expanded growth in various service areas. In an effort to serve the public interest and to eliminate uneconomical and potentially dangerous duplication of facilities, Defendants entered their first agreement in November of 1958. Under this agreement, Defendants set forth "boundaries between their respective service areas," as shown on maps of Volusia County and Seminole County. The parties further agreed that "neither Company [would] serve or offer to serve a customer outside its service area as shown on the attached maps." Letter of FPC to FPL, dated October 28, 1958; accepted and signed November 26, 1958. In September of 1962, Defendants entered a second such arrangement in which they "extended this territorial boundary agreement to include Orange County and a portion of Osceola County." Letter of FPC to FPL, dated September 4, 1962; accepted and signed September 11, 1962. This second agreement referred to boundaries drawn on attached maps of Orange County and Osceola County.²

[*5] On June 2, 1964, Defendants became unsure of the validity of their territorial Agreement. They therefore submitted an Application to the Florida Public Utilities Commission ("Commission"),³ [*6] requesting that the Commission hold a hearing and enter an order approving the Agreement.⁴ The Application indicated that such an order would help to resolve problems with duplication of service facilities "running roughly from Lake George in Volusia County to the southeast corner of Osceola County." Application at 2. Defendants attached to the Application maps of Seminole, Volusia, Orange and Osceola Counties, and a composite map of the four counties. The individual and composite maps depicted a red line which commenced at the northwestern corner of Volusia County at Lake George, meandered eastward across Volusia and Seminole Counties, and continued northward along the border between Orange and Osceola Counties and Brevard County. The boundary line terminated at the southernmost point of Brevard County.

On June 8, 1964, the Commission held a hearing "In the Matter of Application of Florida Power and Light Company and Florida Power Corporation for Approval of a Territorial Agreement Relative to Their Respective Service Areas in Volusia, Seminole, Orange and Osceola Counties" ("Hearing").⁵ The Commission described the agreement to be reviewed as consisting of "two letter agreements, the first dated October 28, 1958, and an amendatory letter dated September 24, 1962, with maps attached showing the territory in question." Hearing Transcript, Dkt. No. 7420-EU (June 8, 1964) at 4. At the Hearing various witnesses testified regarding the advisability of approving the Agreement. Primarily, the witnesses addressed growth in the areas between Volusia and Seminole Counties and between Orange and Osceola Counties which necessitated the Agreement, and the public interest to be served by it. At two instances during [*7] the Hearing, witnesses mentioned Brevard County. One witness testified:

¹ Pending in this action is Plaintiff Union Carbide's Motion to Substitute Parties (Dkt. # 129). Plaintiff indicates that it has spun off the assets and business that are the subject of this lawsuit into a corporation known as Praxair, Inc., a Delaware corporation. For the purposes of this Order, the Court will refer to Plaintiff as Union Carbide or as Plaintiff.

² The 1958 and 1962 agreements will henceforth be jointly referred to as the "Agreement".

³ The Florida Public Utilities Commission has subsequently changed its name to the Florida Public Service Commission.

⁴ Application of Florida Power and Light Company for Approval of an Agreement with Florida Power Corporation Relative to Service Areas, Docket No. 7420-EU (1964)(hereinafter "Application").

⁵ The Commission sent notice of the public hearing to the Volusia, Seminole, Orange and Osceola County governments. The record reflects that no notice was sent to the Brevard County government. At the time of the Commission proceedings, Florida law required that agencies inform affected parties of agency hearings. § 120.33 Fla. Admin. Proc. Act, 120 F.S.A. (1961).

To a lesser extent, the facilities of the two systems [FPC and FPL] were growing closer together in the areas of the boundary line between Orange and Brevard and Osceola and Brevard Counties.

Hearing Transcript at 10. A second witness testified:

I would say that this [convergence of facilities] was most intense in the Volusia and Seminole County areas, and to a lesser, but nevertheless important degree, in the Orange-Brevard County and Osceola-Brevard County areas.

Hearing Transcript at 11.

Additionally, witnesses clarified the location of [*8] the boundary line on the composite map and explained the service areas defined by it. Witnesses stated that the areas to the east or right of the red boundary line were those served by FPL, and those to the west or left of the line were those served by FPC. Defendants were further questioned regarding those areas on the map in which they had not established a boundary line. Defendants indicated that those areas were either served by intervening Rural Electric Cooperatives ("REAs") or "the area[s] [were] not developed to the point where there would be competition between the two companies for the same customers with resultant bad effects." Hearing Transcript at 17 (testimony of witness A.B. Wright, Vice President for Northern Division of Florida Power and Light Company).

On April 28, 1965, following the Hearing, the Commission entered Order No. 3799, which approved the boundary lines set forth in Defendants' Application.⁶ The Order contained the following language:

In these seven dockets [including Application of FPL and FPC, Docket No. 7420-E] the utilities . . . have entered into agreements where there has been or is about to be some conflict as to the boundaries of [*9] the territory that they seek to serve. . . It is even wiser that the Commission and the utilities involved anticipate these conflicts and make effective some reasonable territorial agreement.

The Order further stated that Defendants could not modify the Agreement without approval of the Commission. Since 1965, the parties have applied to the Commission on several occasions for approval to modify the Agreement.⁷ Defendants have otherwise provided service and developed their facilities in accordance with Order No. 3799.

[*10] From 1981 to 1987, the Commission engaged in an intensive review of the various approved territorial agreements among utility service providers in an effort to develop maps reflecting proper territorial boundaries and service areas. The Commission sent out a series of letters and memoranda to electric utilities throughout Florida, requesting materials and maps regarding territorial boundaries. The Commission then developed a computerized system to organize information regarding service areas, and developed comprehensive maps of service territories. These maps reflect that FPL provides service in Brevard County.

The events giving rise to this action by Plaintiff commenced in 1987. Plaintiff owns a plant located in the town of Mims, Brevard County, Florida, which has always received its electric service from FPL. In 1987, Plaintiff became dissatisfied with FPL's rates, and sought to obtain a special rate. FPL submitted an application to the Commission, seeking approval of a proposed agreement pursuant to which it would provide Plaintiff service at a special rate.

⁶ In re: Proposed territorial agreement between Florida Power and Light Company and Florida Power Corporation, Dkt. No. 7420-EU, Order No. 3799 (April 28, 1965).

⁷ In 1971, the Commission approved an agreement between FPC and Tampa Electric Company for the wholesale sale of electric power. In re: Application of Florida Power Corporation for modification of territorial orders, Dkt. No. 71340-EU, Order No. 5255 (October 29, 1971). Again, in 1974, the Commission entered an order which "ratified" an agreement between FPL and FPC to modify and extend boundaries in the City of Sanford. In re: Application of Florida Power & Light Company for approval of a modification of territorial agreement with Florida Power Corporation relative to service areas, Dkt. No. 74097-EU, Order No. 6184 (June 28, 1974). In 1989, the Commission conditionally approved a third modification to the Agreement, clarifying the Agreement's procedure for variances in the territorial boundaries due to exceptional circumstances and changes in municipal boundaries. In re: Application of Florida Power Corporation and Florida Power & Light Company for Approval of Amendment of Territorial Agreement, Dkt. No. 890403-EU, Order No. 21309 (June 2, 1989).

However, in April of 1988, the Commission denied FPL's request, stating that a special rate would effectively provide a [*11] subsidy of Plaintiff's service at the expense of other customers.⁸

In August of 1988, Plaintiff then asked FPC to sell it electricity. Plaintiff also asked FPL to "wheel" the FPC generated electricity to its Mims plant in Brevard County by using existing FPL power lines. Both FPC and FPL independently refused Plaintiff's request, asserting that they were required to do so by Order No. 3799. In response to this refusal, Plaintiff filed this action in October of 1988.

Later that same month, FPL filed a petition with the Commission, requesting a declaratory statement that Defendants would violate Order No. 3799 if they complied with Plaintiff's request for the wheeling of power. The Commission issued a declaratory statement in February of 1989, indicating that the wheeling of power would be in contravention of Order No. 3799.⁹ The [*12] Commission did not, however, address the antitrust implications of Defendants' acts, which Plaintiff now raises in this action.

ANALYSIS

HN1[] Summary judgment is appropriate only when the Court is satisfied "that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56\(c\). In making this determination, the Court must view all of the evidence in a light most favorable to the non-moving party. Samples v. City of Atlanta, 846 F.2d 1328, 1330 \(11th Cir. 1988\). The burden of establishing the absence of a genuine issue is on the moving party. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265, 106 S. Ct. 2548 \(1986\). However, the burden extends only to facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law. "Factual disputes that are [*13] irrelevant or unnecessary will not be counted." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 106 S. Ct. 2505 \(1986\). Once this burden is met, the non-moving party must go beyond the pleadings and by her own affidavits, or by the 'depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, 'designate' specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial."Celotex Corp., 477 U.S. at 324. However, a plaintiff need only present evidence from which a jury might return a verdict in its favor in order to survive a summary judgment motion. Samples, 846 F.2d at 1330.

Plaintiff and Defendants each make several arguments in support of their summary judgment motions. The Court will first address Defendants' contention that the State Action Immunity Doctrine ("Doctrine") bars Plaintiff's attack on the Agreement between FPL and FPC. If, in fact, the Doctrine provides such immunity, the Court need not determine if Defendants' activities violate state and federal antitrust law. The State Action Immunity Doctrine was first enunciated by the Supreme Court in Parker v. Brown, 317 U.S. 341, 87 L. Ed. 315, 63 S. Ct. 307 \(1943\). HN2[] The Doctrine provides [*14] that federal antitrust laws do not apply to proscribe anticompetitive conduct undertaken by or directed to be undertaken by a state. Southern Motor Carriers Rate Conference v. United States, 471 U.S. 48, 56-57, 85 L. Ed. 2d 36, 105 S. Ct. 1721 \(1985\); Municipal Utilities Board of Albertville v. Alabama Power Co., 934 F.2d 1493 \(11th Cir. 1991\). The Doctrine may also preclude antitrust attack on private conduct taken pursuant to state regulation. Id. at 1502.

HN3[] The Supreme Court has established a two part test to determine when private conduct regulated by state law is immune from antitrust attack. To establish immunity, a party must show 1) that the challenged restraint on competition is one "clearly articulated and affirmatively expressed as state policy" and (2) that "the policy [is] actively supervised by the State itself." California Retail Liquor Dealers Assn. v. Midcal Aluminum, Inc., 445 U.S. 97, 105, 63 L. Ed. 2d 233, 100 S. Ct. 937 \(1980\). Compliance with both parts of this test ensures that "the State [will be] responsible for the [anticompetitive activity] it has sanctioned and undertaken to control." [Federal Trade Commission v. Ticor Title Insurance \[*15\] Co., 504 U.S. 621, 112 S. Ct. 2169, 2177, 119 L. Ed. 2d 410 \(1992\)](#).

⁸ In re: Petition of Florida Power and Light Company for approval of large power agreement with Union Carbide Corporation, Dkt. No. 871029-EQ, order No. 19231 (April 26, 1988).

⁹ In re: Petition of Florida Power and Light Company for a Declaratory Statement Regarding Request for Wheeling, Dkt. No. 881326-EI, Order No. 20808 (February 24, 1989).

Additionally, both parts of the test ensure that the particular anticompetitive mechanism operates because of a deliberate and intentional state policy. Id.

HN4¹⁰ A clearly articulated state policy under the first part of the Midcal test will exist when the "state intends to displace competition in a particular field with a regulatory structure." Southern Motor Carriers, 471 U.S. at 64. In some instances, a state legislature will expressly state its intent to displace competition in a given area. Id. However, a clearly articulated policy can also be established if a state statute authorizes an agency to regulate the area and "provides for 'a regulatory scheme that inherently displaces unfettered business freedom.'" Executive Town & Country Services, Inc. v. City of Atlanta, 789 F.2d 1523, 1529 (11th Cir. 1986)(citation omitted).

A review of Florida case law and of Florida's current statutory and regulatory provisions reveals that Florida has effectively displaced competition between electric utilities in the retail market. The Florida Supreme Court first affirmed the Commission's authority to approve [*16] territorial agreements among utilities in City Gas Co. v. Peoples Gas System, Inc., 182 So. 2d 429 (Fla. 1965). In City Gas, the Florida Supreme Court concluded, "these provisions [of Chapter 366] add up to what can only be considered a very extensive authority over the fortunes and operation of the regulated entities." Id. at 435. The Court further stated, "in short, we are of the opinion that the commission's existing statutory powers over areas of service, both expressed and implied, are sufficiently broad to constitute an insurmountable obstacle to the validity of a service area agreement between regulated utilities, which has not been approved by the commission." Id. at 436. In 1974, the Florida legislature incorporated its first specific reference to territorial agreements into Chapter 366 of the Florida Statutes, by expressly granting the Commission jurisdiction to review and approve territorial agreements. Ch. 74-196, 1974 Fla. Laws 538 (codified at Fla. Stat. §§ 366.04(2), 366.05(7)-(8)).¹⁰

[*17] During the 1980s, the Commission proposed several legislative measures to establish service territories, which were not accepted. Therefore, the Commission utilized its statutorily granted authority to enact a comprehensive regulatory scheme governing the adoption of territorial agreements and the resolution of territorial disputes. Fla. Admin. Code, Rules 25-6.0439-0442 (adopted March, 1990). In 1989, the Legislature enacted a revised version of Chapter 366 which permitted the Commission to resolve territorial disputes on its own motion. Fla. Stat. §§ 366.04(2)(e), 366.04(3). Under this current legislative and regulatory scheme, the Commission effectively exercises authority over the designation of territories in which each utility will operate.

The Commission has stated on many occasions that its supervision of territorial agreements among utilities is intended to eliminate the harmful effects of unrestrained competition on individual consumers and on the public.¹¹ The Florida Supreme Court has similarly concluded that HN6¹¹ the state has comprehensive control over competition among retail utility service providers. Storey v. Mayo, 217 So. 2d 304, 307 (Fla. 1968)(holding

¹⁰ HN5¹² Section 366.04, "Jurisdiction of the commission", provides in pertinent part:

- (2) in the exercise of its jurisdiction, the commission shall have power over electric utilities for the following purposes:
- (d) To approve territorial agreements between and among rural electric cooperatives, municipal electric utilities, and other electric utilities under its jurisdiction. . .
- (e) To resolve, upon petition of a utility or on its own motion, any territorial dispute involving service areas between and among rural electric cooperatives, municipal electric utilities, and other electric utilities under its jurisdiction . . .

* * *

- (5) The commission shall further have jurisdiction over the planning, development, and maintenance of a coordinated electric power grid throughout Florida to assure an adequate and reliable source of energy for operational and emergency purposes in Florida and the avoidance of further uneconomic duplication of generation, transmission, and distribution facilities.

¹¹ Such harmful effects include "unsatisfactory customer relations", "service inefficiencies," and "the premature erection of more lines than are needed for immediate service, which lessens the immediate return of the investment, and, in effect, must be subsidized by other customers of the utility." Order No. 3799 at 4.

that [*18] "the powers of the Commission over these privately owned utilities is omnipotent within the confines of the statute and the limits of organic law"); see also PW Ventures, Inc. v. Nichols, 533 So. 2d 281, 283 (Fla. 1988)(holding that "the regulation of the production and sale of electricity [under chapter 366] necessarily contemplates the granting of monopolies in the public interest"). The Court has further stated that HN7↑ "an individual has no organic, economic or political right to service by a particular utility merely because he deems it advantageous to himself.' Larger policies are at stake than one customer's self-interest, and those policies must be enforced and safeguarded by the [Commission]." Lee County Electric Cooperative v. Marks, 501 So. 2d 585, 587 (Fla. 1987)(citation omitted).

[*19] HN8↑ Florida, through its legislation, regulation, and judicial holdings and pronouncements, has demonstrated its intent to displace competition in the field of retail electric service with a regulatory mechanism to designate territorial boundaries. As such, Florida has a "clearly articulated and affirmatively expressed state policy" as contemplated by the first element of Midcal's test for state action immunity.

Plaintiff contends that even if Florida has a clearly articulated policy, the actions of FPL and FPC with respect to Plaintiff's Brevard County facility were not taken in accordance with that policy. Plaintiff specifically asserts that the Commission never approved an agreement between Defendants with respect to Brevard County. HN9↑ Under Florida's policy of non-competition, the validity of a territorial agreement is premised on Commission approval. See City Gas Co. v. Peoples Gas System, 182 So. 2d 429, 436 (Fla. 1965); Fla. Stat. §§ 366.04(2), 366.05(7)-(8). Therefore, if FPL and FPC denied FPC's service to Plaintiff pursuant to a territorial agreement, and such agreement was never approved by the Commission, the actions of FPL and FPC would not merit state action immunity [*20] protection.¹²

Plaintiff's argument centers [*21] on the 1958 and 1962 letter agreements, which were incorporated into the 1964 Agreement and subsequently approved by Order No. 3799. Plaintiff asserts that Defendants' Agreement was not intended to place Brevard County within FPL's service territory. In support of this contention, Plaintiff notes that the letters which form the Agreement make no mention of Brevard County. Additionally, Plaintiff argues that the Commission did not intend to approve an agreement concerning Brevard County. Defendants' Application made no mention of Brevard County, Brevard County's government was not notified of the hearing on the Application, and only two references were made to Brevard County at the Hearing on the Application. Lastly, Plaintiff notes that the maps attached to the Agreement and Application, which depict the boundary line, do not include a full map of Brevard County.

In contrast, Defendants assert that they clearly intended to include Brevard County within FPL's service area in their Agreement and subsequent Application. Defendants note that the maps incorporated into their Agreement and used by the Commission to approve the Agreement, depict a red line running along the borders between [*22] Brevard County, and Orange and Osceola Counties. Additionally, testimony at the public hearing reflected that the line contemplated a division of territories, with FPL serving the area to the east or right of the line, and FPC serving to the west or left of the line. Lastly, Defendants contend that following the issuance of Order No. 3799, the Commission has acted as if FPL's service area included Brevard County. Defendants note that maps prepared by the Commission during its 1981-1987 comprehensive review of service territories place Brevard County in FPL's service area.

¹² Plaintiff relies on the Supreme Court's recent decision in FTC v. Ticor Title Ins. Co., 504 U.S. 621, 112 S. Ct. 2169, 119 L. Ed. 2d 410 (1992), to argue that a state must expressly approve the particular anticompetitive act of the party seeking state action immunity. In Ticor the Supreme Court stated that "Midcal's requirement that the State articulate a clear policy shows little more than that the State has not acted through inadvertence; it cannot alone ensure, as required by our precedents, that particular anticompetitive conduct has been approved by the State." Given the Supreme Court's previous statements with respect to state action immunity, it is not likely that the Court would require a state to give express approval of each anticompetitive act. Nonetheless, the Court need not reach this issue for the purposes of this Order, as Florida law does require the Commission to expressly approve all anticompetitive territorial agreements among utilities.

The Court has closely examined the materials which document the events giving rise to the formation of the Agreement and the Commission's subsequent approval of the Application. Such documentation gives rise to conflicting interpretations of the intent of Defendants and the Commission regarding the provision of service in Brevard County. At no time during the application or approval process did FPL, FPC or the Commission definitively state that FPL would exclusively provide service to Brevard County. However, it was indicated throughout negotiations and proceedings that the Agreement permitted FPL to provide service [*23] in areas to the east of the demarcated boundary line, which, in a large portion of the map, included only Brevard County.

The Commission's intent can be better discerned by examining the effect it generally gave to such territorial boundary lines, at the time it approved the Agreement. The Court finds a 1965 statement by the Commission particularly instructive, as it was made during the same year in which the Commission entered Order No. 3799. The Commission explained the effect of approved boundary lines as follows:

We should not approve an agreement which awards to a utility territory with respect to which there is not a reasonably immediate possibility of duplicating service by one or the other of the parties to the agreement. In truth, what we call 'territorial agreements' are more aptly described in most cases as a boundary agreement and the extent of the boundary line should bear a reasonable relationship to the area in which competition may be expected . . . In the case at hand we have such a boundary drawn across two counties, providing a line of demarcation beyond which neither utility may extend its facilities. While the contractual agreement between the parties [*24] went much farther and purported to secure to each company, inviolate from any competition by the other, all that part of the two counties on its side of the line, we do not think that we have the authority to grant our approval to this extent. Rather, our approval should be limited to the establishing of a line beyond which the utilities will not extend their service facilities, and the extent of such line should be limited to the area in which possible encroachment is threatened.

Commission Order No. 3835 (June 24, 1965)(order quoted in Peoples Gas System, Inc. v. Mason, 187 So. 2d 335, 337 (Fla. 1966)).

Later statements by the Commission have reinforced its 1965 interpretation of territorial boundary lines as allocating territory in areas where competition between utilities is expected. See e.g. Order No. 3799 (finding that "the utilities . . . have entered into agreements where there has been or is about to be some conflict as to the boundaries of the territory they seek to serve"); Order No. 20808 (finding that boundary lines serve to prevent overlapping distribution systems in affected areas).

HN10 Chapter 366, Florida Statutes, also recognizes that the Commission [*25] must examine actual and potential competition to resolve territorial disputes. The Commission will establish territorial boundaries based on factors including "population, the degree of urbanization of the area, its proximity to other urban areas, and the present and reasonably foreseeable future requirements of the area for other utility services." Fla. Stat. § 366.04\(e\). Based on the foregoing examination, the Court concludes that the Commission, by establishing a boundary line, intends to allocate to each utility that territory on its respective side of the boundary line in which competition is reasonably expected.

Given this effect of approved boundary lines, the Court must now determine whether a material question of fact exists regarding territory allocated by the boundary line established in Order No. 3799. The line approved by the Commission in 1965 contemplated an allocation of territory in those areas where competition between FPL and FPC would have been reasonably expected in the foreseeable future. Statements made by witnesses at the hearing on Defendants' Application confirm that the line represented the pattern of development of Defendants' systems within Orange, Seminole, [*26] Volusia and Osceola Counties, and along the borders between Brevard County and Orange and Osceola Counties. The line established did not extend further into those areas which "in the foreseeable future would not be developed to the point where there would be competition between the two companies for the same customers." Hearing Transcript at 17.

It appears that Mims, Florida is situated within twenty miles from the established boundary line. Given the proximity of the line to Mims and development in the disputed territory, the Court concludes that a genuine issue of material fact remains regarding whether Mims was located in an area to the east of the boundary line in which competition between FPL and FPC was reasonably foreseeable in the future. It is possible that Defendants' refusal to provide FPC's electricity to Plaintiff was in accordance with Order 3799's requirements. The Court therefore cannot conclude as a matter of law that Defendants did not act pursuant to Florida's clearly articulated state policy which allocates territory among utility providers. Conversely, the Court cannot conclude that Defendants acted pursuant to this policy. Accordingly, summary judgment in favor [*27] of Defendants is not proper, as a genuine issue remains with respect to whether Defendants' actions fall within the State Action Immunity Doctrine.

Although the Court finds summary judgement in favor of Defendants inappropriate at this juncture, the Court will address the second element of the State Action Immunity Doctrine. If the second element of Midcal's test for state action immunity is not met, Defendants' actions will not be afforded immunity. The second prong of the test requires that an articulated state policy be actively supervised by the state. Midcal, 445 U.S. at 105. Such supervision prevents the "casting [of] a gauzy cloak of state involvement" over an essentially private anticompetitive activity, id. at 106, and ensures that private anticompetitive activity promotes state policy, rather than the interests of private parties. Municipal Utilities, 934 F.2d at 1503.

HN11 [↑] A court will examine several factors to assess a state's participation in operative decisions relating to the anticompetitive conduct at issue. Id. A state cannot simply authorize the anticompetitive activity, then enforce the decisions of individual parties made pursuant to its authorization. [*28] Midcal, 445 U.S. at 105. A state must help to establish the anticompetitive practice, or must review private decisions made pursuant to state authorization. Id. at 105. Courts will further examine whether the state monitors conditions in the relevant market and engages in "pointed reexamination of the program." Id. at 106. If an examination of these factors reveals that the state has effective control over all decisions being challenged in the antitrust action, the second element of Midcal's test will be established. Municipal Utilities, 934 F.2d at 1505.

A review of Florida's case law and legislation indicates that Florida actively supervised territorial allocations among utilities in 1965 and has continued to do so. The Florida Supreme Court's decision in City Gas Co. v. Peoples Gas System, 182 So. 2d 429 \(Fla. 1965\), established that only those territorial agreements approved by the Commission would be valid. When Defendants submitted their Application to the Commission, it conducted a public hearing, at which witnesses testified and the public participated. The Commission was required to evaluate the public interest of the proposed boundary line and to [*29] review the placement of the line to ensure that it reflected anticipated service patterns. Order. No. 3799; see also Utilities Commission of New Smyrna Beach v. Florida Public Service Commission, 469 So. 2d 731, 732 \(Fla. 1985\). The Commission had the choice to approve or disapprove the Application, and by its written order, approved it. The Commission further maintained continuing jurisdiction over any modifications made to the Agreement to ensure that changes would serve the public interest. Order No. 3799; see also Peoples Gas System Inc. v. Mason, 187 So. 2d 335, 339 \(Fla. 1966\).

Since the approval of Defendants' Application, the above procedure for the review and supervision of territorial agreements has been codified and established by regulation. Fla. Admin. Code §§ 25-6.0439-.0442. The administrative code permits the Commission staff to investigate each proposed territorial agreement and evaluate its effect on the relevant territory, customers, and utility facilities. Fla. Stat. § 366.08. Additionally, agreements cannot be modified without Commission approval. Public Service Commission v. Fuller, 551 So. 2d 1210 at 1212. Moreover, the Florida Supreme Court continues [*30] to find that an "agreement has no existence apart from the Public Service Commission's order approving it." Id.

It is true that HN12 [↑] utilities may initially negotiate the territorial boundaries to be submitted to the Commission for approval. However, such private conduct constitutes part of Florida's contemplated scheme for establishment of boundaries. The Florida courts and the Commission have recognized that agreements initiated by utilities enable the economical expansion of utility facilities. Utilities Commission of the City of New Smyrna Beach, 469 So. 2d at 732; In re Joint Petition of Florida Power Corporation and Withlacoochee River Electric Cooperative for Approval of Territorial Agreement, 88 Fla. Pub. Serv. Comm'n Rep. 6:215 (Order No. 19480, June 10, 1988). The Commission's extensive control over the validity and effect of such agreements negates any inference that the privately initiated agreements lack state supervision. Accordingly, the Court finds that no genuine issue of material fact exists regarding the active supervision exercised by the state of Florida over territorial arrangements among retail utility providers. The second element of Midcal's test for [*31] state action immunity has therefore been satisfied.

Because a genuine issue of material fact remains regarding Defendants' qualification for state action immunity, the Court cannot conclude that Defendants have, as a matter of law, engaged in violations of state and federal antitrust laws. Accordingly, summary judgment in favor of Plaintiff is not proper at this time.

CONCLUSION

Upon consideration of the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED and ADJUDGED that:

1. Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment (Dkt. # 10) is DENIED.
2. Plaintiff's Motion for Partial Summary Judgment (Dkt. # 32) is DENIED.
3. Defendants are DIRECTED to file a response to Plaintiff's Motion to Substitute Parties (Dkt. # 129) on or before December 20, 1993, in the absence of which the Court will take Plaintiff's Motion under advisement and rule thereon.
4. Amicus Curiae Florida Public Service Commission's Motion for Leave to File Response to Union Carbide's Notice Re: Ticor (Dkt. # 126) is DENIED as MOOT, as all parties and amicus participants have submitted revised memoranda to the Court.
5. Defendants' Motion to Strike Section III of Plaintiff's Response Re: Supplemental Authority (Dkt. # 142) is DENIED [*32] as MOOT, as all parties have submitted revised memoranda to the Court.

DONE AND ORDERED, at Tampa, Florida, this 8th day of December, 1993.

RALPH W. NIMMONS, JR.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

End of Document

Virtual Maintenance v. Prime Computer

United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit

August 9, 1991, Argued ; December 15, 1993, Decided ; December 15, 1993, Filed

Nos. 90-2249, 91-1273

Reporter

11 F.3d 660 *; 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 32575 ; 1993-2 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,446

VIRTUAL MAINTENANCE, INC., Plaintiff-Appellee, v. PRIME COMPUTER, INC., Defendant-Appellant.

Subsequent History: [\[1\]](#) Rehearings En Banc Denied March 3, 1994, Reported at: 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 4416.

Prior History: On Appeal from the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan. District No. 89-71762. Elizabeth Higdon, Senior District Judge.

Original Opinion of June 4, 1993, Reported at: 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 13182.

Core Terms

software, customer, market power, hardware, tying product, suppliers, switching, matter of law, aftermarkets, manufacturer, prices, automotive, derivative, consumer, package, costs, district court, minicomputers, revisions, license, updates

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

HN1 Summary Judgment, Burdens of Proof

Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 587, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538 \(1986\), did not create a special burden on plaintiffs responding to summary judgment challenges in antitrust cases, but requires only that the non-moving party's inferences be reasonable and not economically senseless.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > Per Se Rule

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

HN2 Tying Arrangements, Per Se Rule

The elements of a per se tying claim are as follows: (1) There must be a tying arrangement between two distinct products or services, (2) the seller must have sufficient economic power in the tying market to restrain appreciably competition in the tied product market, and (3) the amount of commerce affected must be not insubstantial.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

HN3 Regulated Practices, Market Definition

Defining a market, or submarket, on the basis of demand considerations alone is erroneous because such an approach fails to consider the supply side of the market. The relevant product market cannot be determined without considering the cross-elasticity of supply.

Counsel: For VIRTUAL MAINTENANCE, INC., Plaintiff - Appellee: Ronald S. Katz, Janet S. Arnold, Coudert Brothers, San Francisco, CA. Donald M. Falk, Mayer, Brown & Platt, Washington, DC. Rodger D. Young, ARGUED, BRIEFED, Jamal J. Hamood, BRIEFED, Young & Hamood, Southfield, MI.

For PRIME COMPUTER, INC., Defendant - Appellant: Stephen F. Wasinger, Howard B. Iwrey, Honigman, Miller, Schwartz & Cohn, Detroit, MI. Charles Fried, ARGUED, Harvard Law School, Cambridge, MA. Deborah J. Hart, BRIEFED, James C. Burling, BRIEFED, Hale & Dorr, Boston, MA.

Judges: Before: JONES and SUHRHEINRICH, Circuit Judges; and LIVELY, Senior Circuit Judge.

Opinion by: SUHRHEINRICH

Opinion

[*661] AMENDED OPINION

SUHRHEINRICH, Circuit Judge.

In our original decision in this case,¹ we reversed the judgment of the trial court, which implemented the jury's general verdict in favor of plaintiff and overruled defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict ("j.n.o.v."). We did so upon our conclusion that each of three alternative legal theories of anticompetitive conduct that were presented to the jury were erroneous as a matter of law. We then vacated the award of damages and the injunction issued by the trial court and remanded with instructions to enter judgment in favor of the defendant. The United States Supreme Court directed us to reconsider our original decision in light of Eastman Kodak Co. v. Image Technical Serv. Inc., 119 L. Ed. 2d 265, 112 S. Ct. 2072 (1992), in which the Supreme ^[*662] Court held that the existence of competition in a primary equipment market does not preclude, ^[2] as a matter of law, a finding of market or monopoly power in derivative aftermarkets.

I.

The opinion only briefly revisits the relevant facts.² Defendant Prime Computer, Inc. ("Prime") manufactures and markets computer systems, and provides maintenance services for those systems. Of significance to this lawsuit is one of its hardware lines, the "50 Series" minicomputer, and one of its applications software products, the so-called Computer-Aided Design/Computer-Aided Manufacturing system ("CAD/CAM"), which can be used with the 50 Series minicomputers.

¹ Virtual Maintenance, Inc. v. Prime Computer, Inc., 957 F.2d 1318 (6th Cir. 1992), vacated, 121 L. Ed. 2d 235, 113 S. Ct. 314 (Oct. 13, 1992) (No. 92-90). ("Virtual I").

² For a more detailed history of the case, see id.

Ford Motor Company ("Ford") created [3] and owns a CAD/CAM software design program for use in designing automobiles. Ford's CAD/CAM program is called Product Design Graphic System ("PDGS"). Ford frequently revises the software program, and requires the automotive design companies with which it does business to use the most recent version of Ford's PDGS in order to facilitate the transmission of design specifications through CAD/CAM software.

Ford licenses defendant Prime as the exclusive distributor of Ford's version of PDGS under a year-to-year contract. Ford's version of PDGS runs only in Prime's 50 Series minicomputers, but can be translated to other systems at a higher cost.

Prime also distributes software support (i.e., revisions, modifications, updates, and support services) for PDGS software. Prime offers this software support to Ford's design companies as part of a package that includes hardware maintenance on the Prime 50 Series minicomputers. PDGS revisions may be purchased separately from the hardware maintenance, but only at a prohibitive expense. In contrast, the general contract to purchase PDGS does not contain a hardware maintenance requirement.

Plaintiff Virtual Maintenance, Inc. ("Virtual") brought this [4] antitrust action after unsuccessfully attempting to enter into hardware maintenance contracts with owners of Prime 50 Series computers. Virtual contended that Prime's package constituted an illegal tying arrangement in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1, by conditioning the purchase of software support required by Ford to hardware maintenance from Prime (the tying product).

Virtual's case was presented to the jury on three alternative theories of liability based on the alleged tie of hardware maintenance services to PDGS updates: (1) a per se claim based on a tying market of all CAD/CAM software; (2) a per se claim based on a tying product market of Ford-required PDGS; and (3) a rule of reason claim alleging that the clause in Prime's software maintenance package contract requiring the customer to use Prime's hardware maintenance services created unreasonable and anticompetitive effects in the market for maintaining Prime's 50 Series computer systems. The jury returned a general verdict in favor of Virtual. The district court denied Prime's motion for j.n.o.v. and entered judgment in favor of Virtual.

On appeal, we rejected each of [5] Virtual's theories, and reversed the judgment of the district court with instructions to enter judgment in favor of Prime. In accordance with the Supreme Court's directive, we will consider whether any of these prior rulings are impacted by Eastman Kodak.

II.

A.

In Eastman Kodak, the antitrust plaintiffs were a group of independent service organizations (ISO's) that had been servicing Kodak copying and micrographic equipment since the early 1980s. They brought suit after Kodak began restricting the sale of replacement parts for its photocopiers and micrographic equipment to only those buyers who also purchased Kodak service or repaired their own machines. Kodak equipment is unique; its parts are not compatible with its competitors' machines. Because of [*663] Kodak's restrictive policy, the ISO's were unable to obtain suitable parts and many were forced out of business. The plaintiffs also offered evidence that some customers who preferred the plaintiffs' service were forced, as a result of Kodak's practice, to switch to Kodak's service. Plaintiffs alleged, inter alia, that Kodak had tied the sale of service to the sale of parts in violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act. [6] 112 S. Ct. at 2076-77.³

³ Plaintiffs also claimed that Kodak had unlawfully monopolized and attempted to monopolize the sale of service for Kodak machines in violation of § 2 of the Sherman Act.

The district court granted summary judgment for Kodak. A divided panel of the Ninth Circuit reversed, finding a genuine issue of material fact as to whether Kodak had sufficient economic power in the tying product market (parts) to restrict competition appreciably in the tied product market (service). Id. at 2078.

Before the Supreme Court, Kodak did not offer any actual data on the proposed markets, but rather urged the adoption of a substantive legal rule that interbrand competition foreclosed finding of monopoly power in derivative aftermarkets as a matter of law. Id. at 2082. The Supreme Court framed the issue as "whether a defendant's lack of market power in the primary equipment market precludes--as a matter of law--the possibility of market power in derivative aftermarkets." Starting with the assumption that Kodak [7] lacked market power in the equipment market, the Supreme Court nonetheless refused to accept on faith Kodak's proposed rule absent evidence to support it. Thus, contrary to Kodak's assertion, "there [was] no immutable physical law--no 'basic economic reality'--insisting that competition in the equipment market cannot coexist with market power in the aftermarkets." Id. at 2084.⁴

The Court found that the plaintiffs had offered a "forceful reason" why Kodak's theory might not accurately explain the behavior of the primary and derivative markets for complex and durable goods: "the existence of significant [8] information and switching costs." Id. at 2085. Regarding information costs, the Court observed that in order for the service-market price to affect equipment demand, consumers must engage in accurate "lifecycle pricing"--that is, they must inform themselves of the total cost of the package at the time of purchase. Lifecycle pricing, however, is difficult to perform. Id. at 2085-86.

Furthermore, the cost of switching products may be high, and consumers who have already purchased the equipment will tolerate some level of service-price increase before switching equipment brands. Id. at 2087. "Under this scenario, a seller profitably could maintain supra-competitive prices in the aftermarket if the switching costs were high relative to the increase in service prices, and the number of locked-in customers were high relative to the number of new purchases." Id.

Also critical to the Court's conclusion that summary judgment on the ISO's claims was improper was evidence presented by the plaintiffs that certain parts were available exclusively through Kodak, that Kodak had control over the availability [9] of parts it didn't manufacture, and that Kodak's control over its parts market had excluded service competition, boosted service prices, and forced unwilling consumption of Kodak service when plaintiffs' service would have been preferred. Id. at 2081. The Court stated that under existing precedents, the foregoing evidence "would be sufficient to entitle [the plaintiffs] to a trial on their claim of market power." Id. The Supreme Court affirmed the decision of the appellate court reversing the district court's grant of summary judgment to Kodak.

B.

1.

Eastman Kodak did not involve a rule of reason theory of liability, and we see [*664] no reason to alter our conclusion that there was insufficient evidence to support a jury verdict under the rule of reason. Even with Ford-required software support as the tying product market, Virtual failed to demonstrate a substantial threat that Prime would acquire market power in the most narrowly defined tied product market of hardware maintenance of Prime 50 Series systems.⁵ See Virtual I, 957 F.2d at 1330 (the foreclosure of at most the 400 50 Series systems out of thousands of systems [10] capable of using PDGS is insignificant as a matter of law). Given Virtual's failure of proof under the most restrictive definition of tied product market, we do not think our ruling on this issue is affected by Eastman Kodak.

⁴The Supreme Court made clear that [HN1\[↑\] Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 587, 106 S. Ct. 1348, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538 \(1986\)](#), did not create a special burden on plaintiffs responding to summary judgment challenges in antitrust cases, but requires only that the non-moving party's inferences be reasonable and not "economically senseless." Eastman Kodak, 112 S. Ct. at 2083.

⁵Virtual claimed that a jury could find that Prime possessed almost total control over the Prime 50 Series hardware maintenance market. Virtual I, 957 F.2d at 1330.

2.

Under Virtual's first per se claim ⁶, the district court defined the relevant market as "the sale of software revisions and support for the CAD/CAM industry in general." We found no error in the legal adequacy of the district court's definition, but concluded that Prime possessed at most an 11% share of the market, which is insufficient as a matter of law to confer market power. Virtual I, 957 at 1325 (citing Jefferson Parish Hosp. Dist. No. 2 in Hyde, 466 U.S. 2, 26, 80 L. Ed. 2d 2, 104 S. Ct. 1551 (1984) (30% market share does not confer market power); A.I. Root v. Computer/Dynamics, Inc., 806 F.2d 673, 675 (6th Cir. 1986) [11] (2-4% market share is insufficient); Grappone, Inc. v. Subaru of New England, Inc., 858 F.2d 792, 796 (1st Cir. 1985) (5% market share insufficient)).⁷ We find nothing in Eastman Kodak which requires us to alter this analysis. We therefore hold that a per se tying violation could not be established under Virtual's first per se theory because Prime lacks market power in the general CAD/CAM product market, for the reasons stated here and in section II.B.1. of our decision in Virtual I.

[12] 3.

Our ruling regarding Virtual's second per se claim requires much closer scrutiny. The other market that Virtual urged was defined as "the sale of software revisions and support of software necessary to do business with Ford Motor Company." Virtual I, 957 F.2d at 1325. Prime argued that this instruction defined the tying product market too narrowly as a matter of law, and we agreed. We found that market definition defective as a matter of law because it was "based solely on one customer's requirements," which "this court has held . . . does not create a separate product market." Id. at 1327 (citing International Logistics Group, Ltd. v. Chrysler Corp., 884 F.2d 904, 908 (6th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1066, 108 L. Ed. 2d 784, 110 S. Ct. 1783 (1990); Dunn & Mavis, Inc. v. Nu-Car Driveaway, Inc., 691 F.2d 241 (6th Cir. 1982)).

In response to Virtual's contention that Ford is not the only customer of Prime's products, but that all of Ford's design suppliers made up the customer market for "Ford-required CAD/CAM," we stated:

Virtual seeks to distinguish these [13] cases by pointing out that Ford is not the only customer of Prime's products; rather, all of Ford's design suppliers make up the customer market for "Ford-required CAD/CAM." This ignores the fact that Ford requires its suppliers to purchase the software updates for Ford's benefit. Ford is ultimately the single consumer of its specialized design software because Ford's requirements define the demand for the software and the updates. But defining the [*665] market by Ford's requirements creates the appearance of market power based only upon the demand side of the market. HN3⁸ Defining a market, or "submarket," on the basis of demand considerations alone is erroneous because such an approach fails to consider the supply side of the market. Philip E. Areeda & Herbert Hovenkamp, Antitrust Law, P518.1g at 471 & n.26 (Supp. 1990) (citing United States v. Central State Bank, 817 F.2d 22 (6th Cir. 1987)). The relevant product market cannot be determined without considering the cross-elasticity of supply.

⁶ As noted in Virtual I, HN2⁹ the elements of a per se tying claim are as follows: "(1) There must be a tying arrangement between two distinct products or services; (2) the seller must have sufficient economic power in the tying market to restrain appreciably competition in the tied product market; and (3) the amount of commerce affected must be not insubstantial." Virtual I, 957 F.2d at 1323 (quoting Directory Sales Management Corporation v. Ohio Bell Tel. Co., 833 F.2d 606, 609 (6th Cir. 1982) (other quotations omitted)).

⁷ We stated: "An 11% market share, standing alone, is insufficient as a matter of law to confer the 'great market power, evidenced by an exceptional demand for the tying product' necessary for a per se illegal tie." Virtual I, 957 F.2d at 1325 (quoting A.I. Root, 806 F.2d at 676).

957 F.2d at 1327.

Virtual countered that Prime has no supply side competition because of its exclusive license for PDGS. We rejected this argument as "confusing the tying [14] product (software support for PDGS) with the interbrand market relevant for antitrust analysis," id.,⁸ and ruled that "the relevant tying market is comprised of all CAD/CAM software reasonably interchangeable with PDGS." Id. Critical to this analysis was the view that PDGS software support is an intrabrand "submarket":

[15] Prime has market power in the trivial sense that no one else makes PDGS. But true market power--power sufficient to change and sustain anticompetitive prices--cannot be inferred from this because were Prime to charge exorbitant prices for its software support, its customers would simply switch to some other manufacturer of PDGS-type software. Prime's lack of market power over the general market for CAD/CAM software thus prevents Prime from controlling the "submarket" for PDGS software.

957 F.2d at 1327-28.⁹ Upon refusing to view Ford-required PDGS software support as a separate tying product market, we rejected Virtual's lock-in and switching costs arguments as a matter of law:

[16] Virtual responds that Ford and its design suppliers cannot switch to a new supplier of software support because they are "locked-in" to Prime as the sole supplier due to their substantial investments in Prime 50 Series computers and other hardware. While Ford might believe it is "locked- in," this is due in large part to its own decision to purchase Prime's software and invest in Prime's computer systems. [*666] But a customer's initial purchase of a particular manufacturer's product does not justify a limited market definition. Defining the market by customer demand after the customer has chosen a single supplier fails to take into account that the supplier (here Prime) must compete with other similar suppliers to be designated the sole source in the first place.

Id. at 1328 (citation omitted).

⁸We observed that this court previously had refused to ignore interbrand competition by limiting the product market to one manufacturer's product, citing A.I. Root Co. v. Computer/Dynamics, Inc., 806 F.2d 673 (6th Cir. 1986) and Kingsport Motors, Inc. v. Chrysler Corp., 644 F.2d 566 (6th Cir. 1991). Both of these cases can be distinguished from the instant one. The disposition in A.I. Root turned on the fact that the evidence in the case established that equipment using BOSS software had "close substitutes." 806 F.2d at 676. The relevant market was not BOSS software as a unique product market, but small business computers. Id. at 675-76. Thus, the defendant lacked that "essential characteristic" of an illegal tying arrangement, the seller's ability to coerce customers into buying an unwanted tied product. Id. at 677. In fact, the plaintiff in that case, rather than submitting to the tie, purchased new IBM equipment and software. Id. at 675.

Kingsport Motors, 644 F.2d 566, is likewise distinguishable because there the relevant product market, "properly analyzed," was "all medium priced cars available for sale in the United States." Id. at 571. So defined, there was simply no proof that the seller had any power to raise prices or that the tying arrangement at issue affected any appreciable number of buyers within the applicable market. Id. Thus, Kingsport Motors, by focusing on the primary equipment market rather than the aftermarket cannot compel a similar result in this case.

⁹In rejecting Virtual's contention that PDGS constitutes a relevant "submarket," we relied, in part, on the proposition in A.I. Root Co. v. Computer/Dynamics, Inc., 806 F.2d 673 (6th Cir. 1986), that "competitors of [defendant] could produce computer hardware and software equivalent to that manufactured by [defendant]. Accordingly, [defendant's product] did not compose a separate and distinct submarket within the computer industry as to which we should measure 'market share.'" Virtual I, 957 F.2d at 1327 (quoting A.I. Root, 806 F.2d at 675-76). As previously noted, see supra note 7, A.I. Root rejected the plaintiff's attempts to define BOSS as a separate market because although it was copyrighted, there was proof of close substitutes. Id. Closer to the mark is a case discussed in A.I. Root, Digidyne Corp. v. Data General, 734 F.2d 1336 (9th Cir. 1984). A.I. Root distinguished Digidyne on the basis that the tying product (RDOS), a computer command system, was unique. In contrast, the plaintiff in A.I. Root had not presented any evidence that BOSS was particularly unique or desirable. Here, Virtual has offered proof of PDGS's desirable-ness; namely, Ford's requirement that all the design companies with which it does business use the software and software updates.

Under Eastman Kodak, our rejection of Virtual's second per se claim based on a tying product of Ford-required software support was misguided. That Ford had many competitors to choose from when it made its initial decision to grant the exclusive license to Prime cannot, after Eastman Kodak, preclude as a matter of law Virtual's proposed theory of market power because it ignores information [17] costs. It follows that our rejection of Virtual's "lock-in" argument, on the basis of an interbrand competitive market in the initial purchase of Prime's software package and Prime 50 Series minicomputers, was also in error.

Eastman Kodak also requires us to rethink our characterization of the tying product market here as merely the preference of one customer. Unlike Eastman Kodak, the initial decision to purchase Prime equipment and software was made by a single consumer, Ford. However, by shifting the focus to the derivative aftermarket of software support, there is not a single consumer, but numerous automotive design companies doing business with Ford. In contrast with International Logistics, 894 F.2d at 904, which involved vertical nonprice restraints unilaterally imposed by defendant Chrysler upon its distributors, the automotive design companies in the present case are independent companies, not a part of Ford. Unlike Dunn & Mavis, 691 F.2d 241, where it was held that an agreement between a single seller of transportation services and a single automobile manufacturer was not an illegal "group boycott," the [18] present case does not involve merely an arrangement between a single consumer and a single supplier. Thus, the market in this case is not defined by Ford, as a customer of Prime, but by Ford's requirements that affect the choice of Prime's other customers, Ford suppliers.¹⁰

The similarities between this case and Eastman Kodak [19] are apparent. As in Eastman Kodak, the alleged tie is not between equipment and parts, where interbrand competition would defeat market power and a per se tying claim. Rather, the alleged tie is in the derivative aftermarkets. Like Kodak, Prime is able to exercise control over the sale of software support because of its exclusive distribution license from Ford, and Ford's requirement that its automotive design suppliers use the most current version of Prime's software support. Thus, it can be argued that Prime enjoys a significant advantage in the Ford-required software support market by virtue of Ford's license and the requirement Ford places on the automotive design companies to use the most current version of PDGS. In other words, there is evidence to make the argument that Prime's tying arrangement bears that "essential characteristic" of an illegal tying arrangement, the ability to exploit control over the tying product to force the buyer to purchase an unwanted tied product. Jefferson Parish, 466 U.S. at 12.

Like the ISO's in Eastman Kodak, Virtual presented evidence of price manipulation. An expert for Virtual testified that although Prime [20] offered software support for sale separately, repurchase of software to obtain updates would cost as much as 900% more than if purchased in the software support/hardware maintenance package. There was also evidence that Prime does not treat all customers equally. Prime apparently allows one customer, Ford Aerospace, to continue to [*667] receive software support without purchasing hardware maintenance from Prime. Virtual also offered proof that customers would have preferred Virtual's service to Prime's, but were effectively precluded by the tie.

Virtual offered expert testimony concerning lock-in and switching costs. Virtual's industry experts testified that customers were "locked-in" to the hardware maintenance by the substantial cost incurred for hardware, maintenance, and training, most of which would be substantially worthless if the customer switched to another manufacturer's system. A Ford employee, called by Prime, testified that Ford itself felt "locked-in" to Prime, stating that Ford could not change from Prime's computer system and remain economically viable in the automotive industry. Virtual's expert also opined that Prime could substantially raise its maintenance prices before [21] customers would abandon their investment.

¹⁰ This view is not inconsistent with dicta in International Logistics, 884 F.2d at 909. There, we stated that Chrysler products could not be a relevant market "absent a government imposed distinctions between Chrysler manufactured replacement parts and Chrysler compatible replacement parts . . ." Id. By implication, had such a government imposed distinction existed, it may have had the "unique characteristics that would support its consideration as a separate geographic market." Id. In this case, the "imposed distinction" is Ford's requirement that its automotive design suppliers use the most current version of PDGS marketed exclusively through Prime.

Finally, Virtual made a showing that a "not insubstantial" amount of commerce was affected in that it stood to lose significant profits over a five-year period. Thus, under Eastman Kodak, we conclude that Virtual's second definition of tying product market was not improper.

C.

Eastman Kodak dictates that we vacate our holding as to Virtual's second definition of tying product market on a per se tying claim. All other aspects of our holdings in Virtual I are reaffirmed and reinstated. Because the general jury verdict in the first trial provides no indication of the jury's reliance on this theory in support of the original verdict, we are obligated to reverse the verdict and remand for a new trial. See Sunkist Growers, Inc. v. Winckler & Smith Citrus Products Co., 370 U.S. 19, 29-30, 8 L. Ed. 2d 305, 82 S. Ct. 1130 \(1962\); United New York and New Jersey Sandy Hook Pilots Assoc. v. Halecki, 358 U.S. 613, 619, 3 L. Ed. 2d 541, 79 S. Ct. 517 \(1959\); Wilmington Star Mining Co. v. Fulton, 205 U.S. 60, 51 L. Ed. 708, 27 S. Ct. 412 \(1907\); Maryland v. Baldwin, 112 U.S. 490, 28 L. Ed. 822, 5 S. Ct. 278 \(1884\); see also Arthur S. Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 729 F.2d 1050 [22] (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1036, 83 L. Ed. 2d 401, 105 S. Ct. 510, 105 S. Ct. 511 (1984). On remand, the district court is instructed to conduct a new trial on the sole theory of a per se claim based on a tying product market of Ford-required PDGS software support.

ADDENDUM

Both Virtual and Prime petitioned for rehearing in this matter. We have reviewed our decision carefully in light of these petitions and responses thereto. Prime's requests for clarification have been incorporated in the corrected opinion; Prime's petition for rehearing is otherwise denied. We decline Virtual's request to apply Griffin v. United States, 116 L. Ed. 2d 371, 112 S. Ct. 466 \(1991\), which held that a general jury verdict in a criminal case may be affirmed even though one of the alternate legally sound theories is not supported by sufficient evidence. Griffin, a criminal case, does not alter the longstanding civil general verdict rule, see Wilmington Star Mining Co. v. Fulton, 205 U.S. 60, 78, 51 L. Ed. 708, 27 S. Ct. 412 \(1907\), a principle to which this circuit has consistently adhered. See, e.g., Lilley v. BTM Corp., 958 F.2d 746, 753 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, [23] 121 L. Ed. 2d 287, 113 S. Ct. 376 (1992); Arthur S. Langenderfer, Inc. v. S.E. Johnson Co., 729 F.2d 1050, 1058 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1036, 83 L. Ed. 2d 401, 105 S. Ct. 510, 105 S. Ct. 511 (1984); Doherty v. American Motors Corp., 728 F.2d 334, 344 (6th Cir. 1984); The Elder-Beerman Stores Corp. v. Federated Dep't Stores, Inc., 459 F.2d 138, 147-48 (6th Cir. 1972); Volasco Products Co. v. Lloyd A. Fry Roofing Co., 308 F.2d 383, 390 (6th Cir. 1962). We therefore hold that Griffin has no application in the present case. The opinion filed in this cause June 4, 1993, and reported 995 F.2d 1324, is withdrawn and superseded by this amended opinion.

Ashmore v. Northeast Petroleum Div.

United States District Court for the District of Maine

January 19, 1994, Decided ; January 19, 1994, Filed

Civil No. 93-199-P-C

Reporter

843 F. Supp. 759 *; 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 671 ; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,506

FREDERICK ASHMORE, DAVID BOYA, WILLIAM SIMONE, and RICHARD SIMEONE, Plaintiffs v. NORTHEAST PETROLEUM DIVISION OF CARGILL, INC., NORTHEAST PETROLEUM CORPORATION OF MAINE, NORTHEAST PETROLEUM CORPORATION OF CAPE COD, d/b/a NORTHEAST PETROLEUM, and CARGILL, INC., Defendants antitrust, anti trust law, pricing system, antitrust violation, promise, discriminatory, customers, sales representative, competitors, terminated, factors, anticompetitive, Defendants', employees, damages, promissory estoppel, purchasers, retaliatory discharge, Robinson-Patman Act, Clayton Act, parties, treble damages, suffer injury, conspiracy, consumers, centers, courts, violation of antitrust laws, motion to dismiss, cause of action

Core Terms

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > ... > Responses > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss

HN1 [] Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections, Motions to Dismiss

To resolve a defendant's motion to dismiss, a court must accept as true all factual allegations in the complaint, construe them in favor of the plaintiff, and decide whether, as a matter of law, the plaintiff could not prove any set of facts which would entitle it to relief.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

HN2 [] Private Actions, Remedies

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 15\(a\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > General Overview

HN3 [] Price Discrimination, Competitive Injuries

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 13\(a\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > US Department of Justice Actions > Criminal Actions > General Overview

HN4 Price Discrimination, Competitive Injuries

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 13a.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Remedies > Damages

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > General Overview

Torts > ... > Elements > Causation > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Clayton Act

HN5 Remedies, Damages

In determining whether a plaintiff has standing to sue for treble damages under section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 15, a court must consider: (1) the causal connection between the plaintiff's injury and the defendant's violation of the antitrust law; (2) the nature of the plaintiff's alleged injury and whether it was of the type that the antitrust laws were intended to forestall; (3) the directness of the injury particularly if the harm to the plaintiff is of a tenuous and speculative nature; (4) the danger of duplicative recoveries or complex apportionment of damages; and (5) the existence of more immediate classes of potential plaintiffs who could be expected to vindicate the violation of the antitrust laws.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

HN6 Private Actions, Standing

The antitrust laws were enacted for the protection of competition, not competitors.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

HN7 Regulated Practices, Market Definition

Antitrust standing does not require an allegation that one is a competitor or consumer in the relevant market if a plaintiff was manipulated or utilized by a defendant as a fulcrum, conduit, or market force to injure competitors.

843 F. Supp. 759, *759A994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 671, 671

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Remedies > Damages

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Remedies > Damages

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > Prioritizing Resources & Organization for Intellectual Property Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Remedies > General Overview

HN8 Remedies, Damages

Congress's purpose in enacting the treble damage remedy in section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 15, was to create a private enforcement mechanism that would deter violators and deprive them of the fruits of their illegal actions and would provide ample compensation to the victims of antitrust violations. The statute provides a remedy for "any person" injured and does not confine its protection to consumers, or to purchasers, or to competitors, or to sellers.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Coverage > Commerce Requirement

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Jurisdiction

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Penalties

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Remedies > Damages

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Discrimination > Buyer Liability

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Jurisdiction

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Remedies > Damages

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > US Department of Justice Actions > Criminal Actions > General Overview

HN9 [L] Coverage, Commerce Requirement

There can be no doubt that Congress was concerned with the conduct of employees and agents who assisted in carrying out antitrust violations in the discharge of their duties. The Robinson-Patman Act imposes personal criminal liability on any person engaged in commerce who knowingly assists in a discriminatory transaction of sale. 15 U.S.C.S. § 13a. Providing a remedy to those employees who suffer injury for refusing to violate this law will serve the deterrent purpose of both the criminal sanctions in the Robinson-Patman Act and the treble-damages remedy of the Clayton Act.

Labor & Employment Law > Wrongful Termination > Remedies > General Overview

Workers' Compensation & SSDI > Remedies Under Other Laws > Common Law

Labor & Employment Law > Wrongful Termination > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > Wrongful Termination > Public Policy

HN10 [L] Wrongful Termination, Remedies

Maine law provides a limited statutory cause of action which protects employees who refuse to implement an employer's unlawful practice only when such practice would create a danger of serious injury or death. Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 26, § 833. However, the Maine courts have not yet ruled on whether Maine common law will permit a cause of action to be established for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

HN11 [L] Regulated Practices, Market Definition

Failure to allege participation in the relevant market, although it weighs heavily against antitrust standing, is not fatal to a claim of standing under the antitrust laws.

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Federal Questions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Jurisdiction > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Federal & State Interrelationships > Choice of Law > General Overview

HN12 [L] Subject Matter Jurisdiction, Federal Questions

Supplemental state-law claims in a case where jurisdiction is based on federal question are decided with reference to the choice-of-law provisions of the state in which the federal court sits.

Civil Procedure > ... > Federal & State Interrelationships > Choice of Law > General Overview

HN13 [blue icon] Federal & State Interrelationships, Choice of Law

In the absence of an effective choice of law by the parties to a contract, a court must consider what state has the most significant relation with respect to a specific issue in dispute, including the following contacts to the extent that they are relevant to the issue: (1) place of contracting; (2) place of negotiation; (3) place of performance; (4) where the subject matter of the contract is located; and (5) the domicile, residence, nationality, place of incorporation, and place of business of the parties. Where the place of negotiating the contract and the place of performance are in the same state, the local law of that state will be applied except in limited circumstances.

Civil Procedure > ... > Federal & State Interrelationships > Choice of Law > Significant Relationships

Labor & Employment Law > Wrongful Termination > Public Policy

Torts > Procedural Matters > Conflict of Law > Significant Relationships

Civil Procedure > Preliminary Considerations > Federal & State Interrelationships > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Federal & State Interrelationships > Choice of Law > General Overview

Torts > Procedural Matters > Conflict of Law > General Overview

HN14 [blue icon] Choice of Law, Significant Relationships

To evaluate conflicts of law in tort cases and in order to determine the state which has the most significant relationship to the occurrence and parties, the following contacts are considered by Maine courts to the extent that they are relevant to a particular issue: (a) the place where the injury occurred; (b) the place where the conduct causing the injury occurred; (c) the domicile, residence, nationality, place of incorporation, and place of business of the parties; and (d) the place where the relationship, if any, between the parties is centered.

Counsel: [1] For Plaintiff: Daniel W. Bates, Esq., Kenneth D. Keating, Esq., Petruccelli & Martin, Portland, Maine.

For Defendants: John J. O'Leary Jr., Esq., Pierce, Atwood, Scribner, Allen, Smith & Lancaster, Portland, Maine. Chriss B. Wetherington, Esq., Bernhardt K. Wruble, Esq., Verner, Liipfer, Bernard, McPherson & Hand, Washington, D.C.

Judges: CARTER

Opinion by: GENE CARTER

Opinion

[*760] GENE CARTER, Chief Judge

MEMORANDUM OF DECISION AND ORDER DENYING DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS

This action was commenced by Plaintiffs Frederick Ashmore, David Boya, William Simone, [*761] and Richard Simeone alleging that they were dismissed from employment as sales representatives for Defendants¹ in retaliation for Plaintiffs' refusal to implement a pricing system which allegedly violated the Robinson-Patman Antidiscrimination Act of 1936.² 15 U.S.C. §§ 13, 13\(a\), and 22. The Complaint states five causes of action. In Count I, Plaintiffs seek treble damages for injury sustained due to violation of the Robinson-Patman Act in accordance with Section 4 of the Clayton Act. 15 U.S.C. § 15. Complaint (Docket No. 1) PP 12-37. Counts II, III, IV, and V state claims based [2] on breach of contract, promissory estoppel, breach of implied duty of fair dealing, and tortious termination in violation of public policy, respectively. Id. PP 38-54. In Count VI, Plaintiff Ashmore seeks relief under the Maine "Whistleblowers' Protection Act." 26 M.R.S.A. §§ 831-840. Motion to Amend Complaint (Docket No. 11), Reply Memorandum in Support of Plaintiffs' Motion for Leave to Amend Complaint (Docket No. 15) at 3-4.

[3] Now pending before the Court is Defendant Cargill Inc.'s Motion to Dismiss Count I, for lack of standing, and Counts II, III, IV, and V for failure to state a claim. (Docket No. 4). Defendants seek dismissal of Count I because they contend that Plaintiffs lack standing to bring a private action under section 4 of the antitrust laws.³ Id. Defendants also seek dismissal of Counts II, IV, and V as to Plaintiff Ashmore for failure to state a cause of action under Maine law, which Defendants contend governs this contract. Finally, Defendants seek dismissal of Count III for failure to state a claim of promissory estoppel.

[4] HN1 To resolve Defendants' Motion to Dismiss, the Court must accept as true all factual allegations in the Complaint, construe them in favor of Plaintiffs, and decide whether, as a matter of law, Plaintiffs could not prove any set of facts which would entitle them to relief. See Roeder v. Alpha Industries, Inc., 814 F.2d 22, 25 \(1st Cir. 1987\); Gott v. Simpson, 745 F. Supp. 765, 768 \(D. Me. 1990\).

I. The Factual Allegations

Plaintiffs were employed as sales representatives by Defendant Cargill's Northeast Division As sales representatives, Plaintiffs sold petroleum products to both small and large retailers in the northeastern United States. Plaintiff Ashmore worked out of Northeast Division's Maine office. Plaintiffs Boya and Simone were based in Northeast's Connecticut office, and Plaintiff Simeone was based in Massachusetts. All were trained at and received pricing instructions from the Chelsea, Massachusetts administrative offices of Northeast Division.

Plaintiffs allege that in 1991, Defendants adopted a discriminatory pricing system which violated the Robinson-Patman Act. Specifically they claim that:

Northeast [5] implemented a company-wide program of assigning customers to pricing groups based on the characteristics of customer loyalty and the ability of each customer to ascertain a fair price ("price sensitivity"). Northeast then assigned different allowances (discounts) to each pricing group. The most generous allowances were assigned to customers in the group [*762] considered to be the most able to ascertain a fair price, and the least loyal to Defendants; and the least generous allowance was granted to customers in the group considered to be the least price sensitive and the most loyal. Northeast determined the daily sale price of each product offered to a particular customer by subtracting from the rack price for the product the allowance assigned to the customer's pricing group. . . . The scheme conferred favored status on large retailers and disfavored status on small retailers

¹ The exact relationship and role of the four Defendants is unclear. Cargill Inc. has responded on behalf of itself and "its unincorporated divisions." Motion to Dismiss (Docket No. 4) P 1. It appears that these unincorporated divisions include Northeast Petroleum Division of Cargill, Inc. It is not clear whether Northeast Petroleum Division of Maine, Inc. and Northeast Petroleum Division of Cape Cod exist at all, are unincorporated divisions of Cargill, or are Massachusetts corporations as alleged in the Complaint. Docket No. 1 PP 7-8. For purposes of this motion to dismiss, the identity and relationship of the Defendants are not critical.

² Plaintiff Ashmore refused to implement this pricing policy at any time; Plaintiffs Boya, Simone, and Simeone refused at first but ultimately were compelled to implement the pricing policy.

³ The issue of whether Plaintiffs have antitrust standing is not an issue of standing in the constitutional sense. Defendants do not argue that Plaintiffs do not allege a case or controversy sufficient to satisfy the requirements of Article III of the Constitution. Rather, their standing argument merely alleges that Plaintiffs are not proper parties to bring this antitrust action. See Associated General Contractors, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519, 535 n.31, 74 L. Ed. 2d 723, 103 S. Ct. 897 \(1977\).

Plaintiffs' Objection to Defendants Motion to Dismiss and Incorporated Memorandum of Law (Docket No. 7) at 2. Plaintiffs further allege that Northeast's sales representatives were required to take an active role in implementing this policy and "based on their familiarity with their customers, they were [6] required to assign each customer" to one of the pricing groups. Id. at 3. Plaintiff Ashmore refused to implement the pricing system. Complaint (Docket No. 1) P 26. Plaintiffs Boya, Simeone, and Simone objected to the new pricing system but were allegedly "forced to implement the price grouping policy under threats of dire consequences." Id. P 27. Defendants terminated Plaintiffs' employment at Northeast on May 29, 1992. Plaintiffs allege that this discharge was in retaliation for "their refusal to engage in criminal activity, and resistance to the unlawful" discriminatory pricing system and "to make an example of them" to other employees who resisted the allegedly illegal practice. Id. PP 34-35.

Plaintiffs further allege that "at all relevant times Defendants Cargill and Northeast Petroleum promised its employees, in writing, that 'no employee will be asked or expected to compromise' Cargill's purported standard that 'business transactions will be the result of legal, open, and honest competition.'" Id. P 39. Plaintiff's allege that they relied on this promise to their detriment. Id. P 10. Based on this written promise and reliance, they allege that Defendants are [7] liable under a theory of breach of contract or promissory estoppel.

II. Standing Under Section 4 of the Clayton Act

Defendants' principal argument for dismissal of Count I is that Plaintiffs lack standing to sue under section 4 of the Clayton Act to recover for damages due to the alleged violation of the Robinson-Patman Act.⁴ [8] Defendants argue that the Robinson-Patman Act was intended to protect only competitors and purchasers and that because Plaintiffs do not allege that they were either competitors or purchasers, they lack standing.⁵ Defendants further

⁴ Section 4 of the Clayton Act provides in relevant part:

HN2 Any person who shall be injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws may sue therefor in any district court of the United States in the district in which the defendant resides or is found . . . without respect to the amount in controversy, and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained, and the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee.

15 U.S.C.S. § 15\(a\).

⁵ For purposes of this challenge to standing, the Court will assume, without deciding, that Plaintiffs could prove that the alleged discriminatory pricing system violates the Robinson-Patman Act which prohibits discrimination in prices under certain circumstances. In relevant part, the Act provides that:

HN3 It shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, either directly or indirectly, to discriminate in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality, where either or any of the purchasers involved in such discrimination are in commerce, . . . and where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce, or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with any person who either grants or knowingly receives the benefit of such discrimination, or with customers of either of them

15 U.S.C.S. § 13\(a\). Also relevant to the arguments before the Court is 15 U.S.C.S. § 13a, which provides criminal penalties For participation in discriminatory sales.

HN4 It shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, to be a party to, or assist in, any transaction of sale, or contract to sell, which discriminates to his knowledge against competitors of the purchaser argue that section 4 provides a remedy only to those who suffer injury which flows from the "anticompetitive effects" of an [*763] antitrust violation. Therefore, they contend that the injury which Plaintiffs suffered due to the allegedly retaliatory discharges was not the type of "antitrust injury" with which Congress was concerned when it enacted section 4 of the Clayton Act. In response to these arguments Plaintiffs contend that because they were "essential participants" in the anticompetitive scheme, and their discharge was a necessary step to achieve the antitrust violation, they have standing under section 4.

[9] The issue of whether an employee has standing to sue under section 4 on a claim of retaliatory discharge for resisting the implementation of a policy which violates the federal antitrust laws has not been addressed by the Supreme Court and is a matter of first impression in this Circuit. As the parties point out, there is a split among federal courts on this issue.⁶ [11] The Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit has held that an employee subjected to retaliatory discharge for refusing to cooperate with a price-fixing conspiracy in violation of the Sherman Act has standing under section 4. Ostrofe v. H. S. Crocker Co., 740 F.2d 739 (9th Cir. 1984), cert. dismissed at request of parties, 469 U.S. 1200 (1985).⁷ The United States District Court for the Southern District of New York followed the Ninth Circuit's Ostrofe II holding in Donahue v. Pendleton Woolen Mills, Inc., 633 F. Supp. 1423 (S.D.N.Y. 1986). On the other hand, courts in the Seventh, Third, and Tenth Circuits have held that employees who allege retaliatory discharge for refusal to cooperate with policies that violate the antitrust [10] laws do not have standing under Section 4. Bichan v. Chemetron Corp., 681 F.2d 514 (7th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1016, 75 L. Ed. 2d 487, 103 S. Ct. 1261 (1983); Winther v. DEC International, Inc., 625 F. Supp. 100 (D. Colo. 1985); McNulty v. Borden, Inc., 542 F. Supp. 655 (E.D. Pa. 1982).⁸ The Sixth Circuit has also denied standing to a sales representative who alleged his territory was reduced and later eliminated due to his refusal to cooperate in an antitrust violation. Fallis v. Pendleton Woolen Mills, Inc., 866 F.2d 209, 211 (6th Cir. 1989).⁹

[12] These different results have stemmed from varied interpretations of the Supreme Court's holdings in three recent antitrust standing cases: Associated General Contractors v. California State Council of Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519, 74 L. Ed. 2d 723, 103 S. Ct. 897 (1983); Blue Shield of Virginia v. McCready, 457 U.S. 465, 73 L. Ed. 2d 149, 102 S. Ct. 2540 (1982); and Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701, 97 S. Ct. 690 (1977). In the most recent of this trilogy, the Supreme Court set out a comprehensive antitrust standing analysis, identifying factors which must be considered in determining whether a plaintiff may sue under section 4 of the Clayton Act. Associated General, 459 U.S. at 535-45. It is in this framework that this Court must evaluate

Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $ 5,000 or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

⁶ Northeast makes much of the fact that no court has granted standing under section 4 based on a violation of the Robinson-Patman Act. However, the analysis required by the Supreme Court to determine whether a plaintiff has standing under section 4 of the Clayton Act does not depend upon whether the underlying violation is of the Sherman Act or of the Robinson-Patman Act. (see discussion of Associated General, infra). Therefore, the Court is not constrained to consider only those cases based on Robinson-Patman violations.

⁷ In this case, the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit adhered to its prior decision in Ostrofe v. H. S. Crocker Co., 670 F.2d 1378 (9th Cir. 1982), vacated, 460 U.S. 1007 (1983). The earlier decision will be referred to as "Ostrofe I" and the decision on remand as "Ostrofe II".

⁸ There is contrary authority at the district court level in the Third Circuit. See Shaw v. Russell Trucking Line, Inc., 542 F. Supp. 776 (W.D. Pa. 1982). However, the decision in Gregory Marketing Corp. v. Wakefern Food Corp., 787 F.2d 92 (3d Cir. 1986), denying standing to a broker who alleged retaliatory discharge for refusal to violate the Robinson-Patman Act, suggests, without deciding, that the Third Circuit would deny standing to an employee claiming retaliatory discharge for refusal to violate the antitrust laws.

⁹ However, Fallis requires a case-by-case standing analysis, and does not appear to stand for the proposition that no employee may recover on a theory of retaliatory discharge. See Helder v. Hitachi Power Tools, U.S.A. Ltd., 1992-2 U.S. Trade Cas. (CCH) P69,930 (W.D. Mich. 1992) (denying a motion for judgment on the pleadings in a retaliatory discharge case).

Plaintiffs' claim to antitrust standing. [*764] Therefore, the Court will review the Associated General approach before analyzing the matter sub judice.

A. Antitrust Standing under Associated General

Before Associated General, the various circuit courts had adopted different tests incorporating traditional common-law principles to limit the scope of the treble damages provision [13] of the Clayton Act which provides standing to any person injured by reason of violations of the antitrust laws. 15 U.S.C.S. § 15\(a\). The three principal tests that emerged focused on the "directness" of a plaintiff's injury to the alleged violation; whether a plaintiff was in the "target area" of the anticompetitive activity; and whether a plaintiff was arguably within the zone of interests protected by the antitrust laws. Associated General, 459 U.S. at 536 n.33 (citations omitted). In considering these tests, the Supreme Court concluded that Congress intended the availability of the remedy to be construed in light of traditional notions of common law.¹⁰ [15] Id. 530-35. However, the Court declined to adopt a single standard, observing that:

There is a similarity between the struggle of common-law judges to articulate a precise definition of the concept of "proximate cause," and the struggle of federal judges to articulate a precise test to determine whether a party injured by an antitrust violation may recover treble damages. It is common ground that the judicial remedy cannot encompass [14] every conceivable harm that can be traced to alleged wrongdoing. In both situations the infinite variety of claims that may arise make it virtually impossible to announce a black-letter rule that will dictate the result in every case. Instead, previously decided cases identify factors that circumscribe and guide the exercise of judgment in deciding whether the law affords a remedy in specific circumstances.

Id. at 535-36 (footnotes omitted and emphasis added).¹¹ The Court then went on to identify the factors which are relevant to the issue of antitrust standing and apply them to the plaintiff's claim for recovery. Both the identification of the factors and their application are instructive in this Court's determination of whether Plaintiffs have standing in the present matter.

In Associated General, [16] two carpenters' unions ("the Union") alleged that the defendant, a multiemployer association of general contractors, coerced its members, other general contractors, and certain third parties (landowners and customers in the construction market) to divert business to nonunion firms. The Union alleged that the express purpose of the multiemployer association's actions was to injure the Union. However, the first class of victims of the alleged conspiracy was the coerced contractors, the second the unionized firms, and then presumably the Union might have suffered injury through [*765] loss of dues or collective bargaining agreements.

HN5 [↑] The Court considered each of the following factors in assessing the Union's standing to sue for treble damages under section 4:

¹⁰ When Congress originally enacted the Sherman Act, there was no provision for treble recovery. The amendment providing for treble damages was enacted in 1914 to encourage private enforcement of the antitrust law. By 1914, when section 4 of the Clayton Act was enacted, courts were already applying traditional notions of proximate cause to circumscribe liability under the Act. See Associated General, 459 U.S. at 534 (citing Loeb v. Eastman Kodak Co, 183 F. 704 (3d Cir. 1910) (in which a stockholder of a corporation injured by an antitrust violation was not entitled to recover treble damages because the injury was "indirect, remote, and consequential")). Therefore, when Congress enacted section 4 of the Clayton Act in 1914, it "presumably also [adopted] the judicial gloss." Id.

¹¹ Defendants argue that the "target area" test for antitrust standing, which the First Circuit followed before Associated General, bars Plaintiffs' claim. See Engine Specialties, Inc. v. Bombardier, Ltd., 605 F.2d 1 \(1st Cir. 1979\), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 983, 64 L. Ed. 2d 839, 100 S. Ct. 2964 (1980). The "target area" test permits standing only for those in the market towards which an anticompetitive activity is directed. In Associated General, however, the Supreme Court rejected the "target area" test in favor of the standing analysis set out in the text below. Associated General, 459 U.S. at 536, n.33. Associated General requires a broader inquiry and a balancing of concerns which is not satisfied by the "target area" test. See Southaven Land Co. v. Malone & Hyde, Inc., 715 F.2d 1079, 1086 \(6th Cir. 1983\) ("implementing the Supreme Court's directive to consider the § 4 inquiry on a case by case basis by applying the criteria mandated by Associated General").

- (1) the causal connection between the Union's injury and Defendant's violation of the antitrust law,
- (2) the nature of the Union's alleged injury and whether it was of the type that the antitrust laws were intended to forestall;
- (3) the directness of the injury particularly as it related to the tenuous and speculative nature of the harm to the Union;
- (4) the danger of duplicative recoveries or complex apportionment of damages; [17] and
- (5) the existence of more immediate classes of potential plaintiffs who could be expected to vindicate the violation of the antitrust laws.

Associated General, 459 U.S. at 536-45. Of the five relevant factors, only the causal connection between the Union's alleged injuries and the violation of the antitrust laws weighed in favor of standing. The Supreme Court, in denying the Union standing to sue under section 4, summarized the analytical path pursued at some length in the opinion, reaching the following conclusion:

The Union's allegations of consequential harm resulting from a violation of the antitrust laws, although buttressed by an allegation of intent to harm the Union, are insufficient as a matter of law. Other relevant factors -- the nature of the Union's injury, the tenuous and speculative character of the relationship between the alleged antitrust violation and the Union's alleged injury, the potential for duplicative recovery or complex apportionment of damages, and the existence of more direct victims of the alleged conspiracy -- weigh heavily against judicial enforcement of the Union's antitrust claim.

Id. at 545. [18]

Though Associated General outlined a comprehensive approach to the question of antitrust standing, it has engendered much confusion. The decision gives little guidance as to how to weigh the various factors and, more particularly, whether the absence of any one factor is fatal to standing in every instance.¹² It is this Court's reading of Associated General that a proper standing analysis should include a review of all relevant factors outlined in that case. Accord, Southaven Land Co. v. Malone & Hyde, Inc., 715 F.2d 1079, 1086 (6th Cir. 1983). While any of these factors may be controlling, each should be considered on a case-by-case basis in an effort to guard against "engrafting artificial limitations on the § 4 remedy." McCready, 457 U.S. at 472. This conclusion is based on the Supreme Court's refusal in Associated General to adopt a single test, its emphasis on the impossibility of adopting a black letter rule of antitrust standing and its application of each factor to the facts alleged by the Union.

[19] B. Application of Associated General to Plaintiffs' Case

At the outset, it is clear that the allegations made by Plaintiffs, if proven, satisfy four of the five factors identified in Associated General. As to the first factor, Plaintiffs' allegations satisfy the causal connection required by section 4; that is, Plaintiffs allege that their employment was terminated in order for Northeast to accomplish a violation of the antitrust law. If not for the implementation of a discriminatory pricing system, Plaintiffs contend that they would not have had to resist the allegedly illegal scheme and, consequently, consequently they would not have been discharged.

¹² For a general discussion of the various approaches to standing analysis in the wake of Associated General, see Robert M. Taylor, Antitrust Developments: Antitrust Standing: Its Growing -- or More Accurately Shrinking -- Dimensions, 55 Antitrust L.J. 515 (1986). For a discussion of the application of Associated General to the case of discharged employees, see, e.g., Gary M. Shaw, Retaliatorily Discharged Employees' Standing to Sue Under the Antitrust Laws, 67 Or. L. Rev. 331 (1988); Matthew H. Lynch, Note, Antitrust Standing After Associated General Contractors: The Issue of Employee Retaliatory Discharge, 63 B.U. L. Rev. 983 (1983).

[*766] The harm to Plaintiffs in this case was direct also and, in this regard, does not implicate the concerns underlying the third factor which militated against standing in Associated General. In Associated General the Supreme Court noted that several "vague links" separated the defendant's alleged antitrust violation from the Union's harm. Associated General, 459 U.S. at 542. Because of the attenuated link between the antitrust violation and the injury to the Union, the Union's alleged injuries [20] were "highly speculative." Id. In that case, it was unclear what effect the alleged conspiracy had on the unionized firms. Id. It was even more difficult to determine whether the conspiracy, as opposed to other intervening causes, had caused any injury to the Union itself in the form of decreased membership revenues or termination of particular collective bargaining agreements. Id. Here, there is nothing that is either indirect or speculative about Plaintiffs' claims. They allege that their injuries were the direct and intended result of Defendants Intentional act in furtherance of an antitrust violation. The damages claimed are in the form of lost wages and benefits. These damages are easily quantifiable and are not speculative.

The fourth factor considered by the Supreme Court in Associated General was the danger of duplicative treble-damage awards, or problems of complex apportionment of damages. In Associated General, to the extent that the Union had suffered injury, it was derivative of the injury suffered by the coerced contractors and unionized firms. Therefore, there was a risk that the defendant could be exposed to multiple awards of treble damages or [21] that the Court would have to engage in complex apportionment. Determining to what extent losses were absorbed at each level of the chain of distribution -- the coerced contractors, the unionized firms, their employees, and finally the Union -- was a task that was rejected by the Supreme Court in Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720, 52 L. Ed. 2d 707, 97 S. Ct. 2061 (1977). Failure to make such a determination would lead inevitably to liability in treble damages to multiple parties for the same injury.¹³ In contrast, Plaintiffs in the present case allege injuries in the form of lost compensation and benefits. These damages are wholly distinct from damages that could be claimed by other plaintiffs injured by the alleged antitrust violation. The injury is not derivative, but personal to Plaintiffs. Therefore, there is no danger of duplicative recovery.

[22] As to the fifth factor, there is no other class more directly affected than Plaintiffs in the present case that is more likely to redress society's interest in enforcement of the antitrust laws. In Associated General, the Supreme Court noted that both the coerced contractors and the union contractors were more directly affected than the Union and, therefore, "denying the Union a remedy [was] not likely to leave a significant antitrust violation undetected or unremedied." Associated General, 459 U.S. at 542. As a general matter, however, a major challenge in antitrust law enforcement is that a violation "is usually a concealed crime and there is rarely an identifiable victim who is aware of the violation." Statement of Former Assistant Attorney General Donald Baker Before Tenth New England Antitrust Conference, 790 Antitrust & Trade Reg. Rep. (BNA) D-1 (1976), cited in, Berger & Bernstein, An Analytical Framework for Antitrust Standing, 86 Yale L.J. 809, 847. This challenge to antitrust law enforcement is strongly implicated in the present case.

Here, although purchasers disadvantaged by the alleged discriminatory [23] pricing system are also direct victims of the alleged antitrust violation, the very nature of the pricing system makes it unlikely that the victims will become aware of the price differentials unless sales representatives reveal the violation and risk discharge. The alleged pricing system discriminates against purchasers on the [*767] basis of customer loyalty and lack of accurate pricing information. It relies for concealment of this discriminatory activity upon the loyalty, expertise, and perceived self-interest of its sales employees. Those victims directly damaged by the anticompetitive effect of the pricing system are the least informed purchasers in the market and are unlikely to discover the violation in a timely manner.

14

¹³ The Court noted that this task was further complicated by the variety of forms in which the cost of the anticompetitive violation might be absorbed in Associate General. These costs may have taken the form of reduced profits, reduced wages, reduced workforce, reduced hours, and lost union dues at various levels in the chain. Associated General 459 U.S. at 544.

¹⁴ The delay that can be expected before such disadvantaged purchasers become aware of the anticompetitive effects of an antitrust violation is not without costs. Although treble damages may provide a remedy for injured individuals, once competition has been reduced, damages alone cannot restore it. Furthermore, under the rule of Illinois Brick, consumers of petroleum

[24] Plaintiffs, as sales representatives, were allegedly charged with implementing the discriminatory pricing system. They are alleged to have been made responsible for grouping clients according to the clients' loyalty and lack of accurate price information. In this position Plaintiffs were more likely to recognize the antitrust violation at an earlier stage and to vindicate the public interest in prohibiting anticompetitive activities before any purchasers and consumers and before competition suffered extensive injury. Although the purpose of the discriminatory pricing system was not to injure Plaintiffs, discharging uncooperative sales representatives was a prerequisite to full implementation of the discriminatory pricing system from the standpoint of Defendants. Furthermore, Plaintiffs allege that their discharge was used to demonstrate to other sales representatives the consequences of challenging the pricing system.

These sales representatives were direct and necessary victims of the antitrust violations because they faced the options of exposing themselves to criminal liability or risking retaliatory discharge. There is no other class of plaintiffs which has any claim under which [25] it can redress the harm Plaintiffs' allegedly suffered by reason of their refusal to violate the antitrust laws. Nor could the purchasers affected by the allegedly discriminatory pricing system challenge the system at as early a stage as the employees charged with implementing the pricing system. Assuming, without deciding, that the allegations made by Plaintiffs are true, barring standing to Plaintiffs under these circumstances is "likely to leave a significant antitrust violation undetected or unremedied."¹⁵ Associated General, 459 U.S. at 542.

[26] These four factors favor antitrust standing for Plaintiffs in this case. Their injuries are the direct result of actions taken in furtherance of an alleged attempt to implement a discriminatory pricing system in violation of the Robinson-Patman Act. There is no other class of plaintiffs which is more directly effected by these actions, and Plaintiffs' injuries are wholly distinct from the injuries suffered by any other class of victims; therefore, there is no danger of duplicative recoveries or complex apportionment. Finally, there is nothing speculative about the amount of damages suffered by these Plaintiffs.

[*768] C. Antitrust Injury

The principal standing issues raised by the Plaintiffs' claim relate to the second factor: whether the alleged injury is "antitrust injury"; that is, the type of injury that the antitrust laws were intended to forestall. In the context of the retaliatory discharge claim raised in this case, there are two relevant inquiries. First, whether the harm caused by retaliatory discharge is "antitrust injury." And second, whether failure to demonstrate "antitrust injury" in the narrowest sense is fatal to standing in every case. The Court will address these [27] questions in turn.

The concept of "antitrust injury" was first articulated in Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701, 97 S. Ct. 690 \(1977\). In that case, several small bowling centers sued Brunswick Corp. to challenge its acquisition of a number of failing bowling centers. The challenge was mounted under section 7 of the Clayton Act which proscribes mergers whose effect "may be substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly." 15 U.S.C.A. § 18. The smaller bowling centers also sued to recover treble damages under section 4 products are unlikely to have any remedy for their injury in this case. Any damage to consumers would be derivative of the injury to the purchasers of petroleum goods for resale who are allegedly the first line of victims of this price discrimination scheme.

¹⁵ This Court notes that, in light of the difficulty in detecting antitrust violations, providing standing to employees who are coerced to violate the antitrust laws is more likely to provide efficient enforcement than denying standing. In reaching this conclusion, the Court has rejected the Seventh Circuit's economic analysis as unconvincing. See Bichan v. Chemetron Corp., 681 F.2d 514, 520 \(7th Cir. 1982\). The Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit's approach to "efficient enforcement" balances the conflicting interest of enforcement of the antitrust laws with "the avoidance of excessive treble damages litigation" and concludes that only consumers and competitors should have standing because "it is this select class of plaintiffs that can impose the deterrent sting of treble damages at the smallest cost of enforcement." Id. This conclusion rests on the unrealistic assumption that consumers and competitors will discover antitrust violations. Moreover, it fails to consider the efficiency of the deterrent effect that employee standing will have in preventing antitrust violations. Finally, no consideration is given to the fact that an employee who complies with coercion to avoid discharge will himself be guilty of criminally violating the antitrust laws or that such cooperation both increases the number of antitrust violations and the cost to consumers, competitors, and the legal system when antitrust schemes are eventually discovered.

for the profits lost due to the continued competition from the acquired bowling centers which they contended would have otherwise gone out of business. They did not prove that Brunswick had engaged in any of the predatory actions which section 7 was designed to prevent. Although the plaintiffs in Brunswick had standing to challenge the improper mergers, the Supreme Court unanimously held that they were not entitled to relief under section 4 of the Clayton Act because they had not proven "antitrust injury" of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that [28] flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful." Id. at 489.

The antitrust laws are not merely indifferent to the injury claimed here. At base, respondents complain that by acquiring the failing centers petitioner preserved competition, thereby depriving respondents of the benefits of increased concentration. The damages respondents obtained are designed to provide them with the profits they would have realized had competition been reduced. HN6¹⁶ The antitrust laws, however, were enacted for "the protection of competition, not competitors." It is inimical to the purposes of these laws to award damages for the type of injury claimed here.

. . . It is far from clear that the loss of windfall profits that would have accrued had the acquired centers failed even constitutes "injury" within the meaning of § 4. And it is quite clear that if respondents were injured it was not "by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws": while respondents' loss occurred "by reason of" the unlawful acquisitions, it did not occur "by reason of" that which made the acquisitions unlawful.

Id. at 488 (citations omitted [29] and emphasis added). The Supreme Court found that the Brunswick plaintiffs were not entitled to a remedy under section 4 because their losses were due to an increase in competition and were not the result of predatory actions.

Five years later, in McCready, the Supreme Court addressed the issue of whether injury that occurred as a necessary step to accomplishing an antitrust violation was "antitrust injury." Blue Shield of Virginia v. McCready, 457 U.S. 465, 73 L. Ed. 2d 149, 102 S. Ct. 2540 \(1982\). In McCready, the plaintiff was a subscriber to the Blue Shield medical plan. She alleged that Blue Shield and an association of psychiatrists had engaged in an anticompetitive conspiracy to disadvantage psychologists. This conspiracy was accomplished by refusing reimbursement to Blue Shield subscribers for treatment rendered by psychologists while reimbursing subscribers for the same treatment received from psychiatrists or from psychologists acting under the supervision of a physician. McCready received treatment from a psychologist and Blue Shield refused to reimburse her for the treatment. The Court concluded that:

Although McCready was not a competitor of the conspirators, [30] the injury she suffered was inextricably intertwined with the injury the conspirators sought to inflict on psychologists and the psychotherapy market.

[*769] In light of the conspiracy here alleged we think that McCready's injury "flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful" within the meaning of Brunswick, and falls squarely within the area of congressional concern.

*Id. at 483-84.*¹⁶ Blue Shields' refusal to reimburse McCready for therapy received from a psychologist was a means whereby it coerced her to either become an unwilling participant in its illegal campaign to boycott the services of psychologists or pay the costs for treatment from her own pocket in order to see the therapist of her ¹⁶ Defendants argue that McCready has no application in the present case because McCready was a consumer in the market for psychotherapy treatment. Reply Brief in Support of Motion to Dismiss (Docket No. 12) at 1. However, they ignore the central thrust of McCready which rejects artificial constraints on section 4, refusing to limit its protection "to consumers, or to purchasers, or to competitors, or to sellers." Id. at 472.

The central problem raised by McCready's claim was that her injury was not the result of any anticompetitive effect of the conspiracy. As Justice Rehnquist noted in his dissenting opinion, McCready "alleges that Blue Shield's policy violates the antitrust laws only by virtue of its anticompetitive effect on psychologists. She does not allege that Blue Shield's policy is illegal in any way because of its effect on subscribers."

Id. at 491.

The issue which split the Court was whether injury which was caused by the attempted use of McCready as an instrument to carry out an antitrust violation was "antitrust injury."

choice. The injury that she suffered was due to her refusal to be manipulated and was not due to anticompetitive effect or a change of price in the market.

[31] Here, Plaintiffs allegedly confronted a similar Hobson's choice, though the consequences on either side were much more grave than in McCready. They could capitulate to their employer's pressure and participate in a violation of the antitrust laws or resist the discriminatory pricing system and face discipline or discharge. Here, however, Plaintiffs' cooperation may also have exposed them to criminal liability. In Ostrofe I, the Court of Appeals for the Ninth circuit concluded that injury suffered by an employee under these circumstances is within the "core of Congressional concern" which motivated the antitrust laws. Ostrofe I, 670 F.2d at 1387.

The central theme of Brunswick is that to be actionable under Section 4, plaintiff's injury should fall within the core of Congressional concern underlying the substantive provision of the antitrust laws allegedly violated. In outlawing price fixing and customer allocation under the Sherman Act, Congress was concerned with competitive conditions in the product market; hence competitors and perhaps consumers injured by the elimination of competition between the conspiring business concerns have [32] standing to sue.

But Congress was also concerned with the conduct of individuals acting on behalf of conspiring economic entities. Congress imposed criminal liability upon individuals who violate the Sherman Act even though they act in a representative capacity and in discharge of the duties of the employment. It cannot be said that Ostrofe's asserted loss was "of no concern to the antitrust laws." Ostrofe was injured because of his efforts to comply with the mandate of the Sherman Act; he suffered an "antitrust injury . . . of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent."

Moreover, the loss did not result from increased competition, as did the asserted loss in Brunswick, but from a conspirator's efforts to realize an anticompetitive purpose.

Ostrofe I, 670 F.2d at 1387-88 (footnotes omitted). On remand, application of Associated General and McCready to the question of whether standing for an employee subjected to retaliatory discharge for refusing to participate in an antitrust violation did not undercut this conclusion. See Ostrofe II, 740 F.2d at 745-46 (affirming the reasoning in Ostrofe I [33] and concluding that Ostrofe's injury "was such an integral part of the scheme to eliminate competition in that market as to constitute 'antitrust injury,'" id. at 746); see also Donahue v. Pendleton Woolen Mills, Inc., 633 F. Supp. 1423 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (following Ostrofe II). On similar reasoning, the Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit has found that HNT [34] antitrust standing does not require an allegation that one is a competitor [*770] or consumer in the relevant market if a plaintiff was "manipulated or utilized by [defendant] as a fulcrum, conduit or market force to injure competitors." Fallis, 866 F.2d at 211 (quoting Southaven, 715 F.2d at 1086).¹⁷

[34] Other courts have read the antitrust laws more narrowly, holding that Congress intended to provide a remedy for injuries suffered only by market participants when it enacted section 4. Bichan v. Chemetron Corp., 681 F.2d 514 (7th Cir. 1982); Winther v. DEC International, Inc., 625 F. Supp. 100 (D. Colo. 1985); McNulty v. Borden, Inc., 542 F. Supp. 655 (E.D. Pa. 1982). These courts reason that because a discharged employee's injury is not due to diminished competition in any market in which the employee is a consumer or competitor it is not "antitrust injury."¹⁸ [36] In Bichan the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit concluded that Congress was concerned

¹⁷ Nevertheless the Court of Appeals of the Sixth Circuit denied standing in Fallis, holding that the plaintiff sales representative's injury was not direct. Fallis, 866 F.2d at 212. In so doing, they revert to the "target test" and conclude that the injury to the sales representative is indirect because it is a "byproduct" of the antitrust violation. Id. at 211. This reasoning improperly introduces the element of intent into the directness inquiry. See McCready, 457 U.S. at 479 (concluding that the fact that the goal of the conspiracy was to injure psychologists did not make the subscriber's injury "remote"). There is no doubt that the injury alleged in this case is the direct and immediate result of steps taken in furtherance of the antitrust violation. There are no intermediate victims; no danger of duplicative damages; and nothing speculative about the injury to a discharged employee. The fact that the injury is not the primary goal of the violation does not render the injury indirect.

¹⁸ One concern of these courts is that the damages claimed by a victim of wrongful discharge are "unrelated" to the anticompetitive effect of a violation. These costs, though they may be unrelated to the anticompetitive effects in a mathematical sense, are incurred by the intentional acts of an employer to carry out an anticompetitive scheme. The cost to a discharged

only with damages due to anticompetitive effects of antitrust violations, "not employee coercion or discharge." Bichan, 681 F.2d at 519, accord Winther, 625 F. Supp. at 102 (Congress did not "intend[] to protect employees from wrongful coercion or discharge"); cf., McNulty, 542 F. Supp. at 661 (acknowledging the weighty policy considerations raised [35] in Ostrofe but finding that under Third Circuit "target test" then in use, only competitors and consumers had standing under the Robinson-Patman Act).¹⁹

Upon review of all these cases and the history of section 4 and the Robinson-Patman Act, this Court is persuaded that the more flexible approach of Ostrofe II is more consistent with the purposes of the antitrust laws than the extremely narrow limitations of Bichan. As was noted in McCready, HN8[¹] Congress's purpose in enacting the treble damage remedy in section 4 was "to create a private enforcement mechanism that would deter violators and [37] deprive them of the fruits of their illegal actions and would provide ample compensation to the victims of antitrust violations." McCready, 457 U.S. at 472. The statute provides a remedy for "any person" injured and "does not confine its protection to consumers, or to purchasers, or to competitors, or to sellers." Id. (quoting Mandeville Island Farms Inc. v. American Crystal Sugar Co., 334 U.S. 219, 236, 92 L. Ed. 1328, 68 S. Ct. 996 (1948)). While it has been clear from the beginning [*771] that courts must formulate some limits on liability for antitrust violations, these limitations have been adopted "in accordance with [section 4's] plain language and its broad remedial and deterrent objectives." 457 U.S. at 473. Associated General does not hold otherwise. Associated General rejected any black letter rule but considered each factor in light of the overall purposes of the antitrust laws. If failure to allege that one is a competitor, consumer, or purchaser in the relevant market is dispositive in every case, as Defendants contend, than the greater part of the Associated General opinion is useless verbiage.²⁰

[38] The Supreme Court was absolutely unambiguous in Associated General in rejecting any black letter rule of antitrust standing, and this Court will not adopt one now. Therefore, we reject the reasoning of the Seventh, Third, and Tenth Circuits as inconsistent with the analysis required by Associated General and McCready which does not permit a single factor to be dispositive unless consideration of the overall purpose of the antitrust laws so dictates.²¹

HN9[¹] There can be no doubt that Congress was concerned [39] with the conduct of employees and agents who assisted in carrying out antitrust violations in the discharge of their duties. The Robinson-Patman Act imposes personal criminal liability on any person engaged in commerce who knowingly assists in a discriminatory employee are much like those injuries incurred in McCready. The amount of the reimbursement refused to McCready had no relationship to the anticompetitive effects on the market for psychotherapy. Rather, this amount related to the type and cost of treatment that McCready received. Nevertheless, there was no surprise or injustice to Blue Shield, who knowingly refused McCready a fixed amount in furtherance of its anticompetitive conspiracy. The injuries which are deliberately inflicted in an attempt to coerce third parties to participate in an anticompetitive scheme should be part of the calculus that encourage would-be antitrust violators to shrink from pursuing illegal schemes.

¹⁹ The reasoning in all these cases is scant. They rely on Brunswick and interpret it as limiting section 4 claims to injury caused by the anticompetitive effects of antitrust violations. The cases ignore the fact that Brunswick dealt with injuries caused by increased competition. They also overlook the essential Brunswick holding that the purpose of the antitrust laws is to protect "competition, not competitors." Brunswick, 429 U.S. at 488. In the retaliatory discharge context, refusing standing to employees for no other reason than that they are not competitors seems to read this statement backwards.

²⁰ Indeed, even the discussion about whether the Union had alleged "antitrust injury" within the meaning of Brunswick was unnecessary according to Defendants. Under Defendants' approach, the first sentence of this discussion was dispositive insofar as it pointed out that the Union was neither a consumer nor a competitor in the relevant market. Nevertheless, the Associated General court went on to observe that labor enjoys a broad exemption from antitrust laws, is protected by another body of federal law, and is generally not served by increased competition. Associated General, 459 U.S. at 539-40. All these considerations apparently went into the determination that the Union had not alleged "antitrust injury" Id.

²¹ Brunswick is not to the contrary; there, not only did the Supreme Court hold that the plaintiffs in that case had not alleged antitrust injury, but they found that the "injury" which had been alleged was "inimical" to the purposes of the antitrust laws. The Bichan conclusion that Congress was not concerned with employee coercion or discharge, even if correct, does not automatically lead to the conclusion that injury related to such coercion is "inimical" to the purposes of the antitrust laws.

transaction of sale. 15 U.S.C.A. § 13a. Providing a remedy to those employees who suffer injury for refusing to violate this law will serve the deterrent purpose of both the criminal sanctions in the Robinson-Patman Act and the treble-damages remedy of the Clayton Act.

Finally standing is appropriate in light of the remedial purposes of section 4. Here, unlike Associated General in which the Supreme Court emphasized that the Union was protected by federal labor law, it is not at all clear that employees subjected to wrongful discharge will have any remedy at law. See, e.g., Fallis 866 F.2d at 211 (holding plaintiff lacked standing under section 4 and had no cause of action under Ohio law because Ohio law did not recognize an action for wrongful discharge and treated employment contracts "until retirement" as at-will employment contracts) As was noted [40] in Ostrofe I many states do not recognize a cause of action for at-will employees who are subjected to retaliatory discharge.²² Ostrofe I, 670 F.2d at 1384 n.12. Because the Court finds that the type of injury alleged herein was within the core area of congressional concern, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs have alleged "antitrust injury" within the meaning of Associated General, McCready, and Brunswick.

[41] [*772] Even if this Court reads the concept of "antitrust injury" too broadly, and if this concept is limited to injuries suffered by participants (consumers, sellers, purchasers) in the relevant market, this Court concurs with the courts that have reasoned that HN11 failure to allege participation in the relevant market, although it weighs heavily against antitrust standing, is not fatal to a claim of standing under the antitrust laws. See, e.g., South Dakota v. Kansas City Southern Industries, Inc., 880 F.2d 40, 46 n.16 \(8th Cir. 1989\), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 1023, 107 L. Ed. 2d 745, 110 S. Ct. 726 (1990); Province v. Cleveland Press Publishing Co., 787 F.2d 1047, 1052 \(6th Cir. 1986\); Crimpers Promotions, Inc. v. Home Box Office, Inc., 724 F.2d 290, 293 \(2d Cir. 1983\), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1252, 82 L. Ed. 2d 841, 104 S. Ct. 3536 (1984); Sullivan v. Tagliabue, 828 F. Supp. 114, 117 \(D. Mass. 1993\). As the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit observed in Ostrofe II, granting standing to an employee who is discharged for his attempt to resist an anticompetitive scheme [42] will accomplish the principal goal of antitrust laws, which are designed to "protect competition not competitors" without compromising the concerns raised by the other factors identified in Associated General. Ostrofe II, 740 F.2d at 747. Permitting Plaintiffs' standing here will advance enforcement and deterrence, and protect competition in the affected market. All the other factors identified in Associated General weigh heavily in favor of standing for the Plaintiffs in this case. Therefore, this Court holds that Plaintiffs have standing on the allegations of the Complaint under the approach set out in Associated General and that such conclusion is consistent with the purposes of the Robinson-Patman Act.

III. Choice of Law

Defendants argue that Maine law applies to Plaintiff Ashmore's claims for breach of contract (Count II), breach of covenant of good faith (Count IV), and wrongful termination (Count V). Defendants move, pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12\(b\)\(6\), for the dismissal of these claims, arguing that Maine law does not recognize a cause of action for termination of an employment contract unless the contract expressly [43] provides some limitation on the employer's ability to terminate the employee. Memorandum in Support of Defendants' Motion to Dismiss (Docket No. 5) at 16 citing Larrabee v. Penobscot Frozen Foods, Inc., 486 A.2d 97, 99 \(Me. 1984\). Plaintiffs oppose this motion, contending that the most significant contacts in this contract case are with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and that Maine choice-of-law rules lead to the conclusion that Massachusetts law governs these claims.

²² The trend has been to recognize a cause of action for wrongful discharge; however, as of 1992, nine of the forty-seven states that had ruled on this issue did not provide a remedy for employees discharged for refusing to violate the law. See Martin Marietta Corp. v. Lorenz, 823 P.2d 100, 106 n.4 \(Colo. 1992\) (adopting a cause of action based on wrongful discharge in violation of public policy and reviewing the holdings of other state courts). See generally, 82 Am. Jur. 2d § 47. Maine is one of the few states that have not yet ruled on this issue. HN10 Maine law provides a limited statutory cause of action which protects employees who refuse to implement an employer's unlawful practice only when such practice would create a danger of serious injury or death. 26 M.R.S.A. § 833. However, the Maine courts have not yet ruled on whether Maine common law will permit a cause of action to be established for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy.

As a threshold matter, it is necessary for the Court to determine what choice-of-law rules to apply to these claims. A federal court which exercises supplemental jurisdiction over state-law claims based on diversity jurisdiction must apply the choice-of-law rules of the state in which it sits. Klaxon Co. v. Stentor Electric Manufacturing Co., 313 U.S. 487, 496, 85 L. Ed. 1477, 61 S. Ct. 1020 (1941). In this case, the Complaint invokes federal question jurisdiction under federal substantive antitrust law.²³ 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 1331 and 1337. HN12↑ Supplemental state-law claims in a case where jurisdiction is based on federal question are also decided with reference [44] to the choice-of-law provisions of the state in which the federal court sits. Bangor Baptist Church v. Maine Department of Educational and Cultural Services, 576 F. Supp. 1299, 1313 (D. Me. 1983); Rental Car of New Hampshire Inc. v. Westinghouse Electric Corp., 496 F. Supp. 373 (D. Mass. 1980). The Court will, therefore, apply Maine's choice of law rules to determine what law applies to Plaintiff Ashmore's supplemental state-law claims.

The State [45] of Maine generally follows the Restatement (Second) of Conflicts HN13↑ in determining choice-of-law issues. Maine Surgical Supply Co. v. Intermedics Orthopedics, Inc., 756 F. Supp. 597, 600 (D. Me. 1991).

[*773] Counts II and IV both state claims based on contract law. In the absence of an effective choice of law by the parties to a contract, the Court must consider what state "has the most significant relation" with respect to a specific issue in dispute, including the following contacts to the extent that they are relevant to the issue: (1) place of contracting; (2) place of negotiation; (3) place of performance; (4) where the subject matter of the contract is located; and (5) the domicile, residence, nationality, place of incorporation, and place of business of the parties. Restatement(Second) of Conflicts § 188(1),(2). Where the place of negotiating the contract and the place of performance are in the same state, the local law of that state will be applied except in circumstances not here applicable. Restatement (Second) of Conflicts § 188(3) (1971).

Taking all the relevant factors into account the contacts in this case point to the application [46] of Massachusetts law. The place of contracting as well as the place of negotiation of the contract were in Massachusetts Affidavit of Frederick W. Ashmore in Support of Motion for Leave to Amend (Docket No. 11, Exhibit A) PP 2-3.²⁴ The place of performance is not so obvious. Ashmore worked out of an office in Portland, Maine. Maine taxes were withheld from his paycheck, and workers' compensation payments were made to the state of Maine during his employment at Northeast. Affidavit of Virginia Palladino (Docket No. 12, Exhibit 3) P 4. However, his sales territory included New Hampshire, Vermont, and Massachusetts as well as Maine. Affidavit of Ashmore PP 8-14. Ashmore's responsibilities included visiting customers in all these states. Affidavits of James Flaherty and William Overton. (Docket No. 2, Exhibit 5) P 5. When Ashmore was terminated, he had eighty-nine accounts: forty-one in Massachusetts, twenty-six in Maine, fourteen in New Hampshire, and five in Vermont. Affidavit of Frederick Ashmore (Docket No. 11, Exhibit A) PP 6-14. Some of the product he sold was from Maine terminals while other product was from Massachusetts. It appears that Ashmore generally met with his supervisors [47] in Maine, New Hampshire, or Massachusetts when he was under the supervision of Flaherty; and in New Hampshire or Massachusetts in the last two years before his discharge. Affidavit of James Flaherty (Docket No. 12, Exhibit 4) P 6 and Affidavit of Overton P 4. All formal sales representative meetings took place in Massachusetts, as did training meetings. Affidavit of Ashmore P 4. It was in the Massachusetts headquarters of Northeast that Plaintiffs were instructed on the allegedly discriminatory pricing plan, and later told that their employment was terminated. Id. PP 4, 15.

Plaintiff Ashmore is a resident of Maine. Northeast Division of Cargill, Inc. has its administrative office [48] in Chelsea, Massachusetts. Affidavit of James Flaherty P 4. Northeast Division has sales offices in Rhode Island, Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, and North Carolina. Affidavit of M.A. Kurschner P 3. Cargill does business worldwide, has its principal place of business in Minnesota, and is incorporated under Delaware law. Id.

²³ Although Plaintiffs allege jurisdiction based on diversity as well as federal question, the Complaint indicates that at least one Plaintiff (Richard Simeone) and several Defendants are citizens of Massachusetts for diversity purposes. Complaint PP 5, 7, 8. Jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C.A. § 1332 requires complete diversity between plaintiffs and defendants. Therefore, on its face, the Complaint does not provide a basis for subject matter jurisdiction on diversity grounds.

²⁴ The written promise which Plaintiff alleges as the basis for the breach of contract and promissory estoppel claims was generated by Cargill, Inc.'s principle office in Minnesota for distribution to offices of Cargill throughout the United States and, possibly, the world. Affidavit of M.A. Kurschner (Docket No. 12, Exhibit 2) P 6.

The Restatement (Second) of Conflicts requires an issue-by-issue assessment of a claim to determine the state with the most significant contacts to a particular issue. The central issue for Counts II and IV are what actual or implied promises regarding terms of the employment contract were made from Northeast Division to Plaintiff Ashmore who agreed to represent Northeast in several New England states. The Second Restatement gives particular weight to the place of performance and the place of negotiation in contract cases where they are the same. Restatement (Second) of Conflicts § 188(3). Here, although Plaintiff's territory was not limited to a single state, his performance included significant number of customers in Massachusetts. Because negotiation of the contract and a substantial part of performance was in Massachusetts as well [49] as all supervisory decisions and training, the Court [*774] concludes that Massachusetts had the most significant contacts with the generation of the issue of what express or implied promises were made by Northeast Division, as raised in Counts II and IV. Moreover, the contract terms allegedly breached, the alleged discriminatory pricing policy, and the discharge were all handled through the activities of the Northeast Division administrative center in Massachusetts.²⁵ Because Massachusetts had the most significant contacts with respect to Counts II and IV, the Court will not dismiss these claims.

The claim based on wrongful termination in violation of public policy (Count V) is a claim based on tort law and, therefore, the relevant factors for choice of law are different. The Second Restatement of Conflicts provides HN14[
↑] the principles by which Maine courts generally evaluate conflicts of law in [50] tort cases. Adams v. Buffalo Forge Co., 443 A.2d 932, 934 (Me. 1982); Beaulieu v. Beaulieu, 265 A.2d 610 (Me. 1970). In order to determine the state which has the most significant relationship to the occurrence and parties, the following contacts are considered to the extent that they are relevant to a particular issue: (a) the place where the injury occurred; (b) the place where the conduct causing the injury occurred; (c) the domicile, residence, nationality, place of incorporation, and place of business of the parties; and (d) the place where the relationship, if any, between the parties is centered. Restatement (Second) of Conflicts § 145.

Here the place where the conduct causing the injury occurred as well as the place where the injury occurred was Massachusetts, where Ashmore's employment was terminated. In addition to these two contacts, the relationship between Ashmore and the Defendants was centered in Massachusetts. It was in Massachusetts that the formal employment relationship was negotiated and commenced, where the sales representatives received training, and where Ashmore's supervisors were located. Affidavit [51] of Ashmore PP 3-5, Affidavit of Flaherty PP 4, 6. These three factors all point to Massachusetts law as having the most significant contacts to the factual generation of the issue of whether a cause of action exists for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy.

The fourth factor does not point to any particular state; Ashmore is a citizen of Maine; Cargill has the strongest ties with Minnesota and Delaware but maintains offices throughout the world, with a major administrative center for the Northeast Division in Massachusetts; and Northeast Division of Cargill has its main administrative offices in Massachusetts. Because the first three contacts are all with Massachusetts, this Court has no difficulty deciding that most significant contacts to this tort claim are with Massachusetts. Therefore, Massachusetts law will be applied to the wrongful discharge claim, and the motion to dismiss this claim will be denied.

IV. The Promissory Estoppel Claim

Defendants urge the dismissal of Count III, which is based on promissory estoppel as to all Plaintiffs, for failure to state a cause of action. In order to prevail on this motion pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6), [52] the Court must be convinced that Plaintiffs could prove no set of facts that would entitle them to relief on a theory of promissory estoppel. Here, Plaintiffs have alleged that they detrimentally relied on Defendants' promise that they would not be required to engage in any but "legal, open, and honest competition." Complaint PP 39-40. Defendants argue that Plaintiffs have failed to state a claim based on promissory estoppel because they have not alleged "that absent the alleged 'promise,' they each would have participated in, and raised no complaint about, the supposedly improper pricing system." In effect, Defendants argue that Plaintiffs have not sufficiently alleged reliance. Defendants cannot prevail on this argument because the clear import of the Complaint is that absent the alleged promise the Plaintiffs would have acted differently.

²⁵ Even if the policy decisions were generated in Minnesota, neither negotiation nor performance ties this contract to Minnesota.

This Court concludes that these Plaintiffs could potentially prove a set of facts that [*775] would show that absent the "promise," they might have remained silent or proceeded in a different manner. This conclusion is supported by the Plaintiffs' allegations that three Plaintiffs did, in fact, participate in the pricing system when coerced to do [53] so. Under these circumstances, Plaintiffs may be able to prove that they would not have risked their employment by open resistance to the illegal pricing system absent Defendants' promise that they would not be expected to compromise fair and open competition.

Defendants also argue that promissory estoppel is a substitute for "traditional consideration" and, because the Plaintiffs were compensated for their employment, they cannot state a claim based on promissory estoppel. However, Defendants' argument misses the mark. The issue here is not whether Plaintiffs received consideration for their labor, but whether Defendants received consideration for their alleged "promise" not to require sales representatives to engage in anticompetitive activities. If Defendants' promise was supported by consideration, then it forms part of a contract, and Plaintiffs have no need for a claim based on promissory estoppel because they have a claim for breach of contract. The Court assumes, for the purposes of this motion, that Defendants do not intend to concede that the alleged "promise" was supported by consideration. Therefore, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs could potentially prove that, although [54] this promise was not part of a bargained-for exchange but was merely gratuitous, the promise was of the type and formality that would foreseeably induce reliance. For these reasons the motion to dismiss Count V will be denied.

V.

Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that Defendants' Motion to Dismiss be, and it is hereby, DENIED.

GENE CARTER

Chief Judge

Dated at Portland, Maine this 19th day of January, 1994.

End of Document

R.W. Int'l Corp. v. Welch Food

United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit

January 20, 1994, Decided

No. 93-1704

Reporter

13 F.3d 478 *; 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 980 ; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,488

R. W. INTERNATIONAL CORP. AND T. H. WARD DE LA CRUZ, INC., Plaintiffs, Appellants, v. WELCH FOOD, INC., ET AL., Defendants, Appellees.

Prior History: [1] APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF PUERTO RICO. Hon. Gilberto Gierbolini, U.S. District Judge.

Core Terms

dealer, supplier, parties, bottled, terminate, products, grape juice, negotiations, district court, defendants', just cause, dealership, summary judgment, distributors, Plaintiffs', contractual, discovery, terms, summary judgment motion, antitrust claim, tortious interference, trial period, distributorship, one-year, frozen, juice, decision to terminate, anti trust law, Sherman Act, manufacturer

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > De Novo Review

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Appellate Review > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Appellate Review > Standards of Review

HN1 [down arrow] Standards of Review, De Novo Review

The appellate court's review of the district court's grant of summary judgment is plenary.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Types of Commercial Transactions > Negotiable Instruments > Transfer of Negotiable Instruments

Business & Corporate Law > ... > Remedies > Damages > Compensatory Damages

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > Distributorships & Franchises > Assignments & Transfers

13 F.3d 478, *478LÁ994 U.S. App. LEXIS 980, 1

Business & Corporate Law > Distributorships & Franchises > Remedies > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > Distributorships & Franchises > Termination > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > Distributorships & Franchises > Termination > Good Cause

HN2 Negotiable Instruments, Transfer of Negotiable Instruments

Puerto Rico Dealers' Contracts Act (Law 75), P.R. Laws Ann. tit. 10, § 278, subjects companies to substantial damages if they terminate dealership contracts for other than "just cause."

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > Distributorships & Franchises > Termination > Good Cause

Business & Corporate Law > Distributorships & Franchises > Termination > General Overview

HN3 Private Actions, Remedies

Puerto Rico Dealers' Contracts Act (Law 75), P.R. Laws Ann. tit. 10, § 278a, provides that, notwithstanding any contractual provision to the contrary, the supplier in a distribution contract may terminate a dealership only for "just cause."

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

HN4 Private Actions, Remedies

See Puerto Rico Dealers' Contracts Act (Law 75), P.R. Laws Ann. tit. 10, § 278a.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

HN5 Private Actions, Remedies

See Puerto Rico Dealers' Contracts Act (Law 75), P.R. Laws Ann. tit. 10, § 278(b).

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

HN6 Private Actions, Remedies

A supplier may withdraw from the Puerto Rico market without consequence under Law 75, P.R. Laws Ann. tit. 10, § 278, if the parties have bargained in good faith but have not been able to reach an agreement as to price, credit, or some other essential element of the dealership.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

HN7 [blue downward arrow] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

The Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 makes unlawful every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

International Trade Law > General Overview

HN8 [blue downward arrow] Scope, Monopolization Offenses

The Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, makes it an offense for any person to monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

HN9 [blue downward arrow] Regulated Practices, Trade Practices & Unfair Competition

Heavy-handed competitive tactics alone do not constitute an antitrust violation. To survive defendants' motion for summary judgment, plaintiffs needed to demonstrate a genuine dispute as to whether defendants' actions caused an injury to competition, as distinguished from impact on themselves.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > General Overview

HN10 [blue downward arrow] Regulated Practices, Trade Practices & Unfair Competition

Cutting prices in order to increase business often is the very essence of competition.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > General Overview

HN11 [blue downward arrow] Regulated Practices, Trade Practices & Unfair Competition

Below-cost pricing is not automatically an antitrust violation if competition is not threatened.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Discovery & Disclosure > Discovery > Protective Orders

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Motions for Summary Judgment > General Overview

HN12 [blue arrow icon] Summary Judgment, Entitlement as Matter of Law

The decision whether to allow discovery while a summary judgment motion is pending rests within the discretion of the district court and the party seeking additional time for discovery must show that the facts sought will, if obtained, suffice to engender an issue both genuine and material.

Counsel: Jose A. Hernandez Mayoral with whom Rafael Hernandez Mayoral was on brief for appellants.

Jaime E. Toro-Monserrate with whom Samuel T. Cespedes and Ana Matilde Nin were on brief for Welch Food, Inc.

Jorge I. Peirats with whom Jacabed Rodriguez Coss was on brief for Magna Trading Corp.

Judges: Before Breyer, Chief Judge, Coffin, Senior Circuit Judge, and Boudin, Circuit Judge.

Opinion by: COFFIN

Opinion

[*479] COFFIN, Senior Circuit Judge. The parties in this action attempted to negotiate a long-term distribution relationship, but after a year of haggling, defendant Welch Foods, Inc. (Welch) notified plaintiffs R.W. International Corp. (R.W.) and T.H. Ward de la Cruz, Inc.,¹ that it was calling off the corporate marriage because of irreconcilable differences. Plaintiffs claimed that the dissolution of the relationship violated the Puerto Rico Dealers' Contracts Act, P.R. Laws Ann. tit. 10, § 278 (Law 75), and federal and state antitrust laws. Plaintiffs also alleged a claim of tortious interference with contractual relations against defendant Magna Trading Corp., [2] supervisor of Welch's operations in Puerto Rico.

The district court concluded that the association between the parties had not yet matured into a relationship protected by Law 75, and it consequently granted summary judgment for defendants on the Dealers' Act and tort claims. It dismissed the antitrust [*480] claims on the ground that plaintiffs had failed to make the required showing of injury to competition. Our review of the caselaw and circumstances persuades us that only the antitrust claims properly were dismissed. We therefore reverse the summary judgment [3] on the other causes of action.

I. Factual Background

The facts underlying this dispute essentially are undisputed, with the parties differing only with respect to their legal significance. HN1 [blue arrow icon] Our review of the district court's grant of summary judgment is plenary. Cambridge Plating Co. v. Napco, Inc., 991 F.2d 21, 24 \(1st Cir. 1993\).

Welch, a producer of fruit juices and related products, has sold its products through local distributors in Puerto Rico since the 1930s. In 1987, Welch needed a new distributor for its frozen concentrate line of products, and, with the help of its local broker, Magna Trading, it identified R.W. as the most suitable -- though not perfect -- candidate.

From the beginning of Welch's interest in R.W., company executives had concerns about R.W.'s handling a competing line of juice products under the "Donald Duck" label. Welch's international marketing manager initially had suggested internally that R.W. would have to drop the Donald Duck line "to be a viable option," see App. at 213, but he later reported that R.W.'s owner, Thomas Ward, had agreed to undertake several measures to assure that the Welch frozen concentrates [4] would receive full support despite the continued presence of the Donald Duck products. These included "[a] trial period with no commitment by Welch's for a larger period of representation," App. at 219, and a financial contribution from R.W. for advertising Welch's product.

¹ These two related corporations are both in the food distribution business. According to answers to interrogatories, R.W. does marketing for mainland corporations and accounting for De la Cruz, Inc.. De la Cruz, in turn, distributes but does not purchase products from producers. It makes purchases from Impex Trading, another related company. See District Court opinion at 5 n.2. For convenience, we refer to these companies jointly as either "plaintiffs" or "R.W.".

Discussion among the parties took place through the early months of 1988 and, on March 25, Welch's international marketing manager wrote to Ward to announce his company's decision:

. . . I am pleased to inform you that Welch's has reached a decision to continue the frozen concentrate distribution and sales business begun by Ventura Rodriguez in Puerto Rico by transferring our account to R.W. International.

Confirming our conversation on Monday, Welch's will proceed to draft an agreement calling for the appointment of R.W. International in Puerto Rico for a one-year trial period

App. at 364. Four days later, on March 29, Welch notified its customers that it had made the decision to appoint R.W. International and its distributing affiliate T.H. Ward de la Cruz Inc. as its distributors in Puerto Rico for Welch's frozen product line. This change will go into effect as of this date and a written [5] agreement is expected to be arrived at in the near future.

App. at 366 (translation in appendix to appellant's brief).

The parties immediately began doing business, with plaintiffs regularly submitting purchase orders and defendants delivering the merchandise and billing plaintiffs. It was not until three months later, however, in late June, that Welch submitted a proposed contract to plaintiffs. Ward responded in August with a counterproposal. Of particular concern to the Puerto Rico company were provisions in the agreement that appeared to reflect an effort by Welch to bypass Act 75, which HN2[] subjects companies to substantial damages if they terminate dealership contracts for other than "just cause." The Welch document, for example, characterized the relationship with R.W. as a transfer of the contractual arrangement that had existed between Welch and its prior distributors before the passage of Act 75. Welch's draft also specified that New York law would govern the agreement. R.W.'s revised draft, inter alia, deleted the "transfer" language and specified that Puerto Rico law would apply.

In mid-October, after a series of telephone conversations between attorneys, Welch submitted [6] a third proposed draft of the agreement, which reinstated all of the language that had been of primary concern to R.W. During a visit to Puerto Rico in early December and in subsequent correspondence, Welch's international marketing manager encouraged Ward to complete the contract negotiations "as soon as possible." On January [*481] 30, 1989, Ward responded by letter stating that he, too, was anxious to finalize the agreement, but that there were a few items "that your lawyer insists on and that we feel are not in the best interest of our future relationship." In response to an inquiry about R.W.'s investing $ 50,000 in a promotional campaign, Ward noted that the commitment was not yet ripe because he had agreed to make this expenditure "once we as a company[] held a working agreement with Welch's." A follow-up letter sent by Ward on February 8 to the president of Magna Trading reiterated concerns about the "transfer" concept as a means of "avoiding Law 75 constraints."

At this point, the applicability of Law 75 remained the only significant point of contractual disagreement between the parties. They had resolved earlier conflicts as to which of Ward's entities would be named specifically [7] in the contract (only R.W.), and whether R.W. would have an exclusive distributorship during the one-year trial period (no).

The companies had been continuing to do business throughout the negotiation period. Late in 1988, the relationship appeared to be working well; Magna Trading's president, Roberto Giro, wrote to Ward in early December to commend him for exceeding by 11 percent the goal on a special product promotion. Early in 1989, however, Giro began to express concern about R.W.'s side-by-side handling of the Welch and Donald Duck products. On January 20, he wrote to Welch's marketing manager indicating discomfort with Ward's involvement in a new line of Donald Duck grape juice products. This concern escalated, and Giro wrote again on March 22 suggesting that R.W. was not giving priority to Welch products as it had promised to do.

On March 30, 1989, Welch's international vice president, William Hewins, informed Ward in a letter of Welch's decision "to discontinue the existing pre-trial relationship . . . and, therefore, putting an end to the one-year trial or probationary relationship for our frozen concentrate products." The letter continued:

As you know, the idea of working [8] together on a one-year trial basis was, as per your recommendations, to determine if Welch's frozen concentrates could be handled to our satisfaction in spite of your handling a competitive product. The pre-trial relationship proved to us that the conflicts of interest of your representing both competing lines are significant and irreconcilable. . . . An increased level of conflict in personal relations between our broker and R.W. International has also been noted, tracing to conflicts between the brands represented by the two firms. . . . Instead of complementing one another, as was your original premise, these brands represent conflicting interests for you and us. . . .

Because Welch terminated the relationship before the parties reached an agreement in writing, the one-year trial period envisioned at the outset of their dealings never even commenced.

Plaintiffs filed this action in April 1989. Their amended complaint alleges that Welch terminated their dealership agreement without just cause in violation of Law 75; that Magna Trading tortiously interfered with their contractual relationship with Welch; and that defendants violated antitrust laws by threatening, and then later [9] actually terminating, plaintiffs' dealership if R.W. did not agree to drop Donald Duck products, and by seeking to monopolize the bottled grape juice market through a price-cutting war. The case was dismissed once on improper procedural grounds, see R.W. International Corp. v. Welch Foods, Inc., 937 F.2d 11 \(1st Cir. 1991\), and, following remand, dismissed again on defendants' motions for summary judgment.

In this appeal, plaintiffs maintain that all of their claims are viable. They argue that, contrary to the district court's ruling, precedent on Law 75 establishes that the statute does govern the business relationship within which R.W. and Welch operated for a year. They assert that this arrangement also provides a basis for their tortious interference claim against Magna. In addition, plaintiffs argue that their antitrust allegations were sufficient to withstand defendants' summary judgment motion and that, if their showing [*482] were deficient, the court erred in dismissing the claims without first allowing discovery.

II. Applicability of Law 75

Law 75 HN3↑ provides that, notwithstanding any contractual provision to the contrary, the supplier [10] in a distribution contract may terminate a dealership only for "just cause." *P.R. Laws Ann. tit. 10, § 278a.*² The statute was intended to protect Puerto Rico dealers from the harm caused when a supplier arbitrarily terminates a distributorship once the dealer has created a favorable market for the supplier's products, "thus frustrating the legitimate expectations and interests of those who so efficiently carried out their responsibilities," Medina & Medina v. Country Pride Foods, Ltd., 858 F.2d 817, 820 \(1st Cir. 1988\) (reproducing in full translation of Puerto Rico Supreme Court's response to certified question, 122 P.R. Dec. 172 (1988) (citing legislative reports)). The Act has been described as "very much a 'one-way street' designed to protect dealers from the unwarranted acts of termination by suppliers," Nike Int'l Ltd. v. Athletic Sales, Inc., 689 F. Supp. 1235, 1237 \(D.P.R. 1988\).

[11] For purposes of its summary judgment motion, Welch did not dispute that R.W. and its affiliates were performing the functions of a distributor within the meaning of Law 75 during the twelve months the parties were doing business, see *P.R. Laws Ann. tit. 10, § 278(a).*³ Welch's position was, and is, that these operations occurred during a kind of "twilight zone" period while the parties attempted to negotiate in good faith the terms that would govern their actual relationship. Because the negotiations failed, the relationship never materialized, and so, in Welch's view, Law 75 never was implicated.

² The provision states in full:

HN4↑ Notwithstanding the existence in a dealer's contract of a clause reserving to the parties the unilateral right to terminate the existing relationship, no principal or grantor may directly or indirectly perform any act detrimental to the established relationship or refuse to renew said contract on its normal expiration, except for just cause.

³ This provision defines a "dealer" as a "person actually interested in a dealer's contract because of his having effectively in his charge in Puerto Rico the distribution, agency, concession or representation of a given merchandise or service."

The district court accepted this argument, concluding that Law 75 was not meant to apply to a period of preliminary negotiations preceding a completed working agreement between [\[12\]](#) a supplier and distributor. The court noted that keeping operations in abeyance during a good-faith negotiating process "would allow distributors to sit and wait while the principal loses its market -- obtaining, literally without any effort, a stronger bargaining position every day it waits." Applying Law 75 to dealings during that period, however, "would curtail the autonomy required for arms-length negotiations." Neither approach would serve the statute's purpose of "improving and permitting a system of free competition."

Plaintiffs' challenge to this judgment is straightforward. Law 75 makes no distinctions among distributorship arrangements, they assert, be they described as pre-trial, preliminary, temporary or tentative. The only relevant point of inquiry is whether R.W. and its affiliates were performing as a dealer under the statute; if so, Law 75 governs. R.W. thus contends that, because Welch concedes dealer status, its decision to terminate the relationship must be judged under the statute's "just cause" test.

We are persuaded that plaintiffs' position is the correct one. Their most compelling support is provided by the statutory language, which defines a "dealer's contract" [\[13\]](#) subject to Law 75 as:

[\[a\] HN5](#) relationship established between a dealer and a principal or grantor whereby and irrespectively of the manner in which the parties may call, characterize or execute such relationship, the former actually and effectively takes charge of the distribution of a merchandise, or of the rendering of a service, by concession or franchise, on the market of Puerto Rico.

P.R. Laws Ann. tit. 10, § 278(b) (emphasis added). The statute clearly incorporates within its reach any arrangement between a supplier and dealer in which the dealer is actually in the process of distributing the [\[*483\]](#) supplier's merchandise in Puerto Rico. The statute does not apply to suppliers' simple sales to Puerto Rican wholesalers. It insists upon establishment of a "supplier/dealer" relationship. But once that relationship is established, the statute applies irrespective of the length of time such an arrangement has been in existence, and it explicitly rejects any efforts by the parties to foreclose coverage through semantic niceties. Welch's concession that R.W. was acting as a dealer (for purposes of summary judgment) thus seems dispositive.

Welch, however, asserts that the statute [\[14\]](#) is not meant to be as inclusive as its language suggests, and it offers several reasons to support this position. In our view, each falters upon close scrutiny.

First, Welch claims that the word "established" in the provision indicates that Law 75 applies only once the parties have achieved a certain level of stability. The parties in this case may have been working with each other, Welch observes, but their failure to reach agreement on essential terms meant that their relationship was never "established" within the meaning of Law 75. In support of this argument, Welch cites language from cases describing the Law 75 relationship as "characterized by its continuity, stability, mutual trust, coordination between both parties as independent entrepreneurs," J. Soler Motors, Inc. v. Kayser Jeep Int'l Corp., 108 P.R. Dec. 134, 145 (1978) (Official Translation); see also Roberco, Inc. v. Oxford Industries, Inc., 122 P.R. Dec. 117 (1988), Official Translation of the Supreme Court of Puerto Rico, slip op. at 5 (June 30, 1988); Medina & Medina, 858 F.2d at 822.

We cannot agree that a relationship [\[15\]](#) is "established" within the meaning of Law 75 only after a supplier and dealer have reached the point at which their relationship might be described as "stable" or "continuous." Although the statute was enacted to protect from abrupt and arbitrary termination dealers whose longstanding representation had provided substantial economic benefit to the manufacturer, the law is drafted to govern relationships from their inception to ensure that they will both become and remain stable and continuous. See Medina & Medina, 858 F.2d at 820 (Act 75 levels bargaining power between manufacturer and dealer "in order to achieve reasonably stable dealership relationships in Puerto Rico"). Although the precedent cited by Welch describes the type of longstanding commercial partnership that gave rise to Law 75, we do not read the cases to exclude fledgling relationships from the act's coverage. A well-established dealer may have more to lose -- and may have provided more benefit to the supplier -- than a dealer with less tenure, but the statute makes no distinction between them.

Nor can it be said that a relationship is established within the meaning of Law 75 only [16] if it is committed to writing. Indeed, Welch's counsel acknowledged at oral argument that a relationship subject to the statute may be established through a course of dealing, but argued that this was not such a case because the parties continued to disagree over the essential terms of their affiliation throughout their entire collaboration. In other words, Welch contends that this relationship was not established because its terms still were being negotiated.

While it is true that the parties had yet to agree on the dimensions of their future relationship, the fact remains that they were operating as business partners under some terms for a full year. Plaintiffs sent purchase orders to Welch approximately once a week between March 1988 and March 1989, and Ward's companies were actively involved in distributing Welch products throughout that time. As noted above, Ward received a commendation from Magna Trading's president for its effort in a successful special promotion. To be sure, the relationship envisioned by the parties when they began to do business never materialized; the relationship protected by Law 75, however, was the one that actually existed.

Welch's second argument, [17] that applying Law 75 during a period of preliminary negotiations improperly burdens the parties' liberty to contract, is the one the district court found particularly convincing. When parties freely have agreed that a trial period will precede establishment of the long-term relationship Law 75 is intended to protect, the [*484] company asserts, invoking the Act before conclusion of the trial period is tantamount to coercing the parties into a contract neither agreed to enter. This is particularly harmful to the supplier, Welch maintains, because Law 75 is designed to empower dealers. Thus, a supplier who is not allowed to step away from an unsuccessful attempted relationship would be forced into accepting the dealer's terms and conditions, with the consequent loss of its financial and legal autonomy.

We detect several problems with this argument. In the first place, as we have noted, the parties in this case were not simply negotiating a relationship to be activated sometime in the future. R.W. had been serving as Welch's Puerto Rico dealer for twelve months. While we would have no difficulty in accepting that a supplier could break off negotiations, no matter how long they had been going [18] on, the issue before us is whether Welch can terminate an actual dealership relationship that existed contemporaneously with the negotiations. Welch wants to insulate those dealings from Law 75 because they were part of a longer-term plan. The statute, however, plainly states that the characterization of a relationship (e.g., calling it temporary or preliminary) does not affect its status under Law 75. If the parties are dealing, a dealership exists for purposes of the Act.

This bright line makes sense. Otherwise, suppliers could insist on various types of contingency arrangements to avoid Law 75's restrictions for substantial periods of time. Although Welch's concerns about R.W.'s capacity to perform in the face of a potential conflict of interest seem legitimate, delaying Law 75's coverage until long after the dealership relationship began would allow Welch to terminate for any reason whatsoever. Welch, for example, could forsake R.W. without recourse and without regard for any efforts taken by R.W. to gear up for Welch's business, if another dealer willing to accept a smaller commission suddenly became available. Moreover, there seems to be no principled distinction between Welch's [19] one-year trial period and a supplier's effort to designate a three- or even five-year "preliminary" distributorship before deciding on a long-term relationship. To rule that a contingent relationship is outside the scope of Law 75 is thus to allow a significant loophole in the protection the Puerto Rico legislature sought to provide.

In the second place, we fail to see how applying Law 75 in the circumstances of this case necessarily would require Welch to continue a relationship it does not want in a manner to which it has serious objections. Law 75 simply requires a supplier to justify its decision to terminate a dealership. If Welch's conflict-of-interest concerns about R.W. are legitimate, we have no doubt that this would constitute "just cause" under Law 75. See Medina & Medina, 858 F.2d at 823-24.⁴ Thus, applying Law 75 here does not force a contract onto unwilling parties; it simply imposes conditions on an existing relationship.

[20] Finally, the liberty of contract argument stumbles insofar as it presumes that only the supplier will suffer if, to avoid application of Law 75, the parties refrain from dealing until they have reached final agreement on all terms to govern their long-term relationship. The manufacturer and the dealer share an interest in maximizing sales of the product, and it would be no more to the dealer's advantage than to the manufacturer's for a market to slip away while the parties are engaged in protracted negotiations. We therefore disagree with the district court's view that dealers will gain unfair advantage in bargaining if Law 75 is triggered as soon [*485] as the parties start dealing. Both sides have an incentive to reach agreement at the earliest possible time. To the extent a supplier's future flexibility is diminished by its choice to begin dealing before all issues have been resolved, this is a result intended by the legislators who enacted Law 75.

In short, the practical effect of activating the Dealers' Act as soon as the parties start conducting business as supplier and dealer is to ensure that, right from the start, the relationship is marked by a certain level of commitment from [21] the supplier. This does not entirely deprive suppliers of the opportunity to evaluate the suitability of a particular match through a "test period." It simply means that the relationship can be severed without consequence only for just cause, i.e., if the dealer fails a meaningful test. This should not trouble suppliers engaged in good-faith negotiations, for their goal is to produce a long-term working agreement. If, on the other hand, a preliminary "understanding" disintegrates into impasse over essential terms, a finding of "just cause" seems likely. Law 75 is not intended to extend unworkable relationships, but only to prevent arbitrary terminations. See Medina & Medina, 858 F.2d at 823-24.

Of course, whether or not statutes of this kind are sound policy is not our concern. Perhaps a case can be made for having a fixed period during which the relationship is probationary and the statutory rights under Law 75 do not vest; this is typical for tenure arrangements in government employment and in the academic world. But the legislature has not enacted such a window, as we read the present statute, and it is not for us to amend the statute in the guise [22] of construction.

Welch's effort to bolster its position through reliance on Medina & Medina and another case involving a novel Law 75 question, Nike Int'l Ltd. v. Athletic Sales, Inc., 689 F. Supp. 1235 (D.P.R. 1988), is unavailing. In Medina & Medina, the Puerto Rico Supreme Court held that HN6⁵] a supplier may withdraw from the Puerto Rico market without consequence under Law 75 if "the parties have bargained in good faith but have not been able to reach an agreement as to price, credit, or some other essential element of the dealership," 858 F.2d at 824. Welch contends that the district court's ruling, allowing the company to call off the protracted, unsuccessful negotiations with R.W., is faithful to that decision.

In Medina & Medina, however, the Puerto Rico Supreme Court did not rule that a temporary relationship pending completion of negotiations is outside the scope of Law 75, but it held that the failed negotiations over price and credit terms provided just cause for the supplier's decision to terminate the distributorship a year after it began.⁵

⁴ Medina & Medina is not precisely on point because it involved a supplier's decision to totally withdraw from the Puerto Rico market following good-faith negotiations that failed to achieve agreement between the parties. There is no indication here that Welch intended to leave the market rather than find a new dealer. Nevertheless, we believe the principle underlying Medina & Medina is equally applicable in these circumstances, i.e., that a supplier has just cause to terminate if it has bargained in good faith but has not been able "to reach an agreement as to price, credit, or some other essential element of the dealership," 858 F.2d at 824. This would be true at least where, as here, the supplier's market in Puerto Rico was well established before the current dealer relationship and the supplier's action therefore "is not aimed at reaping the good will or clientele established by the dealer," id.

⁵ The dealership contract between Medina & Medina and Country Pride contained no time limit. Product prices were set periodically by mutual agreement. 858 F.2d at 818.

Until that case, it was unclear whether a supplier could [23] terminate without consequence for any reason other than the dealer's adverse actions. Medina & Medina does help Welch, in that it allows an argument that failed negotiations may support a finding of "just cause," but it does not bolster the company's argument that preliminary dealings fall outside Law 75.

In Nike, a federal district court permitted termination of a dealer who failed to give the contractually required written notice to the supplier of its intent to renew the contract. 689 F. Supp. at 1239. According to Welch, Nike stands for the principle that dealers may not avoid the express terms of agreements to which they willingly subscribe. Consequently, the company argues, the district court properly held appellants to their own characterization of the arrangement as a preliminary [24] test period.

This argument stretches Nike far beyond its legitimate boundaries. Nike addressed only whether Law 75 released a dealer from an explicit renewal procedure contained in the distributorship contract. Noting that the statute's purpose was to protect against unjustified termination by the principal, the court ruled that it had no effect on mutual agreements specifying the manner in which a dealer must notify a supplier of its desire to continue their relationship. See 689 F. Supp. at 1239. In other words, while Law 75 takes [*486] away from the supplier the right to make a subjective decision to terminate, other than for "just cause," the parties may agree to a contractual procedure that gives the dealer the power either to end or to continue the relationship after a given period of time. Nike holds that Law 75 does not protect the dealer from its own failure to follow that procedure.

This case is simply not equivalent to Nike. Welch, in essence, claims that the parties agreed that Welch would have the power to terminate their relationship after a preliminary test period, without regard to just cause. This, however, is precisely [25] the imbalance of power to which Law 75 was directed, and the statute invalidates such an agreement. Under Law 75, a principal may not wield unilateral authority to terminate a dealership relationship for other than just cause.

In sum, we find no basis upon which to exclude the ongoing commercial dealings between Welch and R.W. from the embrace of Law 75. The district court's grant of summary judgment therefore must be reversed so that the court may consider whether Welch had "just cause" for terminating the relationship.⁶ Because summary judgment on the claim for tortious interference with a contractual relation was premised on the Law 75 holding, that decision also must be vacated and remanded for further consideration. The remand on the tortious interference claim is without prejudice to any argument Welch may be making that, regardless of the existence of a relationship protected by Law 75, there was no contract protected against tortious interference.

[26] III. Antitrust Claims

In January 1989, R.W. introduced a new Donald Duck bottled grape juice into the market with an intensive promotional campaign. Plaintiffs allege that defendants' reaction to the new product, and R.W.'s representation of it, violated sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1, 2, as well as Commonwealth antitrust law, P.R. Laws Ann. tit. 10, §§ 258, 260. The principal actions cited by plaintiffs in their amended complaint were (1) discussions in which Welch and Magna expressed "anger ('molestia'), discomfort and preoccupation with Plaintiffs' handling of the 'Donald Duck' bottled grape juice," Amended Complaint at P 78; (2) a "massive promotional campaign" for Welch's own bottled grape juice, and a price cutting war, "in order to block out the entrance [of] the 'Donald Duck' bottled grape juice into the Puerto Rican market," id. at PP 82, 91; and (3) the decision of Welch to terminate its relationship with plaintiffs because R.W. did not drop representation of the Donald Duck juice, id. at P 81.

The district court granted summary judgment on these claims, concluding that plaintiffs had failed to demonstrate [27] a genuine issue of material fact as to whether defendants' actions constituted either a conspiracy in restraint of trade in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act,⁷ or an unlawful conspiracy to monopolize the ⁶We recognize that Welch conceded that R.W. was performing as a dealer only for purposes of its summary judgment motion, and that, consequently, this issue also may surface again on remand.

bottled grape juice market in violation of § 2.⁸ Of greatest significance to the court was a declaration from one of Magna's principals, Francisco Gil, stating that Donald Duck bottled products had reached, within a short period of time, at least 80 percent of the stores typically carrying such products. The court found that summary judgment was proper because "plaintiffs never responded to Welch's claim that [] competition has not been injured, and that the Donald Duck bottled grape juice was successfully introduced into the Puerto Rico market."

[28] Plaintiffs claim on appeal that the court improperly and prematurely dismissed their [*487] antitrust claims. Much of their brief on this issue, however, is devoted to an off-the-mark argument concerning the court's failure to treat the allegations in their complaint liberally. The court did not dismiss the antitrust claims based on the pleadings, but ruled that plaintiffs had failed to substantiate in any way their conclusory allegations in response to defendants' summary judgment motion and accompanying declaration. Our review of the district court's decision consequently focuses solely on the appropriateness of summary judgment.

Section 1 of the Sherman Act. As argued by plaintiffs in their appellate brief, the unreasonable restraint of trade underlying their § 1 claim was an alleged threat by Welch (as part of a conspiracy with Magna) to terminate plaintiffs' dealership and the subsequent actual termination of the relationship. These actions presumably were alleged to violate the antitrust laws based on their impact in pressuring plaintiffs to drop the Donald Duck line of products, thereby suppressing competition among grape juice manufacturers.

HNG Heavy-handed competitive tactics [29] alone do not constitute an antitrust violation, however. To survive defendants' motion for summary judgment, plaintiffs needed to demonstrate a genuine dispute as to whether defendants' actions caused an injury to competition, as distinguished from impact on themselves. See, e.g., Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 122 L. Ed. 2d 247, 113 S. Ct. 884, 892 (1993) ("The law directs itself not against conduct which is competitive, even severely so, but against conduct which unfairly tends to destroy competition itself."); Copperweld Corp. v. Independence Tube Corp., 467 U.S. 752, 767 n.14, 81 L. Ed. 2d 628, 104 S. Ct. 2731 (1984) ("The antitrust laws . . . were enacted for "the protection of competition, not competitors."") (citations omitted) (emphasis in original); Clamp-All Corp. v. Cast Iron Soil Pipe Inst., 851 F.2d 478, 486 (1st Cir. 1988) ("Anticompetitive' . . . refers not to actions that merely injure individual competitors, but rather to actions that harm the competitive process."). Once defendants presented a declaration averring that the Donald Duck products successfully entered the market during the [30] relevant period of time -- indicating a lack of injury to competition -- plaintiffs were obliged to counter that statement with more than the bare allegations contained in their complaint. See Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 584-87, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538, 106 S. Ct. 1348 (1986).

Plaintiffs responded with a statement from R.W. owner Ward, which stated, in relevant part:

2. During the last months of 1988 R.W. International Corp. became the broker of Donald Duck bottled grape juice.
3. Shortly after the introduction in the market of the Donald Duck bottled grape juice, Welch's began an intensive promotion of their bottled grape juice products.
4. This intensive promotion of the Welch's Grape bottled products caused [] the introduction of the Donald Duck bottled grape juice be severely suppressed.
5. Upon information and belief [sic], this intensive promotion was carried out in conjunction with Magna Trading Corporation to eliminate the Donald Duck bottled grape juice from [the] Puerto Rico market.

⁷ Section 1 HNT makes unlawful "every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations . . ." 15 U.S.C. § 1.

⁸ Section 2 HN8 makes it an offense for any person to "monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations . . ." 15 U.S.C. § 2.

The district court concluded that this statement was insufficient to generate a genuine factual dispute because it left unchallenged [31] defendants' assertion that the Donald Duck bottled juice had deeply penetrated the Puerto Rico market during the period of defendants' allegedly unlawful conspiracy. The court observed:

As the Puerto Rico Supreme Court has recognized, distributors are in contact with the retailers, consumers, and the different components of the trade. Medina, 858 F.2d at 823 n.6. Plaintiffs were in the position to show, based on their knowledge of the Puerto Rico market, the effects of Welch's conduct on the market However, other than the conclusory allegation that their line had been "severely suppressed," plaintiffs never responded to Welch's claim that the competition has not been injured, and that the Donald Duck bottled grape juice was successfully introduced into the Puerto Rico market.

[*488] The district court's decision and explanation are unimpeachable. Plaintiffs may have felt pressured to drop the Donald Duck products in order to preserve the Welch dealership, and may have suffered economic consequences from Welch's decision to terminate, but these circumstances are irrelevant insofar as an antitrust violation is concerned. Plaintiffs' failure to [32] rebut defendants' assertion that Donald Duck bottled grape juice had no problem entering the market -- an implicit assertion that competition was not affected -- fully justifies the district court's decision to grant summary judgment for defendants.

Plaintiffs take issue with the significance of defendants' penetration figure, arguing that each of the stores carrying Donald Duck juice may have had only a single bottle of that brand while displaying shelves full of Welch products. We agree with the district court, however, that such information, if true, could have been obtained easily by plaintiffs, and its absence is thus not a proper basis upon which to withhold summary judgment from defendants.⁹ See infra [slip op.] at 24-25 (denial of discovery).

[33] Section 2 of the Sherman Act. Plaintiffs' § 2 claim characterizes defendants' promotional campaign, in which Welch reduced prices on its bottled grape juice, as an impermissible effort to gain monopoly control of the bottled grape juice market in Puerto Rico. In light of R.W.'s success in introducing the Donald Duck juice, this claim is wholly without merit.

The Supreme Court repeatedly has recognized that HN10↑ "cutting prices in order to increase business often is the very essence of competition," Matsushita, 475 U.S. at 594. See also Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 125 L. Ed. 2d 168, 113 S. Ct. 2578, 2586 \(1993\) (". . . Congress did not intend to outlaw price differences that result from or further the forces of competition."); Atlantic Richfield Co. v. USA Petroleum Co., 495 U.S. 328, 341, 109 L. Ed. 2d 333, 110 S. Ct. 1884 \(1990\) ("It is in the interest of competition to permit dominant firms to engage in vigorous competition, including price competition.") (citations omitted). There was little basis for believing that Welch was engaged in below-cost pricing as opposed to mere price reduction, although even HN11↑ below-cost [34] pricing is not automatically an antitrust violation if competition is not threatened. See Brook Group, 113 S. Ct. at 2588. Where, in addition, a new product is able to deeply penetrate the market during the challenged price-cutting period, it is evident that competition is unharmed and "summary disposition of the case is appropriate," id. at 2589.

Request for Discovery. Plaintiffs suggest that their inability to respond with particularity to defendants' motion for summary judgment is attributable to the district court's refusal to lift a stay of discovery that had been imposed on the antitrust claims. HN12↑ The decision whether to allow discovery while a summary judgment motion is pending rests within the discretion of the district court, Sheinkopf v. Stone, 927 F.2d 1259, 1263 \(1st Cir. 1991\), and "the party seeking additional time for discovery . . . must show that the facts sought 'will, if obtained, suffice to engender an issue both genuine and material,'" id. (citation omitted).

⁹ We have not considered Magna's argument that the § 1 claim fails because the requirement for joint action by independent entities is not fulfilled here in light of Magna's and Welch's unified economic interest. The argument does seem to have some force, however. See Copperweld, 467 U.S. at 776 (holding that "the coordinated behavior of a parent and its wholly owned subsidiary falls outside the reach of § 1"); Pink Supply Corp. v. Hiebert, Inc., 788 F.2d 1313, 1316-17 \(8th Cir. 1986\) (corporate agents may lack "the independent economic consciousness" necessary to be conspirators separate from their principal).

As the district court observed, plaintiffs were well situated to explore Welch's impact on competition [35] in the bottled grape juice market, and they had an obligation to use their knowledge and connection with the market to develop some basis to justify further inquiry.¹⁰ Plaintiffs, however, "never articulated how discovery from Welch would provide insight on the impact of Welch's conduct on the market." District Court Opinion, at 23-24. Their failure to do so negates their claim that the district court erred in denying discovery.

[36] [*489] Accordingly, we conclude that the district court properly dismissed plaintiffs' claims under sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, as well as under the analogous provisions of Puerto Rico law.

IV. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, we vacate the summary judgment for defendants on the Law 75 and tortious interference claims, and remand those issues for further proceedings consistent with this opinion. We affirm dismissal of the antitrust claims. We have not considered in any fashion defendants' argument to the district court that dismissal of all claims alternatively is appropriate based on Fed. R. Civ. P. 41 and the court's inherent powers to control the proceedings before it. The district court explicitly sidestepped this issue, and it is not properly before us.

Affirmed in part, and vacated and remanded in part. Each party to bear its own costs.

End of Document

¹⁰ For example, plaintiffs could have done a sampling of stores to compare prices and shelf life between the Welch and Donald Duck products. If bottles of Donald Duck juice remained on the shelves for long periods while Welch products enjoyed a quick turnover, and Welch's prices were substantially lower, plaintiffs may have been able to persuade the district court to grant discovery into the possibility that Welch was engaged in predatory pricing. See Brook Group, 113 S. Ct. at 2587 (predatory pricing involves pricing products "in an unfair manner with an object to eliminate or retard competition and thereby gain and exercise control over prices in the relevant market").

Stamatakis Indus. v. Beatrice Foods Co.

United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division

January 24, 1994, Decided ; January 25, 1994, Docketed

Case No. 83 C 6461

Reporter

1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 550 *

STAMATAKIS INDUSTRIES, INC., a Delaware corporation, and PREMIER ENGRAVING, INC., an Illinois corporation, Plaintiffs, v. BEATRICE FOODS CO., a foreign corporation, J. WALTER THOMPSON U.S.A., INC., a foreign corporation, KING GRAPHICS, INC., an Illinois corporation, FREDERICK KING, DONALD GREIFENKAMP, KENNETH E. TODD, and KIEFFER-NOLDE, INC., an Illinois corporation, Defendants.

Core Terms

antitrust, sanctions, group boycott, reasonable inquiry, allegations, competitors, color

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > Attorneys > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Baseless Filings > General Overview

HN1[ Civil Procedure, Attorneys

Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 is aimed at curtailing abuses of the judicial system. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 provides in relevant part, that: The signature of an attorney or party constitutes a certificate by the signer that the signer has read the pleading, motion, or other paper; that to the best of the signer's knowledge, information, and belief formed after reasonable inquiry it is well grounded in fact and is warranted by existing law.

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Baseless Filings > General Overview

HN2[ Sanctions, Baseless Filings

What constitutes a reasonable inquiry into the factual and legal basis of a document is not a subjective good faith standard, but one of reasonableness under the circumstances. Although no distinction is drawn between the state of mind of attorneys and parties, what constitutes a "reasonable inquiry" for an attorney, as opposed to a represented party, can differ.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Baseless Filings > General Overview

HN3 [] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Counsel should be aware of the requirement of showing an antitrust injury.

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Baseless Filings > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Responses > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss

HN4 [] Sanctions, Baseless Filings

A motion to dismiss merely tests the legal sufficiency of the allegations in the pleading, not the actual grounds for those allegations. The fact that a motion to dismiss is denied does not determine whether sanctions are appropriate against an attorney. A claim, which survives dismissal nonetheless warrants sanctions when no credible evidence is subsequently presented to support the allegations.

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Baseless Filings > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > General Overview

HN5 [] Sanctions, Baseless Filings

A client is not immune from Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 sanctions because of its status as a represented party. A trial court's discretion includes the power to impose sanctions on the client alone, solely on the counsel, or both. However, the Business Guides standard of "reasonableness under the circumstances" acknowledges that a client has a lesser ability to ascertain the legal foundation of a claim or a pleading.

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Baseless Filings > Bad Faith Motions

Governments > Courts > Rule Application & Interpretation

Legal Ethics > Professional Conduct > Frivolous Claims & Conduct

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Baseless Filings > General Overview

HN6 [] Baseless Filings, Bad Faith Motions

Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 provides that the amount of sanctions imposed by the court may include reasonable expenses including attorney's fees incurred because of the filing of the frivolous pleading, motion, or other paper. Compensation for defending against a frivolous action is an important function of Rule 11 sanctions, but an even more important purpose is deterrence. The purpose of Rule 11 is not reimbursement but sanction to bring home to the individual signer his personal, nondelegable responsibility.

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Baseless Filings > General Overview

Legal Ethics > Sanctions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > General Overview

HN7 Sanctions, Baseless Filings

Precisely because deterrence is the principal objective of Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 sanctions, equitable concerns often mitigate the amount of the sanction. For example, the assets of the sanctioned attorney are highly relevant to the determination of an appropriate award. Other equitable considerations include the magnitude of frivolousness and general culpability of the sanctioned attorney. The "degree of frivolousness" is factor in determining amount of the sanction. There are other mitigating factors such as: whether attorney believed he was correct; whether the lawyer is a neophyte in need of education or an attorney with an outstanding ethical record; and whether strong sanctions would chill this type of litigation.

Judges: [*1] BUCKLO

Opinion by: ELAINE E. BUCKLO

Opinion

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

This action was originally brought by Stamatakis Industries, Inc. ("Stamatakis") and its acquired subsidiary Premier Engraving, Inc. ("Premier"), alleging an antitrust violation by King Graphics, Inc. ("KGI"), Frederick King ("Mr. King"), Beatrice Foods Co. ("Beatrice"), J. Walter Thompson U.S.A., Inc. ("JWT"), Donald Greifenkamp, Kenneth E. Todd, and Kieffer-Nolde, Inc. ("K-N"). In the complaint, Stamatakis alleged that the defendants conspired to restrain trade by eliminating Premier from the market that produces color separations for the advertising industry. Summary judgment was entered on behalf of the defendants on October 11, 1990,¹ [*2] and affirmed by the Seventh Circuit on June 15, 1992. See Stamatakis Industries, Inc. v. King, 965 F.2d 469 \(7th Cir. 1992\). The sole issue before this court is Mr. King's motion to impose Rule 11 sanctions against Stamatakis and its attorneys, John C. Stiefel ("Mr. Stiefel") and Lionel G. Gross ("Mr. Gross").²

HN1

Rule 11, FED. R. CIV. P., is aimed at curtailing "abuses of the judicial system." Cooter & Gell v. Hartmarx Corp., 496 U.S. 384, 397, 110 L. Ed. 2d 359, 110 S. Ct. 2447 \(1990\). FED. R. CIV. P. 11 provided, at the time of the actions complained of,³ in relevant part, that:

The signature of an attorney or party constitutes a certificate by the signer that the signer has read the pleading, motion, or other paper; that to the best of the signer's knowledge, information, and belief formed after reasonable inquiry it is well grounded in fact and is warranted by existing law.

HN2  What constitutes a reasonable inquiry into the factual and legal basis of a document is not a subjective good faith standard, but "one of reasonableness under the circumstances." Business Guides v. Chromatic

¹ Judge Norgle adopted the July 31, 1990 Report and Recommendation ("R & R") of this court which concluded that defendants were entitled to summary judgment.

² In their reply memorandum on this motion, Mr. King asserts that plaintiffs' counsel is also liable to pay attorneys' fees pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1927. This contention was not previously raised and cannot be considered at this late date.

³ Rule 11 was amended December 1, 1993.

Communications Ent., 498 U.S. 533, 549-51, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1140, 111 S. Ct. 922 (1991), [*3] quoting Advisory Committee's Note to Fed. R. Civ. P. 11, 28 U.S.C. App., p. 576. Although no distinction is drawn between the state of mind of attorneys and parties, what constitutes a "reasonable inquiry" for an attorney, as opposed to a represented party, can differ. Business Guides v. Chromatic Communications Ent., supra, 498 U.S. at 550-51.

The facts underlying this controversy may be briefly summarized. Prior to Stamatakis' acquisition of Premier in 1976, Mr. King was Chairman of Premier and responsible for its day-to-day operations. R & R, p. 3. When Stamatakis acquired Premier, Mr. King stayed on to manage Premier and assented to an employment contract with a non-compete covenant which prohibited him from competing against Premier for two years after he left Premier. Id., p. 4. In the early 1980's, computer technology transformed the color separation process, and Mr. King was unsuccessful in his efforts [*4] to persuade Stamatakis to invest in the new equipment. Consequently, Mr. King left Premier in April, 1982. He briefly worked as a graphics consultant for a competitor, Beatrice. In October, 1982, Mr. King established KGI in space leased from JWT, Premier's largest client. Stamatakis Industries, Inc. v. King, supra, 965 F.2d at 471. In August, 1982, Premier lost the JWT account, and soon thereafter, three key employees also left to work for competitors of Premier. R & R, pp. 13-15.

Stamatakis filed this federal action pursuant to Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1, contending that the defendants inflicted an antitrust injury by conspiring to terminate Premier as a color separator for its largest client, JWT, and divide Premier's business among K-N and Beatrice.⁴ Because Stamatakis had no evidence of antitrust injury, this court and the Seventh Circuit both held that there was no triable issue regarding Stamatakis' Section 1 claim. See Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 586, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538, 106 S. Ct. 1348 (1986) (antitrust plaintiff alleging Section 1 violation must show both [*5] antitrust injury and conspiracy).

The Seventh Circuit concluded that Stamatakis was merely complaining that the defendants conspired to "steal Premier's business." Stamatakis Industries, Inc. v. King, supra, 965 F.2d at 471. The court characterized the complaint as "substantively silly," holding that Premier did not establish an antitrust injury, because such losses arise only "from acts that reduce output or raise prices to consumers." Id. at 470-71, citing Chicago Professional Sports Limited Partnership v. National Basketball Ass'n, 961 F.2d 667, 670 (7th Cir. 1992). The court further held that plaintiffs were actually complaining of "too much competition (injuring producers) [*6] rather than too little (injuring consumers)." Id. The court concluded that "it is an abuse of the Sherman Act to depict cooperative efforts to establish a new firm as a forbidden reduction of competition." Id. at 472.

There is no question that HN3[] counsel should have been aware of the requirement of showing an antitrust injury. E.g., Local Beauty Supply, Inc. v. LaMaur, Inc., 787 F.2d 1197, 1200-03 (7th Cir. 1986), and the various Supreme Court decision cited therein; S.W. Suburban Board of Realtors v. Beverly Area Planning Ass'n, 830 F.2d 1374, 1377 (7th Cir. 1987). In response to the motion for summary judgment, plaintiffs argued that they satisfied the requirement because they suffered the loss of JWT as a client. Counsel should have understood, however, that a producer's loss is not the same thing as antitrust injury.

Stamatakis argued, alternatively, that it satisfied the antitrust injury requirement because it was the victim of a "group boycott" or a "horizontal market allocation." Both of these practices are considered so manifestly anticompetitive that they fall within the category of practices presumed to be [*7] per se violative of the antitrust laws. See, e.g., United States v. Topco Associates, 405 U.S. 596, 608, 31 L. Ed. 2d 515, 92 S. Ct. 1126 (1972) (agreement among competitors at same market level to allocate territories) Klor's, Inc. v. Broadway-Hale Stores, Inc., 359 U.S. 207, 3 L. Ed. 2d 741, 79 S. Ct. 705 (1959) (group boycott or concerted refusal to deal by manufacturers and distributors eliminated small retailer from the market); Mid-West Underground Storage, Inc. v. Porter, 717 F.2d 493, 497-98 n.2 (10th Cir. 1983) ("essence of a market allocation violation . . . is that competitors apportion the market among themselves and cease competing in another's territory or for another's customers"). However, before per se treatment is justified, the court -- and counsel bringing a case -- must give "considerable inquiry into market conditions." E.g., Northwest Wholesale Stationers, Inc. v. Pacific Stationery & Printing Co., 472 U.S. 284, 297, 86 L. Ed. 2d 202, 105 S. Ct. 2613 (1985).

⁴ Stamatakis' amended complaint included an additional claim, which was subsequently dropped, alleging an attempt by the defendants to monopolize the market in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2.

The Report and Recommendation noted that the sine qua non of a group boycott is the denial of access to a relevant market. R & R, p. 29, citing Northwest Stationers v. Pacific Stationery, supra, 472 U.S. at 294. [*8] Stamatakis never seriously contended that Premier was effectively denied access to a significant section of the advertising industry as a result of the loss of JWT. In addition, Stamatakis provided no indirect evidence that the alleged conspirators had the requisite market power to force JWT into terminating Premier, or alternatively, that JWT could coerce the other color separators into controlling prices or otherwise reducing competition.

In opposition to the motion for sanctions, counsel point to Harkins Amusement Enterprises, Inc. v. General Cinema Corp., 850 F.2d 477 (9th Cir. 1988). However, in Harkins, plaintiff sought to prove that he was excluded from the first-run theater market, a relevant market for antitrust purposes. Here there was no evidence that plaintiff was excluded from any market other than JWT's business, which was not shown to be a relevant market.

Mr. Gross and Mr. Stiefel point to the fact that Stamatakis survived defendants' motion to dismiss as proof that the antitrust claim was colorable under existing law. However, HN4 [↑] a motion to dismiss merely tests the legal sufficiency of the allegations in the pleading, not the actual [*9] grounds for those allegations. See Brandt v. Schal Associates, Inc., 121 F.R.D. 368, 377 (N.D. Ill. 1988). In rejecting dismissal of Stamatakis' Section 1 claim, the court drew all favorable inferences from Stamatakis' allegation of "a conspiracy to support a horizontal group boycott which was aimed at reducing the demand for Premier's product." Order of Nov. 24, 1986, p. 2 (citations omitted).⁵ However, survival of the dismissal motion fails to negate the fact that Mr. Stiefel knew, or should have known, that the essence of Stamatakis' claim was that Premier simply lost a valuable client, JWT, to its competitors because of the desertion of Mr. King. A reasonable inquiry into the proof requirements for a "group boycott" would have charged Mr. Stiefel with the knowledge that Premier was not "boycotted," or otherwise denied meaningful access to vie for clients in the advertising industry, either in Chicago or across the country. Accordingly, the fact that the motion to dismiss was denied does not determine whether sanctions are appropriate against Mr. Stiefel. Cf. Kapco Manufacturing Co., Inc. v. C & O Enterprises, Inc., 886 F.2d 1485, 1494 (7th Cir. 1989) [*10] (claim which survived dismissal nonetheless warranted sanctions when no credible evidence was subsequently presented to support the allegations). It also has no effect on the Rule 11 motion against Mr. Gross, who opposed defendants' motion for summary judgment after discovery had shown that plaintiffs' theory was unsupported by facts.

[*11] Counsel do not appear to have prosecuted this action for an improper purpose, and they were seemingly genuine in their belief that their theories were viable applications of existing antitrust law. Furthermore, prospective litigants should not be deterred from seeking redress under the Sherman Act for injuries from concerted efforts to restrain competition. Nonetheless, Mr. Gross and Mr. Stiefel did make an unreasonable attempt to make a federal antitrust case out of a factual scenario that was, in essence, an alleged violation of a restrictive covenant. Their theory was objectively unreasonable, or as the Seventh Circuit indicated, "substantively silly." I conclude that appropriate sanctions under Rule 11 should be imposed upon Mr. Gross and Mr. Stiefel because the attorneys unreasonably advanced an antitrust claim they should have known was unwarranted.

Mr. King also seeks sanctions against Stamatakis. HN5 [↑] Stamatakis is not immune from Rule 11 sanctions because of its status as a represented party. See Business Guides v. Chromatic Communications Ent., supra, 498 U.S. at 549-51; CHARLES A. WRIGHT & ARTHUR R. MILLER, 5A FEDERAL PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE § [*12] 1336 at 104 (1990 ed.) ("court's discretion includes the power to impose sanctions on the client alone, solely on the counsel, or both"). However, the Business Guides standard of "reasonableness under the circumstances" acknowledges that a client has a lesser ability to ascertain the legal foundation of a claim or a pleading. Business Guides v. Chromatic Communications Ent., supra, 498 U.S. at 550.

⁵ In fact, in their objections to Magistrate Judge Balog's Report and Recommendation, plaintiffs stated that their "antitrust claims involve a horizontal group boycott engineered by Premier's non-aligned competitors in order to drive Premier out of business." Objections and Exceptions at 3. They went on to say that Beatrice "induced the group of Premier's biggest customers to boycott Premier." Id. No evidence was ever submitted that anyone took any business away from Premier, or attempted to do so, apart from one client, JWT. While these statements were not made in a memorandum signed by either Mr. Stiefel or Mr. Gross, they formed at least part of the basis upon which Judge Norgle denied the motion to dismiss.

Given the complexity and subtlety of antitrust law, it is unlikely that Stamatakis, which had no in-house counsel, could conduct a reasonable inquiry that would avail it of the meaning of legal terms of art such as "anticompetitive effect," "rule of reason," "per se violation," "group boycott," "horizontal allocation," and "relevant market." Stamatakis' antitrust claim was premised on its own belief that the defendants competed unfairly against it. As Stamatakis contends, its only objective was to recover damages for what it construed as a violation of Mr. King's non-compete covenant and tortious interference in its business relations with JWT. In his motion for Rule 11 sanctions, Mr. King does not allege that Stamatakis made false factual allegations, [*13] or allegations that it should have known were false. The antitrust theory alleged in the complaints was developed by Mr. Stiefel, and the subsequent claims of per se violations were generated by Stamatakis' attorneys. Stamatakis had no reason to believe, under the circumstances, that the theory was unwarranted under existing law.

HN6 Rule 11 provides that the amount of sanctions imposed by the court may include "reasonable expenses [including attorney's fees] incurred because of the filing of the [frivolous] pleading, motion, or other paper." FED. R. CIV. P. 11. Mr. King and KGI claim they have "spent in excess of $ 100,000," and seek reimbursement for "their costs and attorneys' fees incurred in defense of this action, to be proved up hereafter." Motion for Sanctions, PP 15-16. Compensation for defending against a frivolous action is an important function of Rule 11 sanctions, but "an even more important purpose is deterrence." Brown v. Federation of State Medical Boards of U.S., 830 F.2d 1429, 1438 \(7th Cir. 1987\), accord Pavelic & LeFlore v. Marvel Entertainment, 493 U.S. 120, 126, 107 L. Ed. 2d 438, 110 S. Ct. 456 \(1989\) (purpose of Rule 11 "is not reimbursement [*14] but sanction . . . to bring home to the individual signer his personal, nondelegable responsibility").

HN7 Precisely because deterrence is the principal objective of Rule 11 sanctions, equitable concerns often mitigate the amount of the sanction. See Brown v. Federation of State Medical Boards of U.S., supra, 830 F.2d at 1439. For example, the assets of the sanctioned attorney are highly relevant to the determination of an appropriate award. Id., citing Oliveri v. Thompson, 803 F.2d 1265, 1281 \(7th Cir. 1986\) (collecting cases). Other equitable considerations include the magnitude of frivolousness and general culpability of the sanctioned attorney. See Automatic Liquid Packaging, Inc. v. Dominik, 909 F.2d 1001, 1006 \(7th Cir. 1990\), citing Colorado Chiropractic Council v. Porter Memorial Hospital, 650 F. Supp. 231, 243 \(D. Colo. 1986\) ("degree of frivolousness" is factor in determining amount of sanction); see generally Eastway Construction Corp. v. City of New York, 637 F. Supp. 558, 571 \(E.D.N.Y. 1986\) (identifying other mitigating [*15] factors such as: whether attorney believed he was correct; whether lawyer is a neophyte in need of education or an attorney with outstanding ethical record; and whether strong sanctions would chill this type of litigation).

Mr. King has 20 days after the time when objections to this report must be filed, if none are filed, or 20 days following a decision to accept the recommendation of sanctions, if objections are filed, in which to submit a detailed declaration of his attorneys' fees and costs incurred to defend this antitrust action against Mr. Stiefel and Mr. Gross up until the time Mr. Stiefel and Mr. Gross withdrew from the case. Within 20 days thereafter Mr. Gross and Mr. Stiefel may provide this court with any additional information consistent with the mitigating factors expressed above, as well as objections to the amount of fees.

ELAINE E. BUCKLO

United States Magistrate Judge

Dated: January 24, 1994.

Balaklaw v. Lovell

United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit

September 29, 1993, Argued ; January 26, 1994, Decided

Docket No. 93-7484

Reporter

14 F.3d 793 *; 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 1392 ; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,497

LEE A. BALAKLAW, Plaintiff-Appellant, v. ROBERT M. LOVELL; WESSLEY D. STISSER; DONALD AMES; JOSEPH COMPAGNI, JR.; RONALD DENNISTON; DEBORAH GEIBEL; JAMES GIBBS; WILLIAM GREER; DAVID HEMPSON; DAVID HUNSINGER; BONNIE INNERST; DAVID LUNDEEN; DEAN MITCHELL; GENE NACCI; JOAN POSKANZER; CHARLES SPAULDING; CONNIE SWARR; CORTLAND MEMORIAL HOSPITAL; THE C.M.H. GROUP, Defendants-Appellees.

Prior History: [\[1\]](#) Anesthesiologist appeals summary judgment denying his antitrust claims against defendant hospital.

Disposition: Affirmed for lack of standing.

Core Terms

anesthesiologists, anesthesiology, antitrust, exclusive contract, anti trust law, competitors, staff privileges, group boycott, Sherman Act, anticompetitive, terminate, patients, relevant market, Clayton Act, proceedings, proposals, alleges, compete, buyers

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN1 Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 1.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Costs & Attorney Fees > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > Prioritizing Resources & Organization for Intellectual Property Act

HN2 Private Actions, Costs & Attorney Fees

14 F.3d 793, *793LÁ1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 1392, 1

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 15.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

HN3 Antitrust & Trade Law, Clayton Act

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 26.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Requirements

Healthcare Law > Healthcare Litigation > Antitrust Actions > Facilities

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Covenants not to Compete > General Overview

HN4 Standing, Requirements

In order to have standing to prosecute private antitrust claims, plaintiffs must show more than that the defendants' conduct caused them an injury. Plaintiffs must prove antitrust injury, which is to say injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful. The injury should reflect the anticompetitive effect either of the violation or of anticompetitive acts made possible by the violation.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

HN5 Private Actions, Remedies

Antitrust laws were enacted for the protection of competition, not competitors.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

HN6 Private Actions, Standing

A two-pronged analysis determines whether a plaintiff has antitrust standing. As a necessary first step, courts must determine whether the plaintiff suffered an antitrust injury. If the answer to that question is yes, they must then determine whether any of the other factors, largely relating to how direct and identifiable the plaintiff's injury is, prevent the plaintiff from being an efficient enforcer of the antitrust laws.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Types of Commercial Transactions > Sales of Goods > Output, Exclusive & Requirements Agreements

Healthcare Law > Healthcare Litigation > Antitrust Actions > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > Relevant Market

HN7 [down] Private Actions, Remedies

The relevant market definition must encompass the realities of competition.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing > Exclusive Dealing

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing > General Overview

HN8 [down] Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing, Exclusive Dealing

Exclusive dealing is an unreasonable restraint on trade only when a significant fraction of buyers or sellers are frozen out of a market by the exclusive deal.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Practices Governed by Per Se Rule > Boycotts

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Horizontal Refusals to Deal > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Horizontal Refusals to Deal > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Per Se Violations

HN9 [down] Practices Governed by Per Se Rule, Boycotts

Group boycotts, which generally consist of agreements by two or more persons not to do business with other individuals, or to do business with them only on specified terms may in some limited circumstances constitute per se violations of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Practices Governed by Per Se Rule > Boycotts

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

HN10 [down] Practices Governed by Per Se Rule, Boycotts

For standing purposes, whether there was or was not a per se antitrust violation is irrelevant.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

14 F.3d 793, *793L^A 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 1392, 1

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN11[] Clayton Act, Claims

Regardless of any substantive violation of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, sections 4 and 16 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.S. §§ 15, 26, still require plaintiffs to establish that the defendants engaged in anticompetitive conduct that caused them an antitrust injury.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Per Se Violations

HN12[] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason

"Per se violations" of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, include that limited class of cases where a defendant's actions are so plainly harmful to competition and so obviously lacking in any redeeming pro-competitive values that they are conclusively presumed illegal without further examination.

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Peer Review > General Overview

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Governmental & Nonprofit Liability > Health Care Quality Improvement Act

HN13[] Business Administration & Organization, Peer Review

42 U.S.C.S. § 11151\(9\) limits the term "professional review action" to actions based on the competence or professional conduct of an individual physician.

Counsel: WHITNEY NORTH SEYMOUR, JR., New York, NY, for Plaintiff-Appellant.

FRANCES A. CIARDULLO, Syracuse, NY, (Costello, Cooney & Fearon), for Defendants-Appellees.

Judges: Before: CARDAMONE, McLAUGHLIN, and LAY, * Circuit Judges.

Opinion by: LAY

Opinion

[*795] LAY, Senior Circuit Judge:

* Honorable Donald P. Lay, Senior Circuit Judge, United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, sitting by designation.

Borrowing themes from the Supreme Court's opinions in *Jefferson Parish*¹ [3] and *Summit Health*², Dr. Lee A. Balaklaw, an anesthesiologist practicing in Cortland, New York, brought suit under section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1 (1988),³ [4] and sections 4 and 16 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 15, 26 (1988),⁴ for an alleged "group boycott" and unreasonable restraint of trade preventing him from rendering anesthesiology services at Cortland Memorial Hospital ("CMH" or "the Hospital"). Balaklaw, rather than asserting a claim of an illegal tie-in, as Dr. Hyde did in Jefferson Parish, or alleging [2] an illegal disciplinary-review process as Dr. Pinhas had in Summit Health, urges that CMH violated the Sherman Act by entering into an exclusive contract with a group of anesthesiologists of which Dr. Balaklaw was not a member. Dr. Balaklaw alleges a conspiracy among the hospital, the successful bidding group of anesthesiologists (the "King group"), and others.⁵ The district court⁶ rejected these claims, and we affirm.

[5] I. BACKGROUND

Prior to the commencement of this lawsuit, Dr. Balaklaw served as president of Anesthesia Associates of Cortland, P.C., ("AAC") a private physicians' group, and Chief of Cortland Memorial Hospital's Department of Anesthesiology. Although there was no written contract governing the relationship between AAC and the Hospital, the entire Department of Anesthesiology consisted of AAC members, and AAC was solely responsible [*796] for meeting the Hospital's anesthesia requirements. AAC had what the district court described as a "de facto exclusive contract with ¹ Jefferson Parish Hosp. Dist. No. 2 v. Hyde, 466 U.S. 2, 80 L. Ed. 2d 2, 104 S. Ct. 1551 (1984). In Jefferson Parish, an anesthesiologist was denied admission to the defendant hospital's medical staff because the hospital had entered into an exclusive contract with a firm of anesthesiologists requiring that all anesthesiology services for the hospital's patients be performed by the contracting firm. Id. at 7. The rejected doctor sued under § 1 of the Sherman Act on the grounds that the users of the hospital's operating rooms were compelled to purchase the hospital's anesthesiology services, and that as such, an illegal "tying arrangement" existed. Id. at 4-5. The court of appeals agreed, finding the contract to be a per se violation of the Sherman Act. Id. at 8. The Supreme Court reversed and held that even though the patients were required to purchase two services that would otherwise be purchased separately, there was no illegal tying arrangement or violation of the Sherman Act because there was no restraint on competition. Id. at 32. Justice Stevens concluded for the Court that "without a showing of actual adverse effect on competition" there could be no case under the antitrust laws. Id. at 31.

² Summit Health, Ltd. v. Pinhas, 500 U.S. 322, 114 L. Ed. 2d 366, 111 S. Ct. 1842 (1991). The plaintiff in Summit Health, an ophthalmologist, asserted that the defendant hospital and its medical staff had violated § 1 of the Sherman Act by conspiring to drive him out of business in order to increase their competitive market share. 111 S. Ct. at 1844. The plaintiff alleged that the conspirators used sham professional peer-review proceedings to terminate his privileges and that they took other measures to prevent him from obtaining work elsewhere. Id. at 1845-46. The Court held that the claim satisfied the interstate commerce requirement of federal antitrust jurisdiction, and its analysis indicated that the offense charged would violate the Sherman Act. Id. at 1848-49.

³ Section 1 of the Sherman Act provides, in pertinent part, that HN1 [] "Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is declared to be illegal." 15 U.S.C. § 1 (1988 & Supp. IV 1992).

⁴ Section 4 of the Clayton Act provides that HN2 [] "any person who shall be injured in his business or property by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws may sue therefore . . . and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained, and the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee." 15 U.S.C. § 15 (1988). Section 16 in part allows HN3 [] "any person, firm, corporation, or association . . . to sue for and have injunctive relief, in any court of the United States having jurisdiction over the parties, against threatened loss or damage by a violation of the antitrust laws." 15 U.S.C. § 26 (1988).

⁵ Defendants include Cortland Memorial Hospital, Inc.; the C.M.H. Group, Inc., the Hospital's corporate parent; Robert M. Lovell, the hospital administrator and its chief executive officer; and members of the Hospital's Board of Trustees. Dr. Delf King, head of the King group, was named as a co-conspirator but not as a defendant to this action.

⁶ The Honorable Frederick J. Scullin, Jr., United States District Judge for the Northern District of New York.

the Hospital." Plaintiff rejects this characterization, testifying that throughout this period, any qualified competitor "could have come in from the outside and competed with us at any point in time."

Dr. Balaklaw's arrangement with CMH came to an end when CMH decided to solicit proposals from outside for a written exclusive contract for anesthesiology services.⁷ CMH sent a formal Request for Proposals to practicing anesthesiologists in New York, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Ohio. Nine proposals were received in return, including one from AAC. An ad hoc selection committee [6] consisting of members of the Board of Trustees, Hospital administration, and medical and nursing staffs then interviewed four of the applicant groups, including the group headed by Dr. Balaklaw. The committee unanimously recommended that the Board award the exclusive contract to a group headed by Dr. Delf King, and the Board of Trustees subsequently announced its intent to enter into such a contract.

Pursuant to the Hospital's Medical Staff By-Laws, Dr. Balaklaw sought a hearing to review this decision. The hearing committee unanimously supported the Board's intent to award the contract to Dr. King, and on appeal the full Board upheld the hearing committee's decision. [7] The Hospital then executed a formal written agreement with Dr. King.

Under the terms of the contract, Dr. King and his group became the exclusive providers of anesthesia services to all patients at CMH. The initial term of the contract was three years, but either party could terminate the contract without cause upon six-months' notice. Dr. Balaklaw's clinical privileges were not terminated. He asserts, however, that the nature of the contract effectively ousted him from his practice at CMH and that because other hospitals request information about any prior diminutions in privileges, he has been rendered unable to secure another full-time position.

The complaint alleges that the Hospital's and Dr. King's actions in entering into the exclusive anesthesiology contract constituted a conspiracy to engage in an illegal group boycott of, and a concerted refusal to deal with, Dr. Balaklaw. Dr. Balaklaw claims that he has been driven from the practice of his profession, not only at CMH, but nationwide. He alleges that the proceedings that led to the contract between CMH and Dr. King were anti-competitive and a per se violation of the Sherman Act. As compensation, Dr. Balaklaw seeks treble [8] damages under section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15, and declaratory and injunctive relief under section 16 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 26.

The district court held that the plaintiff lacked standing to assert his antitrust claims. The court reasoned that the injury plaintiff alleged did not appear "to be the type of injury the antitrust laws were intended to prevent." In addition, the court held that even if the plaintiff did possess the requisite standing, summary judgment for the defendants would still be warranted because the plaintiff had not established the substantive elements of his claims. The court concluded that CMH's effort to change the anesthesia services at CMH did not hinder competition, but rather, it fostered it by awarding the contract to the organization that offered to provide the services needed by the Hospital at the lowest price. The court thus entered its order granting defendants' motion for summary judgment, from which the plaintiff appeals.⁸

[9] [*797] We affirm the district court's dismissal of the complaint for lack of standing.

⁷The parties dispute the reasons for this decision. Dr. Balaklaw contends that he had become "the target of an economic vendetta" at CMH because of "years of independent, reform-minded patient advocacy." Defendants claim that the Board of Trustees was motivated by "many complaints about inadequate anesthesia services from members of its Medical Staff."

⁸In addition, the district court found no actionable conspiracy between the hospital and members of its medical staff because they constituted a single entity for purposes of antitrust litigation. The court likewise rejected a conspiracy theory based simply on the fact that Dr. King and his group had entered into a contract with the hospital. The court further found there was no unreasonable restraint of trade or per se violation of the Sherman Act. In this regard, the court found that the relevant market area for anesthesiologist services was nationwide. The court found no evidence that the contract foreclosed competition within this market.

II. DISCUSSION

It is now well settled that HN4 in order to have standing to prosecute private antitrust claims, plaintiffs must show more than that the defendants' conduct caused them an injury. Associated Gen. Contractors of Cal., Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519, 535 n.31, 74 L. Ed. 2d 723, 103 S. Ct. 897 (1983); Eastway Constr. Corp. v. City of New York, 762 F.2d 243, 250 (2d Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 918, 98 L. Ed. 2d 226, 108 S. Ct. 269 (1987); Todorov v. DCH Healthcare Auth., 921 F.2d 1438, 1448 (11th Cir. 1991). "Plaintiffs must prove antitrust injury, which is to say injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful. The injury should reflect the anticompetitive effect either of the violation or of anticompetitive acts made possible by the violation." Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701, 97 S. Ct. 690 (1977); see R.C. Bigelow, Inc. v. Unilever N.V., 867 F.2d 102, 107 [10] (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 815 (1989). This antitrust injury requirement underscores the fundamental tenet that HN5 "the antitrust laws . . . were enacted for 'the protection of competition, not competitors.'" Brunswick, 429 U.S. at 488 (quoting Brown Shoe v. United States, 370 U.S. 294, 320, 8 L. Ed. 2d 510, 82 S. Ct. 1502 (1962)). It follows from the purposes of the antitrust laws that injuries resulting from competition alone are not sufficient to constitute antitrust injuries. See Phillip E. Areeda & Herbert Hovenkamp, Antitrust Law P 334.2 (Supp. 1993). Thus, in Brunswick, the Supreme Court found no antitrust injury where the defendant had preserved, rather than dampeden, competition by acquiring a number of the plaintiff's bowling alley competitors that would otherwise have gone out of business. 429 U.S. at 488. The Court responded to the plaintiff's claim that the defendant's actions deprived it of profits it would have received had its competition been allowed to fail by stating, "It is inimical to the purposes of [the antitrust] laws to award damages for the type [11] of injury claimed here." Id.; see also Cargill, Inc. v. Monfort of Colorado , Inc., 479 U.S. 104, 116-117, 93 L. Ed. 2d 427, 107 S. Ct. 484 (1986) (extending antitrust injury requirement to equitable actions under section 16 of the Clayton Act and stating that "the threat of loss of profits due to possible price competition following a merger does not constitute a threat of antitrust injury").

In the case before us, even if we assume that the plaintiff suffered a direct and readily identifiable injury caused by the defendants' actions, there is no evidence that this injury was "of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent." ⁹ We agree with the [*798] district court that Dr. Balaklaw's claimed injury came as a result of his losing out in the competition for an exclusive anesthesiology contract at CMH, and nothing more.

[12] A. Exclusive Dealing

Dr. Balaklaw claims that the exclusive contract between CMH and the King group led to an antitrust injury because it "unreasonably foreclosed a significant amount of competition in the relevant market without pro-competitive justification." We disagree. The Supreme Court in Jefferson Parish Hospital District No. 2 v. Hyde, 466 U.S. 2, 80 L.

⁹The Court in Cargill pointed out that even an antitrust injury, while necessary to establish standing under section 4 of the Clayton Act, may not always be sufficient to confer standing, "because a party may have suffered antitrust injury but may not be a proper plaintiff under § 4 for other reasons." 479 U.S. at 110 n.5. In Associated General, the Court discussed some of the "other reasons" that might affect whether a party has antitrust standing. See 459 U.S. at 537-45. The Court mentioned: (1) the causal connection between the alleged antitrust violation and the harm to the plaintiff; (2) the existence of an improper motive; (3) whether the injury was of a type that Congress sought to redress with the antitrust laws; (4) the directness of the connection between the injury and alleged restraint in the relevant market; (5) the speculative nature of the damages; and (6) the risk of duplicative recoveries or complex apportionment of damages. Id.; see South Dakota v. Kansas City Indus., 880 F.2d 40, 45-46 (8th Cir. 1989) (analyzing and applying these factors), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 1023, 107 L. Ed. 2d 745, 110 S. Ct. 726 (1990).

Over time, courts have developed HN6 a two-pronged analysis to determine whether a plaintiff has antitrust standing. As a necessary first step, courts must determine whether the plaintiff suffered an antitrust injury. If the answer to that question is yes, they must then determine whether any of the other factors, largely relating to the directness and identifiability of the plaintiff's injury, prevent the plaintiff from being an efficient enforcer of the antitrust laws. See Todorov, 921 F.2d at 1449. In this appeal, since we conclude that Dr. Balaklaw has not suffered an antitrust injury, we do not reach this second question.

Ed. 2d 2, 104 S. Ct. 1551 (1984), disposed of a similar argument on the merits. The Court observed with respect to an exclusive contract between the defendant hospital and an anesthesiology group headed by Dr. Kermit Roux:

There is . . . insufficient evidence in this record to provide a basis for finding that the Roux contract, as it actually operates in the market, has unreasonably restrained competition. The record sheds little light on how this arrangement affected consumer demand for separate arrangements with a specific anesthesiologist. The evidence indicates that some surgeons and patients preferred respondent's services to those of Roux, but there is no evidence that any patient who was sophisticated enough to know the difference between two anesthesiologists was not also able to go to a hospital that would [13] provide him with the anesthesiologist of his choice.

In sum, all that the record establishes is that the choice of anesthesiologists at East Jefferson has been limited to one of the four doctors who are associated with Roux and therefore have staff privileges. Even if Roux did not have an exclusive contract, the range of alternatives open to the patient would be severely limited by the nature of the transaction and the hospital's unquestioned right to exercise some control over the identity and the number of doctors to whom it accords staff privileges. If respondent is admitted to the staff of East Jefferson, the range of choice will be enlarged from four to five doctors, but the most significant restraints on the patient's freedom to select a specific anesthesiologist will nevertheless remain.

Id. at 29-30 (footnotes omitted). We reach a similar assessment of the allegations here.

The relevant markets even arguably affected by the exclusive contract granted to Dr. King and his group are (1) the consumers of anesthesiology services, and (2) the providers of anesthesiology services. See Jefferson Parish, 466 U.S. at 7. [14] From the consumers' point of view, nothing about the market has changed. As the Tenth Circuit noted on similar facts in Coffey v. Healthtrust, Inc., 955 F.2d 1388 (10th Cir. 1992), "it is clear that what occurred after the implementation of the [exclusive] contract . . . was only a reshuffling of competitors," id. at 1393.¹⁰ [15] Although Dr. Balaklaw claims that other qualified competitors could have come in from the outside at any time to compete with him and his group, the evidence shows that prior to the agreement with Dr. King, Dr. Balaklaw's group had exclusive control over anesthesiology services at CMH.¹¹ Cf. Jefferson Parish, 466 U.S. at 6 [*799] 104 S. Ct. at 155 (noting that despite deleting contract clause excluding other anesthesiologists from practice, hospital continued to regard itself as committed to a closed anesthesiology department). After CMH entered into the agreement with Dr. King, anesthesiology services remained exclusive. Only the provider changed.

[16] From the standpoint of the providers of anesthesiology services, the market remains similarly unaltered. The relevant market here is the market in which anesthesiologists compete for jobs. See Collins v. Associated Pathologists, Ltd., 844 F.2d 473, 478 (7th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 852, 102 L. Ed. 2d 110, 109 S. Ct. 137 (1988). While the precise dimensions of this market are not clearly defined, "the market is not necessarily the same as the market in which hospitals compete in offering services to patients; it may encompass competition among anesthesiologists for exclusive contracts . . . and might be statewide or merely local." Jefferson Parish, 466 U.S. at 29 (footnote omitted). The basic principle is that HNT[↑] "the relevant market definition must encompass the realities of competition." Oksanen v. Page Memorial Hosp., 945 F.2d 696, 709 (4th Cir. 1991) (en banc), cert. denied, 117 L. Ed. 2d 137, 112 S. Ct. 973 (1992); see United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 572-73, 16 L. Ed. 2d 778, 86 S. Ct. 1698 (1966). The evidence shows that in this case, CMH solicited proposals [17] from anesthesiologists in seven states, tangibly indicating that anesthesiologists compete in a multi-state, if not national, market. Plaintiff has provided no evidence that this competition has been hampered by the exclusive contract entered into at CMH. Even if the contract between CMH and Dr. King excluded Dr. Balaklaw from the local Cortland-area market, there is no evidence to suggest that the contract caused Dr. Balaklaw (or other anesthesiologists) to be excluded from, or substantially limited in, the broader market for employment. See Collins, 844 F.2d at 479.¹²

¹⁰ In Coffey, as here, the plaintiff group of physicians once had an exclusive, though not always written, arrangement with a hospital to provide, in that case, radiological services, but was replaced when the hospital entered into an exclusive contract with another group. 955 F.2d at 1390. The court affirmed summary judgment granted against the plaintiffs. Id. at 1395.

¹¹ The evidence also suggests that prior to CMH's entering into the contract with Dr. King, Dr. Balaklaw strongly supported the "single group" concept. He spoke at meetings and wrote three separate memoranda to the Board of Trustees endorsing the view that the Hospital should have only one anesthesia group providing anesthesia services to patients. On appeal, he argues that he never advocated an exclusive contract; rather, "what he advocated was administration of the department by a single group--with no express restriction on membership." We find this a distinction without a difference. Whether "administered" by a single group or contractually delegated to a single group, the department would not be freely open to non-group members or other, competing groups. Additional doubt is cast on Dr. Balaklaw's willingness to operate the department "with no restrictions on membership" by the fact that, as he testified at his deposition, he actively enforced non-competition clauses in the employment contracts of Dr. Abbassi and Dr. Jeffrey, former members of Dr. Balaklaw's group, to prevent them from practicing at CMH. Joint App. at A-213 - A-214.

[18] Even at CMH, opportunities for competition remain, since the contract with Dr. King has a term of only three years and may be cancelled without cause upon six-months' notice. In Konik v. Champlain Valley Physicians Hospital Medical Center, 733 F.2d 1007, 1014-15 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 884, 83 L. Ed. 2d 190, 105 S. Ct. 253 (1984), we rejected an antitrust challenge to an anesthesiology contract in part because the parties were free at the end of any six-month period to terminate the agreement. Here, as there, "the Hospital [is] free at the end of six months to enter into a new arrangement either with [the current group] or with any other anesthesiologist." Id. at 1015. Such a situation may actually encourage, rather than discourage, competition, because the incumbent and other, competing anesthesiology groups have a strong incentive continually to improve the care and prices they offer in order to secure the exclusive positions. See, e.g., Dos Santos v. Columbus-Cuneo-Cabrini Medical Center, 684 F.2d 1346, 1353-54 (7th Cir. 1982); Drs. Steuer & Latham, P.A. v. National Medical Enters., Inc., 672 F. Supp. 1489, 1516 (D.S.C. 1987). [19] aff'd, 846 F.2d 70 (4th Cir. 1988) (table). We thus see no "foreclosure of competition" in either of the two relevant markets, and consequently, we find no antitrust injury.¹³

[20] [*800] This is not to say that under proper pleading and proof exclusive-dealing contracts could not still be scrutinized under the antitrust laws. As Justice O'Connor expressed in her concurring opinion in Jefferson Parish:

Exclusive-dealing arrangements may, in some circumstances, create or extend market power of a supplier or the purchaser party to the exclusive-dealing arrangement, and may thus restrain horizontal competition. Exclusive dealing can have adverse economic consequences by allowing one supplier of goods or services unreasonably to deprive other suppliers of a market for their goods, or by allowing one buyer of goods unreasonably to deprive other buyers of a needed source of supply. In determining whether an exclusive-dealing contract is unreasonable, the proper focus is on the structure of the market for the products or services in question--the number of sellers and buyers in the market, the volume of their business, and the ease with which buyers and sellers can redirect their purchases or sales to others. *HN8*¹⁴ Exclusive dealing is an unreasonable restraint on trade only when a significant fraction of buyers or sellers are frozen out of a market by the exclusive deal. [21] Standard Oil Co. of California v. United States, 337 U.S. 293, 93 L. Ed. 1371, 69 S. Ct. 1051 (1949).

¹² Although this analysis parallels the district court's substantive discussion of the relevant market area, it also is relevant to the failure of the plaintiff to demonstrate a cognizable antitrust injury showing an actual adverse effect on competition. See Jefferson Parish, 466 U.S. at 31 (noting after analysis of relevant market that "without a showing of actual adverse effect on competition, respondent cannot make out a case under the antitrust laws, and no such showing has been made").

¹³ Dr. Balaklaw also alleges that there is no "pro-competitive justification" for the exclusive contract with Dr. King. While such considerations are more relevant to a "rule of reason" analysis on the merits, we note that in addition to the generally pro-competitive effects short-term exclusive contracts for medical services may have, the defendants here did provide "evidence of the pro-competitive 'redeeming virtues' of their combination." See Capital Imaging v. Mohawk Valley Medical Assocs., 996 F.2d 537, 543 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 126 L. Ed. 2d 337, 114 S. Ct. 388 (1993) (citation omitted). The evidence shows that the ad hoc advisory committee chose to recommend an exclusive contract with Dr. King's group because his "proposal was most responsive to the needs of our Hospital as identified through the request for proposals." Joint App. at A-445. The committee's report details how Dr. King's proposal was most responsive, particularly in the staffing and financing areas. Id. Under such circumstances, the contract appears to best meet the needs of the purchaser, the hospital, and by extension its patients, and therefore it is clearly justified on pro-competitiveness grounds.

466 U.S. at 45. In this case, Dr. Balaklaw has alleged no threat of "adverse economic consequences" to anyone but himself.

B. Group Boycott

Dr. Balaklaw contends that under the Supreme Court's decision in Summit Health, Ltd. v. Pinhas, 500 U.S. 322, 114 L. Ed. 2d 366, 111 S. Ct. 1842 (1991), CMH's actions constitute a group boycott against him and thus are a per se violation of the Sherman Act. He alleges that CMH used its peer review proceedings to "exclude the victim from the entire national market for employment by putting an indelible black mark on the doctor's record."

HN9[¹⁴] Group boycotts, which generally consist of agreements by two or more persons not to do business with other individuals, or to do business with them only on specified terms, Volvo N. Am. Corp. v. Men's Int'l Pro. Tennis Council, 857 F.2d 55, 73 (2d Cir. 1988), may in some limited circumstances constitute per se violations of the Sherman Act.¹⁴ See Capital Imaging v. Mohawk Valley Medical Assocs., 996 F.2d 537, 542 [22] (2d Cir.) cert. denied, 126 L. Ed. 2d 337, 114 S. Ct. 388 (1993); see also FTC v. Indiana Fed'n of Dentists, 476 U.S. 447, 458, 90 L. Ed. 2d 445, 106 S. Ct. 2009 (1986) (noting that the "per se approach has generally been limited to cases in which firms with market power boycott suppliers or customers in order to discourage them from doing business with a competitor"). HN10[¹⁵] For standing purposes, however, whether there was or was not a per se violation is irrelevant. See Indiana Grocery, Inc. v. Super Valu Stores, Inc., 864 F.2d 1409, 1419 (7th Cir. 1989). HN11[¹⁶] Regardless of any substantive violation of the Sherman Act, sections 4 and 16 of the Clayton Act still require plaintiffs to establish that the defendants engaged in anticompetitive conduct that caused them an antitrust injury. Id.; Newman v. Universal Pictures, 813 F.2d 1519, 1522-23 (9th Cir. 1987) ("Although the per se rule relieves plaintiff of the burden of demonstrating an anticompetitive effect, which is assumed, it does not excuse a [*801] plaintiff from showing that his injury was caused by the anticompetitive acts."), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1059, 100 L. Ed. 2d 931, 108 S. Ct. 2831 (1988). [23] Dr. Balaklaw has demonstrated no such conduct, and Summit Health is of little assistance.

It is true that in Summit Health, the Supreme Court held that federal jurisdiction did exist over antitrust claims that a hospital had used its peer-review proceedings to effect an illegal group boycott of a physician, but the facts of that case make it inapposite here. The defendant hospital in Summit Health used "sham" disciplinary proceedings to terminate the plaintiff ophthalmologist's staff privileges, and it planned to distribute an adverse [24] report about the plaintiff to all the hospitals where he was a member or where he might apply for similar positions. 111 S. Ct. at 1845-46. Here, by contrast, Dr. Balaklaw's staff privileges at CMH have not been terminated,¹⁵ [25] he has not been subjected to any disciplinary peer-review proceedings,¹⁶ and there is nothing to suggest that an adverse report is being circulated or that any other "indelible black mark" has been placed on Dr. Balaklaw's record. He claims that being rejected at CMH will stigmatize him in his efforts to obtain new employment. Yet at the hearing to consider plaintiff's motion for a preliminary injunction, Dr. Balaklaw admitted that when asked on employment applications whether his prior staff privileges had ever been revoked or terminated, he would add an explanation, but always answer "no." Joint App. at A-680. It appears that far from being permanently stigmatized and excluded from his profession, Dr. Balaklaw, like seven of the other eight anesthesiology groups that submitted proposals, simply failed to win the exclusive contract to practice anesthesiology at CMH.¹⁷

¹⁴ The so-called HN12[¹⁷] "per se violations" of the Sherman Act include that "limited class of cases where a defendant's actions are so plainly harmful to competition and so obviously lacking in any redeeming pro-competitive values that they are 'conclusively presumed illegal without further examination.'" Capital Imaging, 996 F.2d at 542 (citation omitted) (quoting Broadcast Music, Inc. v. CBS, 441 U.S. 1, 8, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1, 99 S. Ct. 1551 (1979)).

¹⁵ We recognize, though, that even though Dr. Balaklaw was reappointed to the Medical Staff in December, 1991, and his membership was subject to renewal in December, 1993, as a result of the contract with the King group, Dr. Balaklaw may not now actually practice at CMH.

¹⁶ The peer-review proceedings at issue in Summit Health were those contained in the Health Care Quality Improvement Act of 1986, 42 U.S.C. §§ 11101-11152 (1988), which HN13[¹⁸] limits the term "professional review action" to actions "based on the competence or professional conduct of an individual physician," id. § 11151(9). Here, there were no charges against Dr. Balaklaw relating to his professional competence or conduct. The hearing at which Dr. Balaklaw appealed the Board's decision to enter into the contract with Dr. King was authorized by the Hospital's by-laws as an internal grievance procedure for any decision that affected a member of the medical staff's clinical privileges. Such proceedings are not "professional review actions" under the terms of the Health Care Quality Improvement Act.

[26] III. CONCLUSION

"It is the nature of competition that at some point there are winners and losers, and the losers are excluded." Konik v. Champlain Valley Physicians Hosp. Medical Center, 733 F.2d 1007, 1015 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 884, 83 L. Ed. 2d 190, 105 S. Ct. 253 (1984). Here, Dr. Balaklaw entered the competition for an exclusive contract, he interviewed for it, and he lost. He was therefore excluded from further practice at CMH during the term of the contract. Especially in light of the Supreme Court's recognition that a hospital has the "unquestioned right to exercise some control over the identity and [*802] the number of doctors to whom it accords staff privileges," Jefferson Parish, 466 U.S. at 30, and the frequently expressed judicial approval of exclusive contracts for medical services, see , e.g., id. at 43-44 (O'Connor, J., concurring); Coffey v. Healthtrust, Inc., 955 F.2d 1388, 1393 (10th Cir. 1992); Beard v. Parkview Hosp., 912 F.2d 138, 140 (6th Cir. 1990); Collins v. Associated Pathologists, Ltd., 844 F.2d 473, 478-79 (7th Cir. 1988); [27] Coastal Neuro-Psychiatric Assocs. v. Onslow Memorial Hosp., 795 F.2d 340, 342 (4th Cir. 1986), such exclusion is not enough to constitute an antitrust injury. As we said in Konik, "the Hospital is not required to open its operating rooms to any and all anesthesiologists who wish to practice there." 733 F.2d at 1015. By closing it doors to Dr. Balaklaw in favor of one of his competitors, CMH did nothing to inflict an injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent.

Because Dr. Balaklaw's factual allegations, when considered in a light most favorable to him, establish only that he has been harmed as an individual competitor, we conclude that Dr. Balaklaw has suffered no antitrust injury and therefore lacks standing to prosecute his antitrust claims. Accordingly, the district court's order granting summary judgment to the defendants is affirmed.

End of Document

¹⁷ Dr. Balaklaw alleges that, like the plaintiff in Summit Health, he was displaced by the Hospital for retaliatory reasons. Even if it is true, as he alleges, that the Hospital was motivated by an "economic vendetta" against him, absent "proof of harm to the whole market," Capital Imaging, 996 F.2d at 543, that is not properly the subject of an antitrust action. "Were the law construed otherwise, routine disputes between business competitors would be elevated to the status of an antitrust action, thereby trivializing the Act because of its too ready availability." Id. Indeed, were we to characterize the harm to Dr. Balaklaw as an "antitrust injury," conceivably every competitor who ever lost a contract through a competitive bidding process could come to court claiming violations of the Sherman Act. Even if their claims proved meritless, the drawn-out proceedings necessary to evaluate them could chill competitive market forces, a prospect directly at odds with the purposes for which the antitrust laws were enacted. See id. at 541 (noting that summary judgment is a vital tool in the antitrust area to prevent wasteful trials that may chill competitive market forces) (citing Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 585-88, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538, 106 S. Ct. 1348 (1986)).

Davis v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co.

United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida

February 1, 1994, Decided ; February 1, 1994, Filed

Case No. 89-2839-CIV-NESBITT

Reporter

1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13257 *; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,510

LINDA DAVIS, et al., Plaintiffs, v. SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY, a Georgia corporation, Defendant.

Core Terms

Plaintiffs', solicitations, Counterclaim, enterprise, customers, contracts, consumers, Counts, inside wire, advertising, competitors, repair, motion to dismiss, damages, barrier, offers, summary judgment, corrective, telephone, monopolization, notice, antitrust, summary judgment motion, monopoly power, misrepresentations, criminal activity, class member, notifications, allegations, questions

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Supporting Materials > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Motions for Summary Judgment > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Opposing Materials > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Pretrial Matters > Continuances

HN1[] Summary Judgment, Supporting Materials

Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f) provides that should it appear from the affidavits of a party opposing the motion that the party cannot for reasons stated present by affidavit facts essential to justify the party's opposition, the court may refuse the application for judgment or may order a continuance to permit affidavits to be obtained or depositions to be taken or discovery to be had or make such other order as is just.

Evidence > Admissibility > Expert Witnesses > Daubert Standard

Evidence > Admissibility > Scientific Evidence > Standards for Admissibility

Evidence > ... > Testimony > Expert Witnesses > General Overview

HN2[] Expert Witnesses, Daubert Standard

The court must make a preliminary assessment whether the principles upon which a scientific expert proposes to base his or her testimony are scientifically valid. These principles, not the expert's conclusions, must be the focus of the court's inquiry. The inquiry envisioned by Fed. R. Evid. 702 is a flexible one. Its overarching subject is the scientific validity of the principles that underlie the proposed submission. The focus must be solely on principles and methodology, not on the conclusions that they generate. The following factors often bear on the inquiry: 1) whether the principle has been tested; 2) whether the principle has been subject to peer review; 3) whether the known or potential rate of error associated with the principle is excessive; and 4) whether the principle has achieved widespread acceptance in the scientific community.

Evidence > Admissibility > Scientific Evidence > General Overview

Evidence > ... > Testimony > Expert Witnesses > General Overview

Evidence > Admissibility > Expert Witnesses

Evidence > Admissibility > Expert Witnesses > Helpfulness

Evidence > ... > Testimony > Expert Witnesses > Qualifications

HN3 Admissibility, Scientific Evidence

Fed. R. Evid. 702 governs the admissibility of expert evidence and provides that if scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge will assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue, a witness qualified as an expert by knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education, may testify thereto in the form of an opinion or otherwise.

Evidence > Admissibility > Expert Witnesses > Daubert Standard

Evidence > Admissibility > Scientific Evidence > Standards for Admissibility

Evidence > ... > Testimony > Expert Witnesses > General Overview

HN4 Expert Witnesses, Daubert Standard

In the context of a consumer survey, Fed. R. Evid. 702 requires the court to conduct a preliminary assessment of the reliability of the principles upon which the expert relied to select the universe, to ensure that the consumers surveyed accurately represent the universe, to construct the survey questions, and to analyze the data gathered through the survey.

Evidence > ... > Testimony > Expert Witnesses > General Overview

HN5 Testimony, Expert Witnesses

Fed. R. Evid. 703 governs the facts or data upon which an expert may rely when testifying. The rule provides that the facts or data in the particular case upon which an expert bases an opinion or inference may be those perceived by or made known to the expert at the hearing. If of a type reasonably relied upon by experts in the particular field in forming opinions or inferences upon the subject, the facts or data need not be admissible in evidence.

Evidence > ... > Testimony > Expert Witnesses > General Overview

HN6 Testimony, Expert Witnesses

In the context of a consumer survey, the party seeking admission of an expert opinion based upon the survey must demonstrate that: 1) the data in the survey is of the type generally relied upon by experts in the field; and 2) their reliance on such data is reasonable.

Evidence > ... > Testimony > Expert Witnesses > General Overview

HN7 Testimony, Expert Witnesses

In order to assess the reasonableness of reliance on the survey data, the court must assess the manner in which the expert gathered and analyzed the data. In making this assessment, the court must examine: 1) whether the universe of the survey was properly defined; 2) whether the individuals questioned in the survey constitute a representative sample of the universe; 3) whether the survey questions were framed in a clear precise and non-leading manner; 4) whether sound interview procedures were followed by competent interviewers who had no knowledge of the litigation or the purpose for which the survey was conducted; 5) whether the data gathered was accurately reported; 6) whether the data was analyzed in accordance with accepted statistical principles; and 7) whether the objectivity of the entire process was assured.

Evidence > ... > Testimony > Expert Witnesses > General Overview

HN8 Testimony, Expert Witnesses

In order to sustain a claim for monopolization, plaintiffs must prove that the company: 1) willfully acquired or maintained anticompetitive conduct prong, 2) monopoly power in the relevant market and, 3) utilized that power to cause an injury cognizable under the antitrust laws.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > General Overview

HN9 Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

In order to prove that a company possesses monopoly power in the market for inside wire maintenance and repair, plaintiffs must prove that the company has the power to unilaterally raise price and restrict output without substantial loss of market share. Plaintiffs must also prove that the company used this power to cause an injury cognizable under the antitrust laws. Proof of antitrust injury requires proof of injury to competition. A mere showing of injury or loss by a plaintiff without a showing of injury to competition in the market, is not sufficient to state a cause of action for restraint of trade.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > Relevant Market

HN10 Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

The determination whether an alleged monopolist possesses monopoly power in a particular market involves two steps: 1) definition of the relevant market; and 2) assessment of the alleged monopolist's power in that market.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

HN11[] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

The principal measure of actual monopoly power is market share. The existence of monopoly power ordinarily may be inferred from the predominant share of the market. Market share of as low as approximately 66 percent has been held to constitute monopoly power. Market share in excess of 70 percent has regularly been held to constitute such power.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

HN12[] Regulated Practices, Market Definition

A high market share, though it may ordinarily raise an inference of monopoly power, will not do so in a market with low entry barriers or other evidence of a defendant's inability to control prices or exclude competitors. Where entry barriers are low, market share does not accurately reflect the party's market power.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Movant Persuasion & Proof

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > Allocation

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > Evidentiary Considerations

Civil Procedure > Trials > Judgment as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Trials > Judgment as Matter of Law > Directed Verdicts

HN13[] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

Because evidence revealing the absence of market entry barriers rebuts a prima facie case of monopoly power, the absence of such barriers constitutes a defense. Accordingly, the defendant has the burden of persuasion at trial to demonstrate the absence of such barriers. This burden fixes the scope of its burden of production as the party moving for summary judgment. In order to satisfy this burden, the defendant cannot simply point out deficiencies in the plaintiffs proof. Rather, the defendant must affirmatively produce evidence of its own demonstrating the absence of market entry barriers. If the moving party will bear the burden of persuasion at trial, that party must support its motion with credible evidence--using any of the materials specified in Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(c\)--that would entitle it to a directed verdict if not controverted at trial.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > Evidentiary Considerations

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Opposing Materials > General Overview

HN14 [blue icon] Summary Judgment, Evidentiary Considerations

Where the party opposing summary judgment bears the burden of persuasion at trial on a particular issue, the party moving for summary judgment need only demonstrate that the opposing party's evidence is insufficient to enable the opposing party to prevail on the issue.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

HN15 [blue icon] Summary Judgment, Burdens of Proof

The evidence of the non-movant is to be believed, and all justifiable inferences are to be drawn in his favor.

Evidence > ... > Testimony > Lay Witnesses > General Overview

Evidence > Types of Evidence > Testimony > General Overview

HN16 [blue icon] Testimony, Lay Witnesses

Fed. R. Evid. 701 provides that if the witness is not testifying as an expert, the witness' testimony in the form of opinions or inferences is limited to those opinions or inferences which are (a) rationally based on the perception of the witness and (b) helpful to a clear understanding of the witness' testimony or the determination of a fact in issue.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Elements

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Claims

Business & Corporate Law > ... > Corporate Existence, Powers & Purpose > Powers > General Overview

HN17 [blue icon] Attempts to Monopolize, Elements

In order to sustain a claim for attempted monopolization under § 2 of the Sherman Act, plaintiffs must prove that: 1) the company possessed the specific intent to achieve monopoly power by predatory or exclusionary conduct; 2) the company in fact committed that conduct; and 3) there exists a dangerous probability that the company might have succeeded in its attempt to achieve monopoly power. Plaintiffs must also demonstrate that they have standing to bring an attempted monopolization claim. In order to demonstrate standing, plaintiffs must demonstrate that the company caused an injury cognizable under the antitrust laws.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Monopolies & Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

HN18 [L] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

Monopoly leveraging is the use of monopoly power in one market to acquire a monopoly in another market. Where a single firm is involved, monopoly leveraging does not constitute a claim distinct from monopolization or attempted monopolization. Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, makes the conduct of a single firm unlawful only when it actually monopolizes or dangerously threatens to do so. The anticompetitive dangers that implicate the Sherman Act are not present when a monopolist has a lawful monopoly in one market and uses it to gain a competitive advantage in the second market. By definition, the monopolist had failed to gain, or attempt to gain, a monopoly, in the second market. Thus, such activity fails to meet the second element necessary to establish a violation of §2.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN19 [L] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) authorizes the court to dismiss a claim on the basis of a dispositive issue of law.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > General Overview

HN20 [L] Racketeering, Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act

See Fla. Stat. Ann. § 772.103.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > General Overview

Securities Law > RICO Actions > General Overview

HN21 [L] Racketeering, Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act

In the absence of authoritative guidance concerning the meaning of the Florida statute, Florida courts rely on interpretations of the federal statute.

Civil Procedure > Pleading & Practice > Pleadings > Rule Application & Interpretation

HN22 [blue document icon] Pleadings, Rule Application & Interpretation

Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\), plaintiffs need only aver intent generally.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > General Overview

HN23 [blue document icon] Racketeering, Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act

See Fla. Stat. Ann. § 772.102\(4\).

Business & Corporate Law > ... > Shareholder Duties & Liabilities > Piercing the Corporate Veil > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > Elements

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > General Overview

HN24 [blue document icon] Shareholder Duties & Liabilities, Piercing the Corporate Veil

18 U.S.C.S. § 1962\(c\) makes it unlawful for any person employed by or associated with an enterprise to conduct that enterprise through a pattern of racketeering activity. The statutory language clearly envisions a relationship between a "person" and an "enterprise" as an element of the offense. Only a person employed by or associated with an enterprise, not the enterprise itself, may violate § 1962\(c\). Because a corporation cannot logically be "employed by or associated with itself, imposing liability on the corporate enterprise would require the courts to disregard the limitations inherent in the statutory language.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > Elements

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > General Overview

HN25 [blue document icon] Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act, Elements

A subsidiary of the defendant corporation, or an association in fact composed of entities related to the defendant corporation, cannot constitute the enterprise for purposes of 18 U.S.C.S. § 1962\(c\) absent allegations indicating that the defendant corporation played some role in the alleged racketeering independent of those of the entities acting on its behalf.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > General Overview

Securities Law > RICO Actions > General Overview

HN26 [blue document icon] Racketeering, Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act

Fla. Stat. Ann. § 772.104 creates a civil right of action for any person who proves by clear and convincing evidence that he has been injured by reason of any violation of the provisions of Fla. Stat. Ann. § 772.103.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > General Overview

HN27 Consumer Protection, Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices

See Fla. Stat. Ann. § 817.061\(1\).

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contract Formation > Acceptance > General Overview

Contracts Law > ... > Affirmative Defenses > Fraud & Misrepresentation > Material Misrepresentations

Contracts Law > ... > Affirmative Defenses > Fraud & Misrepresentation > General Overview

HN28 Contract Formation, Acceptance

If a party's manifestation of assent is induced by either a fraudulent or a material misrepresentation by the other party upon which the recipient is justified in relying, the contract is voidable by the recipient. If a party's manifestation of assent is induced by either a fraudulent or a material misrepresentation by one who is not a party to the transaction upon which the recipient is justified in relying, the contract is voidable by the recipient, unless the other party to the transaction in good faith and without reason to know of the misrepresentation either gives value or relies materially on the transaction.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contract Formation > Consideration > Detrimental Reliance

Contracts Law > ... > Affirmative Defenses > Fraud & Misrepresentation > General Overview

HN29 Consideration, Detrimental Reliance

The materiality of misrepresentation is determined from the viewpoint of the maker, while the justification of reliance is determined from the viewpoint of the recipient. The requirement of materiality may be met in either of two ways. First, a misrepresentation is material if it would be likely to induce a reasonable to manifest his assent. Second, it is material if the maker knows that for some special reason it is likely to induce the particular recipient to manifest his assent.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Acceptance > Apparent Acceptance > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contract Formation > Acceptance > General Overview

HN30 Acceptance, Apparent Acceptance

Under certain circumstances, silence or inaction can constitute acceptance of a contractual offer. Inaction does not always constitute acceptance. In particular, where the offeree does not intend his inaction to operate as an acceptance, it does not.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Types of Contracts > Covenants

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Good Faith & Fair Dealing

Energy & Utilities Law > Oil, Gas & Mineral Interests > Implied Covenants > General Overview

HN31 [] Types of Contracts, Covenants

The covenant of good faith and fair dealing imposes upon each party the duty to do nothing destructive of the other party's right to enjoy the fruits of the contract and to do everything that the contract presupposes they will do to accomplish its purpose.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Types of Contracts > Covenants

Contracts Law > Contract Interpretation > Good Faith & Fair Dealing

HN32 [] Types of Contracts, Covenants

Florida law recognizes an independent cause of action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contract Formation > Consideration > Detrimental Reliance

Civil Procedure > ... > Class Actions > Prerequisites for Class Action > General Overview

Contracts Law > ... > Damages > Measurement of Damages > Reliance Damages

Civil Procedure > Special Proceedings > Class Actions > Judicial Discretion

Civil Procedure > Trials > Separate Trials

HN33 [] Consideration, Detrimental Reliance

The presence of individual questions concerning reliance and damages does not preclude the treatment of issues related to liability on a class basis. The court can simply sever trial of the issues of liability from trial of the issues of reliance and damages.

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > General Overview

HN34 [] Racketeering, Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act

In order to prove that the company engaged in a pattern of criminal activity, plaintiffs must prove that the company engaged in at least two incidents of criminal activity that had the same or similar intents, results, accomplices, victims or methods of commission. Fla. Stat. Ann. § 772.102(4). The latest incident must fall within no more than five years of at least one other incident. These incidents form the so-called "predicate acts."

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > False Advertising > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Fraud > False Pretenses > General Overview

HN35 [] Consumer Protection, False Advertising

Fla. Stat. Ann. §§ 817.06, 817.40, 817.41 prohibit misleading advertising and require a plaintiff to satisfy the elements of common law criminal fraud. These elements include: 1) a false statement of material fact; 2) known by the defendant to be false at the time it was made; and 3) made for the purpose of inducing the plaintiff to act in reliance thereon. The elements of fraud thus all focus on the conduct and state of mind of the defendant.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > False Advertising > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Class Actions > Prerequisites for Class Action > Numerosity

Civil Procedure > ... > Class Actions > Prerequisites for Class Action > General Overview

HN36 [] Consumer Protection, False Advertising

A fraud perpetrated on numerous persons by the use of similar misrepresentations may be an appealing situation for a class action, and it may remain so despite the need, if liability is found, for a separate determination of damages suffered by individuals within the class. On the other hand, although having a common core, a fraud case may be unsuited for treatment for a class action if there was material variation in the representations made or in the kinds or degrees of reliance by the persons to whom they were addressed. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23, advisory committee's note.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > False Advertising > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Class Actions > Prerequisites for Class Action > General Overview

Contracts Law > ... > Affirmative Defenses > Fraud & Misrepresentation > General Overview

HN37 [] Consumer Protection, False Advertising

Written misrepresentations disseminated to all of the members of the class have often been held to be sufficiently similar. In contrast, oral misrepresentations have generally been held to be insufficiently similar to warrant class treatment. The same has generally been true of cases involving a mix of oral and written misrepresentations. Id. In mixed cases, however, class treatment is appropriate where the plaintiff can demonstrate that no material variation existed among the oral statements made to class members and between the oral and written statements.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Counterclaims > Compulsory Counterclaims

Civil Procedure > ... > Responses > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Counterclaims > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Counterclaims > Permissive Counterclaims

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Crossclaims > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Pleading & Practice > Pleadings > Rule Application & Interpretation

HN38 [blue icon] Counterclaims, Compulsory Counterclaims

Until the motion to dismiss is ruled upon it is not known whether the plaintiff has a claim. Without a valid claim, there can be no counterclaim, compulsory or permissive. A motion to dismiss pursuant to Fed R. Civ. P. 12\(b\) is not a pleading as defined in Fed. R. Civ. P. 7. There is no reason for a party to file a pleading while a motion to dismiss is pending.

Civil Procedure > Parties > Capacity of Parties > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Counterclaims > General Overview

HN39 [blue icon] Parties, Capacity of Parties

Absent class members are parties within the meaning of Fed. R. Civ. P. 13.

Judges: [*1] NESBITT

Opinion by: LENORE C. NESBITT

Opinion

ORDER

This cause comes before the Court upon all pending motions with the exception of Defendant Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company's ("Southern Bell") Motion For Partial Reconsideration Of Order Certifying Class As To Certain Procedural Issues.

BACKGROUND

Plaintiffs, customers of Southern Bell, initiated this action seeking monetary damages and injunctive relief for violations of the antitrust laws, Florida Civil Remedies for Criminal Practice Act ("Florida RICO"), restitution, breach of duty of good faith and fair dealing, and other statutory violations under Florida law.¹ The only federal claims presented are for monopolization and attempted monopolization in violation of § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2.

[*2] The suit arises out of the terms upon which Southern Bell furnished inside wire maintenance service ("IWMS") to its residential and simple business customers in the State of Florida since 1983. The facts underlying the suit are recited in the Court's Order of February 4, 1991. A brief summary of the recent procedural history follows.

Between January and June of 1993, the parties filed cross motions for summary judgment as to various claims in Plaintiffs' First Amended Complaint. During the same period, Southern Bell filed motions to strike the three expert affidavits Plaintiffs offered in opposition to Southern Bell's motion for summary judgment on Plaintiffs' antitrust claims. In an Order dated November 19, 1993, the Court rejected several of the grounds upon which Southern Bell sought to have the affidavits stricken, but deferred final ruling pending an evidentiary hearing pursuant to Rule 56\(f\).²

¹ Plaintiffs seek treble damages for violations of § 2 of the Sherman Act and Florida Antitrust Act of 1980, Fla. Stat. § 542.19 (1987), treble damages for violations of the Florida RICO laws, and treble damages for violations of Fla. Stat. § 817.061.

[*3] In an Order dated December 23, 1993, the Court certified an injunctive class under Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) and a damages class under Rule 23\(b\)\(3\). Each class includes all residential and simple business consumers in the State of Florida who currently subscribe to Southern Bell's IWMS and who paid for Southern Bell's IWMS between December 31, 1986 and December 23, 1993.

The Court has conducted two hearings on Southern Bell's Motion For Summary Judgment On Plaintiffs' Antitrust Claims-held on January 7, 1994 and January 14, 1994, respectively.

SOUTHERN BELL'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

The procedures applicable to resolution of a summary judgment motion are well-established. A party seeking summary judgment must demonstrate that "there is no genuine issue of material fact and that the moving party is entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law." Fed.R.Civ.P. 56\(c\). The movant bears the initial responsibility of informing the court of the basis for its motion and of identifying those materials which demonstrate the absence of a genuine issue of material fact. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265, 106 S. Ct. 2548 \(1986\).

[*4] In response to a properly supported motion for summary judgment, the non-moving party may not rest on the allegations or denials of his or her pleadings. Rather, the non-moving party must set forth specific facts which show a genuine issue of material fact. Fed.R.Civ.P. 56\(e\). In order to create such an issue, the non-moving party must produce evidence upon which a reasonable jury could find in its favor with respect to each element essential to his or her case upon which it bears the burden of proof at trial. Id. If the non-moving party fails to make a sufficient showing on any such element, then the Court must enter summary judgment for the moving party. Id. The Court is not to resolve factual issues, but to determine whether factual issues exist, and must resolve all ambiguities and draw all justifiable inferences in favor of the non-moving party. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 255, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 106 S. Ct. 2505 \(1986\).

Southern Bell's motion for summary judgment is directed at Plaintiffs' federal and state antitrust claims. The First Amended Complaint asserts the following four causes of action [*5] pursuant to the antitrust laws: 1) monopolization and leveraging of monopoly power in violation of § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2 (Count I); 2) attempt to monopolize in violation of § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2 (Count II); 3) monopolization and leveraging of monopoly power in violation of the Florida Antitrust Act of 1980, Fla. Stat. Ann. § 542.19 (Count III); and 4) attempt to monopolize in violation of the Florida Antitrust Act of 1980, Fla. Stat. Ann. § 542.19 (Count IV).

Both the Florida Legislature and the Florida courts have made clear that the Florida Antitrust Act was modelled after the Sherman Act and is to be interpreted in accordance with the precedents construing the Sherman Act. See Fla. Stat. Ann. § 542.32 (1987) ("It is the intent of the Legislature that, in construing this chapter, due consideration and great weight be given to the interpretations of the federal courts relating to the comparable antitrust statutes. . ."); see also, Day v. Le-Jo Enterprises, Inc., 521 So. 2d 175 \(Fla. 3rd Dist. Ct. App. 1988\).

Southern Bell asserts specific objections [*6] to Plaintiffs' monopolization, attempted monopolization, and monopoly leveraging claims. In addition, Southern Bell contends that Plaintiffs lack standing to bring any of these claims because they have failed to demonstrate antitrust injury.

² HN1 [1] Rule 56\(f\) provides that:

Should it appear from the affidavits of a party opposing the motion that the party cannot for reasons stated present by affidavit facts essential to justify the party's opposition, the court may refuse the application for judgment or may order a continuance to permit affidavits to be obtained or depositions to be taken or discovery to be had or make such other order as is just.

The crux of Plaintiffs' antitrust theory is that Southern Bell's marketing and sales techniques--particularly those associated with the company's 1987, 1988, and 1989 solicitations--either coerced customers into purchasing IWMS or misled them into believing that they needed IWMS and that Southern Bell was the only company that could provide the service effectively. As a result, Southern Bell was able to capture 85% of the market for inside wire repair--a much larger share than it would have captured absent coercion or deception.

Consumer misunderstanding of IWMS, coupled with Southern Bell's domination of the market, creates two barriers to entry into the market. Consumer misunderstanding prevents consumers from canceling their subscriptions to IWMS and thus raises a barrier to consumer entry into the market. It also deters potential third party repair vendors from entering the market by creating the need for "corrective advertising"--advertising [*7] designed to overcome the effect of Southern Bell's misleading marketing, to inform customers that other companies can provide inside wire repair services, and to persuade those customers to cancel their subscriptions to IWMS. The need for corrective advertising deters entry for three reasons. First, corrective advertising is expensive. Second, a company that engages in corrective advertising cannot ensure that it will capture all of the business diverted away from Southern Bell by the advertising. Rather, other competitors will capture much of that business. Finally, those competitors offering inside wire repair on a case by case basis, rather than through a service plan, cannot recoup the cost of corrective advertising within an acceptable period of time due to the low rate at which inside wires fail. These market entry barriers have enabled Southern Bell to acquire monopoly power in the market for inside wire repair and to exploit that power by charging monopolistic prices for IWMS.

In order to sustain this theory, Plaintiffs must prove that: 1) the marketing and sales techniques employed by Southern Bell since December 31, 1986 were misleading or coercive; 2) these techniques [*8] caused a substantial number of customers to believe that they need IWMS and that Southern Bell is the only company capable of providing the service; 3) the consumer misunderstanding created by these techniques require current and potential competitors in the IWMS market to engage in corrective advertising; 4) the need for corrective advertising deters competitors from entering the IWMS market and thus acts as a barrier to entry into that market; and 5) Southern Bell has exploited this barrier by charging prices for IWMS above those that it could charge in a fully competitive market. As noted, Plaintiffs need not produce conclusive proof of each of these links at this stage; they need only produce evidence upon which a reasonable jury, viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to them, could find in their favor.

In order to support this theory, Plaintiffs rely extensively on the affidavits of three expert witnesses--Professors Robert Cialdini, Ivan Ross, and Steven Salop. Southern Bell's motion to strike these affidavits raises several issues that must be resolved before the substantive matters presented by Southern Bell's summary judgment motion can be addressed.

Cialdini [*9] Affidavit

Plaintiffs offer Professor Robert Cialdini as an expert in the psychology of influence and persuasion. Southern Bell moves to strike Professor Cialdini's affidavit on the ground that he: 1) relies on the opinions of other experts; 2) relies for his conclusions on Southern Bell's pre-1987 conduct, for which the Court has immunized Southern Bell of liability; 3) ignores record evidence, draws conclusions unsupported by the record, and takes inconsistent positions; and 4) utilizes a scientific methodology which fails to satisfy the standards specified in Rule 702 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure for the presentation of expert evidence. In its Order of November 19, 1993, the Court rejected Southern Bell's first three contentions and deferred ruling on the fourth pending an evidentiary hearing.

As noted in the Order of November 19, 1993, the Supreme Court's interpretation of Rule 702 of the Federal Rules of Evidence obligates the Court to HN2 make a preliminary assessment whether the principles upon which a scientific expert proposes to base his or her testimony are scientifically valid.³ Daubert v. Merrell Dow

³ HN3 Rule 702 governs the admissibility of expert evidence and provides that:

Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 125 L. Ed. 2d 469, 113 S. Ct. 2786, 2796-97 (1993). [*10] Daubert emphasized that these principles, not the expert's conclusions, must be the focus of the Court's inquiry. 113 S. Ct. at 2797 ("The inquiry envisioned by Rule 702 is, we emphasize, a flexible one. Its overarching subject is the scientific validity. . . . of the principles that underlie the proposed submission. The focus, of course, must be solely on principles and methodology, not on the conclusions that they generate.") (emphasis added). While the Court declined to set out an exhaustive list of factors governing the validity of a scientific principle, the Court did emphasize that the following factors often bear on the inquiry: 1) whether the principle has been tested; 2) whether the principle has been subject to peer review; 3) whether the known or potential rate of error associated with the principle is excessive; and 4) whether the principle has achieved widespread acceptance in the scientific community.

[*11] In paragraphs 8, 9, 9(a), 9(b), and 10 of his affidavit, Professor Cialdini articulates the principles upon which he relied to prepare the affidavit. At the hearing, Professor Cialdini testified that each of the principles set out in these paragraphs has been tested, has been endorsed in peer-reviewed literature in the field of social psychology, and has achieved widespread acceptance in that literature. Plaintiffs submitted copies of much of this literature in support of Professor Cialdini's testimony.

Southern Bell did not inquire about the validity of these principles at the hearing, but questioned him repeatedly on his failure to perform an independent scientific experiment designed to test whether Southern Bell's marketing and sales techniques are misleading. That failure may bear on the reliability of the conclusions expressed in Professor Cialdini's affidavit. It does not bear on the validity of the principles he relied on to reach those conclusions and is thus not relevant to the Court's inquiry under Rule 702. The Court finds that the principles upon which Professor Cialdini relied meet the validity standard imposed by Rule 702 and rejects Southern Bell's motion to strike [*12] his affidavit under the rule.

Ross Affidavit

Plaintiffs offer Ivan Ross as an expert in the fields of consumer psychology and survey design. Southern Bell moves to strike Professor Ross's affidavit on the ground that he: 1) ignores record evidence that contradicts his conclusions and fails to support those conclusions with citations to record evidence; 2) relies on Southern Bell's pre-1987 conduct, for which the Court has immunized Southern Bell of antitrust liability; and 3) relies on a consumer survey which fails to satisfy the requirements of either Rule 702 or Rule 703 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The Court rejected Southern Bell's first two contentions in its Order of November 19, 1993 and entertained testimony concerning the third at the hearing held on December 10, 1993.

HN4 [↑] In the context of a consumer survey, Rule 702 requires the Court to conduct a preliminary assessment of the reliability of the principles upon which the expert relied to select the universe, to ensure that the consumers surveyed accurately represent the universe, to construct the survey questions, and to analyze the data gathered through the survey. See Daubert, 113 S. Ct. at 2797. [*13] At the hearing, Southern Bell directed its inquiry on cross-examination to issues covered by Rule 703, not Rule 702. Upon review of Professor Ross's testimony, the Court is satisfied that his methodology meets the standards for scientific validity imposed by Rule 702.

HN5 [↑] Rule 703 governs the facts or data upon which an expert may rely when testifying.⁴ The rule provides that: The facts or data in the particular case upon which an expert bases an opinion or inference may be those perceived by or made known to the expert at the hearing. If of a type reasonably relied upon by experts in the

If scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge will assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue, a witness qualified as an expert by knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education, may testify thereto in the form of an opinion or otherwise.

Fed.R.Civ.Pro. 702.

⁴ For a discussion of the relationship between Rule 702 and Rule 703, see Edward J. Imwinkelreid, The "Bases" of Expert Testimony: The Syllogistic Structure of Scientific Testimony, 67 N.C.L. Rev. 1 (1988).

particular field in forming opinions or inferences upon the subject, the facts or data need not be admissible in evidence.

Fed.R.Evi. 703. HN6 In the context of a consumer survey, the party seeking admission of an expert opinion based upon the survey must demonstrate that: 1) the data in the survey is of the type generally relied upon by experts in the field; and 2) their reliance on such data is reasonable. Id. HN7 In order to assess the reasonableness of reliance on the survey data, the Court must assess the manner in which the expert gathered and analyzed the data. In making this assessment, [*14] the Court must examine: 1) whether the universe of the survey was properly defined; 2) whether the individuals questioned in the survey constitute a representative sample of the universe; 3) whether the survey questions were framed in a clear precise and non-leading manner; 4) whether sound interview procedures were followed by competent interviewers who had no knowledge of the litigation or the purpose for which the survey was conducted; 5) whether the data gathered was accurately reported; 6) whether the data was analyzed in accordance with accepted statistical principles; and 7) whether the objectivity of the entire process was assured. See Toys "R" Us, Inc. v. Canarsie Kiddie Shop, Inc., 559 F. Supp. 1189, 1205 (E.D.N.Y. 1983).

At the December 10, [*15] 1993 hearing, Professor Ross testified extensively concerning the steps that he took to comply with each of these requirements. Professor Ross testified that he designed his survey to measure the awareness, beliefs, opinions, and knowledge concerning IWMS among residential telephone consumers in the State of Florida who subscribe to the service. According to Professor Ross, the universe of the survey consists of all households to which Southern Bell telephone lines run. Each respondent was screened to ensure that he or she was a residential consumer, that his or her household subscribed to IWMS, and that he or she handled the purchase of telephone services for the household.

Professor Ross also testified that he took steps to ensure the potential respondents were selected randomly and that a sufficient number of respondents were contacted to enable extrapolation to the universe to within a five percent rate of error in either direction. He further testified that he designed the format of the questionnaire to ensure its substantial accuracy and objectivity. He went to great lengths to eliminate bias from the survey questions and to ensure that the questions were not leading.⁵ He [*16] also took steps to ensure that sound interview procedures were followed.

In order to minimize the possibility of fraud in the interviewing process, Professor Ross engaged a separate entity, Wats Room, to call each of the respondents for whom PRCC submitted completed questionnaires. Wats Room asked each of the respondents about whether he or she had been interviewed and about the nature of the interview. All of the respondents stated that they had been interviewed. Several, however, failed to properly identify the nature of the interview. Professor Ross disregarded for purposes of his analysis the questionnaires of these respondents.

Upon receipt [*17] of the completed questionnaires, Professor Ross used a coding frame he developed to translate the response data into a coded language. He then engaged Matrix--a data processing company--to perform a statistical analysis of the coded data. Matrix employed a widely-used computer package called Uncle to perform this analysis. Professor Ross presented the results of this analysis in the material he submitted at the hearing.

Southern Bell's cross-examination of Professor Ross reveal several concerns about his administration of the survey and conduct thereafter, including that he failed: 1) to personally supervise the interviews or train the interviewers; 2) to produce his coding frame to Southern Bell upon its request; 3) to determine whether the interviewers were paid on a salary basis or on a quota basis (under which they were compensated based on the number of interviews successfully completed); and 4) to design the survey screener to ensure that any of the respondents who participated actually received at least some of the marketing or sales materials at issue in this case.

⁵ Professor Ross also took steps to ensure the accuracy of the Spanish translation. He had Marcy Mendoza of Princeton Research and Consulting Center ("PRCC"), a native speaker of Spanish, prepare a Spanish translation of the questionnaire. In order to ensure the accuracy of Ms. Mendoza's translation, he then had another native speaker prepare a second translation independently.

There is no factual basis to warrant exclusion of the survey based on any of Southern Bell's first three concerns. [*18] Moreover, the fact that the survey screener included no questions designed to ensure that the respondents received the marketing or sales materials at issue bears on the relevance of testimony based on the survey, and the weight to be accorded to that testimony, not on the reliability of the survey itself. The survey was designed to probe the understanding of IWMS among current residential telephone service purchasers and the screener included questions designed to ensure that the respondents handled the purchase of telephone services. The survey revealed widespread misunderstanding among those purchasers. The existence of this misunderstanding forms an important link in Plaintiffs' antitrust theory and the survey thus bears on the validity of that theory.

Salop Affidavit

Plaintiffs offer Professor Steven Salop as an expert in competition and antitrust economics, information economics, and industrial organization economics. Southern Bell moves to strike Professor Salop's affidavit on the ground that he: 1) relies for his conclusions on the opinions of Plaintiffs' other experts; 2) ignores record evidence contradicting its conclusions and fails to cite record for many of those conclusions; [*19] and 3) asserts inadmissible legal conclusions and opinions. The Court rejected the first two of these contentions in its Order of November 19, 1993. In the same Order, the Court struck certain paragraphs of Professor Salop's affidavit on the ground that he expressed legal, not economic, conclusions in those paragraphs. The Court also deferred ruling on the admissibility of those portions of Professor Salop's affidavit concerning classical, informational, and exclusionary monopoly power pending a hearing on whether the theories are legal or economic in nature, and, if economic, whether they satisfy the validity standards imposed by Rule 702.

At the hearing, Professor Salop cited extensive literature indicating that the theories are well-established in the field of economics. The Court concludes that the theories are economic in nature and that they satisfy the requirements of Rule 702.

Based on the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED and ADJUDGED that Southern Bell's motions to strike the affidavits of Professors Cialdini, Ross, and Salop are DENIED.

1) Monopolization

The affidavits of these experts form much of the foundation for each element of Plaintiffs' monopolization claim. HN8 In [*20] order to sustain a claim for monopolization, Plaintiffs must prove that Southern Bell: 1) willfully acquired or maintained ("anticompetitive conduct prong"); 2) monopoly power in the relevant market ("monopoly power prong"); and 3) utilized that power to cause an injury cognizable under the antitrust laws ("antitrust injury prong"). See Ad-Vantage Telephone Directory Consultants, Inc. v. GTE Directories Corp., 849 F.2d 1336, 1341 \(11th Cir. 1987\); Nat'l Independent Theatre Exhibitors, Inc. v. Buena Vista Distribution, 748 F.2d 602, 607 \(11th Cir. 1985\).

(i) Anticompetitive Conduct

According to Plaintiffs, Southern Bell used three basic techniques to improperly expand and solidify customer enrollment in its IWMS. First, Southern Bell sent misleading billing inserts to its customers in 1987, 1988, and 1989 seeking "re-enrollment" in IWMS. Second, sales supervisors at Southern Bell applied intense pressure upon the company's sales representatives to generate sales of IWMS. As a result, many sales representatives simply enrolled customers in IWMS without their consent. Finally, Southern Bell's sales representatives, with the [*21] approval and encouragement of their supervisors, actively impeded customer attempts to cancel their subscriptions to the service.

The evidence supporting Plaintiffs' contention that the 1987, 1988, and 1989 solicitations were misleading consists primarily of the solicitations themselves and a pre-1987 study commissioned by Southern Bell and prepared by

Lennox Research, Inc.⁶ [*22] The Lennox Study examined the responses of participants in nine focus groups to a variety of notification/solicitation materials concerning IWMS. The study warned that a diagram included in some of the materials frequently mislead the study participants to believe that IWMS covers the phone, as well as the phone jack and inside wiring.⁷ The study also identified a general lack of consumer understanding concerning the frequency with which inside wires fail and emphasized that this information was of great concern to consumers.⁸ Finally, the study noted that a focus group consisting of elderly residential customers complained "loudly and often" about "small print".

Southern Bell's 1987 solicitation form nonetheless contains many of these defects. The form, for example, includes the same diagram analyzed in the study. The form also emphasizes the expense associated with inside wire repair work, but does not include any information concerning the frequency of inside wire failure. Moreover, the exemptions and exclusions section appears in minuscule print at the bottom of the form. Finally, the form promises no increase in the rate of charge for IWMS, despite the fact that the company's internal memoranda indicate that the company was contemplating a price increase at the time the solicitation was issued.

Southern Bell issued the 1988 and 1989 solicitations immediately prior to price increases that went into effect in those years. The solicitations contain many of the same defects found in the 1987 solicitation form. On May 1, [*23] 1989, for example, Southern Bell sent out a solicitation to its IWMS subscribers with the following language:

IMPORTANT NOTICE

AS YOU KNOW, YOU CURRENTLY SUBSCRIBE TO EITHER SOUTHERN BELL'S INSIDE WIRE MAINTENANCE PLAN OR ITS COMBINED PLAN FOR INSIDE WIRE MAINTENANCE AND TROUBLE ISOLATION PROTECTION. UNDER THESE PLANS, SOUTHERN BELL MAINTAINS THE TELEPHONE WIRE INSIDE YOUR HOME OR OFFICE. EFFECTIVE WITH BILLS DATED ON OR AFTER JUNE 1, 1989, THE RATE FOR INSIDE WIRE MAINTENANCE SERVICE, UNDER EITHER OF THESE PLANS, WILL INCREASE 50 CENTS PER MONTH. WITHOUT THIS SERVICE, SOUTHERN BELL'S MINIMUM CHARGE TO REPAIR YOUR INSIDE WIRING WOULD BE NO LESS THAN $ 87.00 FOR THE FIRST FULL HOUR. THESE PLANS CAN REPRESENT A SAVINGS IN THE EVENT OF A PROBLEM WITH THE TELEPHONE WIRING INSIDE YOUR PREMISES. THANK YOU FOR CONTINUING TO SUBSCRIBE TO THIS VALUABLE SERVICE.⁹

Like the 1987 solicitation form, this notice emphasizes the cost associated with inside wire repair, but fails to provide any information concerning the frequency of inside wire breakdown. Moreover, the notice juxtaposes the 50 cent per month increase with the $ 87.00 per hour rate for spot repairs. This juxtaposition makes [*24] IWMS appear to be quite bargain. Without information concerning the rate at which inside wires fail, however, the customer is in no position to assess the real value of the service.¹⁰

The notice fails to inform customers that they can discontinue subscription to the service and thanks them for continuing to subscribe. The notice thus implies that customers have no choice but to subscribe. The notice also appears on page four of the telephone bill without any language, graphic, or other design to distinguish [*25] it from

⁶ See Exhibit 27 in Volume 3 of Exhibits to Aff. of Professor Steven C. Salop; see also, Exhibit 8 in Volume 1 of Exhibits to Plaintiffs' Opposition To Southern Bell's Motion For Summary Judgment On Plaintiffs' Antitrust Claims ("the Lennox Study").

⁷ See the Lennox Study at 18.

⁸ Id. at 3 ("One the definition of simple inside wire is understood, many customers assert that it never breaks! They question the frequency of wire failure and wonder about their odds").

⁹ See Exhibit 28 in Volume 3 of Affidavit of Steven Salop.

¹⁰ If, for instance, there is only a 10% chance that a customer's inside wires will fail in a given year, and the failure will likely require no more than one hour to repair, then the probable expense of failure absent IWMS is .10 x $ 87.00; or $ 8.70. At current rates, however, the customer will pay as much as $ 2.50 per month, or $ 30.00 per year, for IWMS. Under this hypothetical, purchase of the service would thus not make economic sense.

the remainder of the bill--except the title "important notice"--despite the fact that the Lennox Study indicated the need to use color, special type, and other visual devices to draw attention to notices concerning IWMS.¹¹ Finally, Southern Bell sent all of the 1988 and 1989 solicitations in English, despite the large segment of the Dade County population fluent only in Spanish.

Professors Cialdini and Ross independently assessed the 1987, 1988, and 1989 solicitation materials and concluded that those materials are misleading. Although neither expert performed a scientific study designed to determine specifically whether IWMS is misleading, both experts applied well established, general principles in their respective fields to the materials reviewed above and concluded that those materials are misleading. While not conclusive, their opinions are entitled to some weight.

In addition to the 1987, 1988, and 1989 solicitation materials, Plaintiffs have produced other evidence [*26] indicating that Southern Bell used improper marketing and sales techniques to enroll customers in IWMS during the period covered by this lawsuit. In particular, Plaintiffs have attached as exhibits to their response the affidavits of several of Southern Bell's former customer service representatives.¹² [*27] Each of these individuals states that Southern Bell training staff trained him or her to use pressure customers into purchasing IWMS, to ignore refusals to purchase, and to assume that customers had agreed to purchase unless they declined to purchase explicitly. The following passage from the affidavit of Deborah Fiore is demonstrative:

(One supervisor at Southern Bell) trained me to assume that a customer wanted a particular optional service if the customer did not come right out and say that they did not want it. I was instructed to say word to this effect: "Okay, I will go ahead and add that service to your order and you can call me back if you do not want it."¹³

These former service representatives also state that Southern Bell's supervisors instructed them to use many of the same misleading techniques used in the written solicitations mailed to customers.¹⁴ Several also state that service representatives often added IWMS to customers bills without the customers' knowledge or consent and that Southern Bell's supervisors failed to stop this practice after becoming aware of it.¹⁵ Many of the representatives assert that they were trained to discourage and impede customer attempts to cancel their subscriptions to IWMS.¹⁶

[*28] The foregoing represents a summary and is not an exhaustive description of the evidence Plaintiffs have produced to demonstrate that the techniques that Southern Bell used to market IWMS were deceptive. The summary is sufficient to demonstrate that a reasonable jury could find that Southern Bell's marketing and sales techniques were deceptive.

In order to sustain their antitrust theory, however, Plaintiffs must also demonstrate that Southern Bell's marketing and sales techniques caused widespread confusion among consumers concerning their need for IWMS and their ability to purchase it from sources other than Southern Bell. Professor Ross's survey was designed to reveal the extent to which Florida consumers understand IWMS. His affidavit describes in detail how he conducted the survey. The Court has admitted the affidavit, with the exceptions specified in the Court's Order of November 19, 1993, for the reasons discussed above.

¹¹ See the Lennox Study at iv.

¹² See Exhibit 15 to Plaintiffs' Response, Affidavit of Laura Lucas; Exhibit 16 to Plaintiffs' Response, Affidavit of Deborah Fiore; Exhibit 17 to Plaintiffs' Response, Affidavit of Susan Castro; Exhibit 18 to Plaintiffs' Response, Affidavit of Ralph Brown.

¹³ Exhibit 16 to Plaintiff's Response, Affidavit of Deborah Fiore at 8.

¹⁴ See, e.g., Id. at 9-11.

¹⁵ See, e.g., Exhibit 15 to Plaintiffs' Response; Affidavit of Laura Lucas at 5; Exhibit 17 to Plaintiffs Response, Affidavit of Susan Castro at 7.

¹⁶ Exhibit 15 to Plaintiffs' Response, Affidavit of Laura Lucas at 8; Exhibit 16 to Plaintiffs' Response, Affidavit of Deborah Fiore at 12, 13.

Based on his analysis of the results of the survey, Professor Ross concludes that almost one third of the IWMS consumers in Florida do not even know that IWMS exists (31%), that over one half (approximately 55.9%) do not know that they are being billed for the [*29] service, and that, among those who know that they are enrolled, there is significant misunderstanding concerning the items covered by IWMS. According to the survey, for example, 33% of Florida's IWMS subscribers who know that they subscribe to the service believe that the service covers phone cord repair, while 47% believe that the service covers repair of damage to inside wires caused by fire, flood, or hurricane.

Professor Ross's survey provides evidence upon which a reasonable jury could conclude that there is widespread confusion concerning among Florida subscribers to IWMS concerning the existence, scope of, and need for, the service. The survey does not demonstrate by itself that Southern Bell's marketing and sales techniques caused that confusion, however. The screener to the survey includes no questions concerning whether the respondent either received any of the 1987, 1988, or 1989 solicitation materials or subscribed to IWMS after an oral sales presentation including the misrepresentations used in the written solicitations.

Based on the evidence in the record, however, a reasonable jury could reach the following three conclusions. First, Southern Bell used misleading [*30] and coercive marketing and sales techniques when presenting IWMS to customers. Second, there is widespread confusion among IWMS subscribers in Florida concerning the existence of IWMS, the need for IWMS, and the scope of coverage provided by IWMS. Third, Florida consumers received most, if not all of their information concerning IWMS from Southern Bell. The third conclusion is critical as it minimizes the probability of an alternative cause. Without evidence of an alternative cause, a reasonable jury could conclude that Southern Bell's marketing and sales techniques caused consumer confusion.

(ii) Monopoly Power

HN9[] In order to prove that Southern Bell possess monopoly power in the market for inside wire maintenance and repair, Plaintiffs must prove that Southern Bell has the power to unilaterally raise price and restrict output without substantial loss of market share. Eastman Kodak Co. v. Image Technical Services, Inc., 119 L. Ed. 2d 265, 112 S. Ct. 2072, 2081 (1992). Plaintiffs must also prove that Southern Bell used this power to cause an injury cognizable under the antitrust laws. Atlantic Richfield Co. v. USA Petroleum Co., 495 U.S. 328, 109 L. Ed. 2d 333, 110 S. Ct. 1884 (1990). [*31] Proof of antitrust injury requires proof of injury to competition. See, e.g., Florida Monument Builders v. All Faiths Memorial Gardens, 605 F. Supp. 1320, 1323 (S.D.Fla. 1984) ("a mere showing of injury or loss by a plaintiff without a showing of injury to competition in the market, is not sufficient to state a cause of action for restraint of trade"). Assessment of the adequacy of Plaintiffs proof with respect to these elements turns on a single issue--whether Plaintiffs have produced evidence upon which a reasonable could find that the need for corrective advertising acted as a barrier to entry into the market for inside wire repair.

HN10[] The determination whether an alleged monopolist possesses monopoly power in a particular market involves two steps: 1) definition of the relevant market; and 2) assessment of the alleged monopolist's power in that market. Plaintiffs contend that the relevant product market consists of: 1) the market for inside wire maintenance service; and 2) the market for insurance for inside wire maintenance service.¹⁷ Plaintiffs also contend that potential competitors in the market include all those persons and business entities [*32] capable of repairing inside wires. There are three principal groups of such competitors, consisting of: 1) companies capable of offering insurance plans covering inside wire repair; e.g. Southern Bell's Inside Wire Maintenance Service ("IWMS"); 2) companies capable of offering to repair inside wires an a case by case, or "spot", basis; and 3) individual telephone consumers capable of repairing their own inside wires. Although Southern Bell disputes Plaintiffs' characterization of the relevant product market, it concedes the issue for purposes of its summary judgment motion.

The next question is whether Southern Bell possesses monopoly power in this market. As the Eleventh Circuit noted recently, HN11[] "the principal measure of actual monopoly power is market share. . .". U.S. Anchor Mfg., Inc. v. Rule Industries, Inc., 7 F.3d 986, 999 (11th Cir. 1993); see also, Grinell, 86 S. Ct. at 1704 ("The existence [*33] of . . . (monopoly) power ordinarily may be inferred from the predominant share of the market."). Market share of as low as approximately 66% has been held to constitute monopoly power. See American Tobacco Co. v. U.S., 328 U.S. 781, 66 S. Ct. 1125, 90 L. Ed. 1575 \(1946\). Market share in excess of 70% percent has regularly been held to constitute such power. See, e.g., Heattransfer Corp. v. Volkswagen, A.G., 553 F.2d 964, 981 \(5th Cir. 1977\).

¹⁷ See Plaintiffs' First Amended Complaint at P 63.

In the present case, Plaintiffs have produced credible evidence to indicate that the percentage of Southern Bell's residential and simple business telephone customers has remained at approximately at 85% since the service was unbundled beginning January 1, 1987.¹⁸ This figure raises an inference that Southern Bell exercises monopoly power in the market for inside wire repair.

The inference can be rebutted by evidence [*34] indicating that barriers to entry into the market are low or non-existent. The Ninth Circuit has explained that:

Time after time, we have recognized this basic fact of economic life:

HN12[] A high market share, though it may ordinarily raise an inference of monopoly power, will not do so in a market with low entry barriers or other evidence of a defendant's inability to control prices or exclude competitors. . .

The explanation is simple; where entry barriers are low, market share does not accurately reflect the party's market power. . .

U.S. v. Syufy Enterprises, 903 F.2d 659, 664, 664 n.6 \(9th Cir. 1990\) (quoting Oahu Gas Serv., Inc. v. Pacific Resources, Inc., 838 F.2d 360, 366 \(9th Cir. 1988\)). In this case, Plaintiffs contend that the need for corrective advertising acts as this barrier.

HN13[] Because evidence revealing the absence of market entry barriers rebuts a prima facie case of monopoly power, the absence of such barriers constitutes a defense. Accordingly, the defendant has the burden of persuasion at trial to demonstrate the absence of such barriers. This burden fixes the scope of its burden of production [*35] as the party moving for summary judgment. In order to satisfy this burden, the defendant cannot simply point out deficiencies in the plaintiffs proof. Celotex, 106 S. Ct. at 2557. Rather, the defendant must affirmatively produce evidence of its own demonstrating the absence of market entry barriers. Id. ("If the moving party will bear the burden of persuasion at trial, that party must support its motion with credible evidence--using any of the materials specified in Rule 56\(c\)--that would entitle it to a directed verdict if not controverted at trial.") (emphasis in original). Southern Bell is therefore obligated to produce such evidence in order to carry its burden in this case. In the event Southern Bell makes such a showing, the burden shifts to Plaintiffs to produce evidence upon which a reasonable jury could find that market entry barriers do exist.

The respective burdens under Celotex differ importantly with respect to the issue of antitrust injury. Plaintiffs have the burden of persuasion at trial on this issue. Thus, in this case, Plaintiffs bear the burden at trial to demonstrate that Southern Bell's [*36] conduct injured competition in the market for inside wire repair. See Florida Monument Builders, 605 F. Supp. at 1323. Plaintiffs attempt to make this showing by demonstrating that the need for corrective advertising prevented competitors from entering that market. Plaintiffs therefore bear the burden at trial to demonstrate that corrective advertising acted as a market entry barrier.

This fact significantly effects Southern Bell's burden of production as the party moving for summary judgment. It is well established that, HN14[] where the party opposing summary judgment bears the burden of persuasion at trial on a particular issue, the party moving for summary judgment need only demonstrate that the opposing party's evidence is insufficient to enable the opposing party to prevail on the issue. Celotex, 106 S. Ct. at 2557. Thus, with regard to the issue of antitrust injury, Southern Bell can meet its summary judgment burden by pointing to the absence of credible evidence in the record indicating that the need for corrective advertising acts as a market entry barrier. If Southern Bell meets its burden, [*37] the burden shifts to Plaintiffs to produce evidence upon which a reasonable jury could find that corrective advertising did act as a barrier.

¹⁸ See Attachment 2 to Affidavit of Professor Steven Salop.

The Court will examine the parties submissions in light of the burdens applicable to the issue of antitrust injury. The Court must first consider the kind of evidence upon which Plaintiffs may rely to satisfy their burden. According to Plaintiffs, the Supreme Court's decision in Eastman Kodak Co. v. Image Technical Services, Inc., 119 L. Ed. 2d 265, 112 S. Ct. 2072 (1992) creates a presumption that information costs can act as a market entry barrier. Plaintiffs allege that this "presumption" excuses Plaintiffs from any requirement that they produce evidence of actual market conditions in order to demonstrate that the need for corrective advertising acts as a market entry barrier. Rather, they allege that this "presumption" enables them to satisfy their burden under Rule 56(e) merely by demonstrating that their corrective advertising theory "makes economic sense".

In the Court's view, Plaintiffs misread Kodak. Kodak concerned a group of independent companies providing service for Kodak equipment [*38] who sued Kodak under sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act. Kodak, 112 S. Ct. at 2078. The plaintiffs alleged, among other things, that Kodak used its power in the market for the sale of its equipment to monopolize the markets for the sales of parts and service for its equipment. Id. at 2077-78. Kodak moved for summary judgment on the ground that it could not have charged monopoly prices in the parts and services markets because doing so would have deterred many potential customers from purchasing its equipment in the first place and would therefore have caused the company to suffer ruinous losses in the market for its equipment. Id. at 2081.

Kodak produced no evidence supporting the connection between prices in the parts and services markets and sales volume in the equipment market. Id. at 2082. Rather, the company argued that, because this connection "made economic sense", the Court should adopt a presumption that "equipment competition precludes any finding of monopoly power in the derivative after markets." Id.

The Supreme Court rejected this argument. The Court found that Kodak failed to produce evidence supporting the [*39] connection between the equipment market and the parts and service markets and had thus failed to carry its initial burden of production on summary judgment. The Court repeatedly emphasized that economic theory alone, absent evidence of actual market conditions, was not sufficient to satisfy this burden. The Court explained, for example, that:

Legal presumptions that rest on formalistic distinctions rather than actual market realities are generally disfavored in antitrust law. This Court has preferred to resolve antitrust claims on a case-by-case basis, focusing on the "particular facts disclosed by the record." . . . In determining the existence of market power . . . this Court has examined closely the economic reality of the market at issue.

Kodak, 112 S. Ct. at 2082. Later in the opinion, the Court stated that:

The dissent disagrees based on its hypothetical case of a tie between equipment and service. "The only thing lacking" to bring this case within the hypothetical case, states the dissent, "is concrete evidence that the restrictive parts policy was . . . generally known." . . . *But the dissent's "only thing lacking" [40] is the crucial thing lacking--evidence. . . . Far from being "anomalous", . . . requiring Kodak to provide evidence on this factual question is completely consistent without prior precedent. . . .

Id. at 2087 n.24. The Court decision is fully consistent with its prior, and subsequent, precedent. See, e.g., Jefferson Parish Hosp. Dist. No. 2 v. Hyde, 466 U.S. 2, 104 S. Ct. 1551, 1565-67, 80 L. Ed. 2d 2 (1984); Brooke Group v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco, 125 L. Ed. 2d 168, 113 S. Ct. 2578, 2598 (1993) ("When an expert opinion is not supported by sufficient to validate it in the eyes of the law, or when indisputable record facts contradict or otherwise render the opinion unreasonable, it cannot support a jury's verdict. . . . Expert testimony is useful as a guide to interpreting market facts, but it is not a substitute for them. . . . As we observed in Matsushita, "expert opinion evidence . . . has little probative value in comparison with economic factors" that may dictate a particular conclusion. . . .")

The Court found that the evidence in the record contradicted [*41] the presumption that Kodak urged it to adopt. In particular, the Court emphasized that the record evidence indicated that parts and service prices had risen in the past without any drop in the volume of sales of Kodak equipment. Kodak, 112 S. Ct. at 2085. To explain the absence of a connection between the markets, the Court suggested that consumers in the equipment market might lack information concerning prices in the parts and services markets. This information deficit, and the costs associated with overcoming it, might enable Kodak to raise prices in the parts and services markets without suffering any decline equipment sales. Id. at 2087.

The Court offered this only as an explanation for an observable market phenomenon. It did not articulate a general presumption that information costs act as a market entry barrier or always serve to preserve an incumbent's market power. Moreover, the Court did not find that economic theory concerning information costs was sufficient, by itself, to satisfy any summary judgment burden requiring the affirmative production of evidence. Rather, as noted, the Court found that the plaintiffs' theory of [*42] information costs was consistent with direct evidence concerning actual market conditions. Id. at 2085 (no decline in volume equipment sales increases in service and parts prices).

In the present case, Plaintiffs must prove that Southern Bell used its monopoly to cause injury to competition in order to prove antitrust injury. Plaintiffs' theory of antitrust injury is that Southern Bell's coercive and deceptive sales techniques required potential competitors to engage in corrective advertising. Plaintiffs allege that the need for corrective advertising deterred potential competitors from entering the market for inside wire repair because of the high cost associated with such advertising and the low rate at which those costs could be recouped. The adequacy of Plaintiffs' theory turns on the adequacy of the evidence supporting this allegation. As Plaintiffs bear the burden to prove this allegation at trial, Southern Bell need only challenge the adequacy of Plaintiffs evidence in order to satisfy its burden as the party moving for summary judgment. The burden then shifts to Plaintiffs to produce evidence upon which a reasonable jury could find in their favor. If Plaintiffs cannot [*43] produce such evidence, the Court must enter summary judgment against them.

Plaintiffs have produced three kinds of evidence in support of their theory--expert evidence; circumstantial evidence; and direct evidence. Southern Bell has attacked the adequacy of this evidence extensively. The burden therefore rests on Plaintiffs to demonstrate the adequacy of the evidence.

Plaintiffs' expert evidence consists of the affidavit of Professor Steven Salop. In his affidavit, Professor Salop cogently presents Plaintiffs' theory, but cites little record evidence to support that theory. Under the Supreme Court precedents reviewed above, expert evidence unsupported by citation to evidence of actual market fact, is not sufficient to satisfy Plaintiffs' burden. See Brooke Group, 113 S. Ct. at 2598; Kodak, 112 S. Ct. at 2082.

Plaintiffs contend, however, that circumstantial evidence is sufficient to satisfy this burden. In support of this contention, Plaintiffs rely on several Supreme Court decisions for the proposition that direct evidence from potential competitors is difficult to obtain and therefore that [*44] circumstantial evidence is sufficient. See U.S. v. Marine Bancorporation, Inc., 418 U.S. 602, 624, 41 L. Ed. 2d 978, 94 S. Ct. 2856 \(1974\); U.S. v. Falstaff Brewing Co., 410 U.S. 526, 533 n.13, 35 L. Ed. 2d 475, 93 S. Ct. 1096 \(1973\). Both of these cases involved attempts by the Justice Department to use section 7 of the Clayton Act to block mergers by potential competitors into oligopolistic markets. In such cases, direct evidence of a potential competitor's intent to enter the market directly is indeed difficult to obtain for the simple reason that the potential competitor would rather enter the market via a merger.¹⁹

[*45] The present case stands on different facts. Potential competitors deterred from entry into the market for inside wire repair by the costs of corrective advertising have every incentive to give evidence to this effect since they will benefit from the elimination, or mitigation, of these costs. Thus, if the need for corrective advertising does act as a market entry barrier, direct evidence from competitors should be easy to gather. The Court concludes that there is no presumption that the presentation of circumstantial evidence is sufficient to discharge Plaintiffs' burden in this case.

¹⁹ Moreover, as the Court explained in Marine Bancorporation, actual entry into the market, and the intent to do so, are irrelevant since the threat of entry, rather than entry itself, constitutes the primary procompetitive effect associated with such potential competitors. 418 U.S. at 624. Evidence concerning the potential competitors' capacity to enter the market is far more important than evidence concerning the competitors' intent to do so.

Plaintiffs integrate their circumstantial evidence into the following five-step argument. First, Southern Bell makes extraordinary profits on IWMS. Second, under ordinary circumstances, the potential for high profits induces many competitors to enter the market. Third, the fact that few competitors have actually entered the market indicates that there must be some barrier to entry. Fourth, there are no "classical" barriers to entry.²⁰ Therefore, the need for corrective advertising constitutes the only plausible entry barrier.

[*46] Southern Bell sharply contests the first and fourth premises. The argument fails even if all four premises are granted, however, because those premises do not compel Plaintiffs' conclusion. Plaintiffs' premises compel the conclusion that something prevents many potential competitors from entering the market. That something might be corrective advertising, as Plaintiffs suggest, or it might be the low rate of failure of inside wires, and consequent low return associated with the spot market for inside wire repair, as Southern Bell suggests. Plaintiffs' circumstantial evidence is therefore insufficient, on its own, to demonstrate that the need for corrective advertising deterred entry into the market for inside wire repair.

Plaintiffs have produced direct evidence, however. This evidence consists of excerpts from the depositions of representatives from ten companies whom Plaintiffs believe could compete with Southern Bell, primarily by offering spot repairs for inside wire maintenance failures.²¹ Several of these competitors testified that the cost of advertising to compete in the market for inside wire repair was prohibitive and that it deterred them from entering that market. [*47]²²

Southern Bell has exposed flaws in the competitors' testimony.²³ The competitors have presented what amounts to conclusory opinion evidence. As a consequence, the question whether the need for corrective advertising acts as a market barrier is a close one on the present record.

²⁰ "Classical" market entry barriers include, for example, high start-up costs.

²¹ See Deposition of Dave Graveline ("Graveline"); Deposition of Don Van Ver Laan ("Van Der Laan"); Deposition of M. Ford Pollard ("Pollard"); Deposition of Herbert Morris ("Morris"); Deposition of Bruce F. Williams ("Williams"); Deposition of Herbert Bornack ("Bornack"); Deposition of Valentine Sellati, Sr. ("Sellati"); Deposition of Steve Alpert ("Alpert"); Deposition of David Joseph Hansen ("Hansen"); Deposition of Barbara Guncheon ("Guncheon").

²² See Graveline at 71, 72, 74, 138; Van Der Laan at 80, 124; Morris at 107, 118; Bornack at 131, 134, 140, 143; Alpert at 76, 81, 83; Hansen at 64, 65; Guncheon at 166, 169.

²³ For example, while several competitors testified that advertising costs were prohibitive, only two of the competitors testified that the extra advertising costs imposed by the need to overcome the misperceptions created by Southern Bell prevented them from entering the market. See Graveline at 70-72, 139-144; Guncheon at 84-88, 169-170. The competitors thus generally failed to distinguish between corrective and competitive advertising.

This distinction is critical to Plaintiffs' case. The fact that potential competitors must invest in advertising, and are deterred from entry by the cost of that advertising, causes no antitrust injury except to the extent that Southern Bell's anticompetitive conduct created the need for such advertising. See, e.g., Olympia Equipment Leasing Co. v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 797 F.2d 370, 377 (7th Cir. 1986) ("Brand-new firms are expected to make their own way in the market, by advertising or other means of promotion."). Thus, the competitors' failure to identify the extra expense imposed by the need to overcome the misunderstanding created by Southern Bell severely undercuts the probative value of their testimony.

Moreover, none of the competitors attempted to estimate the cost of advertising in the inside wire repair market by extrapolating from costs associated with advertising in other markets. Nor did any of the competitors attempt to project advertising costs based on their past experience with prospective inside wire customers. In fact, the competitors generally had no information in the form of documents, reports, or market studies or analysis to support their claims concerning advertising costs.

Further, not a single competitor identified any "free rider" problems associated with corrective advertising. Free rider problems arise when a competitor's advertising redounds to the benefit of another competitor.

[*48] The competitors have been actively engaged in business in similar markets, however, and their testimony thus has some probative value.²⁴ Moreover, although the flaws in the competitors' testimony are significant, it would be inappropriate to discount their testimony at this stage of the proceedings. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2513, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 \(1986\) [HN15[↑]] "The evidence of the non-movant is to be believed, and all justifiable inferences are to be drawn in his favor."). Accordingly, while the Court has been sorely tempted to grant summary judgment, the Court has concluded that the wisest course is to deny Southern Bell's motion and to have Plaintiffs' case tried on a fuller record to a jury.

[*49] 2) Attempted Monopolization

[HN17[↑]](#) In order to sustain a claim for attempted monopolization under section 2 of the Sherman Act, Plaintiffs must prove that: 1) Southern Bell possessed the specific intent to achieve monopoly power by predatory or exclusionary conduct; 2) Southern Bell in fact committed that conduct; and 3) there exists a dangerous probability that Southern Bell might have succeeded in its attempt to achieve monopoly power. U.S. Anchor Mfg., Inc. v. Rule Industries, Inc., 7 F.3d 986, 993 \(1993\). Plaintiffs must also demonstrate that they have standing to bring an attempted monopolization claim. In Re Air Passenger Computer Reservation Systems, 727 F. Supp. 564 \(C.D. Cal. 1989\). In order to demonstrate standing, Plaintiffs' must demonstrate that Southern Bell's caused an injury cognizable under the antitrust laws--i.e., injury to competition. Id.

At least one court has held that consumers do not have standing to bring claims for attempted monopolization. In Air Passenger, the United States District Court for the Central District of California stated that:

As explained by Areeda and Hovenkamp, when defendants [*50] engage in predatory pricing and other anticompetitive acts in an attempt to gain a monopoly, the competitor who is being driven out of the market is the party with standing. Only when the defendants achieve a monopoly and are in a position to harm consumers by engaging in monopoly overcharging, is there harm to consumers.

Id. at 568-69.

The Court adopts the reasoning of Air Passenger and hold that Plaintiffs lack standing as a matter of law to bring a claim for attempted monopolization.

3) Monopoly Leveraging

Plaintiffs' monopoly leveraging fails, however. [HN18[↑]](#) Monopoly leveraging is the use of monopoly power in one market to acquire a monopoly in another market. The Supreme Court has recently explained that, where a single firm is involved, monopoly leveraging does not constitute a claim distinct from monopolization or attempted monopolization. Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 122 L. Ed. 2d 247, 113 S. Ct. 884, 892 \(1993\) ("Section 2 makes the conduct of a single firm unlawful only when it actually monopolizes or dangerously threatens to do so."); see also, Alaska Airlines, Inc. v. United Airlines, Inc., 948 F.2d 536, 541 \(9th Cir. 1984\) [*51] ("the anticompetitive dangers that implicate the Sherman Act are not present when a monopolist has a lawful monopoly in one market and uses it to gain a competitive advantage in the second market. By definition, the monopolist had failed to gain, or attempt to gain, a monopoly, in the second market. Thus, such activity fails to meet the second element necessary to establish a violation of §2.").

Finally, Plaintiffs produced no other direct evidence. For example, they did not present a study designed to measure what the cost of corrective advertising would likely have been for a typical potential competitor.

²⁴ The Court has considered the designated competitors as lay witnesses who may give testimony in the form of opinions or inferences under Rule 701 of the Federal Rules of Evidence. [HN16[↑]](#) Rule 701 provides that:

If the witness is not testifying as an expert, the witness' testimony in the form of opinions or inferences is limited to those opinions or inferences which are (a) rationally based on the perception of the witness and (b) helpful to a clear understanding of the witness' testimony or the determination of a fact in issue.

Based on the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED and ADJUDGED that the Southern Bell's motion for summary judgment on Plaintiffs' antitrust claims is DENIED with respect to Plaintiffs' monopolization claims in Counts I and III and GRANTED with respect to Plaintiffs' monopoly leveraging claims in Counts I and III and with respect to Plaintiffs' attempted monopolization claims in Counts II and IV.

SOUTHERN BELL'S MOTION TO DISMISS STATE CLAIMS

In the motion to dismiss, or in the alternative, motion for summary judgment that it filed on February 16, 1990, Southern Bell moved to dismiss all of Plaintiffs' claims. In its Order of February 4, 1991, the Court granted partial summary judgment with respect to Plaintiffs' antitrust claims and deferred ruling on Plaintiffs' remaining state law claims. These [*52] claims include: 1) four claims brought under Florida's Civil Remedies for Criminal Practices Act ("Florida RICO") (Counts V-VIII); 2) a claim for violation of Florida's statute prohibiting misleading payment of money without a required statutory warning, brought under section 817.061 of the Florida Statutes ("Solicitation") (Count IX); 3) a claim brought under the Florida common law doctrine of money had and received ("Money Had And Received") (Count X); 4) a claim for restitution of monies paid under void or voidable contracts, brought under Florida common law ("Void And Voidable Contracts") (Count XI); and 5) a claim for breach of the implied duty of good faith and fair dealing, brought under Florida common law ("Good Faith And Fair Dealing") (Count XII).

Prior to examining the merits of Southern Bell's motion to dismiss, it is instructive to review the standards governing disposition of a motion to dismiss. HN19[ Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure] authorizes the Court to dismiss a claim on the basis of a dispositive issue of law. See Neitzke v. Williams, 490 U.S. 319, 109 S. Ct. 1827, 1832, 104 L. Ed. 2d 338 \(1989\). [*53] The Court, however, is confined to a review of the First Amended Complaint, must accept the allegations of the First Amended Complaint as true, and must resolve any factual issues in a manner favorable to the nonmovant. See Quinones v. Durkis, 638 F. Supp. 856, 858 \(S.D.Fla. 1986\).

The Court also notes that, in order to resolve a motion to dismiss claims brought under Florida law, the Court must interpret Florida law as the would the Florida Supreme Court. Erie Railroad v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 82 L. Ed. 1188, 58 S. Ct. 817 \(1938\); Wammock v. Celotex Corp., 835 F.2d 818 \(11th Cir. 1988\). In the absence of controlling precedent, the Court must examine existing authority and must predict how the Florida Supreme Court would apply that authority to the circumstances of the instant action. Wammock, 835 F.2d at 820.

1) Florida RICO claims

In Counts V through VIII, Plaintiffs assert four claims under section 772.103\(1\)-\(3\) of Florida's Civil Remedies for Criminal Practices Act ("Florida RICO").²⁵ Those sections provide that:

HN20[ It is unlawful [*54] for any person:

- (1) Who has with criminal intent received any proceeds derived, directly or indirectly, from a pattern of criminal activity or through collection of unlawful debt to use or invest, whether directly or indirectly, any part of such proceeds, or the proceeds derived from the investment or use thereof, in the acquisition of any title to, or any right, interest, or equity in, real property or in the establishment or operation of any enterprise.
- (2) Through a pattern of criminal activity or through the collection of an unlawful debt, to acquire or maintain, directly or indirectly, any interest in or control of any enterprise or real property.
- (3) Employed by, or associated with, any enterprise to conduct or participate, directly or indirectly, in such enterprise through a pattern of criminal activity or the collection of an unlawful debt.

Fla. Stat. Ann. § 772.103.

[*55] Florida's civil RICO statute is patterned closely after the federal civil RICO statute. See 18 U.S.C. §§ 1962\(a\)-\(d\). HN21 In the absence of authoritative guidance concerning the meaning of the Florida statute, ²⁵ Count V alleges a violation of [section 772.103\(1\). Count VI alleges a violation of section 772.103\(2\). Counts VII and VIII allege violations of sections 772.103\(3\).

Florida courts rely on interpretations of the federal statute. See, e.g., Flanagan v. State, 566 So. 2d 868, 869 \(Fla. 2d Dist. Ct. App. 1990\); see also, Banderas v. Banco Central del Ecuador, 461 So. 2d 265, 269 \(Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1985\) ("The Florida RICO Act . . . is nearly identical to the federal RICO statute. . . Thus, we can look to a wealth of material on the federal RICO statute for guidance on this issue.").

Southern Bell moves to dismiss Plaintiffs' Florida RICO claims on the ground that imposing liability on Southern Bell under the act would contravene the purpose of the act because Southern Bell is not a professional or career criminal and that Plaintiffs have failed to plead: 1) criminal intent with the requisite degree of specificity; 2) a "pattern of criminal activity" within the meaning of the statute; 3) the existence of a separate and distinct "enterprise" [*56] as required by the statute; and 5) a causal link between their injuries and Southern Bell's alleged RICO violations.

(i) Scope Of Florida Civil RICO

Southern Bell relies on a number of cases for the proposition that the Florida legislature intended Florida RICO to apply only to career or professional criminals. See, e.g., Bowden v. State, 402 So. 2d 1173 \(Fla. 1981\); State v. Russo, 493 So. 2d 504 \(Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1986\); see also, Chisholm & Co. v. Bank of Jamaica, 643 F. Supp. 1393 \(S.D.Fla. 1986\). As Plaintiffs have failed to allege that Southern Bell is a career or professional criminal, Southern Bell urges that Plaintiffs' pleading is deficient.

The cases upon which Southern Bell relies are not apposite to the present case. Two of those cases involved the application of Florida's criminal RICO statute in the context of a criminal prosecution. Bowden, 402 So. 2d at 1174 ("By requiring a continuity of criminal activity as well as similarity and interrelatedness between these activities, the target of RICO prosecutions will be . . . the professional [*57] or career criminal. . .") (emphasis added); Russo, 493 So. 2d at 505 ("the proper target of RICO prosecutions will be the career criminal.") (emphasis added). No Florida state court, however, has held that the same restriction limits the scope of Florida's civil RICO statute. To the contrary, at least one of the Florida District Courts of Appeal has held that plaintiff need not establish a nexus to organized crime in order to obtain damages under the statute. Banderas, 461 So.2d at 269.

The legislature could easily have included a requirement that a RICO defendant be a professional or career criminal. It chose not to do so and the Court declines to read the requirement into the statute.

(ii) Criminal Intent

Southern Bell also moves to dismiss Plaintiffs' RICO claims on the ground that Plaintiffs' have failed to allege that Southern Bell acted with specific intent to commit a RICO violation. Of the four subsections delineating the civil causes of action available under Florida RICO, only section 772.103\(1\) requires proof of intent. Plaintiffs assert their only claim under this section in Count V and plead intent generally [*58] in that count. Southern Bell's contention thus applies only on Count V.

This contention lacks merit. HN22[] Under Rule 9\(b\) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Plaintiffs need only aver intent generally. See Fed.R.Civ.Pro. 9\(b\) ("Malice, intent, knowledge, and other condition of mind may be averred generally."). The case authorities upon which Southern Bell relies to contend that Rule 9\(b\) requires enhanced pleading in the context of RICO actions either affirm that the plain language of the rule applies to RICO cases or are distinguishable. See, Beck v. Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., 820 F.2d 46 \(2d Cir. 1987\) (affirming applicability of Rule 9\(b\)'s general intent provision and enhancing requirement in particular case before court because defendant's motive not obvious); United States v. O'Malley, 707 F.2d 1240, 1246 \(11th Cir. 1983\) (proof of mail fraud requires proof of specific intent at trial; no reference to any enhanced pleading requirement); Banco de Desarrollo Agropecuario v. Gibbs, 640 F. Supp. 1168 \(S.D.Fla. 1986\). In Gibbs, for example, this Court interpreted language [*59] in the federal RICO statute requiring proof of at least two indictable offenses as predicate acts to show a pattern of criminal activity to require a plaintiff to include allegations sufficient to support "probable cause of intent to defraud." 640 F. Supp. at 1175. The Florida statute includes no requirement that the predicate acts be "indictable offenses". The Court therefore concludes that the probable cause requirement does not apply to the Florida statute and that Plaintiffs' allegations in Count V are thus adequate to satisfy the pleading requirements imposed by Rule 9\(b\).

(iii) Pattern Of Criminal Activity

Southern Bell also moves to dismiss Plaintiffs' Florida RICO claims on the ground that Plaintiffs' allegations fail to show that Southern Bell has engaged in a "pattern of criminal activity". HN23[↑] Under section 772.102\(4\), the term "pattern of criminal activity" means:

engaging in at least two incidents of criminal activity that the same or similar intents, results, accomplices, victims, or methods of commission or that are otherwise are interrelated by distinguishing characteristics and are not isolated incidents; provided that the last of such [*60] incidents occurred within 5 years after a prior incident of criminal activity. For the purposes of this chapter, the term "pattern of criminal activity" shall not include two or more incidents of fraudulent conduct arising out of a single contract or transaction against one or more related persons.

Fla.Stat.Ann. § 772.102\(4\) (emphasis added). Southern Bell asserts that its provision of IWMS to Plaintiffs represents a "single contract or transaction" within the meaning of the statute and that Plaintiffs are all "related" because they are all Southern Bell customers.

In support of its position, Southern Bell relies on Gordon v. Etue, Wardlaw & Co., P.A., 511 So. 2d 384, 389 \(Fla. 1st Dist. App. Ct. 1987\). In Gordon, a group of investors sued an accounting firm for damages incurred through reliance on an improper audit and included a count under Florida's civil RICO statute. Id. Florida's First District Court of Appeals dismissed the RICO count on the ground that the accounting firm's conduct did not constitute a pattern of racketeering activity. Id. at 388. In so doing, the court rejected the plaintiffs' contention [*61] that, because the audit effected multiple investors, it was sufficient to constitute a pattern. Id.

Gordon is distinguishable from the present case, however. As noted Gordon involved only a single audit. This case involves multiple solicitations for a single product. Southern Bell used different, though related, materials in each of these solicitations. Moreover, because the 1988 and 1989 solicitations requested customer consent to price modifications, and price cannot be altered without the formation of a new agreement, those solicitations may have represented separate contractual offers. The Court concludes that Southern Bell's 1983, 1987, 1988, and 1989 solicitations each represents a separate "incident" within the meaning of section 772.102\(4\) and that these incidents do not form part of single transaction. See H.J. Inc. v. Northwestern Bell Telephone Co., 492 U.S. 229, 109 S. Ct. 2893, 106 L. Ed. 2d 195 \(1989\) (allegations that telephone company and some of its employees gave members of the Minnesota Public Utilities Commission numerous bribes at different times over the course of at least a six-year [*62] period, with the objective of causing the commissioners to approve unfair and unreasonable rates for the company were sufficient to plead a pattern of racketeering activity under federal RICO statute).

(iv) Separate And Distinct Enterprise

Southern Bell also moves to dismiss all of Plaintiffs' RICO claims on the ground that Plaintiffs' allegations fail to establish the existence of an enterprise separate and distinct from Southern Bell. As noted above, Plaintiffs assert four, separate RICO claims.

In Counts V and VI, Plaintiffs assert claims pursuant to sections 772.103\(1\) and 772.103\(2\) of the Florida Statutes, respectively. Section 772.103\(1\) corresponds to section 1962\(a\) of the federal RICO statute, while section 772.103\(2\) corresponds to section 1962\(b\) of the federal statute. See 18 U.S.C. §§ 1962\(a\), 1962\(b\). The language of the federal and state statutes is nearly identical.

No court has considered the issue whether a plaintiff is required to plead an enterprise separate and distinct from the person (defendant) charged with the violation. The authorities interpreting sections 1962\(a\) and 1962\(b\) have uniformly held that a plaintiff need [*63] not make such a pleading and that the person charged can also serve as the RICO enterprise. See, e.g., Liquid Air Corp. v. Rogers, 834 F.2d 1297, 1306 \(7th Cir. 1987\) (section 1962\(b\) does not require an enterprise separate and distinct from the person charged); Haroco v. American National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago, 747 F.2d 384, 402 \(7th Cir. 1984\). The Court concludes that sections 772.103\(1\) and 772.103(2) do not require Plaintiffs in this case to plead a separate and distinct enterprise from Southern Bell and that Southern Bell's objection to these Counts V and VI on this ground must fail.

The situation is rather different with respect to Counts VII and VIII. In both of those counts, Plaintiffs allege that Southern Bell violated section 772.103(3). The section is nearly identical to section 1962(c) of the federal RICO statute.

Once again, no court has considered whether the Florida statute requires a plaintiff to plead the existence of an enterprise separate and distinct from the entity charged with the RICO violation. Virtually all of the circuits have construed section 1962(c) of the federal statute to require [*64] the plaintiff to plead a separate and distinct enterprise. See, e.g., Board of County Commissioners v. Liberty Group, 965 F.2d 879, 885 (10th Cir. 1992); Glessner v. Kenny, 952 F.2d 702 (3rd Cir. 1991); Haroco, 747 F.2d at 402. However, in United States v. Hartley, 678 F.2d 961 (11th Cir. 1982), the Eleventh Circuit took the opposite position. The Eleventh Circuit was the first to decide the issue; the other circuits have declined to follow its lead. Moreover, a close reading of the statute supports the majority view. A leading treatise explains that:

HN24[] Section 1962(c) makes it unlawful for any person employed by or associated with an enterprise to conduct that enterprise through a pattern of racketeering activity. The statutory language clearly envisions a relationship between a "person" and an "enterprise" as an element of the offense. Only a person employed by or associated with an enterprise, not the enterprise itself, may violate section 1962(c). . . Since a corporation cannot logically be "employed by or associated with" itself, imposing liability [*65] on the corporate enterprise would require the courts to disregard the limitations inherent in the statutory language. . . The majority position also finds support in RICO's legislative history. If the primary purpose of RICO is to cope with the infiltration of legitimate businesses, "it is logical that Congress would have designed section 1962(c) so that it reached the criminal but protected the victimized enterprise from liability."

David B. Smith, Civil RICO P 3.07 (1993).

As noted above, the Court is obligated to interpret Florida law as would the Florida Supreme Court. Based on the foregoing, the Court finds that, although the Eleventh Circuit has taken a contrary position, the Florida Supreme Court would adopt the majority view expressed above and would require a RICO plaintiff proceeding under section 772.103(3) to plead the existence of an enterprise separate from the "person" alleged to have violated the section.

In Counts VII and VIII, Plaintiffs have pleaded the existence of separate enterprises. In Count VII, Plaintiffs allege that the enterprise is Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company-Florida, Southern Bell's unincorporated division operating in the State [*66] of Florida. First Amended Complaint at P 94. In Count VIII, Plaintiffs allege that the enterprise is an association in fact comprised of: 1) BellSouth Corporation ("BellSouth")--Southern Bell's parent corporation; 2) Southern Bell; 3) Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company-Florida ("Southern Bell Florida")--Southern Bell's unincorporated division operating in the State of Florida; and 4) the individual officers of BellSouth, Southern Bell, and Southern Bell Florida. Id. at P 98.

The circuits are split concerning whether a subsidiary of the corporation charged with the RICO violation, or an association in fact composed of entities related to that corporation, can serve as an enterprise under section 1962(c). See Haroco, 747 F.2d at 402 (subsidiary of parent charged with RICO violation can serve as enterprise); Brittingham v. Mobil Corp., 943 F.2d 297, 302-03 (3d Cir. 1991) ("Without additional allegations . . . a subsidiary corporation cannot constitute the enterprise through which a defendant parent corporation conducts racketeering activity"); NCNB Nat'l Bank of North Carolina v. Tiller, 814 F.2d 931, 936 (4th Cir. 1987) [*67] (bank could not be liable under section 1962(c) where its holding company and sole shareholder were alleged as the enterprise); see also Glessner v. Kenny, 952 F.2d 702 (3d Cir. 1991).

Under the majority view now prevailing, HN25[] a subsidiary of the defendant corporation, or an association in fact composed of entities related to the defendant corporation, cannot constitute the enterprise for purposes of section 1962(c) absent allegations indicating that the defendant corporation played some role in the alleged racketeering independent of those of the entities acting on its behalf. The Third Circuit aptly summarized the rationale for this rule in Brittingham, explaining that:

When a defendant is a collective entity, it is more likely that the alleged enterprise is in reality no different from the association of individuals or entities that constitute the defendant or carry out its actions. Unlike individual defendants, a corporation can only act through its employees and agents . . . A plaintiff cannot circumvent this holding merely by alleging that the enterprise is an association in fact consisting of the defendant and individuals or entities [*68] acting on its behalf. Without allegations or evidence that the defendant had a role in the racketeering activity that was distinct from the undertakings of those acting on its behalf, the distinctiveness requirement is not satisfied.

943 F.2d at 302. The Court finds this reasoning persuasive and believes that the Florida Supreme Court will apply the rule articulated by the Third Circuit to actions under section 772.103\(3\) in the event that the Florida Supreme Court considers the issue.

A review of Plaintiffs' allegations in Counts VII and VIII reveals that Plaintiffs have failed to plead that Southern Bell had a role in the alleged RICO violations distinct from those played by the other parties to the enterprises identified. Thus, both counts will be dismissed in accordance with the Brittingham rule.

(V) Link Between Plaintiffs' Injuries And Southern Bell's Use Or Investment Of Proceeds From Sale Of IWMS

Southern Bell moves to dismiss Counts V and VI on the ground that Plaintiffs' fail to allege in those counts that they were injured by reason of the fact that Southern Bell engaged in the activities prohibited by sections 772.103\(1\) and 772.103\(2\). [*69] Southern Bell's argument is based on the language in sections 772.103\(1\), 772.103\(2\), and 772.104. Section 772.103\(1\) prohibits the use or investment of proceeds derived from a pattern of criminal activity in the establishment or operation of any enterprise, while section 772.103\(2\) prohibits the acquisition or maintenance of any interest in or control of any enterprise through a pattern of criminal activity. Fla.Stat.Ann. §§ 772.103\(1\), \(2\). [HN26\[↑\]](#) Section 772.104 creates a civil right of action for;

Any person who proves by clear and convincing evidence that he has been injured by reason of any violation of the provisions of s. 772.103. . .

Id. at § 772.104.

With respect to section 772.103\(1\), Southern Bell contends that because section 772.104 provides a remedy for any injury suffered by reason of a violation of section 772.103, and because section 772.103\(1\) makes a violation the use or investment of racketeering proceeds in a specified manner, Plaintiffs must allege that they have been injured by Southern Bell's use or investment of the proceeds it received from the sale of IWMS. Similarly, with respect to section 772.103\(2\), Southern Bell contends that Plaintiffs [*70] must allege that they were injured by its acquisition of an interest or control in a RICO enterprise.

No court has considered the issue whether a plaintiff must plead injury stemming from the defendant's use or investment of the proceeds at issue under section 772.103\(1\) and stemming from the defendant's acquisition or maintenance of an interest in or control of a RICO enterprise under section 772.103\(2\). A number of courts have considered these issues in connection with sections 1962\(a\), 1962\(b\) and 1964, the federal RICO equivalents of sections 772.103\(1\), 772.103\(2\), and 772.104. Once again, the circuits are split. Several courts have adopted the position taken by Southern Bell. See Grider v. Texas Oil & Gas Corp., 868 F.2d 1147 (10th Cir. 1989) (plaintiff must plead injury stemming from the use or investment of racketeering income); In Re Sahlen & Associates, Inc. Securities Lit., 773 F. Supp. 342 (S.D.Fla. 1991). Other courts have adopted the opposite view. See Busby v. Crown Supply, Inc., 896 F.2d 833 (4th Cir. 1990) (plaintiff need not plead special injury stemming from use or investment [*71] of racketeering income) Avirgan v. Hull, 691 F. Supp. 1357 (1988).

Fortunately, the Court need not resolve this conflict because Plaintiffs have alleged the requisite injuries under both sections 772.103\(1\) and 772.103\(2\). In paragraph 87 of the First Amended Complaint, Plaintiffs allege both that Southern Bell violated section 772.103\(1\) by using or investing in an enterprise proceeds of the type covered by the section.²⁶ In paragraph 88, Plaintiffs allege that they were injured by reason of this violation.²⁷ Similarly, in paragraph 91, Plaintiffs allege that Southern Bell violated section 772.103\(2\) by acquiring or maintaining an interest in or control of an enterprise through a pattern of criminal activity.²⁸ [*72] In paragraph 92, Plaintiffs allege that they were injured by reason of this violation.²⁹ The Court finds that these allegations are sufficient to satisfy the requirement that Plaintiffs plead injuries stemming from the violations covered by sections 772.103\(1\) and 772.103\(2\).

Based on the foregoing, Southern Bell's motion to dismiss is denied with respect to Counts V and VI and granted with respect to Counts VII and VIII.

2) Solicitation

In Count IX, Plaintiffs allege that Southern Bell violated section 817.061 of the Florida Statutes. That section prohibits the solicitation of the payment of money for services not yet performed or ordered, absent the inclusion of certain language in the solicitation. The section provides specifically that:

HN27 [↑] (1) It is unlawful for any . . . corporation . . . to solicit payment of money by another by means of a statement or invoice, or any writing that would reasonably be interpreted as a statement or invoice, for goods not yet ordered or services not yet performed and not yet ordered, unless there appears on the face of the statement or invoice or writing in 30 point boldface type the following warning:

"This is a solicitation for the order of goods or services, and you are under no obligation to make payment unless you accept the offer contained herein."

Fla.Stat.Ann. § 817.061\(1\).

Plaintiffs' allege [*73] that Southern Bell failed to include the required warning in the material used to solicit IWMS in 1983, 1988, and 1989. Southern Bell moves to dismiss Plaintiffs' claim on the ground that Plaintiffs ordered IWMS prior to 1982, when the service was included in the basic telephone package and therefore purchased by all of Southern Bell's telephone consumers.

In paragraph 13 of the First Amended Complaint, Plaintiffs allege that, in 1982, the Florida Public Service Commission ordered Southern Bell to separate IWMS from its basic telephone package of telephone services and to "give consumers a choice of repair providers."³⁰ Construed in the light most favorable to Plaintiffs, this order terminated any existing contracts between Plaintiffs and Southern Bell for the provision of IWMS. Thus, Southern Bell was required to solicit new contracts for the service after 1982. Southern Bell's failure to include the warning on its post-1982 solicitations could therefore constitute a violation of section 817.061.

[*74] Southern Bell contends, however, that its 1988 and 1989 merely announced price increases and therefore did not constitute solicitations for services not yet ordered. Modification of a material term in a contract amounts to the formation of a separate contract. Fla.Jur.2d § 159. Price can be a material term. Thus, Southern Bell's 1988 and 1989 notification of price increases may have amounted to offers to form whole new contracts. Until Plaintiffs accepted those offers, the services offered had not been ordered or performed. Southern Bell was therefore obligated to include the section 817.061 warning in these offers.

²⁶ First Amended Complaint at P 87.

²⁷ Id. at P 88.

²⁸ Id. at P 91.

²⁹ Id. at P 92.

³⁰ First Amended Complaint at 13.

Based on the foregoing, Southern Bell's motion to dismiss Count IX is denied.

3) Money Had And Received

In Count X, Plaintiffs assert a claim under the equitable of money had and received. The doctrine provides for the restitution of money to an aggrieved party by "one who has (the) money in his hands. . . . , which in equity and good conscience, he ought to pay over to that other." Moore Handley, Inc. v. Major Realty Corp., 340 1238, 1239 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1976). Plaintiffs allege that Southern Bell induced them to pay for IWMS by using the deceptive and [*75] coercive marketing and sales techniques discussed above and that Southern Bell therefore holds the money that they paid for the service inequitably. Plaintiffs demand restitution of that money.

Southern Bell moves to dismiss Plaintiffs' claim on the ground that it is duplicative of Plaintiffs' claim in Count XI for the restitution of monies paid under void or voidable contracts. Counts X and XI do request the same relief. The legal theories upon the respective requests are based are distinct. The Court declines to resolve the issue whether there are circumstances under which the contracts between Plaintiffs and Southern Bell for the provision of IWMS are valid, but under which it would be inequitable to allow Southern Bell to retain all or some of the monies paid to the company by Plaintiffs under those contracts. Southern Bell's motion to dismiss Count X is therefore denied.

4) Void Or Voidable Contracts.

In Count XI, Plaintiffs assert that their contracts with Southern Bell for the provision of IWMS are void or voidable and demand restitution of the monies they paid to Southern Bell pursuant to those contracts. Plaintiffs advance two theories in support of this position. First, [*76] Plaintiffs claim that Southern Bell's omitted some material terms from its contractual offers and misrepresented other material terms in those offers. Second, Plaintiffs contend that, even if the solicitations constitute valid offers, they never accepted these offers.

In its motion to dismiss, Southern Bell argues that both of these theories are inadequate. The company contends that none of the omitted terms Plaintiffs about which Plaintiffs complain are material, that its solicitations contained all of the material terms necessary to form a contract, and that it did not misrepresent any of those terms. The company also contends that Plaintiffs failed to decline IWMS and that their continued payment of their phone bills after receipt of its solicitations constitutes acceptance as a matter of law.

Plaintiffs theory of material misrepresentations and omissions is based on section 164 of the Restatement (Second) of Contracts. That section provides that:

(1) HN28[[↑]] If a party's manifestation of assent is induced by either a fraudulent or a material misrepresentation by the other party upon which the recipient is justified in relying, the contract is voidable by the recipient.

(2) If a [*77] party's manifestation of assent is induced by either a fraudulent or a material misrepresentation by one who is not a party to the transaction upon which the recipient is justified in relying, the contract is voidable by the recipient, unless the other party to the transaction in good faith and without reason to know of the misrepresentation either gives value or relies materially on the transaction.

Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 164. The question whether a particular misrepresentation or omission is material or fraudulent focuses on the defendant. The Restatement explains that:

HN29[[↑]] The materiality of misrepresentation is determined from the viewpoint of the maker, while the justification of reliance is determined from the viewpoint of the recipient. The requirement of materiality may be met in either of two ways. First, a misrepresentation is material if it would be likely to induce a reasonable to manifest his assent. Second, it is material if the maker knows that for some special reason it is likely to induce the particular recipient to manifest his assent.

Id. at § 162, comment c.

In the present case, Plaintiffs allege that Southern Bell omitted numerous items [*78] of material information, including that the IWMS plan did not include repairs to telephone sets or cords, that a substantial "trouble location" charge would be imposed in the event that the problem reported by a customer was in the customer's telephone set, not in the inside wire, and that subscribers would be billed for an additional inside wire maintenance charge for each additional telephone access line in their homes or businesses.³¹ The Court believes that a reasonable person could find these omissions to be material. Accordingly, dismissal of Plaintiffs' material omissions and misrepresentations theory would be inappropriate.

Dismissal of Plaintiffs' non-acceptance theory would also be inappropriate. It is well established that, HN30[ under certain circumstances, silence or inaction can constitute acceptance of a contractual offer. See Robert A. Lord, 2 Williston On Contracts § 6:52, 5th Ed. (1993) ("Williston # 1"). It is equally clear, however, that inaction does not always [*79] constitute acceptance. In particular, where the offeree does not intend his inaction to operate as an acceptance, it does not. Williston explains that:

When an offer has been made to an offeree who remains silent, the silence may be due to a variety of causes. The offeree may have made a mental determination to reject the offer or to accept it; or he may have made no determination with respect to the offer whatsoever. It is clear that, whatever the offeree may be thinking, no contract can be made unless the offer stated that the offeror would assume assent in the case the offeree did not reply, or the offeror in some other manner has led the offeree to believe that he may accept by remaining silent. Even under those circumstances, the offeree's silence is ambiguous and may be shown not to have been intended as an assent to the offeree's proposal; the offeror cannot merely by indicating that he will take silence to mean assent, cast the burden to speak on the offeree, and the offeree may keep silent if he chooses without becoming liable on the express contract.

Id. (emphasis added).

In the present case, the fact that Plaintiffs continued to pay their telephone bills [*80] after receipt of Southern Bell's solicitations regarding IWMS is as consistent with Southern Bell's allegation that they intended to accept the company's offers as it is with Plaintiffs' allegation that they did not intend to accept. Many of Plaintiffs might not have read, or understood, Southern Bell's solicitations and thus not have even known of the company's offers. They certainly could not have intended to accept the offers without knowledge of these offers. The Court therefore does not find as a matter of law that Plaintiffs' continued payment of their phone bills constituted acceptance.

Based on the foregoing, Southern Bell's motion to dismiss Count XI is denied.

5) Breach Of The Implied Duty Of Good Faith And Fair Dealing

In Count XII, Plaintiffs contend that Southern Bell breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing created by the contracts between the parties. HN31 The covenant "imposes upon each party the duty to do nothing destructive of the other party's right to enjoy the fruits of the contract and to do everything that the contract presupposes they will do to accomplish its purpose." [Scheck v. Burger King Corp., 798 F. Supp. 692, 694 n.5 \(S.D.Fla. 1992\) [*81] (quoting Conoco, Inc. v. Inman Oil Co., 774 F.2d 895, 908 \(8th Cir. 1985\)).

Southern Bell moves to dismiss this claim on the ground that Florida does not recognize an independent cause of action for breach of the implied duty of good faith and fair dealing. Florida does recognize such a cause of action, however. Burger King Corp. v. Austin, 805 F. Supp. 1007, 1013 \(1992\); Scheck, 798 F. Supp. at 695 (HN32[] "Florida law recognizes an independent cause of action for breach of this implied covenant of good faith."). Southern Bell's motion to dismiss Count XII is therefore denied.

By way of summary, it is hereby ORDERED and ADJUDGED that Southern Bell's motion to dismiss is DENIED with respect to Counts V, VI, IX, X, XI, and XII of the First Amended Complaint and GRANTED with respect to Counts VII and VIII of the First Amended Complaint.

³¹ First Amended Complaint at P 37.

PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT ON CONTRACT AND STATE LAW STATUTORY CLAIMS

Plaintiffs move for entry of summary judgment in their favor with respect to their solicitation and restitution claims--Counts IX and XI, respectively.

1) Count XI--Restitution

[*82] In support of their motion for summary judgment as to Count XI, Plaintiffs assert that the undisputed facts demonstrate that the contracts between Plaintiffs and Southern Bell in 1987, 1988, and 1989 for the provision of IWMS are void or voidable. Plaintiffs contend that the contracts formed pursuant to Southern Bell's 1987 solicitations are void because those solicitations promised that Southern Bell would not increase the price of IWMS and failed to disclose three essential terms, including: 1) that the price of IWMS would increase; 2) the amount of any increase; and 3) that Southern Bell reserved the right to increase price via negative-option notice. Alternatively, it is Plaintiffs' position that Southern Bell terminated or breached these contracts when it increased prices for IWMS in 1988 and 1989.

Further, Plaintiffs take the position that the contracts formed pursuant to the 1988 and 1989 price increase notifications are also voidable because Southern Bell failed to secure express customer assent to these increases. More specifically, Plaintiffs state that the 1988 and 1989 notifications either constituted new contractual offers, or that the notifications constituted offers [*83] to modify the existing IWMS contracts. Under either circumstance, Plaintiffs contend that they never accepted those offers.

Southern Bell presents several responses to Plaintiffs' claims. Southern Bell: 1) urges the Court to defer ruling on Plaintiffs' motion pending resolution of the issues concerning class certification and resolution of its motion for summary judgment with respect to Plaintiffs' antitrust claims; 2) contends that its failure to reserve the right to increase the price of IWMS unilaterally was not a material omission; and 3) asserts that there is at least an issue of material fact concerning whether Plaintiffs accepted its 1988 and 1989 solicitations.

The Court has resolved Southern Bell's motion for summary judgment and certified two classes in an Order dated December 23, 1993. The Court declines to postpone consideration of Plaintiffs' motion pending final resolution of Southern Bell's motions to reconsider aspects of the December 23, 1993 Order.

The 1987 Solicitations

The Court also declines to find as a matter of law that the omissions from the 1987 solicitations were material. Plaintiffs have cited no authority indicating that the failure to disclose the reservation [*84] of a right to increase price via notice constitutes a material omission as a matter of law. Further, whether Southern Bell intended its 1988 price notification to terminate or modify the contracts formed pursuant to the 1987 solicitations bears importantly on the question whether the omissions in the 1987 solicitations were material. Southern Bell's promise in the 1987 solicitation to refrain from price increases was implicitly limited to the duration of the contract. The 1987 solicitations contained no such language. Therefore, the contracts formed pursuant to those solicitations were terminable at will under Florida law. Malver v. Sheffield Indus., Inc., 462 So. 2d 567, 568 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1985). If Southern Bell intended the 1988 notification to terminate, not modify, the 1987 contracts, then Southern Bell's failure to reserve its right to modify those contracts through price increases does not appear to be material. The questions whether Southern Bell had this intent and whether the 1988 notification terminated or modified the 1987 contracts must be resolved by the fact finder.

The 1988 and 1989 Solicitations

Questions of material [*85] fact also exist with respect to the 1988 and 1989 solicitations. The parties have produced conflicting evidence concerning both whether those solicitations contained material omissions and misrepresentations and whether Plaintiffs treated the solicitations as contractual offers and accepted them.

The Court reviewed Plaintiffs' evidence concerning misrepresentations and omissions in the 1988 and 1989 solicitations. See pp. 17-19, supra. Southern Bell has submitted some counter-evidence, however. Court Lantaff, Southern Bell's Assistant Vice President for Corporate and External Affairs, testified in deposition that Southern Bell took steps to draw customer attention to the 1988 and 1989 price notifications.³² Mr. Lantaff testified, for example, that Southern Bell placed the words "important notice" in bold type immediately above the notice and surrounded the notice with a box of dots to draw customer attention to the notice.³³

[*86] Southern Bell also submitted the affidavit of Ms. Elaine Silverstein, an expert in advertising techniques, who testified that the placement of the notification on a separate page further highlighted it.³⁴ Ms. Silverstein also stated that consumers are especially sensitive to price increases and that placement of the notice in the middle of the bill would therefore not have had a significant impact on consumers awareness of the notice.³⁵ While the Court has some concern about the probative value of Southern Bell's evidence, the evidence is sufficient to raise a question of fact concerning whether Southern Bell made material misrepresentations or omissions in its 1988 and 1989 price increase offers.

There are also questions of material fact concerning whether Plaintiffs accepted those offers. Southern Bell has emphasized that Plaintiffs continued to pay their bills after receipt of the offers. Plaintiffs do not [*87] dispute this. This fact is sufficient to raise a question whether Plaintiffs intended to accept the 1988 and 1989 offers.

In accordance with the foregoing, Plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment as to Count XI is denied.

2) Solicitation

Plaintiffs also move for summary judgment on their claim in Count IX under section 817.061. As noted above, that section requires a corporation, among others, to include along with each written solicitation sent to each consumer for services not yet ordered and not yet performed a warning indicating that the consumer is under no obligation to purchase the services. Plaintiffs contend that, as of 1988 and 1989, they had not ordered IWMS and that Southern Bell was therefore obligated to include the warning in the price notifications of those years. It is undisputed that Southern Bell did not include the warning in those notifications.

Southern Bell responds that Plaintiffs had been ordered IWMS as of 1988 and 1989. More specifically, according to Southern Bell, valid contracts had been formed with Plaintiffs and that the 1988 and 1989 notifications only sought to modify those contracts. Southern Bell concludes that it was not obligated to include [*88] the warning in the 1988 and 1989 solicitations.

The issue turns on the status of the contracts alleged to have been formed between Plaintiffs and Southern Bell prior to 1988. If those contracts were valid as of 1988 and 1989 and Southern Bell's 1988 price notification did not terminate them, then Plaintiffs had ordered the services covered by the 1988 and 1989 notifications and Southern Bell was not obligated to include the statutory warning. If, on the other hand, the contracts were not valid as of 1988, or if Southern Bell terminated those contracts via its 1988 price notification, then the services covered by the 1988 and 1989 notifications had not been ordered and Southern Bell was obligated to include the statutory warning.

The preceding section demonstrates that there are questions of material fact concerning whether the contracts purportedly formed by the 1987 solicitation were valid and, if so, whether Southern Bell's 1988 price increase either terminated or modified those contracts. Accordingly, the Court declines to grant Plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment as to their solicitation claim.

³² See Exhibit 10 to Southern Bell's Response.

³³ Id. at pp. 112.

³⁴ Exhibit B to Southern Bell's Response, Affidavit of Elaine Silverstein at P 7.

³⁵ Id.

Based on the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED and ADJUDGED that Plaintiffs' motion [*89] for summary judgment on contract and state law statutory claims is DENIED.

SOUTHERN BELL'S MOTION FOR PARTIAL RECONSIDERATION OF ORDER CERTIFYING CLASS AS TO CERTAIN SUBSTANTIVE ISSUES

Southern Bell requests the Court to reconsider its Order of December 23, 1993. That Order certified two Plaintiff classes with respect to Plaintiffs claims in Counts I-IX and single class with respect to Plaintiffs claims in Counts X-XII.³⁶ Southern Bell concedes that class action treatment of the claims in Counts I-IV--the antitrust claims--is appropriate, but requests decertification of the classes certified with respect to the other counts.

1) Florida RICO claims

In Counts V-VIII, Plaintiffs assert claims under sections 772.103\(1\)-\(3\) of Florida's RICO statute and seek damages pursuant to section 772.104. Southern Bell objects to the classes certified with respect to these claims for three reasons. [*90] First, Southern Bell objects to the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) class on the ground that individual issues predominate over issues common to the class. Second, Southern Bell objects to the Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) class on the ground that Plaintiffs seek primarily damages and that certification of an injunctive class is therefore appropriate. Finally, Southern Bell contends that certification of the Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) violates its right to a jury trial on each of the elements of liability.

The first of these objections is the most important. Southern Bell contends that individual issues regarding proof of the predicate acts necessary to show a RICO violation, of reliance, and of damages predominate over issues common to the class. The Court notes that HN33[↑] the presence of individual questions concerning reliance and damages does not preclude the treatment of issues related to liability on a class basis. The Court can simply sever trial of the issues of liability from trial of the issues of reliance and damages. Entin v. Barg, 60 F.R.D. 108, 112-113 \(E.D. Pa. 1973\) ("Indeed, the weight of authority is that variations in the manner of reliance do not defeat the class action, and if reliance [*91] is prerequisite to recovery, it may properly be the subject of a separate trial, as is common in bifurcated trials on liability and damages."); Green v. Wolf Corp., 406 F.2d 291, 301 \(2d Cir. 1968\) ("We see no reason why the trial court, if it determines individual reliance is an essential element of the proof, cannot order separate trials on that particular issue, as on the question of damages, if necessary. The effective administration of Rule 23\(b\)\(3\) will often require the use of the 'sensible device' of split trials."). Trial of liability can proceed along with trial of the other claims in the action. In the event that Plaintiffs prevail on the liability issues, the Court can then conduct separate proceedings to resolve the issues related to reliance and damages. The Court can utilize a special master or magistrate to expedite these proceedings if necessary. Newberg at § 4.26 ("Courts have substantially reduced judicial burdens of resolving individual damage issues through various devices such as bifurcated trials of liability and damage issues with the same or different juries; use of masters or magistrates to preside over individual damages proceedings; [*92] class decertification after liability trial accompanied by notice to the class concerning how they may proceed to prove individual damages. . . .").

The issue whether Plaintiffs' RICO claims are appropriate for class treatment thus turns on the question whether the issues related to liability are suitable for class treatment. In connection with each of these claims, Plaintiffs assert that Southern Bell engaged in a pattern of criminal activity. HN34[↑] In order to prove this, Plaintiffs must prove that Southern Bell engaged in at least two incidents of criminal activity that had the same or similar intents, results, accomplices, victims or methods of commission. Fla.Stat.Ann. 772.102\(4\). The latest incident must fall within no more than five years of at least one other incident. Id. These incidents form the so-called "predicate acts".

Plaintiffs allege as predicate acts that Southern Bell's 1987 written solicitations in 1987, 1988, and 1989, in addition to its various oral misrepresentations, violated sections 817.06, 817.40, and 817.41 of the Florida Statutes. HN35[↑] Those sections prohibit misleading advertising and require a plaintiffs to satisfy the elements of common law criminal fraud. [*93]³⁷ These elements include: 1) a false statement of material fact; 2) known by the defendant to be false at the time it was made; and 3) made for the purpose of inducing the plaintiff to act in reliance thereon. Vance v. Indian Hammock Hunt & Riding, Ltd., 403 So. 2d 1367 (Fla. 4th Dist. Ct. App. 1981). The elements of fraud thus all focus on the conduct and state of mind of the defendant.

³⁶ As noted, Counts I-IX contain Plaintiffs' antitrust claims, while Counts V-XII contain Plaintiffs' other state law claims.

The question whether a claim based in fraudulent misrepresentations is appropriate for class action treatment turns on the degree of similarity between the representations made [*94] to the individual class members, however. The Advisory Committee Official Note to the 1966 Amendment to Rule 23 explains that:

HN36[] [A] fraud perpetrated on numerous persons by the use of similar misrepresentations may be an appealing situation for a class action, and it may remain so despite the need, if liability is found, for a separate determination of damages suffered by individuals within the class. On the other hand, although having a common core, a fraud case may be unsuited for treatment for a class action if there was material variation in the representations made or in the kinds or degrees of reliance by the persons to whom they were addressed.

Fed.R.Civ.Pro. 23, Advisory Committee's Official Note, 39 F.R.D. 98, 107 \(1966\). HN37[] Written misrepresentations disseminated to all of the members of the class have often been held to be sufficiently similar. See, e.g., Heastie v. Community Bank, 125 F.R.D. 669 (N.D.Ill. 1989).

In contrast, oral misrepresentations have generally been held to be insufficiently similar to warrant class treatment. Kaser v. Swann, 141 F.R.D. 337, 339 (Fla. 1991). [*95] The same has generally been true of cases involving a mix of oral and written misrepresentations. Id. In mixed cases, however, class treatment is appropriate where the plaintiff can demonstrate that no material variation existed among the oral statements made to class members and between the oral and written statements. See Kirkpatrick v. Bradford, 827 F.2d 718, 724 (11th Cir. 1987) (class treatment of securities fraud claims appropriate where court found that no material variation between oral representations to named plaintiffs and written information alleged to have been disseminated to entire class); Grainger v. State Sec. Life Ins. Co., 547 F.2d 303, 307 (5th Cir. 1977) ("the key concept in determining the propriety of class action treatment is the existence or nonexistence of material variations in the alleged misrepresentations. It is possible . . . that oral misrepresentations can be uniform, e.g., through the use of a standardized sales pitch by all the company's salesmen. Plaintiffs in the present case should be given the opportunity to demonstrate the existence and use of such device.").

In the present [*96] case, Plaintiffs allege that no material variation existed between the written and oral representations made to the class members because the oral representations were made using standardized written scripts. In order to prove that the representations were sufficiently similar to warrant class treatment, Plaintiffs need only demonstrate that: 1) there was no material variation among any oral representations made to the class representatives and 2) Southern Bell's sales representatives utilized a standardized script to sell IWMS orally. See Kirkpatrick, 827 F.2d at 724; Grainger, 547 F.2d at 307. The Court is not aware of any evidence detailing the contents of the scripts. Accordingly, the Court will conduct a hearing on Friday, February 4, 1994, at which Plaintiffs shall present evidence concerning any similarity among the oral representations and between the oral and written representations. The Court will defer ruling on Southern Bell's motion for reconsideration with respect to Plaintiffs' RICO claims pending the completion of this hearing.

Southern Bell's second two arguments in support of its motion for reconsideration [*97] are meritless. In its Order of December 23, 1993, the Court noted that certification of both an injunctive class and a damages class is appropriate where both damages and injunctive relief are important components of the relief requested. See, e.g., Waldrup v. Motorola, Inc., 85 F.R.D. 349 (N.D.Ga. 1980). Both damages and injunctive relief are important aspects of the relief requested in the present case. The Court therefore declines to decertify the Rule 23\(b\)\(2\) classes certified in the December 23, 1993 Order.

³⁷ Florida RICO provides civil remedies for criminal violations. Thus, proof of the predicate acts requires proof that the defendant engaged in a criminal violation. As a result, Plaintiffs need not prove reliance and damages in order to complete proof of the alleged predicate acts. Once Plaintiffs have completed proof of these acts, Plaintiffs must prove reliance and damages in order to recover under section 772.104.

Southern Bell's argument that certification violates the company's Seventh Amendment right to a jury trial is both untimely and meritless. Southern Bell had the opportunity to raise the argument in its response to Plaintiffs motion for class certification and failed to do so. As another district court explained:

This argument appears for the first time in [the] motion to reconsider. Why they did not include [this argument in the original brief] is not the Court's concern, but the Court will not "re-open" the matter now, much as an appellate court will not consider an argument not made at the trial level. . . . The Court will not [*98] entertain continual new arguments and briefing.

Kelley v. Mid-America Racing Stables, Inc., 139 F.R.D. 405, 411-412 (W.D.Okl. 1990). The argument is also inconsistent with the many cases holding that damages, for example, may be determined by a special master or magistrate. See, e.g., In re LILCO Sec. Lit., 111 F.R.D. 663 (E.D.N.Y. 1986); In re Corrugated Container Antitrust Lit., 80 F.R.D. 244 (N.D.Tex. 1978). The Court therefore declines to decertify the existing classes on this ground.

2) Restitution

As noted above, Plaintiffs contend that the contracts between them and Southern Bell covering IWMS are void or voidable. They advance two distinct theories in support of this contention.

Southern Bell again requests decertification on the ground that individual issues predominate, that the primary relief requested is monetary, not injunctive, and that certification violates Southern Bell's Seventh Amendment right to a jury trial. The Court disposed of the latter two contentions on page 74-75. There is no need to repeat that analysis here.³⁸

[*99] Southern Bell contends that individual issues predominate because the representations varied from class member to class member and because the issues of reliance and damages require individual proof. As noted above, the Court can defer resolution of the issues of reliance and damages pending the completion of trial on the issues of liability.

The Court must assess the question whether individual issues predominate with respect to the liability issues presented by each of Plaintiffs' theories. Plaintiffs' theory of material misrepresentations and omissions is based on section 164 of the Restatement (Second) of Contracts. Under the Restatement, the inquiry whether a particular misrepresentation or omission was fraudulent or material focuses on the conduct and state of mind of the defendant.³⁹ Thus, to the extent that Plaintiffs can demonstrate that there was no material variation among the oral representations made to the class members and between the oral representations and the written representations to them, the liability questions connected with this theory are suitable for class treatment. The Court defers on this issue until after the February 4, 1994 hearing.

[*100] Plaintiffs also contend that the IWMS contracts are void because they never accepted Southern Bell's contractual offers. The viability of Plaintiffs' non-acceptance theory depends on whether Plaintiffs intended silence, coupled with the regular payment of their phone bills, to constitute acceptance. These issues thus focus on the individual class members' states of mind and are therefore not susceptible to class-wide proof. Plaintiffs' restitution claim is therefore decertified with respect to this theory only.

³⁸ Southern Bell also raises its Seventh Amendment argument in connection with Counts X-XII. The Court rejects the argument in connection with each of those counts for the reasons specified in the preceding section.

³⁹ The Court notes that, consistent with the language of the Restatement, Florida does not require a showing of fraud in order to recover under a restitution theory. Circle Finance Co. v. Peacock, 399 So. 2d 81, 84 (Fla. 1st Dist. Ct. App. 1981). Instead, the plaintiffs need only show that the misrepresentation or omission at issue was material. Moreover, once the plaintiff has proved this, the plaintiff is entitled to a presumption of reliance. Sollenbarger, 121 F.R.D. at 434. This presumption arises in the case of both omissions and misrepresentations. See Williston # 2 ("Where representations have been made in regard to a material matter and action has been taken, in the absence of evidence showing the contrary, it will be presumed that the representations were relied on.") (emphasis added).

3) Solicitation

As discussed above, the viability of Plaintiffs' solicitation claim in Count IX turns on whether Plaintiffs ordered IWMS prior to each of Southern Bell's solicitations. This question, in turn, depends on whether valid contracts were formed prior to each of these solicitations. Thus, the suitability of the solicitation claim for class treatment depends on the suitability of the restitution claim for such treatment. Resolution of the question whether the restitution claim is suitable for class treatment must await completion of February 4, 1994 hearing.

4) Money Had And Received

The viability of Plaintiffs' claim in Count X for money had and received [101] turns on whether Southern Bell received monies for IWMS from Plaintiffs inequitably. The suitability of the claim for class treatment therefore depends on whether Southern Bell behaved in the same manner with respect to all of the class members; more specifically, whether or not the representations Southern Bell made to Plaintiffs concerning IWMS varied materially from class member to class member. The Court defers ruling on this issue until after the February 4, 1994 hearing.

5) Breach Of The Duty Of Good Faith And Fair Dealing

In Count XII, Plaintiffs allege that Southern Bell breached its implied duty of good faith and fair dealing by, for example, impeding customer efforts to cancel their subscriptions to IWMS. The ways in which Southern Bell went about this appear to have varied considerably from class member to class member. The Court will afford Plaintiffs the opportunity at the February 4, 1994 hearing to demonstrate that no such material variance existed. The Court therefore defers ruling on the propriety of class certification with respect to Count XII until after the February 4, 1991 hearing.

Based on the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED and ADJUDGED that Southern Bell's [102] motion for partial reconsideration of order certifying class as to certain substantive issues is GRANTED in part. Plaintiffs' non-acceptance theory in Count XI is hereby decertified. The Court DEFERS ruling on the remaining aspects of the motion pending a hearing to be held on February 4, 1994 on the suitability of the liability issues in Counts V-XII for class treatment and will thereafter enter appropriate orders concerning the structure of further proceedings.

PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO STRIKE AND ALTERNATIVE MOTION TO DISMISS DEFENDANT'S COUNTERCLAIM

On January 14, 1994, Southern Bell filed a Counterclaim against unnamed members of the class who received services under their IWMS plans. Southern Bell subsequently filed a set of forty-two volumes containing the names of the Counterclaim Defendants.

In Count I of the Counterclaim, Southern Bell alleges that it is entitled to receive the value of services rendered to customers who contacted the phone company, requested IWMS plan services, and accepted the benefit of those services. In Count II, Southern Bell seeks the return of all monies previously paid to specific class members at their request as a refund of fees paid under the IWMS [103] plans.

Plaintiffs move to strike or, in the alternative, to dismiss Southern Bell's Counterclaim on the following five grounds: 1) the Counterclaim violates the Court's pretrial Orders; 2) the Counterclaim is untimely because Southern Bell was required to serve the Counterclaim with its Answer; 3) the Counterclaim Defendants--absent class members--are not parties within the meaning of Rule 13 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure; 4) the Counterclaim is premature; and 5) the Counterclaim does not state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

Plaintiffs contend that the Counterclaim violates the Court's pretrial orders and is untimely because the Court's pretrial Orders in 1992 and 1993 put Southern Bell on notice that it should promptly file any additional claims. Plaintiffs rely, in particular, on the Court's Orders of July 27, 1992, June 10, 1993, and November 1, 1993. The July 27, 1993 Order directed the parties' to submit reports concerning additional discovery required and set a cut-off date for the filing of dispositive motions. The June 10, 1993 Order set the dates for the Pretrial Conference and the trial. The November 1, 1993 Order set the date for the discovery cutoff. [*104] None of these Orders obligated the parties to file additional claims by a date certain. Thus, these Orders do not render Southern Bell's Counterclaim untimely.⁴⁰

Plaintiffs also contends that the Counterclaim is untimely because Southern Bell was required to file the Counterclaim with its Answer. Southern Bell's Answer was directed at Plaintiffs' antitrust claims only. Southern Bell has not answered Plaintiffs state law claims in Counts V-XII. Moreover, prior to the issuance of this Order, Southern Bell was under no obligation to answer those claims, or to assert its counterclaims, due to the pendency of its motion to dismiss those claims.⁴¹ United States v. Snider, 779 F.2d 1151, 1157 \(6th Cir. 1985\) (HN38↑) "Until the motion to dismiss is ruled upon it is not known whether the plaintiff has a claim. Without a valid claim, there can be no counterclaim, compulsory or permissive. A motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12\(b\) [*105] . . . is not a pleading as defined in Rule 7. There is no reason for a party to file a pleading while a motion to dismiss is pending."). Southern Bell's Counterclaim is timely.

Plaintiffs also contend that the Counterclaim Defendants, as absent class members, are not "parties" within the meaning of Rule 13\(a\)--the federal rule governing compulsory counterclaims. Plaintiffs conclude that Rule 13\(a\) does not apply to Southern Bell's Counterclaim and that the Counterclaim therefore cannot be compulsory. As its Counterclaim is permissive, Southern Bell is obligated to demonstrate that there is some independent basis for federal jurisdiction over the Counterclaim. East-Bibb Twiggs Neighborhood Association v. Macon Bibb Planning & Zoning Comm., 888 F.2d 1576 \(11th Cir. 1989\). Since there is no independent basis for jurisdiction, Plaintiffs [*106] conclude that the Court must dismiss the Counterclaim.

The authorities are divided on the question whether absent class members are parties within the meaning of Rule 13\(a\). Compare Nat'l Super Spuds, Inc. v. New York Mercantile Exchange, 75 F.R.D. 40 \(S.D.N.Y. 1977\) (HN39↑) absent class members are parties within the meaning of Rule 13, with Dennis v. Saks & Co., 1975 Trade Cases 60396 (absent class members are not parties for purposes of Rule 13). The Court acknowledges the authority supporting the proposition that absent class members are not parties, but finds that the contrary rule is the better reasoned. While permitting Southern Bell to bring a counterclaim against absent class members may increase the opt-out rate, and thus undercut the purposes underlying Rule 23, it is only fair to require those who may benefit from a lawsuit to undertake some of its risks. As one court explained:

those who choose to join in a lawsuit assert claims against a defendant must be prepared to accept the legal risks and consequences of their voluntary choice. In stark and simple terms, one who throws a punch ought to be ready to receive [*107] one in return.

Hermann v. Atlantic Richfield Co., 72 F.R.D. 182, 186 \(W.D.Pa. 1976\). Accordingly, the Court concludes that Rule 13 applies to Southern Bell's Counterclaim.

The next question is whether the Counterclaim is compulsory. In this circuit, a counterclaim is compulsory when there is a logical relationship between the counterclaim and the plaintiff's claims. Republic Health Corp. v. Lifemark Hospitals of Fla., Inc., 755 F.2d 1453, 1455 \(11th Cir. 1985\). Such a relationship exists when the same operative core of facts serve as the basis for both the plaintiff's claims and for the defendant's counterclaim. Id.

In the present case, both Plaintiffs' claims and Southern Bell's Counterclaim arise out of the circumstances under which Southern Bell provided, and Plaintiffs received, the IWMS service plan and the actual rendition of services thereunder. The claims thus all arise out of the same operative core of facts. Southern Bell's Counterclaim is therefore compulsory.

⁴⁰ The Court will not entertain any further claims by any party.

⁴¹ That motion has now been resolved and Southern Bell is obligated to file its answer to those claims in accordance with the time frame set out in Rule 12.

Plaintiffs object to the Counterclaim as premature, however. In particular, Plaintiffs contend that the viability of the Counterclaim turns of [*108] whether Plaintiffs prevail on their contract claims at trial. If Plaintiffs do not succeed in demonstrating that their contracts with Southern Bell are void or voidable, then Southern Bell will have no basis upon which to demand repayment for services rendered under those contracts.

The Court does not agree that the uncertainty of the outcome of this litigation renders the Counterclaim premature. The Counterclaim, like Plaintiffs claims, is based on events that occurred prior to trial. The uncertainty associated with the outcome of the litigation in which a claim is brought generally does not render the claim contingent and therefore does not prevent assertion of the claim.

The relationship between the Counterclaim and Plaintiffs' claims affects the timing and manner in which the Court will address the claim, however. As noted, Southern Bell asserts in the Counterclaim that certain individual class members received inside wire repairs pursuant to their IWMS plans and demands repayment for these plans. Whether, and under what circumstances, these class members received these repairs bears on whether the class members accepted Southern Bell's contract offers, whether the class members [*109] relied on Southern Bell's representations concerning IWMS, and whether the class members are entitled to damages in the full amount that they paid for IWMS. The Court has already determined that these issues are not appropriate for class treatment. In the event that it retains class certification on issues related to the nature and materiality of Southern Bell's misrepresentations and omissions, it will defer resolution of the issues of acceptance, reliance, and damages until after the trial of the issues subject to class-wide proof. The Court will also defer resolution of the Counterclaim pending the completion of the trial on the class-wide issues. See Donson Stores, Inc. v. American Bakeries Co., 58 F.R.D. 485, 489-490 \(S.D.N.Y. 1973\) ("If liability is established, other issues, including damages and counterclaims, can be handled on a class member-by-class member basis.").

Plaintiffs contend that the Court need not consider the Counterclaim in such proceedings, however, because the Counterclaim does not state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Plaintiffs advance the following four arguments in support of their motion: 1) Southern Bell has failed [*110] to identify the Counterclaim Defendants; 2) Southern Bell's claim for recovery under its quantum meruit is premature because it turns on whether the contracts between the parties for the provision of IWMS are valid; 3) Southern Bell's allegations that it "voluntarily repaid" amounts charged for IWMS upon customer demand are insufficient, without further allegations, to support a claim for unjust enrichment; and 4) Southern Bell's demand in Count II for the repayment of monies refunded to customers is not an independent claim, but rather an argument for the mitigation of damages.

Plaintiffs' first argument is moot as Southern Bell recently filed a set of 42 volumes containing the names of the Counterclaim Defendants. The Court rejected Plaintiffs' argument concerning the alleged prematurity of Southern Bell's Counterclaim above. Moreover, the fact that Southern Bell has failed to mention quantum meruit specifically in Count I does not warrant dismissal of the count. Southern Bell has alleged that it has performed services which the Counterclaim Defendants received and accepted. That is all that is required to state a claim for quantum meruit or unjust enrichment. See Challenge Air Transport, Inc. v. Transportes Aereos Nacionales, S.A., 520 So. 2d 323 (Fla. 3d Dist. Ct. App. 1988). [*111] The allegations include sufficient factual detail to put on notice of the basis of the claim and thus satisfy the requirements of Rule 8. See Fed.R.Civ.Pro. 8.

The Court need not address Plaintiffs' argument that the allegations in Count II are insufficient to state a claim, as the Court finds that Count II does not represent an independent claim. In the event that Plaintiffs' prevail on their contract claims at trial, they will be entitled to damages in the amount of the monies that they paid for IWMS. Southern Bell's claim for repayment of the amounts that it refunded prior to any judgment cannot exceed the amount that Plaintiffs paid. Thus, Plaintiffs will not be obligated to pay Southern Bell money even if Southern Bell prevails on Count II. Rather, the amounts due Southern Bell under Count II will simply be deducted from the amounts Southern Bell owes to Plaintiffs. As a result, Count II merely represents an argument for the mitigation of damages, not an independent claim.

Based on the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED and ADJUDGED that Plaintiffs' motion to strike is DENIED. Plaintiffs motion to dismiss is DENIED with respect to Count I of the Counterclaim and GRANTED with [*112] respect to Count II of the Counterclaim.

It is further ORDERED and ADJUDGED that:

- 1) Southern Bell's Motion To Dismiss Or Alternatively, For Partial Summary Judgment As To The State's Complaint In Intervention is GRANTED in part and DENIED in part. The Court applies all of its rulings in this Order and its Order of February 4, 1991 to the State's Complaint in Intervention. Therefore, summary judgment is entered in favor of Southern Bell with respect to Counts II and IV of the State's Complaint in Intervention and Counts VII and VIII are dismissed. Further, Southern Bell shall not be liable to the State on the basis of Counts I and III of the Complaint in Intervention for conduct prior to January 1, 1987.
- 2) Davis Plaintiffs' Motion For Reconsideration of This Court's Order Of February 4, 1991 is DENIED.
- 3) Southern Bell's Motion For Summary Judgment On Count IX (Section 817.061); Count X (Money Had And Received); and Count XII (Breach Of The Duty Of Good Faith) is STRICKEN as untimely.
- 4) Southern Bell's Motion For Summary Judgment On Counts V, VI, VII, And VIII As To The Individual Plaintiffs is STRICKEN as untimely.
- 5) Southern Bell's Motion For Partial Summary Judgment [*113] On Plaintiffs' Florida RICO Claims is STRICKEN as untimely.
- 6) Davis Plaintiffs' And The State Of Florida's Rule 56\(f\) Motion In Opposition To Southern Bell's Motion For Summary Judgment is DENIED.
- 7) Plaintiffs' Motion To Compel is DENIED, except as to those matters identified in the hearing held on January 14, 1994.
- 8) Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion For Order Permitting And Requiring The Completion Of Merits Discovery is DENIED.
- 9) The Attorney General Of Florida's Motion For Clarification Or Modification Of Order Regarding Confidential Documents is DENIED.
- 10) The Attorney General Of Florida's Motion For Modification Of Order Regarding Confidential Documents To Allow Access By The Florida Public Service Commission is DENIED.
- 11) The State Of Florida And Davis Plaintiffs' Motion For Continuance Of Trial is GRANTED. The Court will reset the trial date in a future order.
- 12) Plaintiffs' Motion In Limine is DENIED.
- 13) Plaintiffs' Emergency Motion To Strike Southern Bell's Motions For Summary Judgment is GRANTED. Southern Bell's motions were stricken as untimely above.
- 14) Southern Bell's Appeal Of Magistrate Palermo's November 4, 1993 Order Granting Plaintiffs' [*114] Motion To Compel is DENIED as moot. No further discovery beyond that authorized in the January 14, 1994 hearing is permitted.
- 15) Southern Bell's Motion For Protective Order Regarding Plaintiffs' November 29, 1993 Notice Of Depositions is DENIED as moot.
- 16) Southern Bell's Appeal Of Magistrate Palermo's November 24, 1993 Order Granting Plaintiffs' Motion For Expedited Treatment Of Its Emergency Motion And Emergency Motion For Order Requiring Southern Bell To Respond To Interrogatories And Request For Production, And To Produce Outstanding Documents On Or Before November 30, 1993 is DENIED as moot.

17) GTE's Motion To Quash is DENIED as moot.

18) Plaintiffs' Petition For Appeal From Order Of Magistrate Judge Palermo Dated October 27, 1993 On Southern Bell's Motion To Compel Expert Depositions And Production Of Documents is DENIED as moot.

19) Plaintiffs' Petition For Appeal From Order Of Magistrate Judge Palermo Dated October 27, 1993 On Southern Bell's Motion To Compel Expert Depositions And Production Of Documents is DENIED as moot.

20) Plaintiffs' Motion For Protective Order Prohibiting Southern Bell From Taking Depositions Of Named Plaintiffs Efron And Davis Listed [*115] On Southern Bell's November 23, 1993 Notice Of Deposition is DENIED as moot.

21) Plaintiffs' Motion For Protective Order is DENIED as moot.

22) Competitor's Motion To Compel Continued Depositions To Be Held Before Magistrate, And Limited, Pursuant To The Magistrate's Order, To Certain Competitors Responding To Matters Raised By Southern Bell's Motion To Compel is DENIED as moot.

23) Southern Bell's Motion To Compel Answers To Interrogatories is DENIED as moot.

24) Southern Bell's Motion To Compel Production Of Documents is DENIED as moot.

25) Southern Bell's Motion To Compel Weitzman & Phillip, Inc. To Produce Documents Pursuant To Subpoena Duces Tecum is DENIED as moot.

26) Southern Bell's Motion To Strike Affidavits And Portions Of Deposition Testimony Of Alleged Competitors is DENIED.

27) Southern Bell's Motion In Limine To Exclude Testimony Of Expert Witnesses is DENIED.

28) Southern Bell's Motion In Limine To Exclude Testimony Of Linda Davis And David Efron is DENIED.

29) Plaintiffs' Motion To Strike The Affidavit Of Elaine Silverstein is DENIED.

30) The State Of Florida And Davis Plaintiffs' Motion To Strike And Notice Of Objections is DENIED.

31) Southern [*116] Bell's Motion To Strike Prayer For Punitive Damages In Plaintiff/Intervenor's Complaint is GRANTED.

DONE and ORDERED, in chambers, Miami, Florida, this 1st day of February 1994.

LENORE C. NESBITT

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

Appraisers Coalition v. Appraisal Inst.

United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division

February 4, 1994, Decided ; February 7, 1994, Docketed

No. 93 C 913

Reporter

845 F. Supp. 592 *; 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1533 ; 1994-2 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,732

The APPRAISERS COALITION, ALAN B. BLAU, individually and d/b/a ALAN BLAU & ASSOCIATES, W.S. BUCKLEY, BUCKLEY APPRAISAL SERVICES, INC., VINCENT A. SOLANO, individually and d/b/a V.A. SOLANO & ASSOCIATES, Plaintiffs, v. APPRAISAL INSTITUTE, an Illinois corporation, THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF REAL ESTATE APPRAISERS, an Illinois corporation, and PATRICIA MARSHALL, BERNARD FOUNTAIN, DOUGLAS BROWN, C. DAVID MATTHEWS, CLIFFORD E. FISHER, JR., JOHN R. UNDERWOOD, JR., BRUCE R. WILLMETTE, BONNIE D. ROERIG, DAVID F. PEATFIELD, DONALD L. BURKE, NANCY M. MUELLER, GERALD A. TEEL, NORMAN E. HALL, JOE R. PRICE, LOUIE REESE III, and RITCH LE GRAND, Defendants.

Core Terms

designation, Appraisal, monopolization, Defendants', antitrust, amended complaint, allegations, motion to dismiss, advertisement, conspiracy, lawsuit, real estate, damages, associations, Counts, individual defendant, plaintiff's claim, anti trust law, defamation, membership, individual plaintiff, opinion of the court, non-residential, defamatory, conferred, promoting, cases, real estate appraiser, injunctive relief, Lanham Act

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Business & Corporate Law > Unincorporated Associations

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > General Overview

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > Lanham Act > Standing

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

HN1[] Business & Corporate Law, Unincorporated Associations

A claim of injury to an association itself is necessary to confer standing for a direct federal antitrust claim or for a direct Lanham Act claim.

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > General Overview

Trademark Law > ... > Remedies > Equitable Relief > General Overview

845 F. Supp. 592, *592L^A1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1533, 1533

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > Unincorporated Associations

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > Lanham Act > Standing

HN2 Justiciability, Standing

While associations are generally denied standing to sue for damages under the antitrust laws, the federal courts have permitted associations to maintain actions seeking injunctive relief on behalf of, and as the representative of, its members. Whether, and in what circumstances, it is permissible for an association to sue under the federal antitrust laws or under the Lanham Act is governed by a three part test established by the Supreme Court. An association has standing to bring suit on behalf of its members when (1) the members would otherwise have standing to sue for themselves; (2) the interests the association seeks to protect are germane to the organization's purpose; and (3) neither the claim asserted nor the relief requested requires the participation of individual members in the lawsuit.

Business & Corporate Law > Unincorporated Associations

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > General Overview

HN3 Business & Corporate Law, Unincorporated Associations

In considering the issue of associational standing on remand, the court's analysis must begin with a review of the benefits of associational standing. These benefits must be weighed against any deficiencies an association might have, including actual and potential conflicts. In addressing apparent conflicts, district courts should determine if other approaches less drastic than denying group standing will protect the interests of those whose position is not represented by the association, while affording the group and the judicial system as a whole the efficiencies identified in associational standing.

Business & Corporate Law > Unincorporated Associations

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > General Overview

HN4 Business & Corporate Law, Unincorporated Associations

The association asserting standing to bring suit on behalf of its members must seek to protect interests that are germane to the organization's purpose. This "germaneness" requirement has teeth only when a conflict of interests exists. Otherwise, the germaneness test requires only that an organization's litigation goals be pertinent to its special expertise and the grounds that bring its membership together.

Business & Corporate Law > Unincorporated Associations

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Responses > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss

HN5 Business & Corporate Law, Unincorporated Associations

Dismissal for lack of associational standing is only required when the lawsuit would require the participation of each member of the association.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > Unincorporated Associations

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

HN6[Private Actions, Remedies

The proof of antitrust injury necessary to federal antitrust claims may require individualized proof. That kind of proof is necessary in circumstances where complex factual issues exist that require evidence of actions taken against individual defendants. However, as analysis of the antitrust injury requirement indicates, not all antitrust cases necessarily require inquiry into complex factual issues to resolve the question of antitrust injury. In particular, where an antitrust claim attacks a policy or practice that is equally applicable and detrimental to all members of an association, such individualized proof is not necessary.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Remedies > Injunctions

Business & Corporate Law > Unincorporated Associations

Commercial Law (UCC) > Sales (Article 2) > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

HN7[Remedies, Injunctions

Antitrust plaintiffs seeking injunctive relief pursuant to § 16 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 18 et seq., must demonstrate the threat of an antitrust injury. An antitrust injury is an injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful. This requirement forces the parties and the court to reason closely about the nature of the antitrust violation alleged in order to test whether the injury and damages claimed by the plaintiff match the rationale for finding any violation in the first place and makes clear that injuries resulting from competition will not support either damage or equity actions by private parties under the antitrust laws.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

HN8[Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

845 F. Supp. 592, *592L^A 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1533, 1533

In order to prove monopolization, a plaintiff must prove that a given defendant has (1) possession of monopoly power in the relevant market, and (2) acquired and maintained that power apart from permissible competitive means such as growth, development of a superior product, business acumen or historic accident.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

HN9 [blue download icon] Monopolies & Monopolization, Attempts to Monopolize

To prove attempted monopolization, a plaintiff must show (1) that the defendant has engaged in predatory or anticompetitive conduct, with (2) a specific intent to monopolize, and (3) a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > Unincorporated Associations

HN10 [blue download icon] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Section 2 liability under the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq., may be imposed on an association that does not compete directly in its membership's market.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Inchoate Crimes > Conspiracy > Elements

Transportation Law > ... > Federal Powers > Powers of Congress > Substantial Relations

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Elements

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Inchoate Crimes > Conspiracy > General Overview

HN11 [blue download icon] Conspiracy to Monopolize, Sherman Act

To prove a conspiracy to monopolize, a plaintiff must prove (1) the existence of a combination or conspiracy, (2) overt acts in furtherance of the conspiracy, (3) an effect upon a substantial amount of interstate commerce, and (4) the existence of specific intent to monopolize. Unlike the proof required for monopolization or attempted monopolization, the proof required to demonstrate a conspiracy to monopolize does not require a proof of market power in a relevant market. Under the more permissive theory of § 2 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq., individuals who are incapable themselves of monopolizing a market, may be found liable under § 2 for intentionally joining others to do so.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

845 F. Supp. 592, *592L^A 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1533, 1533

Business & Corporate Law > ... > Directors & Officers > Management Duties & Liabilities > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Inchoate Crimes > Conspiracy > Elements

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > General Overview

HN12 [] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Generally, an agreement between a parent corporation and its wholly owned subsidiary cannot be concerted action for purposes of § 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq. Similarly, an agreement between officers or employees of the same firms does not constitute a § 1 conspiracy. The reasoning also applies to § 2 claims. However, there is an exception to that doctrine. A subsidiary, officer or employee of a corporation may be said to have conspired with a corporation when the subsidiary or individual has an independent interest in participating in the conspiracy. Although the independent interest exception has been limited, it must be considered to apply when an entity's agents or employees are direct competitors.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Per Se Rule Tests > Manifestly Anticompetitive Effects

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Practices Governed by Per Se Rule > Boycotts

HN13 [] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, prohibits every contract, combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade. Despite this broad language, however, only unreasonable restraints violate this section. A plaintiff may demonstrate that a particular restraint is unreasonable either by demonstrating that the restraint falls within a narrow set of per se unreasonable restraints, or by conducting a rule of reason analysis to show that the restraint's anticompetitive effects outweigh any redeeming virtues.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Practices Governed by Per Se Rule > Boycotts

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Horizontal Refusals to Deal > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN14 [] Practices Governed by Per Se Rule, Boycotts

Boycotts are among those limited restraints that are considered per se illegal. However, the Supreme Court's application of the per se rule to purported boycotts and concerted refusals to deal has been mixed. The Court has warned against over-zealous application of the doctrine and has stated that the rule should be applied only when the challenged practice threatens the proper operation of our predominantly free-market economy or when the challenged practice facially appears to be one that would always or almost always tend to restrict competition and decrease output.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

HN15[] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

In light of its increased concern over the applicability of the per se rule, the Supreme Court has been slow to condemn rules adopted by professional associations. This reluctance has been expressed by the Seventh Circuit with respect to both professional and trade associations. Typically, professional and trade associations' rules of exclusion or restriction are evaluated under the rule of reason.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Practices Governed by Per Se Rule > Boycotts

Securities Law > ... > Self-Regulating Entities > National Securities Exchanges > New York Stock Exchange

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Higher Education & Professional Associations > Professional Associations

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Horizontal Refusals to Deal > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Cartels & Horizontal Restraints > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Securities Law > ... > Self-Regulating Entities > National Securities Exchanges > General Overview

HN16[] Practices Governed by Per Se Rule, Boycotts

Although the per se rule for boycotts may apply to a trade association's membership requirements when membership in that trade association is necessary to compete effectively in the relevant market, application of the proposed rule often requires a court to beg the question of the reasonableness of the proposed restraint. Even then, in applying a per se analysis, courts are often forced to take a quick look at the reasonableness of the challenged restraint.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Horizontal Refusals to Deal > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

845 F. Supp. 592, *592L^A 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1533, 1533

HN17 [blue document icon] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Horizontal Refusals to Deal

The "quick look" is a means by which the per se rule and rule of reason have been collapsed. The "quick look" means that the court will first consider the justifications for the challenged restraint. A persuasive justification for an apparent illegal restraint may require further analysis which effectively converts a per se approach into a rule of reason analysis.

Mergers & Acquisitions Law > Antitrust > Antitrust Statutes > Clayton Act

Real Property Law > Property Valuations

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Scope

Mergers & Acquisitions Law > Antitrust > General Overview

Transportation Law > Private Vehicles > Odometers

HN18 [blue document icon] Antitrust Statutes, Clayton Act

Section 7 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 18 et seq., prohibits one corporation from acquiring another corporation where the effect of the merger may be substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly. Plaintiffs cannot state a claim under § 7 without notifying the defendants of the market said to be monopolized.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > Trade Dress Protection > Causes of Action

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > False Advertising > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > False Advertising > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > False Designation of Origin > Elements of False Designation of Origin

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > Trade Dress Protection > General Overview

HN19 [blue document icon] Trade Dress Protection, Causes of Action

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 1125\(a\).

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > False Designation of Origin > Elements of False Designation of Origin

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > Trade Dress Protection > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > False Advertising > General Overview

Trademark Law > ... > Unfair Competition > Federal Unfair Competition Law > General Overview

845 F. Supp. 592, *592L^A 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1533, 1533

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > False Advertising > General Overview

HN20 [blue icon] False Designation of Origin, Elements of False Designation of Origin

To state a claim for false advertising under § 43(a) of the Lanham Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1125\(a\), a plaintiff must allege that the defendants' advertisements were (1) false and misleading; (2) actually or likely to deceive a substantial segment of their audience; (3) material in their effects on purchasing decisions; (4) touting goods or services in interstate commerce; and, (5) likely to injure the plaintiff.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > False Advertising > General Overview

HN21 [blue icon] Consumer Protection, False Advertising

To state a claim for a Lanham Act violation, a plaintiff need not allege that the defendant's representations make direct comparisons to the plaintiff's product or even specifically mention the plaintiff's product.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Preliminary Considerations > Federal & State Interrelationships > Erie Doctrine

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Supplemental Jurisdiction > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Dismissal > Involuntary Dismissals > General Overview

HN22 [blue icon] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Since Illinois state courts are guided by the federal antitrust law where the wording of the state act is identical to a federal provision, the court treats the state antitrust law as it would federal law, and dismisses any state claims corresponding to federal antitrust claims which have been dismissed, and retains any state claims corresponding to retained federal claims. 740 Ill. Comp. Stat. 10/11.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > False Advertising > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Fraud Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > General Overview

HN23 [blue icon] Consumer Protection, False Advertising

The Illinois Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act (Act), 815 Ill. Comp. Stat. 505/1 et seq. (1993), purports to prohibit all unfair methods of competition, but has been restricted to deceptive practices. A violation of the Act based on misrepresentation or fraud must be pled with the particularity of Fed. R. Civ. P. 9\(b\).

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Damages > Special Damages

Torts > Intentional Torts > Defamation > Defamation Per Se

845 F. Supp. 592, *592I^A994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1533, 1533

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Heightened Pleading Requirements > Special Damages

Torts > Intentional Torts > Defamation > General Overview

Torts > ... > Defamation > Elements > General Overview

Torts > ... > Defamation > Remedies > General Overview

HN24 [↓] Damages, Special Damages

Where plaintiffs make no specific allegations with respect to their damages, only alleging only that defendants' statements injured their business reputations, these allegations are insufficient to state special damages. Plaintiffs must show per se defamation to proceed with a defamation claim.

Torts > Intentional Torts > Defamation > Defamation Per Se

Torts > Intentional Torts > Defamation > General Overview

HN25 [↓] Defamation, Defamation Per Se

A statement that imputes an inability to perform or want of integrity in the discharge of duties of office or employment is one of four categories of statements that are considered defamatory per se in Illinois.

Torts > Intentional Torts > Defamation > Defamation Per Se

Torts > Intentional Torts > Defamation > General Overview

HN26 [↓] Defamation, Defamation Per Se

The "innocent construction" rule is stated as follows: A written or oral statement is to be considered in context, with the words and the implications therefrom given their natural and obvious meaning; if, as so construed, the statement may reasonably be innocently interpreted or reasonably be interpreted as referring to someone other than the plaintiff it cannot be actionable per se.

Torts > Business Torts > Trade Libel > Elements

Torts > Business Torts > Trade Libel > General Overview

HN27 [↓] Trade Libel, Elements

To state an action for commercial disparagement, plaintiff must show that defendant made false and demeaning statements regarding the quality of another's goods and services.

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Prospective Advantage > General Overview

HN28[] Commercial Interference, Prospective Advantage

The elements of the common law tort of tortious interference are as follows: (1) the existence of a valid business expectancy; (2) knowledge of that expectancy by the interferer; (3) interference causing a termination of that expectancy; and (4) damages.

Counsel: [1] For Plaintiffs: Myron M. Cherry, Jeffrey Mark Wagner, CHERRY & FLYNN, Chicago, IL. Kenneth Frederick Levin, LAW OFFICES OF KENNETH F. LEVIN, CHTD., Lincolnwood, IL.

For Defendants: David B. Bayless, Gary L. Prior, David Michael Keller, David Marx, Mark W. Schroeder, Christopher MacNeil Murphy, McDERMOTT, WILL & EMERY, Chicago, IL.

Judges: NORDBERG

Opinion by: JOHN A. NORDBERG

Opinion

[*595] MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

This is an action arising out of alleged illegal competition in the non-residential real estate appraisal market. Plaintiffs filed suit on February 11, 1993, and filed a First Amended Complaint on March 3, 1993, before any response to the original complaint had been filed. The Defendants moved to dismiss that First Amended Complaint. On August 18, 1993, the Court issued a Memorandum Opinion and Order granting that motion. Appraisers Coalition v. Appraisal Inst., 1993 U.S. LEXIS 11770, No. 93- C-913, 1993 WL 326671 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 18, 1993). With the permission of the Court, Plaintiffs filed their Second Amended Complaint, seeking relief in eleven counts. Before the Court is Defendants' Motion to Dismiss the Second Amended Complaint. For the following reasons, the Motion is denied in part and granted in part, without prejudice to the Plaintiffs filing a final amended complaint, if appropriate, consistent with this Memorandum Opinion and Order.

I. ALLEGATIONS OF FACT

Assuming as true the allegations in the Second Amended Complaint, and reasonable inferences therefrom, the Court summarizes the facts of the case as follows. The Plaintiffs are three [2] individual non-residential real estate appraisers, Alan B. Blau, W.S. Buckley, and Vincent A. Solano, their respective businesses, Alan Blau & Associates, Buckley Appraisal Services, Inc., and V.A. Solano & Associates, and the Appraisers Coalition (the "Coalition"), a voluntary unincorporated association.¹ The individual Plaintiffs, through their businesses, and each member of the Coalition, is engaged in the profession of providing appraisals of non-residential real estate in the United States. Each of these appraisers is a member of an organization called the Society of Real Estate Appraisers, Inc. (the "Society").

The Society was founded in 1935 to establish, confer, and promote professional training, qualifications, and designations for [3] real estate appraisers. Before January 1, 1991, the Society conferred one or more of three designations upon its individual members: (1) the SRPA, or Senior Real Property Appraiser, the Society's highest form of professional certification for appraisers of non-residential real estate; (2) the SRA, or Senior Residential Appraiser, which designated appraisers of residential real estate; and (3) the SREA, or Senior Real Estate Analyst, which pertains to financial analysis of income-producing real estate, but not necessarily appraisals. (Second Am.

¹ Although unincorporated, the Appraiser Coalition is entitled to sue in its own name under 735 ILCS 5/2-209.1 (Smith-Hurd 1993) which permits "any organization of 2 or more individuals formed for a common purpose, excluding a partnership or corporation" to sue and be sued.

Compl. PP 16(a)-(c.) Each of the individual Plaintiffs and each member of the Coalition earned the Society's SRPA designation. (Id. P 3.)

Until 1991, the Society, and its members, competed with Defendant American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers ("AIREA"), and its members. Like the Society, AIREA was organized in the 1930s to establish, confer, and promote professional training, qualifications, and designations for real estate appraisers. AIREA conferred two designations on its members: (1) the MAI, or "Member Appraisal Institute", which was conferred on AIREA members having top qualifications for appraising non-residential real estate; [4] and (2) the RM, which was comparable to the Society's SRA. Thus, before 1991, the Society's SRPAs directly competed with [*596] AIREA's MAIs, and the SRAs directly competed with the RMs. Each of the individual Defendants is a holder of the MAI designation.

During the events leading to this lawsuit, a small percentage of Society members, having either an SRPA or SREA designation, also held an MAI designation, as was permitted by Society rules. Plaintiffs allege that "at some point prior to 1989" the "dual designation" MAI members of the Society managed to take control of that organization, despite the fact that such members made up less than four percent of the Society's voting members.

In 1989, AIREA representatives and Society representatives began discussing a "unification" of the two organizations. Under the initial "unification" proposal, AIREA's RM members would be given the option of automatically receiving the Society's better-known and more widely-held SRA designation; the Society's small number of SREAs, some of whom were not appraisers, would be given the option of automatically becoming MAIs. The SRPA designation was to be phased out; but, SRPAs, unlike SREAs, were not automatically [5] permitted to become MAIs. Upon learning of the terms of the initial proposal, many SRPAs protested the elimination of their designation. These protests resulted in the inclusion, in the organizations' "Final Plan of Unification" (the "Plan"), of a provision stating that "all existing designations" would be "retained indefinitely" and would be "promoted until such time as the Board of Directors deems it appropriate to cease." By October 15, 1989, the Plan was set for submission to the respective voting members of the Society and AIREA. The Plan was to be either approved or disapproved at special membership meetings held on January 19, 1990.

Plaintiffs allege that the Plan was not approved at the special membership meetings. However, in June 1990, the Defendants caused AIREA, but not the Society, to vote on the Plan again. On January 1, 1991, the Defendants caused the Plan to take effect, without the approval of the Society's membership. (Second Am. Compl. P 26.)

Upon implementation of the Plan, the Defendants took several actions that devalued the SRPA. With this implementation came the creation of the Defendant "Appraisal Institute", a parent corporation that now controls AIREA and [6] the Society. Plaintiffs assert that the Appraisal Institute's name promotes public awareness of MAIs at the cost of public awareness of the SRPA designation, creating the appearance that MAIs are superior to SRPAs. Plaintiffs claim that they were further discriminated against by the Defendants' creation of the General Appraisal Board (the "GAB"). The GAB became the Appraisal Institute's arm for conferring the MAI designation, for controlling the ability of SRPAs to attain that designation, and for promoting the SRPA designation. Plaintiffs claim that SRPAs were locked out of any voice in these matters when the Defendants filled 11 of the 12 GAB positions with MAI holders, and prohibited the single SRPA member from voting on any matter affecting the qualifications for MAI status or the ability of SRPAs to become MAIs, and by restricting the Appraisal Institute's directors' ability to alter GAB policies.

Plaintiffs assert that Defendants "established a set of arbitrary, onerous, and subjective criteria" for those SRPAs seeking to become MAIs, even though some of the previous requirements for becoming an MAI were less stringent than those necessary to become a SRPA. (Compl. P 29.) ² [7]

² The Second Amended Complaint states the following with respect to the alleged arbitrary, onerous, and subjective criteria:

(a) Defendants instituted a requirement that any SRPA wishing to become a MAI must take and pass a day-long Comprehensive Examination, even though as many as 700 current MAIs have never taken that examination;

[8] [*597] Defendants failed to promote, and denigrated, the SRPA designation, despite their pre-unification promises to the contrary, by producing and disseminating materials, including advertisements, that tacitly disparaged SRPAs and that falsely implied that the SRPA designation was irrelevant, non-existent, inferior, or non-professional. (Compl. PP 30, 31.)

Plaintiffs claim that as a result of this discrimination: "the individual and business entity plaintiffs have been severely, if not irreparably, damaged in their business and property." (Compl. P 33.) Plaintiffs complain that their SRPA designations have "become valueless at best" and, at worst, carry "a negative connotation in comparison with MAIs." (Id.)

Plaintiffs seek both legal and equitable remedies in their eleven count Second Amended Complaint. In Counts I-VI, Plaintiffs allege violations of federal law. Counts I, II, and III respectively assert claims for monopolization, attempted monopolization, and conspiracy to monopolize in violation of section 2 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2 (1988). In Count IV, Plaintiffs allege that the Defendants agreed to a per se illegal restraint [9] of trade in violation of section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1 (1988). Count V charges a violation of Section 7 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 18 (1988). In Count VI, Plaintiffs claim that the Defendants violated section 43(a) of the Lanham Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1125(a) (1988).

Counts VII-XI are pendent state law claims. In Count VII, Plaintiff Solano claims that the Defendants violated the Illinois Antitrust Act, 740 ILCS 10/1 to 10/11 (Smith-Hurd 1993). In Count VIII, Plaintiff Solano seeks relief for violations of the Illinois Consumer fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act, 815 ILCS 505/1 to 505/12 (Smith-Hurd 1993). In Count IX, Plaintiffs Blau, Solano, Buckley, and Buckley Appraisal Services, Inc. claim that they were defamed and commercial disparaged. In Count X, Plaintiffs Blau, Solano, and Buckley plead tortious interference with their property rights. In Count XI, Plaintiffs Blau, Solano, and Buckley claim a common law breach of fiduciary duty.

II. ANALYSIS

A. Associational Standing

Defendants challenge the Coalition's standing to sue. The Second [10] Amended Complaint names the Coalition as a Plaintiff in the five federal antitrust counts (I-V) and the Lanham Act false advertising count (VI). Since the Plaintiffs have not specifically alleged the capacity in which they contend the Coalition may sue, and since Plaintiffs have failed to allege any injury to the association itself,³ the Court concludes that the Coalition must be seeking associational standings as a representative of its members. (See Defs.' Mem. in Supp. of Mot. to Dismiss Second

(b) Defendants provided in the Plan, and have rigidly enforced, a requirement that SRPAs wishing to become MAIs must demonstrate an additional year of "experience" beyond that which was required to earn the SRPA designation, even though the SRPA designation itself required more non-residential appraisal experience than was required to become a MAI;

(c) Defendants instituted a requirement that SRPAs wishing to become MAIs must pass a "character and fitness review" at the hands of their MAI competitors, even though prior to the "unification" SRPAs demonstrably were required to adhere to a stricter standard of ethics than MAIs (for example, the Society stripped a number of former SRPA/MAIs of their SRPA status on ethical grounds, though those same persons continue to retain their MAI status); and

(d) Defendants so arranged matters that SRPAs who nevertheless attempted to become MAIs were subject to subjective and arbitrary "reviews" and judgments by MAI panels whose members included direct competitors of the SRPA applicants.

(Second Am. Compl. PP 29 (a)-(d).)

³ Such is a necessary allegation to substantiate an association's direct claim. See Southwest Suburban Bd. of Realtors v. Beverly Area Planning Ass'n, 830 F.2d 1374, 1379-80 (7th Cir. 1987) (indicating that HN1 claim of injury to association itself is necessary to confer standing for a direct federal antitrust claim); Camel Hair & Cashmere Inst. of Am., Inc. v. Associated Dry Goods, 799 F.2d 6, 10 (1st Cir. 1986) (indicating that claim of injury to association itself is necessary to confer standing for a direct Lanham Act claim).

Am. Compl. at 4.) The Plaintiffs do not dispute this conclusion. (See generally Pls.' Mem. in Resp. to Mot. to Dismiss Second Am. Compl.)

[11] HN2 While associations are generally denied standing to sue for damages under the antitrust laws, the federal courts have permitted associations to maintain actions seeking injunctive relief on behalf of, and as the representative of, its members. See Warth v. Seldin, 422 U.S. 490, 45 L. Ed. 2d 343, 95 S. Ct. 2197 (1975) (holding that an association may have standing to sue as a representative [^{*}598] of its members); Southwest Suburban Bd. of Realtors v. Beverly Area Planning Ass'n, 830 F.2d 1374, 1380 & n.3 (7th Cir. 1987) (listing cases). Whether, and in what circumstances, it is permissible for an association to sue under the federal antitrust laws or under the Lanham Act is governed by the three part test established by the Supreme Court in Hunt v. Washington State Apple Advertising Comm'n, 432 U.S. 333, 53 L. Ed. 2d 383, 97 S. Ct. 2434 (1977). See Retired Chicago Police Ass'n v. City of Chicago, 7 F.3d 584 (7th Cir. 1993) (applying Hunt to an association's antitrust claims); Southwest Suburban Bd. of Realtors v. Beverly Area Planning Ass'n, 830 F.2d 1374, 1380-81 (7th Cir. 1987) (same); Camel Hair & Cashmere Inst. of Am. v. Associated Dry Goods, 799 F.2d 6, 10 (1st Cir. 1986) [12] (applying Hunt to an association's Lanham Act claims). Under Hunt, an association has standing to bring suit on behalf of its members when: (1) the members would otherwise have standing to sue for themselves; (2) the interests the association seeks to protect are "germane to the organization's purpose"; and (3) neither the claim asserted nor the relief requested requires the participation of individual members in the lawsuit. Hunt, 432 U.S. at 343.

The Supreme Court reaffirmed the doctrine of associational standing in UAW v. Brock, 106 S. Ct. 2523, 91 L. Ed. 2d 228, 477 U.S. 274 (1986). In so doing, the Supreme Court also explained the basis for the doctrine. In Brock, the UAW and several of its members brought suit against the Secretary of Labor to challenge his interpretation of the eligibility provisions of the Trade Act of 1974, which provided benefits to workers laid off because of competition from imports. Among the Secretary's challenges to the suit was his contention that the UAW lacked standing to sue in federal court on behalf of its affected members. The district court found for the plaintiffs on the merits and the Court of Appeals [13] for the District of Columbia reversed, without reaching the merits, holding that the UAW lacked standing to represent its members.

The Supreme Court reversed the Court of Appeals, applying the Hunt test. It then addressed the Secretary's contention that "absent a showing of particularized need", members of associations should be required to litigate common questions of fact or law against a common defendant only through the class action provisions of Fed. R. Civ. P. 23. In rejecting the Secretary's argument, the Supreme Court explained that the doctrine of associational standing had special features that made it "advantageous both to the individuals represented and to the judicial system as a whole." Brock, 477 U.S. at 289. In contrast with the class action vehicle, in which plaintiffs might have little in common other than their claims, an association suing on behalf of its members could draw upon a "pre-existing reservoir of expertise and capital." Id. This pooling of resources provides economies to both plaintiffs and courts. The Court concluded by noting:

The doctrine of associational standing recognizes that the primary reason people [14] join an organization is often to create an effective vehicle for vindicating interests that they share with others. "The only practical judicial policy when people pool their capital, their interests, or their activities under a name and form that will identify collective interests, often is to permit the association or corporation in a single case to vindicate the interests of all." . . . The very forces that cause individuals to band together in an association will thus provide some guarantee that the association will work to promote their interests.

Brock, 477 U.S. at 290 (quoting Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Comm. v. McGrath, 341 U.S. 123, 187, 95 L. Ed. 817, 71 S. Ct. 624 (1951) (Jackson, J., concurring)).

Here, Defendants argue that the Coalition should not be permitted to avail itself of the Hunt and Brock cases for three reasons. First, Defendants contend that the individual Plaintiffs have a conflict with the Coalition. Defendants also argue that the Plaintiffs have failed to satisfy both the second and third parts of the Hunt test. The Court rejects each of these arguments.

As Defendants point out in their Memorandum in Support [15] of Motion to Dismiss Second [*599] Amended Complaint, the conflict of interest argument they make "does not fit neatly within the three part test." (Mem. in Supp. at 6.) Federal courts have addressed similar arguments under both the second and three elements of the Hunt test; and at least one Court of Appeals has noted that such an argument might be construed as a proposed fourth element to that test. See, e.g., Associated Gen. Contractors of California, Inc. v. Coalition for Economic Equity, 950 F.2d 1401 (9th Cir. 1991) (analyzing a conflict of interest argument under the third element of the Hunt test), cert. denied, 118 L. Ed. 2d 390, 112 S. Ct. 1670 (1992); Southwest Suburban Bd. of Realtors v. Beverly Area Planning Ass'n, 830 F.2d 1374, 1380-81 (7th Cir. 1987) (analyzing a conflict of interest argument under the second element of the Hunt test); National Maritime Union of Am. v. Commander, Military Sealift Command, 263 U.S. App. D.C. 248, 824 F.2d 1228, 1232 (D.C. Cir. 1987) (stating that a conflict of interest argument might be seen either as an attempt to add a fourth factor to the Hunt [16] test or as a part of the third factor). Given that Defendants here have challenged the Coalition's ability to satisfy both the second and third elements of Hunt, the Court addresses the conflict issue first and then, when discussing the other arguments, will address any implications that issue might have on those arguments.

Defendants' contend that the interests of the individual Plaintiffs conflict with those of the appraisers represented by the Coalition. The individuals seek millions of dollars in damages. The Coalition seeks only injunctive relief. Because the individuals are officers and members of the Coalition, but seek damages in addition to equitable relief, they have created, so the argument goes, a litigation strategy conflict between themselves and the Coalition and, by implication, within the Coalition. In the opinion of the Court, this argument is insufficient to defeat associational standing.

The Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals clarified its position with respect to standing for associations having purported internal conflicts of interest in Retired Chicago Police Ass'n v. City of Chicago, 7 F.3d 584 (7th Cir. 1993). In instructing [17] a district court HN3 considering the issue of associational standing on remand, the Seventh Circuit stated that the court's analysis must begin with a review of the benefits of associational standing expressed in Brock. Id. at 607. These benefits must be weighed against any deficiencies an association might have, including actual and potential conflicts. In addressing apparent conflicts, district courts should determine if "other approaches less drastic than denying group standing" will protect the interests of those "whose position is not represented" by the association, "while affording the group and the judicial system as a whole the efficiencies that Brock has identified in associational standing." Id. at 607.

Given this charge from the Court of Appeals, it is the opinion of the Court that the efficiencies created by the Coalition in this case outweigh any conflicts created by its participation in this lawsuit. The Defendants protest that the Coalition does not really afford any of the efficiencies contemplated by Brock because it was organized solely as a means of financing this lawsuit. The Court disagrees, even [18] accepting the Defendants' categorization of the Coalition.

The injunctive relief sought by the Coalition, if justified, would likely benefit any appraiser having an SRPA designation. While Plaintiffs have not stated how many members of the association there are, according to the Second Amended Complaint, there were 2,243 holders of the SRPA designation prior to implementation of the Plan. (Compl. P 33.) After the implementation of the Plan, that number fell to approximately 900. (Id.) If the Coalition and the individual Plaintiffs succeed in their attempt to enjoin alleged anticompetitive conduct, at least these 900 individuals would benefit. The fact that the Coalition may have been formed as a vehicle to assemble financial resources does not run contrary to the Brock decision. In fact, as quoted above, the opinion specifically refers to the benefits afforded the public and the individuals making up the association by permitting the pooling of such resources. In addition, even if formed for purposes related to this litigation, the Coalition is still a pool of similarly situated individuals with similar interests. If Plaintiffs have valid claims, the [*600] Court perceives no wrong [19] in permitting them to rely on whatever resources, capital or intellectual, the Coalition may provide.

Contrasted with the benefits of the associational vehicle is Defendants' assertion that the Coalition's participation in this lawsuit is contrary to the interests of other appraisers potentially having claims in this lawsuit. The crux of this argument is that the individual defendants will have incentives to settle for cash in lieu of the injunctive relief sought by the Coalition. In the opinion of the Court, the purported "conflict" between the individual Plaintiffs and other members of the Coalition is only speculative at this point. Furthermore, the Court is not convinced that any such speculative conflict would be diminished by the absence of the Coalition. First, there is no indication of any immediate conflict or dissent within the Coalition. Second, the individual Plaintiffs, as officers and organizers of the Coalition, owe fiduciary duties to the other members of the organization. There is no indication that the Coalition's participation in this lawsuit will compromise those duties. Third, even if the Coalition were not a party to this lawsuit, the individual Plaintiffs, who [\[20\]](#) also seek injunctive relief, might favor a cash settlement over injunctive relief. And, depending on the circumstances, such an agreement might be binding on other individuals, whether or not such individuals were parties to this lawsuit. Furthermore, should this case proceed to trial and the Plaintiffs lose, the doctrine of defensive collateral estoppel might bind future litigants regardless of whether the Coalition participates or not. Fourth, should any future litigant demonstrate that he or she was not adequately represented in this lawsuit, that individual would not be precluded from bringing suit. Given these factors, the Court is unwilling to deny the Coalition standing to file suit.

The Court's conclusion is supported by Retired Chicago Police Ass'n. In that case, the Seventh Circuit summarized the "major contributions" on this issue by other circuits. The Court of Appeals discussed two cases, Maryland Highways Contractors Ass'n v. Maryland, 933 F.2d 1246 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 116 L. Ed. 2d 325, 112 S. Ct. 373 (1991), and Southwest Suburban Bd. of Realtors v. Beverly Area Planning Ass'n, 830 F.2d 1374 (7th Cir. 1987), [\[21\]](#) in which associational standing had been denied. The basis for that conclusion, in both cases, was the existence of a "profound" conflict of interest. In the Maryland Highways Contractors Ass'n case the association's lawsuit worked to the "direct detriment" of the minority members of that association. The association in that case brought suit without observing its own by-laws. In Southwest Suburban Bd. of Realtors, members of the association were actual defendants in the case, a clearly unworkable conflict. As indicated in Retired Chicago Police Ass'n, the "profound" conflicts in those cases were inconsistent with Brock. No such profound conflict or inconsistency with Brock exists here.

Defendants protest that Plaintiffs failed to satisfy the second element of the Hunt test by failing to plead the Coalition's purpose. The second element of Hunt requires that HN4⁴ the association in question seek to protect interests that are "germane to the organization's purpose." Hunt, 432 U.S. at 343. This "germaneness" requirement formed one basis for the Seventh Circuit's decision in Southwest Suburban Bd. of Realtors v. Beverly Area Planning Ass'n, 830 F.2d 1374 (7th Cir. 1987). [\[22\]](#)⁴ However, as indicated in Retired Chicago Police Ass'n, this "germaneness" requirement has teeth only when a conflict of interests exists. 7 F.3d at 607. Otherwise, the germaneness test requires only that "an organization's litigation goals be pertinent to its special expertise and the grounds that bring its membership together." Id. (quoting Humane Soc'y of the United States v. Hodel, 268 U.S. App. D.C. 165, 840 F.2d 45, 56 (D.C. Cir. 1988)). Given that no "profound" conflict here exists, and given that the Coalition's membership came together to help prosecute this case, the germaneness test is satisfied. The Court will not deny the Coalition [\[*601\]](#) standing for a failure to plead its purpose.

Finally, Defendants contend that the Coalition should [\[23\]](#) be denied standing for failure to satisfy the third element of Hunt, which states that "neither the claim asserted nor the relief requested requires the participation of individual members in the lawsuit." Defendants assert that, given the Second Amended Complaint's allegations, it will be necessary for several members of the Coalition to testify and further participate in the lawsuit. This position is not disputed. However, the third element in Hunt does not require a dismissal on that basis. The decision in Retired Chicago Police Ass'n makes clear that the Hunt test does not mean that dismissal is required when the participation of any association member is necessary. Rather, HN5⁴ dismissal is only required when the lawsuit would require the participation of each member of the association. 7 F.3d at 601-02. The third element of Hunt is satisfied, despite the participation of one or many members of an association, when the cause of action and relief sought does not require "individualized proof" for the litigation of the case.

The difficult issue here presented is whether Plaintiffs claims require the "individualized proof" that would [\[24\]](#) defeat Associational standing. As noted in dicta in both Retired Chicago Police Ass'n, 7 F.3d at 602 n.25, and

⁴ The Court also questioned whether the plaintiff association could satisfy the third element of the Hunt test. See Southwest Suburban Bd. of Realtors v. Beverly Area Planning Ass'n, 830 F.2d at 1381.

Southwest Suburban Bd. of Realtors v. Beverly Area Planning Ass'n, 830 F.2d at 1380-81, HN6[↑] the proof of antitrust injury necessary to federal antitrust claims may require such "individualized proof." That kind of proof is necessary in circumstances where complex factual issues exist that require evidence of actions taken against individual defendants. See Retired Chicago Police Ass'n, 7 F.3d at 602 n.25; Southwest Suburban Bd. of Realtors v. Beverly Area Planning Ass'n, 830 F.2d at 1380-81. However, as analysis of the "antitrust injury" requirement indicates, not all antitrust cases necessarily require inquiry into "complex factual issues" to resolve the question of antitrust injury. In particular, where an antitrust claim attacks a policy or practice that is equally applicable and detrimental to all members of an association, such individualized proof is not necessary. See National Office Mach. Dealers Ass'n v. Monroe, the Calculator Co., 484 F. Supp. 1306, 1307 (N.D. Ill. 1980). [25]

In Cargill v. Monfort of Colorado, 479 U.S. 104, 93 L. Ed. 2d 427, 107 S. Ct. 484 (1986), the Supreme Court held that HN7[↑] antitrust plaintiffs seeking injunctive relief pursuant to section 16 of the Clayton Act must demonstrate the threat of an "antitrust injury." An antitrust injury is an "injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes defendants' acts unlawful." Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, 429 U.S. 477, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701, 97 S. Ct. 690 (1977). This requirement is intended to serve two functions. First, as explained by professors Areeda and Hovenkamp:

It forces the parties and the court to reason closely about the nature of the antitrust violation alleged in order to test whether the injury and damages claimed by the plaintiff match the rationale for finding any violation in the first place.

Phillip E. Areeda & Herbert Hovenkamp, Antitrust Law P 334.2a (Supp. 1992). Second, the requirement makes clear that "injuries resulting from competition will not support either damage or equity actions by private parties under the antitrust laws." Areeda & Hovenkamp, supra.

In some circumstances, determining whether the plaintiffs' 26 alleged injury was an "antitrust injury" requires factual analysis of the injuries suffered by individual, or particular, members of the plaintiff association. Here, in contrast, the antitrust injuries complained of are based on the Defendants' alleged discriminatory policies and practices that purportedly devalued the SRPA designation. In the opinion of the Court, the factual proof of these policies and their anticompetitive effects does not require the complex individualized proof contemplated in Southwest Suburban Bd. of Realtors. While this case potentially requires complex legal analysis and a complex factual inquiry into the nature of the markets involved, these analyses do not depend on the evidence of any particular member of the Coalition. As individualized proof is not necessary to demonstrate *602 an antitrust injury here, the Court rejects Defendants' argument on this issue.

Accordingly, with respect to the issue of associational standing, Defendants' Motion to Dismiss is denied.

B. Federal Antitrust Claims

1. Sherman Act Section 2

In Counts I, II, and III respectively, Plaintiffs claim that the Defendants' conduct constituted illegal monopolization, illegal attempted 27 monopolization, and a conspiracy to illegally monopolize.

a. Actual and Attempted Monopolization

HN8[↑] In order to prove monopolization, a plaintiff must prove that a given defendant has (1) possession of monopoly power in the relevant market, and (2) acquired and maintained that power apart from permissible competitive means such as growth, development of a superior product, business acumen or historic accident. United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 570-71, 16 L. Ed. 2d 778, 86 S. Ct. 1698 (1966). HN9[↑] To prove attempted monopolization, a plaintiff must show: (1) that the defendant has engaged in predatory or anticompetitive conduct, with (2) a specific intent to monopolize, and (3) a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power. Spectrum Sports v. McQuillan, 122 L. Ed. 2d 247, U.S. , 113 S. Ct. 884, 890-91 (1993).

Both monopolization and attempted monopolization thus require the acquisition or probable acquisition of monopoly power. In an attempt to satisfy this requirement, Plaintiffs allege that the MAIs, collectively and as a result of the institutional Defendants' conduct, maintain "substantial market power." (Compl. Count I P 6 at 19.) In the opinion [28] of the Court, this, and the other allegations in the Second Amended Complaint are sufficient to state claims for monopolization and attempted monopolization against the Appraisal Institute and AIREA (collectively, the "Institutional Defendants"), but not against any of the individual Defendants.

Defendants argue that neither of the Institutional Defendants can be said to monopolize or attempt to monopolize the market for non-residential real estate appraisal services because neither directly competes in that market. See White v. Rockingham Radiologists, Ltd., 820 F.2d 98, 104-05 (4th Cir. 1987); see also Ball Memorial Hosp. v. Mutual Hosp. Ins., 603 F. Supp. 1077 (S.D. Ind. 1985), aff'd, 784 F.2d 1325 (7th Cir.), reh'g denied, 788 F.2d 1223 (7th Cir. 1986). Defendants' position rests on the assumption that the only market applicable to the Defendant institutions is the market for establishing, conferring, and promoting professional training, qualifications, and designations for real estate appraisers. This argument has only infrequently been addressed in the [29] case law, see Carleton v. Vermont Dairy Herd Improvement Ass'n, 782 F. Supp. 926, 934-35 (D. Vt. 1991), and was then questionably analyzed under a "monopoly leveraging" theory more appropriate for tying cases. In the opinion of the Court, however, several Supreme Court cases, although they do not discuss the issue, are sufficient precedent on which to permit the Plaintiffs to proceed. See American Soc'y of Mechanical Eng'r's v. Hydrolevel Corp., 456 U.S. 556, 72 L. Ed. 2d 330, 102 S. Ct. 1935 (1982) (affirming HN10[†] the imposition of section 2 liability on an association that did not compete directly in its membership's market); Silver v. New York Stock Exch., 373 U.S. 341, 10 L. Ed. 2d 389, 83 S. Ct. 1246 (1963) (same); United States v. Associated Press, 326 U.S. 1, 89 L. Ed. 2013, 65 S. Ct. 1416 (1945) (same); see also McDonnell v. Michigan Chapter No. 10, Am. Inst. of Real Estate Appraisers, 587 F.2d 7 (6th Cir. 1978) (indicating that group boycott by real estate association, also a Defendant in this case, may support monopolization claim). Accordingly, with respect to the institutional Defendants on Counts I, and II, Defendants' Motion [30] to Dismiss is denied.⁵

In contrast, Plaintiffs have failed to state a monopolization or attempted monopolization [*603] claim against the individual Defendants. Plaintiffs make no allegation with respect to the market power of any individual or the individual Defendants collectively. Accordingly, with respect to the individual Defendants, on Counts I, and II, Defendants' Motion to Dismiss is granted.⁶

[31] b. Conspiracy to Monopolize

⁵ With respect to Counts I and II, the parties make no distinction between the two institutional Defendants. Neither, then, does the Court. Plaintiffs should be cautioned, however, that future analysis will require such a distinction. The corporate form should be considered in all future proof.

⁶ The Plaintiffs do not specifically allege any vicarious liability upon which the Court might include the individual Defendants in Counts I and II. It may be that the individual Defendants could be included in Counts I and II due to the Court's finding that each might be held liable under the conspiracy to monopolize alleged in Count III and discussed infra. If the individuals are found to have conspired to monopolize, under Count III, they may be liable for the acts of their coconspirators. See SEC v. Kimmes, 799 F. Supp. 852 (N.D. Ill. 1992), aff'd, 997 F.2d 287 (7th Cir. 1993). This coconspirator theory of liability was not addressed by the parties in their memoranda. While there has been some question regarding this theory's applicability in antitrust cases, see Zenith Radio Corp. v. Matsushita Elec. Indus., 513 F. Supp. 1100, 1176-78 (E.D. Pa. 1981) (discussing potential applicability of Pinkerton v. United States, 328 U.S. 640, 90 L. Ed. 1489, 66 S. Ct. 1180 (1946), to civil case based on Robison-Patman Act and Clayton Act claims), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 723 F.2d 238 (3d Cir. 1983), rev'd, 475 U.S. 574, 106 S. Ct. 1348, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538 (1986), the Court sees no reason why it should not apply. See Sidney Morris & Co. v. National Ass'n of Stationers, 40 F.2d 620 (7th Cir. 1930) (applying vicarious coconspirator liability to old precursor to Robinson-Patman Act). This issue might be raised by Defendants should Plaintiffs include a civil Pinkerton theory of liability in their final amended complaint.

A second theory of liability, less commonly used in antitrust cases, that might be raised is an aiding and abetting theory. This theory is sometimes used in attempts to include labor unions as antitrust defendants. See Hunt v. Crumboch, 325 U.S. 821, 65 S. Ct. 1545, 89 L. Ed. 1954 (1945). Like the coconspirator theory, this theory was not alleged by Plaintiffs or raised in argument. Its applicability to this case, like that of the coconspirator theory, remains to be resolved.

In Count III, Plaintiffs allege that the Defendants conspired to monopolize the market for non-residential real estate appraisal services. HN11⁷ To prove a conspiracy to monopolize, a plaintiff must prove: (1) the existence of a combination or conspiracy, (2) overt acts in furtherance of the conspiracy, (3) an effect upon a substantial amount of interstate commerce, and (4) the existence of specific intent to monopolize. Unlike the proof required for monopolization or attempted monopolization, the proof required to demonstrate a conspiracy to monopolize does not require a proof of market power in a relevant market. Perington Wholesale v. Burger King Corp., 631 F.2d 1369, 1376-77 \(10th Cir. 1979\); see also United States v. National City Lines, 186 F.2d 562 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 341 U.S. 916, 95 L. Ed. 1351, 71 S. Ct. 735 \(1951\).⁷ [\[32\]](#) Under this more permissive section 2 theory, individuals who are incapable themselves of monopolizing a market, may be found liable under section 2 for intentionally joining others to do so.⁸

Defendants argue that Copperweld Corp. v. Independence Tube Corp., 467 U.S. 752, 81 L. Ed. 2d 628, 104 S. Ct. 2731 \(1984\), bars Plaintiffs' claim. In Copperweld, the Supreme Court held that HN12⁹ an agreement between a parent corporation and its wholly owned subsidiary cannot be concerted action for purposes of section 1 of the Sherman Act. The Court also held that an agreement between officers or employees of the same firms does not constitute a section 1 conspiracy. The Copperweld reasoning also applies to section 2 claims. Pudlo v. Adamski, 789 F. Supp. 247, 252 \(N.D. Ill. 1992\), aff'd, 2 F.3d 1153 \(7th Cir. 1993\), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1066, 105 S. Ct. 2140, 85 L. Ed. 2d 497, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 1013, 1993 WL 466848 \(U.S. 1994\).

Despite the clear statement of the law in Copperweld, [\[33\]](#) there is an exception to that doctrine. A subsidiary, officer or employee of a corporation may be said to have conspired with a corporation when the subsidiary or individual has an "independent interest" in participating in the conspiracy. See 7 Phillip E. Areeda, Antitrust Law PP 1470-1474 \(1986\). Although the "independent interest" [\[*604\]](#) exception has been limited, see, e.g., Nurse Midwifery Assocs. v. Hibbett, 918 F.2d 605, 612-15 \(6th Cir. 1990\) (holding that medical staffs could not conspire with hospitals even if members of the staffs have "independent personal stake" in the alleged conspiracy), modified, 927 F.2d 904 \(6th Cir., cert. denied, 112 S. Ct. 406 \(1991\)\), it must be considered to apply when an entity's agents or employees are direct competitors. See Poller v. Columbia Broadcasting Sys., 368 U.S. 464, 7 L. Ed. 2d 458, 82 S. Ct. 486 \(1962\) (holding that CBS could conspire with one of its affiliates to eliminate another affiliate from competition); Spence v. Southeastern Alaska Pilots' Ass'n, 789 F. Supp. 1014 \(D. Alaska 1992\) (holding that an [\[34\]](#) association and its members could conspire when the members competed against each other); United States v. Metro MLS, Inc., 1974-2 Trade Cas. \(CCH\) P75,311, No. 210-73- N, 1973 WL 918 \(E.D. Va. 1973\) (holding that a real estate listing corporation could conspire with its members when each member of the corporation maintained a related business entity separate from the corporation). Unlike in Copperweld, each member of the Defendant trade associations is a competitor capable of conspiring with the other members.

Turning to the substance of the allegations against the Defendants, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs have stated a claim against every Defendant save AIREA. AIREA has no independent interest apart from the Appraisal Institute and must therefore be dismissed under Copperweld. With respect to the individual Defendants, Plaintiffs' allegations are scant.⁹ The Court concludes, however, given reasonable bounds of inference from the facts alleged, that these ⁷ The Court notes that United States v. National City Lines has been criticized, see Besser Publishing Co. v. Pioneer Press, Inc., 571 F. Supp. 640, 641 \(N.D. Ill. 1983\); Tire Sales Corp. v. Cities Serv. Oil Co., 410 F. Supp. 1222, 1232 \(N.D. Ill. 1976\), rev'd, 637 F.2d 467 \(7th Cir. 1980\), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 920, 68 L. Ed. 2d 312, 101 S. Ct. 1999 \(1981\), but it remains the law in this Circuit.

⁸ Since it was not addressed by the parties, the Court leaves open the issue of whether, in proving a claim for conspiracy under section 2, a plaintiff must prove that the conspirators collectively must be capable of achieving a monopoly or monopoly power.

⁹ The Plaintiffs' allegations against the individual Defendants, with the exception of Joe R. Price who is specifically mentioned in one other paragraph, are completely quoted as follows:

13. All of the individual defendants are holders of the MAI designation. They are, and have been at all material times, engaged in direct competition with plaintiffs, in interstate commerce in the United States, for non-residential real estate appraisal business. All of the individual defendants are or were officers or officials of the Society, AIREA, and/or the Appraisal Institute. Acting for allegations are sufficient to notify each of the individual Defendants of his or her purported role in the alleged conspiracy. The Second Amended [~~*605~~] Complaint also adequately notifies the Appraisal Institute of the allegations against it.

[35] Defendants argue that under Boerstler v. American Medical Ass'n, 16 F.R.D. 437, 447 (N.D. Ill. 1954), Plaintiffs have failed to properly plead the names of all persons involved in the alleged conspiracy and the years of their participation. As Defendants, point out, however, Boerstler did not require that the case be dismissed, only that the Defendants make a more definite statement.

Accordingly, with respect to Defendant AIREA, Defendants Motion to Dismiss is granted. With respect to the remaining Defendants, the Motion to Dismiss is denied.

2. Sherman Act Section 1

Section 1 of the Sherman Act HN13 prohibits "every contract, combination . . . or conspiracy in restraint of trade." 15 U.S.C. § 1 \(1988\). Despite this broad language, however, only unreasonable restraints violate this section. Board of Trade v. United States, 246 U.S. 231, 238, 62 L. Ed. 683, 38 S. Ct. 242 (1918). A plaintiff may demonstrate that a particular restraint is unreasonable either by demonstrating that the restraint falls within a narrow set of per se unreasonable restraints, or by conducting a "rule of reason" analysis to show that [36] the restraint's anticompetitive effects outweigh any "redeeming virtues." Here, in Count IV, Plaintiffs allege that the Defendants' conduct constitutes a per se illegal boycott, or "concerted refusal to deal." Although the Court previously indicated that per se analysis would apply to this case, the Court now believes that a rule of reason analysis is called for.

their own individual benefits and purposes, with intent to benefit themselves individually and/or through their various businesses, each of them participated with defendants AIREA and Appraisal Institute in implementing and furthering the MAIs' takeover of the Society, the elimination of competition from SRPAs, and the other wrongful conduct described in this Complaint. More particularly:

(a) At all material times, each of defendants LOUIE REESE III, a resident of Alabama, and RITCH LeGRAND, a resident of Iowa, held the MAI designation. However, each also held a Society-conferred designation, and in that capacity Reese and LeGrand became presidents of the Society in 1989 and 1990 respectively and used their offices to urge the members of the Society to accept and vote for the AIREA "unification" scheme by which the MAIs effected the takeover of the Society and the crippling of competition from the SRPAs.

(b) At all material times, each of defendants PATRICIA MARSHALL and BERNARD FOUNTAIN, residents of New York, and DOUGLAS BROWN, a resident of South Carolina, held the MAI designation. All of them were and are members of the Appraisal Institute's Executive Committee (Marshall was also President of the Institute and AIREA's First Vice President), and exercise substantial influence and control over the Appraisal Institute's operations.

(c) In addition, defendant Fountain was a Society Vice-President in 1990 and is now a Director of the Society; and, though neither has ever earned nor held any designation conferred by the Society, defendant Marshall is currently the President of the Society and defendant Brown is currently the Treasurer of the Society.

(d) At all material times, each of the defendants C. DAVID MATTHEWS, CLIFFORD E. FISHER, JR., JOHN R. UNDERWOOD, JR., BRUCE R. WILLMETTE, BONNIE D. ROERIG, DAVID F. PEATFIELD, DONALD L. BURKE, NANCY M. MUELLER, GERALD A. TEEL, and NORMAN E. HALL has held the MAI designation. Each of those defendants is a member of, and together those defendants control and operate, the General Appraisal Board ("GAB") of the defendant Appraisal Institute. The GAB, which operates from the Institute's headquarters in Chicago, Illinois, controls the requirements for, and the conferring and promotion of, the MAI designation, and as a result of the MAIs' takeover of the Society also controls the promotion of the SRPA designation and the ability of SRPAs to become MAIs.

(d)[sic] At all material times, defendant JOE R. PRICE has held the MAI designation and has been the Regional Chairman of the Appraisal Institute's "Region X," which includes the entire State of Florida.

HN14 [↑] Boycotts are among those limited restraints that are considered per se illegal. See, e.g., Klor's, Inc. v. Broadway-Hale Stores, 359 U.S. 207, 3 L. Ed. 2d 741, 79 S. Ct. 705 (1959) (holding that a concerted refusal to deal was per se illegal despite significant competition in the relevant market); Fashion Originators' Guild of Am. v. FTC, 312 U.S. 457, 85 L. Ed. 949, 61 S. Ct. 703 (1941). Despite these conclusions, the Supreme Court's application of the per se rule to purported boycotts and concerted refusals to deal has been mixed. The Court has warned against "over-zealous" application of the doctrine and has stated that the rule should be applied only when the challenged practice threatens the "proper operation of our predominantly free-market economy" or when the challenged practice "facially appears" [37] to be one that would always or almost always tend to restrict competition and decrease output." Broadcast Music Inc. v. Columbia Broadcasting Sys., 441 U.S. 1, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1, 99 S. Ct. 1551 (1979).

HN15 [↑] In light of its increased concern over the applicability of the per se rule, the Supreme Court has "been slow to condemn rules adopted by professional associations." FTC v. Indiana Fed'n of Dentists, 476 U.S. 447, 458, 90 L. Ed. 2d 445, 106 S. Ct. 2009 (1986). This reluctance has been expressed by the Seventh Circuit with respect to both professional and trade associations. See Wilk v. American Medical Ass'n, 895 F.2d 352, 359 (7th Cir. 1990) (discussing professional associations), cert. denied, 496 U.S. 927, 110 L. Ed. 2d 642, 110 S. Ct. 2621 and cert. denied, 498 U.S. 982, 112 L. Ed. 2d 524, 111 S. Ct. 513 (1990); Phil Tolkan Datsun v. Greater Milwaukee Datsun Dealers' Advertising Ass'n, 672 F.2d 1280, 1285 (7th Cir. 1982) (discussing trade associations). Typically, professional and trade associations' rules of exclusion or restriction are evaluated under the rule of reason. See, e.g., Vogel v. American Soc'y of Appraisers, 744 F.2d 598, 603-04 (7th Cir. 1984); [38] Koefoot v. American College of Surgeons, 652 F. Supp. 882 (N.D. Ill. 1986).

Plaintiffs argue that Phil Tolkan Datsun created an exception regarding this Circuit's treatment of association rules. They contend that in that decision, the Seventh Circuit implied that HN16 [↑] the per se rule for boycotts would apply to a trade association's membership requirements when membership in that trade association is necessary to compete effectively in the relevant market. See Phil Tolkan Datsun, 672 F.2d at 1285-86. While support for that assumption may be found in Associated Press v. United States, 326 U.S. 1, 89 L. Ed. 2013, 65 S. Ct. 1416 (1945), and in Silver v. New York Stock Exchange, 373 U.S. 341, 10 L. Ed. 2d 389, 83 S. Ct. 1246 (1963), application of the proposed rule often requires [606] a court to beg the question of the reasonableness of the proposed restraint. Even then, in applying a per se analysis, Courts are often forced to take a "quick look" at the reasonableness of the challenged restraint.¹⁰ Here, there likely will be factual disputes over the relative competitive statuses of MAIs and SRPAs and over the restrictiveness [39] of the rules governing an SRPA's conversion to an MAI. Given this required analysis, the court concludes that at least a "quick look" is required. Therefore, rather than engage in any abbreviated analysis of the challenged restraint, the Court will proceed under the "rule of reason".

Accordingly, with respect to Count IV, Defendants' Motion to Dismiss is granted, without prejudice to Plaintiffs' amending this Count to plead a claim based on the "rule of reason."¹¹

[40] 3. Clayton Act Section 7

In Count V of their Second Amended Complaint, Plaintiffs allege that Defendants violated Section 7 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 18 (1988), by merging AIREA with the Society through the vehicle of the Appraisal Institute.

¹⁰ This approach includes a "quick look" at the reasonableness of the restraint. See 7 Phillip E. Areeda, Antitrust Law PP 1510c, 1511 (1986). HN17 [↑] The "quick look" is a means by which the per se rule and "rule of reason" have been collapsed. The "quick look" means that the Court will first consider the justifications for the challenged restraint. A persuasive justification for an apparent illegal restraint may require further analysis which effectively converts a per se approach into a rule of reason analysis.

¹¹ In amending this Count, Plaintiffs are directed to be cautious about the inclusion of both institutional Defendants. As was indicated in the Court's discussion of Plaintiffs' section 2 claims, the Appraisal Institute and AIREA cannot conspire with one another under Copperweld Corp. v. Independence Tube Corp., 467 U.S. 752, 81 L. Ed. 2d 628, 104 S. Ct. 2731 (1984).

Section 7 HN18[↑] prohibits one corporation from acquiring another corporation where the effect of the merger "may be substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly." 15 U.S.C. § 18 \(1988\).

Despite these allegations, Plaintiffs make no allegation regarding the market in which competition was lessened or monopolized. While either the market for non-residential real estate appraisal services or the market for establishing, conferring, and promoting professional training, qualifications, and designations for real estate appraisers, or both, might have been alleged, Plaintiffs do not state a claim without notifying the Defendants of the market said to be monopolized. See United States v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 353 U.S. 586, 593, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1057, 77 S. Ct. 872 \(1957\) (indicating that identification of the relevant product and geographic markets is [\[41\]](#) a "necessary predicate" to a section 7 claim). Accordingly, with respect to Count V, Defendants' Motion to Dismiss is granted.

C. The Lanham Act

In Count VI, Plaintiffs claim that all of the Defendants violated section 43(a) of the Lanham Act. That section, in relevant part, states:

HN19[↑] (1) Any person who, on or in connection with any goods or services, or any container for goods, uses in commerce any word, term, name, symbol, or device, or any combination thereof, or any false designation of origin, false or misleading description of fact, or false or misleading representation of fact, which--
 . . .
 (B) in commercial advertising or promotion, misrepresents the nature, characteristics, qualities, or geographic origin of his or her or another person's goods, services, or commercial activities, shall be liable in a civil action by any person who believes that he or she is or is likely to be damaged by such act.

15 U.S.C. § 1125\(a\) \(1988\).

HN20[↑] To state a claim for false advertising under section 43(a), a plaintiff must allege that the defendants' advertisements were: (1) false and misleading; (2) actually or likely to deceive a substantial [\[42\]](#) segment of their audience; (3) material in their effects on purchasing decisions; (4) touting goods or services in interstate commerce; and, (5) likely to injure the plaintiff. See Cook, Perkiss & Liehe, Inc. v. Northern California Collection Serv., 911 F.2d 242, 244 \(9th Cir. 1990\).

In paragraphs 30 and 31 of the Second Amended Complaint, Plaintiffs describe the allegedly disparaging advertising.¹² Plaintiffs [\[*608\]](#) contend that only two weeks after the implementation of the "unification" Plan, the

¹² These allegations are quoted as follows:

30. Having effectively disenfranchised SRPAs and drastically impaired their ability to preserve competitive equality by obtaining the MAI designation, as described in PP 28 and 29 above, following the "unification" defendants have not only also failed to promote the SRPA designation (contrary to their pre-unification promises, see P 25 above), but in fact have actively denigrated the SRPA designation relative to the MAI designation and thereby unfairly, deceptively, and anti-competitively advantaged MAIs (including themselves) at the expense of SRPAs (including plaintiffs). Among numerous examples are the following, all of which, whether produced and disseminated by the Appraisal Institute or by one of its Chapters, were and are under defendants' supervision and control:

(a) Within weeks of the "unification" effective date, an Appraisal Institute advertisement in Florida's most prominent real estate publication falsely stated that "NOW THERE ARE ONLY TWO PROFESSIONAL DESIGNATIONS FOR APPRAISERS" -- which the advertisement identified as:

"MAI Member Appraisal Institute SRA Senior Residential Appraiser" -- and reinforced the falsehood by "warning" the consuming public that

Appraisal Institute placed an advertisement in Florida's "most prominent real estate publication" which falsely stated that: "Now there are only two professional designations for appraisers." Those two designations were identified as the MAI and the SRA. No mention was made of the SRPA. Plaintiffs also complain that the Appraisal Institute has made several other advertisements promoting the SRA and the MAI designations without promoting the SRPA designation.

[43] In the only example in the Second Amended Complaint of allegedly false advertising by an individual Defendant, Plaintiffs complain that Defendant Price, a regional chairman for the Appraisal Institute, caused an

"Many call themselves appraisers but not all appraisers are professionals."

This tacit disparagement of SRPAs carried the imprimatur of the official Appraisal Institute logo.

(b) Numerous Appraisal Institute advertisements in educational materials have made and continue to make no mention whatever of the SRPA designation. Instead, these advertisements feature two large logos (each over three times taller than the advertisement's largest type face) superimposed over the outline of the United States -- the SRA logo and (as the "lead" logo) the logo of "MAI - American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers."

(c) Defendants have fostered a campaign of promotions and advertising designed to convey the false and misleading impression that the SRPA designation is at best irrelevant or non-existent, if not actually inferior and non-professional. In addition to the examples noted above, these have included advertisements, such as one in the January 30, 1991 BANKER AND TRADESMAN magazine, asking the buying public the question:

"Who in the world could give you the fair and square value of an oval office?"

The answer (under a picture of the White House) once again disparaged SRPAs:

"A Real Estate Appraiser certified as MAI. A designation of such demanding requirements that only 3% of the appraisers in America have qualified. Experience. Knowledge. Ethics. Professionalism. Performance. These are the reasons courts, banks, developers, brokers, and government agencies for over fifty years have sought out and relied upon MAI appraisals. The next time you require a real estate appraiser, demand an MAI."

(d) Numerous advertisements placed by individual Chapters of the Appraisal Institute treat SRPAs and the SRPA designation as nonexistent. The Chapters identify themselves, for example, as

"APPRaisal INSTITUTE - CLEVELAND CHAPTER Awarding the MAI and SRA Professional Designations."

(e) Continuing the theme of SRPA non-existence and/or professional inferiority, an Appraisal Institute promotional piece put forth under defendants' supervision and control asserts -- falsely, since SRPAs are also members of the Institute -- that:

"The Appraisal Institute members hold two of the oldest and most respected professional designations in the real estate appraisal industry, the MAI (general appraisers specializing in all types of properties) and SRA (specialists in appraisals of individual properties of 1-4 units)."

(f) Even when defendants do not disparage SRPAs (and advantage MAIs) by omitting SRPAs outright, defendants' official publication descriptions denigrate SRPAs. Those publications state, for example, that MAIs "are experienced," while SRPAs (if mentioned at all) merely "have experience;" that MAIs do "valuation and evaluation," while SRPAs (if mentioned at all) merely do "valuation;" and that MAI is a "professional membership designation," while SRPA is merely a "membership designation."

31. Defendants' wrongful conduct described in P 30 above has not abated with time, despite numerous complaints and entreaties from plaintiffs. At the instance of defendant JOE R. PRICE, plaintiffs believe, still another disparaging advertisement was placed in the January, 1993 edition of Florida Trend, the best known real estate business publication in Florida, falsely stating that as a result of a recent merger "MAI and SRA are the surviving designations . . ." [Emphasis added]. Defendant Price, regional chairman for defendant Appraisal Institute's Region X, which includes Florida, is a competitor of, inter alia, plaintiffs Buckley and Buckley Appraisal Services, Inc. The address given in the advertisement is 1639 Forum Place, West Palm Beach, Florida, 33401, which on information and belief is the address of defendant Price's real estate appraisal business. On information and belief, defendant Price has also been instrumental in earlier disparaging advertising promulgated in Florida.

(Second Am. Compl. PP 30-31.)

advertisement to be placed in the January, 1993 edition of Florida Trend. The advertisement stated that as a result of a recent merger "MAI and SRA are the surviving designations . . ."

Although the Defendants contend that the advertisements alleged are neutral with respect to the SRPA, and merely puff up the MAI, see Castrol Inc. v. Pennzoil Co., 987 F.2d 939, 945-46 (3d Cir. 1993); Cook, Perkiss & Liehe, Inc. v. Northern California Collection Serv., 911 F.2d 242, 245 (9th Cir. 1990), the substantive allegations against Defendants Price and the Appraisal Institute are sufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss. HN21[¹³] To state a claim for a Lanham Act violation, a plaintiff need not allege that the defendant's representations make direct comparisons to the plaintiff's product or even specifically mention the plaintiff's product. See Castrol Inc., 987 F.2d at 946. The representations [44] alleged by Plaintiff might reasonably be understood to be misrepresentations. Plaintiffs have thus stated the substance of a claim.¹³

Defendants correctly point out, however, that Plaintiffs have stated claims only against the Appraisal Institute and Joe R. Price. No other Defendant is specifically connected to any alleged misrepresentation. Given that Plaintiffs have not alleged or demonstrated the applicability of any theory of vicarious liability, they do not state a claim against the other Defendants.

Accordingly, with respect to Defendants Appraisal Institute and Joe R. Price, on Count VI, Defendants' Motion to Dismiss is denied. With respect to the other Defendants, the Motion is granted.

D. [45] Pendent State Law Claims

1. Illinois Antitrust Laws

In Count VII, Plaintiff Solano alleges a violation of the Illinois Antitrust Act, 740 ILCS 10/1 to 10/11 (Smith-Hurd 1993), incorporating by reference parts of each of the first five counts. As the Court treats the state antitrust law as it would federal law, see 740 ILCS 10/11 (Smith-Hurd 1993) (indicating that HN22[¹⁴] Illinois state courts should be guided by the federal antitrust law where the wording of the state act is identical to a federal provision), the Court concludes as follows. To the extent federal antitrust counts, or parts thereof, have been dismissed, the corresponding parts of this count are also dismissed. To the extent the previous counts remain, this count remains.

Accordingly, with respect to Count VII, Defendants Motion to Dismiss is denied in part and granted in part, as indicated above.

2. Illinois Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act

In Count VIII, Plaintiff Solano claims that the Defendants violated HN23[¹⁵] the Illinois Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act, 815 ILCS 505/1 to 505/12 (Smith-Hurd 1993). That act purports to prohibit all unfair methods of competition, but has been [46] restricted to deceptive practices. Laughlin v. Evanston Hosp., 133 Ill. 2d 374, 550 N.E.2d 986, 993 (Ill. 1990).

A violation of the Illinois Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act based on misrepresentation or fraud must be [*609] plead with the particularity of Rule 9(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. See Ramson v. Layne, 668 F. Supp. 1162, 1170 (N.D. Ill. 1987). To the extent that plaintiffs claim any of the Defendants violated section 505/2, Rule 9(b) is satisfied only with respect to Defendants Appraisal Institute and Price, based on the misrepresentations said to satisfy the Lanham Act.

Plaintiffs seek to include the remaining Defendants within the scope of this count by alleging, without specificity, that the Defendants' "foregoing schemes" and "foregoing conduct", presumably meaning the previously alleged violations of the Sherman and Clayton Acts, constituted violations of section 505/2. Without addressing the question of whether these allegations afford sufficient notice, the Court concludes that Plaintiffs have failed to state a claim with respect to any of the remaining Defendants. According to the Supreme Court [47] of Illinois, the act is "limited to conduct that defrauds or deceives consumers or others." Laughlin v. Evanston Hosp., 550 N.E.2d at 993; see also Sullivan's Wholesale Drug Co. v. Faryl's Pharmacy, Inc., 214 Ill. App. 3d 1073, 573 N.E.2d 1370, 1376, 158 Ill. Dec. 185 (Ill. App. Ct.) (citing Laughlin), appeal denied, 580 N.E.2d 136, 141 Ill. 2d 561, 162 Ill. Dec. 510 (Ill. 1991). Since Plaintiffs have failed to state a theory of vicarious liability, they state a claim only against the Appraisal Institute and Price.

¹³ Defendants also contend that Plaintiffs have made no allegations with respect to their goods or services which have been misrepresented. This concern is adequately addressed by the Second Amended Complaint. In this Count, Plaintiffs seek damages for the misrepresentation of the quality of their appraisal services.

Accordingly, with respect to Defendants Appraisal Institute and Price, on Count VIII, Defendants' Motion to Dismiss is denied. With respect to the remaining Defendants, the Motion is granted.

3. Defamation and Commercial Disparagement

In Count IX, Plaintiffs Blau, Solano, Buckley, and Buckley Appraisal Services, claim that the Defendants defamed them. To state a claim for defamation, a plaintiff must show that a defendant or defendants made a false statement concerning him, that there was an improper publication to a third party with the defendant or defendants at fault, and that the statement's publication caused damage to the plaintiff. Krasinski v. United Parcel Serv., 124 Ill. 2d 483, 530 N.E.2d 468, 471, 125 Ill. Dec. 310 (Ill. 1988). [48] Here at issue is whether the Plaintiffs have properly stated that they were damaged by the Defendants' alleged statements.

Defamatory statements may be considered defamatory per se or per quod. Statements are defamatory per se when "the words used are so obviously and materially harmful to the plaintiff that injury to his reputation may be presumed." Kolegas v. Heftel Broadcasting Corp., 154 Ill. 2d 1, 607 N.E.2d 201, 206, 180 Ill. Dec. 307 (Ill. 1992). Statements are defamatory per quod if when their defamatory character is not apparent on their face, and extrinsic facts are required to explain their defamatory meaning. Id. If a plaintiff properly pleads per se defamation, he need not make any specific allegations with respect to his damages; damages are presumed. However, if a plaintiff must demonstrate per quod defamation to prevail, he must specifically plead his special damages in his complaint. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(g).

Here, HN24[¹] Plaintiffs make no specific allegations with respect to their damages; they only allege that Defendants' statements injured their business reputations. These allegations are insufficient to state special damages. See Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. v. Jacobson, 713 F.2d 262, 270 (7th Cir. 1983). [49] Plaintiffs must therefore must show per se defamation to proceed with their defamation claim.

Initially, the Court notes that Plaintiffs make the general allegation that the Appraisal Institute publishes and disseminates materials which assert that MAIs hold a "professional membership designation", while SRPAs do not. These allegations lack the specificity required to state a claim. See Derson Group, Ltd. v. Right Management Consultants, 683 F. Supp. 1224, 1229 (N.D. Ill. 1988).

Plaintiffs do point to one specific advertisement said to falsely impute their lack of professionalism. Plaintiffs claim that the Defendants falsely claimed in the challenged advertisement that MAIs and SRAs are the "only two professional designations for appraisers." That statement, coupled with the statement "Many call themselves appraisers" [*610] but not all appraisers are professional," contained in the same advertisement, is argued to be defamatory. Plaintiffs contend that the statements that "Now there are only two professional designations for appraisers" and that "many call themselves appraisers but not all appraisers are professional," are per se defamatory because [50] they impute lack of professionalism to SRPAs. HN25[¹] A statement that imputes an "inability to perform or want of integrity in the discharge of duties of office or employment" is one of four categories of statements that are considered defamatory per se in Illinois. Id.

In the opinion of the Court, Defendants statements may be understood to impute a lack of professionalism to SRPAs, assuming, as Plaintiffs claim, SRPAs are professional appraisers. The alleged statement clearly limits professional appraisers to MAIs and SRAs. To a knowledgeable reader, this statement has the same effect as the statement: "SRPAs are not professional appraisers."

Defendants contend that the statements are subject to HN26[↑] the "innocent construction" rule. The rule is stated as follows:

[A] written or oral statement is to be considered in context, with the words and the implications therefrom given their natural and obvious meaning; if, as so construed, the statement may reasonably be innocently interpreted or reasonably be interpreted as referring to someone other than the plaintiff it cannot be actionable per se.

Chapski v. Copley Press, 92 Ill. 2d 344, 442 N.E.2d 195, 199, 65 Ill. Dec. 884 \(Ill. 1982\). [\[51\]](#) Taken in the context of the facts as set out in the Second Amended Complaint, the alleged statements cannot be given a reasonably innocent meaning. Assuming SRPAs were professional appraisers at the time the statement was published, the statements stating that only other kinds of appraisers were "professional" cannot be innocently construed. That argument is thus rejected.

Defendants also argue that the statements were not defamatory because they did not specifically refer to any of the Plaintiffs or to SRPAs in general and therefore were not "obviously and naturally hurtful" so as to be considered defamatory per se. Defendants do not provide the Court with authority that supports this position, however. The Court will therefore let this claim proceed against the Appraisal Institute.¹⁴ No other Defendant is specifically alleged to have made the advertisement here found to be defamatory per se.

In addition [\[52\]](#) to making its defamation allegations, Count IX is also predicated on the common law action of commercial disparagement. Although there is some dispute as to whether this type of action remains viable in Illinois, the Court, for the moment, accepts the reasoning of Judge Duff in Richard Wolf Medical Instruments Corp. v. Dory, 723 F. Supp. 37, 42 \(N.D. Ill. 1989\). In Dory, Judge Duff held that commercial disparagement was still actionable in Illinois.¹⁵ HN27[↑] To state an action for commercial disparagement, the plaintiff must show that the Defendant made false and demeaning statements regarding the quality of another's goods and services. Zahran v. National Guardian Life Ins., 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4730, No. 90- C-907, 1993 WL 116738 at *3 (N.D. Ill. April 14, 1993) (Grady, J.). In the opinion of the Court, Plaintiffs [\[53\]](#) have stated a claim under this standard. The statement regarded as defamatory might also be reasonably construed to demean the quality of Plaintiffs appraisal services.

Accordingly, Defendants Motion to Dismiss Count IX is denied with respect to the Appraisal Institute. The Motion is granted with respect to the remaining Defendants.

4. Usurpation of a Commercial Property Right

In Count X, Plaintiffs Blau, Solano, and Buckley claim that the Defendants unlawfully interfered with their right to pursue their business. This is an attempt to [\[*611\]](#) plead the common law tort of tortious interference. See City of Rock Falls v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 13 Ill. App. 3d 359, 300 N.E.2d 331, 333 \(Ill. App. Ct. 1973\). HN28[↑] The elements of this tort are as follows: (1) the existence of a valid business expectancy; (2) knowledge of that expectancy by the interferer; (3) interference causing a termination of that expectancy; and (4) damages. Id.

Plaintiffs have alleged an expectancy in their SRPA designations. The Plaintiffs allegations with respect to purported anticompetitive activity are sufficient to permit this claim to proceed with respect to each of the Defendants, at least to a motion [\[54\]](#) for summary judgment, if appropriate.

Accordingly, Defendants' Motion to Dismiss Count X is denied.

5. Breach of Fiduciary Duty

¹⁴ Contrary authority may be presented to the Court on a Motion for Summary Judgment, if appropriate.

¹⁵ The validity of the Wolf decision and the relationship between the commerical disparagement theory and the defamation theory may be raised on a motion for summary judgment, if appropriate.

In Count XI, Plaintiffs Blau, Solano, and Buckley claim that Defendants Marshall, Fountain, Brown, Reese and LeGrand breach fiduciary duties owed by virtue of their positions as officers of the Society.

The Second Amended Complaint alleges that Defendants Marshall and Brown are current officers of the Society. It does not allege that Marshall and Brown were officers of the Society at the time of "unification." Any breach of fiduciary duty by either Marshall or Brown, based on either's status as an officer of the Society, must be predicated on post-unification conduct. The Second Amended Complaint fails to allege any such conduct by the Society. While these Defendants might have been involved in a conspiracy post unification, there is no indication, or permissible inference, that Marshall or Brown breached a fiduciary duty. Neither had any power relevant to the Second Amended Complaint. According to Plaintiffs' allegations, the Society lacked the power to affect the SRPA designation post-unification. Accordingly, with respect to Defendants Marshall and [55] Brown, the motion to dismiss, on Count XI, is granted.

With respect to Defendants Fountain, Reese, and Le Grand, Plaintiffs' claims may proceed.

Accordingly, Defendants' Motion to dismiss is granted in part and denied in part, as indicated.

III. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Defendants' Motion to Dismiss is denied in part and granted in part. Plaintiffs are granted leave to file a final amended complaint within thirty days of the date of this Memorandum Opinion and Order.

ENTER:

JOHN A. NORDBERG

United States District Judge

DATED: February 4, 1994

End of Document

MCM Partners v. Boscarino

United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division

February 16, 1994, Decided ; February 17, 1994, Docketed

No. 92 C 5641

Reporter

1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1824 *; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,547

MCM PARTNERS, INC., Plaintiff, v. NICK BOSCARINO, O.G. SERVICE CORPORATION, ANDREWS-BARTLETT & ASSOCIATES, INC. d/b/a ANDREWS-BARTLETT EXPOSITION SERVICES, CHARLES (BUTCH) BARTLETT, BONNIE AARON, FREEMAN DECORATING COMPANY, DALE LEITHLEITER, and DOUG VAN ORG, Defendants.

Core Terms

alleges, conspiracy, Sherman Act, exhibition, contractors, seller, rent, antitrust, motion to dismiss, supplier, prices, monopolize, conspired, buyer, competitors, lifts, moving equipment, price fixing, violations, consumers, personnel, privity, rental, res judicata, forklifts, parties, fork, dismissal with prejudice, material handling, rental equipment

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > Sentencing > Fines

Criminal Law & Procedure > Criminal Offenses > Miscellaneous Offenses > General Overview

HN1 Regulated Practices, Trade Practices & Unfair Competition

Whenever a corporation shall violate any of the penal provisions of the antitrust laws, such violation shall be deemed to be also that of the individual directors, officers, or agents of such corporation who authorize, order, or do any of the acts constituting in whole or in part such violation, and such violation shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and upon conviction therefor of any such director, officer, or agent he shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding $ 5,000 or by imprisonment for not exceeding one year, or by both, in the discretion of the court. 15 U.S.C.S. § 24.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > Res Judicata

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > General Overview

HN2 Preclusion of Judgments, Res Judicata

For res judicata to bar a subsequent suit, the parties in both suits must be identical or in privity, the cause of action must be the same, and there must be a final judgment on the merits. There is no doubt that a dismissal with prejudice is a decision on the merits. The "cause of action" is the same since a "cause of action" for res judicata purposes is broadly defined as a single core of operative facts that give rise to a remedy.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > Res Judicata

HN3 [down arrow] Preclusion of Judgments, Res Judicata

If defendants in a suit are not the same as the defendants in the first suit, they must show that they are in privity with them in order to benefit from the prior dismissal. Privity between parties is established where parties' interests are so closely aligned that they represent the same legal interests. Privity designates a person so identified in interest with a party to former litigation that he represents precisely the same legal right in respect to the subject matter involved or the term is sufficiently inclusive under the federal law of res judicata that a person may be bound by a judgment even though not a party if one of the parties to the suit is so closely aligned with his interests as to be his virtual representative.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > Per Se Violations

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Inchoate Crimes > Conspiracy > Elements

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Remedies > Damages

HN4 [down arrow] Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason, Per Se Violations

Section 1 of the Sherman Act proscribes any contract, combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade and condemns every person who makes such a contract or enters into such a conspiracy. Section 15 of the Sherman Act permits any person injured by the violation to sue for treble damages. Although all-encompassing on its face, § 1 of the Sherman Act prohibits only unreasonable restraints of trade. A restraint may be found unreasonable either because it fits within a class of restraints held to be per se unreasonable, or because it violates what has come to be known as the "rule of reason." Under the rule of reason, the factfinder weighs all of the circumstances of a case in deciding whether a restrictive practice should be prohibited as imposing an unreasonable restraint on competition. Certain types of conduct are so destructive of competition that they are considered per se violations of the Sherman Act. When a per se offense is alleged, a showing of anticompetitive effect is not required to establish a Sherman Antitrust Act violation, the conduct is considered anticompetitive without an inquiry into the precise harm caused. A § 1 plaintiff must show more than injury to a competitor; he must show an injury to market competitiveness.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN5 [↓] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

A conspiracy in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act may be found where an agreement is found between two or more persons having a unity of purpose or a common design and understanding, or a meeting of minds in an unlawful arrangement.

Civil Procedure > Dismissal > Involuntary Dismissals > General Overview

HN6 [↓] Dismissal, Involuntary Dismissals

Defining the appropriate market is a question of fact, and it is fundamental that in deciding a motion to dismiss the well-pled allegations of the complaint must be taken as true.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Higher Education & Professional Associations > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN7 [↓] Regulated Industries, Higher Education & Professional Associations

A Sherman Act claim requires that the plaintiff allege an anticompetitive effect in a relevant market.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Elements

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN8 [↓] Attempts to Monopolize, Elements

An attempt to monopolize has three elements: specific intent to monopolize, predatory or anticompetitive conduct, and a dangerous probability of success.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Types of Commercial Transactions > Sales of Goods > General Overview

Contracts Law > Personal Property > Personality Leases > General Overview

Contracts Law > Types of Contracts > Lease Agreements > General Overview

HN9 [↓] Antitrust & Trade Law, Clayton Act

Section 3 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 14, provides in pertinent part that it shall be unlawful for any person to lease or make a sale or contract for sale of goods, wares, merchandise, machinery, supplies, or other commodities, for use, consumption, or resale within the United States, or fix a price charged therefor, or discount from, or rebate upon, such price, on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the lessee or purchaser thereof shall not use or deal in the goods, wares, merchandise, machinery, supplies, or other commodities of a competitor or competitors of the lessor or seller, where the effect of such lease, sale, or contract for sale or such condition, agreement or understanding may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce.

Judges: [*1] Plunkett

Opinion by: PAUL E. PLUNKETT

Opinion

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

This is a suit alleging unfair competition in the rental of equipment to exhibition contractors at McCormick Place in Chicago. MCM Partners, Inc. ("MCM"), a would-be lessor of fork lifts, material handling and personnel moving equipment to exhibition contractors at the McCormick Place exposition center in Chicago, sued its competitor, O.G. Service Corporation ("OG") and OG's principal, Nick Boscarino. What makes this suit unusual is that MCM also sued two exhibition contractors it wants to do business with, Andrews-Bartlett Exhibition Services ("AB") and Freeman Decorating Company ("FDC"); AB's president, Charles Bartlett; its controller, Bonnie Aaron; as well as Dale Leithleiter and Doug Van Ort,¹ identified as an employee and an officer of FDC respectively. On November 18, 1992, MCM voluntarily dismissed Boscarino and OG, leaving these potential customers and their employees as the only Defendants. The Court has jurisdiction under the antitrust laws, 15 U.S.C. § 15, and RICO, 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c). FDC, Leithleiter, and Van Ort have moved to dismiss [*2] the Complaint.²

Count I purports to state a claim under RICO. According to the Complaint, prior to April 1991 the only suppliers of fork lift trucks and other equipment to be used at McCormick Place were OG and another company, AIM Industrial Lift Truck. In April 1991, MCM started supplying forklifts to AB at McCormick Place. In the fall of 1991, OG bought out AIM. Boscarino, identified as a "principal" of OG, is a steward for the International Brotherhood of Teamsters Local 714 ("Teamsters"). According to the Complaint, Boscarino used his power as Teamsters' steward to compel exhibition contractors to rent from OG. According to the Complaint, contractors other than AB have refused to do business with MCM, stating that they have been told that they will have trouble with the Teamsters if they rent from anyone other than OG.

In a letter dated January 17, 1992, [*3] (Compl. Exh. A), AB agreed to utilize MCM as its primary supplier of gas scooters and to rent from MCM fifty percent of its requirements for fork lift trucks for two shows and one hundred percent of its requirements for others. On April 14, 1992, AB sent two purchase orders to MCM for forklifts and scooters. (Id. Exhs. B, C.) In a letter dated April 17, 1992, (id., Exh. D), AB cancelled these purchase orders.

MCM then brought suit No. 92 C 2621 in this court on April 20, 1992, against OG, Boscarino and others, alleging RICO violations and tortious interference with its contract with AB. This suit was settled and dismissed with prejudice on April 24, 1992. MCM alleges in the instant suit that as part of the settlement of the prior suit, AB, which was not a party to that suit, was to rescind its cancellation of the purchase orders. MCM alleges that it fulfilled the purchase orders but has not been fully paid.

¹ Named as Doug van Org in the Complaint, his attorneys spell his name Van Ort.

² The motion was initially referred to Magistrate Judge Weisberg.

MCM alleges that OG, Boscarino, Cliff Martin Larsen (a non-defendant), AB, Bartlett, and other unknown persons formed a racketeering enterprise that embarked upon a Scheme to use Boscarino's positions as a steward of Teamsters Local 714 and as president of OG to make OG [*4] the sole provider of fork lifts, material handling, and personnel moving equipment to exhibition contractors at McCormick Place. The Complaint alleges that Bartlett and Van Ort, as officers of AB and FDC respectively, caused AB and FDC, employers of employees represented by the Teamsters, to transfer things of value to Boscarino in violation of 29 U.S.C. § 186. These things of value were orders to rent fork lifts, material handling and personnel moving equipment from OG at inflated, above-market prices. As a result, MCM alleges it has been shut out of the market for equipment rentals at McCormick Place.

Count II alleges that AM, Bartlett, FDC, Leithleiter, and Van Ort conspired with Boscarino and OG to monopolize the rental of forklifts, material handling, and personnel moving equipment to exhibition contractors at McCormick Place in violation of sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1, 2. MCM alleges that Leithleiter and Van Ort agreed with Boscarino that they would cause FDC to rent exclusively from OG and that Bartlett similarly agreed on behalf of AB. This, MCM alleges, substantially increases the [*5] price of trade shows held at McCormick Place and thereby affects interstate commerce. Count III alleges that the exclusive dealing arrangements between OG and AB and FDC violate section 3 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 14, because they tend to lessen competition or create a monopoly.

Count IV alleges that by acquiring the assets of AIM Industrial Lift Truck in the fall of 1991, OG was attempting to monopolize the market for forklifts, materials handling, and personnel moving equipment to the trade show industry in Chicago. Because OG has been dismissed as a Defendant, MCM is not pursuing this claim. (Pl.'s Br. at 12.)

Count V alleges that the individual Defendants are liable for violations of 15 U.S.C. § 24, which makes corporate officers, directors, and agents liable for acts of their corporations in which they participate.³

[*6] Count VI alleges the state-law tort of trespass to chattels, alleging that FDC's employees without MCM's consent used nine of MCM's fork lifts that had been parked and secured at McCormick Place. Count VII alleges that FDC breached a promise to pay $ 30.00 for twenty gallons of gasoline, surely one of the smallest claims to be asserted in federal court in recent times.

Discussion

I. Res Judicata

The Defendants' motion first asserts that both the RICO and antitrust claims are barred by res judicata because of the dismissal with prejudice of MCM's first suit against OG and Boscarino. The parties agree that HN2 for res judicata to bar a subsequent suit, the parties in both suits must be identical or in privity, the cause of action must be the same, and there must be a final judgment on the merits. Federated Dep't Stores, Inc. v. Moitie, 452 U.S. 394, 398, 69 L. Ed. 2d 103, 101 S. Ct. 2424 \(1981\).

There is no doubt that a dismissal with prejudice is a decision on the merits. The "cause of action" is the same since a "cause of action" for res judicata purposes is broadly defined as "a single core of operative facts that give rise to a remedy." Lim v. Central DuPage Hosp., 972 F.2d 758, 763 \(7th Cir. 1992\), [*7] cert. denied, 113 S. Ct. 1586, 123

³

HN1 Whenever a corporation shall violate any of the penal provisions of the antitrust laws, such violation shall be deemed to be also that of the individual directors, officers, or agents of such corporation who shall have authorized, ordered, or done any of the acts constituting in whole or in part such violation, and such violation shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and upon conviction therefor of any such director, officer, or agent he shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding $ 5,000 or by imprisonment for not exceeding one year, or by both, in the discretion of the court.

L. Ed. 2d 153 (1993). Both suits allege the exclusion of MCM from the rental market at McCormick Place as a result of OG's alleged connection to the Teamsters' Union. It does not matter that the first suit did not assert an antitrust theory of liability; prior litigation acts as a bar not only to those issues raised and decided in the earlier litigation but also to those issues which could have been raised in that litigation. Id.

However, since the HN3⁴ Defendants in this suit are not the same as the defendants in the first suit, they must show that they are in privity with them in order to benefit from the prior dismissal. Privity between parties is established where parties' interests are so closely aligned that they represent the same legal interests. Secretary of Labor v. Fitzsimmons, 805 F.2d 682, 688 \(7th Cir. 1986\). The court in Fitzsimmons stated:

[Privity] designates . . . a person so identified in interest with a party to former litigation that he represents precisely the same legal right in respect to the subject matter involved . . . Or . . . the term is [*8] sufficiently inclusive 'under the federal law of res judicata [that] a person may be bound by a judgment even though not a party if one of the parties to the suit is so closely aligned with his interests as to be his virtual representative.'

Fitzsimmons, 805 F.2d at 688 n.9 (quoting Nash County Bd. of Educ. v. Biltmore Co., 640 F.2d 484, 493, 493-94 \(4th Cir. 1981\) (citations omitted)). See also Kerr-McGee Chem. Corp. v. Hartigan, 816 F.2d 1177, 1180 \(7th Cir. 1987\) ("[A] person may be bound by a judgment even though not a party if one of the parties to the suit is so closely aligned with his interests as to be his virtual representative.")

Defendants have not shown how this requirement has been met. Privity is a question of fact. Donovan v. Estate of Fitzsimmons, 778 F.2d 298, 301 \(7th Cir. 1985\). The only facts before us are those of the complaints in the two suits.⁴ Although the alleged roles of the parties are different in the two complaints, neither portray the interests of OG and the exhibition contractors AB and FDC as congruent or that OG served [*9] as their virtual representative.

In the earlier suit, AB was portrayed as a victim of OG's racketeering activity, forced by threats of labor disruptions to pay a higher than market price for inferior equipment. FDC was not mentioned. In this suit FDC and AB are portrayed as co-conspirators with OG in a conspiracy to keep OG's rivals out of the marketplace. Assuming this is true (although it is hard to see how they could benefit from such a conspiracy), MCM cites no authority for the proposition that alleged co-conspirators who conspire to commit a tort are [*10] in privity such that a judgment in favor of one bars a suit against another. (A finding in the first suit that no conspiracy existed might collaterally estop MCM, but there were no findings of fact in the first suit.) Nor does the fact that AB and FDC have exclusive contractual relationships with OG establish their privity with OG. As far as we can see, the only interest AB and FDC have in common with OG is their desire not to be sued by MCM or to pay damages, and that hardly suffices. Res judicata, therefore, does not bar this suit against the remaining Defendants.

II. RICO

Defendants contend that MCM's RICO claim should be dismissed because the Complaint does not state which subsection of 18 U.S.C. § 1962 the Defendants have violated. The Defendants also contend that the Complaint does not plead predicate acts of mail fraud with the particularity required by Rule 9(b), and that MCM has not properly alleged a pattern of racketeering activity. MCM does not respond to these contentions, but says that the defects are "mostly cosmetic" concerns that may be cured by amendment. (Pl.'s Br. at 12-13.) In light of the deficiencies pointed [*11] out by Defendants, Count I is hereby dismissed without prejudice.

III. Sherman Act Section 1

MCM's antitrust claims do not fit recognized patterns. Instead of a conspiracy of sellers to raise prices, we have a conspiracy of buyers to raise prices by entering into exclusive dealing arrangements, coerced by threats of labor disruption by a union official in cahoots with the would-be monopolist. As a consequence the Plaintiff is unable to compete and prices for rental equipment at McCormick place have allegedly been artificially inflated. But what makes this suit truly extraordinary is that the Plaintiff is not suing the would-be monopolist but the victims forced to deal with it.

⁴ Since the first suit was dismissed by order of the court on Plaintiff's motion under Rule 41(a), no facts were established. It is doubtful that we would be required to accept as true the allegations of a prior complaint in deciding whether privity was established, absent facts giving rise to an estoppel against the plaintiff. Nevertheless, even accepting as true the relationships among the parties inferred from the first complaint, we cannot find privity here.

Count II purports to state a claim under both sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1, 2. HN4↑ Section 1 of the Sherman Act proscribes any contract, combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade and condemns every person who makes such a contract or enters into such a conspiracy. Section 15 permits any person injured by the violation to sue for treble damages. Although all-encompassing on its face, the Supreme Court has long held that section 1 prohibits [*12] only unreasonable restraints of trade. See Continental T.V., Inc. v. GTE Sylvania, Inc., 433 U.S. 36, 49, 53 L. Ed. 2d 568, 97 S. Ct. 2549 \(1977\). A restraint may be found unreasonable either because it fits within a class of restraints held to be per se unreasonable, or because it violates what has come to be known as the "Rule of Reason." Under the Rule of Reason, "the factfinder weighs all of the circumstances of a case in deciding whether a restrictive practice should be prohibited as imposing an unreasonable restraint on competition." Id.

Certain types of conduct are so destructive of competition that they are considered per se violations of the Sherman Act. When a per se offense is alleged, a showing of anticompetitive effect is not required to establish a Sherman Antitrust Act violation -- the conduct is considered anticompetitive without an inquiry into the precise harm caused. Continental T.V., 433 U.S. at 49-50; Wilk v. American Medical Ass'n, 895 F.2d 352, 359 \(7th Cir. 1990\). A section 1 plaintiff must show more than injury to a competitor; he must show an injury to market competitiveness. See [*13] Wigod v. Chicago Mercantile Exch., 981 F.2d 1510, 1515 \(7th Cir. 1992\).

The Complaint is unclear as to exactly what the alleged conspiracy or contract is. We see three possibilities. MCM did not distinguish these in its Complaint or in its brief. We do so here because the appropriate analysis differs as to each. In evaluating the Complaint on a motion to dismiss there is some tension between the rule that the motion should not be granted unless "no relief could be granted under any set of facts that could be proved consistent with the allegations," Hishon v. King & Spalding, 467 U.S. 69, 73, 81 L. Ed. 2d 59, 104 S. Ct. 2229 \(1984\), and the rule that a court should not "assume that the [plaintiff] can prove facts that it has not alleged or that the defendants have violated the antitrust laws in ways that have not been alleged." Associated Gen. Contractors, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519, 526, 74 L. Ed. 2d 723, 103 S. Ct. 897 \(1983\).

A. Extortion as a Section 1 Violation

The first possible conspiracy that may be inferred from the Complaint is Boscarino's and OG's alleged use of extortion to prevent exhibition contractors at [*14] McCormick Place from renting from other suppliers and to prevent other suppliers from renting to them. A conspiracy to injure competitors by unfair methods of competition can violate the Sherman Act if the effect is to restrain competition. Havoco of America, Ltd. v. Shell Oil Co., 626 F.2d 549, 556-58 \(7th Cir. 1980\). Such claims are evaluated under the Rule of Reason. Id. Whether or not McCormick Place would otherwise be considered a distinct, "market," taking the allegations of the Complaint as true, it became one when OG and Boscarino claimed it as their "turf" and threatened other suppliers and those who dealt with them. This action made it possible for them to fix the rental prices for equipment to be used there. It may be inferred from the Complaint that OG threatens to damage the equipment of any supplier that rents to a McCormick Place exhibition contractor, with the result that OG is the sole supplier available.

The fundamental obstacle to this theory is that OG's alleged use of extortion to create barriers to the entry of other equipment suppliers has nothing to do with the remaining Defendants, none of which are alleged to have assisted [*15] or conspired with OG or Boscarino in threatening MCM or other potential equipment suppliers. Aside from conclusory allegations that they "conspired" with OG and Boscarino, all they are alleged to have done is rent equipment from OG and refuse to deal with MCM.

HN5↑ A conspiracy in violation of section 1 may be found where an agreement is found between two or more persons having "a unity of purpose or a common design and understanding, or a meeting of minds in an unlawful arrangement." American Tobacco Co. v. United States, 328 U.S. 781, 810, 90 L. Ed. 1575, 66 S. Ct. 1125 \(1946\).

See also Monsanto Co. v. Spray-Rite Serv. Corp., 465 U.S. 752, 764, 79 L. Ed. 2d 775, 104 S. Ct. 1464 \(1984\). Nothing in the Complaint tends to show an agreement by AB or FDC to further OG's alleged plan to monopolize the market for rental equipment at McCormick Place or suggests a reason why they would want such a result. The only reasonable inference to be drawn from the facts alleged in the Complaint is that AB and FDC's agreement to deal exclusively with OG was motivated by their desire to avoid labor trouble and damage to the rented equipment, which hardly suggests a meeting of the minds with OG or Boscarino. [*16] The person who "agrees" to give a gunman his wallet is not a co-conspirator.

B. Horizontal Conspiracy

Although FDC and AB did not agree to OG's use of intimidation against them and MCM, they did agree to deal exclusively with OG.⁵ Can there be a violation in this agreement? According to the Complaint, the purpose of this conspiracy was to raise or stabilize the price for the rentals of forklifts, material handling and personnel moving equipment to exhibition contractors at McCormick Place in Chicago. (Compl. P 60.) We can infer that AB and FDC, as exhibition contractors at McCormick Place, are competitors. An agreement among competitors to fix the prices at which they will purchase can constitute a violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act.

[*17] There are two problems with this theory. First, an allegation of "price fixing" is not a shibboleth that automatically opens the doors of the federal courthouse. According to the Complaint, AB and FDC did not agree to rent only at a particular price, only to rent from a particular source, with the alleged purpose of raising or stabilizing the prices paid. Presumably, AB and FDC would pay the same price, whatever OG chose to charge, but that is hardly what is meant by price fixing. Instead of buyers combining to dictate prices to the seller, they have combined in order to permit a single seller to dictate prices to them. Each individual seller "fixes" the price it will charge, and if more than one buyer agrees to pay that price, it is hardly a Sherman Act violation. An agreement by competitors to buy from the same source could conceivably be a Sherman Act violation, but it is not "price fixing" and not a per se violation.

MCM has not cited any case in which an agreement between purchasers for the purpose of "raising or stabilizing" the prices at which they purchase to be in violation of section 1. We have serious doubts that this is a type of conduct the antitrust laws were intended [*18] to protect against, and this is a prerequisite for a cause of action. See Bunker Ramo Corp. v. United Business Forms, Inc., 713 F.2d 1272, 1283 \(7th Cir. 1983\). Normally an antitrust plaintiff must show injury to consumers, not just to itself. Wigod, 981 F.2d at 1515. Who are the consumers? AB and FDC are consumers of rental equipment, but to consider as an antitrust injury their self-inflicted "injury" resulting from their decision to pay higher prices would be absurd. To do so would mean any seller whose lower bid was not accepted by a purchaser could sue under the Sherman Act. As will be discussed later, MCM has not shown any effect on the market for rental equipment in Chicago, so no consumer injury may be found there.

What about AB's and FDC's consumers, those organizations that contract with them to stage exhibitions and trade shows? The ordinary consequence of an agreement to buy from the same higher-priced supplier is that the conspirators' costs are raised and their profits lowered. They will be able to pass the increased costs along to consumers only if they have market -- the ability to raise prices -- in their [*19] own market, here, the market for exhibition contractors.⁶ MCM alleges that AB and FDC together had seventy-five percent of the convention and trade show business in Chicago in 1992, (Compl. P 95), but does not allege that they have market power. Market power should not be presumed from a seventy-five percent market share without additional information about the capability of non-conspiring firms to increase their market share and the costs of entry for new competitors. See Ball Memorial Hosp., Inc. v. Mutual Hosp. Ins., Inc., 784 F.2d 1325, 1335 (7th Cir. 1986). This information cannot be derived from the Complaint, and therefore MCM has not sufficiently pleaded injury to consumers in this market, either.

⁵ We note that the Complaint does not allege that they specifically agreed not to deal with MCM, but rather alleges that they agreed to deal exclusively with OG. We do not therefore have to consider whether the facts of this case could somehow be shoehorned into the "group boycott" category of Sherman Act violations. See FTC v. Indiana Fed'n of Dentists, 476 U.S. 447, 458, 90 L. Ed. 2d 445, 106 S. Ct. 2009 \(1986\).

⁶ We ask whether AB and FDC have monopoly power only because it is a prerequisite to any harm to consumers resulting from their agreeing to pay a higher price for rental equipment. A supplier such as MCM would not have standing to complain of a monopoly among exhibition contractors. See Associated Gen. Contractors, 459 U.S. at 537-43; In re Indus. Gas Antitrust Litig. \(Bichan\), 681 F.2d 514 \(7th Cir. 1982\).

[*20] This count has another fundamental defect. Aside from the allegation that AB and FDC "combined and/or conspired" with OG, there are no allegations of any agreement between AB and FDC to deal only with OG. A boilerplate recitation of a conspiracy is insufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss. Car Carriers, Inc. v. Ford Motor Co., 745 F.2d 1101, 1107 n.4 (7th Cir. 1984). The pleaded facts must "outline or adumbrate" a Sherman Act violation. Id. at 1106. It is highly unlikely that such a conspiracy would exist under the set of facts pleaded. While we can infer from the allegations of the Complaint that it was in each firm's interest to deal exclusively with OG, there is nothing in the Complaint suggesting why they would "conspire" with each other to do so, and manifestly unreasonable inferences need not be drawn to sustain a complaint against a motion to dismiss. Cf. Monsanto, 465 U.S. at 764 (plaintiff must present evidence tending to exclude the possibility that alleged conspirators acted independently). Without allegations of a true "horizontal" conspiracy between AB and FDC, no [*21] "horizontal price fixing" claim has been pleaded.

C. Exclusive Dealing

One possibility remains. Exclusive dealing contracts have occasionally been addressed under section 1. An exclusive dealing contract is a "vertical" restraint, that is, it is an agreement between persons on different levels, here a lessor and lessee, rather than a "horizontal" agreement between competing buyers or sellers. Only if a vertical restraint is used to implement a price fixing scheme is it considered a per se violation of the Sherman Act. Otherwise it is judged under the "Rule of Reason." Car Carriers, 745 F.2d at 1108. The plaintiff must show that the arrangement has an anticompetitive effect that outweighs any pro-competitive benefits.

Although MCM alleges that OG, AB, and FDC conspired to fix prices, an agreement between one lessor and two lessees cannot constitute price fixing as that term is understood in antitrust law. Every seller "fixes" the price at which he will trade with a customer; that two purchasers agreed to pay one seller's price is hardly a Sherman Act violation. For "price fixing" to mean anything, it must refer to a plurality of sellers. Although [*22] the economic effect may be the same for the buyer, there is a qualitative difference between a scheme to coerce a buyer to buy from one seller at that seller's price and a conspiracy among sellers to ensure that whichever seller the buyer chooses the price remains the same.

The Seventh Circuit discussed the analysis applicable to an exclusive dealing arrangement in Collins v. Associated Pathologists, Ltd., 844 F.2d 473, 478 (7th Cir. 1988). The plaintiff, a pathologist, complained of a contract between a hospital and the defendant, a group of pathologists of which he was a former member. The contract designated the defendant medical group as the sole supplier of pathology services to the hospital.

The court followed Tampa Electric Co. v. Nashville Coal Co., 365 U.S. 320, 5 L. Ed. 2d 580, 81 S. Ct. 623 (1961), which had involved a protracted requirements contract between a public electric utility and a coal company. In determining whether the contract was an unreasonable restraint of trade, the Court focused on potential competitors of the coal company that had contracted with Tampa Electric. The Court concluded that the relevant market area was the area [*23] where the other coal companies that could have supplied Tampa Electric competed. Id. at 330-33.⁷

⁷ Although Tampa Electric was brought under section 3 of the Clayton Act, courts rely on its analysis for cases arising under sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act. Since the proscription of section 3 of the Clayton Act is broader than that of sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, if a contract does not fall within the relevant market coverage of the former it is not forbidden by the latter. Collins, 844 F.2d at 478 n.4.

Following this reasoning, the Seventh Circuit first noted that there is no separate market for pathology services among patients. Collins, 844 F.2d at 477-78. The only market that could be affected, therefore, was the market for pathologists. The court found that this market was nationwide, with pathologists often traveling across the country to take positions in hospitals. Excluding the plaintiff from employment [*24] at one hospital had a negligible effect on that market, and the court affirmed summary judgment in favor of the defendants. Id. at 478-79.

Applying that reasoning here, the relevant market is not rentals to exhibition contractors at McCormick Place. Just as the plaintiff pathologist in Collins could sell his services to other hospitals or to employers other than hospitals, the market here is all of the potential renters of the equipment that MCM offers.⁸ MCM does not allege and has given us no reason to suppose that the equipment it rents is suitable only for use at exhibition sites. Without some such allegation, it makes no sense to limit the market to McCormick Place in Chicago.

[*25] HN6[

Defining the appropriate market is a question of fact, and it is fundamental that in deciding a motion to dismiss the well-pled allegations of the complaint must be taken as true. Nevertheless, dismissal is appropriate here. As the Seventh Circuit noted in Car Carriers, antitrust litigation is too expensive to permit a plaintiff to subject a defendant to the expense of discovery when there is no reasonable likelihood that it can construct a claim from the events related in the complaint. Car Carriers, 745 F.2d at 1106.

HN7 A Sherman Act claim requires that the plaintiff allege an anticompetitive effect in a relevant market. [Banks v. National Collegiate Athletic Ass'n, 977 F.2d 1081, 1087-88 \(7th Cir. 1992\). A market that is arbitrarily defined, a group of buyers or sellers alleged to be a market without supporting facts making it reasonable to treat them as such, has not been well pled. To permit a plaintiff to avoid a motion to dismiss by defining as a market any area of economic activity in which he has been injured would lead to absurdity. If the Marshall Field's store in the Chicago Loop refused to deal with a supplier [*26] of dress shirts, that supplier would have been excluded from a substantial part of the department store trade in the Chicago Loop, but the impact on the market for dress shirts in Chicago would be negligible. If a plaintiff could avoid a motion to dismiss by defining the relevant market as department stores in the Chicago Loop, it would be "tantamount to providing antitrust litigation with an exemption from Rule 12(b)(6)." Car Carriers, 745 F.2d at 1106-07.

A plaintiff must plead sufficient facts to show that the plaintiff's proposed market is a reasonable hypothesis; otherwise the plaintiff is pleading a legal conclusion. Here, MCM pleaded no facts tending to show that the market for its rental equipment is limited to exhibition contractors. In the absence of such allegations, we take judicial notice that the words "forklifts, materials handling and personnel moving equipment" designate items of widespread industrial use. That the market for them would be limited to exhibition contractors is so improbable that MCM should not be permitted to proceed with the suit. MCM's claim under § 1 of the Sherman Act is dismissed.⁹

⁸ Defendants contended that furnishing forklifts, materials handling, and personnel moving equipment at McCormick Place cannot constitute a market for antitrust purposes because there are other exhibition facilities within the Chicago metropolitan area. (Defs.' Br. at 11.) This was the wrong argument since it conceded that rentals to exhibition contractors was the relevant market. On a motion to dismiss, we must accept as true that the vast majority of the convention and trade show business in Chicago is conducted at McCormick Place, (Compl. P 72), and that AB and FDC together have 75% of the convention and trade show business there, (id. P 95). If the market is rentals to exhibition contractors, MCM has probably alleged sufficient anticompetitive effect.

⁹ It may appear contradictory that we have treated the rental of equipment at McCormick Place as a market in discussing MCM's claim of attempted monopolization by extortion, but have denied it is a relevant market here. In the first case, however, we look at competition from the standpoint of lessees and potential lessees of fork lift trucks to be used at McCormick place. They presumably need the equipment at McCormick place, not somewhere else, and the alleged actions undeniably impact the price they must pay. On the other hand, in reviewing an exclusive dealing arrangement for a good or service, we are instructed to look to the entire relevant market for that good or service, not just the part from which the plaintiff claims to have been excluded. We are to look at the economic effects from the standpoint of the competing supplier, not the potential purchaser with particular needs. Thus, although those needing fork lifts to be used at McCormick place and those supplying them to the Chicago area

[*27] IV. Sherman Act Section 2

MCM's claim under section 2 of the Sherman Act cannot survive the dismissal of OG and Boscarino, since that section forbids monopoly or an attempt to monopolize. HN8¹⁰ An attempt to monopolize has three elements: specific intent to monopolize, predatory or anticompetitive conduct, and a dangerous probability of success. Indiana Grocery, Inc. v. Super Valu Stores, Inc., 864 F.2d 1409, 1413 (7th Cir. 1989). While the Complaint might have stated a claim against OG and Boscarino, it does not allege facts from which it can be inferred that AB or FDC were attempting to monopolize anything.

The individual Defendant officers of AB and FDC could conceivably be liable under section 2 if they had acted with the purpose of furthering OG's attempt at monopoly, but we do not read the boilerplate allegation that they "combined and/or conspired" with Boscarino and OG, (Compl. P 59), so broadly. We read it as alleging no more than that the individual officers agreed, on behalf of their respective companies, to rent equipment to be used at McCormick place solely from OG. The only reasonable inference from the Complaint is that they were [*28] acting in the interests of their corporations in doing so; there is no allegation that they received any personal benefit from the agreements to rent equipment from OG at inflated prices. Specific intent to monopolize has therefore not been pleaded with respect to them, either.

V. Remaining Claims

Count III, based on § 3 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 14, also cannot survive the dismissal of Boscarino and OG. This section prohibits exclusive dealing if the effect is substantially to lessen competition and defines liability in terms of a person who sells or contracts for sale; it does not provide for liability of the buyer.¹⁰ McGuire v. Columbia Broadcasting Sys., Inc., 399 F.2d 902, 906 (9th Cir. 1968); Genetic Sys. Corp. v. Abbott Lab., 691 F. Supp. 407, 414-15 (D.D.C. 1988).

[*29] As noted above, MCM is not pursuing Count IV. Count V, based on 15 U.S.C. § 24, creates liability for corporate officers, directors and agents for corporate antitrust violations. The Defendants contend that this is a penal provision and not applicable. However, the substantive provisions of the antitrust laws are penal, and 15 U.S.C. § 15 permits civil suits for treble damages by persons injured by violations. It is accepted that corporate officers, directors, and agents may be held liable in a civil action for antitrust violations they authorize. Brown v. Donco Enter., Inc., 783 F.2d 644, 646-47 (6th Cir. 1986). Whether this liability is derived from section 24 or ordinary tort law principles makes no difference. Nevertheless, this count depends upon a predicate antitrust violation and cannot survive dismissal of the other antitrust counts.

As no viable federal claim remains, there is no basis for federal jurisdiction and this Court must decline jurisdiction over the pendent state law claims. United Mine Workers v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 726, 16 L. Ed. 2d 218, 86 S. Ct. 1130 (1966); Manor Health Care v. Guzzo, 894 F.2d 919, 922 (7th Cir. 1990). [*30] meet in the same market whether there is an effect on competition depends upon which end of the telescope one is looking through.

Conclusion

¹⁰ HN9¹⁰ Section 3 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 14, provides in pertinent part as follows:

It shall be unlawful for any person . . . to lease or make a sale or contract for sale of goods, wares, merchandise, machinery, supplies, or other commodities, . . . for use, consumption, or resale within the United States, . . . or fix a price charged therefor, or discount from, or rebate upon, such price, on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the lessee or purchaser thereof shall not use or deal in the goods, wares, merchandise, machinery, supplies, or other commodities of a competitor or competitors of the lessor or seller, where the effect of such lease, sale, or contract for sale or such condition, agreement or understanding may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce.

Defendants' motion to dismiss Count I (RICO) is granted, as MCM has not opposed the Defendants' contention that it has not been adequately pled. Dismissal as to this count is without prejudice.

Defendants' motion to dismiss Count II is granted as to section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1, for failing properly plead either a horizontal conspiracy among the remaining Defendants, a vertical conspiracy with OG for the purpose of unfair competition, or that the exclusive dealing arrangements affected the relevant market. That count is dismissed with prejudice.

Defendants' motion to dismiss Count II is granted as to section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2, because of MCM's failure to plead that the Defendants other than OG and Boscarino monopolized or intended to monopolize any market.

Defendants' motion to dismiss Count III is granted as to section 3 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 14, because that section applies only to sellers. This count is dismissed with prejudice.

Defendants' motion to dismiss Count IV is granted since MCM has withdrawn it.

Defendants' [\[*31\]](#) motion to dismiss Count V is granted since it applies only to corporate officers, directors or agents who participate in an underlying antitrust offense.

Defendants' motion to dismiss Counts VI and VII alleging trespass and breach of contract under Illinois law is granted. Those counts are dismissed without prejudice since there is no remaining basis for federal jurisdiction.

Counsel for MCM has periodically come close to Rule 11 sanctions. The claims dismissed herein ate a mish-mash. MCM's prosecution of this suit after dismissing OG and Boscarino left a racketeering count with no racketeer and an antitrust suit with no monopoly. If MCM refiles a RICO claim, it will be carefully scrutinized. If the problems addressed in this Opinion are ignored, sanctions will be imposed.

ENTER:

Paul E. Plunkett

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

DATED: February 16, 1994

End of Document

Kabealo v. Huntington Nat'l Bank

United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit

December 6, 1993, Argued ; February 18, 1994, Decided ; February 18, 1994, Filed

Nos. 92-4359, 92-4368

Reporter

17 F.3d 822 *; 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 2683 ; 1994 FED App. 0055P (6th Cir.) ; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,524

PHILLIP M. KABEALO and CHARLES L. KABEALO, Plaintiffs-Appellants, Cross-Appellees, v. THE HUNTINGTON NATIONAL BANK, Defendant-Appellee, Cross-Appellant.

Subsequent History: [\[1\]](#) Certiorari Denied October 3, 1994, Reported at: 1994 U.S. LEXIS 5477.

Prior History: ON APPEAL from the United States District Court for the Southern District of Ohio. District No. 88-01178. John D. Holschuh, Chief District Judge.

Disposition: AFFIRMED

Core Terms

damages, statute of limitations, landfill, accrued, cause of action, district court, speculative, antitrust, speculative damages, summary judgment, four year, anti-tying, documents, tolled, projections, cases

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Financial Institutions > Bank Holding Company Act

Banking Law > ... > Banking & Finance > Federal Acts > Bank Holding Company Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Financial Institutions > General Overview

HN1 [down arrow] Financial Institutions, Bank Holding Company Act

12 U.S.C.S. § 1975 provides that a person injured by violation of the anti-tying provisions of 12 U.S.C.S. § 1972 shall be entitled to recover three times the amount of damages sustained by him.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Financial Institutions > Bank Holding Company Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Financial Institutions > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > Sherman Act Violations
Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview
Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > General Overview
Banking Law > ... > Banking & Finance > Federal Acts > Bank Holding Company Act

HN2 [down] Financial Institutions, Bank Holding Company Act

The purpose and effect of 12 U.S.C.S. § 1972 is to apply the general principles of the Sherman Antitrust Act prohibiting anticompetitive tying arrangements specifically to the field of commercial banking, without requiring plaintiffs to establish the economic power of a bank and specific anticompetitive effects of tying arrangements.

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > Pleadings & Proof

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > General Overview

HN3 [down] Statute of Limitations, Pleadings & Proof

When rules are in avoidance of the statute of limitations, the party seeking the benefit of them has the burden of proof to establish them. All presumptions are against him, since his claim to exemption is against the current of the law and is founded on exceptions.

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > Time Limitations

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > General Overview

HN4 [down] Statute of Limitations, Time Limitations

Generally, a cause of action accrues and the statute begins to run when a defendant commits an act that injures a plaintiff's business. All courts that have written on the subject agree that it is the last overt act of the defendant, not any act of the plaintiff, that triggers the statute of limitations.

Counsel: For PHILLIP M. KABEALO, Plaintiff - Appellant Cross-Appellee: David A. Ison, ARGUED, BRIEFED, Scott A. Smith, Fusco, Smith & Mathews, Westerville, OH.

For HUNTINGTON NATIONAL BANK, Defendant - Appellee Cross-Appellant: Samuel Ronald Cook, Jr., ARGUED, BRIEFED, Porter, Wright, Morris & Arthur, Columbus, OH.

For MICHAEL DAVIS, Defendant - Appellee: Samuel Ronald Cook, Jr., ARGUED, BRIEFED, Porter, Wright, Morris & Arthur, Columbus, OH. For CHRISTOPHER L. WHITE, DONALD F. MOOREHEAD, Defendants - Appellees: Richard Douglas Wrightsel, Emens, Hurd, Kegler & Ritter, Columbus, OH.

Judges: Before: RYAN and SUHRHEINRICH, Circuit Judges; and LIVELY, Senior Circuit Judge.

Opinion by: LIVELY

Opinion

[1] [*823] LIVELY, Senior Circuit Judge. The plaintiffs appeal from summary judgment in favor of the defendants in this case that arose under the "anti-tying" provisions of the Bank Holding Company Act, 12 U.S.C. § 1971 et seq. \(1988\) (the Act). The district court held that this action [2] was barred by the Act's four-year statute of limitations, 12 U.S.C. § 1977\(1\), rejecting the plaintiffs' contention that the statute of limitations was tolled under the facts of the case. We agree with the district court and, accordingly, affirm the judgment dismissing the action.

I.

The plaintiffs Phillip and Charles Kabealo owned all the stock in Buckeye Waste Control, Inc. (Buckeye), an industrial waste hauling company. Buckeye was a customer of and frequent borrower from the defendant Huntington National Bank (the bank). The plaintiffs alleged in their complaint that the bank violated the anti-tying provisions of the Act¹ in connection with two credit transactions, [2] one in 1982 and one in 1984.

A.

In 1982, Phillip Kabealo discovered a landfill for sale (the Logan Landfill). When Kabealo's accountant, Robert Foster, approached the bank in October 1982 about a loan to purchase the landfill, the plaintiffs claim that the bank's loan officer refused to lend the Kabealos enough money to purchase the landfill unless [3] Steve Hale, a business associate [3] of the Kabealos and a customer of the bank, was joined in the deal. The bank denies that it conditioned making the 1982 loan on the Kabealos bringing in Hale. Nonetheless, on November 29, 1982, Kabealo and Hale submitted a proposal that the loan be made to Phillip Kabealo and Steve Hale, on behalf of Logan Waste Control (LWC), an Ohio corporation consisting of Kabealo, Hale and Max Gehle, the original owner of the Logan Landfill. The bank committed to the loan on or about December 1, 1982.

Shortly after purchasing the landfill, Phillip Kabealo began the application process for a "Permit to Install" (PTI) from the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency (the OEPA). Such a permit would allow the landfill, which had little available space, to be expanded and thus greatly increase its value. The administrative steps to complete the process were completed in September 1986 and the OEPA granted the permit in July 1987. According to Phillip Kabealo, he located a buyer in the summer of 1987 who wanted to purchase the Logan Landfill and was willing to pay $ 45.9 million. This sale could not be accomplished, Kabealo claims, because Gehle and Hale sold their interests [4] in the landfill to another company in September of 1987 for around $ 3 million each. Kabealo claims that [*824] had he controlled 100% of LWC (and he would have if the bank had not required a co-owner), he would have made the sale at a great profit.

B.

After LWC acquired the landfill, Buckeye continued to expand, making several acquisitions that were financed through the bank. During this time, Kabealo hired Donald Moorehead as General Manager and Christopher White as Operations Manager for Buckeye. He gave each man a 25 percent equity interest in Buckeye.

Michael Davis, a loan officer at the bank, took charge of the Buckeye account in October 1984. On October 17, 1984, Davis met with Phillip Kabealo, White and Moorehead. According to the plaintiffs, the purpose of this meeting

¹ As pertinent here, 12 U.S.C. § 1972 provides:

(1) A bank shall not in any manner extend credit, lease or sell property of any kind, or furnish any service, or fix or vary the consideration for any of the foregoing, on the condition or requirement--

(A) that the customer shall obtain some additional credit, property, or service from such bank other than a loan, discount, deposit, or trust service;

....

(C) that the customer provide some additional credit, property, or service to such bank, other than those related to and usually provided in connection with a loan, discount, deposit, or trust service;

....

was to discuss amortization of several Buckeye [4] loans. According to the bank, the men discussed an additional $ 250,000 loan. Notes made by Anthony Salvatore, a bank employee who was present on October 17, indicate that the meeting could have included both. On that day, Kabealo, White and Moorehead executed several documents, including a security interest in their Buckeye stock in favor of the bank.

Phillip Kabealo [5] met with Davis again on October 18, 1984. According to Kabealo, Davis stated that the bank refused to amortize the notes unless Kabealo gave to White and Moorehead a total of fifty-two percent of the shares of Buckeye. (Since each man already owned 25 percent, this would require Kabealo to give each another 1 percent). Furthermore, according to Kabealo, Davis stated that if Kabealo did not give controlling interest in Buckeye to Moorehead and White, Davis would "flush [Kabealo] and this whole deal down the toilet."

On November 7, 1984, the Kabealos, Moorehead and White executed a close corporation agreement which accomplished the share distribution allegedly demanded by the bank. Shortly after these documents were executed, the Kabealos were fired as part of a "payroll reduction." In January of the following year (1985), the controlling shareholders removed Phillip Kabealo from the Board of Directors.

II.

The plaintiffs filed this action on November 7, 1988, four years to the day after they executed documents giving control of Buckeye to White and Moorehead, but more than six years after the alleged improper conduct of bank employees related to the Logan Landfill. Their complaint [6] charged that in connection with both the 1982 and 1984 transactions and others the bank conditioned the extension of credit to LWC and Buckeye on the plaintiffs' providing "additional credit, property, or services" to the bank that were not usually required for such loans.

[5] In addition to the bank, the complaint named as individual defendants bank loan officer Davis and Buckeye stockholders White and Moorehead. The complaint included several state law claims as well as numerous claims alleging violations of the Act. After the district court dismissed the individual defendants, the bank filed a motion to dismiss pursuant to FED. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim. The district court denied this motion, but following discovery the bank filed a motion for partial summary judgment.

In the face of this motion the plaintiffs eliminated all claims under the Act but those related to the 1982 and 1984 transactions described above. The district court granted summary judgment on both claims, finding both barred under the Act's four-year statute of limitations. The court's judgment dismissed the federal claims with prejudice and the state law claims without prejudice. The plaintiffs [7] appeal from summary judgment and the bank cross-appeals from the court's denial of its motion to dismiss.

III.

We treat the parties' arguments concerning the two claims separately.

A. The 1982 Claim

1.

The plaintiffs agree that their 1982 claim accrued in October of that year when the [*825] bank allegedly made an unlawful demand that Steve Hale be associated with Kabealo in LWC as a condition for granting a loan to purchase the Logan Landfill. Thus, unless tolled, the four-year statute of limitations would bar a cause of action based on this claim. The plaintiffs argue, as they did in the district court, that the statute was tolled because their damages were "speculative" until LWC received the PTI in 1987. They rely on the rule announced by the Supreme Court in Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., [6] 401 U.S. 321, 339, 28 L. Ed. 2d 77, 91 S. Ct. 795 (1971), that "even if injury and a cause of action have accrued as of a certain date, future damages that might arise from the conduct sued on are unrecoverable if the fact of their accrual is speculative or their amount and nature unprovable." Applying this general rule specifically to Zenith, which involved a claim of a continuing [8] conspiracy by the defendant to violate federal antitrust law, the Court stated:

In antitrust and treble-damage actions, refusal to award future profits as too speculative is equivalent to holding that no cause of action has yet accrued for any but those damages already suffered. In these instances, the cause of action for future damages, if they ever occur, will accrue only on the date they are suffered; thereafter the plaintiff may sue to recover them at any time within four years from the date they were inflicted.

Id.

The plaintiffs maintain that their damages were entirely speculative so long as their request for a PTI was pending. They state that the value of a landfill depends on its size, and until it was known whether they could expand Logan Landfill its value "was somewhere between $ 0 and $ 10 million." Because their future damages were incapable of proof in October 1982, the plaintiffs argue, they could not have brought "a good faith action" then or at any time within four years. Relying on Zenith, they state that the cause of action as to those damages did not accrue until they became provable in 1987.

2.

The bank responds with several arguments. First, [9] the bank contends that the speculative damages rule applies only to antitrust actions, not those brought under the Bank Holding Company Act. The bank points out that Zenith involved a continuing conspiracy in which "each time a plaintiff is injured by an act of the defendants a cause of action accrues to him to recover the damages caused by [7] that act and that, as to those damages, the statute of limitations runs from the commission of the act." 401 U.S. at 338. In a case such as this one, where the plaintiffs contend that a single, discrete act of the defendant violated federal law, the defendant asserts that the reasoning of Zenith should not apply.

The bank argues further that even if the speculative damages rule does apply in Bank Holding Company Act cases, the plaintiffs have utterly failed to carry their burden of proving that their damages were speculative at the time of the bank's allegedly unlawful act and for four years thereafter. They rely specifically on the fact that the plaintiffs submitted five-year projections of income and cash flow to the bank in connection with loan applications for loans to LWC. Furthermore, by the time the statute [10] of limitations ran in 1986, the plaintiffs had operated the landfill for four years and had a history of its financial return. A fact-finder could have calculated damages reasonably from this information, taking into account the fact that a favorable ruling on the PTI request could result in greater profits.

B. The 1984 Claim

Unlike the 1982 claim, the 1984 claim turns on the question of when the acts of the bank alleged by the plaintiff to have violated the Act occurred and thus started the period of limitations running.

1.

The plaintiffs argue that their cause of action for the 1984 claim accrued on November 7, 1984, when they executed the documents required to comply with the bank's demand that White and Moorehead be given a majority interest in Buckeye. Conceding, as they must, that the bank made the demand [*826] on October 18, 1984, the plaintiffs argue that their injury occurred when ownership of Buckeye changed on November 7, 1984.

[8] 2.

The bank responds that the plaintiffs' own submissions to the district court, as well as other proof in the case, show clearly that any cause of action based on the bank's conduct with respect to the 1984 transaction occurred on October 18, 1984, [11] at the latest. That was the date on which the bank committed the allegedly unlawful act—the demand that White and Moorehead be given 52% of the stock in Buckeye accompanied by a threat if the plaintiffs did not comply. The fact that the plaintiffs did not execute the documents required to comply with this demand until November 7, 1984 has no significance whatever. The bank cites numerous cases for the proposition that a cause of action for violation of an anti-tying provision of federal law accrues "when a defendant commits an act."

IV.

Again, we treat the claims separately, beginning with the 1982 claim.

A.

We disagree with the bank's argument that the speculative damages rule does not apply to cases under the Act. In explaining the rationale for the rule in Zenith, Justice White referred to "antitrust and treble-damage actions." 401 U.S. at 339 (emphasis added). The Act HN1 provides that a person injured by violation of the anti-tying provisions of § 1972 "shall be entitled to recover three times the amount of damages sustained by him . . ." 12 U.S.C. § 1975. Thus, cases arising under the Act come within the [\[12\]](#) explicit language of Zenith.

Furthermore, many courts have recognized that the purpose of the Act is to impose upon the banking industry the general restrictions of the antitrust laws. In discussing the text and legislative history of the anti-tying provisions of the Act, Judge Merritt, sitting by designation with the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit, wrote:

[\[9\]](#) It appears, therefore, that HN2 the purpose and effect of § 1972 is to apply the general principles of the Sherman Antitrust Act prohibiting anticompetitive tying arrangements specifically to the field of commercial banking, without requiring plaintiffs to establish the economic power of a bank and specific anticompetitive effects of tying arrangements

Parsons Steel, Inc. v. First Alabama Bank of Montgomery, N.A., 679 F.2d 242, 245 \(11th Cir. 1982\), rev'd on other grounds, 474 U.S. 518, 88 L. Ed. 2d 877, 106 S. Ct. 768 \(1986\). See also Campbell v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 781 F.2d 440, 443 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1159, 90 L. Ed. 2d 721, 106 S. Ct. 2279 \(1986\) (paraphrasing Parsons Steel).

The parties have not cited, nor [\[13\]](#) have we found, a case under the Act in which the statute of limitations was tolled by applying the Zenith speculative damages rule. In Lancianese v. Bank of Mount Hope, 783 F.2d 467 \(4th Cir. 1986\), the court affirmed summary judgment for the defendant bank in a § 1972 action on the ground that the statute of limitations expired prior to the filing of the suit. The court held that the plaintiff's reliance on the speculative damages doctrine was "misplaced" because they "could have reasonably ascertained their damages and presented competent proof of them." Id. at 470. The clear inference from the discussion of the Zenith rule is that in a situation where a plaintiff could not reasonably ascertain and present competent proof of damages in a case under the Act, the doctrine would apply.

B.

Although we conclude that the Zenith rule applies to claims of tying violations under the Act, that is just the initial step in disposing of the plaintiffs' 1982 claim. As in Lancianese, we must determine whether the plaintiffs in the present case have shown that their damages were actually speculative. In making this [\[14\]](#) determination we examine decisions involving the anti-tying provisions of federal antitrust statutes.

[\[*827\] \[10\]](#) In Akron Presform Mold Co. v. McNeil Corp., 496 F.2d 230, 233 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 997, 42 L. Ed. 2d 270, 95 S. Ct. 310 \(1974\), we discussed rules that exempt parties from the effect of a statute of limitations as follows:

HN3 Since the above rules are in avoidance of the statute of limitations, the party seeking the benefit of them has the burden of proof to establish them. All presumptions are against him, since his claim to exemption is against the current of the law and is founded on exceptions.

One of the "above rules" referred to was the speculative damages doctrine of Zenith.

In Charlotte Telecasters, Inc. v. Jefferson-Pilot Corp., 546 F.2d 570 \(4th Cir. 1976\), an applicant that was eventually denied a cable franchise filed suit more than four years after the last overt act of the city council refusing to reconsider its application. The plaintiff claimed that loss of future profits could not be ascertained at the time of the city council's last act and that the statute of limitations was tolled [\[15\]](#) under Zenith. In affirming summary judgment for the defendant, the court of appeals pointed out that the plaintiff had included with its original application a projection of the number of subscribers it would attract and the gross receipts for the first five years of operation if it were awarded a franchise. Id. at 573. The court stated:

Since the projections were designed to induce the council to award a franchise, the district court could conclude, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that they were rationally based on valid assumptions. Under these circumstances, we conclude that the damages which Telecasters sought were not too speculative to prevent the cause of action from accruing at the time of the last overt act, August 7, 1967.

Id.

[11] The Charlotte Telecasters court stated that it applied traditional rules, as prescribed by the Supreme Court, in determining whether damages are speculative. "These cases teach that when the defendant's wrong has been proven, 'the jury may make a just and reasonable estimate of the damage based on relevant data, and render its verdict accordingly. In such circumstances, juries are allowed [16] to act upon probable and inferential, as well as direct and positive proof.'" Id. (quoting Bigelow v. RKO Pictures, Inc., 327 U.S. 251, 264, 90 L. Ed. 652, 66 S. Ct. 574 (1946)) (some interior quotation marks omitted).

In Mir v. Little Company of Mary Hospital, 844 F.2d 646 (9th Cir. 1988), the court rejected an antitrust suit plaintiff's claim that the statute of limitations was tolled because its damages were speculative. In Mir the plaintiff argued that his damages for the defendant's denial of certain surgical privileges at its hospital could not be determined until related state court proceedings were concluded. The court held that mere uncertainty as to the extent of damages will not prevent recovery under the federal antitrust law. The plaintiff could have presented evidence of projected lost income. This "probable and inferential" proof would have provided a reasonable basis for calculating damages. Id. at 650.

The court in Brunswick Corp. v. Riegel Textile Corp., 752 F.2d 261 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 472 U.S. 1018, 87 L. Ed. 2d 615, 105 S. Ct. 3480 (1985), adopted the reasoning [17] of Charlotte Telecasters in rejecting the plaintiff's reliance on the speculative damages rule to exempt it from the bar of the four-year statute of limitations. The court stated that absent special circumstances a plaintiff who could rely on predicted losses should not be permitted to "wait and see" if actual losses are realized before commencing an action for an antitrust violation. Id. at 271.

C.

Applying the foregoing principles, we conclude that the plaintiffs did not carry their burden of proving that their losses were so speculative as to excuse their failure to file [12] this suit within the period of limitations. Their own projections and their actual experience during four years of operation would have been sufficient to provide the fact-finder with a reasonable basis for calculating their damages. If they felt that they could not present sufficiently exact evidence of damages within that time, they could have filed [*828] suit and requested a stay until the administrative proceedings before the OEPA were concluded. They acted at their risk in waiting until the statute of limitations had run and the district court correctly determined that their action [18] was barred.

V.

Turning to the 1984 claim, we agree with the district court that any cause of action based on that claim accrued on October 18, 1984. Thus, the present action, which was commenced on November 7, 1988, is barred.

The Supreme Court stated in Zenith, "HN4 Generally, a cause of action accrues and the statute begins to run when a defendant commits an act that injures a plaintiff's business." 401 U.S. at 338 (emphasis added). All courts that have written on the subject agree that it is the last overt act of the defendant, not any act of the plaintiff, that triggers the statute of limitations. We said so in Akron Presform, 496 F.2d at 233, and Fontana Aviation, Inc. v. Baldinelli, 575 F.2d 1194, 1195 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 911, 58 L. Ed. 2d 257, 99 S. Ct. 281 (1978), and we have found no published opinion from any court that holds to the contrary.

It is immaterial that the plaintiffs did not execute the documents which formally transferred control of Buckeye to White and Moorehead until November 7, 1984. The Act is concerned with injurious actions of banks that violate its [19] anti-tying provisions. The proscribed injury occurred when the bank made the allegedly unlawful demand on the plaintiffs, not when the plaintiffs complied.

We have examined the opinion in Jackson v. Union National Bank of Macomb, 715 F. Supp. 892 (C.D. Ill. 1989), which both parties have cited. That opinion merely [13] holds that any violation of § 1972 occurred "at the time of the transaction in July 1981." Id. at 896. From this statement the plaintiffs in the present case argue that the 1984 "transaction" was not complete until November 7. This argument has no merit. Because the plaintiffs in Jackson were out of time regardless of what date in July the "transaction" occurred, it was not necessary for the court to determine the exact date. Moreover, the "transaction" referred to in Jackson was between the plaintiffs and the bank; the November 7, 1984, "transaction" relied upon by the plaintiffs was between them and two nondefendants. Nothing in Jackson detracts from the firmly settled rule that a cause of action for violation of § 1972 of the Act accrues when the defendant bank commits a prohibited act that injures [20] the plaintiff.

CONCLUSION

The district court properly granted the bank's motion for summary judgment. Having reached this conclusion we find it unnecessary to consider the bank's cross-appeal. AFFIRMED.

End of Document

TEC Cogeneration v. Florida Power & Light Co.

United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida

February 21, 1994, Decided ; February 23, 1994, Filed

Case No. 88-2145-CIV-ATKINS

Reporter

1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6313 *; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,564

TEC COGENERATION, INC., and RRD CORP., as they are partners in SOUTH FLORIDA COGENERATION ASSOCIATES, THERMO ELECTRON CORPORATION, and ROLLS-ROYCE, INC., Plaintiffs, v. FLORIDA POWER & LIGHT COMPANY, FPL GROUP, INC., FPL ENERGY SERVICES, INC., WAYNE H. BRUNETTI, LARRY T. ATKINSON, JOE C. COLLIER, JR., and CLARK COOK, Defendants.

Core Terms

cogeneration, wheeling, rates, supervision, customers, plaintiffs', facilities, interconnection, anticompetitive, self-service, antitrust, immunity, regulation, energy, electricity, state policy, policies, articulated, defendants', proceedings, summary judgment, transmission, lobbying, anticompetitive conduct, public utility, state-action, generation, amended complaint, transmission line, anti trust law

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Energy & Utilities Law > Cogeneration & Independent Companies > General Overview

Governments > Federal Government > US Congress

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > US Federal Energy Regulatory Commission > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Cogeneration & Independent Companies > Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN1 [down arrow] Energy & Utilities Law, Cogeneration & Independent Companies

Congress launched a special regulatory program for cogeneration in the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of 1978 (PURPA), 16 U.S.C.S. § 824a-3, when it directed the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), in consultation with state public service commissions, to promulgate rules to facilitate the development of cogeneration. 16 U.S.C.S. § 824a-3\(a\). Congress enacted PURPA to overcome the impediment to the development of cogeneration and the reluctance of some utilities to purchase electricity from, and sell electricity to, cogenerators. PURPA directed state utility commissions to implement and expand on the FERC rules at the state level. 16 U.S.C.S. § 824a-3\(f\). PURPA exempts certain cogeneration facilities from public utility regulation if their power generation capability falls below the required threshold. 16 U.S.C.S. § 824a-3\(e\).

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Movant Persuasion & Proof

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Nonmovant Persuasion & Proof

HN2 [down arrow] Summary Judgment, Entitlement as Matter of Law

Summary judgment is mandated after adequate time for discovery and upon motion, against a party who fails to make a showing sufficient to establish the existence of an element essential to that party's case, and on which that party will bear the burden of proof at trial. The moving party has the initial burden of identifying the evidence which it believes shows an absence of a genuine issue of material fact. This burden may be discharged by demonstrating that there is an absence of evidence to support the non-moving party's case. If the moving party discharges this burden, the non-moving party may not rest upon mere allegation or denials, but must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. Summary judgment should be entered if, after a review of all the evidentiary material in the record, there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c). Summary judgment is not a prohibited remedy in antitrust actions. In fact, summary judgment may be especially appropriate in an antitrust case because of the chill antitrust litigation can have on legitimate price competition.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Criminal Law & Procedure > Sentencing > Fines

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN3 [down arrow] Conspiracy to Monopolize, Sherman Act

The Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, provides that every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of a felony and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by fine not exceeding $ 10,000,000 if a corporation, or, if any other person, $ 350,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding three years, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court. A litigant may maintain a private antitrust action under § 2 if the action alleges both restraint of trade and monopolization actions.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Claims

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Enforcement & Execution > General Overview

Healthcare Law > Healthcare Litigation > Antitrust Actions > Facilities

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Covenants not to Compete > General Overview

HN4 Sherman Act, Claims

A plaintiff has standing to sue if the court finds that the particular litigant before the court is entitled to have the court adjudicate the particular claim presented. To establish antitrust standing under 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, two requirements must be fulfilled after examination of the complaint. First, plaintiff must suffer an "antitrust injury," i.e., injury that arises from reduced competition. Such injury is established when plaintiffs plead and prove that the injury they have suffered derives from some anticompetitive conduct and is the type of injury the antitrust laws were intended to prevent. Second, the plaintiff must be an efficient enforcer of the antitrust laws. To satisfy the second prong, the court must balance a non-exhaustive list of factors which includes, in general, the direct, rather than the remote or speculative nature of the injury. Specifically, the factors may include: (1) whether the plaintiffs' damages claims are speculative; (2) whether the plaintiff can enforce an antitrust judgment efficiently and effectively; (3) whether there is a potential for duplicative recovery or complex apportionment of damages; and (4) whether a more direct victim of the alleged anticompetitive conduct exists.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

HN5 Private Actions, Standing

So long as the facts alleged, viewed in the light most favorable to plaintiffs, indicate that plaintiffs have suffered an antitrust injury, then plaintiffs have met their threshold burden to show standing.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > Dismissal > Involuntary Dismissals > Failure to State Claims

HN6 Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

The Court may dismiss a complaint only if no relief could be granted under any set of facts that could be proved consistent with the allegations. Upon reviewing a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted, the court must take the allegations of the complaint as true, liberally construing the complaint in favor of the plaintiff.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Defenses

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Defenses

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > Scope

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > Local Governments & Private Parties

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN7 Sherman Act, Defenses

The Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, does not apply to anticompetitive restraints imposed by the states as an act of government. This is commonly known as the state-action defense. Under the defense, state regulatory agencies' and private parties' conduct is exempt from federal antitrust laws if it is undertaken pursuant to state regulation. The court uses a two-pronged test for determining whether state regulation of private parties is shielded from the federal antitrust laws. First, the challenged restraint to displace competition with regulation must be one clearly articulated and affirmatively expressed as state policy. Second, the state must supervise actively any private anticompetitive conduct.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

HN8 Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

A municipality's restriction of competition may sometimes be an authorized implementation of state policy. An authorized implementation of state policy occurs where a municipality's decision is substantively and procedurally correct.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Driving Under the Influence > Blood Alcohol & Field Sobriety Testing > General Overview

HN9 Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

The clear articulation requirement of the state action exemption is established if the delegating statute explicitly permits the displacement of competition or if suppression of competition is merely the "foreseeable result" of what the statute authorizes. In order to determine whether there is a clear articulation of state policy, the statutes regulating the field must be examined. These statutes do not have to explicitly state what conduct is and is not permissible in order for that conduct to be undertaken pursuant to a clearly articulated state policy.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

HN10 Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

The court must give deference to the state agencies when those bodies exercise their authority in furtherance of state policy in a direct and tangible fashion.

Energy & Utilities Law > Pipelines & Transportation > Electricity Transmission

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > State Regulation

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > Utility Companies

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Cogeneration & Independent Companies > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electricity Distribution & Transmission > Retail Wheeling

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electric Power Rates > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > Rate Setting & Tariffs

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Buying & Selling of Power

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Rates > General Overview

HN11 [blue icon] Pipelines & Transportation, Electricity Transmission

Florida promotes a policy favoring monopoly power in Florida electric utilities. Second, Florida encourages development of cogeneration facilities. This is evident from Fla. Stat. ch. 366.051 (1991), which requires the electric utility in whose service area a cogenerator is located to purchase, in accordance with applicable law, all electricity offered for sale by such cogenerator. Fla. Stat. ch. 366.051. The cogenerator also has the option to sell such electricity to any other electric utility in the state. Fla. Stat. ch. 366.051. The legislation also requires the Florida Public Service Commission, to establish guidelines for such purchases and to set rates at which a public utility must purchase power or energy from a cogenerator. Fla. Stat. ch. 366.051. The rate must be equal to the purchasing utility's full avoided costs, defined to be the incremental costs to the utility of the electric energy or capacity, or both, which, but for the purchase from cogenerators, such utility would generate itself or purchase from another source. Fla. Stat. ch. 355.051. The rates for the purchase of cogenerated electricity are limited to a utility's avoided costs in order to avoid utility customers subsidizing cogenerators. Furthermore, the statute allows a utility's customer to transfer power generated at one of the customer's facilities to another of the customer's facilities.

Administrative Law > Agency Rulemaking > Rule Application & Interpretation > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Eminent Domain Proceedings > Pleadings > General Overview

Real Property Law > ... > Elements > Involuntary Acquisition & Diminution of Value > Takings

Real Property Law > Eminent Domain Proceedings > Constitutional Limits & Rights > General Overview

HN12 [blue icon] Agency Rulemaking, Rule Application & Interpretation

Official agency action cannot be reinterpreted or explained by former agency officials. The motive of the governmental entity in taking the action, much less the motive of an individual officer, has no relevance to an agency's action.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Cogeneration & Independent Companies > General Overview

HN13 [blue icon] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

The Florida statutes governing the regulation of public utilities must be considered as extensive authority over the regulated entities. The statutes provide sufficient basis for the court to conclude that Florida has clearly articulated policies regarding utilities and cogenerators. Therefore, the court finds that the first state-action immunity requirement is met.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

HN14 [blue icon] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

The second prong of the state action exemption, active supervision, mandates that the state exercise ultimate control over the challenged anticompetitive conduct. The mere presence of some state involvement or monitoring does not suffice. This prong requires that state officials have and exercise power to review particular anticompetitive acts of private parties and disapprove those that fail to accord with state policy. Absent such a program of supervision, there is no realistic assurance that a private party's anticompetitive conduct promotes state policy, rather than merely the party's individual interests. The purpose of the active supervision inquiry is not to determine whether the state has met some normative standard, such as efficiency, in its regulatory practices. Its purpose is to determine whether the state has exercised sufficient independent judgment and control so that the details of the rates or prices have been established as a product of deliberate state intervention, not simply by agreement among private parties. Much as in causation inquiries, the analysis asks whether the state has played a substantial role in determining the specifics of the economic policy. The question is not how well state regulation works but whether the anticompetitive scheme is the state's own.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

HN15 [blue icon] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

Actual state involvement, not deference to private price fixing arrangements under the auspices of state law, is the precondition for immunity from federal antitrust law.

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > Antitrust Immunity

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Cogeneration & Independent Companies > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Rates > General Overview

HN16 [blue icon] Antitrust Issues, Antitrust Immunity

The Florida Public Service Commission (FPSC), is the entity that establishes and enforces the guidelines for interconnection, self-service wheeling and many applicable price rates. Florida's regulatory scheme determines the initial inquiry into actual state involvement and direct FPSC supervision of the specific anticompetitive conduct concludes the examination. Since the FPSC does not directly supervise the anticompetitive conduct, a utility's actions are not entitled to state-action immunity.

Energy & Utilities Law > Oil, Gas & Mineral Interests > Purchase Contracts > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > Authorities & Powers

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > Ratemaking Procedures

Energy & Utilities Law > Cogeneration & Independent Companies > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Cogeneration & Independent Companies > Utility Interconnection

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electricity Distribution & Transmission > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electric Power Rates > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Buying & Selling of Power

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Contracts for Service

Energy & Utilities Law > Utility Companies > Rates > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > ... > Rates > Ratemaking Factors > General Overview

HN17 [] Oil, Gas & Mineral Interests, Purchase Contracts

Authority to apply the Florida utility and cogeneration statutes is vested in the Florida Public Service Commission (FPSC). FPSC's powers include the authority: to prescribe fair and reasonable rates and charges; to prescribe all rules and regulations reasonably necessary and appropriate for the administration and enforcement of Fla. Stat. ch. 366; to regulate and supervise each public utility with respect to its rates and service; through planning, development, and maintenance of a coordinated electric power grid throughout Florida, to assure an adequate and reliable source of energy for operational and emergency purposes in Florida and to avoid further uneconomic duplication of generation, transmission, and distribution facilities; and to determine and fix fair, just, and reasonable rates that may be requested, demanded, charged, or collected by any public utility for its service. Fla. Stat. ch. 366.05\(1\), 366.04\(1\) and \(5\), and 366.06\(1\). The FPSC has adopted rules to calculate avoided costs rates and set forth requirements and standards for cogenerator-utility interconnection. The FPSC has also ordered and reviewed these tariffs, conducted proceedings to set rates for energy sold to cogenerators, issued declaratory statements and conducted adjudicatory proceedings in which rights and obligations of utilities and cogenerators were determined.

Energy & Utilities Law > Pipelines & Transportation > Electricity Transmission

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > Authorities & Powers

Energy & Utilities Law > Cogeneration & Independent Companies > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Electricity Distribution & Transmission > Retail Wheeling

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > Siting of Facilities

Energy & Utilities Law > Electric Power Industry > State Regulation > General Overview

HN18[Pipelines & Transportation, Electricity Transmission

In order to encourage the development of cogeneration and small power production, the Florida Public Service Commission (FPSC), promulgated a rule which allowed a cogenerator to wheel its generated power to another utility through a host facility. Additionally, the FPSC rules provide that public utilities are not required to provide transmission or distribution service to enable a retail customer to transmit electrical power generated by the customer at one location to the customer's facilities at another location unless the customer or the utility demonstrates that the provision of this service and the charges, terms, and other conditions associated with the provision of this service, are not likely to result in higher cost electric service to the utility's general body of retail and wholesale customers or adversely affect the adequacy or reliability of electric service to all customers. The FPSC summarized this rule as signifying that public utilities were not required to provide transmission service to enable a Qualifying Facility to serve itself at more than one location unless it could be shown that it was unlikely that wheeling would cause an adverse economic impact on the utility's general body of ratepayers. Thus, in certain circumstances, self-service wheeling was permissible under the Florida scheme.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Energy & Utilities > State Regulation

HN19[Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

The Florida statutes governing the regulation of public utilities must be considered as extensive authority over the regulated entities. However, for a defendant to meet the second prong of the state-action defense, Florida must have actively supervised, substantially reviewed, or independently exercised judgment and control over the defendant's overall anti-competitive campaign. In the state supervision inquiry, the court must ascertain whether state officials had and exercised power to review particular anticompetitive acts of private parties and disapprove those that failed to accord with state policy.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Hearings > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Cogeneration & Independent Companies > General Overview

HN20[Summary Judgment, Hearings

When there is a dispute as to whether a defendant acted in accordance with clearly articulated state policies supporting cogeneration projects, and the defendant's actions bring into question, not whether the Florida Public Services Commission (FPSC), properly ruled on a claim, but whether the FPSC ever had the opportunity to exercise power to review the specific anticompetitive acts which occurred prior to the FPSC hearing and to disapprove those that failed to accord with state policy, the defendant is not entitled to summary judgment pursuant to state action immunity.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

HN21 [+] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

When utility's actions regarding rates which they have the capability, authority and ability to alter, have not been reviewed by the Florida Public Safety Commission (FPSC), there is a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the FPSC supervised the utility's conduct for the purposes of state action immunity.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

HN22 [+] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

The mere potential for state supervision is not an adequate substitute for a decision by the state.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > Antitrust Immunity

Energy & Utilities Law > Regulators > Public Utility Commissions > Authorities & Powers

Energy & Utilities Law > Antitrust Issues > General Overview

HN23 [+] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

The state action immunity doctrine does not require that the state actively supervise every action taken by an entity with the monopoly power. It merely holds that state officials have and exercise power to review particular anticompetitive acts. The Florida legislature delegated rule-making authority and enforcement of those rules to the Florida Public Service Commission (FPSC). See Fla. Stat. §§ 366.05\(1\), 366.04\(1\) and \(5\), and 366.06\(1\). When FPSC had power to review anticompetitive acts but was not given the opportunity to exercise its authority to review actions towards plaintiffs., the utility does not establish the second requirement for state-action immunity.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > Scope

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > Local Governments & Private Parties

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > US Department of Justice Actions > Civil Actions > General Overview

HN24 [blue icon] Antitrust & Trade Law, Exemptions & Immunities

The federal antitrust laws do not regulate the conduct of private individuals in seeking anticompetitive action from the government. This doctrine shields from the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, a concerted effort to influence public officials regardless of intent or purpose, and holds that efforts to influence certain legislative and executive governmental action do not violate the antitrust laws irrespective of their anticompetitive intent or effect. With respect to the stimulus producing the legislation governing the anti-competitive action, the court has held that an action of the state itself is exempt from antitrust liability regardless of the state's motives in taking the action. Thus, whether or not a group of private citizens urges a municipality to implement a regulation that ultimately provides a monopoly to that group is immaterial to the question of whether the state acted in a regulatory capacity.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > Sham Exception

HN25 [blue icon] Scope, Exemptions

There are certain exceptions to the Noerr-Pennington principle. The first occurs where a publicity campaign, ostensibly directed toward influencing governmental action, is a mere sham to cover what is actually nothing more than an attempt to interfere directly with the business relationships of a competitor. The sham exception includes circumstances where entities use the governmental process - as opposed to the outcome of that process - as an anticompetitive weapon. The purpose of delaying a competitor's entry into the market does not render lobbying activity a 'sham,' unless the delay is sought to be achieved only by the lobbying process itself, and not by the governmental action that the lobbying seeks. The commercial exception to Noerr doctrine is the final method upon which a plaintiff may establish antitrust liability. The doctrine is premised on the need to protect the first amendment right to petition the government from censure by the antitrust laws and the belief that the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, is concerned with economics and not with politics. When evaluating whether Noerr immunity applies, the court must not only look at the activity's impact, but also on the context and nature of the activity.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

Torts > Public Entity Liability > Immunities > Judicial Immunity

HN26 [blue icon] Exemptions & Immunities, Noerr-Pennington Doctrine

Another exception to the Noerr-Pennington doctrine applies when fraud is committed in an anticompetitive manner. However, fraudulent conduct overrides Noerr immunity only with respect to conduct in a judicial or quasi-judicial settings.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

HN27 [blue icon] Exemptions & Immunities, Noerr-Pennington Doctrine

Where an economically interested party exercises decision-making authority in formulating a product standard for a private association that comprises market participants, that party enjoys no Noerr immunity from any antitrust liability flowing from the effect the standard has of its own force in the marketplace.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Real Property Law > Zoning > Building & Housing Codes

HN28 [+] Exemptions & Immunities, Noerr-Pennington Doctrine

If the alleged anticompetitive actions took place in the open political arena, then the conduct enjoys immunity from antitrust liability under Noerr. If, however, the conduct took place within the confines of a private standard-setting process, then the actions are not entitled to Noerr immunity. All Noerr exceptions emerged and have been interpreted narrowly under First Amendment principles. Because of this, the burden is on the plaintiff to show that Noerr immunity did not attach to the defendant's actions.

Judges: [*1] Atkins

Opinion by: CLYDE ATKINS

Opinion

ORDER ON DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

THIS CAUSE is before the Court on defendants' Renewed Motions to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim and for Lack of Standing and, in the alternative, Motion for Summary Judgment on the ground that defendants' conduct is immune from antitrust liability under the state-action and Noerr/Pennington doctrines. (d.e. 334). Upon due consideration of the parties' memoranda and relevant caselaw, the Court denies defendants' Renewed Motion for Summary Judgment (d.e. 334-1) and denies defendants' Motions to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim and for Lack of Standing (d.e. 334-2 and -3, respectively). Specifically, the Court finds that the defendants have not satisfied both elements of the state-action immunity defense and plaintiffs have established the requirements necessary to meet the exception to the Noerr/Pennington defense. Therefore, defendants are not entitled to immunity from antitrust sanctions for their actions.

I. BACKGROUND

A. PARTIES

Plaintiff South Florida Cogeneration Associates ("SFCA" or "Joint Venture"), a Florida joint venture partnership, operates a power plant known as a "cogeneration [*2] facility,"¹ located in Miami, Florida. In 1983, TEC Cogeneration, Inc. ("TEC"), and Rolls-Royce, Inc. ("Rolls"), through subsidiaries TEC, and RRD Corp., respectively, formed the plaintiff SFCA to develop the cogeneration project at the Downtown Government Center ("DGC") in

¹ The term cogeneration refers to the operation of a facility that produces electrical and steam or forms of useful energy, such as heat. See 16 U.S.C. § 796\(18\)\(A\). This process can be more efficient than conventional power generation, thereby conserving fuel.

Miami. SFCA operates the facility under contract with Dade, however, neither the County nor any of the plaintiffs owns the DGC's generation facilities.²

Plaintiff Thermo Electron Corporation [*3] ("Thermo") is also affiliated with SFCA, and both Thermo and Rolls are engaged in the cogeneration business in Florida and elsewhere. Some of the plaintiffs operate a cogeneration facility in downtown Miami under contract with Metropolitan Dade County, Florida ("Dade" or "County"), and others claim to have been involved in efforts to build and operate other cogeneration facilities in Florida Power & Light Company's ("FPL") service territory.

Defendant FPL is a public utility within an area including Miami, Florida. Defendant FPL Group, Inc., is a public utility holding company and is the parent corporation of FPL. Defendant FPL Energy Services, Inc. ("ESI"), is an unregulated, wholly-owned subsidiary of FPL Group Capital, Inc., which is a wholly owned subsidiary of FPL Group, Inc. ESI's primary purpose is the development of cogeneration projects.

All four individual defendants are executives of FPL. Defendant Wayne H. Brunetti is an Executive Vice President. Defendant Larry T. Atkinson is the Northeastern Division Vice President. Mr. Atkinson was the Director of Rates and Regulation of FPL from 1985 to 1988. Defendant Joe C. Collier, Jr., is a Senior Vice President of FPL. Lastly, [*4] Clark Cook is the Southern Division Vice President of FPL.

B. History of the Downtown Government Center Facility

Construction on the downtown twenty-seven (27) megawatt facility commenced in mid-1984 and the facility became operational at the end of 1986. Plaintiffs Thermo and Rolls supplied cogeneration services and equipment. The facility has proven to be several times larger than needed to supply electricity for the DGC.³ [*5] Accordingly, the County and/or plaintiff SFCA sought to find a use for the excess power capacity. SFCA chose not to sell power to FPL under the avoided cost tariffs and Florida Public Service Commission ("FPSC" or "Commission") rules. Nor did they elect to redistribute or "wheel"⁴ their power to another utility in the state. Instead, plaintiffs sought to distribute electricity to County-owned locations outside the DGC. Jackson Memorial was the principal target of those efforts. This suit commenced after the FPSC denied the County's petition for an order compelling FPL to wheel electricity to Jackson Memorial and after the County Board of Commissioners voted against construction of a distribution line from the facility to Jackson Memorial.

C. History of Cogeneration and its Regulation

HN1[] Congress launched a special regulatory program for cogeneration in the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of 1978 ("PURPA")⁵ when it directed the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission ("FERC"), in consultation with state public service commissions, to promulgate rules to facilitate the development of cogeneration. 16 U.S.C.

² See In re: Petition of Metropolitan Dade County for Expedited Consideration of Request for Provision of Self-Service Transmission, Order No. 17510, Docket No. 860786-EI, 87 FPSC 5:32 (May 5, 1987); infra pp. 5-6.

³ In a lawsuit pending in state court, Thermo and Dade County are litigating who was to blame for the decision to build such a large facility. TEC Cogeneration, Inc. v. Metro Dade County, No. 92-08605-CA-06 (Fla. Cir. Ct. for the 11th Judicial Circuit). Two administrative proceedings, which occurred as an outgrowth of the state suit, are also pending. The first challenges the propriety of sales made by the DGC. See petition of Metropolitan Dade County for a Declaratory Statement concerning the Sale of Cogenerated Power by South Florida Cogeneration Associates to Metropolitan Dade County, Docket No. 930490-EQ (May 18, 1993) (petition for order that Downtown Government Center facility has been making improper retail sales of electricity). The second contests the fact that the DGC was a qualifying cogeneration facility under 16 U.S.C. § 796\(18\)\(B\) since its inception. See Metropolitan Dade County v. Energy Systems Division of Thermo Electron Corp., Docket EL93-45-000 (May 28, 1993) (petition to decertify the Downtown Government Center facility as a qualifying facility).

⁴ See Almeda Mall, Inc. v. Houston Lighting & Power Co., 615 F.2d 343, 352 n.16 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 870, 66 L. Ed. 2d 90, 101 S. Ct. 208 (1980).

⁵ Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of 1978, Pub. L. No. 95-617, 92 Stat. 3117, codified in part at 16 U.S.C. § 824a-3.

§ 824a-3(a). Congress enacted PURPA to overcome the impediment to the development of cogeneration and the reluctance of some utilities to purchase electricity from, and sell electricity to, cogenerators. See FERC v. Mississippi, 456 U.S. 742, 750-51, 72 L. Ed. 2d 532, 102 S. Ct. 2126, reh'g denied, 458 U.S. 1131, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1401, 103 S. Ct. 15 (1982). [*6] PURPA directed state utility commissions to implement and expand on the FERC rules at the state level. Id. at § 824a-3(f). PURPA exempts certain cogeneration facilities, including the one at issue, from public utility regulation, but only because the DGC power generation capability falls below the required threshold. Id. at § 824a-3(e).

Pursuant to the set of cogeneration-related rules adopted by the Florida legislature in 1981,⁶ plaintiffs prevailed upon Dade County to petition the FPSC for an order compelling FPL to use its transmission and distribution system to "wheel" power from the DGC facility to County's facilities at the Jackson Memorial Hospital/Civic Center complex and other County locations. In re: Petition of Metropolitan Dade County for Expedited Consideration of Request for Provision of Self-Service Transmission, Order No. [*7] 17510, Docket No. 860786-EI, 87 FPSC 5:32 (May 5, 1987). See Fla. Admin. Code. Rule 25-17.0882. Defining the term "self-service" as "the serving of oneself," the FPSC found that the arrangement at issue was not "self-service" because the "County had legal title to the building in which the electrical generating equipment [was] located . . . [but] the County [did] not have legal title to any of the equipment that [would] actually produce the power it [sought] to have wheeled by FPL." In re: Petition of Metropolitan Dade County, at 5:33 (emphasis added).⁷ After an 11-month administrative proceeding in which Thermo participated, the FPSC concluded that Dade's request did not comply with the FPSC cogeneration rule on "self-service" wheeling. Id. at 5:35-37. The FPSC found that the County did not generate the electrical energy because "it must first purchase the power from [SFCA] pursuant to the . . . [SFCA-County] contract." Id. at 5:37. The FPSC rejected the County's argument that it possessed equitable title in the equipment because the County only held an option to acquire [*8] title to the generating equipment from SFCA; but only after SFCA exercised its option to acquire title of the same from Florida Energy Partners. Id. This ruling was not appealed.

Plaintiffs also attempted to persuade the County to construct a distribution line to carry electricity from the DGC facility to Jackson Memorial. After negotiations, plaintiffs and Dade agreed on a proposed term sheet for the line, and the proposal was submitted to the County Board of Commissioners for decision. Plaintiffs lobbied for approval; defendants lobbied against. On October 4, 1988, the County Board voted 5-to-1 against construction of the line. Five weeks later, this suit was filed.

II. STANDARD OF REVIEW

HN2[] Summary judgment is mandated after "adequate [*9] time for discovery and upon motion, against a party who fails to make a showing sufficient to establish the existence of an element essential to that party's case, and on which that party will bear the burden of proof at trial." Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265, 106 S. Ct. 2548 (1986), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1066, 98 L. Ed. 2d 992, 108 S. Ct. 1028 (1988). The moving party has the initial burden of identifying the evidence which it believes shows an absence of a genuine issue of material fact. This burden may be discharged by demonstrating that there is an absence of evidence to support the non-moving party's case. Id. at 323-25. If the moving party discharges this burden, the non-moving party "may not rest upon mere allegation or denials . . . , but must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 256, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 106 S. Ct. 2505 (1986). [*10] Summary judgment should be entered if, after a review of all the evidentiary material in the record, "there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c).

Summary judgment is not a prohibited remedy in antitrust actions. In fact, "the Supreme Court made clear that summary judgment may be especially appropriate in an antitrust case because of the chill antitrust litigation can have on legitimate price competition." McGahee v. Northern Propane Gas Co., 858 F.2d 1487, 1493 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1084, 104 L. Ed. 2d 670, 109 S. Ct. 2110 (1989) (citing Matsushita Electric Ind. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 594, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538, 106 S. Ct. 1348 (1986)).

⁶ 1981 Fla. Laws ch. 81-131, § 1, currently codified as amended at Fla. Stat. Ann. ch. 366.051 (West Supp. 1993).

⁷ Florida Energy Partners, who leased the financed equipment to SFCA, maintained title to the equipment. Id. at 5:34.

III. ANALYSIS

In this case, defendants do not dispute that the plaintiffs have adduced sufficient evidence from which a jury could conclude that its conduct was anti-competitive and exclusionary. Instead, FPL invokes two defenses to argue that its conduct is immune [*11] from antitrust liability, namely, the "state action" and Noerr/Pennington doctrines.⁸ Therefore, the Court will proceed as if defendants have engaged in such monopolistic activity. If either of the defenses properly apply, then summary judgment must be held in favor of defendants.

A. Lack of Antitrust Standing

This action arises out of alleged violations of HN3 the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2.⁹ Section 2 provides that "every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of a felony and, on conviction [*12] thereof, shall be punished by fine not exceeding $ 10,000,000 if a corporation, or, if any other person, $ 350,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding three years, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court." A litigant may maintain a private antitrust action under Section 2 if the action alleges "both restraint of trade and monopolization actions." Almeda Mall, Inc. v. Houston Lighting & Power Co., 615 F.2d 343, 351 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 870, 66 L. Ed. 2d 90, 101 S. Ct. 208 (1980). Here, unlike Almeda Mall, plaintiffs assert both actions to fulfill the requirements in order to maintain this suit.

[*13] In general, HN4 a plaintiff has standing to sue if the court finds that "the particular litigant before the court is entitled to have the court adjudicate the particular claim presented." Thompson v. Metropolitan Multi-List, Inc., 934 F.2d 1566, 1570 (11th Cir. 1991). To establish antitrust standing under Section 2 of the Sherman Act, two requirements must be fulfilled after examination of the complaint. First, plaintiff must suffer an "antitrust injury," i.e., injury that arises from reduced competition. Todorov v. DCH Healthcare Authority, 921 F.2d 1438, 1449 (11th Cir. 1991). See Davis v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 755 F. Supp. 1532, 1534-37 (S.D. Fla. 1991) (J. Nesbitt). Such injury is established when plaintiffs "plead and prove that the injury they have suffered derives from some anticompetitive conduct and is the type [of injury] the antitrust laws were intended to prevent." Todorov, 921 F.2d at 1450; Thompson, 934 F.2d at 1571.

Second, the plaintiff must be "an efficient enforcer of the antitrust laws." Todorov, 921 F.2d at 1449. [*14] To satisfy the second prong, the Court must balance a non-exhaustive list of factors which includes, in general, the direct, rather than the remote or speculative nature of the injury. Id. at 1451. Specifically, the factors may include (1) whether the "plaintiffs' damages claims" are speculative, id., (2) "whether the plaintiff can enforce an antitrust judgment efficiently and effectively," id. at 1452, (3) whether there is a "potential for duplicative recovery or complex apportionment of damages," Davis, 755 F. Supp. at 1535, and (4) whether "a more direct victim of the alleged anticompetitive conduct" exists. Id.

Plaintiffs assert that FPL, alone and in concert with others, used its monopoly power to prevent and defeat competition from cogenerators within FPL's service area. See Amended Complaint P 149. In paragraphs 30

⁸ Additionally, defendants argue that by bringing this case, plaintiffs are asking a federal jury to resolve issues that have been fully aired and resolved over the last twelve years by the FPSC and to reopen a legislative debate fought before the Dade County Board of Commissioners in 1987.

⁹ Originally, plaintiffs alleged violations of Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1, and violations of the Robinson-Patman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 13, in addition to the Section 2 and state-law causes of action. Those claims, as well as all claims against each of the individual defendants, were voluntarily dismissed. See Order Amending This Court's Order on Pending Motions, filed February 17, 1994; Plaintiffs' Memorandum in Support of Motion for Leave to File Second Amended Complaint (d.e. 140) at 2.

through 146, the Amended Complaint lists alleged general and specific misconduct designed by the defendants to monopolize the market for electrical power.

Generally, FPL's alleged misconduct against cogenerators includes: (1) actions "to forestall competition [*15] from plaintiffs and other cogeneration facilities within FPL's service area, so as to secure a competitive advantage over such facilities, and so as to prevent them from establishing and expanding their operations within FPL's service area," id. at P 33; (2) a corporate policy "of approaching customers interested in the cost savings and other advantages associated with cogeneration and attempting to dissuade them from entering the cogeneration market," id. at P 45; (3) via manuals and reports, misrepresentation of "the economic efficiency of and [overestimation of] the costs of cogeneration in general and plaintiffs' facility in particular so as to deter potential entrants into the cogeneration business and . . . to deter potential customers for cogeneration," id. at P 46; (4) discriminatory practices "against plaintiffs with respect to services, rates and interconnection of facilities," id. at Ps 35, 48-65; ¹⁰ (5) manipulation of the avoided cost rate through (i) improper influencing of the calculation of its avoided costs, (ii) untimely notification of the purchase price for energy and (iii) inadequate disclosure of its method for calculating these costs, *id. [16] at Ps 66-68; (6) the use of franchises to defeat cogeneration, id. at Ps 69-70; (7) the use of an unregulated subsidiary, ESI, to restrain trade by competing with, underbidding and buying out other cogenerators, id. at Ps 71-82; and (8) attempts by FPL to cut off cogenerators' access to natural gas. Id. at Ps 83-99.

Specifically, FPL's anticompetitive conduct directed [*17] towards the DGC facility includes: (1) efforts to discourage Dade County from cogeneration by

(i) making false and misleading statements about the economic efficiency of cogenerated power, (ii) offering economic incentives to the County in order to retain the County as an electric power customer, (iii) falsely suggesting that cogenerated power would be "less reliable" than power from FPL . . . and (iv) suggesting that the price that the County would have to pay to FPL for "as-available" power in the event of a power shutdown or blackout . . . would make the risks of cogeneration prohibitive,

id. at P 103; (2) imposition of burdensome charges and obstacles to interconnection, back-up power and operating and maintenance services, id. at Ps 105-08; (3) encumbering plaintiffs with unreasonable insurance requirements, id. at Ps 109-15; (4) attempts to cut off plaintiffs' access to natural gas, id. at 116-17; (5) interference with plaintiffs' chilled water sales, id. at 118; (6) denial of access to essential facilities, ¹¹ id. at Ps 119-24; (7) interference with efforts to build a direct transmission line from the DGC to Jackson Memorial, both by offering [*18] unusual price breaks and free consulting services to Jackson Memorial and by improperly influencing County Commissioners to defeat the transmission line proposal, id. at Ps 125-33; (8) attempts to induce Dade to enter a new franchise agreement with FPL, including a condition that Dade not use cogeneration services for its own needs, id. at Ps 134-35; and (9) plans to acquire the DGC facility after its actions caused the DGC to go out of business, id. at P 140.

Applying the two-prong test to the above allegations, the Court finds that plaintiffs have established antitrust standing under Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2.

HN5 "So long as the facts alleged, viewed in the light most favorable to Plaintiffs, indicate that Plaintiffs have suffered an antitrust injury, then Plaintiffs have met their threshold burden." Davis, 755 F. Supp. at 1536-37. As alleged [*19] in Count One of the Amended Complaint, the facts indicate that plaintiffs suffered an antitrust injury

¹⁰ These practices include incentives for interruptible rates, time-of-use rates, deferral rates and other terms designed to lower the customer's electric bill and deter the customers from using cogenerated power, . . . sometimes referred to by FPL personnel as 'creative rates.' [These incentives] were not offered by FPL to all its customers, but were aggressively marketed to customers whom FPL had identified as being 'at risk' to cogeneration, including customers whom FPL had discovered to be negotiating with the Joint Venture or with plaintiffs Thermo Electron Corp. or Rolls-Royce, Inc.

Id. at P 59 (emphasis added).

¹¹ This includes FPL's failure to wheel SFCA's power to other County locations.

arising from FPL's alleged competition. Plaintiffs cite nine examples of injuries suffered by them, all of which indicate specific harm caused by FPL's anticompetitive actions. See infra pp. 11-12. FPL's actions directly prevented the Joint Venture from displacing FPL at an additional County site (Jackson Memorial) and directly affected the Joint Venture in its existing role as supplier to the County at the DGC. Amended Complaint at Ps 69-82, 100-139. Moreover, Thermo and Rolls allegedly abandoned plans to pursue cogeneration projects within FPL's service territory. Id. at P 32. As in Davis, the facts in the present case, viewed in favor of plaintiffs and in their best light, allows this Court to infer the nexus between the alleged Section 2 violation and plaintiffs' injuries. 755 F. Supp. at 1537 (citing Mr. Furniture v. Barclays American/Commercial, Inc., 919 F.2d 1517, 1521 (11th Cir. 1990)).

Additionally, the Court finds that plaintiffs allegations fulfill the efficient enforcement prong of the standing inquiry. [*20] As determined above, plaintiffs' injuries are neither speculative nor indirect. See Thompson, 934 F.2d at 1571. Plaintiffs have alleged lost profits of over $ 80 million and project a cumulative loss of $ 59 million from the DGC for the initial 16-year period of its operation. Amended Complaint at P 147. While Dade may be another victim of FPL's alleged anticompetitive conduct, the County's interests do not completely outweigh plaintiffs.

In Associated General Contractors, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519, 74 L. Ed. 2d 723, 103 S. Ct. 897 (1983), the Supreme Court found that the injuries suffered were too speculative to support standing. There, "the Union's complaint allege[d that] the Union suffered unspecified injuries in its 'business activities.'" Id. at 541. The Court found that injured subcontractors and the coerced third-parties suffered a more direct injury than the members of the Union and "any such injuries were only an indirect result of whatever harm may have been suffered by 'certain' construction [*21] contractors and subcontractors." Id. Therefore, the Union was not the proper plaintiff and, based on the allegations of the complaint, was "not a person injured by reason of a violation of the antitrust laws." Id. at 546.

Here, plaintiffs' stake in the outcome and alleged harm are quite substantial and direct. In particular, plaintiffs have not been able to transmit power to other facilities, allegedly at a lost profit. Unlike Associated, denying plaintiffs "a remedy on the basis of its allegations in this case is . . . likely to leave a significant antitrust violation undetected or unremedied." Id. at 542 (emphasis added). Also, plaintiffs, as the direct competitor of FPL have the ability to enforce any antitrust judgment in favor of their claims. Finally, the Court cannot find any potential for duplicative recovery or complex apportionment of damages since the alleged conduct primarily affects the plaintiffs herein.

B. Failure to State a Claim

Next, the Court must answer the question of whether plaintiffs' allegations are barred because [*22] they failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

Plaintiffs claim that FPL, alone and in concert with others, used its monopoly power to prevent and defeat competition from cogenerators within FPL's service area. See Amended Complaint P 149. In paragraphs 30 through 146, the Amended Complaint lists alleged misconduct designed by the defendants to monopolize the market for electrical power. As stated above, infra pp. 10-12, plaintiffs assert eight instances of FPL's misconduct against cogenerators in general and nine allegations of FPL's misconduct against plaintiffs in particular.

Plaintiffs contend that SFCA's only alternative, as a result of FPL's actions, has been to attempt to minimize its losses by selling excess power to FPL at the "as-available" avoided energy cost rate. Since economic viability of SFCA depended on this rate, and because the rate changed hourly, SFCA required hourly information. Plaintiffs allege that FPL refused to provide this information even though FPL provided the rates to other utilities on a regular basis. As a result, SFCA exported power to FPL when it was not economical to do so and missed the opportunity [*23] to export power when it would have been profitable to do so.

Additionally, plaintiffs include a pendent state claim in Count IV of their Amended Complaint. Plaintiffs state that FPL and two FPL corporate affiliates intentionally interfered with plaintiffs' advantageous business relationship with Dade. To wit, plaintiffs assert that, under the terms of their contract with Dade, the Joint Venture had a contractual interest in Dade's use of excess power from the DGC facility and FPL was aware that Dade's use of excess power at County buildings outside DGC was critical to the expected profitability of the cogeneration project. Id. at Ps 155-62. For the two remaining claims, plaintiffs seek damages (before trebling) of $ 80 million, plus injunctive relief.

HN6[] The Court may dismiss a complaint only if "no relief could be granted under any set of facts that could be proved consistent with the allegations." Gonzalez v. McNary, 980 F.2d 1418, 1419 (11th Cir. 1993); Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46, 2 L. Ed. 2d 80, 78 S. Ct. 99 (1957). Upon reviewing a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim [*24] upon which relief may be granted, this Court must take the allegations of the complaint as true, liberally construing the complaint in favor of the plaintiff. Burch v. Apalachee Community Mental Health Services, Inc., 840 F.2d 797, 798 (11th Cir. 1988).

Under the circumstances of this case, and based on the analysis herein, this Court cannot conclude that plaintiffs could not be granted relief under any set of facts as alleged in the amended complaint. Consequently, the Court finds that the assertions, taken as a whole and as true, state a claim upon which antitrust relief may be granted.

C. Defenses to this Antitrust Suit

The Court must determine whether FPL's actions against plaintiffs was conducted pursuant to Florida's policies regarding FPL's monopoly in the power transmission field. Plaintiffs allege that FPL and the other defendants impermissibly used their monopoly power to prevent and defeat competition from cogenerators within FPL's service area. Defendants do not dispute the factual allegations asserted by plaintiffs. Instead, defendants wield two defenses as an aegis to plaintiffs' complaint - the state-action and Noerr/Pennington [*25] principles.

The state-action doctrine provides that a private party cannot be subjected to antitrust sanction for conduct that comported with regulatory policies and was subject to active state supervision. Under the Noerr/Pennington doctrine, antitrust claims cannot rest on a defendant's efforts to secure government action, including action by state regulatory commissions and municipal and county governments. If any of these defenses apply to all of plaintiffs' claims and no exception exists, then summary judgment must be granted in favor of defendants.

1. The State-Action Doctrine

In Parker v. Brown, 317 U.S. 341, 352, 87 L. Ed. 315, 63 S. Ct. 307 (1943), the Supreme Court first enunciated the rule that HN7[] the Sherman Act does "not apply to anticompetitive restraints imposed by the States 'as an act of government.'" ¹² Columbia v. Omni Outdoor Advertising, 499 U.S. 365, 370, 113 L. Ed. 2d 382, 111 S. Ct. 1344 (1991) (quoting Parker, 317 U.S. at 352). This holding is commonly known as the state-action [*26] defense. Under the defense, state regulatory agencies' and private parties' conduct is exempt from federal antitrust laws if it is undertaken pursuant to state regulation. Parker, 317 U.S. at 350-52. ¹³ In California Retail Liquor Dealers Association v. Midcal Aluminum, Inc., 445 U.S. 97, 105, 63 L. Ed. 2d 233, 100 S. Ct. 937 (1980), the court "set forth a two-pronged test for determining whether state regulation of private parties is shielded from the federal antitrust laws. First, the challenged restraint [to displace competition with regulation] must be 'one clearly articulated and affirmatively expressed as state policy' . . . Second, the State must supervise actively any private anticompetitive conduct." Southern Motor Carriers Rate Conference, Inc. v. United States, 471 U.S. 48, 57, 85 L. Ed. 2d 36, 105 S. Ct. 1721 (1985) (citations omitted). See also FTC v. Ticor Title Ins. Co., 119 L. Ed. 2d 410, 112 S. Ct. 2169, 2175 (1992); Hallie v. Eau Claire, 471 U.S. 34, 40-47, 85 L. Ed. 2d 24, 105 S. Ct. 1713 (1985); [*27] and Davis, 755 F. Supp. at 1537-42.

a. Clear Articulation

¹² Parker involved a program under California's Agricultural Prorate Act which restricted the marketing of privately produced raisins. There, the Court held that such a program did not violate the Sherman Act.

¹³ While the Court had not applied Parker immunity to local governments, it acknowledged "that HN8[] a municipality's restriction of competition may sometimes be an authorized implementation of state policy." Colombia, 499 U.S. at 370. The Court stated that an "authorized implementation of state policy" occurred where a municipality's decision is substantively and procedurally correct. Id. at 371-72.

HN9 The clear articulation requirement is established if the "delegating statute explicitly permits the displacement of competition" or if suppression of competition is merely "the 'foreseeable' [*28] result" of what the statute authorizes." Colombia, 499 U.S. at 372-73 (quoting Hallie, 471 U.S. at 41-42).¹⁴ In order to determine whether there is a clear articulation of state policy, the statutes regulating this field must be examined. These statutes do not have to "explicitly state what conduct is and is not permissible in order for that conduct to be undertaken pursuant to a clearly articulated state policy." Consolidated Gas Co. v. City Gas Co., 880 F.2d 297, 302 (11th Cir. 1989), vacated and remanded, 499 U.S. 915 (1991) (citing Souther Motor Carriers, 471 U.S. at 63-64).¹⁵

[*29] In Colombia, Columbia Outdoor Advertising, Inc. ("COA"), controlled greater than 95% of the relevant outdoor billboard advertising market. Omni Outdoor Advertising, Inc. ("Omni"), sought to enter into the market. Allegedly, COA impermissibly met with city officials to seek the enactment of zoning ordinances that would halt new construction of billboards. In effect, this action simultaneously allowed COA to retain their monopoly and to force Omni out of the new market.

As stated by the Court, the purpose of the Columbia zoning regulation was "to displace unfettered business freedom in a manner that regularly [had] the effect of preventing normal acts of competition." Id. at 373. Since suppression of competition was the foreseeable result of the statute's restrictions, the Court held that the state policy clearly articulated an authorization of anticompetitive conduct. Thus, the city's limitation on billboard construction was entitled to Parker immunity.

Florida statutes define two dominant policies regarding power generation and transmission. First, HN11 Florida promotes a policy favoring monopoly power in Florida electric utilities. Second, Florida encourages development of [*30] cogeneration facilities. This is evident from the 1981 Florida legislature's authorization to the FPSC to adopt a set of cogeneration-related rules. 1981 Fla. Laws ch. 81-131, § 1, currently codified at Fla. Stat. § 366.051 (1991). This statute requires "the electric utility in whose service area a cogenerator . . . is located [to] purchase, in accordance with applicable law, all electricity offered for sale by such cogenerator." Fla. Stat. § 366.051. The cogenerator also has the option to "sell such electricity to any other electric utility in the state." Id.

The legislation also requires the FPSC to establish guidelines for such purchases and to "set rates at which a public utility must purchase power or energy from a cogenerator." Id. The rate, pursuant to FPSC's authorization, must be "equal to the purchasing utility's full avoided costs," defined to be "the incremental costs to the utility of the electric energy or capacity, or both, which, but for the purchase from cogenerators . . . such utility would generate itself or purchase from another source." Id. The rates for the purchase of cogenerated electricity are limited to a utility's avoided costs in order [*31] to avoid utility customers subsidizing cogenerators.

Furthermore, the statute allows a utility's customer to transfer power generated at one of the customer's facilities to another of the customer's facilities. This process is referred to as "wheeling." As stated, public utilities shall provide transmission or distribution service to enable a retail customer[, i.e., plaintiffs,] to transmit electrical power by [plaintiffs] at one location to [plaintiffs'] facilities at another location, if the commission finds that the provision of this service, and the charges, terms, and other conditions associated with the provision of this service, are not likely to result in higher cost electric service to the utility's general body of retail and wholesale customers or adversely affect the adequacy or reliability of electric service to all customers.

Id. (emphasis added).

¹⁴ See also Lease Lights, Inc. v. Public Service Co., 849 F.2d 1330, 1333 (10th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1019, 102 L. Ed. 2d 807, 109 S. Ct. 817 (1989).

¹⁵ HN10 The Court acknowledges that it must give deference to the "state agencies when those bodies exercise their authority in furtherance of state policy in a direct and tangible fashion." Energy Productivity Systems, Inc. v. Public Service Company of New Mexico, Slip. Op. 88-0852-CIV-JEC (D.N.M. June 25, 1990).

Plaintiffs argue that FPL's conduct was not pursuant to the clearly articulated and affirmatively expressed state policy to displace competition. Here, plaintiffs claim, and the Court agrees, that the Florida regulatory scheme was intended to promote competition between electric utilities and cogenerators. [*32] PURPA was established by Congress to create competition in the electric power generation market by removing barriers to the development of cogeneration and Florida's regulatory scheme specifically was developed to implement PURPA. See Fla. Stat. Ann. § 366.051. Plaintiffs maintain that affidavits, FPL's continuing refusal to wheel SFCA's power and FPL's Strategic Energy Business Studies ("SEBS") all generate genuine issues of material fact on the question of whether FPL's actions conformed to clearly articulated state policies.

First, plaintiffs contend that affidavits of two former FPSC Chairmen confirm that Florida's policy promotes competition between utilities and cogenerators. See Affidavits of John R. Marks, III at PP 7-11 (Sept. 20, 1990) and Katie Nichols at P 7 (Sept. 20, 1990). According to plaintiffs, the affidavits attest to the fact that FPL acted contrary to Florida policy favoring cogeneration and its actions were not brought to the FPSC's attention, much less reviewed or actively supervised.

Nevertheless, HN12 official agency action cannot be reinterpreted or explained by former agency officials. In Manatee County v. Estech Gen. Chemicals Corp., 402 So.2d 75, 76 \(Fla. 2nd DCA 1981\), [*33] the court held that a petitioner cannot seek answers from a former county commissioner regarding his motives in denying an application for development of land in an action for reverse condemnation. There, the court held that "the motive of the governmental entity in taking the action, much less the motive of an individual commissioner in voting, has no relevance to this action, and, moreover, we do not see any path from the questions leading to relevant matter." Id. See also Kent Corp. v. NLRB, 530 F.2d 612, 620-21 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 920, 50 L. Ed. 2d 287, 97 S. Ct. 316 (1976) (probing mental processes and motives of individual decision-makers, rather than questioning the objective legal validity of the institutional decision is "inconsistent with a basic principle of administrative law"); Hillsborough County v. Pinellas County, 425 So.2d 1196, 1197 \(Fla. 2nd DCA 1983\) (motive of commissioner irrelevant absent a claim of fraud). Since the Court may only consider evidence that will be admissible at trial, Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(e\), the affidavits [*34] may not be considered when evaluating the merits of the Motion for Summary Judgment.

Next, plaintiffs state that FPL's continuing refusal to wheel is also directly contrary to Florida's policy. The Court recognizes that a utility has a "duty to take all prudent actions to minimize the adverse impacts of revenue losses to its ratepayers, including the voluntary provision of wheeling when it is reasonably likely that an even greater revenue loss would occur." ¹⁶ However, because the FPSC conclusively determined that the DGC facility was not a self-service wheeler, see Section I.C., infra, defendants cannot wheel power to Jackson Memorial. Defendants' refusal to do so is not contrary to, but consistent with, Florida's policies regarding cogeneration.

Finally, plaintiffs claim that FPL's SEBS identify FPL's policies regarding cogeneration and demonstrate [*35] the anticompetitive threat against them. Defendants, however, state that plaintiffs only cite from the work papers and draft SEBS, not final SEBS reports. Brunetti Deposition I at 115. Defendants claim that the final SEBS reports became FPL policy after a two-year period of study and did not form the basis for FPL's policies.

The interpretation of the SEBS reports is a matter of fact having a bearing on the issue of whether FPL's actions conformed with clearly articulated state policies. Since parties offer two explanations regarding the SEBS, there is a genuine issue of material fact which cannot be resolved by this Court.

HN13 The Florida statutes governing the regulation of public utilities must be considered as extensive authority over the regulated entities. See infra pp. 20-21. The statutes provide sufficient basis for the Court to conclude that Florida has clearly articulated policies regarding utilities and cogenerators. Therefore, the Court finds that the defendants have established the first state-action immunity requirement for all actions except those contained in FPL's SEBS.

¹⁶ In re: Petition of W.R. Grace & Co. for a Declaratory Statement, Order No. 17389, Docket No. 861180-EU, 87 FPSC 4:147 (Apr. 9, 1987).

b. Active Supervision

HN14 [↑] The second prong, active supervision, mandates that the State [*36] exercise ultimate control over the challenged anticompetitive conduct. . . . The mere presence of some state involvement or monitoring does not suffice. . . . This prong . . . requires that state officials have and exercise power to review particular anticompetitive acts of private parties and disapprove those that fail to accord with state policy. Absent such a program of supervision, there is no realistic assurance that a private party's anticompetitive conduct promotes state policy, rather than merely the party's individual interests.

Ticor, 112 S. Ct. at 2177 (quoting Patrick v. Burget, 486 U.S. 94, 100-101, 100 L. Ed. 2d 83, 108 S. Ct. 1658 (1988)) (emphasis added).

The purpose of the active supervision inquiry is not to determine whether the State has met some normative standard, such as efficiency, in its regulatory practices. Its purpose is to determine whether the State has exercised sufficient independent judgment and control so that the details of the rates or prices have been established as a product of deliberate state intervention, not simply by agreement [*37] among private parties. Much as in causation inquiries, the analysis asks whether the State has played a substantial role in determining the specifics of the economic policy. The question is not how well state regulation works but whether the anticompetitive scheme is the State's own.

Id.

Midcal, 445 U.S. 97, 63 L. Ed. 2d 233, 100 S. Ct. 937 (1980), provides guidance to determine the level of state supervision necessary for immunity from federal law. In Midcal, the Supreme Court invalidated a California statute forbidding licensees in the wine trade from selling below prices set by the producer. There, the Court held that HN15 [↑] actual state involvement, not deference to private price fixing arrangements under the auspices of state law, is the precondition for immunity from federal antitrust law. Id. at 105-106. Since absence of state participation in the mechanics of the price posting was so apparent, the Court held that the requirement of active supervision had not been met.¹⁷ Id.

HN16 [↑] Here, the FPSC is the entity that establishes and enforces the guidelines [*38] for interconnection, self-service wheeling and many applicable price rates. Florida's regulatory scheme determines the initial inquiry into actual state involvement and direct FPSC supervision of the specific anticompetitive conduct allegedly committed by defendants concludes the examination. Since the Court finds that the FPSC did not directly supervise the specific anticompetitive conduct allegedly committed by defendants, FPL's actions are not entitled to state-action immunity.

[*39] (1) Florida's Statutory Scheme

HN17 [↑] Authority to apply the Florida utility and cogeneration statutes is vested in the FPSC. The Commission's powers include the authority: "to prescribe fair and reasonable rates and charges;" "to prescribe all rules and regulations reasonably necessary and appropriate for the administration and enforcement of this chapter;" "to regulate and supervise each public utility with respect to its rates and service;" through "planning, development, and maintenance of a coordinated electric power grid throughout Florida[,] to assure an adequate and reliable source of energy for operational and emergency purposes in Florida and [to] avoid . . . further uneconomic duplication of generation, transmission, and distribution facilities;" and "to determine and fix fair, just, and reasonable rates that may be requested, demanded, charged, or collected by any public utility for its service." Fla. Stat. 366.05\(1\) (1991), 366.04(1) and (5) (1991), and 366.06(1) (1991), respectively.

¹⁷ See also Patrick v. Burget, 486 U.S. 94, 100-105, 100 L. Ed. 2d 83, 108 S. Ct. 1658, reh'g denied, 487 U.S. 1243, 101 L. Ed. 2d 952, 108 S. Ct. 2921 (1988) (where there was no proof that Oregon's Health Division, Board of Medical Examiners, or judiciary could supervise private peer-review decisions regarding hospital privileges to determine whether they comport with state regulatory policy and to correct abuses, active state supervision was not established).

But see Colombia, 499 U.S. at 372-73 (no more is needed to verify a city's active supervision when it has zoning power over the size, location and spacing of billboards); Nugget Hydroelectric L.P. v. Pacific Gas and Electric Co., 981 F.2d 429, 435 (9th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 124 L. Ed. 2d 247, 113 S. Ct. 2336 (1993) (existence of published Commission decisions based on state statutes and state implementing regulations was enough to provide active state supervision).

Since PURPA was enacted in 1978, the FPSC has engaged in extensive rulemaking, ratemaking and adjudicatory proceedings concerning cogeneration.¹⁸ For example, the FPSC has adopted rules [*40] to calculate avoided costs rates and set forth requirements and standards for cogenerator-utility interconnection, and required utilities to file tariffs setting out standard offer contracts for purchase of cogenerated energy. The FPSC has also ordered and reviewed these tariffs, conducted proceedings to set rates for energy sold to cogenerators, issued declaratory statements and conducted adjudicatory proceedings in which rights and obligations of utilities and cogenerators were determined.¹⁹

Specifically, on September 27, 1985, the FPSC repealed Rule 25-17.835²⁰ and adopted Rules 25-17.88 and 25-17.883 in its place, effective October 4, 1985.²¹ This action was done HN18↑ in order to encourage the development of cogeneration and small power production. First, the FPSC promulgated a rule which allowed [*41] a cogenerator to wheel its generated power to another utility through a host facility. The regulation provided that "each electric utility in Florida shall provide, upon request, transmission service to wheel as-available energy or firm energy and capacity produced by a Qualifying Facility from the Qualifying Facility to another electric utility."²² Additionally, Rule 25-17.882 - Transmission Service Not Required for Self-Service provided that public utilities [were] not required to provide transmission or distribution service to enable a retail customer to transmit electrical power generated by the customer at one location to the customer's facilities at another location unless the customer or the utility demonstrates that the provision of this service and the charges, terms, and other conditions associated with the provision of this service, [were] not likely to result in higher cost electric service to the utility's general body of retail and wholesale customers or adversely affect the adequacy or reliability of electric service to all customers.²³

The FPSC summarized this rule as signifying that "public utilities [were] not required to provide transmission service [*42] to enable a Qualifying Facility to serve itself at more than one location unless it [could] be shown that it [was] unlikely that wheeling [would] cause an adverse economic impact on the utility's general body of ratepayers."²⁴ Thus, in certain circumstances, self-service wheeling was permissible under the Florida scheme.

(2) Supervision in This Case

¹⁸ See FPSC Rules Chapter 25-17, Part III - Utilities' Obligations with Regard to Cogenerators and Small Power Producers, 25-17.080, et seq.

¹⁹ See FPSC's Amicus Curiae Memorandum of Law at 4-5.

²⁰ See 25-17.0835 Wheeling.

²¹ However, on October 25, 1990, Rule 25-17.088 - Transmission Service for Qualifying Facilities, formerly 25-17.88, was repealed.

²² In re: Repeal of Rule 25-17.835 and Adoption of Rules 25-17.88, 25-17.882 and 25-17.883 - Wheeling of Cogenerated Energy; Retail Sales, Order No. 15053, Docket No. 840399-EU, 85 FPSC 9:298, 70 P.U.R.4th 143 (Sept. 27, 1985) at 5.

²³ Id. at 8 (emphasis added). This rule, now designated 25-17.0882, was repealed on October 25, 1990.

²⁴ Id. at 8 (emphasis added).

FPL's conduct has been carefully structured [*43] by the FPSC and supervised in many FPSC proceedings. HN19[
 The Florida statutes governing the regulation of public utilities must be considered as extensive authority over the regulated entities. However, for defendants to meet the second prong of the state-action defense, Florida must have actively supervised, substantially reviewed, or independently exercised judgment and control over FPL's overall anti-competitive campaign.

In the state supervision inquiry, the Court must ascertain whether "state officials [had] and [exercised] power to review particular anticompetitive acts of private parties and disapprove those that [failed] to accord with state policy." Ticor, 112 S. Ct. at 2177. The FPSC amicus filings and defendants' appendices provide a detailed picture of the FPSC's regulatory actions relevant to plaintiffs' claims. In addition to FPSC regulation, the Florida Supreme Court has also been active in its role of judicial reviewer. See e.g., C.F. Indus., Inc. v. Nichols, 536 So.2d 234 \(Fla. 1988\) (standby rates for Qualifying Facilities ("QF")); PW Ventures, Inc. v. Nichols, 533 So.2d 281 \(Fla. 1988\) [*44] (third-party sales by QF).

Plaintiffs' complaints may be divided into three areas: (1) refusal to wheel, (2) predatory use of rates, i.e., Backup, Avoided Cost and Interruptible, and (3) interference with interconnection, including the Interconnection Agreement and insurance requirements. In summary, plaintiffs first contend that state supervision did not exist when the FPSC denied Dade's petition for self-service wheeling. Rather, the FPSC determined only that self-service wheeling could not be compelled because there was not an exact identity of ownership between the generator and consumer of electricity. See In re: Petition of Metropolitan Dade County, 85 FPSC 9:298. Next, plaintiffs argue that FPL's selective and improper marketing of the interruptible rate to customers considering cogeneration, proposed plan to increase the backup rate and abuse of the avoided cost rate²⁵ were not subject to FPSC review. Lastly, while standard interconnection agreements were the subject of FPSC proceedings, plaintiffs claim that the final modified standard interconnection agreement between parties required no specific FPSC approval. Under Ticor, plaintiffs [*45] suggest that this admission establishes lack of state supervision.

(a) Refusal to Wheel

In a 1987 proceeding, the FPSC held that Dade's request to allow SFCA to wheel power to Jackson Memorial did not comply with the FPSC cogeneration rule on "self-service" wheeling. In re: Petition of Metropolitan Dade County for Expedited Consideration of Request for Provision of Self-Service Transmission, Order No. 17510, Docket No. 860786-EI, 87 FPSC 5:32, 35-37 (May 5, 1987). In that order, the FPSC found that the financing arrangements of the DGC facility conferred no ownership interest in the equipment, and, therefore, transmission of electricity to County facilities would not be "self-service." Defendants contend that this determination [*46] is conclusive evidence of state supervision. However, plaintiffs' allegations do not contest the FPSC order and its reasoning. What plaintiffs are complaining about in this action are FPL's actions affecting the circumstances leading up to that hearing and the resulting FPSC order.

Since the inception of the SFCA-Dade agreement,²⁶ Dade agreed to use any excess power generated at DGC to power other County facilities. Throughout the negotiations, FPL was aware that the SFCA-Dade contract contemplated that any excess power would either be wheeled to other County locations by FPL, be conveyed through a direct transmission line to other County locations, or be sold to FPL at the Avoided Cost Rate.²⁷ In fact, FPL raised objections to the proposed agreements during negotiations between SFCA and Dade.²⁸ After SFCA and Dade ratified the agreement, FPL began its campaign to prevent plaintiffs from wheeling power to Jackson Memorial and other County locations. It is these actions, not discussed in the FPSC order, that plaintiffs contend are anticompetitive and in violation of Florida's articulated policies. Plaintiffs assert that the actions undertaken by ²⁵ Plaintiffs state that FPL's methodology for calculating avoided cost payments was improperly manipulated, resulting in an artificially low level of payment to plaintiffs. Therefore, there was no effective review of the manipulated data by the FPSC.

²⁶ Sometimes referred to by parties as the "Energy Purchase Contract."

²⁷ See Alper Deposition I at 117-22; Denis Deposition I at 71-71; Davis Affidavit at P 15; and Flannery Affidavit at P 8.

²⁸ Denis Deposition I at 72-85; Alper Deposition I at 117-120; Dellapa Deposition VI at 38; and Flannery Affidavit at P 9-15.

FPL led to the FPSC order concluding [*47] that plaintiffs were not self-service wheelers. Subsequently, FPL based its continuing refusal to wheel the DGC's excess power on the above FPSC order.

Plaintiffs contend that FPL facilitated the SFCA-Dade agreement with full knowledge of the conditions, that they detrimentally relied on FPL's actions and that FPL should have been estopped from petitioning against such wheeling. Dellapa Deposition VI at 228-29; Alper Deposition I at 125-31. Had the Joint Venture been aware of FPL's true position with respect to the excess power, plaintiffs state that they would have never proceeded with the project as planned.²⁹

[*48] There is no question as to the fact that the SFCA-Dade arrangement is not self-service wheeling. HN20 There is, however, dispute as to whether FPL acted in accordance with clearly articulated state policies supporting cogeneration projects. Review of the FPSC order discloses that there is no mention of FPL's actions towards plaintiffs that occurred prior to the FPSC hearing and order. Upon review of the pleadings and affidavit testimony, the Court finds that there is a genuine issue of material fact on the question of whether defendants acted contrary to state policy when they participated in the genesis of the SFCA-Dade agreement and subsequently lobbied against wheeling plaintiffs' excess power. These actions bring into question, not whether the FPSC properly ruled on the self-service claim, but whether the FPSC ever had the opportunity to exercise power to review FPL's specific anticompetitive acts which occurred prior to the FPSC hearing and to disapprove those that failed to accord with state policy.

(b) Predatory Use of Rates

Next, plaintiffs contend that FPL, through its monopoly power, impermissibly manipulated certain rates to plaintiffs' detriment. Plaintiffs state that [*49] FPL's policies, practices and decisions regarding establishment of the backup, interruptible and avoided cost rates, all occurred prior to FPSC hearings and were not disclosed to the FPSC during the hearings. Even though the FPSC heard argument and issued orders setting and enforcing the various rates, plaintiffs argue that FPL's specific anticompetitive actions were not actively supervised by the FPSC.

In 1987, the FPSC heard argument on the issue of appropriate rates for supplemental, backup and maintenance services to utility customers. In re: Generic Investigation of Standby Rates for Electric Utilities, Order No. 17519, Docket No. 850673-EU, 87 FPSC 2:43, 45, 81 P.U.R.4th 1 (Feb. 6, 1987), aff'd, C.F. Indus., Inc. v. Nichols, 536 So.2d 234 \(Fla. 1988\). During the investigation, the FPSC identified fifty-one issues, seven parties participated in the proceedings and the FPSC staff conducted workshops over a period of five, non-consecutive days, hearing testimony from eleven witnesses. Id. At that time, the FPSC held that "the rate schedules, availability, and terms and conditions for standby [*50] electric service required by [the] Order [were] fair and reasonable and fully [complied] with the intent of PURPA and the applicable FERC rules." Id. at 2:65.

Plaintiffs allege, however, that unbeknownst to the FPSC, FPL developed a lower interruptible rate³⁰ to offer customers "at risk" to cogeneration. Atkinson Deposition I at 139-42; III at 373; and IV at 542-43. At the same time, FPL developed a higher rate for those services, such as backup power, which a customer would require if it opted to cogeneration. *Id.*³¹ Use of the interruptible rate was allegedly designed to reduce the number of qualifying cogeneration facilities. Atkinson Deposition II at 318-19; Tallon Deposition I at 45. Internally, plaintiffs assert, FPL discussed the interruptible rate as the development of a "predatory" rate to "compete" with cogeneration. Bell

²⁹ "If I had been advised at any time at or prior to the November 15, 1983 meeting of the Board of County Commissioners that FPL would later vigorously oppose efforts by the Joint Venture and the County to dispose of power from the DGC Facility at other County buildings and facilities, I would not have recommended approval of the project as it stood." Affidavit of Jerry P. Davis at P 22. See Alper Deposition I at 117-22 and Denis Deposition at 71-72. See also Davis Affidavit at P 43, Hatsopoulos Affidavit at P 16 and Whetton Affidavit at P 6, to support the proposition that Thermo and Rolls abandoned plans to pursue cogeneration projects within FPL's service territory.

³⁰ A customer on an "interruptible rate" agrees to allow its electrical service to be periodically suspended by the utility in order to effectuate a savings.

³¹ FPL also studied other utilities' rate designs used to defer cogeneration projects in their areas. Tallon Deposition at 83-84.

Deposition I at 191-98; II at 202-05. After preliminary discussions, FPL actually offered the interruptible rate to customers at risk to cogeneration, Hudiburg Deposition at 56-57, even though FPL's in-house experts warned that "as a matter of the numbers, the numbers of planning," the interruptible rate made no economic sense. Bestard Deposition [*51] I at 142-43. Plaintiffs claim that this offering directly contradicted established Florida policy favoring cogeneration.

In addition to offering the interruptible rate to customers as an incentive to reject cogeneration, plaintiffs state that FPL attempted to raise the spectre of higher back-up rates in order to dissuade those customers from employing cogeneration technology. An FPL official allegedly complained that the proposed back-up rate described in the SEBS was higher than a true "cost-based" rate should be. Bell Deposition I at 132-34. This admission, plaintiffs contend, is fatal to establishing the state supervision requirement and is completely at odds with clearly articulated Florida policies favoring cogeneration.

[*52] Finally, the FPSC has actively regulated the avoided cost rates. In 1981, the Commission initially denied approval of tariffs submitted by FPL and other utilities. In re: Adoption of Tariffs Filed Pursuant to Rules 25-17.80 through 25-17.89 Regarding Utilities' Obligations to Cogenerators and Small Power Producers, Order No. 10198, Docket No. 810296-EU, 81 FPSC 8:130 (Aug. 11, 1981) (rejecting initial FPL proposed avoided cost tariff). In an attempt to expedite the implementation of its rules regarding tariffs, the FPSC developed a sample tariff to inform QFs of the conditions and terms of interconnection and rates for purchases of energy. Id. at 130-31. Even though each of the utilities had "ample opportunity to provide the Commission with 'estimated avoided costs (or purchase rates), as calculated by that party,'" only one of the submissions, from Florida Power Corporation, complied with the FPSC's guidelines. In re: Adoption of Tariffs Filed Pursuant to Rules 25-17.80 through 25-17.89 Regarding Utilities' Obligations to Cogenerators and Small Power Producers, Order No. 10331, Docket No. 810296-EU, 81 FPSC 10:46, 46-47 [*53] (Oct. 12, 1981). Consequently, the FPSC set purchase prices for energy for the period beginning October 1, 1981, through March 31, 1982. Id. at 47.

Subsequently, the FPSC held hearings on the implementation of the new cogeneration rules with respect to pricing a statewide avoided cost unit. In re: Proceedings to Implement Cogeneration Rules, Order No. 13247, Docket No. 830377-EU, 84 FPSC 5:4 (May 1, 1984) (approval of revised FPL methodology). With respect to its methodology in setting the avoided rates, the Commission stated that the "approach to pricing QF capacity and energy reflects the Commission's long standing policy that the need for additional capacity by Florida utilities should be determined from a statewide perspective rather than simply focusing on the isolated needs of the individual Florida utility systems." Id. "During these proceedings, considerable debate was fostered by the QF intervenors as to which load forecast should be used to determine the in-service date of the statewide avoided unit." Id. at 6. Based on the evidence, the Commission set the in-service date at [*54] April 1, 1992. Id. The Commission stated that the record was "void of any substantial evidence demonstrating that the individual generation expansion plans presented by the utilities represent[ed] anything more than each individual utility's isolated perception of the need on its own system." Id. at 7. Thus, the FPSC held that the rate should be based from a peninsular Florida standpoint. Id. Consequently, the FPSC approved a template of plant parameters and cost factors to be used for establishing the standard offer rates based on the value of deferring the statewide avoided unit. Id. at 9. The FPSC addressed many other issues in its order, rejecting some and accepting others.³²

[*55] While these proceedings could be argued as conclusive evidence to support active state supervision of the avoided cost rate, there would be an inherent flaw to the argument. The order only contains statements that the FPSC supervised the establishment of a statewide avoided cost rate calculation, not that the FPSC supervised defendants' conduct which contributed to and formed the basis of defendants' recommendations and arguments to the FPSC during the proceedings. Plaintiffs maintain that defendants' policies and actions that engendered the proposed avoided cost rate was not subject to review by the FPSC.

³² For example: Changes to a QF's Capacity Commitment, id. at 13-14; the Basis for Standard Offer Avoided Energy Payments, id. at 14-15; the Methodology for Calculating Actual Avoided Energy Costs, id. at 15; Performance Criteria under Rule 25-17.83(3)(a), id. at 15-16; and, most importantly, Wheeling, Line Losses, Transaction Costs, and the Utility's Obligation to Purchase, id. at 19-20.

First, plaintiffs claim that FPL did not supply plaintiffs with the hour-by-hour fuel cost information available to it, even though FPL routinely made this information available to other utilities via the Florida Power Broker System. Perez-Alonso Deposition II at 349-351. FPL acknowledged that it had no reason not to provide the information to cogenerators and that no FPSC rule prevented it from doing so. Id. at 371; Denis Deposition I at 197. Plaintiffs state that failure to provide this information caused them injury because SFCA sold power to FPL when it was not economical [*56] to do so. Remen Affidavit at P 6; Dellapa Deposition I at 89-90. In fact, at that time, "utility systems in other jurisdictions provide[d] timely information on avoided cost rates to cogenerators." Pifer Affidavit at P 34. Additionally, plaintiffs contend that FPL manipulated its calculation of the as-available rate to significantly reduce payment to the Joint Venture. Id. at Ps 33-39.

HN21 All of FPL's actions regarding rates which they have the capability, authority and ability to alter, as stated above, have not been reviewed by the FPSC. After examination of all relevant FPSC orders, the Court finds that there is a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the FPSC supervised FPL's conduct regarding these rates.

(c) Interference with Interconnection

The FPSC conducted extensive proceedings, developing detailed instructions on interconnection agreements in general and fixing the terms of FPL's standard agreement.³³ [*58] While FPL admits that its standard interconnection agreement was the subject of FPSC proceedings, the interconnection agreement which was actually negotiated with the plaintiffs, and which modified FPL's standard agreement, required no specific [*57] FPSC approval to become effective.³⁴ Plaintiffs assert that the above admission - that FPSC did not review the final agreement - is fatal under Ticor, where the Supreme Court held that agreements among title insurers which automatically took effect upon filing, under a so-called "negative option," were not subject to active state supervision. As Ticor states, HN22 "the mere potential for state supervision is not an adequate substitute for a decision by the State." 112 S. Ct. at 2179.

Plaintiffs also claim that FPL's change of position regarding interconnecting SFCA and Jackson Memorial violated the policies favoring cogeneration. As stated above, FPL allegedly advised and imposed requirements upon parties to the Interconnection Agreement.³⁵ [*59] Thereafter, FPL began its campaign to prevent such interconnection.³⁶ Roberto Denis, Director of System Planning for FPL, confirmed that he could think of no situation where FPL would ever perceive either self-service wheeling or the construction of a separate transmission line in the Miami area to be in the best interests of FPL's ratepayers. Denis Deposition I at 37-38, 117-18. Plaintiffs contend that this change of heart, supports a conclusion that FPL never intended to support cogeneration even though Florida statutes instruct otherwise.

Plaintiffs also maintain that FPL began a concerted effort to dissuade the County from building a separate transmission line from the DGC to Jackson Memorial. This effort included questionable negotiation with plaintiffs and successful attempts to delay the County Commission's vote on the transmission line by several months. Dellapa Deposition VI at 14, 17-19, 252-53. Also, FPL representatives specifically discussed using the interconnection process under Fla. Admin. Code Rule 25-17.087(2) as a means of deterring the development of cogeneration facilities. Seelke Deposition I at 95-96. Plaintiffs claim that all of these above actions violated Florida's policy regarding cogeneration.

³³ See In re: Adoption of Rules 25-17.80 through 25-17.89 - Utilities' Obligations with Regard to Cogenerators and Small Power Producers, Order No. 9970, Docket No. 780235-EU, 81 FPSC 4:130, 135 (April 22, 1981); In re: Amendment of Rules 25-17.80 through 25-17.89 Relation to Cogeneration, Order No. 12443, Docket No. 820406-EU, 83 FPSC 9:14, 18 (Sept. 2, 1983); and In re: Proceedings to Implement Cogeneration Rules, Order No. 13247, Docket No. 830377-EU, 84 FPSC 5:4 (May 1, 1984).

³⁴ Plaintiffs and/or Dade admit that did not request FPSC scrutiny of the final agreement pursuant to Fla. Admin. Code Rule 25-17.087(3). This, however, is not dispositive.

³⁵ Denis Deposition I at 73; Dellapa Deposition VI at 228-29; and Alper Deposition I at 125-31.

³⁶ Adams Deposition I at 140-44; III at 380-81, 388-89.

According to plaintiffs, the interconnection process was also used to impose excessive and unreasonable insurance requirements for failure-to-supply coverage. Somerville Deposition I at 87-96. See Fla. Admin. Code Rule 25-17-087(6)(c). Plaintiffs state that failure-to-supply coverage was unnecessary in the amounts proposed by FPL because it was technically [*60] almost impossible to overload FPL's grid. Somerville Deposition I at 94-95. In fact, plaintiffs state that the SFCA was more at risk than FPL's grid. Id. Therefore, any requirement for substantial failure-to-supply insurance was unreasonable and only imposed to prevent cogeneration from succeeding.

(d) Conclusion

HN23 Caselaw does not require that the state actively supervise every action taken by an entity with the monopoly power. Ticor merely holds that state officials have and exercise power to review particular anticompetitive acts. The Florida legislature delegated rule-making authority and enforcement of those rules to the FPSC. See Fla. Stat. 366.05(1) (1991), 366.04(1) and (5) (1991), and 366.06(1) (1991). Based on the preceding three sections, the Court finds that the FPSC had power to review the anticompetitive acts but was not given the opportunity to exercise its authority to review FPL's actions towards plaintiffs. Therefore, defendants have not established the second requirement for state-action immunity for FPL's actions pertaining to wheeling, use of rates and interconnecting the DGC facility and Jackson Memorial.

2. The Noerr/Pennington [*61] Doctrine

This principle has developed as a corollary to Parker's state-action immunity as follows: HN24 "The federal antitrust laws also do not regulate the conduct of private individuals in seeking anticompetitive action from the government." Colombia, 499 U.S. at 379-80. This doctrine, established in Eastern Railroad Presidents Conference v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc., 365 U.S. 127, 5 L. Ed. 2d 464, 81 S. Ct. 523, reh'g denied, 365 U.S. 875, 5 L. Ed. 2d 864, 81 S. Ct. 899 (1961), "shields from the Sherman Act a concerted effort to influence public officials regardless of intent or purpose," Colombia, 499 U.S. at 380 (quoting United Mine Workers v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657, 670, 14 L. Ed. 2d 626, 85 S. Ct. 1585 (1965)), and holds that efforts to influence certain legislative and executive governmental action do not violate the antitrust laws irrespective of their anticompetitive [*62] intent or effect.

With respect to the stimulus producing the legislation governing the anti-competitive action, the Court has held that an action "of the State itself . . . is exempt from antitrust liability regardless of the State's motives in taking the action." Columbia, 499 U.S. at 377-378 (quoting Hoover v. Ronwin, 466 U.S. 558, 579-580, 80 L. Ed. 2d 590, 104 S. Ct. 1989 (1984)). Thus, whether or not a group of private citizens urges a municipality to implement a regulation that ultimately provides a monopoly to that group is immaterial to the question of whether the state acted in a regulatory capacity.

HN25 There are, however, certain exceptions to the Noerr-Pennington principle. The first occurs where "a publicity campaign, ostensibly directed toward influencing governmental action, is a mere sham to cover what is actually nothing more than an attempt to interfere directly with the business relationships of a competitor." Noerr, 365 U.S. at 144 (emphasis added). The sham exception includes [*63] circumstances where entities "use the governmental process - as opposed to the outcome of that process - as an anticompetitive weapon. A classic example is the filing of frivolous objections to the license application of a competitor, with no expectation of achieving denial of the license but simply in order to impose expense and delay." Colombia, 499 U.S. at 380. Columbia instructs that "the purpose of delaying a competitor's entry into the market does not render lobbying activity a 'sham,' unless . . . the delay is sought to be achieved only by the lobbying process itself, and not by the governmental action that the lobbying seeks." *Id. at 381.*³⁷

³⁷ HN26 Another exception to the doctrine applies when fraud is committed in an anticompetitive manner. However, fraudulent conduct overrides Noerr immunity only with respect to conduct in a judicial or quasi-judicial settings, Woods Exploration & Producing Co. v. Aluminum Co., 438 F.2d 1286 (5th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1047, 30 L. Ed. 2d 736, 92 S. Ct. 701 (1972). In this case, all conduct was committed before regulatory or administrative agencies. The Court cannot find that the evidence compels a conclusion that FPL committed fraud. Therefore, the fraud exception to Noerr immunity does not apply here.

[*64] The commercial exception to Noerr doctrine is the final method upon which a plaintiff may establish antitrust liability. This exception was first examined in this Circuit in Hill Aircraft, 561 F. Supp. 667, 675 (N.D. Ga. 1982), aff'd, 729 F.2d 1467 (11th Cir. 1984). There, the district court drew upon Noerr stating that upon the individual factual considerations of a case the Sherman Act regulates only business activities, not political activities. Id. Recognition of the commercial exception was confirmed in Todorov, 921 F.2d at 1446 n.14 and Allied Tube & Conduit Corp. v. Indian Head, Inc., 486 U.S. 492, 505-07, 100 L. Ed. 2d 497, 108 S. Ct. 1931 (1988).³⁸ The "doctrine is premised on the need to protect the first amendment right to petition the government from censure by the antitrust laws and the belief that the Sherman Act is concerned with economics and not with politics." Todorov, 921 F.2d at 1446 n.14. When evaluating whether Noerr immunity applies, the Court must not only [*65] look at the activity's "impact, but also on the context and nature of the activity." Allied Tube, 486 U.S. at 504.

Under the Allied Tube test, HN28³⁹ if the alleged anticompetitive actions took place in the open political arena, then the conduct enjoys immunity from antitrust liability under Noerr. 486 U.S. at 506. If, however, the conduct took place within the confines of a private standard-setting process, then the actions are not entitled to Noerr immunity. For example, in Allied Tube, [*66] Noerr immunity was not established because the private association independently recommended building codes which the several states adopted in every case essentially without review.

All Noerr exceptions emerged and have been interpreted narrowly under First Amendment principles. Because of this, the burden is on plaintiffs in this case to show that Noerr immunity did not attach to FPL's actions. McGuire Oil Co. v. Mapco, Inc., 958 F.2d 1552, 1558 n.9 (11th Cir. 1992).

In the present case, the only actions to which the Noerr doctrine conceivably applies are FPL's efforts (1) to lobby the Dade County Board of Commissioners ("DCBC") to deny approval of the transmission line between the DGC facility and Jackson Memorial; (2) to retain Jackson Memorial as its customer; and (3) to lobby the FPSC to deny plaintiffs' self-service wheeling claim. Plaintiffs only address the first and second instances, apparently conceding that FPL's lobbying efforts during FPSC hearings were immune from antitrust liability.

Applying the tests for the sham and commercial exceptions, the Court finds that only the latter has been established. First, the circumstances [*67] in this case do not point towards a conclusion that FPL's lobbying efforts towards the DCBC and FPSC were a sham to cover their attempt to hinder plaintiffs' competition. Plaintiffs have not alleged sufficient evidence to support a claim that plaintiffs undertook their actions solely to use the DCBC's and the FPSC's hearing processes to otherwise delay or hinder plaintiffs' cogeneration efforts. Thus, the sham exception does not establish defendants' antitrust liability.

However, the Court holds otherwise with respect to whether FPL's conduct falls within the commercial exception to the Noerr doctrine because FPL's actions were part of a broader, allegedly illegal, effort to retain Jackson Memorial as FPL's customer. This effort was in direct contravention to Florida's policies promoting cogeneration and was aimed at a commercial purchasing decision of the County; that is, whether Dade should purchase electricity for Jackson Memorial from FPL or from the Joint Venture. Since FPL sought a commercial or proprietary decision from the County and not a political or "policy" decision, and because FPL's actions violated state policies, the commercial exception applies. See Allied Tube, 486 U.S. at 505-07; [*68] Todorov, 921 F.2d at 1446 n.14; and Hill Aircraft, 561 F. Supp. at 675.

The Supreme Court also foreclosed the possibility that a "conspiracy" exception to the Noerr/Pennington doctrine exists "when government officials conspire with a private party to employ government action as a means of stifling competition." Columbia, 499 U.S. at 382-84.

³⁸ HN27⁴⁰ Where "an economically interested party exercises decision-making authority in formulating a product standard for a private association that comprises market participants, that party enjoys no Noerr immunity from any antitrust liability flowing from the effect the standard has of its own force in the marketplace." Allied Tube, 486 U.S. at 510.

Looking at the impact, context and nature of FPL's actions at issue, Allied Tube, 486 U.S. at 504, this case is unlike Noerr in that defendants did not seek passage of favorable legislation in general.³⁹ Considering the nature of the activity addressed herein, the Court finds that FPL's actions towards the DCBC was not designed to influence DCBC policy, but to prevent competition from plaintiffs. This case, like Todorov, "involves activity that is more economic than political in nature." 921 F.2d at 1446 n.14. FPL's lobbying efforts towards the DCBC affected defendants in a pecuniary manner. If the transmission line passed the vote of the DCBC then FPL would have lost a valued customer - Jackson Memorial.

[*69] As a matter of law, the Court finds that FPL acted solely with regard to a commercial activity when it undertook action to prevent construction of the DGC-Jackson Memorial transmission line. With respect to FPL's efforts to lobby the County to retain Jackson Memorial as its customer, the Court finds that FPL acted as a direct competitor would act when one of its favored customers was about to abandon it for another provider. Consequently, the Court finds that FPL's actions towards the County during negotiations of the SFCA-Dade contract were commercial in nature and not protected by Noerr immunity. Therefore, the Court cannot grant defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment based on Noerr immunity.

IV. CONCLUSION

Upon due consideration of the parties' memoranda and relevant caselaw, it is ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that defendants' Renewed Motions to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim and for Lack of Standing (d.e. 334-2 and -3, respectively) and, in the alternative, Motion for Summary Judgment (d.e. 334-1) are hereby DENIED.

DONE AND ORDERED at Miami, Florida, this 21st day of February, 1994.

Clyde Atkins

SENIOR UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

End of Document

³⁹ At least insofar as defendants' actions were directed toward obtaining FPSC action, the legality of defendants efforts to sway the FPSC may not be questioned. See Noerr, 365 U.S. at 140.

Crown Homes, Inc. v. Landes

Court of Appeal of California, Second Appellate District, Division Five

February 23, 1994, Decided

No. B078210.

Reporter

22 Cal. App. 4th 1273 *; 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 827 ; 1994 Cal. App. LEXIS 147 ; 94 Cal. Daily Op. Service 1345; 93 Daily Journal DAR 2351; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,523

CROWN HOMES, INC., et al., Plaintiffs and Appellants, v. NEIL LANDES et al., Defendants and Respondents.

Notice: [1] Opinion certified for partial publication. *

Prior History: Superior Court of Los Angeles County, No. BC009180, Ronald E. Cappai, Judge.

Disposition: The judgment is affirmed. All defendants shall separately recover their costs on appeal jointly and severally from all plaintiffs.

Core Terms

arbitration, antitrust, Cartwright Act, disputes, arbitration agreement, antitrust claim, provisions, subject to arbitration, mobilehomes, domestic, parties, courts, anti trust law, transactions, lease

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Arbitration > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Types of Contracts > Adhesion Contracts

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Pretrial Matters > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Validity of ADR Methods

HN1 [blue icon] Regulated Practices, Private Actions

The mere appearance of an antitrust dispute does not warrant invalidation of arbitration as a selected forum when there is no showing or basis for assuming the arbitral process is inadequate or unfair.

* Pursuant to California Rules of Court, rules 976(b) and 976.1, this opinion is certified for publication except parts II(A)-II(D) and II(F).

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

International Law > Dispute Resolution > Arbitration & Mediation > Agreements

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > Labor Arbitration > Enforcement

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Pretrial Matters > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Judicial Review

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Pretrial Matters > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Validity of ADR Methods

International Law > Dispute Resolution > Arbitration & Mediation > General Overview

International Trade Law > Dispute Resolution > International Commercial Arbitration > Arbitration

HN2 [down] Private Actions, Remedies

The importance of private damages remedies in enforcing antitrust laws does not warrant the conclusion that a remedy may not be sought outside the courts.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Federal & State Interrelationships > Federal Common Law > General Overview

HN3 [down] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Because the Cartwright Act, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 16700 et seq., is patterned after the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq., federal cases interpreting the Sherman Act are applicable in construing the state Cartwright Act.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Pretrial Matters > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Validity of ADR Methods

HN4 [down] Private Actions, Remedies

There is nothing in the state arbitration statutes, Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq., or the Cartwright Act, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 16700 et seq., which indicates that an antitrust claim is not arbitrable.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN5 [down] Legislation, Interpretation

The fundamental purpose of statutory construction is to ascertain the intent of the lawmakers so as to effectuate the law's purpose. In determining this intent, a court begins by examining the language of the statute. However, it is a settled principle of statutory interpretation that language of a statute should not be given a literal meaning if doing so would result in absurd consequences which the legislature did not intend. Words used in a statute should be given the meaning they bear in ordinary use. If the language is clear and unambiguous there is no need for construction, nor is it necessary to resort to indicia of the intent of the legislature. The plain meaning rule does not prohibit a court from determining whether the literal meaning of a statute comports with its purpose or whether such a construction of one provision is consistent with other provisions of the statute.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN6 Legislation, Interpretation

The meaning of a statute may not be determined from a single word or sentence; the words must be construed in context, and provisions relating to the same subject matter must be harmonized to the extent possible. Literal construction should not prevail if it is contrary to the legislative intent apparent in the statute. The intent prevails over the letter, and the letter will, if possible, be so read as to conform to the spirit of the act. An interpretation that renders related provisions nugatory must be avoided; each sentence must be read not in isolation but in the light of the statutory scheme; and if a statute is amenable to two alternative interpretations, the one that leads to the more reasonable result will be followed.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Contract Conditions & Provisions > Arbitration Clauses

Civil Procedure > ... > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Arbitration > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > Labor Arbitration > Enforcement

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Pretrial Matters > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Validity of ADR Methods

HN7 Contract Conditions & Provisions, Arbitration Clauses

See Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 1280.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Pretrial Matters > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Validity of ADR Methods

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > Labor Arbitration > Enforcement

HN8 Alternative Dispute Resolution, Validity of ADR Methods

See Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Contract Conditions & Provisions > Arbitration Clauses

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Pretrial Matters > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Validity of ADR Methods

HN9 Contract Conditions & Provisions, Arbitration Clauses

See Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Contract Conditions & Provisions > Arbitration Clauses

Civil Procedure > ... > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Arbitration > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations > Labor Arbitration > Enforcement

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Pretrial Matters > Alternative Dispute Resolution > Validity of ADR Methods

HN10 [] Contract Conditions & Provisions, Arbitration Clauses

Title 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure, Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq., represents a comprehensive statutory scheme regulating private arbitration in California. Through this detailed statutory scheme, the legislature has expressed a strong public policy in favor of arbitration as a speedy and relatively inexpensive means of dispute resolution. Consequently, courts will indulge every intendment to give effect to such proceedings.

Headnotes/Summary

Summary

CALIFORNIA OFFICIAL REPORTS SUMMARY

Mobilehome park residents and two corporate mobilehome dealerships brought an action against the mobilehome park owners, a mobilehome dealer, and two manufactured housing companies, alleging that defendants violated the Cartwright Act (Bus. & Prof. Code, § 16700 et seq.) by illegally tying the lease of space in the park to the purchase of mobilehomes and "dig-in" packages from defendant mobilehome dealer. The trial court ordered the dispute to arbitration as to the resident plaintiffs under the arbitration provision contained in the mobilehome park leases. The arbitrator issued an award favoring defendants, and the trial court granted defendants' motion to confirm the award. (Superior Court of Los Angeles County, No. BC009180, Ronald E. Cappai, Judge.)

The Court of Appeal affirmed. It held that the trial court did not err in ordering the dispute to arbitration. A California appellate case determining that parties cannot privately agree to exclude from judicial scrutiny antitrust issues under the Cartwright Act relied on authority that is no longer viable by reason of subsequent United States Supreme Court decisions. Further, there is nothing in the arbitration statutes (Code Civ. Proc., § 1280 et seq.) or the Cartwright Act indicating that antitrust violations are not subject to arbitration, there is a strong public policy favoring arbitration, and the arbitration agreement in question did not exclude antitrust violations. (Opinion by Turner, P. J., with Armstrong and Godoy Perez, JJ., concurring.)

Headnotes

CA(1a) [] (1a) CA(1b) [] (1b)

Arbitration and Award § 1—Antitrust Disputes as Arbitrable: Monopolies and Restraints of Trade § 6—Under Cartwright Act—Arbitrability of Disputes.

--In an action by mobilehome park residents and two corporate mobilehome dealerships against the mobilehome park owners, a mobilehome dealer, and two manufactured housing companies, alleging that defendants violated the Cartwright Act (Bus. & Prof. Code, § 16700 et seq.) by illegally tying the lease of space in the park to the purchase of mobilehomes and "dig-in" packages from defendant mobilehome dealer, the trial court did not err in ordering the dispute to arbitration under the arbitration provision in the mobilehome park leases. A California appellate case holding that parties cannot privately agree to exclude from judicial determination antitrust issues under the Cartwright Act relied on authority that is no longer viable by reason of subsequent United States Supreme Court decisions. Further, there is nothing in the arbitration statutes (Code Civ. Proc., § 1280 et seq.) or the Cartwright Act indicating that antitrust violations are not subject to arbitration, there is a strong public policy favoring arbitration, and the arbitration agreement in question did not exclude antitrust violations.

CA(2) [2] (2)

Monopolies and Restraints of Trade § 6—Under Cartwright Act—Applicability of Case Law Interpreting Sherman Act.

--Because the Cartwright Act (Bus. & Prof. Code, § 16700 et seq.) is patterned after the Sherman Act (15 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.), federal cases interpreting the Sherman Act are applicable in construing state law.

[See 1 Witkin, Summary of Cal. Law (9th ed. 1987) Contracts, § 580.]

Counsel: Endman, Lincoln, Turek & Heater, Linda B. Reich and Henry E. Heater for Plaintiffs and Appellants.

Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton, Don T. Hibner, Jr., Dani Jo Merryman and Samantha M. Phillips for Defendants and Respondents.

Judges: Opinion by Turner, P. J., with Armstrong and Godoy Perez, JJ., concurring.

Opinion by: TURNER, P. J.

Opinion

[*1275]

[828] I. BACKGROUND

This is an appeal from a judgment granting a motion to confirm an arbitration award pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure section 1286.¹ [3] Plaintiffs are seven residents of the Stallion Meadows Mobile Home Park: Lydia McGregor; Barbara Robinson; Michael Robinson; David Seim; Pamela Seim; Jerald Vincent; and Marilyn Jewell-Vincent as well as two corporate mobilehome dealerships, Apple Homes, Inc., and Crown Homes, Inc. The complaint [2] named as defendants: Neil Landes; Cynthia Landes; and Ernest Goldenfeld; the general partners of Goldland Associates (Goldland), which in turn is alleged to be the developer and owner of Stallion Meadows Mobile Home Park (Stallion). The complaint also named as defendants: L.C. Homes Inc., a mobilehome dealer; L.C. Manufactured Housing, Inc.; and Manufactured Housing Construction, Inc.² Plaintiffs alleged that defendants violated state antitrust laws under the Cartwright Act (Bus. & Prof. Code, § 16700 et seq.) by illegally tying the lease of space in the park to the purchase of mobilehomes and "dig-in" packages from L.C. Homes, Inc. As a result, plaintiffs alleged they were forced to pay higher than market prices for their mobilehomes and dig-in packages. Apple Homes and Crown Homes alleged they were precluded from selling mobilehomes to be placed in the park. The resident plaintiffs also asserted that Mr. Landes, Mr. Goldenfeld, and Mr. Goldland violated Civil Code sections 798.37 and 798.31, which are part of California's [829] Mobilehome Residency Law. (Civ. Code, § 798 et seq.)

¹ Unless otherwise indicated, all future statutory references are to the Code of Civil Procedure.

² Plaintiffs voluntarily dismissed the complaint against defendant Manufactured Housing Construction, Inc.

In February 1992, defendants filed a motion to compel arbitration as to the resident plaintiffs. Commissioner Robert W. Zakon granted the motion and the arbitration began on October 19, 1992, before retired Judge Leon Savitch. On April 6, 1993, the arbitrator issued an award in favor of defendants in a "Report of Arbitration Proceedings and Statement of Decision by Arbitrator" which was subsequently modified by letter dated May 26, 1993. Defendants moved to confirm the award. Plaintiffs moved to vacate it on the grounds the arbitrator exceeded his powers under California law and the arbitration agreement. The trial court denied plaintiffs' motion to vacate the award; granted defendants' motion to confirm the award; and entered judgment on August 9, 1993, in defendants' favor. Plaintiffs filed a timely appeal [*1276] from the judgment. In the published portion of his opinion, we hold that antitrust claims arising under the Cartwright Act (Bus. & Prof. Code, § 16700 et seq.) are arbitrable. [4] In so concluding, we disagree with the holding of Bos Material Handling, Inc. v. Crown Controls Corp. (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 99, 109-112 [186 Cal.Rptr. 740], not because it was wrongly decided in 1982, but the authority it relied upon is no longer viable and persuasive by reason of subsequent United States Supreme Court decisions.

II. DISCUSSION

A. -D. *

E. Arbitration of an Antitrust Cause of Action

CA(1a)[↑] (1a) Plaintiffs argue the arbitration agreement in the leases violated California law insofar as it allowed the parties to agree to arbitrate an antitrust cause of action contrary to the decision of Bos Material Handling, Inc. v. Crown Controls Corp., supra, 137 Cal.App.3d at pages 109-112. Bos held that it would "follow the mainstream of judicial thought . . . [and conclude] parties . . . cannot agree privately to exclude antitrust issues under the Cartwright Act from judicial [5] scrutiny and determination." (Id. at p. 111, fn. omitted.) The prevailing judicial thought to which Bos referred to was American Safety Equipment Corp. v. J. P. Maguire & Co. (2d Cir. 1968) 391 F.2d 821, 825-828 and Wilko v. Swan (1953) 346 U.S. 427, 437-438 [98 L.Ed. 168, 176-177, 74 S.Ct. 182].¹¹ American Safety held ". . . the pervasive public interest in enforcement of the [Sherman Anti-Trust Act], and the nature of the claims that arise in such cases, combine to make . . . antitrust claims . . . inappropriate for arbitration." (American Safety Equipment Corp. v. J.P. Maguire & Co., supra, 391 F.2d at pp. 827-828.) Wilko held a securities dispute was not arbitrable. (Wilko v. Swan, supra, 346 U.S. at p. 438 [98 L.Ed. at p. 177].)

[6] To begin with, American Safety is no longer viable authority. As discussed below, plaintiffs' assertion that Bos controls the disposition of this case is unpersuasive. This is because the "mainstream of judicial thought" relied on in Bos has since changed course with the advent of the United States Supreme Court decision of Mitsubishi Motors v. Soler Chrysler-Plymouth [*1277] (1985) 473 U.S. 614, 628-629 [87 L.Ed.2d 444, 456-457, 105 S.Ct. 3346], which although not directly overruling American Safety, discussed and rejected its analysis. Mitsubishi concluded that nothing in the federal antitrust laws prohibited parties from agreeing to arbitrate antitrust claims which arose out of international commercial transactions. (Ibid.) Although the court found it unnecessary to resolve the legitimacy of the American Safety doctrine as it applied to agreements to arbitrate disputes arising out of domestic transactions, the court "confess[ed] to some skepticism of certain aspects of the American Safety doctrine." (Id. at p. 632 [87 L.Ed.2d at pp. 458-459].) [7] At another point, the Mitsubishi court noted the "absence of any explicit support for such an exception [to the general rule providing for arbitrations] in either the Sherman Act or the Federal Arbitration" [830] Act." (Id. at pp. 628-629 [87 L.Ed.2d at pp. 456-457].)

Mitsubishi declared that the American Safety doctrine was premised upon the following four considerations: first, ". . . private parties play a pivotal role in aiding governmental enforcement of the antitrust laws by means of the private action for treble damages"; second, " 'the strong possibility that contracts which generate antitrust disputes may be contracts of adhesion militates against automatic forum determination by contract"; third, antitrust issues which are prone to complexity, require sophisticated legal and economic analysis, and are therefore "ill-adapted to strengths of the arbitral process, i.e., expedition, minimal requirements of written rationale, simplicity, resort to basic concepts of common sense and simple equity"; and fourth, "just as 'issues of war and peace are too important to be vested in the generals, [8] . . . decisions as to antitrust regulation of business are too important to be lodged in the arbitrators chosen from the business community . . . !'" ([Mitsubishi Motors v. Soler Chrysler-Plymouth, supra, 473 U.S. at p. 632 \[87 L.Ed.2d at pp. 458-459\]](#), original italics.)

* See footnote, ante, page 1273.

¹¹ The Bos court also cited two Ninth Circuit cases, A. & E. Plastik Pak Co. v. Monsanto Company (9th Cir. 1968) 396 F.2d 710, 715-716 and Power Replacements, Inc. v. Air Preheater Co. (9th Cir. 1970) 426 F.2d 980, 983-984, both of which relied upon American Safety.

The Mitsubishi court then proceeded to address each of these ingredients and found them unpersuasive in terms of prohibiting arbitration of antitrust disputes arising from international business transactions. ([Mitsubishi Motors v. Soler Chrysler-Plymouth, supra, 473 U.S. at pp. 632-640 \[87 L.Ed.2d at pp. 458-464\]](#).) First, in terms of the role of the treble damage provisions of the Sherman Act, being part of the national policy designed to enforce antitrust laws, the Mitsubishi court held: "The importance of the private [treble]-damages remedy, however, does not compel the conclusion that it may not be sought outside an American court. Notwithstanding its important incidental policing function, the treble-damages cause of action conferred on private parties by § 4 of the Clayton [9] Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15, and pursued by [the defendant] by way of its third counterclaim, seeks primarily to enable an injured competitor to gain compensation for that injury. [P] 'Section 4 . . . [*1278] is in essence a remedial provision.' ("Id. at p. 635 [87 L.Ed.2d at pp. 460-461].) The Mitsubishi court stated the second concern cited in American Safety relating to adhesion contracts was unjustified because HN1¹² the mere appearance of an antitrust dispute did not warrant invalidation of arbitration as a selected forum when there was no showing or basis for assuming the arbitral process was inadequate or unfair. ([Id. at pp. 632-633 \[87 L.Ed.2d at pp. 458-459\]](#).) The court also rejected the notion that the potential complexity of the issues was sufficient "to ward off arbitration." ([Id. at p. 633 \[87 L.Ed.2d at p. 459\]](#).) Mitsubishi further concluded that an arbitration panel did not "pose too great a danger of innate hostility to the constraints on business conduct [10] that antitrust law imposes." ([Id. at p. 634 \[87 L.Ed.2d at pp. 459-460\]](#).) In so doing, the court "decline[d] to indulge the presumption that the parties and arbitral body conducting a proceeding will be unable or unwilling to retain competent, conscientious, and impartial arbitrators." (Ibid.) Finally, the court concluded that the core of American Safety doctrine --the HN2¹² importance of private damages remedies in enforcing the antitrust laws--did not warrant the conclusion that the remedy may not be sought outside the American courts. ([Id. at pp. 634-635 \[87 L.Ed.2d at pp. 459-461\]](#).) Accordingly, the Mitsubishi court held American courts should "enforce an agreement to resolve antitrust claims by arbitration when that agreement arises from an international transaction." ([Id. at pp. 624, 639-640 \[87 L.Ed.2d at pp. 453, 463-464\]](#)).¹²

[*11] The United States Supreme Court subsequently applied the principles of Mitsubishi in the context of domestic securities transactions to hold that claims under the Securities Act of 1933 were arbitrable, thereby overruling Wilko v. Swan, supra, 346 U.S. at page 438 [98 L.Ed.2d at page 177] which was the second major case relied upon by Bos. (See [Rodriguez de Quijas v. Shearson/Am. Exp. \(1989\) 490 U.S. 477, 479-485 \[104 L.Ed.2d 526, 533-537, 109 S.Ct. 1917\]](#).) The Supreme Court also applied Mitsubishi [831] to hold that claims under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act were arbitrable. ([Shearson/American Express Inc. v. McMahon \(1987\) 482 U.S. 220, 227-242 \[96 L.Ed.2d 185, 194-204, 107 S.Ct. 2332\]](#).) Likewise, California courts have concluded securities claims are arbitrable, thereby disregarding Wilko. ([Baker v. Aubrey \(1989\) 216 Cal.App.3d 1259, 1266 \[265 Cal.Rptr. 381\]](#) [citing [12] Shearson/American Express, Inc. v. McMahon, supra, 482 U.S. at pp. 226-227 \(96 L.Ed.2d at pp. 193-194\); [Elliot v. Albright \(1989\) 209 Cal.App.3d 1028, 1033-1037 \[257 Cal.Rptr. 762\]](#)].)

More importantly, however, the federal courts have interpreted Mitsubishi and its progeny to have eroded American Safety in the case of domestic [*1279] transactions and concluded that such antitrust claims are subject to arbitration. (See Kowalski v. Chicago Tribune Co. \(7th Cir. 1988\) 854 F.2d 168, 173 ["An argument could be made that arbitrators are not authorized to decide questions of federal antitrust law with binding effect, and at one time the argument would have carried the day [citations]--but no longer" because of Mitsubishi.]; Western Intern. Media

¹² Plaintiffs have failed to explain why the policies of the Sherman Act and the Federal Arbitration Act are furthered by resolution of international trade antitrust dispute in the arbitral arena but frustrated by arbitration of such disputes arising from domestic contracts.

Corp. v. Johnson (S.D.Fla. 1991) 754 F. Supp. 871, 873-874 ["[T]he Court's reliance on arbitration principles and the legislative histories of antitrust provisions suggests that the result arrived at in Mitsubishi would be forthcoming in the domestic situation."]; [13] Hough v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith (S.D.N.Y. 1991) 757 F.Supp. 283, 286 affirmed sub nom. Hough v. Merrill Lynch (S.D.N.Y. 1992) 946 F.2d 883 ["[I]t seems unlikely that the principle of Mitsubishi will be limited to international transactions."]; GKG Caribe, Inc. v. Nokia-Mobira, Inc. (D.Puerto Rico 1989) 725 F.Supp. 109, 111 ["Legal developments occurring after [American Safety] have significantly eroded its vitality to the extent that the Supreme Court, if confronted squarely with the issue of its continued applicability, would most certainly discard said doctrine."]; Gemco Latinoamerica, Inc. v. Seiko Time Corp. (S.D.N.Y. 1987) 671 F.Supp. 972, 980 [Given the Mitsubishi ruling, "none of the justifications for the American Safety doctrine retain their vigor and . . . our Court of Appeals would now hold that domestic antitrust claims are subject to arbitration."].

Other courts have questioned whether American Safety is any longer reliable authority, given the analysis in Mitsubishi. (Mayaja, Inc. v. Bodkin (5th Cir. 1986) 803 F.2d 157, 162-163, fn. 6 [14] ["Mitsubishi rejected so much of American Safety's reasoning it is difficult to say what is left of the opinion to rely on."]; Smoky Greenhawk Cotton Co., Inc. v. Merrill Lynch (W.D.Texas 1986) 650 F.Supp. 220, 222 ["[T]he analytical framework set out in Mitsubishi Motors should not be strictly limited to situations involving international disputes and is equally applicable to domestic statutory claims."].) Further, commentators have noted that the rationale of American Safety is of doubtful continuing validity given the Mitsubishi holding. (Comment, Arbitrating Civil RICO and Implied Causes of Action Arising Under Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (1987) 36 Cath. U.L.Rev. 455, 480 [the Mitsubishi court "not only strongly criticized the American Safety exception to the Arbitration Act, but held that all federal statutory rights may be arbitrable unless expressly indicated to the contrary by Congress." (fn. omitted)]; Kanowitz, Alternative Dispute Resolution and the Public Interest: The Arbitration Experience (1987) 38 Hastings L.J. 239, 262 [the [15] Mitsubishi court "rejected the rationale of American Safety . . ."]; Allison, Arbitration Agreements and Antitrust Claims: The Need for Enhanced Accommodation of Conflicting Public Policies (1986) 64 N.C. L.Rev. 219, 235, fn. 123 [the Mitsubishi decision "cast doubt on some of the rationales that had been employed to deny arbitrability to domestic antitrust claims."].)

[*1280] CA(2)[↑] (2) The California Supreme Court has held HN3[↑] because "the Cartwright Act is patterned after the Sherman Act (15 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.), federal cases interpreting the Sherman Act are applicable in construing our state laws. [Citation.]" (Mailand v. Burkle (1978) 20 Cal.3d 367, 376 [143 Cal.Rptr. 1, 572 P.2d 1142], fn. omitted.) In this case, we decline to breath life into all but defunct American Safety doctrine because of the existence [832] of Bos, a decision which predates Mitsubishi, McMahon, and Rodriguez.

CA(1b)[↑] (1b) Additionally, HN4[↑] there is nothing in the arbitration statutes or the Cartwright Act which indicates that an antitrust claim is not arbitrable. In [16] construing a statute, our responsibility is as follows: "HN5[↑] 'The fundamental purpose of statutory construction is to ascertain the intent of the lawmakers so as to effectuate the purpose of the law. [Citations.] In order to determine this intent, we begin by examining the language of the statute. [Citations.] But "[i]t is a settled principle of statutory interpretation that language of a statute should not be given a literal meaning if doing so would result in absurd consequences which the Legislature did not intend." ' [Citation.]' (" People v. King (1993) 5 Cal.4th 59, 69 [19 Cal.Rptr.2d 233, 851 P.2d 27].) In Lungren v. Deukmejian (1988) 45 Cal.3d 727, 735 [248 Cal.Rptr. 115, 755 P.2d 299], our Supreme Court held: "Words used in a statute . . . should be given the meaning they bear in ordinary use. [Citations.] If the language is clear and unambiguous there is no need for construction, nor is it necessary to resort to indicia of the intent of the Legislature . . . [Citations.] [P] But the 'plain meaning' rule does not prohibit a court from determining whether the [17] literal meaning of a statute comports with its purpose or whether such a construction of one provision is consistent with other provisions of the statute. HN6[↑] The meaning of a statute may not be determined from a single word or sentence; the words must be construed in context, and provisions relating to the same subject matter must be harmonized to the extent possible. [Citation.] Literal construction should not prevail if it is contrary to the legislative intent apparent in the statute. The intent prevails over the letter, and the letter will, if possible, be so read as to conform to the spirit of the act. [Citations.] An interpretation that renders related provisions nugatory must be avoided [citation]; each sentence must be read not in isolation but in the light of the statutory scheme [citation]; and if a statute is amenable to two alternative interpretations, the one that leads to the more reasonable result will be followed [citation]." It is with these thoughts in mind that we examine the language of the arbitration statutes and the Cartwright Act.

To begin with, the type of controversy which is subject to the arbitration statutes is very broad. Section 1280 defines in pertinent [18] part the types of disputes which are subject to the arbitration statutes as follows: HN7¹³ "As used in this title: [P] . . . [P] . . . [c] 'Controversy' means any questions arising [*1281] between parties to an agreement whether such question is one of law or of fact or both." (Italics added.) The broad nature of the enforceability of arbitration agreements is described in section 1281 as follows: HN8¹⁴ "A written agreement to submit to arbitration an existing controversy or a controversy thereafter arising is valid, enforceable and irrevocable, save upon grounds as exist for the revocation of any contract." Section 1281 does not exclude written agreements to submit controversies concerning potential violations of the Cartwright Act from the scope of the arbitration statutes. Further, section 1281.2, sets forth other statutory exceptions to the duty of a trial court to order arbitration of a controversy. A Cartwright Act dispute is not listed in section 1281.2.¹³ Also, [833] section 1281.5, subdivision (b) provides for a special waiver rule that comes into play when a party fails to seek arbitration of a dispute subject to a mechanic's lien. Accordingly, none of the provisions which [19] relate to the enforcement of arbitration agreements contain an exception for disputes premised upon the Cartwright Act.

[*20] In addition to the foregoing statutory language, our Supreme Court has repeatedly emphasized the strong public policy in favor of arbitration. In [Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase \(1992\) 3 Cal.4th 1 at page 9 \[10 Cal.Rptr.2d 183, 832 P.2d 899\]](#), our Supreme Court held: "Title 9 of the Code of Civil [*1282] Procedure, as enacted and periodically amended by the Legislature, HN10¹⁵ represents a comprehensive statutory scheme regulating private arbitration in this state. (§ 1280 et seq.) Through this detailed statutory scheme, the Legislature has expressed a 'strong public policy in favor of arbitration as a speedy and relatively inexpensive means of dispute resolution.' [Citations.] Consequently, courts will 'indulge every intendment to give effect to such proceedings.' [Citations.] Indeed, more than 70 years ago this court explained: 'The policy of the law in recognizing arbitration agreements and in providing by statute for their enforcement is to encourage persons who wish to avoid delays incident to a civil action to obtain an adjustment of their differences by a tribunal of their own choosing.' [Citations.] 'Typically, those who [21] enter into arbitration agreements expect that their dispute will be resolved without necessity for any contact with the courts.' [Citation.]"

Additionally, there is nothing in the Cartwright Act to suggest that resolution of disputes arising from it must be resolved in a court of law rather than by means of arbitration. (Bus. & Prof. Code, § 16700 et seq.) Moreover, a careful review of the language in the arbitration agreement in the present case indicates that there is no evidence of a desire that antitrust disputes be excluded from the scope of arbitral resolution. Section 41.1 of the lease agreement provided: "It is agreed that any dispute between us with respect to the provisions of this Agreement and tenancy in the Park shall be submitted to arbitration conducted under the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure section 1280 et seq." Section 41.2 of the lease agreement contains the only exceptions to the arbitration clause and it stated: "The only non-arbitration exceptions are any contested rights of owner which relate to: (a) termination of tenancy due to (i) failure to pay rent or other charges under Civil Code section 798.56(d), (ii) for substantial annoyance to [22] other homeowners, other residents or others under Civil Code section 798.56(b); (b) forcible detainer; (c) injunctive relief pursuant to (i) Code of Civil Procedure section 527.6, or (ii) Civil Code section 798.87\(b\), or (iii) payment of the maintenance fee provided for in Civil Code section 798.36, or (iv) condemnation or a change of the use of the Park as provided in Civil Code section 798.56\(e\) and \(f\), or (v) to preserve the equitable rights appertaining to any arbitrable dispute before resolution by arbitration. All other disputes of any kind, excepting the foregoing exceptions set forth in this subparagraph 41.2, shall be subject to arbitration." Finally, section 41.3 of the lease provided in pertinent part: " 'Dispute' includes by way of illustration, but is not limited to . . . business administration or practices of the owner; . . . 'Dispute' includes not only disputes you may have with us, but also disputes against any of our contractors or agents." Clearly, there is nothing in the language of the contract which would exclude disputes concerning the Cartwright Act.

¹³ Section 1281.2 states: HN9¹⁶ "On petition of a party to an arbitration agreement alleging the existence of a written agreement to arbitrate a controversy and that a party thereto refuses to arbitrate such controversy, the court shall order the petitioner and the respondent to arbitrate the controversy if it determines that an agreement to arbitrate the controversy exists, unless it determines that: [P] (a) The right to compel arbitration has been waived by the petitioner; or [P] (b) Grounds exist for the revocation of the agreement. [P] (c) A party to the arbitration agreement is also a party to a pending court action or special proceeding with a third party, arising out of the same transaction or series of related transactions and there is a possibility of conflicting rulings on a common issue of law or fact. For purposes of this section, a pending court action or special proceeding includes an action or proceeding initiated by the party refusing to arbitrate after the petition to compel arbitration has been filed, but on or before the date of the hearing on the petition. This subdivision shall not be applicable to an agreement to arbitrate disputes as to the professional negligence of a health care provider made pursuant to Section 1295. [P] If the court determines that a written agreement to arbitrate a controversy exists, an order to arbitrate such controversy may not be refused on the ground that the petitioner's contentions lack substantive merit. [P] If the court determines that there are other issues between the petitioner and the respondent which are not subject to arbitration and which are the subject of a pending action or special proceeding between the petitioner and the respondent and that a determination of such issues may make the arbitration unnecessary, the court may delay its order to arbitrate until the determination of such other issues or until such earlier time as the court specifies. [P] If the court determines that a party to the arbitration is also a party to litigation in a pending court action or special proceeding with a third party as set forth under subdivision (c) herein, the court (1) may refuse to enforce the arbitration agreement and may order intervention or joinder of all parties in a single action or special proceeding; (2) may order intervention or joinder as to all or only certain issues; (3) may order arbitration among the parties who have agreed to arbitration and stay the pending court action or special proceeding pending the outcome of the arbitration proceeding; or (4) may stay arbitration pending the outcome of the court action or other special proceeding."

[*1283] [834] To sum up, plaintiffs' Cartwright Act claims are subject to the [23] arbitration agreement in the present case. Bos Material Handling, Inc. v. Crown Controls Corp., supra, 137 Cal.App.3d at pages 109-112, while certainly consistent with the mainstream of judicial thought at the time it was decided, no longer is. Intervening United States Supreme Courts decisions have rendered it no longer probative and persuasive authority. Also, there is nothing in the language of the arbitration statute or the Cartwright Act which supports plaintiffs' argument that antitrust violations are not subject to arbitration. Further, the California Supreme Court has repeatedly emphasized the strong public policy favoring arbitration. Finally, the arbitration agreement with its broadly inclusive language did not exclude antitrust violations from the scope of the type of disputes which would be arbitrable. It is for these combined reasons that we affirm the order of the trial court.

F. The Mobilehome Residency Law *

[24] III. DISPOSITION

The judgment is affirmed. All defendants shall separately recover their costs on appeal jointly and severally from all plaintiffs.

Armstrong, J., and Godoy Perez, J., concurred. A petition for a rehearing was denied March 11, 1994, and appellants' petition for review by the Supreme Court was denied May 19, 1994. Mosk, J., was of the opinion that the petition should be granted.

End of Document

* See footnote, ante, page 1273.

Phoenix Elec. Co. v. Nat'l Elec. Contrs. Ass'n

United States District Court for the District of Oregon

February 24, 1994, Decided ; February 24, 1994, Filed

Civil No. 91-436-JE

Reporter

867 F. Supp. 925 *; 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7505 **

PHOENIX ELECTRIC COMPANY, an Oregon corporation, et al, Plaintiffs, v. NATIONAL ELECTRICAL CONTRACTORS ASSOCIATION, et al., Defendants. NATIONAL ELECTRICAL CONTRACTORS ASSOCIATION, Counterclaim Plaintiff, v. ASSOCIATED BUILDERS AND CONTRACTORS, INC., Counterclaim Defendant.

Subsequent History: [\[1\]](#) Adopting in Part Order of May 9, 1994, Reported at: 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7082. Reported at: 861 F. Supp. 1498 at 1503.

Prior History: Phoenix Elec. Co. v. Nat'l Elec. Contrs. Ass'n, 861 F. Supp. 1498, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21778 (D. Or., 1994)

Core Terms

contractors, pricing, nonunion, targeted, exemption, projects, bids, monopolize, predatory, summary judgment motion, plaintiffs', electrical, counterclaims, entitled to summary judgment, anti trust law, competitors, conspiracy, antitrust, monopoly, wages, Sherman Act, recommend, actual malice, trier of fact, costs, non-statutory, bargaining, combinations, defendants', statutory exemption

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Movant Persuasion & Proof

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Nonmovant Persuasion & Proof

HN1 Entitlement as Matter of Law, Genuine Disputes

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56\(c\) authorizes summary judgment if no genuine issue exists regarding any material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. The moving party must show the absence of an issue of material fact. The moving party may discharge this burden by showing that there is an absence of evidence to support the nonmoving party's case. When the moving party shows the absence of an issue of material fact, the nonmoving party must go beyond the pleadings and show that there is a genuine issue for trial.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

HN2 Entitlement as Matter of Law, Genuine Disputes

The substantive law governing a claim or defense determines whether a fact is material. Reasonable doubts concerning the existence of a factual issue should be resolved against the moving party. The evidence of the nonmoving party is to be believed, and all justifiable inferences are to be drawn in the nonmoving party's favor. No genuine issue for trial exists however, where the record as a whole could not lead the trier of fact to find for the nonmoving party.

Torts > ... > Defamation > Elements > General Overview

HN3 Defamation, Elements

To prevail on a defamation claim, a public official or public figure must establish that the defendant published false statements with actual malice. "Actual malice" is defined as making statements with knowledge, or reckless disregard, of their falsity. Only statements made with a high degree of awareness of their probable falsity are made with actual malice.

Torts > ... > Defamation > Elements > General Overview

HN4 Defamation, Elements

A plaintiff's status as a public figure is a question of law for the court. A party may be an "all purpose" public figure, or may be accorded that status as to a particular issue of public concern.

Torts > ... > Defamation > Elements > General Overview

HN5 Defamation, Elements

A finding that a defendant made defamatory statements with actual malice must be supported by sufficient evidence that the defendant entertained serious doubt as to the truth of the publication. Proof sufficient to satisfy this difficult standard will usually consist of evidence that the story in question was either (1) fabricated; (2) so inherently improbable that only a reckless man would have put it in circulation; or (3) based wholly on an unverified anonymous telephone call or some other source that the defendant had obvious reasons to doubt.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

HN6 Sherman Act, Scope

Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, prohibits contracts, combinations, and conspiracies in restraint of trade. Section 2 of the Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, prohibits monopolization and attempted monopolization.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

HN7 Scope, Exemptions

867 F. Supp. 925, *925L 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7505, 1

See § 6 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 17.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > Statutory Exemptions

HN8[] Scope, Exemptions

Enactment of labor exemption statutes clearly recognizes that combinations of workers eliminating competition among themselves and restricting competition based on wage cutting are not contrary to public policy.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > Statutory Exemptions

HN9[] Scope, Exemptions

Courts are required to consider the policies underlying the Clayton Act, the Norris-LaGuardia Act, and the Sherman Act. The labor exemption applies so long as a union acts in its self-interest and does not combine with non-labor groups.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > Nonstatutory Exemptions

HN10[] Labor, Nonstatutory Exemptions

Courts have recognized a non-statutory labor exemption to antitrust laws that might otherwise proscribe certain labor activities. This exemption has its source in the strong labor policy favoring the association of employees to eliminate competition over wages and working conditions. Union success in organizing workers and standardizing wages ultimately will affect price competition among employers, but the goals of federal labor law never could be achieved if this effect on business competition were held a violation of the antitrust laws.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Labor > Nonstatutory Exemptions

HN11[] Labor, Nonstatutory Exemptions

Parties to an employment agreement that restrains trade are exempt from antitrust liability only if: (1) the restraint on trade primarily affects only the parties; (2) the agreement concerns a mandatory subject of collective bargaining; and (3) the agreement results from bona fide arm's-length bargaining.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > General Overview

HN12[] Sherman Act, Scope

Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 prohibits every contract, combination in the form of trade or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > General Overview

HN13 [L] Sherman Act, Scope

In evaluating restraints imposed by contracts or agreements, two complimentary categories of antitrust analysis have been developed. The first category includes agreements whose nature and necessary effect are so plainly anticompetitive that no elaborate study of the industry is needed to establish their illegality -- they are illegal per se. The second category covers agreements whose competitive effect can only be evaluated by analyzing the facts peculiar to the business, the history of the restraint, and the reasons why it was imposed. Under this second prong of analysis, commonly referred to as the "rule of reason," the fact finder weighs all of the circumstances of a case in deciding whether a restrictive practice should be prohibited as imposing an unreasonable restraint on competition.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

HN14 [L] Scope, Monopolization Offenses

Section 2 of the Sherman Act proscribes monopolization, attempted monopolization, and conspiracies to monopolize. If a monopolization does not offend that section because it is shared, liability cannot logically be premised on an attempt to create such a monopoly.

Counsel: For Plaintiffs: Thomas M. Triplett, Schwabe, Williamson & Wyatt, Portland, OR. Maurice Baskin, Edward F. Glynn, Jr., Venable, Baetjer, Howard & Civiletti, Washington, D.C.

For Oregon-NECA, Atlas Electrical and Oregon Electric, Defendants: Wayne Hilliard, Milo Petranovich, Lane, Powell, Spears & Lubersky, Portland, OR. For National Electrical Contractors Association, Inc., Defendant: Jack L. Kennedy, Susan E. Watts, Kennedy, King & Zimmer, Portland, OR. John A. McGuinn, Gary L. Lieber, Paul Monroe Heylman, Karen S. Russell, Henry A. Platt, Schmeltzer, Aptaker & Shepard, P.C., Washington, D.C. For International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 48, Defendant: Paul C. Hays, James W. Kasameyer, Carney, Buckley, Kasameyer & Hays, Portland, OR.

Judges: Jelderks

Opinion by: JOHN JELDERKS

Opinion

[*930] FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATION

JELDERKS, Magistrate Judge:

Plaintiffs Associated Builders and Contractors, Inc. (ABC), Phoenix Electric Company (Phoenix), and New Tech Electric (New Tech) bring this antitrust action against defendants National Electrical Contractors Association (National NECA), the Oregon-Columbia Chapter of [*931] NECA (Oregon NECA), Atlas Electrical Contractors, Inc. (Atlas), Oregon [*931] Electrical Construction, Inc. (Oregon Electric) and Local 48 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (Local 48). Defendant National NECA asserts two counterclaims for defamation against plaintiff ABC.

Before the court are plaintiff ABC's motion for partial summary judgment as to its second antitrust claim, plaintiff ABC's motion for summary judgment on defendant National NECA's counterclaims, defendant National NECA's motion for summary judgment on plaintiffs' claims, and defendants Oregon NECA and Local 48's motion for summary judgment on plaintiffs' claims.

These motions should be granted in part and denied in part. Plaintiff ABC's motion for partial summary judgment on its second antitrust claim should be denied, and its motion for summary judgment on defendant National NECA's counterclaims should be granted. Defendant National NECA's motion for summary judgment on plaintiffs' claims should be granted. Defendants Oregon NECA and Local 48's motion for summary judgment on plaintiffs' claims should be granted. Adoption of these recommendations will fully resolve all issues pending in this action.

[3] BACKGROUND

Plaintiff ABC is a trade association whose members are engaged in the construction industry. Plaintiffs Phoenix and New Tech are nonunion ABC members operating as electrical construction contractors in Oregon.

Defendant National NECA, a trade association of electrical contractors, negotiates and administers collective bargaining agreements on behalf of electrical contractors with local IBEW unions. It charters local chapters such as Oregon NECA throughout the United States.

Oregon NECA, a local chapter of National NECA, is a trade association made up of electrical contractors in Western Oregon and Washington State. Oregon NECA has an ongoing collective bargaining relationship with Local 48, and serves as the collective bargaining representative for its members as well as for certain nonmember electrical contractors. Oregon NECA and Local 48 have negotiated separate collective bargaining agreements covering commercial/industrial and residential construction work.

Atlas and Oregon Electric, members of Oregon NECA operating in Western Oregon, have signed labor agreements with Local 48.

1. Plaintiffs' Claims

In this action, plaintiffs challenge Local 48's "Market [4] Recovery Program" (MRP), otherwise referred to as the Oregon Job Targeting Program (OJTP). Under the OJTP, unions use various methods to improve their members' ability to secure work. As part of this effort, union members contribute a percentage of their dues to a fund used to assist employers using union labor on certain targeted projects. The unions sometimes inform union contractors that, on a particular job, the job targeting fund will be available to effectively reduce the standard hourly wages normally paid to union laborers. In other targeted jobs, the fund will reimburse the employer for a portion of the union scale wages after the employer pays the union workers at the collectively-bargained rate.

Plaintiffs characterize the OJTP as a conspiracy to "exclude from commercial/industrial electrical construction industry in the metropolitan Portland area, a relevant market under the antitrust [laws], nonunion electrical construction companies, including plaintiffs." They allege that the OJTP is used to identify nonunion contractors who are expected to bid on given projects, and to specify the number of hours of electrical work to be performed. Plaintiffs add that selection of [5] targeted projects is based "upon the identity of the nonunion bidder and/or the nature of the project in order to obtain maximum exclusionary effect."

Plaintiffs allege that defendants' job targeting program allows members of Oregon NECA to bid for jobs against nonunion firms at "predatory prices . . . explicable only by an intent to discipline or eliminate nonunion competition from the market." They contend that the subsidized bids submitted by Oregon NECA members are so low that

- [*932] (1) The benefit of the bids is dependent upon their tendency to discipline or eliminate competition and thereby to enhance long-term ability to reap the benefits of monopoly power;
- (2) Absent the subsidy, the bids would generally be below total costs; and/or
- (3) Absent the subsidy, in selective cases, the bids are below variable costs of the bidders.

As other evidence of defendants' "specific intent" to exclude nonunion firms from the electrical contracting market plaintiffs cite "threats" to general contractors using nonunion contractors, agreements with owners and developers to use only union labor on projects, and agreements with Taft-Hartley Trusts to invest funds in projects on the condition [6] that nonunion contractors be excluded.

Plaintiffs allege that the OJTP has allowed members of Oregon NECA to increase their market share of the "commercial/industrial electrical construction projects in the Portland metropolitan area" from 30-40% to more than 70%. They add that, by the end of the fourth quarter of 1990, the OJTP "was successful in procuring 68% of the targeted jobs; and had been used on more than 4,000 jobs; and has secured projects in excess of $ 90,000,000." Plaintiffs contend that their costs are lower than those of Oregon NECA members, both because they have lower labor costs, and because they use their labor more efficiently than do union contractors. They add that the OJTP has substantially weakened the financial position of nonunion contractors, threatened to drive them from the market, and deterred nonunion contractors from bidding on some projects. Plaintiffs contend that prices for electrical labor will rise to "supra-competitive" levels once efficient nonunion contractors have been driven from the market.

Plaintiffs bring claims for alleged violations of Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1, 2. In the first [7] claim, alleging violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1, plaintiffs assert that low bids by defendant union contractors reflect "an intention to create entry barriers and to discipline or eliminate competition from non-union firms and thereby enhance the long-term ability of members of Oregon NECA to raise prices above competitive levels." They characterize defendants' prices as predatory, and contend that, in the long run, these prices will drive competition from the market. After nonunion competition has been eliminated, they assert, the threat of renewed subsidies will prevent other would-be competitors from entering the market.

Plaintiffs' second claim alleges violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2. In this claim, plaintiffs allege that the OJTP "constitutes a combination or conspiracy to monopolize the market" by excluding non-Oregon NECA members from the market. As overt acts in furtherance of the "combination or conspiracy," plaintiffs cite "the exchange of information on projects selected for job targeting and the exchange of competitively-sensitive information by members of Oregon NECA." They further [8] allege that the OJTP "was undertaken, and is carried out, with a specific intent . . . to monopolize the market" for commercial/industrial electrical construction business in the Portland metropolitan area.

Plaintiffs seek recovery of treble damages pursuant to Section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15. They also seek an injunction "restraining violations by defendants of the antitrust laws of the United States" as described in the complaint.

2. National NECA's Counterclaims

National NECA's answer includes two counterclaims for defamation against ABC. The first counterclaim alleges that ABC issued a defamatory press release concerning this action on May 14, 1991, in the District of Columbia. National NECA asserts that the following statements concerning it in that press release were defamatory:

- (a) "NECA . . . violated the Sherman-Clayton Antitrust Act by conspiring to exclude open shop contractors from Oregon's electrical construction market."
- (b) ". . . the defendants are restraining trade and violating antitrust laws."
- (c) "But NECA itself has taken an active role in the conspiracy."

[*933] (d) "NECA has . . . encouraged or directed [9] its members to participate in unlawful job targeting conspiracies, both in Oregon and elsewhere in the country."

National NECA alleges that plaintiff ABC made these statements with knowledge of their falsity or with reckless disregard of their truth. In the alternative, National NECA alleges that the statements were made "in negligent disregard for their truth or falsity." National NECA adds that the statements "were made maliciously, in bad faith, and without privilege," and with the "actual intent to defame National NECA."

The second counterclaim alleges that ABC published an article concerning this litigation, including the same statements as are cited in its first counterclaim, in its newsletter. This counterclaim asserts that the statements at issue "implied illegal conduct by National NECA," and are actionable per se.

STANDARDS FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

HN1 [↑] Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56\(c\) authorizes summary judgment if no genuine issue exists regarding any material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. The moving party must show the absence of an issue of material fact. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 325, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265, 106 S. Ct. 2548 \(1986\). [10] The moving party may discharge this burden by showing that there is an absence of evidence to support the nonmoving party's case. Id. When the moving party shows the absence of an issue of material fact, the nonmoving party must go beyond the pleadings and show that there is a genuine issue for trial. Id. at 324.

HN2 [↑] The substantive law governing a claim or defense determines whether a fact is material. T.W. Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Pacific Elec. Contractors Ass'n, 809 F.2d 626, 630 \(9th Cir. 1987\). Reasonable doubts concerning the existence of a factual issue should be resolved against the moving party. Id. at 630-31. The evidence of the nonmoving party is to be believed, and all justifiable inferences are to be drawn in the nonmoving party's favor. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 255, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 106 S. Ct. 2505 \(1985\). No genuine issue for trial exists however, where the record as a whole could not lead the trier of fact to find for the nonmoving party. Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 587, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538, 106 S. Ct. 1348 \(1986\). [11]

DISCUSSION

I. Plaintiff ABC's motion for summary judgment on Defendant National NECA's Counterclaims

Plaintiff ABC earlier moved to dismiss National NECA's counterclaims for lack of jurisdiction and for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. In the alternative, it sought summary judgment on these claims. I recommended that those motions be denied. Tigard Elec., et al. v. National Elec. Contractors Ass'n, Inc., et al., 790 F. Supp. 1498, 1504-05 \(D. Or. 1992\). I based my recommendation on the existence of several discrepancies between the complaint and the allegedly defamatory statements, and the submission of materials demonstrating that National NECA and ABC have been engaged in a struggle over the legality of the job targeting program for some time. I concluded that a single affidavit denying malice was insufficient to support granting a motion for summary judgment in the face of the opposing submissions, and that material issues of fact remained concerning privilege defenses and malice.¹ Id. at 1505.

[12] National NECA contends that my earlier recommendation to deny the motion against its counterclaims renders the present motion against those claims an inappropriate "second bite at the apple," and that it should be awarded costs and attorneys' fees for "opposing the same motion for a second time." I disagree. My earlier recommendation was made before the parties had conducted significant discovery. ABC's present [*934] motion is based upon the much more thorough factual record now before the court. Having reviewed that record, I conclude that plaintiff ABC is entitled to summary judgment on National NECA's counterclaims.

Plaintiff ABC contends that it is entitled to summary judgment on the counterclaims because National NECA cannot establish that it acted with actual malice, and because ABC's statements were privileged as a fair and accurate report of its complaint. Because I agree with the former proposition, I need not reach the latter.

HN3 [↑] To prevail on a defamation claim, a public official or public figure² must establish that the defendant published false statements with "actual malice." See, Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc., 418 U.S. 323, 342-46, 41 L. Ed.

¹ The parties agree that the defamation laws of the District of Columbia apply to this action. Tigard Elec., 790 F. Supp. at 1505, n. 3.

² HN4 [↑] A plaintiff's status as a public figure is a question of law for the court. Tavoulareas v. Piro, 260 U.S. App. D.C. 39, 817 F.2d 762, 772 \(D.C. Cir.\), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 870, 98 L. Ed. 2d 151, 108 S. Ct. 200 \(1987\). A party may be an "all

2d 789, 94 S. Ct. 2997 (1974). [13] "Actual malice" is defined as making statements with knowledge, or reckless disregard, of their falsity. New York Times v. Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254, 280, 11 L. Ed. 2d 686, 84 S. Ct. 710 (1964). Only statements made with a high degree of awareness of their probable falsity are made with actual malice. Garrison v. Louisiana, 379 U.S. 64, 74, 13 L. Ed. 2d 125, 85 S. Ct. 209 (1964).

[14] HN5 A finding that a defendant made defamatory statements with actual malice must be supported by sufficient evidence that the defendant "entertained serious doubt as to the truth of [the] publication." St. Amant v. Thompson, 390 U.S. 727, 731, 20 L. Ed. 2d 262, 88 S. Ct. 1323 (1968). Proof sufficient to satisfy this difficult standard will usually consist of evidence that the story in question was either (1) "fabricated"; (2) "so inherently improbable that only a reckless man would have put [it] in circulation"; or (3) "based wholly on an unverified anonymous telephone call" or some other source that the defendant had "obvious reasons to doubt." Id. at 732.

Defendant NECA has not shown evidence from which a trier of fact could conclude that ABC acted with actual malice in publishing the statements at issue. Plaintiff ABC has shown evidence that it had ample reason to believe that National NECA was directly involved with job targeting programs in Oregon and elsewhere in the United States, and that it encouraged and assisted its members' participation in these programs. [15] National NECA therefore cannot establish that statements concerning its role in the alleged conspiracy were made with actual malice.

National NECA likewise has not shown sufficient evidence to allow a trier of fact to conclude that ABC's statements concerning the alleged unlawful nature of its job targeting activities were made with actual malice. My conclusion that the OJTP does not violate antitrust laws does not come close to establishing that ABC's statements concerning job targeting programs were made with actual malice. ABC's assertions that job targeting programs violate antitrust law are supported by the legal opinion of competent counsel. They are in no way based upon the kind of fabrication, obviously inherent improbability, or reliance upon obviously dubious sources generally required to establish actual malice.

That some of the allegedly defamatory statements go beyond the precise allegations of ABC's complaint is not significant. The statements at issue substantially reiterate key allegations of the complaint. The relatively minor differences between the complaint, which is supported by legal opinion, and the published statements, are insufficient [*935] to support the conclusion [16] that ABC acted with actual malice.

ABC's motion for summary judgment on National NECA's counterclaims should be granted.

II. National NECA's, Oregon NECA's, and IBEW 48's Motions for Summary Judgment on Plaintiffs' Claims

As noted above, plaintiffs allege that defendants have violated Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1 & 2. HN6 Section 1 prohibits contracts, combinations, and conspiracies in restraint of trade. Section 2 prohibits monopolization and attempted monopolization.

Defendants contend that they are entitled to summary judgment on plaintiffs' claims because statutory and nonstatutory exemptions applicable to certain labor activities preclude liability under the facts at issue here, and because plaintiffs' antitrust claims fail upon other grounds as well. Defendant National NECA also contends that it is entitled to summary judgment on plaintiffs' claims because it cannot be held vicariously liable for the acts of Oregon NECA, and because there is no evidence that it had a "conscious commitment" to the alleged predatory pricing scheme.

A. Statutory and Non-Statutory Labor Exemption

purpose" public figure, or may be accorded that status as to a particular issue of public concern. See, e.g., Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 246 n. 3, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 106 S. Ct. 2505 (1986).

In response to a request for admissions, National NECA stated that it "may be a limited public figure in the electrical construction industry for some purposes. . . ." In its opposition to ABC's motion for summary judgment on the counterclaims, National NECA notes that it "does not contest that it is required to prove that ABC made its defamatory statements with actual malice." Even in the absence of that concession, I would conclude that the job targeting issue presented in this action is a matter of public interest, and that defendant National NECA is a public figure for the purposes of the statements at issue here.

1. Statutory Exemption

Congress has [17] exempted a number of labor activities from antitrust liability. Under Section 6 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 17,

HN7[[↑]] The labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce. Nothing contained in the antitrust laws shall be construed to forbid the existence and operation of labor . . . organizations, constituted for the purposes of mutual help . . . or to forbid or restrain individual members of such organizations from lawfully carrying out the legitimate objects thereof; nor shall such organizations, or the members thereof, be held or construed to be illegal combinations or conspiracies in restraint of trade, under the antitrust laws.

Section 20 of the Clayton Act, 29 U.S.C. § 52, likewise prohibits injunctions of certain work-related activities. In addition, the Norris-LaGuardia Anti-Injunction Act, 29 U.S.C. § 101 et seq., and the Wagner Act, 29 U.S.C. § 157 et seq., prohibit labor injunctions as a means to enforce antitrust laws, and establish organized labor's collective bargaining rights.

The labor antitrust [18] exemption is not boundless, and several Supreme Court decisions have interpreted its scope. In Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U.S. 469, 504 n. 24, 84 L. Ed. 1311, 60 S. Ct. 982 (1940), the Court observed that HN8[[↑]] enactment of the labor exemption statutes "clearly recognizes that combinations of workers eliminating competition among themselves and restricting competition . . . based on wage cutting are not contrary to public policy."

In United States v. Hutcheson, 312 U.S. 219, 231, 85 L. Ed. 788, 61 S. Ct. 463 (1941), the Court noted that HN9[[↑]] courts are required to consider the policies underlying the Clayton Act, the Norris-LaGuardia Act, and the Sherman Act. The Court concluded that the labor exemption applies "so long as a union acts in its self-interest and does not combine with non-labor groups." Id. at 232.

In Allen Bradley Co. v. Local 3, IBEW, 325 U.S. 797, 809 (1945), the Court held unlawful an agreement between a union and local manufacturers and contractors to prohibit [19] the purchase of products not manufactured locally.

In United Mine Workers v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657, 664, 14 L. Ed. 2d 626, 85 S. Ct. 1585 (1965) the Court observed that a union could lawfully attempt to unilaterally impose the same wage rate upon all employers because the Sherman Act did not intend to restrict attempts to eliminate wage competition. The Court concluded, however, that the exemption does not apply where unions agree with non-labor entities to eliminate competitors from the market. Id. at 665-666.

In Connell Constr. Co. v. Plumbers & Steamfitters Local 100, 421 U.S. 616, 625, 44 L. Ed. 2d 418, 95 S. Ct. 1830 (1975), the [*936] Court concluded that the statutory labor exemption does not apply where a union imposed an agreement requiring a general contractor to subcontract only with companies that had signed agreements with the union. The Court noted, however, that the nonstatutory exemption reflected a labor policy favoring labor organization "to eliminate competition over wages and working [20] conditions." Id. at 622. The court added that it had acknowledged "that labor policy requires tolerance for the lessening of business competition based on differences in wages and working conditions." Id.

Based upon my review of the applicable Supreme Court cases, I conclude that the appropriate standard for analyzing the statutory exemption is that set out in Hutcheson, 312 U.S. at 232. As noted above, under that test, the statutory exemption to antitrust scrutiny applies "so long as a union acts in its self-interest and does not combine with non-labor groups." Plaintiffs correctly observe that this is a two-part test, and that the exemption applies only where both parts are satisfied. See H.A. Artists & Assoc. v. Actors' Equity Ass'n, 451 U.S. 704, 715, 68 L. Ed. 2d 558, 101 S. Ct. 2102 (1981). The record submitted in support of and opposition to the parties' cross-motions for summary judgment leaves no doubt that the OJTP has been established and maintained to further the union's legitimate self [21] interest. From that record, it is clear that the union members were losing work to non-union workers in the electrical field during the early 1980s, and that the OJTP was designed to allow union workers to obtain more work by enabling union contractors to compete with non-union contractors more effectively. It is likewise clear that this attempt to strengthen the position of organized workers is consistent with the public policy reflected in the statutory exemption.

That the second part of the Hutcheson test is satisfied here is perhaps less obvious. A thorough review of the record, however, establishes that, in carrying out the OJTP, the union does not "combine" with non-labor groups, the members of Oregon NECA, in the manner proscribed in Hutcheson. The parties vigorously dispute the proper characterization of the OJTP. It can fairly be described, however, not as a wage subsidy, but as a negotiated wage concession which Local 48 and the members of Oregon NECA agree will be available in particular instances. Under this program, union workers contribute 3.5% of their wages to a fund that can then be used to reduce the amount that union contractors must pay in wages to union [22] workers on specific projects. Under the OJTP, unions are not "combining" with non-labor groups in ways Courts have condemned as outside the statutory labor exemption: They are not agreeing with union contractors to limit who can bid on given projects, or on any other terms or conditions applicable to the provision of services. Instead, stated simply, the union workers in question have agreed to work for less than the hourly rates negotiated in the collective bargaining agreement. Any collective bargaining agreement between Local 48 and union contractors generally lowering wages paid to union workers would clearly allow union contractors to compete more effectively with non-union contractors. Any such agreement clearly would not, simply because it was the product of an agreement, be considered a "combination" outside the scope of the statutory exemption. The fact that the OJTP allows union contractors to incur lower labor costs on particular targeted jobs does not alter the analysis or remove that activity from the statutory labor exemption.

Though the OJTP is clearly the primary issue in this action, as noted above, plaintiffs also cite "threats" to general contractors who engage [23] nonunion subcontractors, agreements with owners and developers to use only union labor on projects, and agreements with Taft-Hartley Trusts to invest funds in projects on the condition that nonunion contractors be excluded. In opposing defendants' motion for summary judgment on the basis of the labor exemption, plaintiffs assert that legitimate union activity does not include "acts of secondary pressure and/or threats, even if undertaken to achieve a legitimate end." Plaintiffs have not produced sufficient evidence to support their position, and defendants are entitled to summary [*937] judgment on these assertions as well. A trier of fact could not reasonably conclude that the employer defendants participated in the activities alleged. Under the Norris-LaGuardia Act and Section 20 of the Clayton Act, unions are allowed to engage in peaceful secondary activity without violating antitrust laws. Plaintiffs have not shown evidence that defendants engaged in secondary activity that was not protected or entered into unlawful combinations with plaintiffs' competitors.

2. Non-statutory exemption

In addition to the statutory exemption enacted by Congress, HN10[[↑]] courts have recognized a non-statutory [24] labor exemption to antitrust laws that might otherwise proscribe certain labor activities. In Connell Co. v. Plumbers & Steamfitters, 421 U.S. 616, 622, 95 S. Ct. 1830, 44 L. Ed. 2d 418 \(1975\), the court noted that this exemption has its source in the strong labor policy favoring the association of employees to eliminate competition over wages and working conditions. Union success in organizing workers and standardizing wages ultimately will affect price competition among employers, but the goals of federal labor law never could be achieved if this effect on business competition were held a violation of the antitrust laws.

In Continental Maritime of San Francisco v. Pacific Coast Metal Trades Dist. Council, 817 F.2d 1391, 1393 \(9th Cir. 1987\), the Ninth Circuit noted that neither this circuit nor the Supreme Court has "enunciated a general rule" for determining if a particular activity is covered by the non-statutory exemption. The Continental court noted that the non-statutory exemption is "based on the recognition that national labor policy should sometimes override antitrust [25] policy," and cited with approval the analytical standards applied to that exemption in Mackey v. National Football League, 543 F.2d 606, 612 \(8th Cir. 1976\), cert. dismissed, 434 U.S. 801 (1977). Id. The Mackey court concluded that HN11[[↑]] parties to an employment agreement that restrains trade are exempt from antitrust liability only if: (1) the restraint on trade primarily affects only the parties; (2) the agreement concerns a mandatory subject of collective bargaining; and (3) the agreement results from bona fide arm's-length bargaining. Mackey, 543 F.2d at 614 (citations omitted).

As discussed above, I conclude that defendants are entitled to summary judgment on the basis of the statutory exemption because the union has acted in its legitimate self interest, and because it has not "combined" with union contractors in the manner in which that term is applied to these claims. Even if the statutory exemption did not apply, defendants would be entitled to summary judgment because their activities at issue here satisfy the Mackey test. The first part of the test is satisfied because the [26] activities at issue do not restrain trade: the OJTP is available on a nondiscriminatory basis to any contractor who signs a labor agreement with Local 48. There is no evidence that the union contractors who take advantage of the program either share bidding information, or fail to otherwise vigorously compete with each other for the projects. The record also establishes that nonunion contractors are allowed to compete on, and frequently secure, targeted projects.³ It likewise supports the conclusion that the wage reduction granted union contractors on targeted projects is often insufficient to account for the failure of nonunion contractors to secure contracts on certain of the projects on which they bid.⁴ Rather than restrain trade, by making union labor more competitive, it appears that the OJTP encourages more vigorous competition between union and nonunion contractors.

[27] The second prong of the non-statutory exemption test is satisfied because wages are a mandatory subject of bargaining. See, e.g., United Mine Workers v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657, 664, 14 L. Ed. 2d 626, I^{*}938I 85 S. Ct. 1585 (1965) (Wages are at the heart of issues about which employers and unions must bargain).

Finally, though I conclude that the OJTP is not the result of a "combination" within the meaning of the statutory labor exemption, the record supports only the conclusion that it is the result of collective bargaining between Local 48 and the union contractors. Based on the voluminous record submitted, a reasonable trier of fact could only conclude that the program was negotiated by the union and union contractors as an alternative to an across-the-board reduction of wages. The agreement authorizing the program, which allows union contractors to pay lower wage rates than otherwise specified in the collective bargaining agreement on a job-by-job basis, was signed by bargaining parties in April 1986.⁵

[28] Application of the non-statutory exemption here is consistent with the underlying rationale for that exemption. Courts have recognized that organization of labor will inevitably have some effect on price competition, but that the goals of federal labor law could not be achieved if merely affecting business competition were a basis for invoking antitrust laws. The job targeting program at issue here indisputably affects competition between union and nonunion contractors. That is not a sufficient basis for applying antitrust laws to the program, however, and defendants' motion for summary judgment on the basis of the non-statutory exemption should be granted.

B. Antitrust Claims

My conclusion that defendants are entitled to summary judgment based on the labor exemption from antitrust liability makes it unnecessary to address defendants' contention that the antitrust claims must fail on other grounds. However, to have a complete record as to the issues in dispute, I will briefly analyze the merits of plaintiffs' antitrust claims.

1. Claim 1: Sherman Act Section 1 Claim

³ From the record submitted, it appears that between 1986 and January 1993, union contractors have obtained contracts on 3911 of 7213 projects on which job-targeting funds have been available.

⁴ Plaintiffs New Tech and Phoenix have produced bid files or bid quotes for 86 of the 282 jobs they assert they have lost because of the OJTP. It appears that the job targeting wage concession was a determining factor in awarding 12 of these 86 contracts.

⁵ Plaintiffs contend that the OJTP was not established through collective bargaining. Though I find that the record does not support that contention, a contrary conclusion should not alter the disposition of defendants' motion for summary judgment based on the non-statutory exemption. The Ninth Circuit has applied the non-statutory exemption to agreements between unions and employers that are not the result of collective bargaining. See Richards v. Nielsen Freight Lines, 810 F.2d 898, 905 (9th Cir. 1987).

HN12 [+] Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1 prohibits "every contract, combination [29] in the form of trade or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade. . ." Plaintiffs allege that defendants have violated this section by pricing their services at predatory levels. They allege that defendant union contractors' low bids are explicable only as "an intention to create entry barriers and to discipline or eliminate competition from non-union firms and thereby enhance the long-term ability of members of Oregon NECA to raise prices above competitive levels."

Courts have long recognized that, because restraint is "the very essence of contract," Section 1 would, if read literally, render the entire body of private contract law illegal. See National Soc'y of Professional Eng'r v. United States, 435 U.S. 679, 687-88, 55 L. Ed. 2d 637, 98 S. Ct. 1355 (1978), citing Chicago Board of Trade v. United States, 246 U.S. 231, 238, 62 L. Ed. 683, 38 S. Ct. 242 (1918). Therefore, HN13 [+] in evaluating restraints imposed by contracts or agreements, two complimentary categories of antitrust analysis have been developed. Id. at 692. The first category includes agreements [30] "whose nature and necessary effect are so plainly anticompetitive that no elaborate study of the industry is needed to establish their illegality -- they are 'illegal per se.'" Id. The second category covers agreements "whose competitive effect can only be evaluated by analyzing the facts peculiar to the business, the history of the restraint, and the reasons why it was imposed." Id. Under this second prong of analysis, commonly referred to as the "rule of reason," "the fact finder weighs all of the circumstances of a case in deciding whether a restrictive practice should be prohibited as imposing an unreasonable restraint on competition." Continental T.V., Inc. v. GTE Sylvania, I*9391 Inc., 433 U.S. 36, 49, 53 L. Ed. 2d 568, 97 S. Ct. 2549 (1977).

As noted in the two Findings and Recommendations filed earlier in this action, this case must be analyzed under the rule of reason. This rule requires that a claimant alleging a violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act initially establish: (1) an agreement among two or more persons or distinct business entities; (2) by which the persons or entities intend to harm or restrain [31] competition; and (3) which actually injures competition. Les Shockley Racing v. National Hot Rod Ass'n, 884 F.2d 504, 507 (9th Cir. 1989). This requirement of an injury to competition is consistent with the frequent observation that antitrust laws were enacted "for the protection of competition, not competitors. . ." Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701, 97 S. Ct. 690 (1977), citing Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, 370 U.S. 294, 320, 8 L. Ed. 2d 510, 82 S. Ct. 1502 (1962).

This is a highly unusual antitrust case. Predatory pricing, a generally ill-defined term, has been described as "pricing below an appropriate measure of cost for the purpose of eliminating competitors in the short run and reducing competition in the long run." Cargill, Inc. v. Monfort of Colorado, Inc., 479 U.S. 104, 117, 93 L. Ed. 2d 427, 107 S. Ct. 484 (1986). Allegations of predatory pricing are often supported by analysis of a producer's average [32] total and variable costs. See, e.g., William Inglis & Sons Baking Co. v. ITT Continental Baking Co., Inc., 668 F.2d 1014, 1031-32 (9th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 825, 74 L. Ed. 2d 61, 103 S. Ct. 57, 103 S. Ct. 58 (1982) (Predatory pricing occurs when a competitor sets low prices in order to drive out competition so that it can later charge monopoly prices and reap monopoly profits.).

This traditional pricing analysis serves poorly in the present action. Normally, one engaging in predatory pricing sells products at an artificially low level, sacrificing short-term profits for the long-term gains that might accrue if competitors are driven from, and then kept out of, the market. Here, we must begin an analysis of pricing by asking whose prices are relevant. The job targeting fund used to help union contractors obtain particular projects is funded by individual union members, who contribute 3.5% of their wages to the fund. What is the "cost" of labor to the laborers selling their services? As long as union workers charge more than minimum wage, which is the legal minimum at which labor [33] can be sold, it is difficult to argue that laborers are selling their services below any generally recognized economic measure of costs. Union contractors taking advantage of the wage concessions on targeted projects do not, unless they choose to reduce the price of their services and materials in other ways, sacrifice any profit by reducing their bids to reflect lower labor costs. In that these competitors give up nothing in order to submit lower prices reflecting lower labor costs on targeted prices, it is hardly fair to speak of union contractors as pricing their services in a predatory manner. The union members themselves give up nothing more than the 3.5% of their wages that they have contributed on other work in order to fund the wage reduction on targeted jobs. An agreement under which union members negotiated an across-the-board wage decrease of 3.5% with union contractors clearly would offend no antitrust statutes. That the 3.5% reduction is accumulated and targeted to particular projects likewise does not appear to run afoul of antitrust provisions as a predatory pricing scheme.

Plaintiffs' peculiar predatory pricing allegations reflect the unusual nature of this action. [34] Plaintiffs allege that the bids of Oregon NECA members are not merely low enough to meet non-union competition, but are at levels that, absent the subsidy, forego short run profit maximization, would frequently be below the total cost and, in selective cases, below the variable cost of the bidding members of Oregon NECA. At such levels, such bids are explicable only by an intention to create entry barriers and to discipline or eliminate competition from non-union firms and thereby enhance the long-term ability of members of Oregon NECA to raise prices above competitive levels. Such subsidized bid prices are well below those necessary for members of Oregon NECA to sell their services, are frequently well [*940] below cost, and are predatory. An agreement among competitors to charge predatory prices for the purpose of excluding lower cost and more efficient competitors from the market is a violation of [antitrust laws]. . . .

I find it significant that plaintiffs assert that the bids must be analyzed "absent the subsidy." It appears that, in fact, any analysis of the bids submitted by union contractors without taking into account the wage concession available on targeted jobs would [35] be meaningless. Any analysis of what costs would be if they were in fact different appears to be hopelessly abstract: if the bidders' costs were different, it is fair to assume only that their bids would also be different. Labor costs the union contractors whatever per-hour rate union employers are required to pay for labor on a given project. If these employers pay $ 15 per hour instead of $ 20, pretending that the labor actually costs $ 20 appears to be engaging in an insupportable fiction.

From this discussion, it is obvious that I seriously doubt whether traditional antitrust pricing analysis applies at all in this action. However, I will attempt to examine this action under traditional predatory pricing analysis. In doing so, I am guided by the cases cited above, and by the Supreme Court's recent decision in Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 125 L. Ed. 2d 168, 113 S. Ct. 2578 (1993). Though the Brook Court considered a predatory pricing claim under Section 2 of the Sherman Act and price discrimination under the Robinson-Patman Act, several of its observations apply equally to the Section 1 claim at issue here. [36] First, the Brook Court observed that only sales below cost should suffice to establish predatory pricing. Id. at 2588. The Court based this conclusion on its observation that

As a general rule, the exclusionary effect of prices above a relevant measure of cost either reflects the lower cost structure of the alleged predator, and so represents competition on the merits, or is beyond the practical ability of a judicial tribunal to control without courting intolerable risks of chilling legitimate price-cutting.

Id.

The Brook Court also noted that a competitor may be liable based upon low prices only if there is "a demonstration that the competitor has a reasonable prospect . . . of recouping its investment in below-cost prices. . . ." Id. The Court added that

If market circumstances or deficiencies in proof would bar a reasonable jury from finding that the scheme alleged would likely result in sustained supracompetitive pricing, the plaintiff's case has failed. In certain circumstances -- for example, where the market is highly diffuse and competitive, or where new entry is easy . . . summary disposition of the case is appropriate.

Id. at 2589.

[37] Finally, as to analyzing the possibility that a predatory pricing scheme might succeed, the Court observed that those selling at predatory prices may recover their losses only where below-cost pricing can drive [competitors] from the market, or . . . cause them to raise their prices to supracompetitive levels within a disciplined oligopoly The inquiry is whether, given the aggregate losses caused by the below-cost pricing, the intended target would likely succumb.

Id.

Based on the guidance of Brook Group and the cases cited above, I conclude that a reasonable trier of fact could not find in plaintiffs' favor on the predatory pricing claim based on the record submitted. First, plaintiffs have not produced evidence from which a trier of fact could conclude that defendants are selling their services, identified either as the labor of union electricians, or the projects completed by the union contractors, below any reasonable measure of costs.

Further, defendants have submitted evidence establishing that the market for commercial/industrial contracting services is both "diffuse and competitive." The record demonstrates that more than 300 electrical contractors, [38] less than one-third of which have signed agreements including job targeting [*941] provisions, now bid regularly on commercial industrial projects in the Portland area.

The record further establishes that non-union contractors frequently are awarded contracts on targeted jobs, and that union contractors compete vigorously among themselves as well for targeted jobs. Given the wide range of bids received on some projects, it is apparent that both union and non-union contractors have significantly different (or at least calculate differently) costs other than labor. In addition, the record supports only the conclusion that barriers to entry in the relevant market are low.

Finally, defendants are entitled to summary judgment on the Section 1 claim because plaintiffs have not produced evidence from which a trier of fact could conclude that not just competitors, but competition, is harmed by the practices of which they complain. See, e.g., Les Shockley Racing, 884 F.2d at 507.

2. Claim 2: Sherman Section 2 Claim

Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2, proscribes monopolization, attempted monopolization, and conspiracies [39] to monopolize. Plaintiffs allege that defendants violated this Section by conspiring to monopolize the market for commercial/industrial electrical construction business in the Portland metropolitan area.

Defendants contend that they are entitled to summary judgment on this claim because plaintiffs' claim is based upon a theory of "shared monopoly" rejected by the Ninth Circuit, and because they cannot establish that defendants had a "specific intent to monopolize" the relevant market. I agree.

(a) "Shared Monopoly" Issue

In Harkins Amusement Enterprises, Inc. v. General Cinema Corp., 850 F.2d 477, 490 \(9th Cir. 1988\), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1019, 102 L. Ed. 2d 806, 109 S. Ct. 817 (1989), the Ninth Circuit expressed serious reservations concerning the viability of a "shared monopoly" claim asserted under Section 2 of the Sherman Act. The Harkins court noted that Professors Areeda and Turner "admit that 'no case has held the § 2 monopolization provision applicable to shared monopoly,'" id. (citation omitted), and that "one court directly addressing the issue stated bluntly, 'an oligopoly, [40] or a shared monopoly, does not in itself violate § 2 of the Sherman Act.'" Id., citing Consolidated Terminal Systems, Inc. v. ITT World Communications, Inc., 535 F. Supp. 225, 228-29 \(S.D.N.Y. 1982\). The Harkins court concluded that, though it was not required to decide whether a shared monopoly might ever violate Section 2, in the case before it, "involving a small market with numerous sellers, no claim is stated under section 2." Harkins, 850 F.2d at 490.

Under the guidance of Harkins, I conclude that plaintiffs have not shown evidence from which a trier of fact could find for them on the Section 2 claim. In Harkins, the court characterized nine distributors as "numerous sellers," and a market consisting of Phoenix, Arizona, and its suburbs as small. Here, the record submitted shows that there are nearly 100 union contractors in the Portland metropolitan area. In the present action, with many more alleged participants in an alleged monopoly, the reasoning of Harkins requires the conclusion that plaintiffs' Section 2 claim must fail.

Plaintiffs contend that Harkins is inapposite because, while that [41] action concerned a "shared monopoly," the present action concerns "a conspiracy to monopolize case with an identified potential monopolist -- ONECA." They also assert that, if Section 2 requires that a single defendant possess the requisite market power, ONECA qualifies as the monopolist.

These arguments fail for two reasons. First, as noted above, HN14 [↑] Section 2 proscribes monopolization, attempted monopolization, and conspiracies to monopolize. If a monopolization does not offend that section because it is shared, liability cannot logically be premised on an attempt to create such a monopoly. Perhaps it is useful to think about the issue like this: Suppose Congress enacted a law making it illegal to import or to conspire to import ponies. If that law were interpreted as allowing the importation of horses, it could hardly be interpreted as proscribing conspiracies to import them.

Second, plaintiffs' contention that Oregon NECA satisfies any requirement of a single [*942] monopolist under Section 2 also fails. Oregon NECA is merely an association of contractors.⁶ As a multi-employer bargaining agent, it negotiates collective bargaining agreements with the electrical union, and provides management [42] and administrative services related to those agreements. It does not bid on, or perform, electrical contracting work. It does not distribute projects among its members, or share bidding information among its members. Nothing in the complaint or the record submitted suggests that Oregon NECA can in any way be considered a "competitor." There is likewise no suggestion that any one or small group of the contractors who belong to Oregon NECA have or could obtain monopoly power. As mentioned previously, nothing in the record suggests that the members of Oregon NECA do not compete vigorously among themselves.

(b) Specific Intent to Monopolize

My conclusion that defendants' motion for summary judgment on the Section 2 claim should be granted for other reasons makes it [43] unnecessary to reach the question whether summary judgment is appropriate on the grounds that plaintiffs have not shown evidence from which a trier of fact could conclude that defendants specifically intended their elimination. I will nevertheless briefly address the issue.

Though Eichman v. Fotomat Corp., 880 F.2d 149, 162 \(9th Cir. 1989\) raises the issue whether all defendants must have a specific intent to monopolize in order to incur liability under Section 2, Ninth Circuit decisions have frequently cited the specific intent requirement. See, e.g., Hunt-Wesson Foods, Inc. v. Ragu Foods, Inc., 627 F.2d 919, 926 \(9th Cir. 1980\), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 921, 67 L. Ed. 2d 348, 101 S. Ct. 1369 (1981); Christofferson Dairy, Inc. v. MMM Sales, Inc., 849 F.2d 1168, 1174 \(9th Cir. 1988\).

Having thoroughly reviewed the record, I conclude that plaintiff has not shown evidence allowing the conclusion that defendants specifically intended to monopolize the relevant market. At the outset, I note that it is union members who contribute the funds [44] needed to fund the OJTP, and a union, Local 48, that has negotiated the agreements making those funds available to Oregon NECA members. Unions have a legitimate, statutorily permissible objective, the organization of the work force: organization of the entire work force in any particular area by legitimate means would offend no law or federally-recognized public policy.

The record does show that some non-union contractors have joined Oregon NECA.⁷ The record likewise shows that the leadership of Local 48 has promoted the OJTP as a means of organizing non-union contractors. The record also supports the conclusion that the OJTP has allowed members of Oregon NECA to compete more effectively with non-union contractors.⁸ This evidence is not, however, sufficient to establish defendants' specific intent to monopolize the market. The record submitted would not support the conclusion that non-union contractors have been forced out of business by the OJTP: Plaintiffs have identified no non-union contractors who have been forced out of work by the program. So long as their actions are otherwise lawful, a union is permitted to attempt to organize all workers in a given area of employment. [45] That is a long-recognized right reflected in the statutes cited in the discussion of the statutory labor exemption. As to the union contractors, even the elimination of a number of nonunion contractors does not result in monopolization. The union contractors continue to compete among themselves, including any formerly non-union contractors who choose to join Oregon NECA. The record would not support the conclusion that, through the use of the OJTP [*943] and other practices complained of here, any particular Oregon NECA member intends to monopolize the relevant market. In the absence of such evidence, I conclude that plaintiffs cannot show a specific intent to monopolize within the meaning of Section 2.

⁶ Plaintiffs' reliance on Associated Press v. United States, 326 U.S. 1, 89 L. Ed. 2013, 65 S. Ct. 1416 \(1945\) is misplaced. The Associated Press, unlike Oregon NECA, actually sold a product.

⁷ Tigard Electric, formerly the lead plaintiff in this action, has subsequently joined Oregon NECA and has signed a bargaining agreement with Local 48.

[46] C. National NECA's Motion for Summary Judgment on Other Grounds

National NECA contends that, even if it were not entitled to summary judgment on the grounds discussed above, it is entitled to summary judgment on other grounds. It contends that plaintiffs have not produced evidence from which a trier of fact could conclude that it acted as National NECA's agent with respect to the OJTP, or that National NECA played an "active role" in the alleged predatory pricing and monopolization conspiracy. Because I have concluded that National NECA is entitled to summary judgment for the reasons discussed above, I need not reach this issue. In order to make this record complete, however, I note my conclusion that National NECA is not entitled to summary judgment on these alternative grounds. The record submitted demonstrates that material issues of fact remain concerning questions of agency and the extent to which National NECA might otherwise share responsibility for the policies at issue.

III. Plaintiff ABC's Motion for Summary Judgment on Claim 2

Obviously, from my recommendation that defendants' motion for summary judgment on this claim be granted, I have concluded that plaintiffs [47] are not entitled to summary judgment on this claim.

CONCLUSION

I recommend DENYING plaintiff ABC's motion for summary judgment on the second claim (#169).

I recommend GRANTING plaintiff ABC's motion for summary judgment on defendant National NECA's counterclaims (#174).

I recommend GRANTING defendant National NECA's motion for summary judgment on plaintiffs' claims (#177).

I recommend GRANTING defendant Oregon NECA's and defendant IBEW 48's motion for summary judgment on plaintiffs' claims (#182).

DATED this 24th day of February, 1994.

John Jelderks

United States Magistrate Judge

End of Document

⁸ The record also supports the conclusion that some non-union contractors, including plaintiffs Phoenix Electric and New Tech Electric, are financially robust and in no danger of imminent demise.

Sessions Tank Liners v. Joor Mfg.

United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit

January 8, 1993, Argued, Submitted, Pasadena, California ; February 25, 1994, Filed

No. 92-55085

Reporter

17 F.3d 295 *; 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 3281 ; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,520; 94 Cal. Daily Op. Service 1402; 94 Daily Journal DAR 2492

SESSIONS TANK LINERS, INC., Plaintiff-Appellee, v. JOOR MANUFACTURING, INC., Defendant-Appellant.

Subsequent History: Certiorari Denied October 3, 1994, Reported at: 1994 U.S. LEXIS 5494.

Prior History: [1] Appeal from the United States District Court for the Central District of California. D.C. No. CV-84-6363-MRP. Mariana R. Pfaelzer, District Judge, Presiding.

Core Terms

tank, immunity, lining, government action, district court, anticompetitive, subcommittee, petitioning, antitrust, shielded, revision, anti trust law, injuries, antitrust liability, Sherman Act, damages, prospective economic advantage, deconstruction, campaign, private party, flowing, permits, storage, courts, proposed revision, public official, misrepresentations, decisions, leaking, ban

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN1 [down arrow] Exemptions & Immunities, Parker State Action Doctrine

States cannot be held liable under the Sherman Act for anticompetitive restraints imposed as an act of government.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > Scope

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Parker State Action Doctrine > Local Governments & Private Parties

HN2 [] Exemptions & Immunities, Noerr-Pennington Doctrine

The federal antitrust laws do not regulate the conduct of private individuals in seeking anticompetitive action from the government.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN3 [] Exemptions & Immunities, Noerr-Pennington Doctrine

Insofar as the Sherman Act (Act) sets up a code of ethics at all, it is a code that condemns trade restraints, not political activity, and, as the court has already pointed out, a publicity campaign to influence governmental action falls clearly into the category of political activity. The proscriptions of the Act, tailored as they are for the business world, are not at all appropriate for application in the political arena.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

HN4 [] Exemptions & Immunities, Noerr-Pennington Doctrine

Immunity attaches only when the anticompetitive conduct at issue constitutes a valid effort to petition the government. The validity of such efforts, and thus the applicability of Noerr immunity, varies with the context and nature of the activity.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

HN5 [] Exemptions & Immunities, Noerr-Pennington Doctrine

Because the injuries plaintiff complains of are the result of governmental action, defendant is shielded by petitioning immunity from liability under the antitrust laws.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > Noerr-Pennington Doctrine > General Overview

Torts > ... > Elements > Causation > Intervening Causation

HN6 [] Exemptions & Immunities, Noerr-Pennington Doctrine

The court cannot accept an interpretation of the Noerr doctrine that grants immunity only when the defendant's efforts to persuade government officials to impose anticompetitive restraints were not the cause of the governmental restraints actually imposed. So interpreted, the immunity shields nothing that would otherwise cause liability.

Torts > ... > Prospective Advantage > Intentional Interference > Elements

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Prospective Advantage > General Overview

HN7 [down] Intentional Interference, Elements

To prevail on a claim of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage the plaintiff must demonstrate (1) an economic relationship between the plaintiff and some third person containing the probability of future economic benefit to the plaintiff; (2) knowledge by the defendant of the existence of the relationship; (3) intentional acts on the part of the defendant designed to disrupt the relationship; (4) actual disruption of the relationship; and (5) damages to the plaintiff proximately caused by the acts of the defendant.

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Prospective Advantage > General Overview

HN8 [down] Commercial Interference, Prospective Advantage

The very existence of a tort action for the seeking of valid governmental action exerts an undesirable chilling effect on the access of others to government, regardless of the motives of the particular party before the court.

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Prospective Advantage > General Overview

HN9 [down] Commercial Interference, Prospective Advantage

A person's expectancy in the outcome of a government licensing proceeding is not protected against outside interference.

Torts > ... > Prospective Advantage > Intentional Interference > Elements

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Prospective Advantage > General Overview

HN10 [down] Intentional Interference, Elements

California courts would not permit recovery in this case for tortious interference with prospective economic advantage, where the damages all flow from governmental decisions of disinterested public officials.

Counsel: Jerome I. Braun, Farella, Braun & Martel, San Francisco, California, and David E. Lundin, Rancho Santa Fe, California, for the defendant-appellant.

Maxwell M. Blecher, Blecher, Collins & Wienstein, Los Angeles, California, for the plaintiff-appellee.

Andrew D. Hutton, Michael J. Shockro, Latham & Watkins, Los Angeles, California, and Raymond A. Tabar, John G. Nelson, Thomson & Nelson, Whittier, California, for the amicus.

Judges: Before: William C. Canby, Jr., and William A. Norris, Circuit Judges, and Jack E. Tanner *, District Judge. Opinion by Judge Canby; Dissent by District Judge Tanner

Opinion by: CANBY

Opinion

*The Honorable Jack E. Tanner, Senior United States District Judge for the Western District of Washington, sitting by designation.

[*296] OPINION

CANBY, Circuit Judge

Appellant Joor Manufacturing, Inc. ("Joor"), challenges the district court's decision holding Joor liable for anticompetitive conduct in violation of federal antitrust laws and for the California tort of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage. [2] Through deliberate misrepresentation, Joor caused a prominent standard-setting organization to amend its influential model fire code to the disadvantage of Joor's competitor, appellee Sessions Tank Liners, Inc. ("Sessions").

Because Sessions has failed to prove that its injuries result from anything other than governmental action, we reverse the district court's judgment on the antitrust claims. We also conclude that Joor is shielded from liability on the California commercial tort claim. We therefore reverse the district court's judgment on that claim as well.

BACKGROUND

The parties in this case are commercial competitors. Joor is in the business of manufacturing steel tanks designed for the underground storage of hazardous fluids. Sessions repairs leaking storage tanks in place by cutting them open, lining their interiors with a protective coating of epoxy, and resealing them.

The cost of lining a tank is about the same as the cost of a new tank. Tank lining is cheaper than tank replacement, however, because lining does not entail the additional costs of removing and discarding the leaking tank and installing a new one. Tank lining, moreover, does not require the lengthy interruption [3] of business that tank replacement often involves.

In most of the localities in which Sessions did business prior to bringing this suit, tank lining required a permit. Authority to issue a tank lining permit usually rested with the local fire marshal or fire chief. Before the events that precipitated this law suit, fire authorities granted tank lining permits to Sessions without reluctance, and Sessions's business grew continually.

The Western Fire Chiefs Association (WFCA) is a private, nonprofit organization whose voting membership comprises fire chiefs and other governmental employees. The WFCA periodically promulgates a revised Uniform Fire Code (UFC), a model safety code prescribing safety standards and procedures. Many local governments formally adopt each successive UFC revision as municipal law. In some cities and towns where the UFC has not been formally enacted into law, local officials enforce the UFC by refusing to issue permits for structures or activities that are not in conformance with the code.

During the time of Joor's involvement with the WFCA, revision of the UFC was a three-phase process. In the first phase, designated [*297] subcommittees of the standing UFC Committee [4] inquired into various fire safety issues and drafted proposed revisions in accordance with their findings. After the proposed revisions were published in two trade journals, the UFC Committee convened to review each proposal and to vote on recommending its adoption or rejection by the WFCA. The meeting was open to subcommittee members and members of the public, who could register objections to the suggested revisions. The UFC Committee focused its review on revisions that were the subject of an objection. Proposals that were not the subject of an objection were recommended for approval.

In the final phase of the UFC revision process, the UFC Committee published in trade journals the proposed code changes and accompanying UFC Committee recommendations. At its annual meeting, the full body of the WFCA voted on the proposed revisions. Members of the public could attend this meeting and express support for or opposition to any proposal under consideration. The WFCA usually adopted proposed revisions to which no objections were made. If a majority of the WFCA approved a proposed revision, the revision was incorporated into the UFC.

Unlike the UFC Committee and the WFCA, whose memberships [5] were limited to public officials, UFC subcommittees included industry representatives and members of the public. The conduct at issue in this case arises from appellant Joor's involvement - through its president, Howard Robbins - with the UFC subcommittee charged with revising UFC Article 79, the section of the code that prescribes guidelines for the handling and storage of flammable liquids. Robbins volunteered to work on the subcommittee and took part in revising the provisions relating to underground storage tanks. Robbins was assigned the task of reviewing the parts of Article 79 that dealt with depth and location specifications for underground storage tanks. At the time he became involved with the subcommittee, Article 79 did not address tank lining or require that leaking tanks be removed.

Alarmed at the news of Robbins's participation in the code revision process, representatives from Sessions provided the subcommittee with materials about the tank lining process and were granted an opportunity to make a presentation on the subject, but the presentation was scheduled for the subcommittee's final meeting. Prior to the meeting, Robbins circulated among subcommittee members a [6] letter in which he raised concerns about the safety of tank lining and stated that the WFCA might incur liability for sanctioning the process because it would void a tank's Underwriters Laboratories (UL) certification.

After the Sessions representatives made their presentation and left the meeting, Robbins rallied the subcommittee to amend Article 79 to include a provision requiring that leaking storage tanks be removed from the ground. Robbins re-asserted that the lining process was unsafe and would void the UL label, subjecting the WFCA to liability. In spite of their awareness of Robbins's economic interest in a tank lining ban, the subcommittee unanimously approved Robbins's suggestion, incorporating the amendment in UFC § 79.601(d). In effect, the amendment was tantamount to a ban on tank lining.

With little or no discussion of the leaking tank removal provision, the UFC Committee approved the revised version of Article 79. The full body of the WFCA gave the revised article final approval.

Before the WFCA officially adopted the tank removal provision, Robbins sent letters to public entities, fire officials, standard-setting organizations and customer groups informing them of the [7] proposed amendment. Fire officials in many localities began denying Sessions's requests for permits and Sessions's business declined sharply. In the years following, Sessions's business continued to suffer.

Sessions filed a complaint in district court alleging that Joor had violated federal antitrust laws and California unfair competition laws. Ruling that Joor was shielded by Noerr-Pennington immunity from antitrust liability, the district court granted partial summary judgment in favor of Joor. On interlocutory review, this court substantially [*298] upheld the district court's decision. Sessions Tank Liners v. Joor Mfg., 827 F.2d 458 (9th Cir. 1987). The Supreme Court, however, vacated our decision and remanded it for further consideration in light of the then-recent decision in Allied Tube & Conduit Corp. v. Indian Head, Inc., 486 U.S. 492, 100 L. Ed. 2d 497, 108 S. Ct. 1931 (1988). Sessions Tank Liners, Inc. v. Joor Mfg., Inc., 487 U.S. 1213, 101 L. Ed. 2d 899, 108 S. Ct. 2862 (1988). We remanded the case to the district court. Sessions Tank Liners, Inc. v. Joor Mfg., Inc., 852 F.2d 484 (9th Cir. 1988).

After a bench trial the [8] district court ruled that Noerr immunity does not protect Joor from antitrust liability. The district court focused its analysis on whether Joor's machinations in the Article 79 subcommittee constituted a "valid effort to influence government action." Sessions, 786 F. Supp. 1518 at 1525. Engaging in the "intensely factual inquiry" mandated by the Supreme Court's opinion in Allied Tube, the district court found that Robbins had knowingly made false statements to the subcommittee. It also found that Robbins had taken advantage of his affiliation with the subcommittee to promote the tank lining ban and prevent the proponents of tank lining from effectively presenting their side of the issue to the subcommittee. Concluding that Joor's conduct could not be deemed a valid effort to petition lawmakers, the district court ruled that Joor was not shielded by Noerr immunity. Id. at 1526-27.

The court found Joor liable for a violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1, and for the California tort of intentional interference with prospective advantage. Sessions Tank Liners, Inc. v. Joor Mfg., Inc., 786 F. Supp. 1518 (C.D. Cal. 1991). [9] It is the district court's judgment against Joor that we review here.

ISSUES ON APPEAL

In this case we are called upon to decide whether a private party can be held liable, under federal antitrust laws and the California common law, for anticompetitive restraints resulting from valid governmental action.

DISCUSSION

I. The Antitrust Claim

Joor contends that the district court erred in ruling that Joor is not shielded by Noerr-Pennington immunity from liability on the antitrust claim.

Antitrust petitioning immunity has its roots in the Supreme Court's decision in Parker v. Brown, 317 U.S. 341, 87 L. Ed. 315, 63 S. Ct. 307 \(1942\). In Parker, the Court ruled that HN1 states cannot be held liable under the Sherman Act for anticompetitive restraints imposed "as an act of government." Id. at 352. The Parker holding was based on the Court's conclusion that there is "nothing in the language of the Sherman Act or in its history which suggests that its purpose was to restrain a state or its officers or agents from activities directed by its legislature." Id. at 351. In the absence of some stronger indication [\[10\]](#) that Congress intended the Sherman Act to apply to states as well as to private parties, the Court was unwilling to subject states to antitrust liability. Id.

In Eastern R.R. Presidents Conference v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc., 365 U.S. 127, 5 L. Ed. 2d 464, 81 S. Ct. 523 \(1961\), the Court recognized a corollary to the Parker state action immunity doctrine: HN2 "The federal antitrust laws do not regulate the conduct of private individuals in seeking anticompetitive action from the government." City of Columbia v. Omni Outdoor Advertising, Inc., 499 U.S. 365, 111 S. Ct. 1344, 1354-55, 113 L. Ed. 2d 382. The defendants in Noerr were a consortium of railroad executives that had conducted a successful publicity campaign designed to arouse public disfavor of the freight trucking industry in order to impair the truckers' ability to compete with the railroads. The campaign succeeded on two levels: it led to the retention, passage and enforcement of state laws limiting freight trucking, and it damaged the truckers' relationships with their customers. Noerr, 365 U.S. at 129-32.

Harkening to the same principles underlying the Parker doctrine, the Noerr [\[11\]](#) Court ruled that the railroads could not be held [\[*299\]](#) liable under the antitrust laws for effects of their campaign. Id. at 141-43; see also Omni, 111 S. Ct. at 1354-55 (discussing Noerr); 1 Phillip Areeda & Donald F. Turner, Antitrust Law Par. 204b (1978).

HN3 Insofar as [the Sherman] Act sets up a code of ethics at all, it is a code that condemns trade restraints, not political activity, and, as we have already pointed out, a publicity campaign to influence governmental action falls clearly into the category of political activity. The proscriptions of the Act, tailored as they are for the business world, are not at all appropriate for application in the political arena.

Noerr, 365 U.S. at 140-41. To impose antitrust liability on private parties for urging government action, the Court noted, would present other difficulties. It would be detrimental to democratic government because it would make citizens reluctant to inform lawmakers of their desires for laws that restrain trade, and it might offend the First Amendment right to petition the government for a redress of grievances. Id. at 137-38. [\[12\]](#)

The Noerr Court also rejected the proposition that petitioning immunity was limited to injuries flowing directly from governmental action. It held that the railroads were also shielded from liability for the harm the truckers suffered in their relationships with their customers. In the Court's view, that injury was "incidental" to the defendants' campaign to influence legislation. To impose liability for such incidental effects would "be tantamount to outlawing" the petitioning activity itself. Id. at 143-44.¹

The Court further defined the Noerr immunity doctrine [13] in Allied Tube & Conduit Corp. v. Indian Head, Inc., the case on which the district court relied in holding Joor liable for violating the Sherman Act. The Allied court recognized that, if carried to its extreme, antitrust petitioning immunity could be used to shield defendants from liability for all manner of anticompetitive conduct as long as the injury claimed could be characterized as incidental to an effort to influence governmental action. The Court addressed this problem by ruling that HN4[↑] immunity attaches only when the anticompetitive conduct at issue constitutes a valid effort to petition the government. 486 U.S. at 499-500. "The validity of such efforts, and thus the applicability of Noerr immunity, varies with the context and nature of the activity." Id. at 499.

In applying Allied to Joor's conduct, the district court overlooked a key distinction between Allied and this case. The plaintiff in Allied was awarded damages only on the theory that the stigma of banning the plaintiff's product from a uniform code caused independent marketplace harm to the plaintiff in jurisdictions that permitted [14] the use of the plaintiff's products. Id. at 498 n.2. In contrast, Sessions has never proved that it sustained injuries from anything other than the actions of municipal authorities. Sessions, 786 F. Supp. at 1532. Sessions has not shown that any potential tank lining customer in jurisdictions that were not enforcing the WFCA tank removal provision decided not to engage Sessions's services because of the WFCA's adoption of section 79.601(d). Nor has Sessions adduced any evidence that Joor's actions caused independent marketplace harm in jurisdictions that continued to permit tank lining. Unlike the plaintiff in Allied, Sessions was not awarded damages on the theory that Joor's "marketing the stigma" of section 79.601(d) caused Sessions any loss of business independent of the losses resulting from the permit denials. Id. The injuries for which Sessions seeks recovery flowed directly from government action. This fact takes the case entirely out of the realm of Allied.

HN5[↑] Because the injuries Sessions complains of are the result of governmental action, Joor is shielded by petitioning immunity from liability under the [15] antitrust laws. Our [*300] conclusion is grounded in the justification for antitrust petitioning immunity first enunciated in Noerr and consistently reaffirmed in later Supreme Court opinions. See, e.g., Omni, 111 S. Ct. at 1354-55; California Motor Transport, 404 U.S. at 509-10; Pennington, 381 U.S. at 669-671. The antitrust laws promote competition by prohibiting private actors from combining or conspiring to restrain trade. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1 & 2; Parker, 317 U.S. at 350-51; Noerr, 365 U.S. at 136-37. Unlike private actors acting in combination, disinterested governmental decision-makers who take measures to inhibit competition are accountable politically and procedurally to those affected by the anticompetitive measures. Parker, 317 U.S. at 352; Einer Elhauge, Making Sense of Antitrust Petitioning Immunity, 80 Cal. L.R. 1177, 1240-43 \(1992\). The policies underlying the Sherman Act do not obtain in this context.²

[16] To rule otherwise and hold Joor liable for injuries flowing from governmental decision-makers' imposition of an anticompetitive restraint, we would have to find that the restraint was imposed because of Joor's petitioning efforts. Proof of causation would entail deconstructing the decision-making process to ascertain what factors prompted the various governmental bodies to erect the anticompetitive barriers at issue. This inquiry runs afoul of the principles guiding the Parker and Noerr decisions. See Omni, 111 S. Ct. at 1352, 1355 (rejecting suggestion that there is a conspiracy exception to petitioning immunity in cases where "government officials conspire with a private party to employ government action as a means of stifling competition" because such an exception would be "impracticable or beyond the purpose of the antitrust laws"); Noerr, 365 U.S. at 145.

¹ In later cases, the Court recognized that Noerr immunity applies to attempts to influence administrative, executive and judicial action. Otter Tail Power Co. v. United States, 410 U.S. 366, 35 L. Ed. 2d 359, 93 S. Ct. 1022 \(1973\); California Motor Transport Co. v. Trucking Unlimited, 404 U.S. 508, 30 L. Ed. 2d 642, 92 S. Ct. 609 \(1972\); United Mine Workers v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657, 14 L. Ed. 2d 626, 85 S. Ct. 1585 \(1965\).

² Sessions concedes as much in its brief when it states, "The Noerr doctrine and its progeny rest on the premise that the Sherman Act regulates business activity, but not political activity. Pure political activity is beyond the reach of the Sherman Act." Appellee's Brief at 3.

The district court's holding illustrates the problems that arise when private parties are held liable under the antitrust laws for injuries flowing from governmental action. In the district court's view, the fact that Sessions's injuries flowed from local [17] officials' refusal to grant tank lining permits did not relieve Joor of antitrust liability. Joor's actions would be shielded by Noerr immunity, the court reasoned, only if the permit denials could be characterized as "an 'intervening cause' breaking the link between a private party's pursuit of an anticompetitive objective and a plaintiff's injury." Sessions, 786 F. Supp. at 1533. The government action would be recognized as an intervening cause, the district court stated, only if invoking petitioning immunity was necessary (1) to prevent courts from second-guessing the decisions of better-informed government officials, (2) to avoid deconstructing the governmental decision-making process to determine whether a particular decision was an independent governmental action and not the result of a party's improper influence, or (3) to protect a citizen's First Amendment right to petition the government and to ensure that the government is not deprived of useful information. Id. at 1534. The district court concluded that none of these policy considerations applies to the present case. Id. And yet, the district court necessarily [18] deconstructed the decision-making process in finding that Joor's misrepresentations regarding the safety of tank lining were the cause of the local officials' decisions to deny Sessions's requests for permits.

In addition to its dependence on deconstruction, the "intervening cause" analysis presents other difficulties. HN6 [↑] We cannot accept an interpretation of the Noerr doctrine that grants immunity only when the defendant's efforts to persuade government officials to impose anticompetitive restraints were not the cause of the governmental restraints actually imposed. So interpreted, the immunity shields nothing that would otherwise cause liability. Joor would be protected from antitrust liability only if the court found that the permit denials were motivated by factors wholly unrelated to Robbins' activities in the Article 79 subcommittee and his subsequent campaign to notify public officials of the tank lining ban. See id.

[*301] This approach cannot be reconciled with the principles underlying the antitrust petitioning immunity doctrine. "Where a restraint upon trade or monopolization is the result of valid governmental action, as opposed to private action,' those urging the governmental [19] action enjoy absolute immunity from antitrust liability for the anticompetitive restraint." Allied, 486 U.S. at 499 (quoting Noerr, 365 U.S. at 136); accord Lawline v. American Bar Ass'n, 956 F.2d 1378, 1383 \(7th Cir. 1992\) (holding that defendant bar associations that had urged state supreme court to adopt bar disciplinary rules were immune from liability under Sherman Act for anticompetitive injuries resulting from court's adoption of rules); Juster Assoc. v. City of Rutland, 901 F.2d 266, 271 \(2d Cir. 1990\) (holding that developer and city were immune from antitrust liability because restraint complained of was the consequence of governmental action). Immunity from liability for restraints imposed by the government attaches regardless of the "validity" of the efforts of those urging the action.³ See Omni, 499 U.S. 365, 111 S. Ct. at 1354-56, 113 L. Ed. 2d 382 (rejecting suggestion that immunity from anticompetitive injuries flowing from government action does not attach when action is the result of conspiracy between defendants and governmental officials); Noerr, 365 U.S. at 145 [20] (applying petitioning immunity to private party that had "deliberately deceived the public and public officials" in lobbying campaign aimed at effecting enactment of anticompetitive legislation).

Because the only anticompetitive injuries that Sessions complains of are the direct result of governmental action, we conclude that Joor is shielded from liability for these injuries by petitioning immunity.⁴

[21] II. The State Law Claim

³ We re-emphasize that the liability that Allied attached to "invalid" efforts to petition the government was liability for damages flowing from the non-governmental, independent market-place harm that the defendants' activities caused.

⁴ Joor raises other points of error concerning the district court's decision holding Joor liable to Sessions under the Sherman Act. Because we determine that Joor is immune from the antitrust claims, we do not reach these arguments.

Joor asserts that the district court erred in ruling that Sessions was entitled to judgment on its claim that Joor had committed the common-law tort of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage.⁵ According to Joor, any conduct shielded by the doctrine of petitioning immunity in the federal antitrust context is perforce shielded in the state common-law context.

[22] We need not decide whether antitrust petitioning immunity and immunity under state tort law are perfectly coextensive. See Blank v. Kirwan, 39 Cal. 3d 311, 703 P.2d 58, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718 (Cal. 1985) (citing separate grounds for barring recovery on antitrust claims and tortious interference claims); Willis v. Santa Ana Community Hospital, 58 Cal. 2d 806, 809, 376 P.2d 568, 570, 26 Cal. Rptr. 640, 642 (Cal. 1962) (holding that state antitrust statutes do not supersede all common-law commercial torts). We are convinced that, in the circumstances of this case, the California Supreme Court would hold Joor immune from damages for interference with prospective economic advantage.

The California Supreme Court has carefully considered the relationship of antitrust petitioning immunity to the tort of interference with prospective economic advantage. In Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co., 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 791 P.2d 587, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1 (Cal. 1990) ("PG&E"), the Court dealt with a claim that the defendant [23] had induced a governmental agency to initiate litigation seeking to avoid a contract to supply hydroelectric power to the plaintiff PG&E. The Court held that "to permit [this] cause of action to be stated when the only interference [*302] alleged is that defendant induced the bringing of potentially meritorious litigation would be an unwarranted extension of the scope of these torts and a pernicious barrier to free access to the courts." Id. 791 P.2d at 588. The Court approvingly recited the evolution of the Noerr immunity, and stated that "this doctrine relies on the constitutional right to petition for redress of grievances to establish that there is no antitrust liability for petitioning any branch of government, even if the motive is anticompetitive." Id. at 595.

It is true that this latter statement in PG&E is expressly rested on the First Amendment, and Joor's entitlement under that Amendment is limited in the present case. Joor made deliberate misrepresentations in securing the amendment to the UFC; he falsely represented that the lining process would void a tank's UL certification, and he made unfounded assertions [24] regarding the safety of tank lining and its effect on a tank's structural integrity. Those statements, of themselves, have no real claim to First Amendment protection. See Clipper Express v. Rocky Mountain Motor Tariff Bureau, 690 F.2d 1240, 1261-62 (9th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 483 U.S. 1227 (1983); see also California Motor Trans., 404 U.S. at 512-13 (recognizing that, in various fora, sanctions are imposed for deliberate misrepresentations).

PG&E recognizes, however, that HN8↑ the very existence of a tort action for the seeking of valid governmental action exerts an undesirable chilling effect on the access of others to government, regardless of the motives of the particular party before the court. PG&E, 791 P.2d at 597. Moreover, "the torts of inducing breach of contract and interference with prospective advantage have been criticized as protecting the secure enjoyment of contractual and economic relations at the expense of our interest in a freely competitive economy." Id. For this reason, the California Supreme Court has [25] limited the types of prospective advantage that it will protect: HN9↑ "a person's expectancy in the outcome of a government licensing proceeding is not protected against outside interference." Id. at 598 (citing Blank v. Kirwan, 39 Cal. 3d at 330, 703 P.2d at 70, 216 Cal. Rptr. at 730).

The only tort involving inducement of litigation that the California Court was willing to recognize in PG&E was the tort of malicious prosecution, with its dual protective requirements of a lack of probable cause and a lack of success in the litigation. Id. at 598. If any analogy at all is to be made between the tort of malicious prosecution and that of interference with prospective economic advantage, the fact that Joor succeeded in influencing the disputed licensing decisions would preclude recovery.

⁵ HN7↑ To prevail on a claim of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage the plaintiff must demonstrate: "(1) an economic relationship between the plaintiff and some third person containing the probability of future economic benefit to the plaintiff; (2) knowledge by the defendant of the existence of the relationship; (3) intentional acts on the part of the defendant designed to disrupt the relationship; (4) actual disruption of the relationship; and (5) damages to the plaintiff proximately caused by the acts of the defendant." Blank v. Kirwan, 39 Cal. 3d 311, 703 P.2d 58, 70, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718 (Cal. 1985).

Finally, we believe that the California courts, if presented with the policy considerations against deconstruction of public decisionmaking that we discussed in Part I, would find them as compelling in the tort law context as they are in the antitrust context. To impose tort liability for damages resulting from valid governmental decisions [26] by public officials requires an examination of the motives of those officials that judges, federal or state, are reluctant to undertake. In the present case, for example, the district court found that the fire officials "relied on [Joor's] misrepresentation in denying permits to Sessions to engage in tank lining." Sessions, 786 F. Supp. at 1535. The same policy considerations that led the federal courts to conclude that the antitrust laws are not intended to precipitate such deconstruction of public decisionmaking would, we are convinced, lead the California courts to conclude that the state tort law of interference with prospective economic advantage is also not intended to permit such deconstruction.

We conclude, therefore, that the HN10 California courts would not permit recovery in this case for tortious interference with prospective economic advantage, where the damages all flow from governmental decisions of disinterested public officials. We accordingly reverse the judgment of the district court awarding such damages.

[*303] CONCLUSION

The judgment of the district court awarding damages to Sessions under federal and state law is REVERSED.

Dissent by: TANNER, Senior District Judge dissenting. [27]

Dissent

I believe the district court properly applied the facts of this case to the law as set forth in Allied Tube & Conduit Corp. v. Indian Head, Inc., 486 U.S. 492, 100 L. Ed. 2d 497, 108 S. Ct. 1931 \(1988\), and has correctly concluded that Joor was not shielded by Noerr immunity. I dissent.

End of Document

New Orleans Pelicans Baseball, Inc. v. National Ass'n of Professional Baseball Leagues, Inc.

United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana

February 26, 1994, Decided ; March 1, 1994, Filed; March 2, 1994, Entered CIVIL ACTION NO. 93-253 SECTION "F"

Reporter

1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21468 *; 1994 WL 631144

NEW ORLEANS PELICANS BASEBALL, INC. VERSUS THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL LEAGUES, INC., ET AL

Disposition: [*1] Motion for summary judgment DENIED in part and GRANTED in part.

Core Terms

territory, League, relocation, baseball, defendants', rights, exemption, team, parties, summary judgment, antitrust claim, damages, arbitrary and capricious, specific performance, indispensable, plaintiff's claim, anti trust law, asserts, notice, antitrust, reasons, summary judgment motion, higher classification, regulation, genuine, playing, protest

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Legal Entitlement

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Materiality of Facts

HN1 [down arrow] Entitlement as Matter of Law, Genuine Disputes

Fed. R. Civ. P. 56 instructs that summary judgment is proper if the record discloses no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. No genuine issue of fact exists if the record, taken as a whole could not lead a rational trier of fact to find for the non-moving party. A genuine issue of fact exists only if the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the non-moving party.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Appropriateness

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Scintilla Rule

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Opposing Materials > General Overview

HN2 Entitlement as Matter of Law, Appropriateness

The mere argued existence of a factual dispute does not defeat an otherwise properly supported motion. Therefore, if the evidence is merely colorable, or is not significantly probative, summary judgment is appropriate. Summary judgment is proper if the party opposing the motion fails to establish an essential element of his case. In evaluating the summary judgment motion, the court must read the facts in the light most favorable to the non-moving party.

Business & Corporate Law > Unincorporated Associations

HN3 Business & Corporate Law, Unincorporated Associations

Under Louisiana law, courts will generally not interfere with the internal judgments of a private association, except in cases in which the action complained of is arbitrary, capricious or unjustly discriminatory. Courts will also act to insure that voluntary associations do not exercise their power to make and enforce rules in an unlawful arbitrary or malicious manner. Voluntary associations must comply with their own rules.

Civil Procedure > ... > Joinder of Parties > Compulsory Joinder > Indispensable Parties

Civil Procedure > Parties > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Parties > Joinder of Parties > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Joinder of Parties > Compulsory Joinder > Necessary Parties

HN4 Compulsory Joinder, Indispensable Parties

Courts consider four criteria when determining whether a party is indispensable under Fed. R. Civ. P. 19: (1) to what extent a judgment rendered in the party's absence might be prejudicial to it; (2) the extent to which, through protective provisions, shaping of relief, or other measures, the prejudice might be lessened or avoided; (3) whether a judgment rendered in the party's absence will be adequate; and (4) whether the plaintiff will have an adequate remedy if the action is dismissed for nonjoinder. Where parties ought to be joined under Rule 19(a), that rule expressly contemplates that the district court will order the adverse parties to join them. Rule 19 does not mandate dismissal even if the court were to conclude that parties are indispensable. Rather, the court would order joinder if it is feasible.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Sports > Baseball

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Transportation Law > Interstate Commerce > State Powers

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Industries > Sports > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

Constitutional Law > Congressional Duties & Powers > Commerce Clause > General Overview

HN5 [+] Sports, Baseball

The commerce clause forbids inconsistent state antitrust regulation of professional league sports. As the burden on interstate commerce outweighs the states' interests in regulating baseball's reserve system, the Commerce Clause precludes the application of state antitrust law.

Counsel: For NEW ORLEANS PELICANS BASEBALL, INC., plaintiff: Warren Horn, Heller, Draper, Hayden & Horn, LLC, New Orleans, LA.

For NEW ORLEANS PELICANS BASEBALL, INC., plaintiff: Robert A. Kutcher, Chopin, Wager, Cole, Richard, Reboul & Kutcher, LLP, Metairie, LA.

For NEW ORLEANS PELICANS BASEBALL, INC., plaintiff: David Lawrence Bateman, David L. Bateman, PLC, Baton Rouge, LA.

For NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL LEAGUES, INC., THE, defendant: Ronald Lee Riggle, Koch and Rouse, L.L.C., New Orleans, LA.

For MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL, defendant: Mishthi Grace Ratnesar, Campbell, McCranie, Sistrunk, Anzelmo & Hardy, Metairie, LA.

For MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL, defendant: Howard Marks, Sedgwick, Detent, Moran & Arnold, Chicago, IL.

For MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL, defendant: Harvey C. Koch, Gary J. Rouse, Koch and Rouse, L.L.C., New Orleans, LA.

For PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL EXECUTIVE COUNCIL, movant: Mishthi Grace Ratnesar, Campbell, McCranie, Sistrunk, Anzelmo & Hardy, Metairie, LA.

For PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL EXECUTIVE COUNCIL, movant: George E. Yund, Douglas E. Hart, Frost & Jacobs, Cincinnati, [*2] OH.

For PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL EXECUTIVE COUNCIL, movant: Howard Marks, Sedgwick, Detent, Moran & Arnold, Chicago, IL.

For PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL EXECUTIVE COUNCIL, movant: Harvey C. Koch, Gary J. Rouse, Ronald Lee Riggle, Koch and Rouse, L.L.C., New Orleans, LA.

For NEW ORLEANS ZEPHYRS BASEBALL CLUB, L.L.C., movant: Albert Kirk Gaspercz, Adams & Reese, New Orleans, LA.

For PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL EXECUTIVE COUNCIL, third-party plaintiff: Mishthi Grace Ratnesar, Campbell, McCranie, Sistrunk, Anzelmo & Hardy, Metairie, LA.

For PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL EXECUTIVE COUNCIL, third-party plaintiff: George E. Yund, Douglas E. Hart, Frost & Jacobs, Cincinnati, OH.

For PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL EXECUTIVE COUNCIL, third-party plaintiff: Howard Marks, Sedgwick, Detent, Moran & Arnold, Chicago, IL.

For PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL EXECUTIVE COUNCIL, third-party plaintiff: Harvey C. Koch, Gary J. Rouse, Ronald Lee Riggle, Koch and Rouse, L.L.C., New Orleans, LA.

For THOMAS M BENSON, JR, third-party defendant: Warren Horn, Heller, Draper, Hayden & Horn, LLC, New Orleans, LA.

For THOMAS M BENSON, JR, third-party defendant: Robert A. Kutcher, Chopin, Wager, Cole, Richard, [*3] Reboul & Kutcher, LLP, Metairie, LA.

For THOMAS M BENSON, JR, third-party defendant: David Lawrence Bateman, David L. Bateman, PLC, Baton Rouge, LA.

Judges: MARTIN L. C. FELDMAN, UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE.

Opinion by: MARTIN L. C. FELDMAN

Opinion

ORDER AND REASONS

Defendants move the Court to grant summary judgment in their favor on all counts of the complaint and to dismiss the complaint with prejudice. For the reasons that follow, the Court DENIES defendants' motion except as to plaintiff's state and federal antitrust claims, which the Court GRANTS.

Background

This case involves the unsuccessful attempt of plaintiff to purchase and relocate a AA Southern League baseball club to New Orleans. The National League added two expansion teams for 1993, the Colorado Rockies, and the Florida Marlins. Likewise, the AAA International League added two clubs, in Ottawa, Canada and Charlotte, North Carolina. These changes displaced minor league clubs previously operating in those cities. Consequently, the AAA Denver Zephyrs and the AA Charlotte Knights needed to find new homes. In search of a new home, the Zephyrs explored the possibility of relocating to New Orleans. The plaintiff claims, [*4] however, that the Zephyrs abandoned this idea due to lack of financing.

This litigation arises from the attempts by the New Orleans Pelicans, Inc. to purchase the Charlotte Knights from Charlotte Baseball Inc. and relocate the team to the New Orleans area. The plaintiff and Charlotte Baseball were brought together by the President of the Southern League, Jimmy Bragan. Negotiations followed that included telephone calls and correspondence directed to the plaintiff in Louisiana, as well as negotiations with the plaintiff's lawyers in San Antonio, Texas. In August 1992, the plaintiff signed a letter of intent to purchase the Charlotte Knights of the Southern League, and conditioned the purchase on the ability of the Pelicans to move the club to the New Orleans territory. Plaintiff contends that at all times the move was a condition of the purchase and that the defendants knew it.

On September 1, 1992 the Pelicans submitted an "Application for Control Interest Transfer" to Mike Moore, President of the National Association, together with a $ 5,000 application fee. Although approval of this application only transferred ownership, the application states and the plaintiff makes clear that [*5] the relocation would be to the New Orleans area. More importantly, Jimmy Bragan had already notified the National Association in early October 1992 that the Southern League claimed the New Orleans territory for the Knights. Finally, the Purchase Agreement upon which the Application was based expressly stated that the purchase was conditioned on getting approval to relocate the club to New Orleans.

On November 2, 1992, President Moore gave written approval of the Control Interest Transfer. Three days later, on November 5, he issued a conditional written approval of the relocation of the Charlotte club to New Orleans "subject to the possibility of (1) a protest by another League, or [and here is the spark that fueled the dispute] (2) the submission of notice by a club of a League of higher classification of its protection of, or request to relocate to, territory that would include any portion of your proposed relocation territory." This letter required that such a notice be in writing and received by the close of business on November 20, 1992. That date is interesting because a good deal of activity was taking place regarding the Zephyrs at the same time.

On November 18, 1992, the [*6] Zephyrs, who play in the American Association, submitted a written request for the New Orleans territory; President Moore notified plaintiff of this change of events the following day.

On November 20, 1992, the American Association are said to have voted, in a conference call, 7 to 1 in favor of the Zephyrs' relocation to New Orleans. The result of this vote was, defendants claim, communicated orally to Mr. Moore by a representative of the American Association, Branch Rickey, that same day. Plaintiff disputes whether this vote was taken in accordance with the American Association's by-laws, and whether the result of the vote was communicated orally to Mr. Moore before the November 20, 1992 deadline.

On November 23, 1992, Mr. Moore announced three requirements that the Zephyrs had to meet by December 1, 1992 in order to receive consideration of their desire to try to relocate to the New Orleans territory. Specifically, he required permission of the American Association for relocation and approval of the proposed playing facility; a copy of a lease on a facility in which the franchise would play; and approval of the major league team affiliate of the relocation and proposed playing [*7] facility.

On December 6, despite the Zephyrs' failure to comply with the December 1, 1992 deadline, Moore granted Denver's request to relocate, and thus, thwarted the application of the plaintiff. Then Moore denied an appeal by the Southern League and the PBEC refused to review the Moore decision or the entire history of the transaction.¹

The Pelicans never purchased the Charlotte club. The plaintiff, of course, blames this on the defendants. The Charlotte club has since been sold to another and is playing temporarily in Nashville, Tennessee. The Zephyrs did relocate to New Orleans and played their 1993 home games at UNO.

Before addressing the merits of defendants' motion, it is perhaps useful to briefly [*8] describe what has already happened in this case. Plaintiff originally named as defendants Mike Moore, the President of the NAPBL, the NAPBL, the Southern League and the PBEC. In the complaint, plaintiff asserted five relief counts and sought a declaratory judgment or specific performance declaring that the Pelicans were entitled to the New Orleans territory for the purpose of operating a minor league baseball club. Subsequently, plaintiff filed a First Amended and Supplemental Complaint, adding Charlotte Baseball, Inc., the owner of the Charlotte Knights AA club, as a defendant and adding a sixth count for specific performance of the purchase contract between plaintiff and Charlotte Baseball, Inc. In earlier motion practice, the Court dismissed Mike Moore individually, the Southern League and Charlotte Baseball, Inc. from the case and also dismissed claims of ultra vires actions by the NAPBL. Following the rulings on the motion to dismiss, plaintiff filed a Second Amended and Supplemental Complaint, adding a seventh count alleging that the Pelicans had suffered pecuniary damages from the alleged conduct of defendants. Finally, plaintiff filed a third Amended and Supplemental Complaint, [*9] adding an eighth count of state and federal antitrust violations. Consequently, before the Court now are only the NAPBL and PBEC as defendants, and only portions of counts one through four, and counts seven and eight remains as viable claims.

I. Summary Judgment

HN1 [Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56] instructs that summary judgment is proper if the record discloses no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. No genuine issue of fact exists if the record, taken as a whole could not lead a rational trier of fact to find for the non-moving party. See Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio, 475 U.S. 574, 586, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538, 106 S. Ct. 1348 (1986). A genuine issue of fact exists only "if the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the non-moving party." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 106 S. Ct. 2505 (1986).

HN2[ The mere argued existence of a factual dispute does not defeat an otherwise properly supported motion. See id. Therefore, "if the evidence is merely colorable, or is not significantly probative," summary [*10] judgment is appropriate. Id. at 249-50 (citations omitted). Summary judgment is proper if the party opposing the motion fails to establish an essential element of his case. See Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322-23, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265, 106 S. Ct. 2548 \(1986\). In evaluating the summary judgment motion, the court must read the facts in the light most favorable to the non-moving party. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 255.

¹ The PBEC considered the matter at a meeting in Dallas on January 11, 1993. It decided that a denied relocation request by the President of the NAPBL was an unreviewable final decision. It further decided that it did not have jurisdiction to hear a protest by the Pelicans of the approval of the Zephyrs.

II. Arbitrary and Capricious Conduct

This Court stated the following in its Order and Reasons, dated April 30, 1992, denying defendants' motion to dismiss:

To be entitled to relief, the plaintiff must prove: (1) that the New Orleans territory was open at the time the Pelicans claimed it, but was thereafter protected and the Pelicans were entitled to protection by the defendants after it was granted to them; (2) that the defendants violated their own rules and expanded their rules to benefit the Zephyrs; (3) that the defendants' actions were intentional, arbitrary and capricious; (4) that the New Orleans territory was never properly claimed by the Zephyrs and was properly awarded to the Pelicans; (5) that the [*11] New Orleans territory was never properly claimed by the League to which the Zephyrs belong; and (6) that after the Zephyrs claimed the territory, the defendants acted improperly because they did not enforce their own rules, requirements and deadlines.

Defendants claim that the plaintiff's suit must fail because the Pelicans never had territorial rights protected by the PBA or the NAA and the defendants properly awarded those rights to the Zephyrs. In support of this argument, the defendants maintain that the November 2, 1992 letter merely approved the Pelicans' Application for Control Interest Transfer, the ownership rights, but did not approve the team's relocation to New Orleans. They further argue that the November 5, 1992 letter properly set forth the requirements of Rule 34(E) and that those requirements were satisfied when the Zephyrs submitted, on November 18, 1992, a written application for the New Orleans territory, which the League approved on November 20, 1992. Their reading of the November 5th letter presumes a clarity that is mystified by its text.

Plaintiff asserts that material facts are in dispute as to whether defendants acted arbitrarily and capriciously by allowing [*12] the Zephyrs to relocate to the New Orleans area. Specifically, plaintiff claims first, that there are material questions of fact regarding the effect of the November 2, 1992 letter. The Pelicans claim that, in addition to approving the control interest transfer, that letter granted them territorial rights in the New Orleans territory. Again, the rhetoric of this case departs from textual content. Second, plaintiff asserts that material questions of fact abound regarding whether Moore exceeded the scope of his authority under the rules of baseball in his November 5th letter and whether the conditions of that letter were properly satisfied. For the most part, plaintiff seems to have the more persuasive argument in this narrow motion setting.²

A. Analysis

HN3 [↑] Under Louisiana law, courts will generally not interfere with the internal judgments of a private association, except in cases in which [*13] the action complained of is arbitrary, capricious or unjustly discriminatory. Sanders v. Louisiana High School Athletic Ass'n, 242 So. 2d 19, 25 \(La. App. 3 Cir. 1970\). See also Crane v. Indiana High School Athletic Assoc., 975 F.2d 1315, 1320 \(7th Cir. 1992\) ("courts will also act to insure that voluntary associations do not exercise their power to make and enforce rules in an unlawful arbitrary or malicious manner?.voluntary associations must comply with their own rules."). That test drives this analysis, and it will be a central feature of pre-jury submission motion practice at the close of some or all of the evidence.

The question before the Court, therefore, is whether there is a genuine issue of a material fact that the defendants acted arbitrarily and capriciously in this case. A genuine issue of material facts exists where the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could find that the defendants acted arbitrarily and capriciously. Reviewing the evidence in a light most favorable to the plaintiff, the Court finds that the defendants are not entitled to summary relief.

² Most of the arguments presented here are not new to what has been shared with the Court in earlier motion practice.

Two fact issues trump summary judgment. First, the meaning of the letter [*14] of November 2, 1992. That letter explicitly approved the Application for Control Interest Transfer; however, the letter may also have awarded the plaintiff territorial rights in the New Orleans territory. The text itself is inconclusive. The letter of November 2, 1992 states little more than "your Application for Control Interest Transfer of the Charlotte Knights is substantially complete." What one draws from this somewhat elusive comment depends upon proof not in this record.

Next, the Court finds that the controversial letter of November 5, 1992 and the circumstances that followed present the strongest reasons for denying summary judgment. In fact, the success or failure of plaintiff's case will ride on the letter of November 5, 1992. It provides in part:

...I hereby approve the proposed relocation subject to the possibility of (1) a protest by another League, or (2) the submission of notice by a club of a league of higher classification of its protection of, or request to relocate to, territory that would include any portion of your proposed relocation territory. To be effective, any such protest or notice must be in writing and received by the National Association office [*15] before 5:00 p.m. on November 20, 1992.

At first blush, it seems that President Moore's second condition departs from the textual grant of Rule 34, which controls the relocation of teams. Rule 34 says:

...The Commissioner and the President of the Minor League Association shall have fifteen (15) days from the date of approval of the proposed expansion or relocation to grant permission for the occupation of the territory, and during that fifteen (15) day period a League of higher classification that applies for the rights to the same territory shall be given preference. (emphasis added)

President Moore's letter states, however, that a club of a higher classification may also express an interest in an area; in contrast, Rule 34 states only that a league of a higher classification may express such an interest. This distinction takes on significant meaning given what ensued after the fifteen day deadline was triggered. It is this tension that animates the fight.

It is undisputed that the Zephyrs expressed interest in the New Orleans area in writing on November 18, 1992. It is further undisputed that the American Association, in a 7 to 1 vote, approved the Zephyrs' [*16] request on November 20, 1992.

The defendants' first and basic problem with these events is that the Zephyrs are most assuredly a club, not a league. Moore has admitted that his authority comes from the rules of baseball and that he cannot legislate. Thus, a material question of fact remains regarding whether the conditions set forth in the letter of November 5, 1992 were within Moore's authority as President of the National Association.

Defendants argue that all this is irrelevant because the American Association approved the Zephyrs' move on November 20, 1992, and orally notified President Moore of their vote later that day. Plaintiffs correctly point out that the record is far from clear as to whether President Moore received notice of the vote on November 20. Moreover, President Moore's letter expressly required that any notice had to be in writing. Instead, it was given orally. Accordingly, even if the notice was given on November 20, 1992, it was arguably not given in accordance with the guidelines set forth by President Moore himself. These unresolved fact issues could give content to the arbitrary and capricious characterization of unwelcomed conduct and must be resolved at [*17] trial.

Consequently, the Court DENIES defendants' motion for summary judgment on plaintiff's claims relating to the arbitrary and capricious conduct of defendants.

III. Remedies

1. Specific Performance

Defendants maintain that, even if arbitrary and capricious conduct is proved, plaintiff has no right to specific performance. The defendants claim that no territorial rights can accrue until and unless the relocation has the approval of the League, the President of the NAPBL, and consideration by the Commissioner. Defendants claim that the only specific performance that could be awarded would be to order the Commissioner's Office to consider whether to disapprove the Pelicans' relocation request.

Plaintiff maintains that it is entitled to specific performance of its rights to the New Orleans territory. The right to the New Orleans territory, plaintiff claims, would return plaintiff to the status quo as it was prior to the arbitrary and capricious acts complained of, thereby enabling it to attempt to bring a professional baseball team to New Orleans. Moreover, if the Pelicans were entitled to the territory, plaintiff says, the team is entitled to be compensated for the value [*18] of the territory as a result of the actions of the National Association that awarded the territory to the Zephyrs.³

A. Analysis

If plaintiff proves that the arbitrary and capricious decisions of defendants caused it to lose its rights to the New Orleans territory, plaintiff will be entitled to specific performance, in the form of being granted rights to the New Orleans territory. That is the only way to return plaintiff to the status quo prior to the arbitrary and capricious acts complained of, unless compensation is a provable alternative.

Ultimately, the Court agrees with plaintiff that it would be inappropriate for the Court to attempt to speculate on what might happen if plaintiff wins. Accordingly, the Court rejects defendants' argument that plaintiff is not entitled to specific performance.

2. Baseball Rules Benefit Only Leagues and Clubs

Defendants argue that the rules [*19] of baseball exist for the benefit of the Leagues and the Clubs that are subject to the NAA and PBA. Defendants argument focuses on the fact that, because the Pelicans do not own a club within a NAPBL member league, they are not capable of relocating to New Orleans.

Plaintiff asserts that this argument incorrectly assumes that the Pelicans never had rights to the New Orleans territory. They claim that defendants' argument puts the cart before the horse. These arguments echo those to which the Court has already spoken.

A. Analysis

The Court still agrees with plaintiff. Defendants' argument overlooks plaintiff's theory in this case. Plaintiff's case turns on whether the Pelicans were awarded rights to the New Orleans territory; if a jury finds that they were awarded those rights, then plaintiff is entitled to relief in some form, regardless of the present ownership status of the AA team. Whether the Pelicans own a team today is irrelevant to whether defendants deprived that team of their rights to the New Orleans territory.

3. Indispensable Parties

Defendants continue to insist that the Court should not entertain any relief altering the territorial rights in New Orleans because [*20] indispensable parties to such a determination, namely the Zephyrs and the American Association, the current owners of the New Orleans territory, are absent. In response, plaintiff asserts that no indispensable third parties preclude the continued litigation of this case. Plaintiff argues that neither the Zephyrs nor the American Association are indispensable. Plaintiff plans to enforce its right to monetary relief against the named defendants; consequently, there is no need for the Zephyrs or the American Association to be parties to this litigation. If the Court should hold that these parties are indispensable, plaintiff claims that joinder of those parties, not dismissal of plaintiff's claim, is the proper remedy.

A. Analysis

HN4 Courts consider four criteria when determining whether a party is indispensable under Rule 19: (1) to what extent a judgment rendered in the party's absence might be prejudicial to it; (2) the extent to which, through protective provisions, shaping of relief, or other measures, the prejudice might be lessened or avoided; (3) whether a judgment rendered in the party's absence will be adequate; and (4) whether the plaintiff will have an adequate remedy if [*21] the action is dismissed for nonjoinder. Macklin v. Butler, 553 F.2d 525, 531 (7th Cir. 1977). "Where parties ought to be joined under Rule 19(a)," as plaintiff asserts, "that rule expressly contemplates that the district court will order the adverse parties to join them." Id. at 530. And so, contrary to defendants' assertions, Rule 19 does not mandate dismissal even if this Court were to conclude that parties are indispensable. Rather, the Court would order joinder if it is feasible. Teamsters Local Union No. 116 v. Fargo-Moorhead Auto Dealers Assoc., 620 F.2d 204 (8th Cir. 1980).

³ This is a component of plaintiff's claim that, it would seem, will be the most challenging in terms of adequate proof.

Defendants fail to apply these factors. If, as the defendants claim, they will bump the plaintiff and still grant the New Orleans territory to the Zephyrs, then neither the Zephyrs nor the American Association will be affected by any judgment.

Accordingly, the Court finds that none of the parties named by defendants are Rule 19 indispensable parties.

4. Damages

Defendants' final argument about damages focuses on the ability of the Pelicans to prove any recoverable damages. But the strength of this view cannot overcome the speculation with which it [*22] is asserted. Defendants argue first that plaintiff is not entitled to any compensation because the Zephyrs expressed interest in the New Orleans territory before the waiting period set forth in the November 5th letter lapsed. Moreover, even if plaintiff has incurred definable damages, defendants maintain that plaintiff has yet to provide any evidence of damage. Defendants draw attention to what plaintiff asked its expert witness to assess: the value of the New Orleans territory in the context of a draft, the value of the club the Pelicans wanted to purchase, and the value of the cash flow lost by not owning the club. Defendant asserts that the value of the New Orleans territory in the context of a draft is not a proper element of damages because the draft rules are inapplicable to an unoccupied, unprotected territory. The Court has previously discussed the uncertainty of this position. Defendants further maintain that plaintiff's own financial projections indicate that a substantial loss during 1993 was anticipated. Accordingly, the defendants claim that the Pelicans lost nothing by not playing in this uncontested market.

The Pelicans claim to have proof of recoverable damages. The Pelicans [*23] first note that defendants argument again assumes that the Pelicans never had an interest in the New Orleans territory. The Pelicans admit that their entire case anchors to a finding that the team was awarded the New Orleans territory, was owed protection by the National Association of that territory, and that the team was replaced in violation of the rules because only a league could claim the territory.

A. Analysis

The Court finds that the plaintiff has offered enough evidence for motion purposes concerning damages to avoid summary judgment at this Juncture. Defendants' argument incorrectly overlooks plaintiff's theory, that defendants at first awarded plaintiff territorial rights to the New Orleans area. If plaintiff can prove that they were, in fact, awarded the territory, and were owed protection by the National Association of that territory, then the plaintiff's would be entitled to compensation, if the evidence is more than speculative. That is the disputed fact that makes summary relief an unreasonable expectation.

Accordingly, the Court DENIES defendants' motion to the extent that it claims plaintiff cannot prove recoverable damages.

IV. Dismissal of PBEC

PBEC [*24] claims that it should be dismissed as a defendant because it has not taken any improper action against plaintiff. Plaintiff claims that the PBEC acted improperly by not overruling the decision of Mike Moore concerning the relocation of Charlotte club to New Orleans. The PBEC argues that, because Rule 35(B) clearly makes a disapproval of a relocation request by the President of the NAPBL a final decision, there is no right to review that decision by the Commissioner or PBEC. This, too, has been rejected before.

The PBEC additionally maintains that the Pelicans have no claim for PBEC's refusal to hear the merits of the Pelicans' protest of the Zephyrs' relocation to New Orleans. The PBEC's decision not to hold a hearing rests, PBEC claims, on the ground that the Pelicans were not a club or a league and therefore had no standing under the rules of baseball to protest the decision. This argument found no agreement before, and it does not get any now. It is a rehash.

A. Analysis

The Court remains persuaded by plaintiff's argument that the PBEC should not be dismissed from this action. The PBEC had the authority under the rules of baseball to review for an abuse of discretion President [*25] Moore's decision to award the New Orleans territory to the Zephyrs. Accordingly, the Court DENIES PBEC's motion to be dismissed as a defendant.

V. Antitrust Claim

Defendants at last present something new. They argue that summary judgment is appropriate on plaintiff's state and federal antitrust claims. Defendants refer correctly to a healthy and impressive history of precedent that supports the theme that the business of baseball is exempt from the antitrust law. Defendants note that the Pelicans' reliance on the Piazza case, which held that the baseball exemption is limited to the player reserve system, Piazza v. Major League Baseball, 831 F. Supp. 420 (E.D. Pa. 1993), is misplaced. Specifically, they assert that Piazza is out of step with years of federal jurisprudence and is nothing more than a wrongly decided case. For example, defendant says that the court in Piazza misread Supreme Court authority, ignored a large body of case law and disregarded substantial legislative construction. Although Piazza presents an impressive dissent from precedent, this Court associates itself with the weight of authority.

As to the application of Louisiana [*26] antitrust law to this case, defendants maintain first, that application of state antitrust law would effectively nullify the federal antitrust exemption accorded baseball, Flood v. Kuhn, 316 F. Supp. 271, 279 (S.D.N.Y. 1970), aff'd, 443 F.2d 264 (2d Cir. 1971), aff'd, 407 U.S. 258, 32 L. Ed. 2d 728, 92 S. Ct. 2099 (1972); and second, that application of the myriad of state antitrust laws to professional sports leagues would burden interstate commerce far more than any local law enforcement interest could justify. Flood v. Kuhn, 443 F.2d 264, 268 (2d Cir. 1971), aff'd, 407 U.S. 258, 284, 32 L. Ed. 2d 728, 92 S. Ct. 2099 (1972).

If this Court finds that the federal exemption does apply in this case, plaintiff enterprisingly argues that state antitrust law should nevertheless apply because of the reason behind the federal exemption. Invoking Federal Baseball Club of Baltimore v. National League, 259 U.S. 200, 208, 66 L. Ed. 898, 42 S. Ct. 465 (1922), plaintiff concludes that the original federal antitrust exemption arose from the view that baseball was a purely state affair lacking the [*27] elements of interstate commerce. Plaintiff says that if the reason for the exemption is that baseball is wholly state-connected, then baseball surely cannot argue that it is exempt from state regulation because of the federal exemption.

A. Analysis

1. Federal Antitrust Claim

The Court stated the following in its Order and Reasons, dated April 30, 1993:

The defendants are in the business of baseball. Their business is a legally sanctioned monopoly.(FN6) One of the central features of that monopoly is the power to decide who can play where.

In footnote 6 the Court wrote:

The Supreme Court has repeatedly endorsed the antitrust exemption for the business of baseball. See Flood v. Kuhn, 407 U.S. 258, 32 L. Ed. 2d 728, 92 S. Ct. 2099 (1972); Toolson v. New York Yankees, 346 U.S. 356, 98 L. Ed. 64, 74 S. Ct. 78 (1953); Federal Baseball Club of Baltimore v. National League, 259 U.S. 200, 66 L. Ed. 898, 42 S. Ct. 465 (1922).

Even with the assistance of Piazza, the Court is not convinced that the baseball exemption to the antitrust laws does not apply in this case. Piazza, of course, is not binding [*28] on this Court; and, while the Court does find its reasoning impressive, it does not feel that Piazza warrants ignoring the strong precedent to the contrary. In fact, at least one circuit court has addressed and rejected the same argument that the court in Piazza accepted--that the two references in the Flood case to the reserve system limited the baseball exemption to that aspect of baseball alone. Charles O. Finley & Co. v. Kuhn, 569 F.2d 527, 540-41 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 876, 58 L. Ed. 2d 190, 99 S. Ct. 214 (1978). This Court cannot accept the cramped view of Flood that Piazza takes.⁴

[*29] Accordingly, the Court GRANTS defendants' motion for summary judgment on plaintiff's federal antitrust claim.

2. State Antitrust Claim

The Court also GRANTS defendants' motion for summary judgment on plaintiff's state antitrust claim. Plaintiff's argument ignores the fact that the Supreme Court in Flood implicitly, if not explicitly, affirmed the district court's dismissal of plaintiff's state antitrust claim on the ground that application of state antitrust regulation would conflict with federal policy and would inhibit the national uniformity that is required in any regulation of baseball and its reserve system. Flood, 407 U.S. at 284. In addition, the Court also finds that HNS the [commerce clause forbids inconsistent state antitrust regulation of professional league sports. See e.g. id. at 284 ("as the burden on interstate commerce outweighs the states' interests in regulating baseball's reserve system, the Commerce Clause precludes the application here of state antitrust law").]

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, the Court DENIES the motion for summary judgment on all grounds except plaintiff's state and federal antitrust claims. [*30] The Court GRANTS defendants' motion for summary judgment on plaintiff's state and federal antitrust claims and dismisses those claims.

New Orleans, Louisiana, February 26, 1994.

MARTIN L. C. FELDMAN

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

End of Document

⁴ In Federal Baseball, in 1922, Justice Holmes declared baseball, not just the reserve clause, free of the reach of the antitrust laws. The reserve clause was merely the incident-driven catalyst for the Court's inquiry. Right or wrong, out of step with commercial reality or not, Federal Baseball continues to bind us, as Flood v. Kuhn instructs.

Centennial Sch. Dist. v. Independence Blue Cross

United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania

February 28, 1994, Decided ; February 28, 1994, Filed

CIVIL ACTION NO. 93-3456

Reporter

1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2098 *; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,526

CENTENNIAL SCHOOL DISTRICT v. INDEPENDENCE BLUE CROSS; MEDICAL SERVICE ASSOCIATION OF PENNSYLVANIA, t/a PENNSYLVANIA BLUE SHIELD; KEYSTONE HEALTH PLANS, INC.; and KEYSTONE HEALTH PLAN EAST, INC., t/a KEYSTONE HEALTH PLAN v. CENTENNIAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, BRADLEY S. KIRSCH, ROBERT J. FLUEHR, and EXECUCOMP INSURANCE SERVICES, INC.

Core Terms

Shield, Sherman Act, alleges, insurance business, monopoly power, insurer, healthcare plan, antitrust, percent, monopolization, seventy-five, employees, restraint of trade, McCarran-Ferguson Act, tie, motion to dismiss, cause of action, relevant market, integral part, service plan, policyholder, Defendants', monopoly, argues, plans

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

HN1 Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

In determining a motion to dismiss, all assertions in the complaint are assumed to be true; all reasonable inferences are drawn from the complaint in favor of the plaintiff; and the complaint only may be dismissed if the plaintiff has alleged no set of facts under which they could state a claim.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > McCarran-Ferguson Act Exemption

HN2 Scope, Exemptions

The McCarran-Ferguson Act, 15 U.S.C.S. §§ 1011-1015, insulates the business of insurance from federal antitrust liability in certain circumstances. The Supreme Court has reiterated that the McCarran-Ferguson Act precludes application of federal antitrust laws if the challenged conduct fulfills all of the following three elements: that the conduct (1) is the "business of insurance," (2) is subject to sufficient state regulation, and (3) does not constitute coercion, intimidation, or a boycott.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > McCarran-Ferguson Act Exemption

HN3 Scope, Exemptions

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 1012.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > McCarran-Ferguson Act Exemption

HN4 Scope, Exemptions

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 1013.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > McCarran-Ferguson Act Exemption

HN5 Scope, Exemptions

The status of defendants as insurers does not control whether they are engaged in the "business of insurance." Instead, the "business of insurance" should be read to single out one activity from others, not to distinguish one entity from another. The United States Supreme Court has established a three-part test to evaluate the activity: first, whether the practice has the effect of transferring or spreading a policyholder's risk; second, whether the practice is an integral part of the policy relationship between the insurer and the insured; and third, whether the practice is limited to entities within the insurance industry. All three parts of the test must be met in the affirmative for the activity to constitute the "business of insurance."

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > McCarran-Ferguson Act Exemption

HN6 Scope, Exemptions

Risk spreading among insurance companies does not constitute the "business of insurance."

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Exemptions

Antitrust & Trade Law > Exemptions & Immunities > McCarran-Ferguson Act Exemption

HN7 Scope, Exemptions

Courts have carefully defined the "business of insurance" requirement to effect the limited congressional purposes behind the act, and for the same reasons consistently use a fact-based conduct analysis to determine whether that requirement is met in a particular case.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > General Overview

HN8 [blue download icon] Regulated Practices, Private Actions

The United States Supreme Court has mandated in antitrust cases a concededly rigorous standard; because the proof is largely in the hands of the alleged coconspirators, dismissals prior to giving the plaintiff ample opportunity for discovery should be granted very sparingly.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Claims

HN9 [blue download icon] Actual Monopolization, Claims

To state a claim for monopolization under § 2 of the Sherman Act, plaintiff must allege: (1) the possession of monopoly power in the relevant market and (2) the willful acquisition or maintenance of that power as distinguished from growth or development as a consequence of a superior product, business acumen, or historical accident.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Elements

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

HN10 [blue download icon] Attempts to Monopolize, Elements

To state a claim for attempted monopolization, under § 2 of the Sherman Act, the plaintiff must allege (1) that the defendant has engaged in predatory or anticompetitive conduct with (2) a specific intent to monopolize and (3) a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

HN11 [blue download icon] Actual Monopolization, Claims

15 U.S.C.S. § 2.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

HN12 [blue download icon] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

A leveraging case requires allegations of more than a "competitive advantage" in the secondary market.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Complaints > General Overview

HN13 [down] Pleadings, Complaints

It is axiomatic that alternate forms of pleading may be pursued. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8\(e\)\(2\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > General Overview

HN14 [down] Sherman Act, Scope

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 1.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > Sherman Act Violations

HN15 [down] Sherman Act, Scope

To state a claim for tying, plaintiff must allege (1) a tie (conditioning the sale of one product on the purchase of another), (2) that the seller has economic power as to the tying product to restrain competition in the tied product market, and an effect on interstate commerce.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Purchasers > General Overview

HN16 [down] Regulated Practices, Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

See 73 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 201-9.2 (1992).

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Purchasers > General Overview

HN17 [down] Private Actions, Purchasers

In an action brought under Pennsylvania's Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Law, common law elements of fraud require that a purchase must have been made in reliance upon a misrepresentation or other alleged deceptive practice.

Torts > ... > Contracts > Intentional Interference > Elements

HN18 [down] Intentional Interference, Elements

One who intentionally and improperly interferes with the performance of a contract (except a contract to marry) between another and a third person by inducing or otherwise causing the third person not to perform the contract, is subject to liability to the other for the pecuniary loss resulting to the other from the third person's failure to perform the contract.

Torts > ... > Contracts > Intentional Interference > Elements

HN19 [] Intentional Interference, Elements

Therefore, in order to allege a claim, of tortious interference with a contract, a plaintiff must show (1) that the acts complained of were willful and intentional; (2) that they were calculated to cause damage to the plaintiff and its business; (3) that the acts were done with the unlawful purpose of causing damage and loss to the plaintiff without right or justifiable cause on the part of the defendant; and (4) that actual damage and loss resulted.

Torts > ... > Contracts > Intentional Interference > Defenses

HN20 [] Intentional Interference, Defenses

One who intentionally causes a third person not to enter into a prospective contractual relation with another who is his competitor does not interfere improperly with the other's relation if (a) the relation concerns a matter involved in the competition between the actor and the other and (b) the actor does not employ wrongful means and (c) his action does not create or continue an unlawful restraint of trade and (d) his purpose is at least in part to advance his interest in competing with the other.

Counsel: [*1] For CENTENNIAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated, PLAINTIFF: WAYNE M. THOMAS, JOSEPH C. KOHN, KOHN, SAVETT, KLEIN & GRAF, P.C., PHILADELPHIA, PA. ALLAN D. GOULDING, JR., CURTIN & HEEFNER, MORRISVILLE, PA.

For INDEPENDENCE BLUE CROSS, MEDICAL SERVICE ASSOCIATION OF PENNSYLVANIA t/a PENNSYLVANIA BLUE SHIELD, KEYSTONE HEALTH PLANS, INC., KEYSTONE HEALTH PLAN, EAST, INC. t/a KEYSTONE HEALTH PLAN, DEFENDANTS: MARC J. SONNENFELD, MORGAN, LEWIS & BOCKIUS, PHILA, PA. MICHAEL F. CLAYTON, MORGAN, LEWIS & BOCKIUS, WASHINGTON, DC.

For INDEPENDENCE BLUE CROSS, MEDICAL SERVICE ASSOCIATION OF PENNSYLVANIA t/a PENNSYLVANIA BLUE SHIELD, KEYSTONE HEALTH PLANS, INC., KEYSTONE HEALTH PLAN, EAST, INC. t/a KEYSTONE HEALTH PLAN, COUNTER-CLAIMANTS: MARC J. SONNENFELD, MORGAN, LEWIS & BOCKIUS, PHILA, PA. MICHAEL F. CLAYTON, MORGAN, LEWIS & BOCKIUS, WASHINGTON, DC.

For CENTENNIAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, COUNTER-DEFENDANT: JOSEPH C. KOHN, KOHN, SAVETT, KLEIN & GRAF, P.C., PHILADELPHIA, PA. PHILLIP B. SILVERMAN, HARRIS & SILVERMAN, PHILA, PA. For BRADLEY S. KIRSCH, COUNTER-DEFENDANT: DENNIS J. O'LEARY, WHITE AND WILLIAMS, PHILA, PA. ALLAN D. GOULDING, JR., CURTIN & HEEFNER, [*2] MORRISVILLE, PA. PHILLIP B. SILVERMAN, HARRIS & SILVERMAN, PHILA, PA. For ROBERT J. FLUEHR, EXECUCOMP INSURANCE SERVICES, INC., COUNTER-DEFENDANTS: JAMES M. PRAHLER, MARGOLIS, EDELSTEIN & SCHERLIS, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Judges: Padova, J.

Opinion by: PADOVA

Opinion

MEMORANDUM

Padova, J.

I. Introduction

Plaintiff, Centennial School District ("Centennial"),¹ has filed suit alleging a misuse of monopoly power in violation of § 2 of the Sherman Act (Count I); restraint of trade in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act (Count II); attempted monopolization in violation of § 2 of the Sherman Act (Count III); illegal tying in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act (Count IV); common law restraint of trade (Count V); deceptive trade practices in violation of the Pennsylvania Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Law (Count VI); and tortious interference with contractual and business relationships (Count VII). The defendants are Independence Blue Cross ("Blue Cross"), Medical Service Association of Pennsylvania, t/a Pennsylvania Blue Shield ("Blue Shield"), Keystone Health Plans, Inc., and Keystone Health Plan East, Inc., t/a Keystone Health Plan ("Keystone"). Defendants have filed a motion to dismiss the [*3] complaint. For the following reasons, the motion will be granted in part and denied in part.

The complaint alleges the following facts, which must be accepted as true in the context of a motion to dismiss. Centennial provides two types of health care plans to its employees: (1) fee for service plans, which provide access to physicians and partially or completely reimburse the employee, and (2) prepaid plans, known as health maintenance organizations (HMOs), which provide a broader range of care by a pool of doctors. Complaint at PP 16-20. Federal law mandates that Centennial offer its employees both a Preferred Provider Plan or Preferred Provider Organization ("PPO plan") and a pure HMO plan. Id. at P 31.² In addition, plaintiff's labor agreements with employees require it to offer fee for service plans. Id. at P 35. Blue Cross and Blue Shield [*4] sell plans to employers, have a monopoly power in the "fee for service health care plan market in Southeastern Pennsylvania," and "dominate the overall market for health care plans in Southeastern Pennsylvania, which market includes both fee for service and HMO plans," with a dangerous probability of monopolization of the overall market. Id. at PP 21-24. Defendant Keystone is a for-profit subsidiary owned jointly by Blue Cross and Blue Shield. Id. at P 25.

[*5] In February of 1993, defendants threatened to terminate Centennial's fee for service plan unless seventy-five percent of Centennial's employees enrolled in Blue Cross/Blue Shield. Defendants permit enrollment in the Keystone HMO to count toward this minimum participation rate. Centennial prefers another HMO, which it alleges is less costly. Id. at P 33.

II. Standard of Review

HN1 [↑] In determining a motion to dismiss, all assertions in the complaint are assumed to be true; all reasonable inferences are drawn from the complaint in favor of the plaintiff; and the complaint only may be dismissed if the plaintiff has alleged no set of facts under which they could state a claim. See, e.g., Kehr Packages, Inc. v. Fidelcor, Inc., 926 F.2d 1406, 1410 (3d Cir.), cert. denied, 115 L. Ed. 2d 1007, 111 S. Ct. 2839 (1991). Defendants have moved for dismissal on two grounds: first, that their activities are exempt from antitrust liability under the McCarran-Ferguson Act and second, that even if not exempt, plaintiff has failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. I will first address the applicability of the McCarran-Ferguson Act and [*6] then turn to the individual claims.

III. McCarran-Ferguson Act

¹ The Complaint is styled as a class action, and a motion for class certification is pending. For purposes of this motion, however, Centennial is the only plaintiff.

² The complaint alleges that PPOs provide more limited access to health care than fee for service plans. Complaint at P 19. However, in the brief opposing the motion to dismiss, plaintiff states that the complaint incorrectly described PPOs and that the correct term for the plan described in the complaint would be the Individual Practice Association ("IPA") form of an HMO. Pltf's Opp. Mot. Dis. at 4 n.3. Although this terminology problem is not material to the resolution of the motion, plaintiff presumably will seek to amend the complaint to resolve the issue.

HN2[] The McCarran-Ferguson Act, 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 1011-1015 \(West 1993\), insulates the business of insurance from federal antitrust liability in certain circumstances.³ The Supreme Court recently reiterated that the McCarran-Ferguson Act precludes application of federal antitrust laws if the challenged conduct fulfills all of the following three elements: that the conduct (1) is the "business of insurance," (2) is subject to sufficient state regulation, and (3) does not constitute coercion, intimidation, or a boycott. Hartford Fire Insurance Co. v. California, 125 L. Ed. 2d 612, 113 S. Ct. 2891, 2900 \(1993\).

[*7] The activity being challenged -- in this case, the minimum participation requirement -- must be evaluated under the McCarran-Ferguson Act. HN5[] The status of defendants as insurers does not control whether they are engaged in the "business of insurance." Instead, "the business of insurance" should be read to single out one activity from others, not to distinguish one entity from another." Id. at 2901. The Supreme Court has established a three-part test to evaluate the activity: "first, whether the practice has the effect of transferring or spreading a policyholder's risk; second, whether the practice is an integral part of the policy relationship between the insurer and the insured; and third, whether the practice is limited to entities within the insurance industry." Id. (quoting Union Labor Life Ins. Co. v. Pireno, 458 U.S. 119, 129, 102 S. Ct. 3002, 3009, 73 L. Ed. 2d 647 \(1982\) (emphasis in Pireno)). All three parts of the test must be met in the affirmative for the activity to constitute the "business of insurance."

Defendants argue first, that such agreements are a traditionally recognized way of spreading [*8] risk. Defendants argue that older and ill employees tend to opt for Blue Cross/Blue Shield coverage (a process known as "adverse selection"), and that without the participation requirement the companies would have an undesirable "risk pool" compared to the "risk pool" of employees in general. Defendants assert that preventing adverse selection reduces premiums and keeps the companies viable.

Second, defendants argue that the minimum participation requirement is solely an integral part of the policy relationship between the insurer and the insured. Third, they contend that the activity does not go beyond the insurance market. For support, defendants rely heavily upon Ocean State Physicians Health Plan, Inc. v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Rhode Island, 883 F.2d 1101 \(1st Cir. 1989\), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1027, 108 L. Ed. 2d 610, 110 S. Ct. 1473 (1990). Defendants argue that the minimum participation requirement therefore constitutes the "business of insurance." However, defendants' position is incorrect.

³ HN3[] The Act provides in relevant sections that:

- (a) The business of insurance, and every person engaged therein, shall be subject to the laws of the several States which relate to the regulation or taxation of such business.
- (b) No Act of Congress shall be construed to invalidate, impair, or supersede any law enacted by any State for the purpose of regulating the business of insurance, or which imposes a fee or tax upon such business, unless such Act specifically relates to the business of insurance: Provided, That after June 30, 1948, the Act of July 2, 1890, as amended, known as the Sherman Act, and the Act of October 15, 1914, as amended, known as the Clayton Act, and the Act of September 26, 1914, known as the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, shall be applicable to the business of insurance to the extent that such business is not regulated by State law.

15 U.S.C.A. § 1012 \(West 1976\). HN4[]

- (a) Until June 30, 1948, the Act of July 2, 1890, as amended, known as the Sherman Act, and the act of October 15, 1914, as amended, known as the Clayton Act, and the Act of September 26, 1914, known as the Federal Trade Commission Act, and the act of June 19, 1936, known as the Robinson-Patman Anti-Discrimination Act, shall not apply to the business of insurance or to acts in the conduct thereof.

- (b) Nothing contained in this chapter shall render the said Sherman Act inapplicable to any agreement to boycott, coerce, or intimidate, or act of boycott, coercion, or intimidation.

15 U.S.C.A. § 1013 \(West 1976\).

In Ocean State, the Court of Appeals affirmed the District Court's grant of a JNOV following a jury verdict for plaintiff. Among other things, the court [*9] determined that the plaintiff "failed to show that Blue Cross' actions were anything other than legitimate acts of competition." Id. at 1105. In contrast, here I must accept as true the allegations of plaintiff's complaint, which clearly state that Blue Cross is acting to destroy competition. Plaintiff has alleged that defendants are not engaged in risk-spreading activities, but instead pursue a monopolization strategy. See, e.g., State of Maryland v. Blue Cross and Blue Shield, 620 F. Supp. 907 \(D. Md. 1985\) (holding that whether horizontal market allocation was "the business of insurance" could not be determined on a motion for summary judgment). Furthermore, at this point in the proceedings, it is not clear that the practice is an integral part of the relationship between the policy-holder and the insurer. See SEC v. National Securities, Inc., 393 U.S. 453, 460, 89 S. Ct. 564, 568-69, 21 L. Ed. 2d 668 \(1969\) ("The relationship between insurer and insured, the type of policy which could be issued, its reliability, interpretation, and enforcement -- these were the core of the 'business of' [*10] insurance' . . . Whatever the exact scope of the statutory term, it is clear where the focus was -- it was on the relationship between the insurance company and the policyholder."). See also Anglin v. Blue Shield of Virginia, 693 F.2d 315 \(4th Cir. 1982\) (holding that refusal to offer a specific type of policy was between the policy holder and insurer and constituted the "business of insurance"); American Standard Life & Accident Ins. v. U.R.L., Inc., 701 F. Supp. 527 \(M.D. Pa. 1988\) (holding that HN6[↑]] risk spreading among insurance companies does not constitute the "business of insurance."). Instead, the minimum participation requirement may only be an integral part of the relationship between defendants and the policyholder's employer, and that it may not be integral to an individual's policy that seventy-five percent of other policy holders subscribe with the same insurance provider. Of course, discovery may show that the requirement is an integral part of the insurance relationship because it permits the insurer to offer specific terms to the policyholder (for example, by keeping costs down). Nevertheless, at this stage [*11] of the proceedings that determination cannot be made. See, e.g., Reazin v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Kansas, 663 F. Supp. 1360, 1402 \(D. Kan. 1987\) HN7[↑]] ("Courts have carefully defined the 'business of insurance' requirement to effect the limited congressional purposes behind the act, and for the same reasons consistently use a fact-based conduct analysis to determine whether that requirement is met in a particular case"), aff'd, 899 F.2d 951 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 497 U.S. 1005, 111 L. Ed. 2d 752, 110 S. Ct. 3241 \(1990\).

Additionally, the parties dispute issues regarding the characterization of the seventy-five percent minimum participation agreement and whether it is a risk-spreading device. For example, defendants argue in their brief in support of the Motion to Dismiss that "as a condition of underwriting group health insurance, some minimum participation requirement becomes an obvious necessity." Memorandum at 9 (emphasis in original). Even if this is true, I cannot determine, in the context of a motion to dismiss, that the 75% level (contrasted with 25% or 50%, for example) is a necessary element of doing [*12] business instead of a pretextual anticompetitive device, as plaintiff alleges. Plaintiff also questions the necessity of the participation requirement, because defendants did not enforce it until 1992.⁴ Because I cannot determine now that the challenged activity constitutes the "business of insurance," I need not determine whether there is sufficient state regulation or whether the challenged activity constitutes a boycott or other coercion. At this stage of the proceedings, the McCarran-Ferguson Act therefore affords no shield to defendants, and I turn to the individual antitrust claims.

IV. Failure to State Antitrust Claims

Defendants argue that even if the McCarran-Ferguson Act does not immunize their conduct, plaintiff has failed to state a claim for a violation of federal antitrust law. In this context, I note that HN8[↑]] the Supreme Court [*13] has mandated in antitrust cases a "concededly rigorous standard" and that because "the proof is largely in the hands of the alleged coconspirators, dismissals prior to giving the plaintiff ample opportunity for discovery should be granted very sparingly." Hospital Bldg Co. v. Trustees of Rex Hosp., 425 U.S. 738, 96 S. Ct. 1848, 1853, 48 L. Ed. 2d 338 \(1976\). With this guidance, I will examine the federal antitrust claims.

⁴The parties dispute when the minimum participation requirement was adopted by the defendants, but there does not seem to be any dispute that it was not enforced until 1992.

A. Count I and Count III: Claims Under Section 2 of the Sherman Act

Defendants contend that these counts fail to state a claim under section 2 of the Sherman Act.⁵ HN9[↑] To state a claim for monopolization under section 2 of the Sherman Act, plaintiff must allege: "(1) the possession of monopoly power in the relevant market and (2) the willful acquisition or maintenance of that power as distinguished from growth or development as a consequence of a superior product, business acumen, or historical accident." Fineman v. Armstrong World Indus., 980 F.2d 171, 197 (3d Cir. 1992) (quoting United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 570-71, 86 S. Ct. 1698, 1704, 16 L. Ed. 2d 778 (1966)), [*14] cert. denied, S. Ct. (1993). HN10[↑] To state a claim for attempted monopolization, the plaintiff must allege "(1) that the defendant has engaged in predatory or anticompetitive conduct with (2) a specific intent to monopolize and (3) a dangerous probability of achieving monopoly power." Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 122 L. Ed. 2d 247, 113 S. Ct. 884, 890-91 (1993). Defendants contend that plaintiff has not met either standard.

Defendants assert that plaintiff has failed adequately to allege possession of monopoly power in the relevant market. Count I alleges a violation based on "misuse of monopoly power." Defendants argue that the complaint asserts that defendants have [*15] a monopoly in the "market for fee for service health care plans," but that it alleges anticompetitive conduct in the "the health maintenance organization market and the overall health care plan market." Defendants urge that misuse of monopoly power is simply another term for monopoly leveraging, a theory doomed to fail in this case. However, Defendants' argument depends upon a misconstruction of Fineman. In that case, the plaintiff had failed to prove that the defendant was able to use power in one market to obtain a monopoly or a dangerous probability of monopoly in another market. Fineman, 980 F.2d at 203.

Plaintiff's complaint characterizes Count I as a "misuse of monopoly power." As plaintiff apparently concedes, this is essentially a claim of leveraging; that is, alleging that the monopoly power in one market (the fee for service market) is being used to destroy competition in a second market (the overall market for health care plans). HN12[↑] A leveraging case requires allegations of more than a "competitive advantage" in the secondary market. Id. at 204. Plaintiff argues that the complaint alleges that the fee [*16] for service monopolist is refusing to deal with employers unless the employers terminate some dealings with HMOs. See Reazin v. Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Kansas, 899 F.2d 951 (10th Cir.) (defendants changed the allowable payments to hospitals to attempt to destroy a competitor), cert denied, 497 U.S. 1005, 111 L. Ed. 2d 752, 110 S. Ct. 3241 (1990). Plaintiff also argues that it is premature in any event to define the market at this point in the litigation.

Plaintiff's complaint does allege a monopoly in fee for service plans and a dangerous probability of obtaining monopoly power in the overall market for health care plans in Southeastern Pennsylvania, although it is not a model of clarity in this regard. Complaint at PP 4, 5, 40. Furthermore, plaintiff has alleged specific acts which it contends creates the probability of success by defendants in the secondary market: the enforcement of the minimum participation requirement. Defendants' contention that separate markets for fee for service and HMO plans would preclude, as a matter of law, an overall health care plan market also fails; it is generally accepted that submarkets may exist. See, e.g., [*17] Fineman, 980 F.2d at 199. Count I will not be dismissed.

Count III alleges attempted monopolization in violation of section 2. Defendants raise similar arguments regarding the inconsistency of allegations in Count III as with Count I. Defendant complains that plaintiff inconsistently alleges the relevant markets in different counts of the complaint. In other words, defendants argue that plaintiff has not identified one relevant market, but instead several mutually exclusive ones. However, HN13[↑] it is axiomatic that alternate forms of pleading may be pursued. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 8\(e\)\(2\).⁶ Plaintiff has alleged a relevant market in

⁵ HN11[↑] Section 2 of the Sherman Act provides in relevant part that "every person that shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce . . . shall be deemed guilty of a felony." 15 U.S.C.A. §2.

⁶ For the same reason, plaintiff's allegations that Blue Cross and Blue Shield wield monopolistic power and yet that they have combined to violate section 1 of the Sherman Act both may proceed at this stage.

Count III of the complaint (the market for health care plans in Southeastern Pennsylvania), and also alleged a specific intent to monopolize and a dangerous probability of success. Therefore, Count III may proceed as well.

[*18] B. Count II: Section 1 of the Sherman Act

Defendants argue for the dismissal of Count II of the complaint, which is predicated upon Section 1 of the Sherman Act.⁷ This Count alleges that Blue Cross and Blue Shield have conspired to refuse to sell to plaintiff. Complaint P 44. According to defendants, "because the alleged Blue Cross/Blue Shield joint activity does not bring together disparate economic interests that would otherwise be in competition with one another," Defendants' Memorandum at 26, no Section 1 claim has been stated. In support of this statement, defendants rely upon Copperweld Corp. v. Independence Tube Corp., 467 U.S. 752, 81 L. Ed. 2d 628, 104 S. Ct. 2731 (1984), in which the Supreme Court held that a parent and its wholly-owned subsidiary cannot conspire for purposes of the Sherman Act. Defendants draw from the opinion that the underlying purpose of the Sherman Act is to promote independent economic interests.

[*19] However, Plaintiff responds persuasively that Copperweld and its progeny are inapplicable and that defendants have cited no cases applying the standard of "independent sources of economic power." Plaintiff has alleged in this count that Blue Cross and Blue Shield are separate companies and that therefore they can conspire or combine in violation of Section 1. As plaintiff has noted, until 1 July 1991, Blue Cross and Blue Shield operated competing HMOs, and that joint ventures (i.e., Keystone) between competitors or potential competitors may violate the Sherman Act. See, e.g., Citizen Publishing Co. v. United States, 394 U.S. 131, 22 L. Ed. 2d 148, 89 S. Ct. 927 (1969). Count II may proceed.

C. Count IV: Tying Under Section 1

HN15 To state a claim for tying, plaintiff must allege (1) a tie (conditioning the sale of one product on the purchase of another), (2) that the seller has economic power as to the tying product to restrain competition in the tied product market, and an effect on interstate commerce. Bogosian v. Gulf Oil Corp., 561 F.2d 434, 449 (3d Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1086, 55 L. Ed. 2d 791, 98 S. Ct. 1280 (1978). Defendants assert [*20] the plaintiff has not adequately alleged the existence of a tie, and therefore seek dismissal of this count. Defendants contend that plaintiff has not and cannot allege that defendants conditioned the sale of their fee for service plan on the purchase of the HMO plan. If the seventy-five percent requirement is met through the purchase of fee for service products, say defendants, then the HMO need never be purchased at all.

Plaintiff argues that defendants have tried to force it to give up the HMO it wants in order to meet the seventy-five percent participation requirement. It argues that coercion to buy the tied product is sufficient; however, in this case no tie has been demonstrated.

Here, the first element of tying has not been met. Defendants have not conditioned the sale of Blue Cross/Blue Shield on the purchase of the Keystone HMO. The minimum purchase requirement may be satisfied in any way: by the purchase of Blue Cross/Blue Shield policies alone, by the purchase of Keystone HMO alone, or by any combination of the two. Plaintiff concedes that if defendants imposed the seventy-five percent requirement only as to Blue Cross/Blue Shield, there would be no tie. Plff. Opp. at [*21] 47 n.25. It is true that coercion may constitute illegal tying, see Jefferson Parish Hosp. Dist. No. 2 v. Hyde, 466 U.S. 2, 9, 104 S. Ct. 1551, 1556, 80 L. Ed. 2d 2 (1984). However, the situation here is distinguishable because the minimum participation agreement does not require purchase of the HMO. If defendants would not commit a tie by requiring seventy-five percent of plaintiff's employees to purchase Blue Cross/Blue Shield, then permitting the purchase of the HMO to count toward that minimum cannot constitute a tie. The other twenty-five percent is still "open" and any HMO could be offered to those employees. There is no package deal required here. Count IV therefore will be dismissed.

⁷ HN14 Section 1 of the Sherman Act provides, in pertinent part, that "every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States . . . is declared to be illegal . . ." 15 U.S.C.A. § 1.

V. Pendent State Law Claims

In addition to the federal antitrust claims, plaintiff has asserted several state law causes of action as well. Defendants seek dismissal of those claims, and I address them now.

A. Count V: Restraint of Trade

Defendants have proffered no separate argument against the restraint of trade count, but instead argue that the common-law restraint of trade claim fails for the same reasons that the Sherman Act claim fails. Because I [*22] have held that plaintiff has stated a cause of action under the Sherman Act, the claim for restraint of trade may proceed.

B. Count VI: Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Law

Plaintiff alleges a cause of action under Pennsylvania's Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Law (UTPCPL), which provides:

HN16[Any person who purchases or leases goods or services primarily for personal, family or household purposes and thereby suffers any ascertainable loss of money or property, real or personal, as a result of the use or employment by any person of a method, act or practice declared unlawful by section 3 of this act, may bring a private action, to recover actual damages or one hundred dollars ($ 100), whichever is greater.

73 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 201-9.2 (1992).

Plaintiff argues that it has stated a claim because it alleges that Blue Cross misrepresented the purpose of the seventy-five percent minimum participation requirement. However, even if that is so, it is clear that plaintiff did not purchase based on the alleged misrepresentation. Plaintiff apparently wants no part of the minimum participation requirement, regardless of its represented purpose. Without [*23] any allegation that the plaintiff purchased in reliance upon misrepresentations, there can be no cause of action under the UTPCPL. See, e.g., Prime Meats, Inc. v. Yochim, 422 Pa. Super. 460, 619 A.2d 769, 774 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1993) (holding in HN17[] an action brought under the UTPCPL that "common law elements of fraud require that a purchase must have been made in reliance upon a misrepresentation or other alleged deceptive practice."). Count VI therefore will be dismissed.

C. Count VII: Tortious Interference with Contractual Business Relationships

Tortious interference with contractual business relations is governed in Pennsylvania by the Restatement \(Second\) of Torts § 766 (1979):

HN18[One who intentionally and improperly interferes with the performance of a contract (except a contract to marry) between another and a third person by inducing or otherwise causing the third person not to perform the contract, is subject to liability to the other for the pecuniary loss resulting to the other from the third person's failure to perform the contract.

Adler, Barish, Daniels, Levin and Creskoff v. Epstein, 482 Pa. 416, 393 A.2d 1175 (Pa. 1978), cert. [*24] dismissed, 442 U.S. 907, 99 S. Ct. 2817 (1979), quoted in U.S. Healthcare v. Blue Cross of Greater Philadelphia, 898 F.2d 914, 925 (3d Cir. 1990).

HN19Therefore, in order to allege such a claim, a plaintiff must show "(1) that the acts complained of were willful and intentional; (2) that they were calculated to cause damage to the plaintiff and its business; (3) that the acts were done with the unlawful purpose of causing damage and loss to the plaintiff without right or justifiable cause on the part of the defendant; and (4) that actual damage and loss resulted." [Advanced Power Systems v. Hi-Tech Systems, 801 F. Supp. 1450, 1458 (E.D. Pa. 1992) (quoting Boyce v. Smith-Edwards-Dunlap Co., 398 Pa. Super. 345, 580 A.2d 1382, 1390 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1990)).

Plaintiff alleges that it has contractual relations with HMOs other than Keystone, and that defendants have interfered with those relationships. Complaint at P 71. Defendants maintain that they are privileged under Pennsylvania law because competition cannot give rise to a tortious interference claim. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 768,⁸ Franklin Music v. American Broadcasting Companies, 616 F.2d 528 (3d Cir. 1979), Gilbert v. Otterson, 379 Pa. Super. 481, 550 A.2d 550, 554 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1988). However, whether or not defendants have employed wrongful means is precisely the issue in this suit. Because I have found that plaintiff has sufficiently stated a cause of action predicated upon the allegedly unlawful actions of defendant, this count may proceed as well.

[*26] An appropriate order follows.

ORDER

AND NOW, this 28th day of February, 1994, upon consideration of Defendants' motion to dismiss (Document No. 5), the responses thereto, and arguments of counsel in connection therewith,

It is hereby ORDERED that the Motion is GRANTED IN PART AND DENIED IN PART. Counts IV and VI of Plaintiff's complaint are hereby DISMISSED. In all other respects, the Motion is DENIED.

BY THE COURT:

JOHN R. PADOVA, J.

End of Document

⁸ Section 768 provides that:

HN20 [One who intentionally causes a third person not to enter into a prospective contractual relation with another who is his competitor . . . does not interfere improperly with the other's relation if]

- (a) the relation concerns a matter involved in the competition between the actor and the other and
- (b) the actor does not employ wrongful means and
- (c) his action does not create or continue an unlawful restraint of trade and
- (d) his purpose is at least in part to advance his interest in competing with the other.

Restatement \(Second\) of Torts § 768.

Massachusetts Sch. of Law v. ABA

United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania

March 11, 1994, Decided ; March 11, 1994, Filed, Entered

CIVIL ACTION No. 93-6206

Reporter

846 F. Supp. 374 *; 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2924 ; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,538

MASSACHUSETTS SCHOOL OF LAW AT ANDOVER, INC. v. AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION, et al.

Subsequent History: [\[1\]](#) Motion for Reconsideration Granted May 31, 1994, Reported at: 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7219.

Core Terms

individual defendant, accreditation, contacts, personal jurisdiction, law school, co-conspirator, conspiracy, cause of action, defendants', exercise of personal jurisdiction, lack of personal jurisdiction, conspired, sufficient contact, forum state, organizational

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > ... > In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction > In Personam Actions > General Overview

HN1 In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction, In Personam Actions

Before a federal court can exercise personal jurisdiction over any individual defendants, there must be a constitutionally acceptable relationship between that defendant and the forum. Once a defendant challenges the exercise of personal jurisdiction, the plaintiff has the burden of proving with reasonable particularity that sufficient contacts to support jurisdiction exist between the defendant and the forum state. The plaintiff must establish a basis for either specific jurisdiction or general jurisdiction.

Civil Procedure > ... > In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction > In Personam Actions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction > In Personam Actions > Long Arm Jurisdiction

HN2 In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction, In Personam Actions

Fed. R. Civ. P. 4 allows a federal district court to exercise personal jurisdiction over out-of-state defendants to the extent allowed by the law of the state where the court is located.

Civil Procedure > ... > In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction > In Personam Actions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction > In Personam Actions > Long Arm Jurisdiction

HN3 [down] In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction, In Personam Actions

Pennsylvania has two statutes that confer jurisdiction over persons. 42 Pa. Cons. Stat. §§ 5301, 5322. General jurisdiction over an individual defendant is based on the individual's presence or domicile in Pennsylvania when served or on the individual's consent to jurisdiction. 42 Pa. Cons. Stat. § 5301\(a\)\(1\) (1993). Specific jurisdiction over a person is based on the cause of action arising from the person's activities and contacts in Pennsylvania. 42 Pa. Cons. Stat. § 5322\(a\) (1993).

Civil Procedure > ... > Jurisdiction > In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction > Constitutional Limits

Civil Procedure > ... > In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction > In Personam Actions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction > In Personam Actions > Minimum Contacts

HN4 [down] In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction, Constitutional Limits

Pennsylvania provides for jurisdiction to the fullest extent allowed by the United States Constitution and to be based on the most minimum contact with Pennsylvania allowed by the United States Constitution. 42 Pa. Cons. Stat. § 5322\(b\). With regard to specific jurisdiction, due process is satisfied when a cause of action is related to or arises out of the defendant's purposeful contacts with the forum state so that the defendant could reasonably expect to be haled into court in that forum. It is not enough to warrant the exercise of personal jurisdiction that a defendant is being sued in a forum where he or she had some contact. Rather, a court must examine the relationship among the defendant, the forum, and the litigation.

Civil Procedure > ... > In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction > In Personam Actions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction > In Personam Actions > Substantial Contacts

HN5 [down] In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction, In Personam Actions

Co-conspirator jurisdiction is not a separate basis of jurisdiction apart from general or specific jurisdiction. Rather, it is based on the contacts-with-the-forum analysis. The difference is that a court looks not only at the defendant's forum contacts, but at those of the defendant's resident co-conspirators. The court imputes the contacts of the resident co-conspirator over whom it has jurisdiction to the foreign co-conspirator to see if there are sufficient contacts to exercise jurisdiction over the latter.

Civil Procedure > ... > In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction > In Personam Actions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction > In Personam Actions > Substantial Contacts

HN6 [down] In Rem & Personal Jurisdiction, In Personam Actions

Merely belonging to a civil conspiracy does not make a member subject to the jurisdiction of every other member's forum. Rather, there must also be substantial acts in furtherance of the conspiracy within the forum, of which the out-of-state co-conspirator was or should have been aware.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Jurisdiction

HN7 [down arrow] Clayton Act, Jurisdiction

The Clayton Act authorizes that an antitrust suit against a corporation can be brought in the judicial district where it is an inhabitant and also in any district where the corporation is found or transacts business. 15 U.S.C.S. § 22. This provision for nationwide service of process means that a federal district court's jurisdiction is coextensive with the boundaries of the United States. This Clayton Act provision applies only to corporate, not individual, antitrust defendants.

Counsel: FOR MASSACHUSETTS SCHOOL OF LAW AT ANDOVER, INC., PLAINTIFF: HAROLD E. KOHN, KOHN, SAVETT, KLEIN & GRAF, P.C., PHILADELPHIA, PA. JOANNE ZACK, KOHN, NAST & GRAF, P.C., PHILADELPHIA, PA. LAWRENCE R. VELVEL, ANDOVER, MA. MICHAEL L. COYNE, ANDOVER, MA. CONSTANCE L. RUDNICK, ANDOVER, MA. PETER M. MALAGUTI, ANDOVER, MA. JOSEPH E. DEVLIN, ANDOVER, MA.

FOR AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION, DEFENDANT: L. SUZANNE FORBIS, PEPPER, HAMILTON & SCHEETZ, PHILA, PA. BARBARA W. MATHER, PEPPER, HAMILTON & SCHEETZ, PHILA, PA. H. BLAIR WHITE, SIDLEY AND AUSTIN, CHICAGO, IL. DAVID T. PRITIKIN, SIDLEY AND AUSTIN, CHICAGO, IL. WILLIAM H. BAUMGARTNER, SIDLEY AND AUSTIN, CHICAGO, IL. FOR LAW SCHOOL ADMISSION SERVICES, INC., LAW SCHOOL ADMISSION COUNCIL, DEFENDANTS: JOSEPH B. G. FAY, JAY H. CALVERT, JR., MORGAN, LEWIS & BOCKIUS, PHILA, PA. MICHAEL F. CLAYTON, MORGAN, LEWIS & BOCKIUS, WASHINGTON, DC. SCOTT A. STEMPER, MORGAN, LEWIS AND BOCKIUS, WASHINGTON, DC. H. BLAIR WHITE, SIDLEY AND AUSTIN, CHICAGO, IL. DAVID T. PRITIKIN, SIDLEY AND AUSTIN, CHICAGO, IL. WILLIAM H. BAUMGARTNER, SIDLEY AND AUSTIN, CHICAGO, IL. FOR THE ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN LAW SCHOOLS, INC., CARL C. MONK, DEFENDANTS: JACQUELINE R. DEPEW, ROBERT [\[2\]](#) A. BURGOYNE, DAVID M. FOSTER, SALLY P. PAXTON, FULBRIGHT & JAWORSKI L.L.P., WASHINGTON, DC.

Judges: Ditter, Jr.

Opinion by: J. WILLIAM DITTER, JR.

Opinion

[*376] MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

Ditter, J.

Before me is a case involving law school accreditation and alleged violations of federal antitrust law by four organizational defendants and 22 individual defendants. Plaintiff avers in its complaint that the American Bar Association ("ABA") monopolizes the accreditation process. Defendants, plaintiff asserts, have conspired to fix the salaries of law school faculties and administrators; restrict their output; raise law school tuitions; and foreclose from legal education people in lower socio-economic classes. Twenty-one ¹ of the individual defendants have filed a motion to dismiss the claims against them for lack of personal jurisdiction and improper venue. I will grant their motion.

¹ The 22nd individual defendant, Carl C. Monk, has filed (with the American Association of Law Schools) a separate motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim against either Monk or AALS and for lack of personal jurisdiction and improper venue as to Monk. That motion will be addressed in another opinion.

[3] I. FACTS

For the purposes of the present jurisdictional motion the following allegations contained in the complaint will be accepted as true. Plaintiff, Massachusetts School of Law at Andover, Inc. ("MSL") is a non-profit corporation that operates a law school in Andover, Massachusetts. The law school opened its doors in 1988.

MSL asserts it endeavors to provide high quality, low-cost legal education to people who might otherwise be shut out of more traditional law schools. The law school prides itself on having a unique admissions procedure that encourages applicants from mid-life and from lower economic classes and on having a tuition that is currently $ 9,000 per year. MSL says it achieves its goals by policies and practices that it admits are in direct conflict with certain ABA accreditation criteria. MSL asserts that the ABA requires law schools to utilize the LSAT in admissions decisions, which MSL does not do. The ABA does not count adjunct faculty in computing required student-faculty ratios; MSL makes extensive use of adjunct professors, which keeps salary costs down, but does not allow MSL to reach the ABA-required ratio. The ABA criteria require a law school's library to [4] have a certain number of hardbound volumes; MSL relies heavily on an electronic library.

MSL sought accreditation from the ABA. Such accreditation is crucial, MSL contends, because the vast majority of jurisdictions (41 states plus the District of Columbia) require that a prospective bar applicant be a graduate of an ABA-accredited law school before he or she can sit for that state's bar examination.² In 1993 the ABA denied MSL's application for accreditation.

MSL maintains that the ABA's accreditation criteria are anticompetitive and that the ABA has abused its monopoly power over accreditation. MSL asserts that defendants' actions have caused it to suffer competitive injury and loss of prestige. It avers that it has difficulty competing for students as a result of the ABA's denying [5] accreditation, and it has suffered economic damage through decreased enrollments. In two counts, MSL claims that defendants have combined and conspired to organize and enforce a group boycott in restraint of trade, a violation of the Sherman Act, Section 1, and that defendants have conspired to monopolize the provision of law school training, the accreditation of law schools, and the licensing of lawyers, in violation of the Sherman Act, Section 2. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1, 2.

A variety of motions have been filed in this case. Here I will only address the motion of 21 individual defendants to dismiss the claims against them for lack of personal jurisdiction and improper venue.³ These defendants are, [377] or have been, members of various ABA committees and organizations that participate in the accreditation process. James White, for example, is the ABA's consultant on legal education and is the chief administrative officer of the council of the ABA section of legal education and admissions to the Bar. The council promotes the ABA's accreditation standards and determines whether individual law schools comply. Other individual defendants are or were on the council, [6] the ABA's accreditation committee, or the site review team that visited MSL as part of its accreditation application process.

II. PERSONAL JURISDICTION

HN1 Before this court can exercise personal jurisdiction over any of these individual defendants, there must be a constitutionally acceptable relationship between that defendant and the forum. Once a defendant challenges the exercise of personal jurisdiction, the plaintiff has the burden of proving with reasonable particularity that sufficient contacts to support jurisdiction exist between the defendant and the forum state. The plaintiff must establish [7] a basis for either specific jurisdiction or general jurisdiction.

² Massachusetts is not one of those states. MSL was accredited by the Massachusetts Board of Regents in 1990, and so its graduates can sit for the Massachusetts bar examination and, if successful, practice law in that jurisdiction.

³ The 21 individual defendants who filed this motion are: James P. White, Nina Appel, Jose R. Garcia-Pedrosa, Laura N. Gasaway, Frederick M. Hart, Rudolph C. Hasl, R.W. Nahstoll, Henry Ramsey, Jr., Norman Redlich, John E. Ryan, Gordon D. Schaber, Pauline Schneider, Steven R. Smith, Claude R. Sowle, Robert A. Stein, Rennard Strickland, Roy T. Stuckey, Leigh H. Taylor, Frank K. Walwer, Sharp Whitmore, and Peter A. Winograd.

A. Personal Jurisdiction Based on Individual Defendants' Contacts With Pennsylvania

HN2 [↑] Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 4 allows a federal district court to exercise personal jurisdiction over out-of-state defendants to the extent allowed by the law of the state where the court is located. HN3 [↑] Pennsylvania has two statutes that confer jurisdiction over persons. 42 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. §§ 5301, 5322. General jurisdiction over an individual defendant is based on the individual's presence or domicile in Pennsylvania when served or on the individual's consent to jurisdiction. 42 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 5301 \(a\)\(1\) (Purdon 1993). Specific jurisdiction over a person is based on the cause of action arising from the person's activities and contacts in Pennsylvania. 42 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 5322\(a\) (Purdon 1993).

Each of the individual defendants has stated in an affidavit that he or she was served outside of Pennsylvania, is not a resident⁴ of Pennsylvania, and has not consented to the exercise of personal jurisdiction by courts in Pennsylvania. (Def. Mot., exh. A-U). Plaintiff has not offered evidence to the contrary. Therefore, [8] I find that there is no basis for the exercise of general personal jurisdiction over the 21 individual defendants.

Moreover, I find that plaintiff has not shown that I may exercise specific personal jurisdiction over these defendants. The exercise of personal jurisdiction over a defendant must be consistent with due process. HN4 [↑] Pennsylvania provides for jurisdiction to the fullest extent allowed by the United States Constitution and to be based on the most minimum contact with Pennsylvania allowed by the United States Constitution. 42 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 5322\(b\). With regard to specific jurisdiction, due process is satisfied when a cause of action is related to or arises out of the defendant's purposeful contacts with the forum state so that the defendant could reasonably expect to be haled into court in that forum. See Provident Nat'l Bank v. California Fed. Sav. and Loan, 819 F.2d 434, 437 [9] (citing World-Wide Volkswagen Corp. v. Woodson, 444 U.S. 286, 297, 62 L. Ed. 2d 490, 100 S. Ct. 559 \(1980\)).

It is not enough to warrant the exercise of personal jurisdiction that a defendant is being sued in a forum where he or she had some contact. Rather, a court must examine the relationship among the defendant, the forum, and the litigation. Regency Oldsmobile, Inc. v. General Motors Corp., 685 F. Supp. 91, 94 \(D.N.J. 1988\). A case from the Eighth Circuit is particularly instructive. In Health Care Equalization Committee, plaintiff, a chiropractic society, alleged antitrust violations by (among other defendants) the American College of Radiology. Health Care Equal. Comm. v. Iowa Medical Soc'y, 851 F.2d 1020, 1022 \(8th Cir. 1988\). Plaintiff's allegations against the ACR focused on [*378] the ACR's adoption of a code of ethics that prohibited professional association with chiropractors. Id. at 1030. The district court granted the ACR's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction. Id. at 1022. [10] In affirming the dismissal, the Eighth Circuit examined the relationship between the ACR's contacts with the forum state and the alleged cause of action against ACR. Id. at 1030. The ACR's contacts with the forum were limited to the less than one percent of ACR members who lived there and the mailings sent to those members. Id. In holding that there were insufficient contacts with the forum to warrant jurisdiction over the ACR, the Eighth Circuit said that the plaintiff had drawn no direct connection between the ACR's adoption of its code of ethics and its limited contact with the forum. Id.

In another case, a private educational institution alleged that two professional organizations and 25 individual defendants had conspired to limit the number of practicing orthodontists in violation of the antitrust laws. United States Dental Inst. v. American Ass'n of Orthodontists, 396 F. Supp. 565, 569 \(N.D. Ill. 1975\). The complaint averred that the individual defendants furthered the conspiracy by adopting certain guidelines and acting to prevent the plaintiff from gaining state approval. Id. at 571. [11] Nine of the individual defendants moved to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction. Id. at 569. The district court found that three of the individual defendants had been at a meeting in the forum state at which the allegedly exclusionary guidelines were adopted and had been on the council that voted to approve the guidelines. Id. at 571. The court found that the plaintiff's cause of action, which arose from the exclusionary guidelines, was directly traceable to the meeting in the state at which they were adopted. Id. Therefore, the court held, the activities of the three voting defendants supported the exercise of personal jurisdiction. Id.

⁴ For the purpose of considering general personal jurisdiction I will consider "residence" the equivalent of "domicile."

Here, the cause of action arises from the ABA's denial of accreditation to MSL. The ABA criteria in question were applied by an accreditation team that inspected MSL's campus and facilities in Massachusetts. The MSL faculty and students who suffer from the school's loss of prestige are in Massachusetts. The economic harms are felt by MSL in Massachusetts. The decreased enrollment is experienced in MSL's classrooms in Massachusetts.

MSL has the burden of establishing that its [12] cause of action arose from the individual defendants' contacts with Pennsylvania. Provident Nat'l Bank, 819 F.2d at 437. MSL has not done so. It has not alleged with "reasonable particularity" the individual defendants' contacts with Pennsylvania, much less any contacts with Pennsylvania that injured MSL. Both the complaint and plaintiff's memorandum in opposition to the individual defendants' motion assert that the four organizational defendants have contacts with Pennsylvania.⁵ With regard to the individual defendants, however, plaintiff does not allege with particularity any contacts they have with Pennsylvania that gave rise to MSL's claims.⁶ Each individual defendant has stated in an affidavit that he or she did not take any action concerning MSL while in Pennsylvania and did not discuss MSL accreditation during any telephone conversation or correspondence with a person in Pennsylvania. (Def. Mot., exh. A-U). MSL has not countered these affidavits with any evidence to the contrary. Instead, plaintiff merely states that the individual defendants "must have" engaged in accreditation activities in Pennsylvania, "must have" inspected law schools in [13] Pennsylvania, and "must have" received reports written in Pennsylvania. Even if MSL were able to support its allegations of what the individual defendants "must have" done in Pennsylvania, it still cannot do what the plaintiff in United States Dental Institute was able to do: directly connect the [*379] cause of action to the individual defendants' activities in the forum state. 396 F. Supp. at 571.

MSL has not alleged, much less established, any contacts the 21 individual defendants had with Pennsylvania. More importantly, even if MSL were able to [14] support its supposition that the individual defendants "must have" engaged in accreditation activities in Pennsylvania regarding Pennsylvania schools, MSL has not suggested how these activities had anything to do with MSL's failure to obtain accreditation in Massachusetts. There are not a limited number of accreditations to go around, so that bestowal of accreditation on a Pennsylvania law school lowers MSL's prospect of being accredited. All this leads to my conclusion that the individual defendants do not have sufficient contacts with Pennsylvania to permit the exercise of specific personal jurisdiction over them.

B. Personal Jurisdiction Based on Co-Conspirators' Contacts With Pennsylvania

In addition to arguing that the individual defendants must have had sufficient contacts with Pennsylvania on other accreditation matters to warrant jurisdiction arising out of MSL's accreditation, plaintiff urges me to exercise personal jurisdiction over the 21 individual defendants based on the contacts of their alleged co-conspirators. MSL's theory of co-conspirator jurisdiction is that because the court has personal jurisdiction over four organizational defendants, and because all of the defendants [15] are alleged to have conspired with each other, the court has personal jurisdiction over all of the defendants.⁷ I conclude the co-conspirator jurisdictional theory is not applicable

⁵ For example, the ABA is a partner in ALI/ABA, a provider of continuing legal education located in Philadelphia. The Law School Admission Services, Inc. and Law School Admission Council are located in Newtown, Pennsylvania. The American Association of Law Schools has member law schools in Pennsylvania.

⁶ The complaint alleges that James White "transacts business in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania" but is no more specific than that.

⁷ I have serious reservations about whether the individual defendants, alleged to be on various ABA committees or carrying out the ABA's work in accrediting law schools, can conspire with the ABA. Section one of the Sherman Act applies only to concerted action, proof of which requires evidence of a relationship between at least two legally distinct persons or entities. Oksanen v. Page Memorial Hosp., 945 F.2d 696, 702 (4th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 117 L. Ed. 2d 137, 112 S. Ct. 973 (1992). It seems doubtful that the individual defendants are acting as distinct entities apart from the ABA during an accreditation review. See id. (medical staff indistinct from hospital during peer review process). This opinion does not address that issue; I merely note that plaintiff's complaint, which alleged all defendants conspired with each other, may thus allege concerted activity which is legally impossible.

in this case because plaintiff has not alleged substantial acts (or any acts at all, for that matter) in Pennsylvania in furtherance of the conspiracy.

[16] HN5 Co-conspirator jurisdiction is not a separate basis of jurisdiction apart from general or specific jurisdiction. Rather, it is based on the same contacts-with-the-forum analysis just discussed. The difference is that a court looks not only at the defendant's forum contacts, but at those of the defendant's "resident" co-conspirators. The court imputes the contacts of the "resident" co-conspirator over whom it has jurisdiction to the "foreign" co-conspirator to see if there are sufficient contacts to exercise jurisdiction over the latter. See Ethanol Partners v. Wiener, Zuckerbrot, Weiss & Brecher, 635 F. Supp. 15, 18 (E.D. Pa. 1985); In re Arthur Treacher's Franchisee Litig., 92 F.R.D. 398, 411 (E.D. Pa. 1981).

The four organizational defendants in this case do not dispute that there is personal jurisdiction over them in this forum.⁸ Plaintiff's alleging that the individual defendants conspired with the organizational defendants is not enough to permit an exercise of jurisdiction over the 21 individuals who contest it. HN6 Merely belonging to a civil conspiracy does not make a member subject to the jurisdiction of every other [17] member's forum. In re Arthur Treacher's, 92 F.R.D. at 411. Rather, there must also be substantial acts in [*380] furtherance of the conspiracy within the forum, of which the out-of-state co-conspirator was or should have been aware. Id.

[18] MSL has not alleged in its complaint substantial acts in Pennsylvania by anyone that furthered the conspiracy and certainly nothing of which the out-of-state individual defendants would have been a part. MSL has said in its memorandum, for example, that James White communicates with all ABA-accredited law schools, including those in Pennsylvania; selects site inspection team members that visit schools in Pennsylvania; and meets with LSAC/LSAS officials. MSL has not said how these acts furthered the conspiracy that injured MSL. MSL has also stated in its memorandum (not its complaint) that phone calls, letters, reports and meetings "must have been" held in Pennsylvania. Again, plaintiff has not shown how these acts, even if proved to be more than conjecture, are substantial acts that furthered the conspiracy which injured MSL.

To be sure, MSL has alleged that the effects of the conspiracy were felt nationwide and therefore by law schools in Pennsylvania, but this is not the same as alleging that substantial acts to further the conspiracy took place in Pennsylvania. Therefore, I find that the individual defendants are not subject to the exercise of personal jurisdiction in Pennsylvania [19] on the basis of co-conspirator jurisdiction.

III. CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated above, I hold that there is no basis to support the exercise of general personal jurisdiction over 21 of the individual defendants. Similarly, I hold that those individual defendants do not have sufficient contacts with the forum -- either through their own acts or through co-conspirators' contacts -- giving rise to MSL's cause of action that would support the exercise of specific personal jurisdiction. Having decided the individual defendants' motion on the basis of personal jurisdiction, I make no decision on their venue arguments. Plaintiff's claims against the individual defendants must be dismissed for lack of personal jurisdiction. An appropriate order follows.

ORDER

And now, this 11th day of March, 1994, the motion of defendants James P. White, Nina Appel, Jose R. Garcia-Pedrosa, Laura N. Gasaway, Frederick M. Hart, Rudolph C. Hasl, R.W. Nahstoll, Henry Ramsey, Jr., Norman Redlich, John E. Ryan, Gordon D. Schaber, Pauline Schneider, Steven R. Smith, Claude R. Sowle, Robert A. Stein, ⁸ HN7 The Clayton Act authorizes that an antitrust suit against a corporation can be brought in the judicial district where it is an inhabitant and also in any district where the corporation is found or transacts business. 15 U.S.C. § 22. This provision for nationwide service of process means that a federal district court's jurisdiction is coextensive with the boundaries of the United States. American Trade Partners v. A-1 Int'l Importing Enter., Inc., 755 F. Supp. 1292, 1302 (E.D. Pa. 1990). This Clayton Act provision applies only to corporate, not individual, antitrust defendants. Delong Equip. Co. v. Washington Mills Abrasive, 840 F.2d 843, 848 (11th Cir. 1988).

846 F. Supp. 374, *380 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2924, 19

Rennard Strickland, Roy T. Stuckey, Leigh H. Taylor, Frank K. Walwer, Sharp Whitmore, and Peter A. Winograd [*20] to dismiss the claims against them for lack of personal jurisdiction is hereby GRANTED.

BY THE COURT:

J. William Ditter, Jr.

J.

End of Document

Sebastian Int'l, Inc. v. Longs Drug Stores Corp.

United States District Court for the Central District of California

March 11, 1994, Decided ; March 11, 1994, Filed

No. CV 93-2891 WDK

Reporter

1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6632 *; 30 U.S.P.Q.2D (BNA) 1785 **

SEBASTIAN INTERNATIONAL INC., Plaintiff, v. LONGS DRUG STORES, CORP., Defendant.

Core Terms

products, collective mark, trademark, infringement, salons, misrepresentations, consumers, service mark, membership, marks, sells, drug store, retailers, likelihood of confusion, first sale doctrine, genuine, courts, merits, hair, preliminary injunction, unfair competition, affiliated, displaying, enjoined, resale, resell, seller, consumer confusion, likely to cause, unauthorized

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Trademark Law > Special Marks > Collective Marks

Trademark Law > Causes of Action Involving Trademarks > Infringement Actions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Injunctions > Preliminary & Temporary Injunctions

Trademark Law > ... > Unfair Competition > Federal Unfair Competition Law > General Overview

HN1 [] Special Marks, Collective Marks

A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must show (1) the probable success on the merits and the possibility of irreparable injury or (2) serious questions on the merits and a balance of hardship tipping sharply in its favor. These are not two distinct tests but the opposite ends of a single continuum in which a required showing of harm varies inversely with a required showing of meritoriousness.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Trademark Law > Special Marks > Collective Marks

Trademark Law > Trademark Cancellation & Establishment > Registration Procedures > General Overview

HN2 [] Special Marks, Collective Marks

It appears that a collective mark need not be owned solely by a collective; rather, a corporation can own a collective mark. The Lanham Act (Act) defines a collective mark as a trademark used by members of a collective. 15 U.S.C.S.

§ 1127. The Act directly addresses who may use but not who may own a collective mark. Furthermore, the Trademark Manual of Examining Procedure, a manual used by an examining board to determine whether a mark is valid, states that a collective membership mark can be owned by someone other than a collective organization whose members use a mark, and an owner itself might not be a collective organization.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Trademark Law > Special Marks > Collective Marks

Trademark Law > Trademark Cancellation & Establishment > Registration Procedures > General Overview

HN3 [down] Special Marks, Collective Marks

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 1054.

Trademark Law > ... > Registration Procedures > Federal Registration > Federal Registration as Evidence

Trademark Law > Trademark Cancellation & Establishment > Registration Procedures > General Overview

Trademark Law > Special Marks > Service Marks > Registration of Service Marks

HN4 [down] Federal Registration, Federal Registration as Evidence

Registration is prima facie evidence of the validity of a mark. 15 U.S.C.S. § 1115 \(a\).

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Trademark Law > Special Marks > Collective Marks

Trademark Law > Trademark Cancellation & Establishment > Priority > General Overview

Trademark Law > Special Marks > General Overview

Trademark Law > Special Marks > Service Marks > General Overview

HN5 [down] Special Marks, Collective Marks

Dual use of a mark is permitted: a collective mark can be used both as a trademark or service mark by a collective as well as a collective service mark or membership mark by members of a collective. The key inquiry in determining whether a mark is being used as a collective mark or a traditional mark is who is using it. Moreover, although perhaps collective service marks and membership marks typically appear on placards and the like, case law indicates that they can also appear on products themselves. Thus, it appears that the location of a mark does not determine its characterization as a collective mark; rather, a message conveyed to consumers by a mark is dispositive.

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > Trade Dress Protection > General Overview

Trademark Law > ... > Unfair Competition > Federal Unfair Competition Law > General Overview

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > False Advertising > General Overview

1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6632, *6632L³⁰ U.S.P.Q.2D (BNA) 1785, 1785

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > False Designation of Origin > Elements of False Designation of Origin

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > Lanham Act > General Overview

Trademark Law > Causes of Action Involving Trademarks > Infringement Actions > General Overview

Trademark Law > Likelihood of Confusion > Consumer Confusion > General Overview

HN6 Federal Unfair Competition Law, Trade Dress Protection

A defendant is liable for unfair competition if it uses in commerce a misleading representation that is likely to cause confusion or to deceive as to affiliation, connection, or association. 15 U.S.C.S. § 1125\(a\). Similarly, a defendant is liable for trademark infringement, which is one type of unfair competition, if it uses a registered mark that is likely to cause confusion, mistake, or deception. 15 U.S.C.S. § 1114\(1\).

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Causes of Action Involving Trademarks > Infringement Actions > Determinations

Trademark Law > Conveyances > General Overview

Trademark Law > Causes of Action Involving Trademarks > Infringement Actions > General Overview

HN7 Infringement Actions, Determinations

The general rule is that the unauthorized sale of goods bearing their true trademarks does not, by itself, constitute infringement. This is predicated on the notion that neither misrepresentations of fact nor consumer confusion ordinarily exist when a genuine mark bearing a true mark is sold.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Types of Commercial Transactions > Sales of Goods > General Overview

Trademark Law > Likelihood of Confusion > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Remedies > Buyer's Damages & Remedies > General Overview

Trademark Law > Conveyances > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Causes of Action Involving Trademarks > Infringement Actions > Determinations

HN8 Contracts, Sales of Goods

The first sale doctrine provides that trademark law generally does not apply to the sale of genuine goods bearing a true mark even though such sale is without a mark owner's consent. Once a trademark owner sells his product, a buyer ordinarily may resell a product under an original mark without incurring any trademark liability. The reason is that trademark law is designed to prevent sellers from confusing or deceiving consumers about the origin or make of a product, which confusion ordinarily does not exist when a genuine article bearing a true mark is sold. However, when additional factors are present indicating the likelihood of confusion or deception, infringement will be found.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Causes of Action Involving Trademarks > Infringement Actions > Determinations

Trademark Law > Likelihood of Confusion > Consumer Confusion > General Overview

Trademark Law > Causes of Action Involving Trademarks > Infringement Actions > General Overview

HN9[Infringement Actions, Determinations

Courts have found infringement where a trademark owner dictates that sellers provide certain ancillary functions and where it is not obvious to a consumer that these functions have not been performed. For example, where quality control is critical and any defect or potential defect due to a reseller's failure to adhere to quality control standards is not readily observable, a trademarked product sold by an unauthorized seller is not considered a "genuine" product and therefore is likely to cause confusion or deception.

Trademark Law > ... > Infringement Actions > Defenses > First Use

Trademark Law > Conveyances > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Causes of Action Involving Trademarks > Infringement Actions > Determinations

Trademark Law > Likelihood of Confusion > General Overview

Trademark Law > Likelihood of Confusion > Consumer Confusion > General Overview

HN10[Defenses, First Use

The first sale doctrine is not to be applied by rote to resales of genuine products. Rather, its application is predicated on the absence of misrepresentations and likelihood of confusion. Thus, where evidence of those exist, courts refuse to apply the first sale doctrine and will find infringement even for the resale of genuine products bearing their true marks. Significantly, however, although the primary purpose of the trademark law is to protect consumers from confusion and deception, this end must be accomplished consistent with free market objectives.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Types of Commercial Transactions > Sales of Goods > General Overview

Trademark Law > Likelihood of Confusion > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Likelihood of Confusion > General Overview

Trademark Law > Conveyances > General Overview

Trademark Law > Causes of Action Involving Trademarks > Infringement Actions > General Overview

Trademark Law > ... > Infringement Actions > Defenses > First Use

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Causes of Action Involving Trademarks > Infringement Actions > Determinations

Trademark Law > Likelihood of Confusion > Consumer Confusion > General Overview

HN11[Contracts, Sales of Goods

Trademark cases seem to look only to whether there is a likelihood of consumer confusion not to who is responsible for that confusion. For example, courts that apply the first sale doctrine and find no infringement base their holdings entirely on the fact that the resale of goods bearing true traditional trademarks does not create misrepresentations or likelihood of confusion. Notably, none of these courts mentions the fact that even had there been any misrepresentations or likelihood of confusion, no infringement would be found because a trademark owner was somehow responsible by virtue of its labeling the products. These courts focus solely on the absence of misrepresentations and likelihood of confusion. In addition, other courts have refused to apply the first sale doctrine and instead have enjoined the resale of genuine goods even where a trademark owner has arguably "mislabelled" products.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Causes of Action Involving Trademarks > Infringement Actions > Determinations

Trademark Law > ... > Licenses > Licensable Subject Matter > Tying Arrangements

HN12[Infringement Actions, Determinations

Refusing to apply the first sale doctrine and finding infringement is entirely in line with antitrust law. Courts have held that a manufacturer may, consistent with federal antitrust laws, impose restraints on and refuse to deal with a retailer solely because a retailer's image is not consistent with a product's prestige, image and quality. Thus, protecting one's image and ensuring that only appropriate retailers sell one's product are deemed to be valid business justifications in the antitrust arena.

Judges: [*1] Keller

Opinion by: WILLIAM D. KELLER

Opinion

[1786] ORDER RE PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

I. INTRODUCTION

Before the Court is plaintiff Sebastian International Inc.'s ("Sebastian") Motion for Preliminary Injunction against Defendant Longs Drug Stores Corporation ("Longs"). The underlying lawsuit involves Sebastian's claims of unfair competition and trademark infringement arising from Longs' sale of genuine Sebastian products bearing their original marks. After oral argument and considerable further analysis, this Court reverses its tentative ruling and GRANTS Sebastian's motion for preliminary injunction.

II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Sebastian manufactures and distributes hair care products, including shampoos, conditioners, permanents, and colors. It sells its products only to professional salons and distributors that agree to sell only to professional salons. (Motion p.1)

In the past, "diverters" have sold Sebastian products to unauthorized retailers including drug stores and other non-salon retail outlets. Some of these unauthorized resellers presumably sell the products in higher volume and at lower prices than the authorized salons. In order to combat such diversion, in 1992 Sebastian [*2] formed "The Sebastian Collective Membership Program" ("Collective"). Sebastian authorizes only [*1787] members of the Collective to sell its products and limits membership to professional salons and distributors that agree to resell only to members or member salons' clientele. Sebastian conducts product seminars and educational classes for and distributes product training and educational materials to members of its collective. (Motion p.1)

In April 1992, Sebastian filed to register the "Sebastian Collective Salon Member" as a collective membership and service mark. These marks are displayed on Sebastian's products. (Motion p. 1). The collective membership mark has been registered, and the service mark has been accepted for allowance by the Trademark Office.

Defendant Longs operates a chain of general merchandise and drug stores. It is neither a salon, an authorized distributor, nor a member of the Collective, nor does it employ licensed cosmetologists. Since at least 1987, Longs has sold unadulterated Sebastian products bearing their original marks. There is some evidence that Longs displays Sebastian products in a disheveled manner and sells defective products. One Sebastian representative [*3] visited a Longs location and observed that many of the products had fallen down in the shelf and observed that one of the hair spray bottles was missing a nozzle. (Driscoll Decl. Exh. 2, 9)

Significantly, Sebastian conducted a consumer survey of respondents who had recently shopped in drug stores for hair care products. After being shown a placard depicting the collective mark, respondents were asked if they believed the store displaying the sign would need authorization to do so. Fifty six percent answered in the affirmative. (Cogan Exh. 2, p. 10) Then, after being shown a product and specifically directed to the collective mark, respondents were asked if they would believe the store would have to get authorization or permission to carry it. Thirty eight percent answered in the affirmative. (Cogan Exh. 2, p. 11) When then asked if they believed the store is affiliated with or associated with the Sebastian Collective program, 14 percent answered in the affirmative. (Cogan Exh. 2, p. 11-12).

Sebastian moves to enjoin Longs from selling Sebastian products bearing the collective marks. Sebastian argues that (1) it is likely to succeed on the merits because (a) its mark is a valid collective [*4] mark, (b) Longs' sale of these goods creates misrepresentations of affiliation and is likely to cause confusion, as evidenced by the consumer survey results, and (c) the first sale doctrine does not apply; (2) Longs' sales create irreparable harm to Sebastian's reputation; and (3) the balance of hardship weighs in Sebastian's favor.

III. DISCUSSION

A. The Preliminary Injunction Standard

HN1 A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must show (1) the probable success on the merits and the possibility of irreparable injury or (2) serious questions on the merits and a balance of hardship tipping sharply in its favor. Miss World (UK), Ltd. v. Mrs. America Pageants, Inc., 856 F.2d 1445, 1448 (9th Cir. 1988). These are not two distinct tests but "the opposite ends of a single continuum in which the required showing of harm varies inversely with the required showing of meritoriousness." Id.

B. Likelihood of Success on the Merits of Unfair Competition and Trademark Infringement Claims

1. Validity of the Collective Mark

Longs argues that Sebastian's marks are invalid as collective marks because (1) collective marks must be owned by a [*5] collective entity not a corporation, (2) marks used by a collective on its own goods are not collective marks, (3) Sebastian's collective service mark does not cover members' provision of consultation services at issue here.

In this Court's view, Longs' arguments are unavailing. HN2 First, it appears that a collective mark need not be owned solely by the collective; rather, a corporation can own a collective mark. The Lanham Act defines a collective mark as a trademark used by members of a collective. 15 U.S.C. § 1127. HN3 In addition, § 1054 provides for the registration of collective marks "in the same manner . . . as are trademarks, by persons . . . exercising control over the use of the marks . . . except when used so as to represent falsely that the owner or a user thereof makes or sells the goods or performs the services" 15 U.S.C. § 1054. Thus, it appears that the Lanham Act directly addresses who may use but not who may own a collective mark.

Furthermore, the Trademark Manual of Examining Procedure ("TMEP"), a manual used by the examining board to determine whether a mark is valid, states that a collective membership [\[*6\]](#) mark can be owned by "someone other than the collective organization whose members use the mark, and the owner itself might not be a collective organization. An example is a business corporation which forms a club for persons meeting certain qualifications and which, in forming the club, arranges to retain control of the group and of the mark used by the members of the [\[*1788\]](#) group. The corporation which has retained control over use of the mark is the owner of the mark, and is entitled to register the mark." TMEP § 1304.05. (citing In re Stencil Aero Engineering Corp., 170 U.S.P.Q. 292 \(TTAB 1971\) (Aircraft ejection manufacturer can own a collective membership mark that it created for its club of successful users because the statutory definition requires only that mark be used by members; there is no limitation that only a collective can own mark)).

Moreover, the U.S. Trademark Office granted Sebastian as a corporation both Registrations and Notices of Allowances for the collective membership and service marks, respectively. (Kuchinski Decl. P 4, 5). HN4 Registration is prima facie evidence of the validity of a mark. 15 U.S.C. § 1115 [\[*7\]](#) \(a\).¹

[\[*8\]](#) Second, as discussed in this Court's earlier order, dual use of a mark is permitted: a collective mark can be used both as a trademark or service mark by the collective as well as a collective service mark or membership mark by members of the collective.² McCarthy at § 19.34[1][b], TMEP § 1303.01. The key inquiry in determining whether a mark is being used as a collective mark or a traditional mark is who is using it. Here, the members of the collective "use" the mark by displaying and selling products that bear the mark identifying the seller both as a member of the collective and, correspondingly, as a salon professional who has received training and education in

¹ Longs argues that Sebastian cannot own a collective mark and cites F.R. LePage Bakery v. Roush Bakery Products Co., 851 F.2d 351, 353 \(Fed. Cir. 1988\), withdrawn, vacated and remanded, 863 F.2d 43 \(Fed. Cir. 1988\), vacated and modified, 13 USPQ2d 1045 \(TTAB 1989\) in that regard. In that case, the Federal Circuit held that where a corporation is making and selling its wares under a trademark, it is not entitled to own a collective mark registration. Accord TMEP § 1302 ("a collective mark must be owned by a collective entity even though the mark is used by the members of the collective."); § 1303.01 ("a collective mark must be owned by a collective entity.")

In this court's view, Le Page is distinguishable. Le Page involved the transfer of a collective mark to one of the members of the collective. Here, the Collective did not transfer ownership of the mark to one of the salon members. Rather, as in In re Stencil, Sebastian as a corporate entity created the collective and owns the mark. Sebastian is not a member of the Collective. Moreover, this Court can think of no logical reason (nor, apparently, did the U.S. Trademark Office in registering the collective marks) why corporate niceties should dictate the validity of a collective mark. Notably, in addressing the validity of collective marks, the Lanham Act and relevant case law seem to focus on how a mark is used rather than who owns it.

HN5

² Previously, some courts applied the anti-use-by-owner rule to collective marks. According to that rule, if the owner of a collective mark, rather than the members, used the mark to identify its own goods or services the mark was not a "collective" mark but a traditional trademark or service mark. McCarthy at § 19.34[1][b]. See, e.g., Aloe Creme Laboratories, Inc. v. American Soc. for Aesthetic Plastic Surgery, Inc., 192 U.S.P.Q. 170, 173 \(TTAB 1976\).

Significantly, however, in 1988, the Trademark Law Revision Act made clear that the anti-use-by-owner rule does not apply to collective marks; consequently, a collective mark owner can make dual use out of the marks. A collective mark can be used in such a way as to be both a collective mark as well as a traditional trademark or service mark. McCarthy at § 19.34[1][b], [2], TMEP § 1303.01.

the use of Sebastian products. The fact that Sebastian itself applies the marks to the products and arguably also "uses" the marks does not transmogrify the collective mark into a traditional trademark or service mark.

[*9] Moreover, although perhaps collective service marks and membership marks typically appear on placards and the like, the case law indicates that they can also appear on products themselves. See Boise Cascade Corp. v. Mississippi Pine Mrs. Assn., 164 U.S.P.Q. 364, 367 (TTAB 1969) and Saks & Co. v. Snack Food Ass'n, 1989 TTAB LEXIS 37, 12 U.S.P.Q. 2d 1833, 1836 (TTAB 1989). Thus, it appears that the location of the mark does not determine its characterization as a collective mark; rather, the message conveyed to consumers by the mark is dispositive.

Third, Sebastian's service mark covers the services in question here. The mark covers the provision to hairdressers of "educational services" in the use of Sebastian products. (Kuchinsky Decl., Exh.3). In this Court's view, implicitly, a hairdresser who has received training and education in the use of Sebastian products would in turn necessarily bestow the benefits of this training on his or her customers. Thus, the service mark indicates that the member is trained and educated and therefore, by implication, will be able to instruct the customer as to the proper [*10] use of Sebastian products.

Accordingly, Sebastian has established a likelihood of success on the merits with regard to the validity of its collective marks.

B. Misrepresentation and Likelihood of Confusion

HN6 [↑] A defendant is liable for unfair competition if it uses in commerce a "misleading representation" that is "likely to cause confusion" [1789] or to deceive as to affiliation, connection, or association. Lanham Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1125\(a\). Similarly, a defendant is liable for trademark infringement, which is one type of unfair competition, if it uses a registered mark that is "likely to cause confusion," or mistake, or deception. Lanham Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1114\(1\), Shakey's Inc. v. Covalt, 704 F.2d 426, 431 (9th Cir. 1993).

HN7 [↑] The general rule is that the unauthorized sale of goods bearing their true trademarks does not, by itself, constitute infringement. Matrix Essentials, Inc. v. Emporium Drug Mart, Inc., 988 F.2d 587, 593 (5th Cir. 1993). This is predicated on the notion that neither misrepresentations of fact nor consumer confusion ordinarily exist when [*11] a genuine mark bearing a true mark is sold. NEC Electronics v. CAL Circuit Abco, 810 F.2d 1506, 1509 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 851, 98 L. Ed. 2d 108, 108 S. Ct. 152 (1987). HN8 [↑] In particular, the first sale doctrine provides:

"Trademark law generally does not apply to the sale of genuine goods bearing a true mark even though such sale is without the mark owner's consent. Once a trademark owner sells his product, the buyer ordinarily may resell the product under the original mark without incurring any trademark liability. The reason is that trademark law is designed to prevent sellers from confusing or deceiving consumers about the origin or make of a product, which confusion ordinarily does not exist when a genuine article bearing a true mark is sold." Id. (Citations omitted.)

However, when additional factors are present indicating the likelihood of confusion or deception, infringement will be found. For example, courts have found infringement where a reseller makes an affirmative misrepresentation, such as places a plaintiff's trademark on an advertisement or on pamphlets, [*12] and there is a suggestion that the customer was confused or deceived into believing the seller is an "authorized" dealer or seller. 3A Callman Unfair Competition Trademarks and Monopolies, § 21.13, fn. 6, p. 123-133 (citing Trail Chevrolet, Inc. v. General Motors Corp., 381 F.2d 353 (5th Cir. 1967). See also Bandag, Inc. v. Al Bolser's Tire Stores, 750 F.2d 903 (Fed. Cir. 1984) and Stormor, A Div. of Fuqua Industries v. Johnson, 587 F. Supp. 275 (W.D.Mich. 1984).

HN9 [↑] In addition, courts have found infringement where a trademark owner dictates that sellers provide certain ancillary functions and where it is not obvious to the consumer that these functions have not been performed. For example, where quality control is critical and any defect or potential defect due to a reseller's failure to adhere to quality control standards is not readily observable, a trademarked product sold by an unauthorized seller is not considered a "genuine" product and therefore is likely to cause confusion or deception. See, e.g., Shell Oil Co. v. Commercial Petroleum, Inc., 928 F.2d 104 \(4th Cir. 1991\), [*13] Adolph Coors Co. v. A. Genderson & Sons, Inc., 486 F. Supp. 131 \(D.Colo. 1980\).³

[*14] In short, the first sale doctrine is not to be applied by rote to resales of genuine products. Rather, its application is predicated on the absence of misrepresentations and likelihood of confusion. Thus, where evidence of those exist, courts refuse to apply the first sale doctrine and will find infringement even for the resale of genuine products bearing their true marks.

Significantly, however, although the primary purpose of the trademark law is to protect consumers from confusion and deception, this end must be accomplished consistent with free market objectives. Intel Corp. v. Terabyte Intern., Inc., 6 F.3d 614, 615 \(9th Cir. 1993\).

Here, unlike Matrix and the other first sale doctrine cases, misrepresentations and likelihood of confusion are present. By selling products bearing the collective mark, Longs is arguably misrepresenting to consumers that it is affiliated with or authorized by Sebastian or the Collective. The survey results bear this out. In addition, apparently members of the Collective provide certain ancillary functions (namely, quality control, consultative services and charity contributions). The collective mark, more than [*15] a [1790] traditional trademark, indicates a closer connection to Sebastian and in turn could signal to customers the existence of these functions. Thus, Longs, by selling Sebastian products bearing the collective mark, is arguably misrepresenting that it provides these functions.

Consumer confusion is also likely. The survey results indicate that a substantial number of consumers mistakenly perceived that a drug store selling goods bearing the collective mark must be authorized by or affiliated with Sebastian or the Collective. Evidence of actual consumer confusion, though not required, certainly tends to establish the likelihood of confusion.

The fact that Sebastian, by virtue of its "mislabeling," is somehow responsible for any misrepresentations or confusion is not determinative. The trademark law is concerned primarily with protecting consumers from being confused. HN11[ The trademark cases seem to look only to whether there is a likelihood of consumer confusion not to who is responsible for that confusion. For example, courts that apply the first sale doctrine and find no infringement base their holdings entirely on the fact that the resale of goods bearing true traditional trademarks does [*16] not create misrepresentations or likelihood of confusion. Notably, none of these courts mentions the fact that even had there been any misrepresentations or likelihood of confusion, no infringement would be found because the trademark owner was somehow responsible by virtue of its labeling the products. These courts focus solely on the absence of misrepresentations and likelihood of confusion.

In addition, other courts have refused to apply the first sale doctrine and instead have enjoined the resale of genuine goods even where the trademark owner has arguably 'mislabeled' the products. See Claire, Inc. v. Boston Discount Center of Berkeley, 608 F.2d 1114 \(6th Cir. 1979\) (Manufacturer of hair coloring successfully sued retailers that sold professional use products to consumers for home use where professional products lacked warnings and instructions.) Thus, the trademark case law is entirely consistent with enjoining Longs resale.

³ By contrast, where any purported shortcomings would be obvious to the customers, customers are not likely to be confused and, consequently, infringement will not be found. In Matrix, for example, Matrix argued that its hair care products were not genuine unless they were sold with accompanying consultative services. The Court rejected this argument and held that no customer shopping in the drugstore would be confused or deceived as to whether they were getting a cosmetologist's consultation. Matrix, 988 F.2d at 591. Nor, the Court held, would confusion exist as to sponsorship because the goods were manufactured and labelled by Matrix. Id. at 592. See also H.L. Hayden Co. of N.Y., Inc. v. Siemens Medical Systems, Inc., 879 F.2d 1005 \(2d Cir. 1989\) (Defendant's sale of plaintiff's dental equipment, sold through its catalog and without plaintiff's required installation, was nevertheless a "genuine" product, and customers would not likely be confused or deceived that the product did not include installation).

HN10[

Finally, finding infringement here is consistent with the free market principles. HN12¹ Refusing to apply the first sale doctrine and finding infringement here is entirely in line with antitrust law. Courts have held that a manufacturer [*17] may, consistent with federal antitrust laws, impose restraints on and refuse to deal with a retailer solely because the retailer's image is not consistent with the product's prestige, image and quality. Trans Sport, Inc. v. Starter Sportswear, Inc., 964 F.2d 186 \(2nd Cir. 1992\). Thus, protecting one's image and ensuring that only appropriate retailers sell one's product are deemed to be valid business justifications in the antitrust arena.

Here, Sebastian has attempted to do just that: to create a certain cachet and high end image of its products. Accordingly, Sebastian only sells to salons that are members of the Collective and expressly refuses to sell to drug stores and other lower end retailers that it thinks will taint the image of its products. In this regard, Sebastian places its collective mark on its products in part to combat diversion to unauthorized retailers like drug stores. In this Court's view, enjoining Longs' resale is entirely consistent with the principles of antitrust law as evidenced by Trans Sport.

Accordingly, Sebastian has established that it is likely to succeed on the merits with regard to establishing a misrepresentation [*18] that is likely to cause consumer confusion.

C. Irreparable Harm/Balance of Hardships

Sebastian faces a real threat of irreparable harm and the balance of hardships tips sharply in its favor. As indicated in the survey, the collective mark arguably implies even more of a connection between the reseller and Sebastian than does a traditional trademark. Therefore, Sebastian's cachet is in even greater jeopardy. Longs is arguably perceived as a lesser, discount environment, particularly when contrasted to a tony salon setting.

In addition, there is evidence that Longs is selling defective products and exhibiting them in a disheveled manner. Moreover, as pointed out during oral argument, a number of survey respondents mistakenly believed that a drug store selling products bearing the Sebastian collective mark is probably selling second-band or damaged Sebastian products. This signals to consumers that Sebastian might have authorized the sale of inferior goods. In addition, at least one salon owner declared that he would consider terminating his membership in the Collective unless diversion to drug stores was stopped. Thus, Longs is in real jeopardy of losing members of the Collective, [*19] which, in turn, could threaten its ability to maintain the high end image of its products.⁴

[1791] By contrast, Longs faces a relatively minor harm. Longs will lose the lost profits on future sales of Sebastian products. However, Longs sells numerous other brands of hair care products. Thus, its very existence as a retailer is not in jeopardy. In addition, [*20] Longs sells Sebastian only on a sporadic basis. Thus it does not have a reputation as a reliable source of Sebastian products to protect.

Accordingly, Sebastian faces the possibility of irreparable injury, and the balance of hardship tips sharply in its favor.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Sebastian's motion for Preliminary Injunction is GRANTED. This Court Orders that, pending a trial on the merits and determination in this action,

(1) defendant and defendant's officers, directors, employees, agents, servants, successors, and assigns, as well as those persons in active concert or participation with them who receive notice of the Order, be enjoined from infringing the collective marks of plaintiff, or from otherwise engaging in unfair competition with plaintiff, in any manner, including but not limited to:

⁴ Longs argues that Sebastian delayed in bringing this action, which in turn negates Sebastian's contentions of irreparable injury. Longs' argument is without merit. Admittedly, Sebastian has been on notice of Longs' sales since 1987 and only now seeks injunctive relief. However, Sebastian's Collective was not founded until June 1992. Sebastian did not attempt to utilize the trademark avenue until after it registered its collective mark, placed the mark on its goods, and in April 14, 1993, first learned that the defendant was selling Sebastian Product bearing the collective mark. Sebastian then filed suit on May 18, 1993. Sebastian did not, therefore, sleep on its rights.

(a) displaying, distributing and/or offering for sale to the public, and/or purchasing or otherwise acquiring for the purpose of displaying, distributing and/or offering for sale to the public, Sebastian hair care and beauty products that bear one or more of plaintiff's Collective Marks, namely, Sebastian Collective Salon Member and Sebastian Collective Salon Member [*21] & Design; and/or

(b) engaging in any conduct tending falsely to represent or likely to confuse, mislead or deceive purchasers, defendant's customers or members of the public into thinking that defendant is or is affiliated with plaintiff and/or the Collective, that defendant's services are offered by or are otherwise the same nature as those offered by plaintiff and/or the members of the Collective, and that defendant's offering of services, if any, has been sponsored, approved, or licensed by plaintiff or the Collective.

(2) Sebastian shall post a bond in the amount of $ 250,000 for the payment of such costs and damages as may be incurred or suffered if Longs is found to have been wrongfully enjoined or restrained.

(3) This Order shall be stayed for 90 days. Unless the Court of Appeals orders otherwise, this injunction will take effect after 90 days from the date of this Order.

(4) During this 90-day stay, Longs may attempt to sell inventory it currently possesses of Sebastian hair care and beauty products that bear one or more of plaintiff's Collective Marks;

(5) Within 30 days of the last of these sales, Longs shall submit to the Court an accounting of any sales made and corresponding [*22] profits earned from these sales.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

William D. Keller, Judge

United States District Court

DATED: March 11, 1994

End of Document

Advanced Health-Care Servs. v. Giles Memorial Hosp.

United States District Court for the Western District of Virginia, Roanoke Division

March 15, 1994, Filed, Entered

Civil Action No. 88-0346-R

Reporter

846 F. Supp. 488 *; 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7482 ; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,591

ADVANCED HEALTH-CARE SERVICES, Plaintiff, v. GILES MEMORIAL HOSPITAL & MEDSERV CORPORATION, Defendants.

Disposition: [1] Granted.

Core Terms

patients, market share, monopolization, percent, monopoly power, summary judgment, competitor, alleges, antitrust, monopoly, steering, supplier, Sherman Act, probative evidence, defendants', predatory, leveraging, anticompetitive, concentration, exclusionary, conspiracy, competitive advantage, predatory conduct, calculated, rental

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

HN1[] Regulated Practices, Private Actions

The complex nature of antitrust litigation encourages summary disposition of such cases where permissible. The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals has approved of the use of summary judgment in antitrust cases.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > Evidentiary Considerations

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Scintilla Rule

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

HN2[] Summary Judgment, Evidentiary Considerations

In a case with much complicated and detailed evidence, once the moving party has met its burden under Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(c\), the non-moving party must do more than simply show that there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts, but must come forward with sufficient evidence favoring the non-moving party for a jury to return a verdict for that party. If the evidence is merely colorable or is not significantly probative, summary judgment may be granted.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN3 [down] Sherman Act, Claims

To prove an unreasonable restraint of trade in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, a plaintiff must show: (1) that the conspiracy produced adverse, anticompetitive effects within the relevant product and geographic market; (2) that the objects and conduct pursuant to the conspiracy were illegal; and (3) that the plaintiff was injured as a proximate result of the conspiracy.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN4 [down] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

To prevail on a monopolization claim under § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, a plaintiff must show possession of monopoly power in a relevant market, willful acquisition or maintenance of that power in an exclusionary or predatory manner, and causal antitrust injury.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN5 [down] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

Numerous cases and commentators have suggested that absent extraordinary circumstances, a market share over 50 percent is required to show market power.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

HN6 [down] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

Another means of viewing monopoly power is through market share trends. If a defendant's market share is declining and/or other competitors' markets shares are rising, then the defendant can hardly possess monopoly power.

846 F. Supp. 488, *488L^A 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7482, 1

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

Healthcare Law > Healthcare Litigation > Antitrust Actions > Facilities

HN7 [+] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

A firm, even one with monopoly power, is not guilty of predatory exclusionary conduct when it is simply exploiting the competitive advantages legitimately available to it.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

HN8 [+] Private Actions, Remedies

Antitrust injury arises only from harm to the competitive process itself and not from harm to a single competitor.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Penalties

HN9 [+] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

The monopoly leveraging theory does not follow from the text of the Sherman Act and destroys the distinction between concerted conduct that restrains trade in 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, and unilateral conduct that monopolizes or attempts to monopolize in 15 U.S.C.S. § 2. Further, when a monopolist has a lawful monopoly in one market and uses its power to gain a competitive advantage in a second market, the anticompetitive dangers that implicate the Sherman Act are not present.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Elements

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN10 [+] Sherman Act, Claims

To prove attempted monopolization under section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, the plaintiff must prove a specific intent to monopolize a relevant market, predatory or anticompetitive acts, and a dangerous probability of successful monopolization. Attempted monopolization requires a specific intent to destroy competition or build monopoly. A desire to increase market share or even to drive a competitor out of business through vigorous competition on the merits is not sufficient. The requisite intent to monopolize may be shown through direct evidence or through inference by showing predatory conduct.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

HN11[] Monopolies & Monopolization, Attempts to Monopolize

Where evidence of intent to monopolize and predatory conduct is weak and entry barriers are low, an antitrust plaintiff must show a defendant's market share of above 50 percent to show a dangerous probability of success to support an attempted monopolization charge. Attempted monopolization claims involving between 30 percent and 50 percent shares should usually be rejected, except when conduct is very likely to achieve monopoly or when conduct is invidious.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Claims

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Inchoate Crimes > Conspiracy > Elements

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Elements

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Acts & Mental States > Mens Rea > Specific Intent

HN12[] Sherman Act, Claims

In order to prove a conspiracy to monopolize, a plaintiff must show concerted action, a specific intent to achieve an unlawful monopoly, and commission of an overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy. However, unlike an attempted monopolization claim, it is not necessary that the committed acts, themselves, be predatory.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

Healthcare Law > Healthcare Litigation > Antitrust Actions > Facilities

HN13[] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

The "essential facilities" approach to monopolization claims examines whether market power in one market is being used to create or further a monopoly in another market. The four elements of an essential facilities claim are (1) control of the essential facility by a monopolist; (2) a competitor's inability practically or reasonably to duplicate the essential facility; (3) the denial of the use of the facility to a competitor; and (4) the feasibility of providing the facility to competitors.

Counsel: For ADVANCED HEALTH-CARE INC., plaintiff: John Thomas Arnold, MOSS & ROCOVICH, P.C., ROANOKE, VA. James A. Burt, STRONG & ASSOCIATES, P.C., SPRINGFIELD, MO.

For GILES MEMORIAL HOSPITAL, HEALTH EAST INC., defendants: Michael F. Urbanski, Heman Alexander Marshall, III, WOODS, ROGERS & HAZLEGROVE, P.L.C., ROANOKE, VA. For MEDSERV CORPORATION, defendant: Charles Nealson Dorsey, William Hitchcock Lindsey, BOUNDS & DORSEY, P. C., ROANOKE, VA.

George R. Clark, Robert J. Aamoth, Alexander P. Starr, REED, SMITH, SHAW & MCCLAY, Washington, DC.

Judges: Turk

Opinion by: JAMES C. TURK

Opinion

[*491] MEMORANDUM OPINION

By: Hon. James C. Turk

United States District Judge

I.

This multi-count antitrust case was filed by Advanced Health Care Services, Inc. ("AHCS"), a corporation engaged in the business [*492] of renting and selling durable medical equipment ("DME") in southwest Virginia.¹ Defendant Giles Memorial Hospital ("Giles Memorial") is a Virginia not-for-profit hospital corporation in Pearisburg, Virginia. Defendant Medserv is a corporation engaged in the business of renting and selling DME.² On August 1, 1985, Giles Memorial and Medserv entered into a contract to provide DME to residents in Giles Memorial's service [2] area.³ This joint venture contract established a home DME business located in Giles Memorial called Home Connections. Under the contract, Giles Memorial essentially provided office space and Medserv provided personnel and DMB. Giles Memorial received thirty-five percent of Home Connections' collections. In 1991 the Giles Memorial-Medserv contract was terminated. Home Connections terminated at the same time.

AHCS and another DME business, McLean's [3] Drug, shared the DME business from Giles Memorial prior to the entry of Home Connections into the market.⁴ AHCS' market share predictably declined after Home Connections started up. This decline in business led AHCS to close its Pearisburg office on March 31, 1986. AHCS filed this lawsuit on August 1, 1988. By order of this court dated December 29, 1988, this case was dismissed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed, Advanced Health-Care Services, Inc. v. Radford Community Hosp., 910 F.2d 139 (4th Cir. 1990) ("Radford") and set forth the law of this case. Extensive discovery is now complete and defendants have filed a joint motion for summary judgment. As the court finds that plaintiff has not met its burdens to go forward with trial, defendants' motion is granted. AHCS' second amended complaint alleges seven counts of federal and state antitrust violations; these will be examined in turn.

[4] II.

HN1 [↑] The complex nature of antitrust litigation encourages summary disposition of such cases where permissible. The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals has approved of the use of summary judgment in antitrust cases.

¹ DME consists of canes, crutches, oxygen equipment, wheelchairs, walkers, hospital beds and other items used by persons recuperating at home from an accident or illness.

² Medserv is the corporate successor to Primedica, Inc., which itself was the corporate successor to Inhalation Therapy Services, Inc. Throughout this opinion, these entities will be referred to as "Medserv."

³ This was the second contract between Giles Memorial and Medserv. The first contract involved the provision of respiratory therapy services at the hospital and is not in issue here.

⁴ Indeed, both businesses had paid employees working in Giles Memorial's respiratory services department, and these employees roughly split referrals for DME.

Oksanen v. Page Memorial Hosp., 945 F.2d 696, 708 (4th Cir. 1991) (en banc), cert. denied, 117 L. Ed. 2d 137, 112 S. Ct. 973 (1992). HN2 In a case with as much complicated and detailed evidence as this, once the moving party has met its burden under Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c), the non-moving party "must do more than simply show that there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts," Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., Ltd. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 586, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538, 106 S. Ct. 1348 (1986), but must come forward with sufficient evidence favoring the non-moving party for a jury to return a verdict for that party. If the evidence is merely colorable or is not significantly probative, summary judgment may be granted. See Abcor Corp. v. AM Intern., Inc., 916 F.2d 924, 930 (4th Cir. 1990). After four years 5 of discovery, plaintiff has not been able to come forward with significantly probative evidence sufficient to create a triable issue of fact.

III. Unreasonable Restraint of Trade

Count 1 of plaintiff's second amended complaint alleges that defendants' implementation of the August 1, 1985 contract constituted an unreasonable restraint of trade in violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1.⁵ HN3 To prove that the contract constituted *493 an unreasonable restraint of trade, the Fourth Circuit instructed that AHCS must show:

- (1) that the conspiracy produced adverse, anticompetitive effects within the relevant product and geographic market; (2) that the objects and conduct pursuant to the conspiracy were illegal; and (3) that the plaintiff was injured as a proximate result of the conspiracy.

Radford, 910 F.2d at 144. (quoting Terry's Floor Fashions, Inc. v. Burlington Industries, Inc., 763 F.2d 604, 610 n.10 (4th Cir. 1985).

6 Plaintiff has not produced significantly probative evidence that the contract produced adverse, anticompetitive effects within the relevant product and geographic market. The parties have agreed, at least for the purpose of this motion, that the relevant product market is DME and the geographic market is the "greater Pearisburg, Virginia region," or Giles County. Prior to the entry of Home Connections, AHCS and McLean's Drug roughly split the market.⁶ After Home Connections entered the market, Super-Aid also began to do business in the DME market. The market became less concentrated after the entry of Home Connections, as consumers had a greater choice of suppliers. Plaintiff has submitted no evidence indicating that prices increased upon Home Connections' entry. For example, as might be expected from the appearance of new competitors, prices for oxygen concentrator rentals declined during the period in question. Nor has plaintiff demonstrated a substantial or continuing decline in the quality of DME available to consumers in the market as a result of any actions of Home Connections.⁷ Thus, since plaintiff has neither demonstrated a rise in the price or reduction in quality of 7 DME, nor a decrease in the number of firms supplying DME to consumers in Giles County, "the aphorism that 'the antitrust laws were enacted for the protection of competition not competitors' rings true in this case." Oksanen, 945 F.2d at 709 (citations omitted). See also Sewell Plastics, Inc. v. Coca-Cola Co., 720 F. Supp. 1196 (W.D.N.C. 1989) (plaintiff's § 1 claim dismissed -- general market condition for plastic bottles was more competitive after joint venture contract since price and market concentration decreased, production increased and overall quality and service was substantially unchanged), aff'd per curiam, 912 F.2d 463 (4th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1110 (1991).

8 AHCS may have been hurt by Home Connections' entry into the market, but there is no evidence that competition as a whole in the relevant market has been harmed. Based on the foregoing, plaintiff is unable to establish that the contract produced adverse, anticompetitive effects within the relevant product and geographic market; therefore, summary judgment is appropriate for Count 1.⁸

⁵ Although plaintiff's second amended complaint alleges that the contract was entered into in 1984, it is clear from the context of the complaint that plaintiff refers to the August 1, 1985 contract between Giles Memorial and Medserv.

⁶ Plaintiff's expert estimates that AHCS and McLean's combined market share exceeded 93 percent in 1985 prior to the entry of Home Connections in the DME market.

⁷ Although plaintiff has found a few specific instances of substandard quality of Home Connections' DME, Home Connections' inter-office memoranda suggest that the company was concerned about the lapses in quality; this concern seems unusual in a firm that was allegedly impervious to competition.

IV. Monopolization

Plaintiff alleges in Count 2 that defendants monopolized the DME market in Giles County in violation of section 2 of the Sherman Act. 15 U.S.C. § 2. HN4⁹ To prevail on a monopolization claim, a plaintiff must show possession of monopoly power in a relevant market, willful acquisition or maintenance of that power in an exclusionary or predatory manner, and causal antitrust injury. Radford, 910 F.2d at 147. [\[9\]](#) Plaintiff alleges that Home Connections possessed at least a seventy-five percent market share of the DME market in Giles County and that this constitutes monopoly power. Defendants claim that Home Connections never achieved a dominant share of the DME market in Giles County. HN5¹⁰ Numerous cases and commentators have suggested that absent extraordinary [\[*494\]](#) circumstances, a market share over fifty percent is required to show market power.⁹ [\[11\]](#) Plaintiff's evidence of market share was compiled by its expert, Dr. Roger Blair. Dr. Blair reports that Home Connections' market share reached a peak of 57.8 percent in 1989. Dr. Blair made two mistakes in his calculations. First, Dr. Blair calculated Home Connections' market share based on billed revenue, while calculating all other suppliers' market shares on collected revenue. Second, Dr. Blair calculated Home Connections' market share based on revenue from Giles County residents and from non-Giles County residents, but calculated others suppliers' market shares based on revenue from Giles County only.¹⁰ When these mistakes are corrected, Home Connections' true market share of DME in Giles County peaks at 44.1 percent in 1989 and averages 32.9 percent [\[10\]](#) over the 1986-1989 period of its existence. Thus, defendants' market share was significantly below the established floor for showing monopoly power.

HN6¹¹ Another means of viewing monopoly power is through market share trends. If the defendants' market share is declining and/or other competitors' markets shares are rising, then the defendants can hardly possess monopoly power. See, e.g., Richter Concrete Corp. v. Hilltop Concrete Corp., 691 F.2d 818, 826 \(6th Cir. 1982\) ("The fact that [defendant's] share of the market was declining also belies whatever inference of capacity to monopolize that may be drawn from the size of its market share."); United States v. Syufy Enterprises, 903 F.2d 659, 666 \(9th Cir. 1990\) ("In evaluating monopoly power, it is not market share that counts, but the ability to maintain [\[12\]](#) market share.") (emphasis in original). Toward the end of the relevant time period, Home Connections steadily lost ground to other DME firms. For example, from 1989 to 1990, Home Connections' market share dropped 22.7 percent, while McLean's market share rose 13.7 percent, Hometown's market share rose 62.5 percent, and Super-Aid's market share rose 140 percent.¹¹ AHCS's market share fell 2.7 percent, but given its competitors' gains, it would be

⁸ As discussed in the monopolization section, plaintiff is also unable to establish that the objects and conduct pursuant to the contract were illegal or that it suffered antitrust injury.

⁹ In United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, 148 F.2d 416, 424 \(2d Cir. 1945\), Judge Learned Hand suggested that while 90 percent of the market "is enough to constitute a monopoly, it is doubtful whether sixty or sixty-four percent would be enough; and certainly thirty-three percent is not." See also White Bag Co. v. International Paper Co., 579 F.2d 1384, 1387 \(4th Cir. 1974\) (cases have shown that "when monopolization has been found the defendant controlled seventy to one hundred percent of the relevant market"); Fineman v. Armstrong World Industries, Inc., 980 F.2d 171, 201-02 \(3d Cir. 1992\) ("A significantly larger market share than 55 percent has been required to demonstrate prima facie monopoly power."), cert. denied, 122 L. Ed. 2d 677, 113 S. Ct. 1285 \(1993\); Domed Stadium Hotel, Inc. v. Holiday Inns, Inc., 732 F.2d 480, 489 and 489-90 n. 11 \(5th Cir. 1984\) (requiring a market share of at least 50 percent); P. Areeda and H. Hovenkamp, Antitrust Law P 518.3c at 549 (1992 Supp.) ("There is substantial merit in a presumption that market shares below 50 or 60 percent do not constitute monopoly power.").

¹⁰ Plaintiff does not deny these errors; rather, plaintiff asserts that the correct measure of market share is in new referrals, not revenues. Dr. Blair claims that Home Connections secured over 78 percent of DME referrals from Giles Memorial. This statistic is not relevant, however, because the proper geographic market for this analysis is Giles County, not Giles Memorial Hospital.

¹¹ It is significant that Super-Aid Pharmacy entered the market during the period of alleged monopoly power. The DME market is characterized by low barriers to entry, which makes exercise of monopoly power nearly impossible, as any attempt to raise prices above the competitive level will lure into the market new competitors able and willing to offer their commercial goods for less. See Syufy Enterprises, 903 F.2d at 664-65.

speculative to attribute plaintiff's loss to defendants' exercise of market power. Moreover, in 1991 Home Connections went out of business, which was certainly not indicative of monopoly power.¹²

[13] Plaintiff contends that extraordinary market circumstances existed that would permit a finding of monopolization despite market shares below 50 percent. See Fineman, 980 F.2d at 202. Dr. Blair argues that market share data based on revenues understate Home Connections' market power because [*495] they included ongoing rental revenue from patients who selected their DME supplier before Home Connections began operations in August 1985. However, the majority of rental revenue is derived from oxygen concentrators, and the average rental period for oxygen concentrators is five months. Thus by 1986 the skewing effect of pre-existing oxygen patients would have faded.

Plaintiff's principal allegation of exclusionary or predatory conduct is that discharge planners employed by Home Connections steered to Home Connections all Giles Memorial patients in need of DME upon discharge. Plaintiff alleges that Medserv and Giles Memorial contracted to make Home Connections a "preferred provider" through a kickback arrangement with Giles Memorial's discharge planners. The evidence does not support these allegations. No Giles Memorial discharge planner was employed by Home Connections [14] or Medserv. In recognition of the potential antitrust implications of the contract, Giles Memorial's Administrator instituted a hospital policy of (1) advising all patients requiring DME of all suppliers in the community, (2) reframing from recommending any particular supplier, and (3) requiring the patient to choose a desired supplier. Giles Memorial prepared a "freedom of choice" form listing known DME suppliers in the community, including AHCS. After the patient made a selection, the chosen supplier was notified and DME was ordered therefrom. Though this form was not found in all patient records, it was found in the files of 83 percent of discharged Giles Memorial patients who chose Home Connections.

Although plaintiff alleged that over 85 percent of discharged Giles Memorial patients in need of DME selected Home Connections, plaintiff's expert was able to trace only 8.9 percent of new DME rentals in Giles County during 1985-1990; he found that 59 of the 75 patients whose records he could trace selected Home Connections. This sample cannot provide a sound statistical basis for inference of steering by defendants, as the few files found may merely show that some firms kept better [15] records.¹³

Plaintiff has not come forward with a single former Giles Memorial patient who claims to have been influenced to choose Home Connections, or who "did not believe they were given a choice,"¹⁴ despite its identification above of 75 potential candidates for steering. Nor has plaintiff found any Giles Memorial physician or employee who systematically referred patients to Home Connections. Its only evidence of steering comes from two former Home Connections employees who left Home Connections in the spring of 1986, Michael Lawhorn and Debra Lee. They claim to have been told to steer patients to Home Connections, and to switch patients who already had DME in their homes from AHCS or McLean's to Home Connections. Both admit that they have never steered a new DME patient to Home Connections [16] or switched an existing AHCS or McLean's patient to Home Connections. They never watched a single patient select a DME supplier; they never witnessed a single patient being steered to Home Connections. Therefore, neither has personal knowledge of actual predatory conduct by defendants.¹⁵

¹² During the relevant period, market concentration lessened notably as Home Connections, AHCS and McLean's all possessed more than 10 percent market shares and the smaller DME suppliers' business grew.

¹³ For example, no records of discharged Giles Memorial patients who selected AHCS were found; Dr. Blair therefore speculates that AHCS received zero percent of DME orders by former Giles Memorial patients from 1985-1990.

¹⁴ Plaintiff's one witness who claimed to have not been informed of alternative DME suppliers, Mrs. Ethelene Atwell, later recanted her affidavit, explaining that she did not understand the affidavit that she signed for plaintiff.

¹⁵ Similarly, Mary Ellen Britts and Don Walker have no personal knowledge of whether defendants steered Giles Memorial patients to Home Connections. Their testimony precluded by plaintiff is inadmissible hearsay, as is Lawhorn's assertion that he heard that physicians were coerced to refer patients to Home Connections.

HN7 "A firm, even one with monopoly power, is not guilty of predatory exclusionary conduct when it is simply exploiting the competitive advantages legitimately available to it." Radford, 910 F.2d at 147 n.14. [17] Plaintiff has produced no significantly probative evidence that defendants went beyond the competitive [*496] advantages legitimately available to Home Connections: goodwill and confidence engendered by the satisfactory provision of hospital services and continuity of care from the hospital to the home.

HN8 Antitrust injury arises only from harm to the competitive process itself and not from harm to a single competitor. AHCS must show that defendants caused harm to the process of competition that existed in the DME market prior to Home Connections entry into it, not just that AHCS was injured. See Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, 429 U.S. 477, 487-89, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701, 97 S. Ct. 690 (1977); Military Services Realty, Inc. v. Realty Consultants of Virginia, Ltd., 823 F.2d 829, 832 (4th Cir. 1987) ("The elimination of a single competitor standing alone, does not prove anticompetitive effect."). As discussed above, the Giles County DME market became more competitive in the late 1980s than it had been prior to Home Connections' entry. From a time where AHCS and McLean's Drug roughly split the DME market, [18] Home Connections' market entry reduced market concentration; consumers had more choice, not less. Since there is no substantial, credible evidence that prices rose or quality declined, AHCS has not shown harm to the process of competition in the Giles County DME market.

Therefore, since AHCS has not come forward with significantly probative evidence of possession by defendants of monopoly power in the Giles County DME market, willful acquisition or maintenance of that power in an exclusionary or predatory manner, or causal antitrust injury, summary judgment is appropriate for Count 2.

V. Monopoly Leveraging

In Count 3, plaintiff alleges that Giles Memorial leveraged its monopoly power in the acute care services market to gain an unfair competitive advantage for Home Connections in the DME market. Under this theory, plaintiff argues, it need not offer proof that Home Connections possessed monopoly power in the DME market in Giles County to establish a violation of Sherman Act section 2. Rather, plaintiff claims it may show that defendants violated section 2 by using its monopoly power in the acute care services market to gain exclusive access to patients who were in need of DME upon [19] discharge. See Berkey Photo, Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 603 F.2d 263, 275 (2d Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1093, 62 L. Ed. 2d 783, 100 S. Ct. 1061 (1980).¹⁶ The Sixth Circuit elected to follow Berkey Photo in Kerasotes Michigan Theatres, Inc. v. National Amusements Inc., 854 F.2d 135 (6th Cir. 1988), cert. dismissed, 490 U.S. 1087 (1989), but the Third and Ninth Circuit Courts of Appeal have emphatically rejected monopoly leveraging as impermissible expansions of the sweep of section 2. See Fineman, 980 F.2d at 204-06; Alaska Airlines, Inc. v. United Airlines, Inc., 948 F.2d 536, 547 (9th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 118 L. Ed. 2d 316, 112 S. Ct. 1603 (1992). The Fourth Circuit has expressly declined in this case to determine whether there exists a claim for "monopoly leveraging" that materially differs from the classic claim for monopolization under Sherman Act section 2. Radford, 910 F.2d at 149 n.17 [20] ("We reserve definitive resolution of that issue for a case in which the issue is squarely presented."); see also M&M Medical Supplies and Service, Inc. v. Pleasant Valley Hosp., Inc., 981 F.2d 160, 168-69 (4th Cir. 1992) (en banc) ("There will be time enough to evaluate the validity of this assumption after the parties have developed a factual record."), cert. denied, 125 L. Ed. 2d 662, 113 S. Ct. 2962 (1993).

[21] The court finds the reasoning in Fineman and Alaska Airlines more persuasive. HN9 Berkey Photo's leveraging theory does not follow from the text of the Sherman Act and destroys the distinction between concerted [*497] conduct that "restrains trade" in section 1 and unilateral conduct that "monopolizes or attempts to monopolize" in section 2. See Fineman, 980 F.2d at 205-06. Further, when a monopolist has a lawful monopoly in one market and uses its power to gain a competitive advantage in a second market, the anticompetitive dangers that implicate the Sherman Act are not present. See Alaska Airlines, 948 F.2d at 548.

¹⁶ In Twin Laboratories, Inc. v. Weider Health & Fitness, 900 F.2d 566, 570-71 (2d Cir. 1990), the Second Circuit cautioned that the Berkey Photo discussion of what later became known as 'monopoly leveraging' was mere dictum and involved a classic tying claim. Therefore, it is unclear if the Second Circuit would recognize monopoly leveraging as distinct from a tying or monopolization claim. See Sunshine Cellular v. Vanguard Cellular Systems, Inc., 810 F. Supp. 486, 495 n.7 (S.D.N.Y. 1992).

Even if the court were to accept the monopoly leveraging theory, AHCS has failed to adduce significantly probative evidence that Home Connections gained an unfair competitive advantage in the DME market in Giles County. Without some sort of overt conduct such as steering, Home Connections had no way to "pull the alleged lever." Therefore, summary judgment is appropriate on Count 3.

VI. Attempted Monopolization

Plaintiff alleges that defendants engaged in a series of exclusionary and predatory acts specifically [22] intended to acquire monopoly power in the DME market in violation of Sherman Act section 2. HN10¹⁷ To prove attempted monopolization, the plaintiff must prove a specific intent to monopolize a relevant market, predatory or anticompetitive acts, and a dangerous probability of successful monopolization. Radford, 910 F.2d at 147. Attempted monopolization requires "a specific intent to destroy competition or build monopoly." Times-Picayune Pub. Co. v. United States, 345 U.S. 594, 626, 97 L. Ed. 1277, 73 S. Ct. 872 \(1953\). "A desire to increase market share or even to drive a competitor out of business through vigorous competition on the merits is not sufficient." Abcor, 916 F.2d at 927. The requisite intent to monopolize may be shown through direct evidence or through inference by showing predatory conduct. Id. Plaintiff has no direct evidence of specific intent to monopolize; therefore, the first two elements of attempted monopolization merge into a requisite showing of predatory acts.

As described in the monopolization section, AHCS can produce no significantly probative [23] evidence of steering of patients by defendants; coercion of doctors or employees by defendants; or uncompetitively high prices or consistently inferior quality of defendants' DME. Therefore, as a matter of law, AHCS cannot satisfy the first two elements of attempted monopolization.

HN11¹⁷ Where, as in this case, evidence of intent and predatory conduct is weak and entry barriers are low, the plaintiff must show a market share above 50 percent to show a 'dangerous probability of success.' See M&M Medical Services, 981 F.2d at 168 (attempted monopolization "claims involving between 30% and 50% shares should usually be rejected, except when conduct is very likely to achieve monopoly or when conduct is invidious . . ." (citing 3 P. Areeda and D. Turner, Antitrust Law, P 835c, at 350 (1978)); Barr Laboratories, Inc. v. Abbott Laboratories, 978 F.2d 98, 112-15 \(3d Cir. 1992\) (holding that defendant's 50 percent market share was insufficient to show dangerous probability of success)). As discussed in the monopolization section, Home Connections' market share peaked at 44 percent and averaged 33 percent for the period 1986-1990.¹⁷ [24] Therefore, plaintiff can satisfy none of the elements of attempted monopolization and summary judgment is appropriate on Count 4.

VII. Conspiracy to Monopolize

Plaintiff alleges in Count 5 that Giles Memorial and Medserv conspired to participate in exclusionary and predatory acts with the intent to acquire and share the rewards of monopoly [25] power in the DME market in Giles County in violation of Sherman Act section 2. HN12¹⁷ In order to prove a conspiracy to monopolize, "a plaintiff must show concerted action, a specific intent to achieve an unlawful [*498] monopoly, and commission of an overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy." Radford, 910 F.2d at 150. However, "unlike an attempted monopolization claim, it is not necessary that the committed acts, themselves, be predatory." Id.

As discussed in the attempted monopolization section, there is no significantly probative evidence that defendants intended to engage in anything other than vigorous competition. See Abcor Corp., 916 F.2d at 927. Therefore, as plaintiff has not shown that defendants intended to monopolize the DME market in Giles County through predatory conduct, summary judgment is appropriate on Count 5.

VIII. Denial of Access to an Essential Facility

¹⁷ As discussed in the monopolization section, Home Connections' market share fell significantly (from 43 to 34 percent) from 1989 to 1990, which is further evidence that there was no dangerous probability of monopolization of the DME market by defendants. See Richter Concrete, 691 F.2d at 826. Finally, the fact that Home Connections so swiftly went out of business makes the likelihood of monopolization seem quite remote. See Lektro-Vend Corp. v. Vendo Co., 660 F.2d 255, 270-71 \(7th Cir. 1981\), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 921, 71 L. Ed. 2d 461, 102 S. Ct. 1277 \(1982\).

In Count 6, AHCS alleges that defendants violated section 2 of the Sherman Act by denying it access to inpatients at Giles Memorial; it claims that access to these patients constitutes a "facility" essential to the ability to compete in the DME market in Giles [26] County. Much like monopoly leveraging, HN13 the "essential facilities" approach to monopolization claims examines whether market power in one market (acute care hospital services) is being used to create or further a monopoly in another market (DME). See Radford, 910 F.2d at 150.

The four elements of an essential facilities claim are "(1) control of the essential facility by a monopolist; (2) a competitor's inability practically or reasonably to duplicate the essential facility; (3) the denial of the use of the facility to a competitor; and (4) the feasibility of providing the facility to competitors." Radford, 910 F.2d at 150.

In order to satisfy the second element, AHCS must show that denial of access to Giles Memorial inpatients in their hospital rooms caused "more than inconvenience, or even some economic loss." Twin Laboratories, 900 F.2d at 569-70. Plaintiff must show that this denial inflicted a "severe handicap" that threatened to eliminate competition in the market for DME in Giles County. See id.; Alaska Airlines, 948 F.2d at 544-45 ("A facility that is [27] controlled by a single firm will be considered "essential" only if control of the facility carries with it the power to eliminate competition in the downstream market.") (emphasis in original). Market share statistics have shown that access to Giles Memorial patients is not essential to doing business in the DME market in Giles County. Throughout Home Connections' existence, rival DME companies continued to do substantial business, and, with the exception of AHCS, were consistently gaining market share. In fact, McLean Drug's share of the total DME market from 1986-1990 exceeds Home Connections' share.

AHCS is also unable to show that defendants denied competitors any access to Giles Memorial inpatients, or that increased access was feasible. As discussed in the monopolization section, patients were presented with a "freedom of choice" form that listed all known options for DME, including AHCS. Discharge personnel were instructed to remain neutral as to a patient's choice. Plaintiff has not come forward with significantly probative evidence of steering or other manipulation; therefore, AHCS did have reasonable access to Giles Memorial patients, and further access would violate [28] Giles Memorial's "non-solicitation" policy. Plaintiff argues that Giles Memorial could have implemented a system whereby qualified DME dealers would rotate initial contacts with Giles Memorial inpatients; however, feasibility must be analyzed not in terms of all the possibilities, but in the context of defendant's normal course of business. Laurel Sand & Gravel, Inc. v. CSX Transp., Inc. 924 F.2d 539, 545 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 116 L. Ed. 2d 39, 112 S. Ct. 64 (1991).

Plaintiff's argument that Giles Memorial's policy of not allowing it face-to-face contact with patients could have been improved to provide more competition does not go far enough to establish a section 2 violation under this framework. Access to patients was not essential to competition in Giles County, nor do Giles Memorial's policies completely deny AHCS patient access, nor is it feasible to permit AHCS to solicit business directly in patient's hospital rooms. Therefore, summary judgment is appropriate on Count 6.

[*499] IX. State Law Claims

Plaintiff alleges in Count 7 that defendants have tortiously interfered in AHCS's contracts with former [29] Giles Memorial patients in violation of Virginia common law. Since summary judgment is granted as to all federal antitrust claims, plaintiff's pendent state law claim is dismissed without prejudice. United Mine Workers of America v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 726, 16 L. Ed. 2d 218, 86 S. Ct. 1130 \(1966\).

X. Conclusion

For the reasons discussed above, defendants' motion for summary judgment is granted. An appropriate order shall issue this day.

ENTER: This 15th day of March, 1994.

James C. Turk

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

846 F. Supp. 488, *499L 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7482, 29

FINAL ORDER - March 15, 1994, Filed

By: Hon. James C. Turk

United States District Judge

In accordance with the written Memorandum Opinion entered this day, it is that defendants' joint motion for summary judgment is GRANTED as to counts one through six of plaintiff's second amended complaint. The state law claims in count seven of plaintiff's second amended complaint are dismissed without prejudice.

ADJUDGED AND ORDERED

The Clerk of the Court is directed to remove this case from the active docket of the court and to send certified copies of this Order and accompanying Memorandum Opinion to all counsel of [30] record.

ENTER: This 15th day of March, 1994.

James C. Turk

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

End of Document

Hudson Motors Partnership v. Crest Leasing Enters.

United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York

March 21, 1994, Decided

93-CV-5642

Reporter

845 F. Supp. 969 *; 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3390 **

HUDSON MOTORS PARTNERSHIP t/a HUDSON TOYOTA, Plaintiff, v. CREST LEASING ENTERPRISES, INC. and METRO AUTO LEASING, INC., Defendants.

Core Terms

punitive damages, Defendants', invoice, bad faith, Chattel, antitrust, ex parte order, counterclaim, seizure, sanctions, motion to quash, vexatiously, inherent power, allegations, proceedings, Leasing, set-off, antitrust action, sales, breach of contract action, breach of contract, fraudulent, motion to consolidate, order of seizure, cause of action, checks, cases, attorney's fees, contractual, multiplied

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Damages > Punitive Damages

Contracts Law > Breach > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Damages > General Overview

Contracts Law > ... > Measurement of Damages > Foreseeable Damages > General Overview

Contracts Law > ... > Damages > Types of Damages > Punitive Damages

HN1[] Damages, Punitive Damages

The general rule under New York law is that punitive damages are not available in breach of contract actions because they deal with wrongs between private parties.

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Damages > Punitive Damages

Contracts Law > Breach > General Overview

Commercial Law (UCC) > Sales (Article 2) > Remedies > General Overview

Contracts Law > ... > Types of Damages > Compensatory Damages > General Overview

845 F. Supp. 969, *969LÁ1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3390, 3390

Contracts Law > ... > Damages > Types of Damages > Punitive Damages

HN2[] Damages, Punitive Damages

If the wrong associated with a breach of contract is not aimed at the public, but the actions of the breaching party involve that degree of bad faith evincing a disingenuous or dishonest failure to carry out a contract, then punitive damages are appropriate.

Computer & Internet Law > Civil Actions > Damages

Contracts Law > ... > Damages > Types of Damages > Punitive Damages

Torts > ... > Types of Damages > Punitive Damages > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Damages > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Damages > Punitive Damages

Contracts Law > Remedies > General Overview

Contracts Law > ... > Types of Damages > Compensatory Damages > General Overview

Contracts Law > ... > Measurement of Damages > Foreseeable Damages > General Overview

Torts > ... > Punitive Damages > Measurement of Damages > Judicial Review

HN3[] Civil Actions, Damages

Punitive damages will not be awarded in a breach of contract action unless to do so would deter morally culpable conduct.

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Damages > Punitive Damages

Torts > ... > Types of Damages > Punitive Damages > General Overview

HN4[] Damages, Punitive Damages

Punitive damages are appropriate when they are necessary to both punish a party for egregious behavior and to deter future similar conduct.

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Misconduct & Unethical Behavior > General Overview

HN5[] Sanctions, Misconduct & Unethical Behavior

See 28 U.S.C.S. § 1927.

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Misconduct & Unethical Behavior > General Overview

845 F. Supp. 969, *969L^A1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3390, 3390

HN6 [down arrow] Sanctions, Misconduct & Unethical Behavior

Without a demonstration of bad faith on the part of the attorney in question, sanctions pursuant to 28 U.S.C.S. § 1927 are inappropriate. Imposition of a sanction under § 1927 requires a clear showing of bad faith.

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Misconduct & Unethical Behavior > General Overview

HN7 [down arrow] Sanctions, Misconduct & Unethical Behavior

Like an award made pursuant to the court's inherent power, an award under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1927 is proper when the attorney's actions are so completely without merit as to require the conclusion that they must have been undertaken for some improper purpose such as delay.

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Misconduct & Unethical Behavior > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Baseless Filings > General Overview

HN8 [down arrow] Sanctions, Misconduct & Unethical Behavior

Where counsel's alleged misconduct is the filing and arguing of a claim, it is not sufficient that the claim be found meritless; the claim must be without a plausible legal or factual basis and lacking in justification to warrant the imposition of sanctions under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1927.

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Misconduct & Unethical Behavior > General Overview

HN9 [down arrow] Sanctions, Misconduct & Unethical Behavior

Under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1927, a court may infer intent from a total lack of factual or legal basis for a suit.

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Provisional Remedies > General Overview

Contracts Law > ... > Default > Foreclosure & Repossession > General Overview

HN10 [down arrow] Remedies, Provisional Remedies

N.Y. C.P.L.R. 7102\(c\) provides that an order of seizure is available if the affidavit in support of such an application establishes that the plaintiff is entitled to possession by virtue of the facts set forth and that the chattel is wrongfully held by the defendants.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Counterclaims > General Overview

Contracts Law > Breach > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

845 F. Supp. 969, *969LÁ1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3390, 3390

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Defenses

Contracts Law > Breach > Breach of Contract Actions > General Overview

HN11 [blue download icon] Private Actions, Remedies

It is well established that the remedy for violation of the antitrust law is not avoidance of payments due under a contract, but rather the redress which the antitrust statute establishes, a private treble damage action. Antitrust counterclaims are therefore disfavored in a simple breach of contract claim. The exception to this general rule is limited to those cases where the judgment of the court would itself be enforcing antitrust conduct.

Civil Procedure > ... > Attorney Fees & Expenses > Basis of Recovery > American Rule

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Costs & Attorney Fees > General Overview

HN12 [blue download icon] Basis of Recovery, American Rule

Under the inherent power of the court to supervise and control its own proceedings, an exception to the American Rule has evolved which permits the court to award reasonable attorneys' fee to the prevailing party when the losing party has acted in bad faith, vexatiously, wantonly, or for oppressive reasons.

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Misconduct & Unethical Behavior > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Sanctions > Baseless Filings > General Overview

HN13 [blue download icon] Sanctions, Misconduct & Unethical Behavior

Unlike awards pursuant to 28 U.S.C.S. § 1927, sanctions pursuant to the court's inherent power may be made against the losing party or against the losing party's attorney, or both. The standard of bad faith is the same under both § 1927 and the court's inherent power. Furthermore, an award pursuant to the court's inherent power can be assessed against a party for either commencing or for continuing an action in bad faith, vexatiously, wantonly, or for oppressive reasons. Bad faith may be found, not only in the actions that led to the lawsuit, but also in the conduct of the litigation.

Counsel: [1] For plaintiff: Marjorie Berman, Esq., Leventhal Slade & Krantz, New York, New York.

For defendant: David Goldstein, Esq., Spring Valley, New York.

Judges: Glasser

Opinion by: I. LEO GLASSER

Opinion

[*972] MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

GLASSER, United States District Judge:

This is a motion by plaintiff Hudson Motors Partnership t/a Hudson Toyota ("Hudson Toyota"), for summary judgment pursuant to Rule 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure against defendants Crest Leasing Enterprises, Inc. ("Crest") and Metro Auto Leasing, Inc. ("Metro") (collectively, the "Defendants"), on plaintiff's breach of contract and Uniform Commercial Code ("UCC") causes of action. In connection therewith plaintiff moves to dismiss Defendants' antitrust counterclaims. Plaintiff also seeks punitive damages on its breach of contract and UCC causes of actions and attorneys' fees and costs pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1927, and the court's inherent power, against Defendants and their attorney.

FACTS

The material facts are not in dispute. Between July 22, 1993, and October 22, 1993, Hudson Toyota delivered a total of eight Toyota automobiles to Defendants. Defendants took possession of all eight vehicles and [2] then refused to either pay for or return the automobiles. Defendants then sold seven of the eight vehicles to third parties even though they did not have valid title. Pl.'s 3(g) Statement, PP 6-64. See Complaint, P 1. Specifically, Defendants tendered to plaintiff three checks which were returned for insufficient funds and three checks which were returned and marked "payment stopped." Because one of the eight vehicles involved in this action had not been sold to a third party, Hudson Toyota moved ex parte for a seizure of this car.

A. The Ex Parte Order

On December 13, 1993, this court signed an ex parte order of seizure (the "Order") directing the United States Marshal for the Eastern District of New York to seize a 1994 Toyota Camry, white exterior, grey interior, vehicle identification number 4T1SK12E4RU326466 (the "Chattel"). The court issued the Order based on, among other things, the allegations contained in the papers submitted by Hudson Toyota that it had sold the Chattel to Metro on or about October 18, 1993, in exchange for the promise of payment of $ 17,557.00, as evidenced by Invoice No. 6315, dated October 18, 1993. Affidavit of Gayle Epstein, December, 1993, [3] P 4, Ex. A. Ms. Epstein, who is responsible for fleet sales of Toyota automobiles for Hudson Toyota, stated that despite numerous attempts to procure payment for the automobile, Hudson Toyota had not received the $ 17,557.00. Id., P 6.

Based on this conduct, plaintiff argued that "there is every reason to believe that Metro will sell, at the earliest possible moment, the one and only car it still possesses [and] . . . based on defendants' previous conduct, unless this order is granted without notice to Metro, Metro will sell, transfer, conceal or otherwise dispose of the car." Pl.'s Mem. in Support of Ex Parte Order, at 12. In this regard, plaintiff also brought to the court's attention the order of Justice Shainswit of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, Index No. 43145/90-001, July 24, 1990, in an action by the State of New York against Michael Silverstein ("Silverstein"), President of Crest and Metro, and several of his other companies. In this order, Justice Shainswit granted the Attorney-General's petition for an order (i) permanently enjoining the respondents from engaging in the business of selling or leasing motor vehicles unless a $ 2,000,000 performance bond was [4] filed with the Department of Insurance; (ii) enjoining respondents from engaging in any fraudulent or illegal activity; and (iii) directing [*973] the non-bankrupt respondents to make restitution to consumers injured by the fraudulent or illegal conduct, and to pay $ 2,000 in costs to the State of New York. A copy of Justice Shainswit's order is attached as Exhibit 4 to the Affidavit of Marjorie E. Berman, December 30, 1993. In granting the People's petition, Justice Shainswit noted that,

The petition alleges, in essence, that respondent Michael Silverstein operated the three corporate respondents, each claiming to be an authorized dealer for several makes of foreign and domestic cars. The petition sets forth a litany of fraudulent practices directed at consumers. Submitted in support of these allegations are a selection (several dozen) of the hundreds of complaints received by the State Bureau of Consumer Frauds and protection against the three respondents. Id. at 1-2.¹

¹ Defendants contend that this information is collateral to the issues in this action and that plaintiff should be sanctioned for bringing it to the court's attention. Defs.' Mem. at 5. Although plaintiff has also made reference to this decision in connection with its request for punitive damages, this information first came to light in connection with plaintiff's request for an order of seizure. In

[5] Based on plaintiff's submissions, the court agreed that unless the Order was granted without notice it was probable that the Chattel would become unavailable for seizure by reason of being transferred, concealed, disposed of, or removed from the state. The court also concluded that seizure was warranted because Defendants had failed to either pay for or return the Chattel and therefore plaintiff enjoyed a superior possessory right to the Chattel.

B. The Attempted Seizure

On December 16, 1993, the United States Marshal for the Eastern District of New York unsuccessfully attempted to seize the Chattel from Defendants' place of business. In his affidavit, Deputy Marshal Steven C. Tocci stated that he had arranged to meet with a representative of plaintiff's, Mr. Scott Malzer, at the corner of 27th Street and 42nd Avenue in Long Island City, who was there to assist him in identifying the Chattel. Affidavit of Steven C. Tocci, undated, P 3. As Deputy Marshal Tocci circled the block looking for Mr. Malzer, "we noticed we were being followed by a white Mercedes with New Jersey license plates. I was told by Mr. Malzer that a similar vehicle belonged to Michael Silverstein, the president [6] of Metro Auto Leasing, Inc." Id., P 5. When Deputy Marshal Tocci, his partner Ray Wasson, and Mr. Malzer entered Defendants' showroom, "there were three spaces for vehicles and the middle space was noticeably empty. In addition, the showroom smelled of gasoline fumes." Id., P 7. Deputy Marshal Tocci contacted Silverstein's attorney ("Counsel") on the telephone and instructed him to instruct his client to return the car. Id., P 9. Counsel reported to Deputy Marshal Tocci that he could not get in touch with his client but had left messages for him. Id., P 11.

In his affidavit, Scott Malzer, a driver for the fleet sales division of Hudson Toyota, stated that while waiting at the corner of 27th Street and 42nd Avenue for the Deputy Marshal, he was asked by a driver employed by Silverstein what he was doing. Affidavit of Scott Malzer, December, 1993, P 6. Malzer replied that he was "making a delivery." Id. Approximately fifteen minutes later he went to a telephone booth to call his employer and "I heard a car behind me and turned around. Silverstein stood in front of me holding a camera trying to take my picture. I went to another phone booth and called my employer." [7] Id., P 7. Malzer states that as he and the Marshal approached the showroom, "we saw Silverstein's car, a white Mercedes with New Jersey license plates, drive away." Id., P 9. As stated above, when Malzer and the Marshal entered the showroom to seize the Chattel, it was gone.

C. Order of Confirmation

On January 14, 1994, Defendants moved to quash the ex parte order and consolidate this [*974] action with Defendants' antitrust action currently pending before Judge Korman in the Eastern District of New York.² Plaintiff cross-moved to confirm the Order. Defendants based their motion on three grounds: (i) the invoice attached to plaintiff's papers in support of its ex parte order was a "fraud"; (ii) plaintiff failed to report that a "related case" was pending before Judge Korman; and (iii) by bringing its ex parte motion plaintiff breached an agreement with Defendants to retain the status quo pending the filing of plaintiff's answer in the antitrust action. The court rejected these assertions and confirmed the Order in an order dated January 14, 1994. The court also denied Defendants' consolidation motion. The Chattel was eventually surrendered to plaintiff on or about January 17, [8] 1994. In its Answer dated January 26, 1994, Defendants admitted the essential and material allegations of Hudson Toyota's complaint and asserted as a "set-off" the allegations contained in their antitrust complaint.

Plaintiff now moves to dismiss Defendants' set-off and seeks summary judgment and punitive damages on its breach of contract and UCC causes of action. Defendants offer no opposition to the appropriateness of summary judgment and the dismissal of the set-off. See Affidavit of Counsel, February 24, 1994, P 3 ("... defendants offer that regard, this information was probative of whether an ex parte order was appropriate. The decision to award punitive damages, infra, is not based on this information. However, as the discussion which follows concerning the attempted seizure of the Chattel makes clear, Defendants' actions were commensurate with the allegations in People of the State of New York v. Michael Oldsmobile Corp., et al., No. 43145/90-001.

² In Crest Leasing Enterprises, Inc. and Metro Auto Leasing, Inc. v. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc., et al., No. 93 Civ. 5452 (ERK), Crest and Metro seek damages against Hudson Toyota and others based on, among other things, an alleged violation of New York's Donnelly Act, N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 340 (McKinney 1988).

no opposition to plaintiff's motion for summary judgment on the non-payment claim relative to the sale of eight (8) cars"). Defendants also offer no [9] opposition to plaintiff's claim that damages total $ 127,305.00, plus interest. Defendants, however, do oppose the application for attorneys' fees and costs; they also argue that punitive damages are inappropriate in this situation.

DISCUSSION

I. Punitive Damages

HN1[] The general rule under New York law is that punitive damages are not available in breach of contract actions because they deal with wrongs between private parties. Hutton v. Klabal, 726 F. Supp. 67, 73 \(S.D.N.Y. 1989\) ("Under New York law, punitive damages cannot be awarded in breach of contract cases which involve private wrongs and where no public rights are involved."); Payne-Hayden, Inc. v. Loews Theatre Management Corp., 789 F. Supp. 1257, 1267 \(S.D.N.Y. 1992\) ("New York courts, the Second Circuit and courts within this district are virtually unanimous that punitive damages may not be awarded in breach of contract cases, unless the wrong is aimed at the public generally.").³

[10] The court in Payne-Hayden, however, may have overstated the case. HN2[] If the wrong associated with the breach is not aimed at the public, but the actions of the breaching party "involve that degree of bad faith evincing a disingenuous or dishonest failure to carry out a contract," Aero Garage Corp. v. Hirschfeld, 185 A.D.2d 775, 777, 586 N.Y.S.2d 611, 613 (1st Dep't) (punitive damages appropriate where defendant was obligated to obtain an extension of certificate of occupancy, did not do so, and thwarted plaintiff's attempts to obtain said certificate) (internal quotations omitted), leave to appeal denied, 81 N.Y.2d 701, 610 N.E.2d 388, 594 N.Y.S.2d 715 (1992), then punitive damages are appropriate. See also Williamson, Picket, Gross, Inc. v. Hirschfeld, 92 A.D.2d 289, 295, 460 N.Y.S.2d 36, 41 (1st Dep't 1983) (no punitive damages if the offending conduct merely constitutes breach of contract, but punitive damages are appropriate if offending conduct involves a high degree of bad faith); Jackson v. Kump, No. 93 Civ. 3519, 1994 [11] WL 9691 at * 6 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 13, 1994) ("In New York . . . even where a public right is not at issue, punitive damages might be available for breach of contract.") (citing Aero Garage). In the leading tort case involving the propriety of punitive damages, New York's Court of Appeals stated that,

Punitive or exemplary damages have been allowed in cases where the wrong [*975] complained of is morally culpable, or is actuated by evil and reprehensible motives, not only to punish the defendant but to deter him, as well as others who might otherwise be so prompted, from indulging in similar conduct in the future. . . . The list of actions in which punitive damages have been permitted in this State is long . . . libel . . . desecration of a grave . . . forcible abduction of a minor child . . . fraud and deceit "It is not the form of the action that gives the right to the jury to give punitive damages, but the moral culpability of the defendant."

Walker v. Sheldon, 10 N.Y.2d 401, 404-05, 179 N.E.2d 497, 498, 223 N.Y.S.2d 488, 490-91 \(1961\) (citations omitted) (in fraud and deceit action where defendant induced plaintiff [12] to enter into a contract by means of false and fraudulent representations and such activities were the means by which it did business, punitive damages are appropriate). Given this standard of review, HN3[] punitive damages will not be awarded in a breach of contract action unless to do so would deter "morally culpable conduct." Werner, Zaroff, Slotnick, Stern & Askenazy v. Lewis, 155 Misc.2d 558, 561, 588 N.Y.S.2d 960, 961-62 \(N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1992\) (where plaintiff's computer crashes due to a conditional statement that defendant had secretly put into plaintiff's program, punitive damages are appropriate in part because defendant's action were arguably criminal). Punitive damages are not appropriate in a Straightforward breach of contract action. Geler v. National Westminster Bank USA, 770 F. Supp. 210 \(S.D.N.Y. 1991\) (no punitive damages for failure to release funds allegedly owed pursuant to a certificate of deposit).

³ Both parties agree that New York law applies.

Applying these general criteria to this case, punitive damages are appropriate because the actions of Defendants evidence a "degree of bad faith evincing a disingenuous or dishonest failure to carry [13] out a contract." Aero Garage, 185 A.D.2d at 777, 586 N.Y.S.2d at 613 (internal quotations omitted).⁴ To begin, there is no dispute that Defendants intentionally and willfully breached their contractual obligations under the sales contracts. Defs.' 3(g) Statement, PP 6-64. If that were all Defendants did punitive damages would not be available. However, Defendants went beyond a mere breach of their contracts and embarked on a course to thwart at every turn plaintiff's contractual rights. Moreover, these efforts were performed in bad faith. For example, in connection with the motion to quash the ex parte order of seizure, Silverstein stated under oath as follows:

As defendants' attorneys inform me, the crux of plaintiffs' [sic] argument that they are entitled to possession of the subject automobile rests upon their contention that the car in question was "sold" to Metro Auto Leasing, Inc. Such a contention by plaintiffs is an outright lie!

Affidavit of Michael Silverstein, December 23, 1993 ("Silverstein Aff'd,") P 5. However, Defendants now admit that the car was in fact sold to them by virtue of the fact that they are not opposing [14] the motion for summary judgment and by the fact that they have left unanswered Paragraph 51 of plaintiff's 3(g) statement ("On or about October 18, 1993, plaintiff and Metro entered into a contract of sale for delivery of a 1994 Toyota Camry . . .").⁵ Silverstein, therefore, was demonstrating bad faith (and perhaps perjury) in his statement to the court that the Chattel had not been sold and that an order of seizure was unwarranted.

[15] There is also no dispute that Defendants stopped payment on three checks; did not provide funds to cover the other three checks; and refused to return the Chattel in retaliation for plaintiff's alleged violation of New York's antitrust statute. See Defs.' [*976] Mem. at 3 ("It has been defendants' position throughout this litigation that they stopped payment on the checks as a result of plaintiff's involvement in a conspiracy . . . to put defendants out of business."). [HN4\[↑\]](#) Punitive damages are appropriate when they are necessary to both punish a party for egregious behavior and to deter future similar conduct. Sharapata v. Town of Islip, 56 N.Y.2d 332, 335, 437 N.E.2d 1104, 1105, 452 N.Y.S.2d 347, 348 \(1982\) ("Punitive or 'exemplary' damages, sometimes known as 'smart money', and thus seemingly attuned to the criminal rather than the civil side of the law, are not intended to compensate the injured party but to punish the tort-feasor for his conduct and to deter him and others like him from similar action in the future.") (footnote omitted). The twin aims of punitive damages in the tort context -- punishment and deterrence -- [16] are equally applicable in the contract context if, as in this case, a defendant's actions are egregious. Simply put, punitive damages are appropriate to remind Defendants that so-called self-help for antitrust violations in the form of selling cars to third persons without paying the seller for those items is unacceptable commercial behavior.

Punitive damages are also appropriate in this case because the actions of Defendants are similar to those steps taken by the defendants in Aero Garage; namely, a campaign to thwart plaintiff's contractual rights. Whereas in Aero Garage the defendants affirmatively sought to block plaintiff's contractual rights by, among other things, defying a court injunction and renewing their request that the certificate awarded to plaintiff be revoked, Defendants in this case failed to honor this court's order of seizure. As the discussion above demonstrates, it is more probable than not that Defendants moved the Chattel just prior to the arrival of the Marshal. However, it is uncontested that Defendants knew of the order of seizure as early as December 23, 1993 (the Order is attached to Silverstein's affidavit in support of Defendants' motion to [17] quash) but did not surrender the automobile until on or about January 17, 1994, following this court's order of confirmation. This is an example of bad faith (and perhaps criminal conduct) by Defendants evincing a dishonest refusal to honor their contractual duty to either pay for the car or return it.

⁴ Plaintiff also argues that punitive damages are appropriate because Defendants' breach harmed the public in general because the persons who purchased the cars were not given the appropriate documentation evidencing ownership. However, there is no indication in the record that Defendants' activities were aimed at the public in general; rather, harm to the public was a byproduct of Defendants' actions.

⁵ Local Rule 3(g) provides in relevant part that "all material facts set forth in the statement required to be served by the moving party will be deemed to be admitted unless controverted by the statement required to be served by the opposing party."

Furthermore, as in Aero Garage where the defendants instituted administrative proceedings in bad faith, Defendants in this action moved to quash the ex parte order on frivolous grounds. They originally argued that an invoice attached to plaintiff's papers in support its ex parte order was a "fraud." Silverstein stated in his affidavit that plaintiff never gave him the invoice in question and that in his dealings with plaintiff invoices were never tendered to him unless they were accompanied by a check from Defendants to plaintiff. Silverstein therefore argued that since he did not tender a check to plaintiff, the invoice must have been fraudulent:

I believe the "invoice" to be the product of a total and complete fabrication and back-dated by Ms. Epstein. Through the course of defendants' dealings with plaintiff (approximately 400 sales per year since 1989), plaintiff never [18] submitted invoices for any of the cars delivered to defendants unless accompanied by a check. Conspicuous by its absence is defendants' check which should have accompanied the invoice in question. Accordingly, I believe the "invoice" was created by Ms. Epstein solely for the purpose of creating a false pretense upon which plaintiff could proceed to obtain the ex parte Order at issue here.

Silverstein Aff'd, P 6 (emphasis in original).

Defendants' arguments were rejected and the Order confirmed because Silverstein's allegations were groundless. First, although Ms. Epstein conceded that she did not tender the invoice upon delivery of the vehicle, she explained that it was common practice to deliver automobiles to Defendants in reliance on their promise that a check would be forthcoming. Affidavit of Gayle Epstein, December 29, 1993 ("Epstein Aff'd"), P 2 ("When I sold the Chattel to Metro, Michael Silverstein, Metro's president, told me that he would send a check. Over the many years during which I sold automobiles to Silverstein's companies, I allowed Silverstein to tender payment a day or two after he took delivery of the automobiles."). Given that this was common practice, [19] Silverstein's affidavit [*977] is suspect. Moreover, the fact that the invoice was not delivered did not establish that the car was not sold:

If I had received a check for the Chattel I would have given to Silverstein, upon his request, a copy of the invoice. I would have also given him a copy of the Manufacturer's Statement of Origin (the original after his check cleared), the Driver's Manual, the Warranty and the extra keys for the car. I did not give any of these items to Silverstein because I never received a check from him. I have in my possession all of these items.

Id., P 6 (emphasis in original).⁶

Second, although Defendants argued that the number of the invoice indicated that it was "back dated," Silverstein Aff'd, P 6 ("I believe that an examination of plaintiff's business [20] records will reveal that the number on the 'invoice' . . . will be out of sequence with other invoices written during the relevant time period and that the same was back-dated by Ms. Epstein solely for the purposes of deceiving this Court and obtaining the ex parte Order of Seizure."), Ms. Epstein explained that Hudson Toyota's invoices are not executed in sequential order. Epstein Aff'd, P 3 ("[The assistants] use the invoices as needed in no particular order.") (emphasis in original). Therefore, "the sequence in which invoices are used does not establish the sequence in which cars are sold and has no bearing on whether an invoice was properly or timely prepared." Id., P 4. Despite their unfounded claim that a review of plaintiff's invoices would indicate wrongful behavior, Defendants have not come forward with any evidence to indicate that plaintiff presented fraudulent documents in connection with its application for an ex parte order of seizure.

Given the actions of Defendants as recounted above, the reasons cited by the Aero Garage court in imposing punitive damages apply with equal force to this situation:

We cannot agree with the dissent that this attempt [21] on [the breaching party's] part to "obtain a solution more in accord with their own interests" should not be penalized when it invoked the types of methods used here, including the fully knowing and intentional breach of unambiguous contractual provisions, the flouting of court ordered injunctions and the bad faith institution of administrative proceedings.

⁶ This was the only logical conclusion because other than presenting the car to Defendants as a gift, there is no other reasonable justification for plaintiff's actions (i.e., transferring the Chattel without receiving a check).

Aero Garage, 185 A.D.2d at 777, 586 N.Y.S.2d at 613.

Defendants, however, argue that punitive damages are not appropriate in this case because their actions did not constitute morally culpable conduct. Defs.' Mem. at 4. Defendants also contend that, pursuant to New York law, punitive damages are not available in breach of contract cases "even if committed wilfully and without justification," Defs.' Mem. at 5, and rely on O'Dell v. New York Property Ins. Underwriting Assoc., 145 A.D.2d 791, 535 N.Y.S.2d 777 (3d Dep't 1988) (no punitive damages for plaintiff who did not receive fire insurance proceeds following destruction of her home because plaintiff is not seeking to vindicate a public right even though breach was wilful); Charles v. Onondaga Community College, 69 A.D.2d 144, 418 N.Y.S.2d 718 [22] (4th Dep't) (because wrongful discharge was not part of a larger scheme to injure plaintiff punitive damages would not be appropriate), appeal dismissed, 48 N.Y.2d 650, 396 N.E.2d 482, 421 N.Y.S.2d 200 (1979); and Wegman v. Dairylea Co-op Inc., 50 A.D.2d 108, 113, 376 N.Y.S.2d 728, 735 (4th Dep't 1975) (because plaintiff's cause of action for retaliatory discharge and fraud in inducement of employment are dismissed, plaintiff's cause of action for punitive damages must be dismissed because "it is well settled that punitive damages are not available in New York for breach of contract."), appeal dismissed, 38 N.Y.2d 918, 346 N.E.2d 817, 382 N.Y.S.2d 979 (1976).

However, as the discussion above demonstrates, New York law does allow for punitive damages in breach of contract cases if the actions of the breaching party evidence such bad faith that the twin aims of punitive damages would be vindicated. The blanket statement [*978] against punitive damages for contract actions as stated in Wegman is not an accurate reflection [23] of New York law. Defendants argue that their actions were not egregious because they were simply protecting their business interests from the allegedly predatory behavior of Hudson Toyota. However, an avowed purpose of protecting business interests does not justify the wrongful misappropriation of the property of another. Here, Defendants intentionally and wilfully breached their contractual obligations by stopping payment on certain checks; defied the court's Order in spiriting away the Chattel prior to the arrival of the Marshal; refused to turn over the Chattel even after it was aware of the Order; and moved to quash the Order (and thus further frustrate plaintiff's contractual rights) on frivolous grounds. This is, therefore, that rare case where the actions of the breaching party require the imposition of punitive damages even though the wrongs were not aimed at the public in general.

II. Sanctions

A. 28 U.S.C. § 1927

Section 1927 of Title 28 of the United States Code provides as follows:

HN5 [↑] Any attorney or other person admitted to conduct cases in any court of the United States or any Territory thereof who so multiplies the proceedings [24] in any case unreasonably and vexatiously may be required by the court to satisfy personally the excess costs, expenses, and attorneys' fees reasonably incurred because of such conduct.

28 U.S.C. § 1927.

"By its terms, § 1927 looks to unreasonable and vexatious multiplications of proceedings; and it imposes an obligation on attorneys through the entire litigation to avoid dilatory tactics." United States v. International Broth. of Teamsters, 948 F.2d 1338, 1345 (2d Cir. 1991). The purpose of the statute is "to deter unnecessary delays in litigation." Id. (quoting H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 1234, 96th Cong., 2d Sess. 8, reprinted in 1980 U.S. Code Cong. & Admin. News 2716, 2782). "The statute is indifferent to the equities of a dispute and to the values advanced by the substantive law. It is concerned only with limiting the abuse of court processes." Roadway Express v. Piper, 447 U.S. 752, 762, 65 L. Ed. 2d 488, 100 S. Ct. 2455 (1980). HN6 [↑] Without a demonstration of bad faith on the part of the attorney in question, sanctions pursuant to this statute are [25] inappropriate. "Imposition of a sanction under § 1927 requires a 'clear showing of bad faith.'" Oliveri v. Thompson, 803 F.2d 1265, 1273 (2d Cir. 1986) (quoting Kamen v. American Telephone & Telegraph Co., 791 F.2d 1006, 1010 (2d Cir. 1986)), cert. denied, 480 U.S. 918 (1987). The court in Oliveri wrote,

HN7Like an award made pursuant to the court's inherent power, an award under [§ 1927 is proper when the attorney's actions are so completely without merit as to require the conclusion that they must have been undertaken for some improper purpose such as delay.

Oliveri, 803 F.2d at 1273. Furthermore, Second Circuit authority makes clear that awards pursuant to Section 1927 are made only against attorneys. Id.; Teamsters, 948 F.2d at 1345 ("clients may not be saddled with such awards.").

Conduct which allows for the imposition of sanctions under Section 1927 pursuant to the discretion of the court include the following: resubmitting a motion that had previously been denied, Siderpali, S.P.A. v. Judal Industries, Inc., 833 F. Supp. 1023, 1029 \(S.D.N.Y. 1993\); [*26] bringing a motion based on "facts" the opposite of which were previously found by the court, id. at 1036; making several insupportable bias recusal motions and repeated motions to reargue, Sassower v. Field, 138 F.R.D. 369, 375-76 \(S.D.N.Y. 1991\), aff'd in part and vacated on other grounds, 973 F.2d 75 \(2d Cir. 1992\), cert. denied, 113 S. Ct. 1879 (1993); "'continually engaging in obfuscation of the issues, hyperbolism and groundless presumptions' in addition to insinuating that the court was biased," Cruz v. Savage, 896 F.2d 626, 634 \(1st Cir. 1990\) (rejecting bad faith standard); and waiting until the eve of trial before making a jury demand, Kotsilieris v. Chalmers, I*9791 966 F.2d 1181 \(7th Cir. 1992\). In Knorr Brake Corp. v. Harbil, Inc., 738 F.2d 223, 226-27 \(7th Cir. 1984\), the Seventh Circuit made the following observation which is relevant to the motion in this action:

HN8[Where . . . counsel's alleged misconduct was the filing and arguing of a claim, it is not sufficient [*27] that the claim be found meritless; the claim must be without a plausible legal or factual basis and lacking in justification.

(footnote omitted). The court in Harbil also noted that, HN9["[a] court may infer intent from a total lack of factual or legal basis for a suit." Id. at 227. Also helpful is the comment by the Third Circuit in reversing a district court's imposition of sanctions based on the fact that an attorney filed a Title VII action even though before filing he had been informed that the complaint was untimely:

In our view, what would be indicative of bad faith in a case such as this one, would be some indication of an intentional advancement of a baseless contention that is made for an ulterior purpose, e.g., harassment or delay.

Ford v. Temple Hosp., 790 F.2d 342, 347 \(3d Cir. 1986\). With these standards of conduct in mind, we now turn to the specific actions which plaintiff contends unreasonably and vexatiously multiplied these proceedings.

1. Motion to Quash the Ex Parte Order of Seizure

As recounted above in some detail, Defendants brought a motion to quash this court's ex parte order [*28] of seizure on three separate grounds: (i) a fraudulent invoice was given to the court; (ii) plaintiff failed to report the "related" antitrust action; and (iii) plaintiff breached an agreement to retain the status quo pending the filing of plaintiff's answer in the antitrust action. Plaintiff contends that "Defendants' bad faith is . . . demonstrated by the complete lack of legal or factual basis for bringing this motion to quash." Pl.'s Mem. at 26. I agree. First, with reference to the invoice, although Silverstein claimed that a review of Hudson Toyota's invoices would reveal that the court had been the victim of a fraud, Silverstein Aff'd, P 6, Defendants have not brought to the court's attention any evidence which would call into doubt the veracity of plaintiff's claim that the car in question was sold to Defendants; that Defendants took possession of the car; that Defendants then refused to pay for the car; and that the car was then sold to a third person in blatant disregard of plaintiff's contractual rights. Defendants now concede that all of that is true given their silence in the face of plaintiff's motion for summary judgment and plaintiff's 3(g) statement. If Defendants [*29] and Counsel now know that the automobile was sold and yet never paid for, how is it they could not have known that in December of 1993 when Defendants moved to quash the ex parte order? Counsel's bad faith in moving to quash the Order is also evidenced by his admission that Defendants were holding the car hostage irrespective of the court's Order. He wrote to plaintiff's counsel approximately two weeks after the order of seizure had been granted and stated that "upon receipt of an Order indicating that the ex parte Order regarding seizure of the vehicle in question has been rescinded, we will enter into an agreement regarding the vehicle." Affidavit of Counsel, January 6, 1994, Ex. C (letter of December 27, 1993 to plaintiff's counsel). This evidences the fact that Defendants were in possession of the car at the time of the Order and that Counsel was aware of that fact.

It is clear to this court that Defendants were stalling for time and were unreasonably and vexatiously multiplying these proceedings by compelling Hudson Toyota to oppose a meritless motion to quash. For his part, Counsel argues that "having been informed by the defendants that plaintiff had never forwarded an [30] invoice with regard to the sale of any car during their four (4) year prior course of dealing, there existed a legitimate basis to believe that the invoice in question had been fraudulently generated by plaintiff for the sole purpose of securing this Court's signature on the ex parte Order." Defs.' Mem. at 7. However, given that Defendants and Counsel now concede that there was never any legitimate defense to their wrongful withholding of the Chattel, this explanation must be rejected as untenable.

[*980] Section 7102\(c\) of New York's Civil Practice Law and Rules HN10↑ provides in relevant part that an order of seizure is available if the affidavit in support of such an application establishes that the plaintiff is entitled to possession by virtue of the facts set forth and that the chattel is wrongfully held by the defendants. Counsel did not offer any facts which would rebut plaintiff's allegations that Hudson Toyota delivered the Chattel, that it was not paid for, and that Defendants did not return the vehicle. Under such circumstances, and without more, an order of seizure was appropriate, see General Motors Acceptance Corp. v. Berg and Duffy, 118 Misc. 2d 525, 529, 460 N.Y.S.2d 899, 901 \(N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1983\) [31] (where purchaser ceases paying seller pursuant to installment contract "plaintiff has established, prima facie, a superior possessory right for the purposes of its CPLR 7102 application."), and Defendants offered no credible reason why the Order should have been quashed. Therefore, the motion was brought without any legal or factual justification which drives this court to conclude that it was brought for an improper purpose (i.e., delay or harassment), thus establishing Counsel's bad faith. This conclusion is buttressed by the fact that, as evidenced by Counsel's December 27, 1993 letter, he was aware of the Order and was aware that Defendants had possession of the car and yet informed plaintiff that the Order would not be honored.

Regarding the second and third bases for the motion to quash -- failure to inform the court of the "related" antitrust action and breach of an alleged agreement -- neither of these allegations are sufficient legal or factual justifications for moving to quash an order of seizure. As discussed above, it was incumbent upon Defendants, if they wished to contest the court's Order, to demonstrate that plaintiff did not possess a superior possessory right [32] to the chattel. They have now admitted that Hudson Toyota does have a superior possessory right and are therefore not contesting the motion for summary judgment to rescind the contract for that automobile. When placed in context along side Defendants' other actions of which Counsel was a party (e.g., failing to turn over the car after the court ordered its seizure), it is evident that the motion to quash was another step in unreasonably and vexatiously multiplying these proceedings.⁷

2. Motion to Consolidate

Plaintiff also contends that the motion to consolidate [33] this action with Defendants' antitrust action presently pending before Judge Korman was also brought in bad faith in an effort to vexatiously and unreasonably multiply these proceedings. In the action before Judge Korman, Crest and Metro have alleged that plaintiff and two of its related companies, together with Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. and Toyota Motor Distributors, Inc., conspired to deprive Crest and Metro of the right to buy Toyota vehicles in violation of, among other things, New York's antitrust statute, the Donnelly Act, N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 340 (McKinney 1988). The complaint states in relevant part as follows:

⁷ Counsel defends the motion to quash on the ground that during a telephone conversation with one of Chambers' law clerks, and in response to Counsel's query, he was informed that an order to show cause was not necessary since the Chattel had not been seized and counsel should therefore proceed via a regular motion. Sanctions, however, are appropriate because of the legal and factual paucity of the motion, not because it was procedurally infirm.

In or about October 1993, [Hudson Toyota] advised Plaintiffs that the Dealership Defendants [Hudson Toyota and its related companies] would no longer permit the sale of any Toyota automobiles to Plaintiffs. [Hudson Toyota] thereafter admitted to Plaintiffs that the decision not to sell any Toyota automobiles to Plaintiffs was the result of agreements and arrangements among and between the Dealership Defendants and [Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. and Toyota Motor Distributors, Inc.], and was solely based upon a determination to eliminate the competition from [34] Plaintiffs, and others similarly situated, and Toyota dealers, and to maintain an artificially high retail price level for the Toyota automobile.

Silverstein Aff'd, Ex. D, P 12. The complaint alleges wrongful conduct by the two Toyota [*981] corporations who are not parties to this action. Id., PP 14-17 (defendants threatened, coerced, solicited, and otherwise engaged other Toyota dealerships not to sell Toyota automobiles to plaintiffs).

Sanctions are appropriate because this motion to consolidate was completely without merit. As discussed in greater detail below, a defendant in a breach of contract action can not, as a general rule, assert as a counterclaim violations of the antitrust laws. The two causes of action -- even if they involve the same parties -- are not coterminous because there is nothing in an antitrust action which would justify a buyer receiving an item and yet not paying for it. In other words, the issues of law and fact in an antitrust and breach of contract action are rarely, if ever, similar. In this situation, for example, Defendants must prove, among other things, predatory behavior by Hudson Toyota and may recover treble damages if the facts so warrant. The [35] present action, on the other hand, is a garden variety UCC and breach of contract claim. This court is again driven to the conclusion, therefore, that the motion to consolidate was brought in bad faith in order to create more delay. Because the "attorney's actions [were] so completely without merit as to require the conclusion that they must have been undertaken for some improper purpose," Oliveri v. Thompson, 803 F.2d 1265, 1273 (2d Cir. 1986), sanctions pursuant to Section 1927 are appropriate.

3. Defendants' Set-off Counterclaim

Although Defendants now concede that summary judgment is available on plaintiff's breach of contract and UCC causes of action, in their Answer to the complaint they asserted as a counterclaim set-off the allegations contained in their antitrust complaint now pending before Judge Korman. Specifically, Defendants asserted that "upon information and belief, during or about October 1993, plaintiff Hudson, acting in concert and in conspiracy with Toyota Motor Sales, USA, Inc. and Toyota Motor Distributors, Inc., agreed not to sell new Toyota automobiles to defendants Crest and Metro." Answer, P 66. Although the court had already [36] held that the antitrust action and Hudson Toyota's UCC and breach of contract action were not related, and hence consolidation was inappropriate, Defendants alleged that "upon information and belief, Hudson's involvement in an agreement with Toyota under which Hudson agreed to refuse to sell new Toyota automobiles to defendants constitutes an agreement, arrangement or combination in restraint of competition in the retail sale and lease of Toyota automobiles, in violation of § 340 of the General Business Law of the State of New York." Answer, P 70. Defendants also stated that they "stopped payment and did not make funds available to cover the checks referenced in plaintiff's complaint as a set-off on its damages suffered as a result of Hudson's conduct and involvement in an illegal agreement with Toyota not to sell new Toyota automobiles to defendants." Answer, P 73.

Plaintiff argues that the inclusion of this counterclaim set-off warrants sanctions because only in limited circumstances do antitrust claims constitute valid defenses to a breach of contract and hence Defendants' inclusion of this counterclaim in this action was in bad faith and vexatious. HN11 [Footnote] "It is now well established [37] that the remedy for violation of the antitrust law is not avoidance of payments due under a contract, but rather the redress which the antitrust statute establishes, - a private treble damage action." Lewis v. Seanor Coal Co., 382 F.2d 437, 441 (3d Cir. 1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 947, 19 L. Ed. 2d 1137, 88 S. Ct. 1035 (1968). Antitrust counterclaims are therefore disfavored in a simple breach of contract claim. Kelly v. Kosuga, 358 U.S. 516, 517, 3 L. Ed. 2d 475, 79 S. Ct. 429 (1959) (in diversity action for breach of contract, district court properly granted plaintiff's motion to strike affirmative defense of violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act; "as a defense to an action based on contract, the plea of illegality based on violation of the Sherman Act has not met with much favor in this Court.") (footnote omitted). The exception to this general rule is limited to those cases where the judgment of the court would itself be enforcing antitrust conduct. Viacom Int'l Inc. v. Tandem Prods., Inc., 526 F.2d 593, 596-600 (2d Cir.

1975) [38] (court notes that as a general rule a defendant in breach of contract action cannot [*982] assert an antitrust defense where the contract was an "intelligible economic transaction in itself" and not "part of . . . any general plan or scheme that the law condemned") (quoting Kelly, 358 U.S. at 521, and Continental Wall Paper Co. v. Louis Voight & Sons Co., 212 U.S. 227, 260, 53 L. Ed. 486, 29 S. Ct. 280 (1909), respectively). The court in Viacom also noted that "the overriding consideration which has persuaded the Supreme Court [in not allowing antitrust defenses in contract actions] is its concern that the successful interposition of antitrust defenses is too likely to enrich parties who reap the benefits of a contract and then seek to avoid the corresponding burdens." Viacom, 526 F.2d at 599. See also McDonald's Corp. v. Robert A. Makin, Inc., 653 F. Supp. 401, 404-05 (W.D.N.Y. 1986) (in breach of contract action by franchisor against franchisees for nonpayment of franchise fees, franchisees' antitrust [39] counterclaims cannot defeat franchisor's motion for summary judgment).

Counsel for Defendants offers no legal or factual justification for the inclusion of their antitrust counterclaim but states instead that "the assertion of the counterclaim was done for the purpose of attempting to keep the defendants alive while its antitrust claim against plaintiff and Toyota proceeds through the Federal Court system." Defs.' Mem. at 8. Defendants concede, therefore, that they did not impose the antitrust counterclaim because they had a good faith belief based on the law and the facts that this action fell within the narrow exception to the general rule. Given that the contracts at issue in this action are not part of the allegedly predatory behavior of Hudson Toyota, there would not have been any basis upon which to assert this counterclaim. Defendants' assertion of this counterclaim was, therefore, made in bad faith and unreasonably and vexatiously multiplied these proceedings by forcing Hudson Toyota to move for its dismissal.⁸

[40] B. The Court's Inherent power

HN12 [↑] "Under the inherent power of the court to supervise and control its own proceedings, an exception to the American Rule has evolved which permits the court to award a reasonable attorneys' fee to the prevailing party when the losing party has "acted in bad faith, vexatiously, wantonly, or for oppressive reasons[.]'" Oliveri v. Thompson, 803 F.2d 1265, 1272 (2d Cir. 1986) (quoting F.D. Rich Co., Inc. v. United States ex rel. Industrial Lumber Co., Inc., 417 U.S. 116, 129, 40 L. Ed. 2d 703, 94 S. Ct. 2157 (1974)). HN13 [↑] Unlike awards pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1927, sanctions pursuant to the court's inherent power may be made against the losing party or against the losing party's attorney, or both. Oliveri, 803 F.2d at 1273 ("an award made under the court's inherent power may be made against an attorney, a party, or both."). The standard of bad faith is the same under both Section 1927 and the court's inherent power. Id. Furthermore, an award pursuant to the court's inherent power can be assessed [41] against a party for either commencing or for continuing an action in bad faith, vexatiously, wantonly, or for oppressive reasons. Oliveri, 803 F.2d at 1272. "Bad faith" may be found, not only in the actions that led to the lawsuit, but also in the conduct of the litigation." Hall v. Cole, 412 U.S. 1, 15, 36 L. Ed. 2d 702, 93 S. Ct. 1943 (1973). The Second Circuit has made clear that,

We have declined to uphold awards under the bad-faith exception absent both clear evidence that the challenged actions are entirely without color and [are taken] for reasons of harassment or delay or for other improper purposes, and a high degree of specificity in the factual findings of the [the] lower courts.

Dow Chemical Pacific Ltd. v. Rascator Maritime S.A., 782 F.2d 329, 344 (2d Cir. 1986) (citations and internal quotations omitted). Plaintiff seeks an award of attorneys' fees [*983] against Defendants in relation to the following.

1. Dishonoring Contractual Obligations

⁸ Defendants were put on notice that this counterclaim set-off would lead to a motion for sanctions. Affidavit of Marjorie E. Berman, March 2, 1994, Ex. A (letter of January 25, 1994 to Defendants' attorney). In fact, Defendants' law firm again telephoned the law clerk referenced above in footnote 7 on January 26, 1994, the date of the Answer, and informed the clerk that plaintiff had threatened the firm with sanctions and asked if the Court would advise the firm on the propriety of asserting the antitrust counterclaims. The court declined to issue an advisory opinion.

The only justification offered by Defendants for the breach of their contractual obligations was their [42] desire to punish Hudson Toyota for its allegedly predatory behavior. Although this establishes that its actions were "entirely without color," the court has already determined that punitive damages are appropriate for this, and other behavior, in connection with Defendants' breach. An award of attorneys' fees in addition to this assessment would give plaintiff a windfall and it is therefore unnecessary.

2. Motion to Quash the Ex Parte Order of Seizure

As recounted above, it is clear that Silverstein played a role in avoiding this court's ex parte order. Given the Second Circuit's requirement that this court state with "a high degree of specificity . . . the factual findings" regarding the sanctioned party's conduct, the court notes that the following facts are uncontested: (i) Defendants knew of the ex parte order as early as December 23, 1993 (Silverstein Aff'd) but did not surrender the car to plaintiff until on or about January 17, 1994; and (ii) in support of the motion to quash the Order the president of Crest and Metro stated under oath that the Chattel was never sold to Defendants (Silverstein Aff'd, P 5), but Defendants now admit as much by leaving unanswered Paragraph [43] 51 of Hudson Toyota's 3(g) Statement. Silverstein stated under oath that there were valid reasons for moving to quash the Order when, in fact, there was no good faith basis in believing that Hudson Toyota had defrauded the court or that Defendants possessed a superior possessory right to the Chattel. Therefore, for the reasons stated above in Section II.A.1 of this memorandum, Defendants as well as Defendants' counsel are to be assessed attorneys' fees in connection with Hudson Toyota's opposition to the motion to quash the ex parte order.

3. Motion to Consolidate

As demonstrated in Section II.A.2 of this memorandum, the motion to consolidate was completely without merit and hence Defendants will be sanctioned for this conduct pursuant to the court's inherent power.

4. Defendants' Set-off Counterclaim

As demonstrated in Section II.A.3 of this memorandum, the assertion of the antitrust counterclaim was brought vexatiously and in bad faith and hence Defendants will be sanctioned for this conduct pursuant to the court's inherent power.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the court orders as follows:

1. Hudson Toyota's motion to dismiss Defendants' antitrust counterclaim [44] set-off is granted.
2. Hudson Toyota's motion for summary judgment is granted in full as follows:
 - a. Plaintiff is awarded $ 51,467.00, plus interest, from Crest Leasing Enterprises, Inc., for the first, second, and eighth car sales under the first, third, fifth, and tenth claims for relief set forth in the complaint;
 - b. Plaintiff is awarded $ 75,838.00, plus interest, from Metro Auto Leasing, Inc., for the third, fourth, fifth, and sixth car sales under the second, fourth, sixth, and tenth claims for relief set forth in the complaint; and
 - c. The contract of sale for the Chattel is hereby rescinded under the seventh claim for relief set forth in the complaint and plaintiff has all rights and entitlements to the Chattel.
3. Hudson Toyota's motion for punitive damages against Defendants is granted in the amount of $ 5,000.00 with the cost to be born equally by Crest Leasing Enterprises, Inc., and Metro Auto Leasing, Inc.
4. The replevin bond is discharged and the surety on the replevin bond is released of all liability.
5. Hudson Toyota's motion for sanctions against Defendants and their attorney is granted in connection with the following: (i) Hudson Toyota's opposition to Defendants' [45] motion to quash the court's ex parte order of [*984] December 13, 1993; (ii) Hudson Toyota's opposition to Defendants' motion to consolidate this action with the antitrust action; and (iii) Hudson Toyota's motion to strike Defendants' counterclaim set-off. Hudson Toyota is therefore instructed to submit contemporaneous time sheets and disbursement records in connection with these motions within 30 days of the date of this order.

SO ORDERED.

Dated: Brooklyn, New York

March 21, 1994

I. Leo Glasser, U.S. D. J.

End of Document

Servicetrends v. Siemens Medical Sys.

United States District Court for the Northern District of Georgia, Atlanta Division

March 21, 1994, Decided ; March 21, 1994, Filed; March 22, 1994, Entered

CIVIL ACTION FILE NO. 1:93-CV-299-JTC

Reporter

870 F. Supp. 1042 *; 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11383 ; 1995-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,900

SERVICETRENDS, INC., Plaintiff, v. SIEMENS MEDICAL SYSTEMS, INC., Defendant.

Subsequent History: [1] Motion for Reconsideration Granted June 24, 1994, Reported at: 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15997.

Core Terms

Lithotripters, customers, shocktube, pricing, monopolization, replacement part, summary judgment, predatory, antitrust, monopoly, Counts, monopoly power, markets, service contract, Counterclaim, patent, manufacturers, competitor, alleges, damages, tortious interference, Disparagement, warranty, buying, repair, no evidence, geographic, discount, contracts, parties

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Opposing Materials > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Movant Persuasion & Proof

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

HN1 [] Summary Judgment, Opposing Materials

Courts should grant summary judgment when there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. The general rule of summary judgment in the Eleventh Circuit states that the moving party must show the court that no genuine issue of material fact should be decided at trial. Unless the movant for summary judgment meets its burden under Fed. R. Civ. P. 56, the obligation of the opposing party does not arise even if no opposing evidentiary material is presented by the party opposing the motion.

870 F. Supp. 1042, *1042A 994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11383, 1

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Opposing Materials > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Materiality of Facts

HN2 Summary Judgment, Opposing Materials

While all evidence and factual inferences are to be viewed in a light most favorable to the nonmoving party, the mere existence of some alleged factual dispute between the parties will not defeat an otherwise properly supported motion for summary judgment; the requirement is that there be no genuine issue of material fact. An issue is not genuine if it is unsupported by evidence, or if it is created by evidence that is merely colorable or is not significantly probative. Similarly, a fact is not material unless it is identified by the controlling substantive law as an essential element of the nonmoving party's case.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Opposing Materials > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Movant Persuasion & Proof

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Nonmovant Persuasion & Proof

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

HN3 Summary Judgment, Opposing Materials

Where neither party can prove either the affirmative or the negative of an essential element of a claim, the movant meets its burden on summary judgment by showing that the opposing party will not be able to meet its burden of proof at trial. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c) requires the moving party to demonstrate that the nonmoving party lacks evidence to support an essential element of its claim. Thus, the movant's burden is discharged by showing, that is, pointing out to the district court, that there is an absence of evidence to support the nonmoving party's case.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

HN4 Summary Judgment, Burdens of Proof

Only when the movant meets the burden of showing the nonmovant lacks evidence to support an essential element of its claim, does the burden shift to the opposing party, who must then present evidence to establish the existence of a material issue of fact. The nonmoving party must go beyond the pleadings and submit evidence in the form of affidavits, depositions, admissions and the like, to demonstrate that a genuine issue of material fact does exist.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Appropriateness

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

870 F. Supp. 1042, *1042L 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11383, 1

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Materiality of Facts

HN5[] Entitlement as Matter of Law, Appropriateness

Summary judgment is appropriate in antitrust actions where the plaintiff fails to establish genuine issues of material fact bearing on the elements of the case.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > Monopolization Offenses

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Monopolies & Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > General Overview

HN6[] Scope, Monopolization Offenses

Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, prohibits monopolization, attempts to monopolize, and conspiracy to monopolize.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

HN7[] Regulated Practices, Market Definition

In an antitrust action, defining a relevant product market is primarily a process of describing those groups of producers which, because of the similarity of their products, have the ability, actual or potential, to take significant amounts of business away from each other. The reasonable interchangeability of use or the cross-elasticity of demand between a product and its substitutes constitutes the outer boundaries of a product market for antitrust purposes.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

HN8[] Regulated Practices, Market Definition

In an antitrust action, the relevant product market consists of a specific product and its reasonable substitutes.

870 F. Supp. 1042, *1042L994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11383, 1

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

HN9 [down] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

Monopolistic conduct can sometimes be found where a seller refuses to supply a competitor with a product essential to the competitor's survival.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

HN10 [down] Regulated Practices, Market Definition

There are three essential elements to a claim alleging attempted monopolization: the specific intent to achieve monopoly power by predatory or exclusionary conduct; actual anticompetitive conduct; and a dangerous probability of success in defendant's attempt to achieve monopoly power. The intent element requires an intent to destroy competition or build monopoly. In many cases, intent can be inferred from the defendant's conduct, essentially reducing the analysis to two elements. Anticompetitive conduct often cannot be evaluated independently of the dangerous probability of a firm's acquiring monopoly power. Competitive behavior by a small firm with little market share may become anticompetitive conduct when committed by a company with dominant market power. To have a dangerous probability of successfully monopolizing a market the defendant must be close to achieving monopoly power. Proving a dangerous probability of success first involves defining the relevant market and measuring market share as a proxy for monopoly power.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

HN11 [down] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

The essential facilities doctrine makes it illegal for the holder of an "essential facility" to deny access to a competitor where there is no legitimate business reason for the refusal.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

HN12 [down] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

To establish a violation of the essential facilities doctrine, a plaintiff must prove four elements: (1) control of the essential facility by a monopolist; (2) a competitor's inability practically or reasonably to duplicate the essential facility; (3) the denial of the use of the facility to a competitor; and (4) the feasibility of providing the facility. A plaintiff must also demonstrate that, by denying access to an essential facility, defendant caused it a severe handicap amounting to more than inconvenience or even some economic loss.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Defenses > Inequitable Conduct > Anticompetitive Conduct

HN13 [down] Inequitable Conduct, Anticompetitive Conduct

870 F. Supp. 1042, *1042 (1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11383, 1

Where a patent has been lawfully acquired, subsequent conduct permissible under the patent laws cannot trigger any liability under the antitrust laws.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Actual Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN14 [] Monopolies & Monopolization, Actual Monopolization

A large firm does not violate the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, simply by reaping the competitive rewards attributable to its efficient size, nor does an integrated business offend the Sherman Act whenever one of its departments benefits from association with a division possessing a monopoly in its own market. So long as we allow a firm to compete in several fields, we must expect it to seek the competitive advantages of its broad based activity.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Defenses > General Overview

Evidence > Inferences & Presumptions > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Discrimination > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Coverage > General Overview

HN15 [] Price Discrimination, Defenses

Distributor discounts that are completely untethered to the manufacturer's marginal cost savings, or merely subterfuges to avoid restrictions under the Robinson-Patman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 13, violate prohibitions against price discrimination. Only to the extent that a buyer actually performs certain functions, assuming all the risks and costs involved, should he qualify for a compensating discount. The amount of the discount should be reasonably related to the expenses assumed by the buyer. The burden of proof is on the plaintiff to show that functional discounts constitute illegal price discrimination.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Types of Commercial Transactions > Sales of Goods > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Scope

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > Clayton Act

870 F. Supp. 1042, *10421994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11383, 1

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > Sherman Act Violations

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN16 [] Sherman Act, Scope

A tying arrangement conditions the sale of one product on the purchase of another. The product the purchaser wants to buy is known as the "tying product," while the unwanted but attached product is the "tied product." The essential antitrust concern regarding tying is that the illegal arrangements foreclose competing manufacturers from selling in the tied product market. Tying the sale of goods is expressly prohibited by the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 14. The Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2 prohibits tying involving goods or services.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Tying Arrangements > General Overview

HN17 [] Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Tying Arrangements

The essential characteristic of an invalid tying arrangement lies in the seller's exploitation of its control over the tying product to force the buyer into the purchase of a tied product that the buyer either did not want at all, or might have preferred to purchase elsewhere on different terms.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

HN18 [] Actual Monopolization, Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices

Predatory pricing is a term of art that describes pricing below an appropriate measure of cost for the purpose of eliminating competition in the short run and reducing competition in the long run. A predator prices its product below profit maximizing levels with the expectation of charging monopoly prices in the future when competitors are driven from the market. Predatory pricing is generally analyzed as constituting the conduct portion of an attempt to monopolize, and since intent can be inferred from conduct, evidence of predatory pricing can support an inference of specific intent.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing > Exclusive Dealing

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Types of Commercial Transactions > Sales of Goods > Output, Exclusive & Requirements Agreements

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing > Requirements Contracts

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Per Se Rule & Rule of Reason > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Types of Commercial Transactions > Sales of Goods > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Contracts Law > Types of Contracts > Output & Requirements Contracts

HN19[] Exclusive & Reciprocal Dealing, Exclusive Dealing

Exclusive dealing arrangements are essentially requirements contracts, whereby the buyer agrees to purchase exclusively the product of the contracting supplier. The specific antitrust concern is that exclusive dealing contracts threaten to foreclose the relevant product market to other sellers, who may be unable to find buyers for their competing goods or services. On the other hand, courts recognize that many ordinary supply contracts, motivated by legitimate business needs, inevitably foreclose some competing seller from a portion of the market. Accordingly, exclusive dealing contracts are not per se illegal. Instead, courts apply a rule of reason approach to weighing the procompetitive and anticompetitive effects of exclusive dealing arrangements.

Evidence > Inferences & Presumptions > General Overview

Torts > Business Torts > Trade Libel > General Overview

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > Lanham Act > General Overview

HN20[] Evidence, Inferences & Presumptions

Section 43(a) of the Lanham Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1125, prohibits deceitful marketing practices, including disparaging comments that misrepresent the quality of a competitor's goods. To prove a Lanham Act charge, plaintiff must show that defendant's misrepresentations were material in effect on buying decisions and were actually or likely injurious to plaintiffs.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > General Overview

Torts > Business Torts > Unfair Business Practices > Elements

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Damages > Monetary Damages

Torts > Business Torts > Commercial Interference > General Overview

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Prospective Advantage > General Overview

Torts > Business Torts > Unfair Business Practices > General Overview

HN21[] Trade Practices & Unfair Competition, State Regulation

The Georgia Uniform Deceptive Trade Practices Act provides relief for a person likely to be damaged by a deceptive trade practice, but proof of monetary damage, loss of profits, or intent to deceive is not required. Ga. Code Ann. § 10-1-373. To the extent a plaintiff's tortious interference claim is based on disparagement, the plaintiff must show that defendant induced a third party or parties not to enter into or continue a business relationship for which the plaintiff suffered some financial injury.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > False Designation of Origin > Elements of False Designation of Origin

870 F. Supp. 1042, *1042 (1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11383, 1

Trademark Law > Likelihood of Confusion > General Overview

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > False Advertising > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > False Advertising > Elements of False Advertising

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > Lanham Act > General Overview

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > Trade Dress Protection > General Overview

HN22 [] False Designation of Origin, Elements of False Designation of Origin

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 1125\(a\)\(1\).

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Damages > Monetary Damages

Evidence > Inferences & Presumptions > General Overview

Trademark Law > ... > Remedies > Damages > General Overview

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > Lanham Act > General Overview

HN23 [] Damages, Monetary Damages

While proof of monetary damages may not be necessary to sustain every cause of action based on a disparagement claim, a showing that some customer's buying decision was adversely affected is a threshold requirement for each. Even the permissive language of the Lanham Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1125, requires plaintiff to offer something more than a mere subjective belief that he is likely to be injured. He must submit proof which provides a reasonable basis for that belief. The likelihood of injury and causation will not be presumed, but must be demonstrated in some manner.

Torts > ... > Contracts > Intentional Interference > Elements

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Contracts > General Overview

HN24 [] Intentional Interference, Elements

Under Georgia law, interference with contractual rights, such as inducing one to breach his contract with another, is an actionable tort. Tortious interference with contractual relations requires plaintiff to prove three elements: (1) the existence of a contractual relationship; (2) interference from the defendant; and (3) resulting damage to the contractual relationship.

Torts > ... > Business Relationships > Intentional Interference > Elements

Torts > Business Torts > General Overview

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Business Relationships > General Overview

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Prospective Advantage > General Overview

870 F. Supp. 1042, *1042 (1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11383, 1

HN25 [blue document icon] Intentional Interference, Elements

To establish a claim for tortious interference with business relations, a plaintiff must prove that the defendant: (1) acted improperly and without privilege; (2) purposefully, with malice, and with intent to injure, (3) induced a third party or parties not to enter into or continue a business relationship with the plaintiff, and (4) plaintiff suffered some financial injury as a result.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > Allocation

Evidence > Inferences & Presumptions > General Overview

HN26 [blue document icon] Private Actions, Remedies

Plaintiff's burden of proof concerning the amount of antitrust damages is much less severe than the burden of proving the antitrust violation and its causal relation to plaintiff's injury. While a jury may not base its judgment on speculation or guess-work, all that can be required is a just and reasonable, albeit necessarily imprecise, estimate based upon relevant data.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

HN27 [blue document icon] Private Actions, Remedies

In the absence of more precise proof, a factfinder may conclude as a matter of just and reasonable inference from the proof of a defendant's wrongful acts and their tendency to injure a plaintiff's business, and from the evidence of the decline in prices, profits and values, not shown to be attributable to other causes, that a defendant's wrongful acts had caused damage to a plaintiff.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

HN28 [blue document icon] Private Actions, Remedies

Private plaintiffs bringing claims under the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 7, must show injuries caused by a decrease in competition.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Claims

Mergers & Acquisitions Law > Antitrust > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Remedies > Damages

870 F. Supp. 1042, *1042A 994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11383, 1

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

HN29 [blue icon] Clayton Act, Claims

Plaintiffs seeking treble damages under the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 4, must show more than simply an injury causally linked to a particular merger; instead, plaintiffs must prove antitrust injury, which is to say injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes the defendant's acts unlawful.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

HN30 [blue icon] Antitrust & Trade Law, Clayton Act

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 18.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Elements

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Inchoate Crimes > Conspiracy > Elements

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Inchoate Crimes > Conspiracy > General Overview

HN31 [blue icon] Conspiracy to Monopolize, Elements

The elements of a conspiracy to monopolize under the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 2, are: (1) an agreement to restrain trade, (2) deliberately entered into with the specific intent of achieving a monopoly rather than a legitimate business purpose, (3) which could have had an anticompetitive effect, and (4) the commission of at least one overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy. The elements of a conspiracy to restrain trade under 15 U.S.C.S. § 1 are (1) an agreement to enter a conspiracy (2) designed to achieve an unlawful objective. The plaintiff must also prove (3) actual unlawful effects or facts which radiate a potential for future harm to competition.

Civil Procedure > ... > Attorney Fees & Expenses > Basis of Recovery > Statutory Awards

Trade Secrets Law > Protected Information > Customer Lists

Labor & Employment Law > ... > Conditions & Terms > Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition > Trade Secrets

Trade Secrets Law > Civil Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Trade Secrets Law > Trade Secret Determination Factors > Economic Value

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Trade Secrets Law > Federal Versus State Law > Uniform Trade Secrets Act

Trade Secrets Law > Protected Information > Business Information

HN32 Basis of Recovery, Statutory Awards

The Georgia Trade Secrets Act of 1990, Ga. Code Ann. §§ 10-1-760-767, supersedes other civil remedies for misappropriation of a trade secret. The Act defines a "trade secret" as information, including technical or nontechnical data, financial plans, or customer lists, that derives economic value from not being known or readily ascertainable to others, and that is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy. The Georgia statute provides relief in the form of an injunction, damages, and award of attorneys' fees.

Labor & Employment Law > ... > Conditions & Terms > Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition > Trade Secrets

Trade Secrets Law > Employee Duties & Obligations > Employee Knowledge & Skill

Trade Secrets Law > Employee Duties & Obligations > Misappropriation by Memory

HN33 Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition, Trade Secrets

Trade secrets need not be in the form of written data to warrant protection, but Georgia law generally does not prevent a departing employee from using the skills and information he acquired at work. A person who leaves the employment of another has a right to take with him all the skill he has acquired, all the knowledge he has obtained, all the information that he has received, so long as nothing is taken that is the property of the employer.

Labor & Employment Law > Employment Relationships > At Will Employment > Duration of Employment

Torts > Business Torts > Unfair Business Practices > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > Employment Relationships > At Will Employment > General Overview

Labor & Employment Law > ... > Conditions & Terms > Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition > General Overview

Torts > ... > Commercial Interference > Employment Relationships > General Overview

HN34 At Will Employment, Duration of Employment

A competing employer is not liable for hiring away an at-will employee so long as it does not use wrongful means and the recruiting company's purpose is to advance competition.

Labor & Employment Law > ... > Conditions & Terms > Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition > General Overview

Torts > Business Torts > Unfair Business Practices > General Overview

HN35 Conditions & Terms, Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition

The law permits destruction of a competing business by attracting away its customers in the fair course of trade, but not destruction or substantial injury by means of attracting away all or a large percentage of personnel upon whom it must depend to function, especially if other circumstances such as the use of confidential information are involved.

Counsel: For Plaintiff: Martin J. Elgison, John Kirk Train, III, Michael P. Kenny, Alston & Bird, Atlanta, GA. John R. Lowery, Jane F. Thorpe, Pursley, Howell, Lowery & Meeks, Atlanta, GA.

For Defendant: Chilton Varner, King & Spalding, Atlanta, GA. Kenneth A. Gallo, Edward Han, Keith E. Pugh, Jr., Howrey & Simon, Washington, DC.

Judges: CAMP

Opinion by: JACK T. CAMP

Opinion

[*1049] ORDER OF THE COURT

This is a complex antitrust case consisting of Plaintiff's eighteen count Complaint and Defendant's eleven counterclaims. The matter is presently before the Court on Defendant Siemens Medical Systems, Inc.'s ("SMS") Motion for Summary Judgment [#139]; Plaintiff Servicetrends, Inc.'s ("Servicetrends") Motion for Summary Judgment on Counterclaims [#147]; and Plaintiff's Motion to Add Defendants [#50]. For the following reasons, Defendant's motion for summary judgment is GRANTED in part and DENIED in part. Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment on Defendant's counterclaims is GRANTED. Plaintiff's motion to add Defendants is DENIED.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

- I. Background
- II. Summary Judgment Standard
- III. Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment
 - A. Monopolization and Attempted Monopolization
 - 1. The Evils of Monopoly Power
 - 2. The Relevant Product Markets
 - 3. Monopolistic Conduct
 - (a) The Essential Facilities Doctrine
 - (b) Monopoly Leveraging
 - (c) Price Discrimination
 - 4. Conclusion
 - B. Tying Arrangements
 - C. Predatory Pricing Claims
 - D. Exclusive Dealing & Concerted Refusal to Deal
 - 1. Exclusive Dealing
 - 2. Concerted Refusal to [2] Deal
 - E. Disparagement and Tortious Interference
 - 1. The Legal Effect of Disparagement
 - 2. Tortious Interference
 - F. Damages
- IV. Plaintiff's Motion for Judgment on Counterclaims

A. Supplemental Facts and Analysis

1. Geographic Market
2. Product Market
3. Market Power
4. Antitrust Injury

B. Defendant's Antitrust Counterclaims

1. Section 7 of the Clayton Act
2. Conspiracy to Monopolize
3. Monopolization and Attempt

C. Defendant's Business Tort Counterclaims

1. Disparagement & Unfair Trade Practices
2. Misappropriation of Confidential Info.
3. Tortious Interference
4. Unjust Enrichment

V. Plaintiff's Motion to Add Defendants

VI. Summary

I. BACKGROUND

Siemens Medical Systems, Inc. is the American subsidiary of the German conglomerate Siemens Aktiengesellschaft ("Siemens AG"). Siemens AG manufactures the "Lithostar," a non-invasive medical device known a lithotripter, which dissolves kidney stones by projecting high energy shock waves into the human body. The Lithostar is one of several brands of lithotripters available from different manufacturers. The Lithostar costs about $ 1.5 million, is durable [*1050] and long lasting, but requires frequent maintenance and periodic replacement [3] of parts. Defendant SMS is the exclusive distributor of the Lithostar in the United States, providing sales, service and maintenance contracts after installation. Of the total 378 lithotripters currently in use in this country, 80 are Siemens Lithostars. SMS has contracts with equipment owners to service 67 or 68 Lithostars, amounting to about 85% of the total number of installed Lithostars but only 18% of the total lithotripters in the U.S.

Plaintiff Servicetrends is an independent service company incorporated in July, 1992, to provide maintenance for lithotripters. The company's sole business is servicing the Siemens Lithostar and its competitors, such as the Dornier HM-3.¹ Servicetrends does not operate lithotripters for patient treatment. To date, Servicetrends has secured service contracts on 12 or 13 Lithostars, approximately 16% of the potential Lithostar service contracts available in the United States. Servicetrends also has 27 contracts to service the Dornier HM-3.

[4] The Lithostar is composed of numerous parts, among them the shocktube, the spark gap, and the shockwave generator. Plaintiff labels these "replacement parts." Replacement parts are modular units made up of several components. Siemens AG is Defendant's sole source of replacement parts, and Defendant is the sole distributor of Lithostar brand replacement parts in the United States. SMS provides replacement parts to its own service personnel for use in servicing equipment, and sells the same replacement parts to equipment owners and independent service organizations, including Servicetrends. SMS services Lithostars at the modular replacement part level only and does not sell or service the individual components that make up the replacement parts.

¹ The HM-3, manufactured by Dornier Medical Systems, received premarket approval from the FDA in 1984 and was the only lithotripter approved for sale in this country until 1988. Approximately 197 HM-3's were sold in the United States. Dornier ceased producing the HM-3 in 1987, with the advent of competing "second-generation" lithotripters using improved technology. In 1988, the FDA approved two new lithotripter manufacturers, Medstone and Siemens, and in 1991 Dornier received approval to sell its own second-generation lithotripter, the MFL 5000.

Although Lithostar parts are not interchangeable with parts produced by other lithotripter manufacturers, components made by independent manufacturers ("OEM's") can be purchased separately and used to repair the Lithostar without buying Siemens' modular replacement parts. For example, Servicetrends buys the spark gap and the shockwave generator components from OEM's and uses these components to service a customer's Lithostar on site. However, [5] Servicetrends can buy the shocktube replacement part only in its modular form and only from SMS.²

Plaintiff says that SMS forces Lithostar buyers to use SMS parts and repair services, thereby precluding Servicetrends from competing in the market for replacement parts and service contracts. In an extensive eighteen count complaint, Servicetrends alleges a wide variety of antitrust and business tort claims. Servicetrends contends that SMS engages in illegal tying arrangements, monopolization and attempted monopolization of markets for service and parts for lithotripters and Lithostars, exclusive dealing, concerted refusal to deal, violations of the Lanham Act and the Georgia Unfair Trade Practices Act, and tortious interference. Plaintiff [6] seeks relief as provided under the Sherman and Clayton Acts -- treble damages, injunctive relief, and attorneys' fees.

II. SUMMARY JUDGMENT STANDARD

Rule 56(c), Fed. R. Civ. P., defines the standard for summary judgment: HN1[

Courts should grant summary judgment when "there is no genuine issue as to any material fact . . . and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." The general rule of summary judgment in the Eleventh Circuit [*1051] states that the moving party must show the court that no genuine issue of material fact should be decided at trial. Clark v. Coats & Clark, Inc., 929 F.2d 604 (11th Cir. 1991). "Unless the movant for summary judgment meets its burden under Rule 56, the obligation of the opposing party does not arise even if no opposing evidentiary material is presented by the party opposing the motion." Id.

HN2[

While all evidence and factual inferences are to be viewed in a light most favorable to the nonmoving party, Rollins v. TechSouth, Inc., 833 F.2d 1525, 1529 (11th Cir. 1987); Everett v. Napper, 833 F.2d 1507, 1510 (11th Cir. 1987), "the mere existence of [7] some alleged factual dispute between the parties will not defeat an otherwise properly supported motion for summary judgment; the requirement is that there be no genuine issue of material fact." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. 242, 248, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 106 S. Ct. 2505 (1986). An issue is not genuine if it is unsupported by evidence, or if it is created by evidence that is "merely colorable" or is "not significantly probative." Id. at 250. Similarly, a fact is not material unless it is identified by the controlling substantive law as an essential element of the nonmoving party's case. Id. at 248.

HN3[

Where neither party can prove either the affirmative or the negative of an essential element of a claim, the movant meets its burden on summary judgment by showing that the opposing party will not be able to meet its burden of proof at trial. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 325, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265, 106 S. Ct. 2548 (1986). In [8] Celotex, the Supreme Court interpreted Rule 56(c) to require the moving party to demonstrate that the nonmoving party lacks evidence to support an essential element of its claim. Thus, the movant's burden is "discharged by 'showing' -- that is, pointing out to the district court -- that there is an absence of evidence to support the nonmoving party's case." Id.

In either situation, HN4[

only when the movant meets this burden, does the burden shift to the opposing party, who must then present evidence to establish the existence of a material issue of fact. Id. The nonmoving party must go beyond the pleadings and submit evidence in the form of affidavits, depositions, admissions and the like, to demonstrate that a genuine issue of material fact does exist. Id.

Although some courts disfavor the use of summary procedures in complex antitrust cases, recent Supreme Court decisions have made it clear that HN5[ summary judgment is appropriate in antitrust actions where the plaintiff

² The shocktube replacement part contains three components: a lens, a coil, and a membrane. Siemens does not sell these components, only the modular part itself. However, Siemens AG manufactures the components, and Servicetrends claims it is unable to obtain them from any other source.

870 F. Supp. 1042, *1051-994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11383, 8

fails to establish genuine issues of material fact bearing on the elements of the case. See Matsushita Electric Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 106 S. Ct. 1348, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538 \(1986\). [9]

III. DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

SMS divides Plaintiff's eighteen counts into six groups and addresses them in "descending order of dispositive significance." To assist in organizing and reviewing the extensive record, the Court will follow the same format.

A. MONOPOLIZATION AND ATTEMPTED MONOPOLIZATION CLAIMS

Seven counts of Plaintiff's complaint deal with allegations of monopoly and attempted monopoly:

Count 5: Monopolization of the market for lithotripter and Lithostar service.

Count 6: Monopolization of the market for lithotripter and Lithostar service based on a refusal to deal.

Count 8: Attempted monopolization of the market for lithotripter and Lithostar service.

Count 9: Attempted monopolization of the market for lithotripter and Lithostar service based on leveraging.

Count 10: Attempted monopolization of the market for lithotripter and Lithostar service based on a refusal to deal.

Count 12: Monopolization of the market for lithotripter and Lithostar replacement and component parts.

[*1052] Count 13: Attempted monopolization of the market for lithotripter and Lithostar replacement and component parts.

1. The Evils of Monopoly Power

Section 101 2 of the Sherman Act HN6 prohibits monopolization, attempts to monopolize, and conspiracy to monopolize.³ In United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 86 S. Ct. 1698, 1704, 16 L. Ed. 2d 778 \(1966\), the Supreme Court offered what has become the standard definition of an illegal monopoly:

The offense of monopoly under § 2 of the Sherman Act has two elements: (1) the possession of monopoly power in the relevant market and (2) the willful acquisition or maintenance of that power as distinguished from growth or development as a consequence of a superior product, business acumen, or historic accident.

Thus, the threshold issue is whether the Defendant has monopoly, or market, power. The second requirement, often called monopoly conduct, contemplates bad acts intended to eliminate competition by means unrelated to competitive merit.

[11] Simply put, monopoly or market power is "the power to control prices or exclude competition." United States v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., 351 U.S. 377, 76 S. Ct. 994, 1005, 100 L. Ed. 1264 \(1956\); American Key Corp. v. Cole Nat'l Corp., 762 F.2d 1569, 1581 \(11th Cir. 1985\). The existence of monopoly power can be inferred from a firm's dominant share of the market.⁴ Grinnell, 86 S. Ct. at 1704. The key to determining market share as a proxy

³ Section 2 provides:

Every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspires with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of a felony

15 U.S.C. § 2.

⁴ Market power is the measure of a firm's ability to raise prices above competitive levels without losing profits from decreased sales. The economic evil of monopoly power is simply the threat that a firm with excessive market share will charge more than a competitive price for the monopolized product.

Because the actual data needed to prove monopoly pricing is rarely available, courts typically use "market share" as a convenient proxy. A firm's market share is the percentage of its unit sales to total market sales. Judge Hand originated the classic guidelines of market share sufficient to constitute monopoly power -- 90% market share constitutes a monopoly, 64% is "doubtful," and 33% is not enough. See United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, 148 F.2d 416, 424 \(2d Cir. 1945\); see also for monopoly power is to define the relevant product and geographic markets. See T. Harris Young & Assoc., Inc. v. Marquette Electronics, 931 F.2d 816, 823 \(11th Cir. 1991\). The parties agree for purposes of deciding Defendant's motion that the appropriate geographic market is the United States.

[12] Defining the relevant product market is essentially a factual question. U.S. Anchor Mfg., Inc. v. Rule Indus., Inc., 7 F.3d 986, 994 \(11th Cir. 1993\). The Eleventh Circuit describes the procedure as follows:

HN7 "Defining a relevant product market is primarily 'a process of describing those groups of producers which, because of the similarity of their products, have the ability -- actual or potential -- to take significant amounts of business away from each other.'" The reasonable interchangeability of use or the cross-elasticity of demand between a product and its substitutes constitutes the outer boundaries of a product market for antitrust purposes.

[*1053] Id. at 995 (citations omitted) (footnote omitted). Cross-elasticity of demand is a measure of the substitutability of products from a consumer's perspective.⁵ Simply stated, HN8 the relevant product market consists of a specific product and its reasonable substitutes.

[13] The second element of the monopolization offense, monopoly conduct, is more difficult to describe. In addition to the predatory pricing practices described in Part C. below, HN9 monopolistic conduct can sometimes be found where a seller refuses to supply a competitor with a product essential to the competitor's survival. This idea that antitrust liability can arise from a monopolist's "refusal to deal" dates back to an early Supreme Court case, United States v. Terminal R.R. Ass'n, 224 U.S. 383, 32 S. Ct. 507, 56 L. Ed. 810 \(1912\). In Terminal Railroad, a group of railroad companies gained control of a local cargo terminal and a toll bridge crossing the Mississippi River. The horizontal combination then used its control of this "essential facility" to discriminate against competitors and to profit on their own rail services. The Supreme Court held that the group's conduct violated §§ 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, and ordered that other railroads depending on the facilities be allowed to participate in ownership and control. See also Associated Press v. United States, 326 U.S. 1, 65 S. Ct. 1416, 89 L. Ed. 2013 \(1945\) [14] (news information agency operating as a joint venture required to admit nonmembers on nondiscriminatory terms); Otter Tail Power Co. v. United States, 410 U.S. 366, 93 S. Ct. 1022, 35 L. Ed. 2d 359 \(1973\) (public utility cannot refuse to wholesale power to smaller distribution systems).

The "essential facilities" doctrine underlay a recent "refusal to deal" case, Aspen Skiing Co. v. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp., 472 U.S. 585, 105 S. Ct. 2847, 86 L. Ed. 2d 467 \(1985\). Plaintiff "Highlands" operated a mountain ski area and joined with its larger competitor "Skiing Co." to offer vacationers a combined "all-Aspen" ski ticket. The package permitted skiers to use any of the four ski areas in Aspen and the two companies divided the revenues on the basis of relative use. Skiing Co. later decided to continue offering the combined pass only if the smaller Highlands would accept a fixed percentage of the revenues. Highlands refused and the all-Aspen ticket was discontinued. Highlands then charged Skiing Co. with monopolization based on its refusal to continue offering the [15] combined ski package.

Grinnell, 86 S. Ct. at 1704 (80% market share is a "substantial monopoly"; 87% "leaves no doubt" of monopoly power; and agreeing Judge Hand's 90% "constituted monopoly power") (citations omitted). The Second Circuit explained: "Sometimes, but not inevitably, it will be useful to suggest that a market share below 50% is rarely evidence of monopoly power, a share between 50% and 70% can occasionally show monopoly power, and a share above 70% is usually strong evidence of monopoly power." Broadway Delivery Corp. v. United Parcel Serv., 651 F.2d 122, 129 \(2d Cir. 1981\). Where the record showed that a defendant exercised market share of only 21%-27% in one market and 16% in another, the Fifth Circuit concluded that "market shares in the range of 16 to 25 percent . . . are insufficient -- at least absent other compelling structural evidence -- as a matter of law to support monopolization." Dimmitt Agri Indus., Inc. v. CPC Int'l Inc., 679 F.2d 516, 529 \(5th Cir. 1982\).

⁵ The concept of cross-elasticity of demand is critical to determining which products are included in the total market from which a producer's market share is determined. When the price of a product rises above a competitive level, consumers seek to substitute products that are reasonably interchangeable. The relevant product market therefore includes competing products. See U.S. Anchor Mfg., Inc. v. Rule Indus., Inc., 7 F.3d 986, 995 \(11th Cir. 1993\). A defendant's share of the total product market is calculated as its unit sales divided by the total unit sales of all the firms producing the same, or reasonably similar, products. Failing to consider reasonably substitutable products in the market share calculation understates the size of the total market and overstates the market power of the defendant.

The Supreme Court noted that "even a firm with monopoly power has no general duty to engage in a joint marketing program with a competitor." Id. at 2856. However, "the high value that we have placed on the right to refuse to deal with other firms does not mean that the right is unqualified." Id. The Court indicated that a lack of valid business justifications for the refusal to cooperate, and a change in business policy that did not create a gain in efficiency, was enough to uphold the monopolization verdict for Plaintiff Highlands. Id. at 2859-61.

Finally, HN10[] there are three essential elements to a claim alleging attempted monopolization: (1) the specific intent to achieve monopoly power by predatory or exclusionary conduct; (2) actual anticompetitive conduct; and (3) a "dangerous probability of success" in defendant's attempt to achieve monopoly power. U.S. Anchor Mfg., Inc. v. Rule Indus., Inc., 7 F.3d 986, 993 \(11th Cir. 1993\).

The intent element requires an intent to "destroy competition or build monopoly." Times-Picayune Co. v. United States, 345 U.S. 594, 626, 73 S. Ct. 872, 890, 97 L. Ed. 1277 \(1953\). [16] In many cases, intent can be inferred from the defendant's conduct, [*1054] essentially reducing the analysis to two elements. See Spectrum Sports, Inc. v. McQuillan, 122 L. Ed. 2d 247, 113 S. Ct. 884, 892 \(1993\) (unfair and predatory tactics may be sufficient to prove the necessary intent to monopolize); see also McGahee v. Northern Propane Gas Co., 858 F.2d 1487, 1503-04 \(11th Cir. 1988\) (evidence of predatory conduct may support an inference of intent to monopolize).

Anticompetitive conduct often cannot be evaluated independently of the "dangerous probability" of a firm's acquiring monopoly power. Competitive behavior by a small firm with little market share may become anticompetitive conduct when committed by a company with dominant market power. "To have a dangerous probability of successfully monopolizing a market the defendant must be close to achieving monopoly power." U.S. Anchor, 7 F.3d at 994. Thus, proving a dangerous probability of success first involves defining the relevant market and measuring market share as a proxy for monopoly power.

2. The Relevant Product Markets

[17] Plaintiff presents evidence that there are three relevant product markets in this case: (1) the market for second-generation lithotripters; (2) the market for Lithostar parts; and (3) the market for Lithostar service contracts. Deposition of Roger Noll, pp. 10, 40-42, attached as Exhibit 10 to Plaintiff's Memorandum in Opposition [#153]. However, the Complaint also alleges monopolization and attempted monopolization of an alleged market for all lithotripter parts and service. Defendant points out that Plaintiff's expert testified that there is no market for all lithotripters -- not for sales, service or for replacement parts. Noll Depo., Defendant's Exh. 1, pp. 74-77. Indeed, Plaintiff apparently no longer asserts the existence of a product market for all lithotripters. Having presented no evidence on the matter, the Court concludes that Plaintiff cannot meet its burden of proving the existence of monopoly power, or the dangerous probability that Defendant will achieve monopoly power, in the alleged market for all lithotripters. Accordingly, the Court GRANTS Defendant summary judgment with respect to Plaintiff's claims of monopolization and attempted monopolization of a product [18] market consisting of all lithotripters.⁶

Plaintiff contends that SMS possesses monopoly power in each of the three product markets it describes. First, SMS dominates the market for sales of second-generation lithotripters with an 80% share of total market sales for the period October, 1989 through August, 1993. Second, SMS' share of the Lithostar parts market was 100% until the formation of Servicetrends in 1992, and remains very substantial today. Finally, prior to Servicetrends' entry, SMS held 94% of the market for Lithostar service. During the period October, 1991 through September, 1992, 79%

⁶ Because Defendant has supported its motion for summary judgment with affirmative evidence demonstrating that Plaintiff will be unable to prove an element of the claims pertaining to a market for all lithotripters, the Court need not address Defendant's contention that Siemens' 18% market share is insufficient as a matter of law to establish market power or a dangerous probability of success.

of all Lithostar sites were [19] under maintenance contract with SMS, and the balance were either covered by warranty or serviced on a time and materials basis. In 1993, SMS serviced 70 of the 80 Lithostars in operation.

For purposes of its summary judgment motion, SMS does not contest Plaintiff's characterization of the three relevant product markets or Defendant's monopoly power therein. The Court's factual inquiry into defining the relevant product market, in order to determine whether Plaintiff has established the first element of a monopolization claim, can therefore be decided on the basis of Plaintiff's evidence alone.

3. Monopolistic Conduct

The second element of Plaintiff's monopolization and attempt claims requires proof of anticompetitive conduct. Servicetrends alleges that SMS engages in anticompetitive conduct in three distinct ways: (a) violation of the "essential facilities" doctrine; (b) monopoly leveraging; and (c) price discrimination.

[*1055] (a) The "Essential Facilities" Doctrine

HN11 [+] The essential facilities doctrine makes it illegal for the holder of an "essential facility" to deny access to a competitor where there is no legitimate business reason for the refusal. See generally City of Anaheim v. Southern Cal. Edison Co., 955 F.2d 1373, 1379-80 \(9th Cir. 1992\). [20] Although the doctrine originated in the context of a concerted refusal to deal, see United States v. Terminal R.R. Ass'n, 224 U.S. 383, 56 L. Ed. 810, 32 S. Ct. 507 \(1912\), more recent formulations by lower courts have broadened its application. In this case, Plaintiff seeks to apply the doctrine by arguing that Siemens AG's patents on the shocktube and its component parts create a "legal monopoly" that enables its subsidiary SMS to price discriminate, to raise entry barriers to the Lithostar service market, and to leverage its parts monopoly into the market for Lithostar service.

HN12 [+] To establish a violation of the essential facilities doctrine, Servicetrends must prove four elements:

- (1) control of the essential facility by a monopolist; (2) a competitor's inability practically or reasonably to duplicate the essential facility; (3) the denial of the use of the facility to a competitor; and (4) the feasibility of providing the facility.

MCI Communications Corp. v. AT&T, 708 F.2d 1081, 1132-33 \(7th Cir. 1983\). Plaintiff must also demonstrate that, by denying access to an essential facility, [21] defendant caused it "severe handicap" amounting to "more than inconvenience, or even some economic loss." See Twin Laboratories, Inc. v. Weider Health & Fitness, 900 F.2d 566, 569-70 \(2d Cir. 1990\).

The undisputed facts show that Siemens AG owns U.S. patents Nos. 4,697,588 and 4,878,488, covering the shocktube replacement part and its components. Jay Affidavit, Defendant's Exh. 63; Rattner Affidavit, Defendant's Exh. 64. Under the patent laws, Siemens AG has a seventeen-year "monopoly" on the right to manufacture, sell or license the patented device. See 35 U.S.C. §§ 101, 154, 271\(d\)\(4\). Pursuant to these rights, Siemens AG appointed its American subsidiary SMS as the exclusive distributor of the shocktube replacement part in the United States.

Defendant SMS employs a "shocktube refund policy" to distribute the patented device. When a Lithostar shocktube needs replacing, Defendant's customers return the old unit to SMS and pay the "exchange price" for a new unit. This exchange price is substantially lower than the "list price," or what a buyer would pay without trading in a used part. SMS then sends the old unit [22] to Siemens AG for remanufacture. If Siemens AG determines that the old part is refurbishable, it sends SMS a credit for the value of the used part. In effect, by charging a discounted price for a new shocktube in exchange for the old repairable unit, SMS is advancing to its service contract customers the credit it later receives from its parent.

Servicetrends buys shocktubes from SMS at the same nominal price as other customers, but SMS does not advance to Servicetrends the offsetting trade-in credit until Siemens AG examines the used device and issues a refund. Consequently, Servicetrends bears the cost of funds for the difference between the list price and the exchange price during the interim period. See Rankin Depo., Defendant's Exh. 7, pp. 80-81; Christensen Depo., Defendant's Exh. 8, p. 138; DeBrock Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. 8, p. 324; Warlick Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. 13, p. 282.

Servicetrends argues that the shocktube return policy is an exclusionary tactic not justified by SMS' patent rights. "When SMS sells a Lithostar shocktube, SMS in effect forces every purchaser of a shocktube including Servicetrends to send its shocktube to Siemens AG in Germany for repair. This [23] conduct is anti-competitive and a barrier to entry into the separate Lithostar service market." Plaintiff's Memorandum in Opposition [#155], p. 29.

Plaintiff cites no authority to support its assertion that Defendant's refund policy constitutes anticompetitive conduct. To the contrary, as a competitor, Servicetrends is not by right entitled to enjoy the "free ride" that SMS provides in the form of inventory financing for its own customers. See, e.g., Abcor Corp. v. AM Int'l Inc., 916 F.2d 924, 929-30 (4th Cir. 1990) (no anticompetitive [*1056] conduct where parts manufacturer shifted inventory carrying cost to competing dealer while continuing to service own customers).

In addition, Defendant SMS maintains that the shocktube refund policy has no anticompetitive effect and produces no significant economic loss for Servicetrends. According to Defendant, the increased cost of funds to Servicetrends amounts to approximately one percent of revenues.⁷ See Shapiro Depo., Defendant's Exh. 60, p. 127. Plaintiff's own antitrust expert says a level of 5% of revenues would indicate a significant adverse effect on Servicetrends. Noll Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. 1, p. 127. [24] Thus, Plaintiff has produced no facts showing a competitive injury or that it suffered a significant economic loss as a result of Defendant's shocktube return policy.

Servicetrends does not explain exactly how the "essential facilities" doctrine applies to the facts in this case. Since Plaintiff's own evidence proves that SMS does not deny Servicetrends use of the patented shocktube replacement part, the Court concludes that Plaintiff's essential facilities attack is focused on Defendant's refusal to sell the shocktube's patented component parts. Certainly, the inability to purchase the unit's component parts may deprive Servicetrends of the opportunity to repair a customer's shocktube on site. Instead, the shocktube refund policy compels [25] Plaintiff to return the worn out assembly to the manufacturer and to purchase an entire shocktube for reinstallation. Noting that Defendant's patent permits it to sell the shocktube for a "monopoly price," Servicetrends complains that "the claimed patent, however, does not give SMS the exclusive right to repair the shocktube." Plaintiff's Memorandum in Opposition [#155], p. 28.

As a general proposition, Siemens AG's lawful patent does give it the right to refuse to sell or license the patented device, including the component parts of the shocktube. See, e.g., SCM Corp. v. Xerox Corp., 645 F.2d 1195, 1204 (2d Cir. 1981). "No court has ever held that the antitrust laws require a patent holder to forfeit the exclusionary power inherent in his patent the instant his patent monopoly affords him monopoly power over a relevant product market." Id. Although certain forms of patent abuse may give rise to antitrust liability, see, e.g., Walker Process Equip., Inc. v. Food Mach. & Chem. Corp., 382 U.S. 172, 86 S. Ct. 347, 15 L. Ed. 2d 247 (1965), HN13[] "where a patent has been lawfully acquired, subsequent [26] conduct permissible under the patent laws cannot trigger any liability under the antitrust laws." SCM Corp., 645 F.2d at 1206. In the absence of authority to the contrary, the Court finds that SMS has no legal obligation to sell patented component parts to its competitor Servicetrends.

Thus, Plaintiff is likely mistaken in its assertion that Defendant does not have the exclusive right to repair the modular shocktube. Although the Court need not decide the issue here, it appears that Defendant is entitled to a so-called monopoly in the repair of its shocktube replacement part -- a monopoly power that is inherent in its right to sell or refuse to sell the patented components.

Plaintiff and Defendant have access to the same "facility." Siemens AG does not supply the individual shocktube components to its subsidiary SMS for use in servicing customers' equipment. Instead, SMS and Servicetrends compete on equal footing in the Lithostar service market. Both have access to the shocktube replacement part and, in addition, Servicetrends purchases components of the spark gap and shockwave generator from other independent OEM's. DeBrock Depo., Defendant's Exh. 6, [\[27\]](#) pp. 359-78. See Laurel Sand & Gravel, Inc. v. CSX Transp., Inc., 924 F.2d 539, 544-45 \(4th Cir. 1991\) (affirming summary judgment where plaintiff "failed to show that it could not reasonably duplicate or pursue a reasonable alternative to the essential facility"). Servicetrends has captured thirteen Lithostar service customers from SMS since mid-1992, and reportedly earned $ 1 million in operating profits in its first year. The evidence in this case simply does not support an inference [\[*1057\]](#) that Servicetrends has been denied access to an essential facility, or that the shocktube components are essential to competition in the Lithostar service market.⁸

⁷ Plaintiff's damages expert, John Preston, testified that Servicetrends' interest cost resulting from Defendant's refund policy amounted to approximately $ 9,000, compared to service revenues of $ 2,141,506 for the same period. See Preston Depo., Defendant's Exh. 4, pp. 78-81.

[\[28\]](#) (b) Monopoly Leveraging

Servicetrends cites Berkey Photo, Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 603 F.2d 263, 275 \(2d Cir. 1979\), to advance the proposition that a monopolist violates § 2 by using its monopoly power in one market to gain a competitive advantage in another market. Plaintiff contends that the list price versus exchange price differential and the credit policy incorporated into Defendant's shocktube refund program are examples of monopoly leveraging in the parts market designed to gain an advantage in the service market. Servicetrends also points to Defendant's refusal to sell shocktube components as another example of leveraging:

"In addition to the return policy, SMS also insures its ability to leverage its monopoly power in the 'patented' shocktube into the separate Lithostar service market by refusing to sell or make available components of the shocktube, effectively thwarting any effort to repair. The effect is that SMS not only has monopoly control and power in the parts market, but also gains and maintains monopoly control and power in the separate Lithostar service market.

Plaintiff's Memorandum in Opposition [#155], p. 30 (citation [\[*29\]](#) omitted).

These claims are essentially identical to those already addressed. The Court has determined that neither the shocktube refund policy nor Defendant's refusal to sell patented component parts offends antitrust law. Moreover, it is not the per se use of leverage that the Berkey Photo court condemned, but the anticompetitive conduct accompanying such use. In the absence of bad behavior, i.e., "the use of monopoly power, however lawfully acquired, to foreclose competition, to gain a competitive advantage, or to destroy a competitor," United States v. Griffith, 334 U.S. 100, 68 S. Ct. 941, 945, 92 L. Ed. 1236 \(1948\), the court endorsed an expansive vision of legitimate monopoly conduct:

[A] HN14 [+] large firm does not violate § 2 simply by reaping the competitive rewards attributable to its efficient size, nor does an integrated business offend the Sherman Act whenever one of its departments benefits from association with a division possessing a monopoly in its own market. So long as we allow a firm to compete in several fields, we must expect it to seek the competitive advantages of its broad based activity . . .
..

⁸ Defendant offers a number of business justifications for its allegedly monopolistic conduct. Although legitimate business reasons can serve as a defense for a monopolist's exclusionary acts and refusal to deal, see, e.g., Oahu Gas Serv., Inc. v. Pacific Resources, Inc., 838 F.2d 360, 368-69 \(9th Cir. 1988\) (and cases cited therein), "whether valid business reasons motivated a monopolist's conduct is a question of fact." High Technology Careers v. San Jose Mercury News, 996 F.2d 987, 990 \(9th Cir. 1993\) (citing Eastman Kodak Co. v. Image Technical Serv., Inc., 119 L. Ed. 2d 265, 112 S. Ct. 2072, 2091 \(1992\)). However, having determined that SMS is not required to sell the patented shocktube components as a matter of law, this Court need not decide whether factual questions precluding summary judgment exist regarding the validity of Defendant's asserted justifications.

[30] Berkey Photo, 603 F.2d at 276. In the absence of a showing that Defendant's conduct falls outside the scope of competition on the merits, Plaintiff cannot succeed in proving its monopolization and attempt claims.

(c) Price Discrimination

Servicetrends contends that SMS engages in anticompetitive conduct through price discrimination in two ways. First, Defendant's pricing and exchange policies for the shocktube replacement part allegedly "are anti-competitive; are a result of monopoly leveraging; create a 'price squeeze' on Servicetrends; constitute illegal price discrimination; raise barriers to entry into the service and parts markets; and have caused antitrust injury." Plaintiff's Memorandum in Opposition [#155], p. 19. Second, Plaintiff contends that Defendant engages in illegal price discrimination with Med-Lab Supply Company ("Med-Lab").⁹

[31] [*1058] Viewing all evidence and factual inferences in a light most favorable to Plaintiff, the following facts emerge as undisputed. Med-Lab is an authorized service agent for SMS in the Miami area. Noll Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. 10, pp. 176-89. By the terms of a purchased radio ads. These cases do not address the issue of price discounts provided to selected distributors and they are not pertinent here.

Defendant raises Monsanto Co. v. Spray-Rite Service Corp., 465 U.S. 752, 104 S. Ct. 1464, 79 L. Ed. 2d 775, (1984), to validate its contention that the 25% parts discount compensates Med-Lab for services and expenditures that benefit SMS. In dictum, the Monsanto Court noted that "the manufacturer often will want to ensure that its distributors earn sufficient profit to pay for programs such as hiring and training additional salesmen or demonstrating the technical features of the product, and will want to see that 'free-riders' do not interfere." Id. at 1470. This desire, however, does not legitimize every discount program a manufacturer may institute to ensure distributor profits.

Cases challenging unlawful price discrimination [32] practices under the Robinson-Patman Act are instructive in assessing the possible anticompetitive implications of Defendant's discount price arrangement with Med-Lab.¹⁰ In Texaco Inc. v. Hasbrouck, Representation Agreement signed in June, 1989, Med-Lab acts as SMS' sales agent for Siemens' products, installs equipment, pays its own expenses to attend Siemens' training sessions, provides monthly reports and customer training, performs warranty service at its own expense, and assists SMS to meet local regulatory obligations. Representation Agreement, attached as Exh. 89 to Rankin Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. 3. In exchange for performing these marketing functions, Med-Lab receives a 25% discount on parts. Agreement, cover letter; Rankin Depo., p. 387.

[33] The Representation Agreement prohibits SMS from soliciting sales orders or service business in Med-Lab's assigned territory, unless the customer demands SMS. Agreement, p. 8, P 11. Thus, Med-Lab and SMS generally do not compete within the authorized area. Med-Lab does compete with Plaintiff Servicetrends in the area's

⁹ Plaintiff does not suggest that its price discrimination charge implicates either the Robinson-Patman Act (amending § 2 of the Clayton Act) or antitrust restrictions against resale price maintenance agreements, ruled a per se violation of the Sherman Act by Dr. Miles and progeny. See Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. John D. Park & Sons Co., 220 U.S. 373, 31 S. Ct. 376, 55 L. Ed. 502 \(1911\). Instead, Plaintiff argues that the price discount provided to Med-Lab and not to Servicetrends is a form of anticompetitive conduct. See Plaintiff's Memorandum in Opposition [#155], pp. 23-26. Therefore, the Court specifically restricts its review of the Med-Lab Representation Agreement to the narrow issue of whether Plaintiff's practice of extending a price discount to Med-Lab is anticompetitive.

¹⁰ Section 2\(a\) of the Robinson-Patman Act makes it illegal for a seller to discriminate in price between customers. "Price discrimination" in this context means "price difference." A seller discriminates whenever the difference in price charged to customers does not reflect a difference in the marginal cost of selling to them. However, the statute does not ban all price differences charged to different customers. Instead, the statute provides a number of important limitations, including a defense permitting price discrimination based on differences in costs: "nothing herein contained shall prevent differentials which make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities . . . [sold]." 15 U.S.C. § 13\(a\). See, e.g., Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 125 L. Ed. 2d 168, 113 S. Ct. 2578, 2586 \(1993\).

Lithostar parts and service markets. Further, Med-Lab is not permitted to resell Siemens' products to customers at prices lower than those quoted by SMS in the agreed territory. Agreement, p. 3, P 3(m).

Plaintiff cites Aspen Skiing and Lorain Journal Co. v. United States, 342 U.S. 143, 72 S. Ct. 181, 96 L. Ed. 162 \(1951\), as authority for the legal assertion that SMS' discount price for parts sold to Med-Lab evidences anticompetitive conduct. As discussed above, Aspen Skiing involved the termination of a joint marketing agreement in an essential facilities context. Lorain Journal concerned a newspaper that attempted to monopolize the sale of advertising by refusing to deal with local advertisers who 496 U.S. 543, 110 S. Ct. 2535, 110 L. Ed. 2d 492 \(1990\), [34] the Court reviewed the role of "functional discounts" granted to distributors as reimbursement for the value of their marketing [*1059] functions. "Such a discount is not illegal." Id. at 2546; see also Americom Distrib. Corp. v. ACS Communications, Inc., 990 F.2d 223, 227 \(5th Cir. 1993\) ("The Act allows a price differential due to savings in costs of manufacture, delivery, or sale."). However, HN15[¹⁵] distributor discounts that are "completely untethered" to the manufacturer's marginal cost savings, or merely "subterfuges to avoid the Act's restrictions," violate prohibitions against price discrimination. "Only to the extent that a buyer actually performs certain functions, assuming all the risks and costs involved, should he qualify for a compensating discount. The amount of the discount should be reasonably related to the expenses assumed by the buyer." 110 S. Ct. at 2547 (quoting In re Doubleday & Co., 52 F.T.C. 169, 209 \(1955\)). The burden of proof is on the plaintiff to show that functional discounts constitute illegal price discrimination. 110 S. Ct. at 2545 & n.18.

Uncontroverted facts show that Med-Lab provides marketing functions [35] for SMS which Servicetrends does not perform. Plaintiff offers no evidence from which a juror might reasonably conclude that the discount does not fairly reflect the value of Med-Lab's marketing services. To the contrary, the evidence indicates that Med-Lab provides at its own expense substantial sales and support functions. In the complete absence of evidence from which an injury to competition might be inferred, the Court concludes that Defendant's conduct with respect to the Med-Lab parts discount is not anticompetitive.

4. Conclusion

The Court finds that there is no genuine dispute of material fact pertaining to the monopolization and attempt claims in Counts 6, 9, 10, 12, and 13. Having found no evidence of anticompetitive conduct in product markets where Defendant admits to possessing monopoly power, the Court hereby GRANTS Defendant summary judgment on Counts 6, 9, 10, 12, and 13. As discussed below in Part C., the Court DENIES summary judgment on Counts 5 and 8 insofar as they are based on predatory pricing theory.

B. TYING ARRANGEMENTS

Plaintiff's Complaint contains four counts founded on assertions of illegal tying arrangements:

- Count 1: Tying the sale [36] of Lithostar service to the sale of Lithostar replacement parts.
- Count 2: Tying the sale of the modular replacement parts to the purchase of components.
- Count 3: Tying the sale of Lithostar service to the sale of the Lithostar lithotripter.
- Count 4: Tying the sale of service to the sale of financing for the Lithostar lithotripter and other lithotripters.

HN16[¹⁶] A tying arrangement conditions the sale of one product on the purchase of another. See Northern Pacific Ry. v. United States, 356 U.S. 1, 78 S. Ct. 514, 518, 2 L. Ed. 2d 545 \(1958\). The product the purchaser wants to buy is known as the "tying product," while the unwanted but attached product is the "tied product." The essential antitrust concern regarding tying is that the illegal arrangements foreclose competing manufacturers from selling in the tied product market.¹¹ [38] Tying the sale of goods is expressly prohibited by § 3 of the Clayton Act, 15

¹¹ Tying arrangements are nominally regarded as per se illegal, but the law has undergone substantial changes in recent years and modern tying cases indicate that tying may be subject to a "rule of reason" balancing approach. See, e.g., Jefferson Parish Hosp. v. Hyde, 466 U.S. 2, 104 S. Ct. 1551, 80 L. Ed. 2d 2 \(1984\) (four Justices favor removing tying from the per se category of antitrust offenses). This evolution in judicial thinking is based on a reevaluation of the economic theory associated with tying. Originally, tying was condemned because of a fear that a firm with monopoly power in the tying product market would be able to

U.S.C. § 14. Section 1 of the Sherman Act prohibits tying involving goods or [*1060] services. The standard for distinguishing a tying violation under the Sherman and Clayton Acts was addressed [37] in Times-Picayune Publishing Co. v. United States, 345 U.S. 594, 97 L. Ed. 1277, 73 S. Ct. 872 (1953), but the distinctions have blurred in the lower courts over the past forty years and are unimportant in this case. Plaintiff Servicetrends brings its tying complaints under the Sherman Act.¹²

An illegal tying arrangement under Section 1 has five elements: (1) two products, i.e., a tying and a tied product; (2) evidence of actual coercion by the seller that forced the buyer to purchase the tied product; (3) sufficient market power in the seller's tying product market to force the buyer to accept the tied product; (4) anticompetitive effects in the tied product market; and (5) involvement of a "not insubstantial" amount of interstate commerce in the tied product market. Amey, Inc. v. Gulf Abstract & Title, Inc., 758 F.2d 1486, 1502-03 (11th Cir. 1985) (citing Yentsch v. Texaco, Inc., 630 F.2d 46, 56-57 (2d Cir. 1980)).

Count 1 alleges that Defendant ties the sale of Lithostar service (the tied product) [39] to the sale of three Lithostar replacement parts: the shocktube, the shockwave generator, and the spark gap (the tying products). Plaintiff's attack focuses on the shocktube, again arguing that the unavailability of separate component parts forces a customer to buy unwanted repair services in order to purchase a shocktube component.

Servicetrends' real complaint is that it must pay for Siemens AG's repairs of the modular shocktube replacement part because Siemens AG will not sell the shocktube components. However, this contention is different from the allegations contained in Count 1. Count 1 alleges a tie between the market for Lithostar service and the market for Lithostar replacement parts.¹³ See Complaint, P 75, 76. Plaintiff now seeks to reinterpret Count 1 to encompass a tie between service of the shocktube and the sale of shocktube components. Although Defendant admits to a product market for Lithostar service contracts, the record contains no evidence of a product market for shocktube service.

[40] A tying claim requires evidence that the seller refuses to sell the tying product unless the buyer purchases the tied product: "Where there is no tie, there is no claim." See T. Harris Young & Assoc., Inc. v. Marquette Elec., Inc., 931 F.2d 816, 821-22 & n.10 (11th Cir. 1991). The record is clear that SMS does not refuse to sell shocktubes, spark gaps, and shockwave generators to Servicetrends even though Servicetrends does not purchase Lithostar service. DeBrock Depo., Defendant's Exh. 6, p. 449; Noll Depo., Defendant's Exh. 1, p. 271 ("I am not aware of a tie between parts and service"). The Court finds no evidence of a tie between Lithostar replacement parts and Lithostar service and no basis in fact or in law to sustain Plaintiff's Count 1.

Count 2 alleges that purchasers of Lithostar component parts (the tying product) are forced to purchase the entire modular replacement part (the tied product). Complaint, P 82. However, "a tying arrangement cannot exist unless two separate product markets have been linked." Jefferson Parish Hosp. v. Hyde, 466 U.S. 2, 104 S. Ct. 1551, use that power as a lever into the tied product market. For example, a monopolistic seller of copy machines might be able to monopolize the paper market if it was allowed to tie the sale of copy paper to the sale of the machine. The leverage theory underpinning the per se treatment of tying has lost favor, however, as economists today generally concede that tying cannot transfer monopoly power from one market to another.

¹² Section 1 does not mention "tying," but prohibits contracts in restraint of trade:

Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is declared to be illegal.

15 U.S.C. § 1.

¹³ Plaintiff states: "Count I of the Complaint alleges that SMS has illegally tied the sale of Lithostar replacement parts (the tying product) to the sale of Lithostar repair and service (the tied product)." Plaintiff's Memorandum in Opposition [#155], p. 45.

1562-63, 80 L. Ed. 2d 2 \(1984\). [41] In this case, there is no evidence of a product market for Lithostar component parts.¹⁴ [*1061] Consequently, no illegal tie-in can exist and Plaintiff's Count 2 fails.

Count 3 alleges that Defendant ties the sale of Siemens Lithostars (the tying product) to the sale of Lithostar service (the tied product). Complaint, P 89. Specifically, Plaintiff claims that SMS's inclusion of a one-year "warranty" in the Lithostar's purchase price constitutes an illegal tying arrangement.

The Court initially notes that Plaintiff offers no case authority suggesting that the Lithostar and its associated manufacturer's warranty constitute two separate products. [42] See Jefferson Parish, 104 S. Ct. at 1562-63. Defendant has never sold the one-year Lithostar warranty separately from the equipment. Christensen Depo., Defendant's Exh. 8, pp. 23-24. The warranty is not separately priced and its cost is included in the price of the Lithostar.

In Jefferson Parish, the Supreme Court considered whether a hospital's surgical and anesthesiological services should be regarded as two products for tying analysis purposes. The Court asked whether the two services could be meaningfully separated: "Thus, in this case no tying arrangement can exist unless there is a sufficient demand for the purchase of anesthesiological services separately from hospital services to identify a distinct product market in which it is efficient to offer [the services separately]." Jefferson Parish, 104 S. Ct. at 1563.

The evidence in this case suggests that no separate demand exists for the purchase of a one year warranty; in fact, Lithostar purchasers view the provision of the manufacturer's warranty as essential to their decision to buy the machine. Buyers [43] indicate that they would consider it "unusual if equipment of this nature came without some warranty." Dills Depo., Defendant's Exh. 55, p. 89. One doctor said that if SMS offered no warranty on its $ 1.5 million Lithostar, "we would not buy it." Puras-Baez Depo., Defendant's Exh. 34, p. 33. Thus, there is no indication of consumer demand for a one-year warranty provided by anyone other than the Lithostar's manufacturer, and no evidence that providing the warranty separately from the machine would be economically efficient. See, e.g., Klo-Zik Co. v. General Motors Corp., 677 F. Supp. 499 \(E.D. Tex. 1987\) (sale of truck engines with warranties included did not constitute an illegal tying arrangement).

Moreover, Defendant's Lithostar warranty lacks the necessary element of coercion. The Jefferson Parish Court referred to coercion as an independent prerequisite for a tying violation:

Our cases have concluded that HN17 the essential characteristic of an invalid tying arrangement lies in the seller's exploitation of its control over the tying product to force the buyer into the purchase of a tied product that the buyer either did not want at all, or might [44] have preferred to purchase elsewhere on different terms.

Jefferson Parish, 104 S. Ct. at 1558; see also Response of Carolina, Inc. v. Leasco Response, Inc., 537 F.2d 1307, 1327 \(5th Cir. 1976\) ("it must be shown that the purchaser was coerced into purchasing an unwanted product"). Plaintiff Servicetrends has made no showing of coercion pertaining to the one-year Lithostar warranty.¹⁵ Thus, The Court concludes that Plaintiff has failed to come forward with specific facts demonstrating that a Lithostar

¹⁴ Plaintiff's expert Noll testified: "I thus far have seen no evidence that would support the notion that there's a separate market for each of those specific components that go into the shockhead." Defendant's Exh. 1, p. 77.

Similarly, Defendant's expert Shapiro testified that there is no separate relevant parts market in this case. Shapiro Depo., Defendant's Exh. 60, pp. 36-37.

¹⁵ Plaintiff points to Defendant's execution of an equipment Repurchase Agreement with the Endourological Institute of Puerto Rico as an example of an illegal tie between sales and service. The Agreement concerned a common financing requirement by an equipment lessor that the lessee-buyer designate a third party to assume the debt and remarket the equipment in the event of default. SMS, at the request of the buyer and the lender, agreed to repurchase the equipment if requested, but only if SMS performed the maintenance during the equipment's service life. This arrangement was made to facilitate financing of the equipment and lacks any indication of coercion.

and its manufacturer's warranty are two separate products whose markets are linked through coercive means. Count 3 therefore cannot withstand summary judgment.

[45] Count 4 alleges an illegal tie between the manufacturer's equipment financing program (the tying product) and the service market (the tied product). Servicetrends admits to [*1062] lacking sufficient evidence to support this claim and does not oppose the granting of summary judgment on Count 4.

In summary, the Court finds no material factual dispute concerning Plaintiff's tying claims and GRANTS Defendant summary judgment as a matter of law on Counts 1, 2, 3, and 4.

C. PREDATORY PRICING CLAIMS

Defendant moves for summary judgment under Section 2 of the Sherman Act with respect to Counts 7 and 11, as well as Counts 5 and 8 insofar as they are based on predatory pricing theory:

Count 7: Predatory pricing in the market for Lithostar replacement parts.

Count 11: Predatory pricing in the markets for lithotripter service generally and for Lithostar service.

In Count 7, Plaintiff charges that SMS engaged in predatory pricing "for the purpose of maintaining its monopoly" in the Lithostar replacement parts market. Complaint, P 114. Count 11 is an attempt to monopolize claim, accusing SMS of predatory pricing "with the intent of destroying competition" in the service markets. Complaint, [*46] P 133. Counts 5 and 8, discussed in Part A. above, allege monopolization and attempted monopolization of the lithotripter and Lithostar service market. In this case, then, predatory pricing is relevant as proof of monopolistic conduct to establish an element of monopolization and attempted monopolization -- it does not relieve Plaintiff of the burden of proving at trial that Defendant has monopoly power or a "dangerous probability of success."

HN18 [+] Predatory pricing is a term of art that describes "pricing below an appropriate measure of cost for the purpose of eliminating competition in the short run and reducing competition in the long run." Cargill, Inc. v. Monfort of Colorado, Inc., 479 U.S. 104, 107 S. Ct. 484, 493, 93 L. Ed. 2d 427 (1986). A predator prices its product below profit maximizing levels with the expectation of charging monopoly prices in the future when competitors are driven from the market. Predatory pricing is generally analyzed as constituting the conduct portion of an attempt to monopolize, and since intent can be inferred from conduct, evidence of predatory pricing can support an inference of specific [*47] intent. One problem courts have encountered in applying predatory pricing theory is recognizing and distinguishing those instances of legitimate price cutting that epitomize the benefits of unrestrained competition.

In a case where Japanese manufacturers were accused of conspiring to charge predatory prices for televisions sold in the United States, the Supreme Court suggested that predatory pricing schemes are unlikely to succeed:

The success of such schemes is inherently uncertain: the short-run loss is definite, but the long-run gain depends on successfully neutralizing the competition. . . . Absent some assurance that the hoped-for monopoly will materialize, and that it can be sustained for a significant period of time, "the predator must make a substantial investment-with no assurance that it will pay off." For this reason, there is a consensus among commentators that predatory pricing schemes are rarely tried, and even more rarely successful.

Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 106 S. Ct. 1348, 1357, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538 (1986) (citations omitted). The Court further noted the danger [*48] of confusing a predatory pricing scheme with the beneficial effects of increased competition:

Cutting prices in order to increase business often is the very essence of competition. Thus, mistaken inferences in cases such as this one are especially costly, because they chill the very conduct the antitrust laws are designed to protect. "We must be concerned lest a rule or precedent that authorizes a search for a particular type of undesirable pricing behavior end up by discouraging legitimate price competition."

Id. at 1360 (citations omitted). Affirming summary judgment on plaintiff's predatory pricing claims, the Court specifically noted that its observations also applied to predatory pricing by a single firm seeking monopoly power. Id. at 1357.

[*1063] In McGahee v. Northern Propane Gas Co., 858 F.2d 1487 (11th Cir. 1988), this circuit established the test a district court must use in evaluating a defendant's motion for summary judgment in an antitrust claim based on predatory pricing: "We hold that when an antitrust defendant moves for judgment as a matter of law, the test for predatory pricing must consider subjective evidence and should use [49] average total cost as the cost above which no inference of predatory intent can be made." Id. at 1496 (footnote omitted). The court spelled out the elements of the test: "Average total cost means the average of the total economic cost, which includes the necessary minimum profit." Id. at 1503 (footnote omitted). If defendant's prices are above short run marginal cost, plaintiff must present other evidence of predatory intent, either objective or subjective. Id. "The closer a defendant's price is to average total cost, the stronger this other evidence must be for the plaintiff still to avoid summary judgment." Id. Prices below short run marginal cost create a rebuttable presumption of predatory intent. Id. at 1504.

In this case, Servicetrends originally based its predatory pricing claim on the assertion that SMS gave away "free" replacement parts to customers solicited by Servicetrends. Complaint, P 64. Plaintiff did not submit an analysis of Defendant's cost structure to support its charge, but relied instead on the logical certainty that "free" must mean a price below any economic [50] measure of production cost.

Servicetrends asserted that SMS provided free parts to three customers: Lithotripters, Inc.; St. Luke's Medical Center; and Clinicas Las Americas. See Plaintiff's Answers to Defendant's First Interrogatories, Defendant's Exh. 38, pp. 21-22. Defendant denied giving away free parts, explaining that the price of replacement parts is sometimes included in the total price of the service agreement. Defendant stated that it "has never sold replacement parts below cost to any of its customers, including Lithotripters, Inc., Clinicas Las Americas, and St. Luke's Medical Center." Defendant's Memorandum in Support [#143], p. 4. According to SMS, its service contracts are fully priced "to cover costs of providing such parts and service and to allow for a reasonable profit." Id. To support its claim, Defendant offered the affidavit of Guenter Westermann, Senior Vice President responsible for pricing replacement parts, who testified: "Siemens Medical prices Lithostar replacement parts above its cost of purchasing those parts from Siemens AG. . . . such that it can recover its cost of buying those parts from Siemens AG and realize a reasonable rate of return." [51] Westermann Affidavit, Defendant's Exh. 42, P 4. Defendant also supplied testimony from each of the three named customers denying that SMS provided any parts for free. See McCumber Depo., Defendant's Exh. 45, p. 371; Puras-Baez Depo., Defendant's Exh. 34, p. 59; Schmidt Depo., Defendant's Exh. 37, p. 78.

Plaintiff subsequently abandoned its assertion that SMS distributed free parts to customers. Instead, Plaintiff now presents evidence that Defendant executed service contracts priced below its average total direct costs. Specifically, Servicetrends points to a 1988 SMS document that purports to calculate the "direct cost" ¹⁶ of a Lithostar service contract:

Parts:

Shock wave generator	$ 14,450
High voltage supply.....	$ 12,000
Other parts.....	$ 16,000

Subtotal - Parts	$ 42,450
Labor	$ 26,970

Subtotal - Parts.....	$ 69,420
-----------------------	-----------

¹⁶ In this context, "direct cost" refers to parts and labor costs only. Other cost allocations reflecting general and administrative expenses, plus the "necessary minimum profit" component mentioned in McGahee, must be added to derive a total average cost. Hence, this direct cost estimate is lower than a comparable total cost figure and strengthens Plaintiff's assertion of predatory intent. Also, these costs are stated in 1988 dollars, versus the revenue figures found in Defendant's 1992 service contracts. Inflation during the intervening four years tends to overstate the income from service contracts and narrow the real amount by which costs exceed revenues.

Shock tube.	$ 53,750
Total service cost.	$ 123,170

[*1064] See Rankin Depo., Plaintiff's [52] Exh. 3, deposition exhibit 73.

In 1992, Defendant signed a service contract with Clinicas Las Americas for $ 68,335. See Service Agreement, Plaintiff's Exh. 28, marked Puras deposition exhibit 65. Defendant's District Service Manager, David Horgan, states that the contract price "excludes shock wave generating components, i.e., the shockhead, the [53] shock wave generator, and the spark gap." Horgan Affidavit, Defendant's Exh. 46, P 3. If these parts were in fact excluded, the price of the service contract would exceed SMS' apparent direct cost. However, Mr. Horgan's letter to Dr. Puras-Baez specifically notes that shocktubes are excluded, but the shockwave generator and spark gap is included in the price. See Horgan Letter, Plaintiff's Exh. 28, marked Puras deposition exhibit 64. Thus, the evidence suggests that Defendant sold a service contract costing more than $ 69,420 to perform for proceeds of $ 68,335.

Similarly, Plaintiff points to evidence that the direct cost of a service contract sold to St. Luke's Hospital was $ 93,690, compared to a sales price of $ 89,000. See Plaintiff's Memorandum in Opposition [#155], pp. 71-72 and citations therein. In addition, Defendant allegedly sold twenty-six three-year service contracts to Lithotripters, Inc. for a price of $ 150,000 each, compared to an estimated direct cost of \$ 174,315. Id. at 72-73. Plaintiff also presents a 1992 SMS report entitled "Lithotripter Service Analysis" to corroborate the cost figures found in the 1988 document.¹⁷ See Messinger Analysis, [54] Plaintiff's Exh. 7.

The Court concludes that Plaintiff has produced unrebutted evidence showing the existence of genuine issues of material fact concerning Defendant's alleged predatory pricing policy. Accordingly, Defendant's motion for summary judgment on Counts 7 and 11, and on Counts 5 and 8 insofar as they are based on predatory pricing theory, is DENIED.

D. EXCLUSIVE DEALING and CONCERTED REFUSAL TO DEAL

Counts 14 and 15 charge violations of Section 1 of the Sherman Act:

Count 14: Exclusive dealing between SMS and third parties for service of the Lithostar.

Count 15: Concerted refusal to deal based on agreements between SMS and third parties prohibiting use of Servicetrends for Lithostar service.

1. Exclusive Dealing

HN19 Exclusive [55] dealing arrangements are essentially requirements contracts, whereby the buyer agrees to purchase exclusively the product of the contracting supplier. The specific antitrust concern is that exclusive dealing contracts threaten to foreclose the relevant product market to other sellers, who may be unable to find buyers for their competing goods or services. On the other hand, courts recognize that many ordinary supply contracts, motivated by legitimate business needs, inevitably foreclose some competing seller from a portion of the market. Accordingly, exclusive dealing contracts are not per se illegal. See Bob Maxfield, Inc. v. American Motors Corp., 637 F.2d 1033, 1036 \(5th Cir. Unit A Feb. 1981\) ("The mere existence of an exclusive dealing clause in a contract does not establish an antitrust violation."). Instead, courts apply a "rule of reason" approach to weighing the procompetitive and anticompetitive effects of exclusive dealing [*1065] arrangements. See, e.g., Tampa Elec. Co. v. Nashville Coal Co., 365 U.S. 320, 81 S. Ct. 623, 631-32, 5 L. Ed. 2d 580 \(1961\) (weighing a range of factors to determine [56] foreclosure in a competitive coal market under the Clayton Act).¹⁸

¹⁷ Plaintiff also cites several SMS internal memoranda as comprising the type of "subjective evidence" referred to by the McGahee court. Having reviewed the documents, the Court agrees that a fact finder could reasonably find them probative of predatory intent.

¹⁸ Like tying arrangements, exclusive dealing contracts are also prohibited by § 3 of the Clayton Act. Although the possibility of different treatment for similar activities exists depending on whether the court applies the Sherman Act or the Clayton Act,

Beginning in July, 1990, Defendant SMS signed exclusive service contracts with Lithotripters, Inc., the general partner in a group of individual partnerships that owns and operates approximately 25 Lithostars.¹⁹ The machines are covered by a separate, but identical, service agreement. See Tusa Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. 23, service agreements attached as deposition exhibits 1 & 2; see also Defendant's Exh. 79 & 80. The service contracts run for a three-year [57] term and include parts and labor for a price of $ 150,000 per year. Early termination requires 90 day notice and payment of a 25% liquidated damages charge. Agreement, P 9. Of the 80 Lithostars currently installed in the United States, the Lithotripters, Inc. agreements cover approximately 38% of the Lithostar service market.

[58] Servicetrends argues that the Lithotripters, Inc. service agreements constitute illegal vertical restraints of trade. Defendant SMS responds that exclusive contracts for a three-year period cannot be anticompetitive, that foreclosing only 32%-38% of the relevant market is not "substantial" as a matter of law, and that Lithotripters, Inc. had legitimate business reasons for choosing SMS as its service provider.

The Tampa Electric Court suggested that the length of an exclusive dealing contract is relevant to judging the substantiality of the alleged foreclosure. See Tampa Electric, 81 S. Ct. at 632. After considering various additional factors, the Court held that a 20 year requirements contract between a public utility and a coal company that preempted less than 1% of the relevant market did not violate antitrust laws; see also Ferguson v. Greater Pocatello Chamber of Commerce, 848 F.2d 976, 982 \(9th Cir. 1988\) (competitive bidding process for an exclusive six-year lease was not an illegal restraint on competition). As Tampa Electric and subsequent cases make clear, however, the term [59] of the exclusive contract is only one factor to consider in determining the substantiality of market foreclosure.

Defendant asserts that foreclosing only 32% [or 38%] of the market for Lithostar service does not constitute a substantial foreclosure as a matter of law. See, e.g., Barry Wright Corp. v. ITT Grinnell Corp., 724 F.2d 227, 237 \(1st Cir. 1983\) (indicating that the "limited anticompetitive effects" of a contract foreclosing up to 50% of the relevant market rendered it nonexclusionary); see also Gonzalez v. Insignares, No. C84-1261A (N.D. Ga. June 27, 1985) (Tidwell, J.) (exclusive contract foreclosing at least 40% of relevant hospital market was not an unreasonable restraint). Although some minimum level of foreclosure is certainly insufficient as a matter of law, this Court is not prepared to decide that the competitive impact of foreclosing 32%-38% of a uniquely structured market consisting of 80 service sites and only two competitors is so insubstantial as to be per se legal. See *Tampa Elec., 10661 81 S. Ct. at 629 (factors to weigh in determining substantiality).

Defendant also argues [60] that the exclusive agreements with Lithotripters, Inc. were not the product of anticompetitive intentions, but resulted from a pre-existing business practice that benefited both parties. The record shows that SMS executed a total of twelve multi-year service agreements with equipment owners before Servicetrends was incorporated, including six three-year agreements with Lithotripters, Inc. See Defendant's Exh. 79. SMS also signed six multi-year contracts with other owners, three of whom are now customers of Servicetrends. See Defendant's Exh. 80.

The record contains uncontested evidence of the business justifications for Lithotripters, Inc.'s decision to sign Defendant's exclusive service contracts. Specifically, Lithotripters, Inc. concluded that Servicetrends could not

Clayton Act cases are particularly instructive in analyzing exclusive dealing claims brought under the Sherman Act. Nevertheless, there are critical distinctions between the two Acts involving sales of services and plaintiff's burden of proof.

¹⁹ The evidence conflicts as to whether Lithotripters, Inc. currently has twenty-four, twenty-six, twenty-eight, twenty-nine, or thirty service agreements with SMS. See Jordon Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. 4, p. 22, (Lithotripters, Inc. owns 29 or 30 Lithostars); McCumber Depo., Defendant's Exh. 45, p. 203 (Lithotripters, Inc. owns 26 Lithostars); Plaintiff's Supplemental Brief (at least 28 machines are under long-term service contracts with SMS); Defendant's Supplemental Brief, Murphy Depo. (Lithotripters, Inc. owns 25 Lithostars, 24 are subject to an SMS service agreement, plus two additional machines owned by a third party with whom Jordon is affiliated). Twenty-six service agreements would equal 32% of the relevant market of 80 Lithostars, while thirty agreements is equivalent to 38%. The Court resolves this factual discrepancy in favor of Plaintiff and assumes that Defendant's exclusive agreements foreclose approximately 38% of the market for Lithostar service.

match "the commitment in resources that [SMS] has" and "the number of people, the distribution network" that SMS offered. McCumber Depo., Defendant's Exh. 45, pp. 298-99. Lithotripters, Inc.'s president testified "it was great for us," and "I couldn't conceive then, nor can I conceive now, that there could be any organization that could offer trained personnel, as many as we needed and trained as well as Siemens [61] trains them and the availability that we needed." Jordon Depo., Defendant's Exh. 25, pp. 93, 101. Lithotripters, Inc.'s president explained his service concerns regarding the Lithostar in particular:

We're talking about high tech equipment . . . somebody who didn't know what they were doing could cause an unbelievable mess. If we were talking about MRI's or CT scans, diagnostic equipment to be used on people on a purely elective basis, then I might be interested in finding -- going bargain basement shopping for technicians.

We're talking about therapeutic medical equipment to be used on an emergency basis or urgent basis on people in pain. We can't have a machine down for a week waiting for some guy to come and see it, because we've got people who really need to have it done.

I would never be interested, very frankly, as long as I'm happy with what I'm getting, to change.

Id. at 103. The quality of Servicetrends' repair service is not an issue in this case, but Jordon's remarks are the kind of subjective evidence that shows how an exclusive dealing contract might legitimately serve a buyer's perceived needs without implicating a desire to suppress competition.

Taking into [62] account the extent of the foreclosure and the fact that the practice of executing multi-year service agreements pre-dated the incorporation of Servicetrends, and weighing heavily the buyer's business justifications for signing the service agreements, the Court finds that Defendant's exclusive contracts do not substantially foreclose commerce in the Lithostar service market. Defendant's motion for summary judgment on Count 14 is GRANTED.

2. Concerted Refusal to Deal

Count 15 also pertains to the service contracts between Lithotripters, Inc. and Defendant SMS. Plaintiff charges: "The agreements entered into by SMS and third parties not to use Servicetrends for the repair and servicing of Siemens Lithostars constitutes a concerted refusal to deal and an unreasonable restraint of trade in violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1."

The parties barely argue this claim, essentially relying on the facts and law applicable to Count 14 above. Defendant points out that because no horizontal relationship is involved between SMS and Lithotripters, Inc., Count 15 is likewise properly determined under a rule of reason analysis. The Court [63] notes also that it finds no factual basis to support Plaintiff's argument that the multi-year service contracts, which unambiguously provide a three-year term, were actually "lifetime" agreements.

In accordance with the reasons discussed under Count 14, and in the absence of proof that Lithotripters, Inc.'s independent exercise of business judgment was tainted by Defendant's alleged anticompetitive conduct, Defendant's motion for summary judgment on Count 15 is GRANTED.

[*1067] E. DISPARAGEMENT and TORTIOUS INTERFERENCE

Counts 16, 17 and 18 concern Servicetrends' claims that Defendant falsely stated to potential customers that Plaintiff's replacement parts are inferior:

Count 16: Violation of the Lanham Act based on false and misleading statements in commercial promotion.

Count 17: Violation of the Georgia Unfair Trade Practices Act.

Count 18: Tortious interference with customer business and contracts.

1. The Legal Effect of Disparagement

Section 43(a) of the Lanham Act HN20[↑] prohibits deceitful marketing practices, including disparaging comments that misrepresent the quality of a competitor's goods.²⁰ To prove a Lanham Act charge, plaintiff must show that defendant's misrepresentations [\[64\]](#) "were material in effect on buying decisions" and "were actually or likely injurious to plaintiffs." Energy Four, Inc. v. Dornier Medical Sys., Inc., 765 F. Supp. 724, 730 \(N.D. Ga. 1991\) (Forrester, J.); see also U.S. Healthcare Inc. v. Blue Cross, 898 F.2d 914, 922-23 \(3d Cir. 1990\). HN21[↑] Similarly, the Georgia Uniform Deceptive Trade Practices Act provides relief for "[a] person likely to be damaged by a deceptive trade practice," but "proof of monetary damage, loss of profits, or intent to deceive is not required." O.C.G.A. § 10-1-373. Finally, to the extent Plaintiff's tortious interference claim is based on disparagement, Servicetrends must show that SMS "induced a third party or parties not to enter into or continue a business relationship . . . for which the plaintiff suffered some financial injury." Hayes v. Irwin, 541 F. Supp. 397, 429 \(N.D. Ga. 1982\) (Vining, J.); see also Stamps v. Ford Motor Co., 650 F. Supp. 390, 402 \(N.D. Ga. 1986\) (Shoob, J.) (plaintiff must prove "resulting damage to the contractual relationship").

[\[65\]](#) Servicetrends alleges that SMS representatives stated to three potential customers that Servicetrends' replacement parts are not FDA-approved, when in fact no FDA approval is required. See Plaintiff's Answer to Interrogatory 15, Defendant's Exh. 38, p. 16. Plaintiff presents undisputed factual evidence supporting this assertion, as well as statements showing that Defendant's employees said Servicetrends' parts were different than SMS parts and were "refurbished." See McCumber Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. 17, p. 180-81, 238; Coffey Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. 32, p. 81.

Without admitting to having made any misrepresentations of fact, Defendant argues that Plaintiff "cannot prove that any of the alleged misrepresentations materially affected the buying decisions of any of the three potential customers or induced any of them not to enter into a contract with Servicetrends." Defendant's Memorandum in Support [#146], p. 2. According to Defendant, to prevail on its disparagement claims, Servicetrends must prove injury, defined by Defendant as a showing that "some prospective customer declined to do business with Servicetrends based on the alleged disparagement." Id. at p. 4.

HN23[↑] While proof [\[66\]](#) of monetary damages may not be necessary to sustain every cause of action based on Plaintiff's disparagement claim, a showing that some customer's buying decision was adversely affected is a threshold requirement for each. Even the permissive language of the Lanham Act requires plaintiff to "offer something more than a mere subjective belief that he is likely to be injured . . . he must submit proof which provides a reasonable basis for that belief. The likelihood of injury and causation will not be presumed, but must be demonstrated in some manner." Coca-Cola Co. v. Tropicana Prod., Inc., 690 F.2d 312, 316 \(2d Cir. 1982\); [\[*1068\]](#) see also Johnson & Johnson v. Carter-Wallace, Inc., 631 F.2d 186, 189 \(2d Cir. 1980\) ("despite the use of the word 'believes,' something more than a plaintiff's mere subjective belief that he is injured or likely to be damaged is required before he will be entitled even to injunctive relief"). Also, federal district courts in this circuit generally hold that Georgia deceptive trade practices and unfair competition counts involve the same dispositive questions as the Lanham Act. See, e.g., Jellibeans, Inc. v. Skating Clubs of Georgia, Inc., 716 F.2d 833, 839 \(11th Cir. 1983\); [\[67\]](#) Energy Four, Inc. v. Dornier Medical Sys., Inc., 765 F. Supp. 724, 731 \(N.D. Ga. 1991\).

²⁰ HN22[↑] The Lanham Act provides:

Any person who, on or in connection with any goods or services . . . uses in commerce any . . . false or misleading description of fact, or false or misleading representation of fact, which --

(A) is likely to cause confusion . . . or to deceive as to the . . . approval of his or her goods . . . by another person, or
 (B) in commercial advertising or promotion, misrepresents the . . . qualities . . . of his or her or another person's goods
 . . .

shall be liable in a civil action by any person who believes that he or she is or is likely to be damaged by such act.

To disprove an adverse impact on customer buying decisions, Defendant points to the fact that two of the three potential customers Plaintiff identified later entered into service agreements with Servicetrends when their contracts with SMS expired. See Coffey Depo., Defendant's Exh. 29, p. 76 (Urology Center signed Servicetrends agreement in January, 1993); Onglao Affidavit, Defendant's Exh. 5, P 3 (Sun Medical chose Servicetrends as new service provider for two Lithostars). In addition, the record shows that the third customer, Lithotripters, Inc., chose SMS for business reasons entirely unrelated to any product misrepresentations. See Jordan Depo., Defendant's Exh. 4, pp. 101, 103, 130; McCumber Depo., Defendant's Exh. 45, pp. 298-99.

Plaintiff offers no evidence tending to prove that Plaintiff's alleged misrepresentations actually influenced any customer's buying decision. The fact that two of the three parties later selected Servicetrends despite the disparaging remarks tends to show the opposite. The Court has previously considered Lithotripters, Inc.'s [68] business justifications for signing service contracts with SMS, and found them persuasive. Accordingly, the Court GRANTS Defendant's motion for summary judgment as to Counts 16 and 17, and also on Count 18 insofar as it relies on disparagement to prove tortious interference.

2. Tortious Interference

In Count 18, Plaintiff charges that "SMS has tortiously, willfully and maliciously interfered with Servicetrends' relationships, business and contracts with customers and potential customers, proximately causing damage to Servicetrends." Complaint, P 162. Georgia law provides a cause of action for interference with contractual rights, as well as for interference with business relations.

HN24 [↑] Under Georgia law, "interference with contractual rights, such as inducing one to breach his contract with another, is an actionable tort." Sheppard's v. Post, 142 Ga. App. 646, 647, 236 S.E.2d 680 \(1977\). Tortious interference with contractual relations requires plaintiff to prove three elements: "(1) the existence of a contractual relationship; (2) interference from the defendant; and (3) resulting damage to the contractual relationship." Stamps v. Ford Motor Co., 650 F. Supp. 390, 402 \(N.D. Ga. 1986\) [69] (Shoob, J.). In this case, Servicetrends does not even contend that a contract existed between Plaintiff and the three customers to whom the alleged misrepresentations were made. Thus, there is no legal or factual basis for Plaintiff's tortious interference with contractual relations charge.

HN25 [↑] To establish a claim for tortious interference with business relations, a plaintiff must prove that the defendant: "(1) acted improperly and without privilege; (2) purposefully, with malice, and with intent to injure, (3) induced a third party or parties not to enter into or continue a business relationship with the plaintiff, and (4) plaintiff suffered some financial injury as a result." Southern Business Communications, Inc. v. Matsushita Elec. Corp., 806 F. Supp. 950, 962 \(N.D. Ga. 1992\) (Carnes, J.) (citing DeLong Equip. v. Washington Mills Abrasive Co., 887 F.2d 1499, 1518 \(11th Cir. 1989\)).

As noted above, Servicetrends has produced no evidence that it lost business or suffered cognizable financial injury as a result of Defendant's alleged misrepresentations. Therefore, under Georgia law, Plaintiff cannot recover for tortious [70] interference with business relations. See Jenkins v. General Hosp. of Humana, 196 Ga. App. 150, 151, 395 S.E.2d 396 \(1990\) (affirming summary judgment because "plaintiff is unable to name a single patient he has lost or failed to acquire due to the actions of defendants, nor is plaintiff able to show any financial loss [*1069]"). Defendant's motion for summary judgment on Count 18 based on conduct other than disparagement is GRANTED.

F. DAMAGES

Plaintiff seeks treble damages under section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15, with respect to every antitrust count. Defendant moves for summary judgment as to damages, based on the contention that "the anticipated self-serving testimony of Servicetrends' president, will not meet the requirement that the amount of damages be proven by 'substantial evidence' consisting of more than 'speculation and guesswork.'" Defendant's Memorandum in Support [#145], p. 4 (citation omitted).

Plaintiff argues that "the current record contains more than enough evidence to provide a reasonable foundation from which a jury could calculate Servicetrends' damages." Plaintiff's Memorandum [71] in Opposition [#155], p. 99. Servicetrends supports its contention with references to the testimony of its damages expert and its president, and by comparing its experience in the Lithostar service market to the development of the service market for the Dornier HM-3. Also, Plaintiff cites testimony relating to the experiences of other "independent service organizations" competing in the medical equipment markets for x-ray service and for CT Scan service. See id. at pp. 102-03.

HN26Plaintiff's burden of proof concerning the amount of antitrust damages is "much less severe" than the burden of proving the antitrust violation and its causal relation to plaintiff's injury. [Graphic Prod. Distrib., Inc. v. Itek Corp., 717 F.2d 1560, 1579 \(11th Cir. 1983\). "While a jury may not base its judgment on speculation or guess-work . . . all that can be required is a just and reasonable -- albeit necessarily imprecise -- estimate based upon relevant data." Id. As the Supreme Court noted:

HN27[In the absence of more precise proof, the factfinder may "conclude as a matter of just and reasonable inference from the proof of defendants' wrongful acts and their tendency [72] to injure plaintiffs' business, and from the evidence of the decline in prices, profits and values, not shown to be attributable to other causes, that defendants' wrongful acts had caused damage to the plaintiffs."

Zenith Radio Corp. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 395 U.S. 100, 89 S. Ct. 1562, 1576-77, 23 L. Ed. 2d 129 \(1969\) (quoting Bigelow v. RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., 327 U.S. 251, 66 S. Ct. 574, 579, 90 L. Ed. 652 \(1946\)) (emphasis added).

At this stage of the proceedings, the Court is satisfied that Plaintiff has made the minimal evidentiary showing necessary to avoid summary judgment on the issue of damages. Questions pertaining to the precise amount can await the jury's informed determination. Defendant's motion for summary judgment with respect to damages is therefore DENIED.

IV. PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR JUDGMENT ON COUNTERCLAIMS

Defendant filed counterclaims asserting various business torts in a consolidated declaratory judgment action between Plaintiffs Servicetrends and Steven DeBrock and Defendant SMS, 92-CV-1915-JTC. In this antitrust action, [73] 93-CV-299-JTC, SMS filed counterclaims alleging several antitrust violations, along with a Lanham Act and unfair trade practices claim. Plaintiffs now move the Court for summary judgment on each of Defendant's counterclaims.

A. SUPPLEMENTAL FACTS AND ANALYSIS

On March 31, 1993, T<2> Medical, Inc. ("T<2>") acquired a 100% ownership interest in Servicetrends. T<2> is a publicly held company with diversified interests in alternate site health care treatment services. According to the company's annual report for fiscal year 1993, T<2> owned majority interests in 12 lithotripsy partnerships and a minority interest in one other. These lithotripsy ventures operate a total of 25 lithotripsy machines. See Defendant's Exh. 1 [#148].

1. Geographic Market

SMS wants to redefine the geographic boundaries of the relevant product [*1070] markets to suit its counterclaims. Despite the fact that Defendant's expert testified that the relevant geographic market is the United States, see Shapiro Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. A, p. 64, Defendant now suggests that Servicetrends committed antitrust violations in various local markets, specifically "the State of Georgia and the Chattanooga, Tennessee [74] metropolitan area," as well as "Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota." ²¹ Plaintiff appropriately notes that ²¹ Although evidence at trial may force a different conclusion, Mr. Shapiro persuasively explained the relevant geographic market in this case:

Defendant's strategy may backfire, since SMS -- the market's only other competitor -- must have monopoly power in the balance of the country.

[75] The Court rejects Defendant's attempt to redefine the geographic market. Having emphasized its national presence to justify Lithotripters, Inc.'s willingness to sign multi-year service contracts, having urged the Court that Servicetrends is a demonstrably successful and viable competitor in the national markets for Lithostar parts and service, and having offered no evidence to contradict its own expert's testimony, the Court finds Defendant's current attempt to narrow the size of the relevant geographic market wholly without merit.

2. Product Market

The Court analyzed Defendant's motion for summary judgment on the basis of three uncontested product markets: (1) the market for second generation lithotripters; (2) the market for Lithostar parts; and (3) the market for Lithostar service contracts. On the basis of Defendant's contention -- supported by Plaintiff's expert's testimony -- that there is no product market for all lithotripters, the Court granted Defendant summary judgment with respect to Plaintiff's antitrust claims pertaining to a product market consisting of all lithotripters.

Nevertheless, SMS does not necessarily agree that the relevant product market consists [76] of the three sub-markets designated by Servicetrends. Defendant explains:

Servicetrends contends that there exist antitrust markets properly defined as the markets for servicing Lithostars or lithotripters. Siemens Medical denies that such markets exist. It contends that there is a market for lithotripsy systems, which includes sale of equipment and replacement parts and service. Siemens Medical has no power in such a market.

Defendant's Memorandum in Opposition, p. 12 n.9.

Because the assertion that a single product market exists for all lithotripters would be inconsistent with Defendant's previous position, as well as unsupported by any factual evidence, the Court assumes Defendant means to argue that all three products are part of one "systems market" restricted to parts and service for second generation machines.

3. Market Power

Defendant's obvious problem in defining any product market intended to show Plaintiff's monopoly power is that SMS is a well established and much larger company. Consequently, SMS would strain credibility by claiming that the smaller Servicetrends has monopoly power in a national market while SMS has none. Only by introducing a geographic [77] restriction formulated to encompass those areas where Servicetrends' customers are concentrated can SMS hope to prove Plaintiff's market power. For example, although SMS services approximately 85% of the installed Lithostars in the United States, Defendant argues that T<2> owns, and [*1071] Servicetrends services, all but two (86%) of the Lithostars operating in the Georgia-Chattanooga area. On a national basis, however, Servicetrends has no more than 16% of the Lithostar service market, a market share legally insufficient to constitute either monopoly power or the dangerous probability of achieving it. See, e.g., U.S. Anchor Mfg., Inc. v. Rule Indus., Inc., 7 F.3d 986, 994 \(11th Cir. 1993\).

4. Antitrust Injury

I believe Siemens competes in a US market for lithotripsy systems. . . . In this case, its really supply-side substitutability that drives the geographic definition of the market. Specifically, a manufacturer who is selling lithotriptors [sic] in one part of the country can quite easily make them available for sale or make a system available for sale in another part of the country.

Shapiro Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. A, p. 65. It follows that the geographic market for the associated parts and service is the same: "when I said a manufacturer who is selling in one part of the country can sell in another part of the country . . . they would have to make the parts and service available in that other part of the country." Id. at pp. 65-66.

This is the same geographic market identified by Servicetrends' expert, Roger Noll. See Plaintiff's Exh. B, p. 10.

Servicetrends contends that Defendant SMS has not established sufficient antitrust injury to recover damages or to obtain injunctive relief under sections 4 and 16 of the Clayton Act. See 15 U.S.C. §§ 15 and 26. The Court agrees.

In Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701, 97 S. Ct. 690 \(1977\), and in Cargill, Inc. v. Monfort of Colorado, Inc., 479 U.S. 104, 93 L. Ed. 2d 427, 107 S. Ct. 484 \(1986\), [\[78\]](#) the Supreme Court held that HN28[↑] private plaintiffs bringing claims under § 7 must show injuries caused by a decrease in competition. Examining the requirements of § 4, the Cargill Court noted:

In Brunswick . . . we held that HN29[↑] plaintiffs seeking treble damages under § 4 must show more than simply an "injury causally linked" to a particular merger; instead, "plaintiffs must prove antitrust injury, which is to say injury of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and that flows from that which makes the defendant's acts unlawful."

Cargill, 479 U.S. 104, 107 S. Ct. 484, 489, 93 L. Ed. 2d 427 \(1986\) (quoting Brunswick, 429 U.S. 477, 97 S. Ct. 690, 697, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701 \(1977\)). Although § 16, providing injunctive relief, differs from § 4 in some respects, under both sections "the plaintiff must still allege an injury of the type the antitrust laws were designed to prevent." Id. at 490.

The antitrust laws were designed to promote competition. Prior to Servicetrends' entry [\[79\]](#) into the service market, SMS was the only supplier of Lithostar parts and service. SMS now complains that it "has been injured by the loss to Servicetrends of ten service contracts which would have produced annual revenue of at least $ 1 million." Defendant's Memorandum in Opposition [#152], p. 22. Like the unwilling competitors in Brunswick, SMS wants to protest that Servicetrends has introduced an unwelcome element of competition, thereby depriving Defendant of the substantial profits normally enjoyed by the only vendor in the marketplace. The Court finds no evidence to indicate that this unsubstantiated $ 1 million loss of revenue resulted from Servicetrends' anticompetitive conduct, and not simply from increased competition.

B. DEFENDANT'S ANTITRUST COUNTERCLAIMS

With this introduction, Defendant's antitrust counterclaims can be easily addressed.

1. Section 7 of the Clayton Act

In Count 1, Defendant SMS alleges that T<2>'s purchase of lithotripsy operating companies and Servicetrends substantially lessens competition "in the market for ownership and operation of lithotripsy equipment in certain geographic areas." Counterclaim [#22], P 35. In addition, Count 1 alleges [\[80\]](#) that T<2>'s acquisition of Servicetrends may substantially lessen competition "in the alleged market for repair and service of lithotripters in certain geographic areas." Counterclaim [#22], P 36.

Section 7 of the Clayton Act prohibits corporate acquisitions of stock that have a reasonable probability of lessening competition within a market:

HN30[↑] No person engaged in commerce or in any activity affecting commerce shall acquire, directly or indirectly the whole or any part of the stock or other share capital . . . where in any line of commerce or in any activity affecting commerce in any section of the country, the effect of such acquisition may be substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly.

15 U.S.C. § 18. Perhaps because the statute is entitled "Acquisition by one corporation of stock of another," and explicitly refers to the purchase of "stock or other share capital," the parties do not argue the significance of T<2>'s acquisition of lithotripsy partnership interests.

[\[*1072\]](#) Plaintiff maintains that because T<2>, the acquiring corporation, is not a party to this action, Defendant cannot state a claim for relief under § 7. [\[81\]](#) Defendant responds that the Court has sufficient power over Servicetrends to fashion an appropriate remedy. Having determined that Defendant has shown neither antitrust injury nor a lessening of competition in a national product market, the Court need not address these points. Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment on Count 1 is GRANTED.

2. Conspiracy to Monopolize

Count 2 alleges that Servicetrends, T<2>, and Servicetrends' president Warlick conspired to monopolize the lithotripter service market in certain geographic markets. The parties appear to agree that the so-called Copperweld doctrine prevents recognizing a conspiracy between the three parties after T<2>'s acquisition of Servicetrends, see Copperweld Corp. v. Independence Tube Corp., 467 U.S. 752, 104 S. Ct. 2731, 2741-42, 81 L. Ed. 2d 628 (1984) (a parent and its wholly owned subsidiary cannot conspire), but Defendant claims that the conspiracy began prior to the acquisition. The alleged conspiracy, says SMS, violates Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act.

This circuit has defined the elements of a conspiracy to monopolize under both Section 1 and 2: [82]

HN31[] The elements of a conspiracy to monopolize under Section 2 are: (1) an agreement to restrain trade, (2) deliberately entered into with the specific intent of achieving a monopoly rather than a legitimate business purpose, (3) which could have had an anticompetitive effect, and (4) the commission of at least one overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy. . . . The elements of a conspiracy to restrain trade under Section 1 are (1) an agreement to enter a conspiracy (2) designed to achieve an unlawful objective. . . . The plaintiff must also prove (3) "actual unlawful effects [or] facts which radiate a potential for future harm" to competition.

U.S. Anchor Mfg., Inc. v. Rule Indus., Inc., 7 F.3d 986, 1001 (11th Cir. 1993). However, there is no requirement that a conspiracy have a dangerous probability of success. Id. Thus, conspiracy under Section 2 requires specific intent, an agreement, and at least one overt act. Section 1 does not demand intent evidence, but requires proof of an anticompetitive effect.

SMS characterizes pre-merger discussions between T<2> and Servicetrends as a conspiracy to gain control of the market for Lithostar service [83] in the state of Georgia. Aside from having rejected Defendant's geographic limitation, the Court has reviewed the cited testimony and finds only legitimate business concerns for increased efficiency, better capitalization, and cost savings motivating the merger. See Allegra Depo., pp. 10, 23-24, 70-71; Wheelock Depo., pp. 18, 97, 203, 207-08; DeBrook Depo., pp. 142, 171-73; Warlick Depo., pp. 122-24, 155, 159, 196-97. Defendant points to no evidence establishing a specific intent to create a monopoly or proof of an anticompetitive effect. "Federal antitrust law requires a plaintiff to introduce evidence that tends to exclude the possibility that the defendants acted . . . legitimately." U.S. Anchor, 7 F.3d at 1002. Therefore, Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment on Count 2 is GRANTED.

3. Monopolization and Attempt to Monopolize

Count 3 alleges that Plaintiffs "possess monopoly power in the market for ownership and operation of lithotripters in the State of Georgia and the Chattanooga metropolitan area, Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota" and that Plaintiffs "possess market power in the alleged market for repair and service in the [84] State of Georgia" and in Chattanooga. Counterclaim [#22], P 45. Count 4 alleges an attempt to monopolize certain geographic areas throughout the United States. Counterclaim, P 50.

First, there is no market for ownership and operation of lithotripters involved in this case -- T<2> is not a party and Servicetrends neither owns nor operates lithotripters. Second, the Court has determined that Servicetrends does not possess the requisite market power to monopolize or to render dangerously probable an attempt to monopolize any relevant product market in the geographic United States. Although Defendant correctly [*1073] states that the determination of the relevant product market is a question of fact, the record raises no genuine dispute of fact regarding the national bounds of the product markets at issue. Accordingly, Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment on Counts 3 and 4 is GRANTED.

C. DEFENDANT'S BUSINESS TORT COUNTERCLAIMS

1. Disparagement and Unfair Trade Practices

Counts 5 and 6 assert that Servicetrends violated the Lanham Act and the Georgia Unfair Trade Practices Act by making disparaging statements about the quality of Defendant's products. See Part III.E. (discussing [85] the two Acts). Defendant SMS alleges Warlick falsely told customers that SMS made unauthorized and illegal promises with respect to Lithostar service contracts. See Warlick Depo., Defendant's Exh. 17, pp. 94, 97-101; Warlick-Schmidt Conversation, Defendant's Exh. 29. The Court has reviewed these exhibits and finds no reasonable basis for Defendant's claim. Defendant also says Servicetrends falsely told customers that Servicetrends sells replacement parts purchased from the same sources as Siemens' parts. See DeBrock Letter to The Urology Center, dated January 15, 1993, Defendant's Exh. 30 ("In fact, every part we have ever utilized has been purchased directly from Siemens or from one of their vendors.").

Plaintiff replies that DeBrock's statement regarding Servicetrends' source of Lithostar component parts was true when made. Although the uncontested facts show that Servicetrends regularly purchases components from OEM's instead of buying the complete modular replacement parts from Siemens, an examination of DeBrock's testimony establishes that, at the time the suspect statement was made, DeBrock was buying parts from the same manufacturers that sold the parts to SMS. For [86] example, DeBrock purchased spark gaps from a Massachusetts company known as EE&G. EE&G's technical department confirmed to DeBrock that the spark gap ordered by Servicetrends was exactly the same part EE&G supplied to SMS. See DeBrock Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. F, pp. 366-67; see also pp. 393-94.

Defendant presents no evidence that DeBrock's statement to the Urology Center regarding the sources of Servicetrends' parts was false when made. Therefore, Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment on Counts 5 and 6 is GRANTED.

2. Misappropriation of Confidential Information

Count 8 alleges that Plaintiffs maliciously misappropriated trade secrets and confidential information in violation of common law and the Georgia Trade Secrets Act of 1990. Counterclaim, P 68. Count 10 charges "breach of duty of loyalty," based on the circumstances surrounding DeBrock's departure from SMS to join Servicetrends and his subsequent disclosure of purportedly confidential information. See Counterclaim, PP 76-79.

HN32[] The Georgia Trade Secrets Act of 1990, O.C.G.A. §§ 10-1-760-67, supersedes other civil remedies for misappropriation of a trade secret. § 10-1-767(a). The Act defines a "trade secret" [87] as information -- including technical or nontechnical data, financial plans, or customer lists -- that derives economic value from not being known or readily ascertainable to others, and that "is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy." § 10-1-761(4).²² The Georgia statute provides [1074] relief in the form of an injunction, damages, and award of attorneys' fees. §§ 10-1-762, 763, 764.

²² Georgia courts have long held that trade secrets are protectable only when they truly are secrets. The Georgia Supreme Court described the typical plaintiff's allegations in a trade secrets case in Vendo Co. v. Long:

The allegations in this connection are in substance: that the defendant became familiar with plaintiff's trade secrets, experimental data, and other confidential information concerning names of customers, equipment, prices of machines, price quotations to customers, new models of plaintiff's machines not yet on the market and their prices, method of doing business and procedures

The allegations in this case respecting trade secrets and confidential information seem to encompass practically every phase of the plaintiff's business But in none of these does there appear to be any element of secrecy or confidential information that is peculiar to the plaintiff's business and known only to it and its employees.

Vendo Co. v. Long, 213 Ga. 774, 776-77, 102 S.E.2d 173 \(1958\); see also Textile Rubber & Chem. Co. v. Shook, 243 Ga. 587, 589, 255 S.E.2d 705 \(1979\) (Georgia definition of a trade secret requires that it is "known only to its owner and those of his employees to whom it must be confided in order to apply it to the uses intended") (citation omitted).

[88] The facts show that DeBrock was employed by SMS in 1987 and became a Lithostar service engineer in Atlanta in October, 1990. DeBrock Depo., Defendant's Exh. 2, pp. 24-25, 56-58, 81-82. DeBrock was an at-will employee who never had an employment contract for a definite period of time. DeBrock Affidavit, Plaintiff's Exh. C. He left SMS' employment in July of 1992, and is now Servicetrends' Vice President of Technical Operations. DeBrock Affidavit, Plaintiff's Exh. C. While at SMS, DeBrock received extensive lithotripsy and Lithostar training. DeBrock Depo., pp. 24-25; 65-79.

Although Defendant describes an elaborate system for classifying and handling designated confidential information, SMS does not deny Plaintiff's well documented assertion that "all of the information that DeBrock and other field service engineers were provided, such as manuals or wiring diagrams, was also provided to SMS customers." See Transcript of Proceedings, Plaintiff's Exh. G, p. 10; DeBrock Depo., pp. 595-96.²³ In at least one instance, SMS provided a customer's employees comprehensive training in servicing a Lithostar. Rankin Depo., Defendant's Exh. 39, p. 58. In response to a request for a water [89] cleaning kit, Servicetrends itself received a schematic diagram of the water system and shockheads, complete with repair instructions, all marked "proprietary data" and "confidential." Transcript of Proceedings, Plaintiff's Exh. H, pp. 16-18.

The Court concludes from the evidence presented that Defendant's wide distribution of the allegedly confidential technical data removes any legal protection it might otherwise have had as trade secrets. Moreover, undisputed facts also prove that DeBrock returned all manuals, drawings, notes and client lists to SMS before his departure. DeBrock Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. F, pp. 185-86; Christensen Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. L, p. 149. DeBrock, [90] then, took from SMS only the technical information residing in his mind.

HN33 [↑] Trade secrets need not be in the form of written data to warrant protection, see Avnet, Inc. v. Wyle Labs., Inc., 263 Ga. 615, 619, 437 S.E.2d 302 (1993), but Georgia law generally does not prevent a departing employee from using the skills and information he acquired at work. "A person who leaves the employment of another has a right to take with him all the skill he has acquired, all the knowledge he has obtained, all the information that he has received, so long as nothing is taken that is the property of the employer." Vendo Co. v. Long, 213 Ga. 774, 778, 102 S.E.2d 173 (1958); see also Smith v. Mid-State Nurses, Inc., 261 Ga. 208, 209, 403 S.E.2d 789 (1991) (employer's customer list held in employee's memory was not protectable as a trade secret). Thus, DeBrock was under no obligation to keep the skills and customer knowledge he acquired at SMS confidential, first because SMS did not maintain the confidentiality of its technical data, and second because the law does not [91] prohibit the exploitation of an employee's accumulated knowledge. It follows that Servicetrends could not have induced DeBrock to breach a confidentiality obligation. The Court finds that Plaintiffs Servicetrends and DeBrock did not misappropriate confidential information and GRANTS Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment on Counts 8 and 10.

3. Tortious Interference

Count 7 alleges "tortious interference with employment relationships," claiming that Plaintiffs sought to maliciously injure Defendant's business by attracting away key employees. [*1075] Counterclaim [#122], PP 64, 65. Count 9 claims that Servicetrends intentionally interfered with SMS' ongoing business and contractual relationships with its customers. Counterclaim, P 73.

Count 7 rests on Defendant's contention that Servicetrends is illegally hiring Defendant's key employees. Under the broader category of interference with business or contractual relations, Georgia courts have held that interference with an employment relationship can be tortious, even if employment is at-will. See, e.g., Ott v. Gandy, 66 Ga. App. 684, 684, 19 S.E.2d 180 (1942). HN34 [↑] However, a competing employer [92] is not liable for hiring away an at-will employee so long as it does not use "wrongful means" and the recruiting company's purpose is to advance competition. See E.D. Lacey Mills, Inc. v. Keith, 183 Ga. App. 357, 363, 359 S.E.2d 148 (1987). Georgia law also permits an individual to freely compete with his previous employer: "The law grants a former employee a privilege to compete with his former employer for customers and employees." Id. HN35 Thus, the law permits destruction of a competing business by attracting away its customers in the fair course of trade, but not "destruction or substantial injury by means of attracting away all or a large percentage of personnel upon whom it must depend to function, especially if other circumstances such as the use of confidential information . . . are involved." Id. at 364 (quoting Architectural Mfg. Co. v. Airotec, Inc., 119 Ga. App. 245, 251, 166 S.E.2d 744 (1969) (internal punctuation omitted)). In the absence of malicious conduct, Servicetrends and DeBrock are entitled as a matter of law "to engage in direct [93] competition, to hire others who formerly worked for the employer, even to persuade them that their company offers better economic opportunity, so long as they interfere with no contractual rights." Id. at 250-51.

²³ See also Haist Affidavit, Plaintiff's Exh. J, P 4 ("There is no information concerning the Lithostar which is kept secret from customers purchasing the equipment. A customer is given the same service manual with a purchased Lithostar that service technicians such as myself are supplied with."); Conner Affidavit, Plaintiff's Exh. K (same).

Defendant SMS -- itself a wholly-owned subsidiary of a German parent -- is a large company, with annual sales of $ 1.8 billion, seven subsidiary corporations, and 26 district offices. MacKinnon Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. V, pp. 18-19, 41, 105. Each district office is staffed with field service engineers. Id. at 105. SMS' Atlanta district office has five service supervisors and approximately 28 field service engineers working on a variety of Siemens equipment. Christensen Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. L, pp. 10-17. Conversely, Servicetrends is a small company, with service and parts revenue just over $ 2 million and a total staff of 21 persons. Bennett Depo., Defendant's Exh. 9 [Motion for Summary Judgment], p. 86; DeBrock Affidavit, Plaintiff's Exh. C.

Four Servicetrends employees, including DeBrock, are former SMS employees. Servicetrends hired Daniel Jordon, previously a SMS field service engineer located in Utah. Jordon, now based [94] in Sacramento, California, works exclusively on servicing Dornier HM-3 machines for Servicetrends. Jordon Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. I, pp. 59-66, 81. Rob Austin left his position as an SMS field service engineer in Atlanta and now works in Milwaukee servicing Lithostars for Servicetrends. Austin Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. N, pp. 10-11, 34. The final transplanted employee, Alfredo DeLeon, was laid off by SMS in September, 1992, six months before Servicetrends hired him. DeBrock Depo., Plaintiff's Exh. F, pp. 223-24.

On the basis of the record before it, the Court concludes with confidence that SMS does not face the "destruction or substantial injury" addressed by Georgia law and experienced by Lacey Rug Mills, for example, when defendants hired away 17 of Lacey's 21 sales representatives. Although SMS may resent the departures of its three engineers, and may even feel the pinch of competition in a small measure relative to its size, it presents no evidence that Servicetrends engaged its "key" employees for any purpose other than fair competition. It does not seem unusual, or illegal so far as this Court can determine, that the employer of a corps of maintenance engineers operating alone [95] in an obviously lucrative service market would be the target of recruiting efforts by invading competitors. Plaintiff's motion on Count 7 is GRANTED.

Count 9 maintains that Plaintiffs have interfered with SMS' customer relationships. As the discussion above indicates, an employee's knowledge of the firm's customers [*1076] is not a trade secret. See Textile Rubber & Chem. Co. v. Shook, 243 Ga. 587, 592, 255 S.E.2d 705 (1979). Here, DeBrock and Servicetrends are entitled to competitively exploit their knowledge of Lithostar customers gained as a result of employment with SMS. See, e.g., DeLong Equip. Co. v. Washington Mills Abrasive Co., 887 F.2d 1499, 1519 (1989) (customer lists are not protectable from post-employment disclosure and use) (citing Georgia cases). In fact, the law provides a privilege to foster such competition. See E.D. Lacey Mills, Inc. v. Keith, 183 Ga. App. 357, 362-63, 359 S.E.2d 148 (1987) (noting also that an employee breaches no fiduciary duty to an employer simply by making plans to enter a competing business while he is still employed).

The [96] elements of tortious interference with contractual rights and with business relations are set out in Part III.E.2. above. In this instance, the Court finds no evidence that Plaintiffs acted improperly or without privilege to interfere with SMS' contractual or business relationships with customers. SMS does not even claim that a customer breached its service contract as a result of Servicetrends' successful sales efforts. The Court therefore finds no merit to Defendant's Count 9 and GRANTS Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment.

4. Unjust Enrichment

Count 11 charges unjust enrichment, as a result of the unlawful conduct described in Counts 1-10. Counterclaim, P 82.

All counterclaims having been dismissed on summary judgment, Defendant's claim of unjust enrichment is without foundation. Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment is GRANTED.

V. PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO ADD DEFENDANTS

In May of 1993, Plaintiff moved the Court to amend its Complaint to add as new Defendants Siemens AG, Lithotripters, Inc., and William Jordan, the Chief Executive Officer of Lithotripters, Inc. [#50]. Following a hearing to resolve numerous outstanding discovery disputes in October, 1993, the [97] Court deferred action on Plaintiff's motion to add defendants.

In essence, Plaintiff maintains that Siemens AG controls the pricing and availability of the Lithostar and its replacement parts, and that Lithotripters, Inc. and Jordan are engaged in a conspiracy with Defendant to "boycott" Servicetrends. Plaintiff argues that Rule 20, or alternatively Rule 19(a), operate so as to require joinder of these three absent parties.

Having reviewed the record in exhausting detail, the Court is convinced that joining these additional parties is not necessary to obtain Plaintiff's complete relief. Moreover, adding defendants would further complicate trial preparation and result in needless expense and delay. The parties have completed extensive discovery and have produced sufficient information to convince the Court that Plaintiff is capable of pursuing its remaining claims without adding defendants. Therefore, Plaintiff's motion is DENIED.

VI. SUMMARY

The Court has decided the following matters:

Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment:

Monopolization and Attempt,
Counts 6, 9, 10, 12, 13	GRANTE D
Counts 5 and 8, [as to predatory pricing]	DENIED
Tying Claims, Counts 1, 2, 3, 4	GRANTE D
Predatory Pricing Claims,
Counts 7 and 11	DENIED
Exclusive Dealing, Count 14	GRANTE D
Concerted Refusal to Deal, Count 15	GRANTE D
Disparagement, Counts 16 and 17	GRANTE D
Tortious Interference, Count 18	GRANTE D
Damages	DENIED

Plaintiff's Motion for Summary Judgment:

Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment:

Clayton Act § 7, Count 1	GRANTE D
Conspiracy to Monopolize, Count 2	GRANTE D
Monopolization and Attempt, Counts 3 and 4	GRANTE D
Disparagement and Unfair Trade Practices, Counts 5 and 6	GRANTE D
Misappropriation of Confidential Info., Counts 8 and 10	GRANTE D
Tortious Interference, Counts 7 and 9	GRANTE D
Unjust Enrichment, Count 11	GRANTE D
Plaintiff's Motion to Add Parties	DENIED

[98] SO ORDERED, this 21 day of March, 1994.

JACK T. CAMP

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

End of Document

Carlson & Erickson Builders v. Lampert Yards

Court of Appeals of Wisconsin

November 23, 1993, Submitted on briefs ; March 22, 1994, Decided ; March 22, 1994, Filed
No. 93-0195

Reporter

183 Wis. 2d 220 *; 515 N.W.2d 305 ; 1994 Wisc. App. LEXIS 457 ; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,569

Carlson & Erickson Builders, Inc., Plaintiff-Respondent-Cross-Appellant, v. Lampert Yards, Inc., Portside Properties, Inc., and Door County Material Specialists, Inc., Defendants-Appellants-Cross-Respondents

Subsequent History: [1] Petition to review granted.

Prior History: Appeal and Cross-Appeal from an order of the circuit court for Door County: John D. Koehn, Judge.

Disposition: By the Court. -- Order affirmed in part; reversed in part and cause remanded with directions. No costs on appeal.

Core Terms

burden of proof, discount, trial court, damages, secret, purchasers, unearned, convincing, buyer, terms and conditions, new trial, unfair

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > General Overview

HN1[] Regulated Practices, Trade Practices & Unfair Competition

Wis. Stat. § 133.05 provides in part: (1) The secret payment or allowance of rebates, refunds, commissions or unearned discounts, whether in the form of money or otherwise, or the secret extension to certain purchasers of special services or privileges not extended to all purchasers purchasing upon like terms and conditions, such payment, allowance or extension injuring or tending to injure a competitor or destroying or tending to destroy competition, is an unfair trade practice and is prohibited. (2) No person may induce, solicit or receive anything of value that is prohibited under subdivision (1). (3) Any person knowingly violating §133.05 may be fined not more than $ 25,000 or imprisoned in the county jail for not more than one year or both.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN2[] Public Enforcement, State Civil Actions

183 Wis. 2d 220, *220L⁵15 N.W.2d 305, 305L⁴994 Wisc. App. LEXIS 457, 1

Wis. Stat. § 133.04 provides in part: (1) No person may discriminate, either directly or indirectly, in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality, for the purpose or intent of injuring or destroying competition in any level of competition or any person engaged therein. (2) Any person violating § 133.04 may be fined not more than $ 25,000 or imprisoned in the county jail for not more than one year or both.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > Statute of Limitations > General Overview

HN3 [down] Private Actions, Remedies

Wis. Stat. § 133.18(1)(a) provides that, except as provided under § 133.18(1)(b), any person injured, directly or indirectly, by reason of anything prohibited by Wis. Stat. ch. 133 may sue therefor and shall recover threefold the damages sustained by the person and the cost of the suit, including reasonable attorney fees. Any recovery of treble damages shall, after trebling, be reduced by any payments actually recovered under Wis. Stat. § 133.14 for the same injury.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > Clear & Convincing Proof

HN4 [down] Private Actions, Remedies

Civil damage claims alleging violations of Wis. Stat. §§ 133.04 and 133.05 require the "middle" standard of proof: clear, satisfactory and convincing evidence.

Contracts Law > Defenses > Ambiguities & Mistakes > Mutual Mistake

Evidence > Inferences & Presumptions > General Overview

HN5 [down] Ambiguities & Mistakes, Mutual Mistake

Wisconsin courts require the middle burden of proof where there may be a finding against a defendant who will be subjected to the stigma attached to the commission of certain classes of acts. This requirement extends to civil actions that involve fraud, undue influence, criminal acts, reformation, mutual mistakes, and others that public policy requires to be proved by evidence that is clear, satisfactory and convincing.

Evidence > Inferences & Presumptions > General Overview

HN6 [down] Evidence, Inferences & Presumptions

The federal courts do not require middle burden protection in civil actions regulating commerce, even where fraud is involved.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN7 Legislation, Interpretation

A statute is ambiguous when it is capable of being understood by a reasonably well-informed person in either of two or more senses. Even where a statute appears unambiguous on its face, it can be rendered ambiguous by its interaction and its relation to other statutes.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > General Overview

HN8 Regulated Practices, Trade Practices & Unfair Competition

Under Wis. Stat. § 133.05, a buyer must know that unearned discounts, special services or privileges are secret and not extended to all purchasers purchasing on like terms and conditions.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Public Enforcement > State Civil Actions

HN9 Public Enforcement, State Civil Actions

Wis. Stat. § 133.01 provides that the intent of Wis. Stat. ch. 133 is to safeguard the public against the creation or perpetuation of monopolies and to foster and encourage competition by prohibiting unfair and discriminatory business practices that destroy or hamper competition. It is the intent of the legislature that ch. 133 be interpreted in a manner that gives the most liberal construction to achieve the aim of competition. It is the intent of the legislature to make competition the fundamental economic policy of the state and, to that end, state regulatory agencies shall regard the public interest as requiring the preservation and promotion of the maximum level of competition in any regulated industry consistent with the other public interest goals established by the legislature.

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Procedural Due Process > Scope of Protection

Evidence > Burdens of Proof > Proof Beyond Reasonable Doubt

Governments > Legislation > Overbreadth

Constitutional Law > ... > Case or Controversy > Constitutionality of Legislation > General Overview

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Freedoms > Judicial & Legislative Restraints > Overbreadth & Vagueness of Legislation

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Procedural Due Process > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > Vagueness

HN10 Procedural Due Process, Scope of Protection

A statute is presumptively constitutional, and a party challenging the act has the burden of establishing unconstitutionality beyond a reasonable doubt. The void for vagueness concept rests upon the constitutional principle that procedural due process requires fair notice and proper standards for adjudication. If a statute is so obscure that persons of common intelligence must necessarily guess as to its meaning and differ as to its applicability, it is unconstitutional. Where a great and varied number of offenses may come within a statutory category, they defy a precise statutory definition. Impossible standards of specificity are not required.

Counsel: On behalf of plaintiff-respondent-cross-appellant Lampert Yards, Inc., the cause was submitted on the briefs of Tom Rusboldt of Nash, Spindler, Dean & Grimstad of Manitowoc. On behalf of plaintiffs-respondents-cross-appellants Portside Properties, Inc., and Door County Material Specialists, Inc., the cause was submitted on the briefs of William J. Ewald of Denissen, Kranzush, Mahoney & Ewald, S.C. of Green Bay.

On behalf of plaintiff-respondent-cross-appellant, the cause was submitted on the briefs of Robert L. Binder, William M. Conley and Lynn J. Splitek of Foley & Lardner of Madison.

Judges: Cane, P.J., LaRocque and Fine, JJ. Cane, P.J. concurring. Judge Ralph Adam Fine joins in this concurrence.

Opinion by: LaROCQUE

Opinion

[*224] [306] The defendants in an antitrust suit appeal an order partially denying their challenge to a jury verdict in favor of the plaintiff, Carlson & Erickson Builders, Inc. (C&E), a general building [2] contractor. The jury found that Lampert Yards, Inc., a lumber supplier, and Portside Properties, Inc.,¹ [3] a contractor in competition with C&E, violated the unfair trade practice provisions of § 133.05\(1\) and \(2\), Stats.² [*225] Specifically, the jury found that [307] the defendants engaged in the secret payment of unearned discounts, special services or privileges not extended to all purchasers upon like terms and conditions.³ [4] The jury also found that Lampert violated the provisions of § 133.04,⁴ by engaging in price discrimination between [*226] different purchasers with

¹ Door County Material Specialists, Inc., Portside's corporate purchaser was also a named defendant. For purposes of discussing the issues raised on appeal, we refer to Portside and DCMS collectively as Portside.

² HN1 [↑] Section 133.05, Stats., provides in part:

Secret rebates; unfair trade practices. (1) The secret payment or allowance of rebates, refunds, commissions or unearned discounts, whether in the form of money or otherwise, or the secret extension to certain purchasers of special services or privileges not extended to all purchasers purchasing upon like terms and conditions, such payment, allowance or extension injuring or tending to injure a competitor or destroying or tending to destroy competition, is an unfair trade practice and is prohibited.

(2) No person may induce, solicit or receive anything of value which is prohibited under sub. (1).

(3) Any person knowingly violating this section may be fined not more than $ 25,000 or imprisoned in the county jail for not more than one year or both.

³ The jury verdict inquired only into the acts of the seller, Lampert, and not the acts of the buyer, Portside. Section 133.05\(2\), Stats., sets forth the prohibited conduct of a buyer. The jury was not asked whether Portside induced, solicited or received anything of value which is prohibited under sub. (1) of § 133.05.

Despite this apparent discrepancy, Portside does not reply to C&E's argument on appeal:

Portside conceded that if the jury found that Lampert had extended an unearned discount or special privilege to Portside within the meaning of sec. 133.05\(1\), then Portside "induced, solicited or received" this benefit under sec. 133.05\(2\). That is why the jury was not even asked if Portside induced, solicited or received the unearned discount or secret privilege. Having failed to object to the jury instruction below -- indeed, having acquiesced in the instructions which failed to require a showing that receipt be "knowing" -- Portside has waived any claim to the contrary on appeal. See Segall v. Hurwitz, 114 Wis. 2d 471, 489, 339 N.W.2d 333, 342 (Ct. App. 1983) (noting that court will "normally . . . not review an issue raised for the first time on appeal").

⁴ HN2 [↑] Section 133.04, Stats., provides in part:

intent to injure or destroy competition. The jury found that Lampert and Portside did not enter into an agreement to restrain trade as prohibited by § 133.03. The jury awarded damages in the sum of $ 177,100. Before computing C&E's treble damages as provided in § 133.18\(1\)\(a\),⁵ the trial court entered a remittitur order, granting C&E the option of a reduced verdict of $ 67,907.65 (trebled) or a new trial on damages.

The defendants argue that the trial court erred by instructing the jury to apply the [5] ordinary burden rather than the middle burden of proof, and that the evidence was insufficient to sustain the verdict. Portside separately argues: (1) § 133.05\(2\), Stats., requires proof that it knowingly received benefits prohibited by § 133.05\(1\), Stats.; and (2) the statute is unconstitutionally vague. Lampert separately argues: (1) § 133.05 violates the constitutional equal protection and the commerce clause; (2) "meeting competition" and "cost justification" defenses were erroneously denied as to the claim under § 133.05; and the "functional discount" defense was erroneously denied as to the claim under § 133.04; and (3) the trial court erred by denying its motions for summary judgment, directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict.

[*227] We conclude that the defendants were entitled to the middle burden of proof. Further, although Portside initially waived the issue, see note 3, because the matter must be retried, C&E must prove that Portside knew that any unearned discounts, special services or privileges it received were secret and that they were not extended to all purchasers on like terms and conditions. We reject the defendants' remaining arguments. [6] Because we remand for a new trial, we also need not address C&E's cross-appeal challenging the remittitur order. We therefore [308] reverse and remand for a new trial on both liability and damages.⁶

BURDEN OF PROOF IN ANTITRUST CLAIMS

We are convinced that HN4[↑] civil damage claims alleging violations of § 133.04 and § 133.05, Stats., require the "middle" standard of proof: clear, satisfactory and convincing evidence. Over defense objection, the trial court applied the lower or "ordinary" burden.⁷

Price discrimination; intent to destroy competition. (1) No person may discriminate, either directly or indirectly, in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality, for the purpose or intent of injuring or destroying competition in any level of competition or any person engaged therein.

(2) Any person violating this section may be fined not more than $ 25,000 or imprisoned in the county jail for not more than one year or both.

⁵ HN3[↑] Section 133.18\(1\)\(a\), Stats., provides:

Treble damages; statute of limitations. (1) (a) Except as provided under par. (b), any person injured, directly or indirectly, by reason of anything prohibited by this chapter may sue therefor and shall recover threefold the damages sustained by the person and the cost of the suit, including reasonable attorney fees. Any recovery of treble damages shall, after trebling, be reduced by any payments actually recovered under s. 133.14 for the same injury.

⁶ We agree with Portside's uncontested contention that it can be retried only as to the allegation that it violated § 133.05, Stats. The jury exonerated Portside of making a contract with Lampert in restraint of trade under § 133.03. Absent any conspiracy by a buyer, the prohibition against price discrimination under § 133.04 applies on its face only to a seller.

⁷ Wis JI -- Civil 200 sets forth the "ordinary" burden of proof:

The burden of proof . . . is to satisfy you to a reasonable certainty, by the greater weight of the credible evidence

By the greater weight of the credible evidence is meant evidence which when weighed against evidence opposed to it has more convincing power. Credible evidence is evidence which in the light of reason and common sense is worthy of belief.

Wis JI -- Civil 205 sets forth the "middle" burden of proof: "The burden of proof . . . is . . . to convince you to a reasonable certainty by evidence that is clear, satisfactory, and convincing"

[7] C&E concedes an absence of controlling Wisconsin precedent, but notes that ch. 133, Stats., is drawn [*228] largely from federal antitrust law, and that state courts will "look to the federal courts for guidance" where "Wisconsin case law [is] scarce." Independent Milk Producers Co-op v. Stoffel, 102 Wis. 2d 1, 6-7, 298 N.W.2d 102, 104 (Ct. App. 1980).

Wisconsin case law on the burden in civil actions involving crime-like torts is not scarce. That law consistently demonstrates a special interest in protecting defendants so accused, or those who face enhanced civil liability damages. HN5 We require the middle burden where there may be "a finding against a defendant who will be subjected to the stigma attached to the commission of certain classes of acts." Wangen v. Ford Motor Co., 97 Wis. 2d 260, 300, 294 N.W.2d 437, 458 (1980) (requiring the middle burden in punitive damage claims) (quoting Layton School of Art & Design v. WERC, 82 Wis. 2d 324, 362-63, 262 N.W.2d 218, 236 (1978)). This requirement extends to "civil actions which involved fraud, [*229] undue influence, criminal acts, reformation, mutual mistakes, and others, which public policy requires to be proved by evidence which is clear, satisfactory and convincing." Madison v. Geier, 27 Wis. 2d 687, 692, 135 N.W.2d 761, 763 (1965).⁸

[*229] In respect to the preceding standards, ch. 133, Stats., provides for treble damages and, to that extent, it is penal and not remedial in nature. Open Pantry Food Marts v. Falcone, 92 Wis. 2d 807, 811, 286 N.W.2d 149, 151 (Ct. App. 1979). [*230] The choice of a given standard of proof "serves to allocate the risk of error between the litigants and to indicate the relative importance attached to the ultimate decision." Addington v. Texas, 441 U.S. 418, 423 (1979). Unfair trade practices are punishable as criminal conduct. Section 133.04 deals with an "intent of injuring or destroying competition." Section 133.05 proscribes "an unfair trade practice" of "secret payment[s] . . . tending to injure a competitor or . . . tending to destroy competition. . . ." They subject a civil violator to a stigma no less dishonorable than other tortious conduct that must be proven to an elevated degree of certainty. These defendants must therefore be held liable only upon a finding that their actions were proven by evidence that is clear, satisfactory and convincing. While this may be inconsistent with federal law,⁹ to hold otherwise would render the law of Wisconsin internally inconsistent.

[10] [309] ELEMENT OF KNOWLEDGE IN § 133.05, Stats.

Portside contends that failure to require a buyer knowingly induce, solicit or receive secret rebates, not extended to all purchasers purchasing upon like terms and conditions, permits the imposition of treble damages [*230] upon an innocent person. C&E responds that Portside abandoned this issue by failing to raise it in the trial court. It also asserts that C&E's contention is contrary to the plain language of the statute. While we agree that a waiver occurred, the same issue will no doubt arise on remand. We therefore address it.

HN7 A statute is ambiguous when it is capable of being understood by a reasonably well-informed person in either of two or more senses. Kearney & Trecker Corp. v. DOR, 91 Wis. 2d 746, 753-54, 284 N.W.2d 61, 65 (1979). Even where a statute appears unambiguous on its face, it can be rendered ambiguous by its interaction and its relation to other statutes. State v. White, 97 Wis. 2d 193, 198, 295 N.W.2d 346, 348 (1980). We conclude that § 133.05(2), Stats., is ambiguous. Subsection (3) of the statute [*231] states that any person "knowingly" violating its terms may be criminally prosecuted, while subsec. (2) contains no reference to knowledge or state of mind. Arguably this denotes, as C&E contends, that the legislature contemplated the requirement of knowledge only in criminal prosecutions.

⁸ Wisconsin's pattern jury instructions also suggest use of the middle burden in civil conspiracy claims, Wis JI -- Civil 2800; intentional interference with a contractual relationship, Wis JI -- Civil 2780; bad faith claims against insurance companies, Wis JI -- Civil 2761; and misrepresentation claims, Wis JI -- Civil 2401-2402. The supreme court has recognized the instruction committee's work as persuasive. State v. Gilbert, 115 Wis. 2d 371, 379, 340 N.W.2d 511, 515-16 (1983).

⁹ HN6 The federal courts do not require middle burden protection in civil actions regulating commerce, even where fraud is involved. Herman & MacLean v. Huddleston, 459 U.S. 375, 389 (1983) (claims of fraudulent misrepresentation under the federal Securities Exchange Act may be proven by a preponderance of the evidence).

The general legislative intent expressed in § 133.01, Stats., however, suggests otherwise. That intent is to prohibit unfair business practices.¹⁰ [12] A [*231] buyer who receives prohibited benefits, innocent of any knowledge that the seller is so acting, is not engaged in an unfair trade practice. Further, for much the same reason that the penal damages of § 133.18 require a greater than ordinary burden of proof, we conclude that HN8[] a buyer must know that unearned discounts, special services or privileges are secret and not extended to all purchasers purchasing on like terms and conditions. Finally, the nature of the practices prohibited by § 133.05, suggest that proof of the buyer's knowledge is no great barrier to a civil claim. Ordinarily, in the process of proving secret activities, the same evidence would circumstantially demonstrate the necessary knowledge.¹¹

SUFFICIENCY OF THE EVIDENCE

The defendants argue that the evidence was insufficient to support the verdict. Because we remand for a new trial, we will not address the evidence in detail. The trial court instructed the jury that the elements of [*232] price discrimination require that (1) the commodities involved in the sales being compared were of like grade and quality; (2) the prices charged were discriminatory, that is, different; (3) the price difference was for the [13] purpose or with the intent of injuring competition or a competitor; and (4) the discriminatory pricing caused the plaintiff injury. The court instructed that the elements of proof of a secret discount are: (1) the payment or allowance of unearned discounts, [*2310] special services or privileges; (2) made in secret; and (3) that these acts injure or tend to injure a competitor or to destroy competition.

The transcript of the nine-day jury trial reveals extensive evidence on each of the preceding elements. Further, based upon our examination of the record, the trial court properly denied defense motions for summary judgment, directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict.

DEFENSES AVAILABLE TO LAMPERT

The trial court instructed the jury on a "meeting the competition" defense and a "cost justification" defense relating to the § 133.05, Stats., claim, and a "functional discount" defense as to the § 133.04 claim. Lampert argues that each of these defenses is equally applicable to both statutes. C&E responds that even if this were true, any error would be harmless because the jury rejected the defenses in relation to the claims to which they were given. Because [14] Lampert's argument is unsupported by authority and otherwise inadequately briefed, we decline to review it. See In re Estate of Balkus v. Security First Nat'l Bank, 128 Wis. 2d 246, 255 n.5, 381 N.W.2d 593, 598 n.5 \(Ct. App. 1985\).

[*233] VOID FOR VAGUENESS AND OTHER CONSTITUTIONAL ARGUMENTS

¹⁰ HN9[] Section 133.01, Stats., provides:

Legislative intent. The intent of this chapter is to safeguard the public against the creation or perpetuation of monopolies and to foster and encourage competition by prohibiting unfair and discriminatory business practices which destroy or hamper competition. It is the intent of the legislature that this chapter be interpreted in a manner which gives the most liberal construction to achieve the aim of competition. It is the intent of the legislature to make competition the fundamental economic policy of this state and, to that end, state regulatory agencies shall regard the public interest as requiring the preservation and promotion of the maximum level of competition in any regulated industry consistent with the other public interest goals established by the legislature.

¹¹ C&E's evidence would tend to demonstrate that in this case. C&E refers to a public meeting between Lampert and its contractors where Lampert "falsely told contractors that all contractors received the same discount." C&E cites evidence that other contractor prices were left openly on display on a front counter except for Portside's, which were kept in Lampert's back offices, even though each was used on a daily basis. C&E refers to evidence that Lampert furnished Portside with lists reflecting Lampert's charges to other contractors on a competitively bid project, ostensibly to give Portside a competitive advantage.

Portside argues that § 133.05, Stats., is void because "unearned discounts" and "like terms and conditions" are not defined. HN10↑ A statute is presumptively constitutional, and a party challenging the act has the burden of establishing unconstitutionality beyond a reasonable doubt. Madison v. Hyland, Hall & Co., 73 Wis. 2d 364, 385, 243 N.W.2d 422, 433 \(1976\). The void for vagueness concept rests upon the constitutional principle that procedural due process requires fair notice and proper standards for adjudication. State ex rel. Hennekens v. River Falls Police & Fire Comm'n, 124 Wis. 2d 413, 420, 369 N.W.2d 670, 674 \(1985\). If the statute is so obscure that persons of common intelligence must necessarily guess as to its meaning and differ as to its [15] applicability, it is unconstitutional. State v. Zwicker, 41 Wis. 2d 497, 507, 164 N.W.2d 512, 517 \(1969\). Where a great and varied number of offenses may come within a statutory category, they defy a precise statutory definition. See id. Impossible standards of specificity are not required. Id. (citing Jordan v. De George, 341 U.S. 223, 231 \(1951\)). Moreover, the trial court gave the defendants' requested instruction as follows:

Defendants have raised the functional discount defense to the unearned discount claim. "Functional discounts" are given by a seller to a buyer based on the buyer's performance of marketing functions for the seller's product. In this case, Portside or DCMS claim that they received the discounts because they performed certain services, including design functions, drafting of blueprints, preparation of material takeoff lists, materials cost estimates, [*234] coordinating of deliveries of building materials to construction sites, and also that they assumed the risks of error in estimating the materials necessary for construction projects, which other contractors, [16] including the plaintiff, Carlson & Erickson, ordinarily relied on Lampert to perform.

The jury was informed that if the lower price granted to Portside was justified as a functional discount, then the jury must find for the defendants on the unearned discount claim. We conclude that Portside fails to demonstrate that the statute denies due process and is thereby void for vagueness.

Lampert raises constitutional challenges relating to the commerce clause and equal protection. Its arguments are unpersuasive, and we reject them. The remittitur order is reversed and the matter remanded for a new trial consistent with this opinion.

By the Court. -- Order affirmed in part; reversed in part and cause remanded with directions. No costs on appeal.

Concur by: CANE

Concur

CANE, P.J. (concurring).

I concur only for the purpose of urging that the courts reconsider having different burdens of proof in civil cases. As a former trial judge, I presided over hundreds of civil jury trials, and I seriously doubt that any juror can realistically tell the difference between the "ordinary" and "middle" burden of proof. Under the "ordinary" burden of proof, the jury is told: "The burden of proof . . . [311] [17] is to satisfy you to a reasonable certainty by the greater weight of the credible evidence . . ." Wis J I -- Civil 200. In comparison, under the "middle" burden of proof, the jury is told: "The burden of proof . . . is . . . to convince you to a [*235] reasonable certainty by evidence that is clear, satisfactory, and convincing . . ." Wis J I -- Civil 205. Arguably, one could contend the "ordinary" burden of proof is the higher standard.

As lawyers and judges, we somehow perceive a difference between the burden of proofs. Realistically, I say there is no difference. The important differences are the elements to be proven for liability, not the burden of proof. For those who face an enhanced civil liability or who will be subjected to a stigma if found liable, we require additional elements to be proven, such as knowledge, bad faith, conspiracy, intentional acts or misrepresentations. That should be sufficient to distinguish the various forms of civil liabilities. We should not continue to engage in this subtle difference, if any, in the burden of proofs. The courts realized this when abandoning the concept of ordinary versus gross negligence, and we should likewise [18] abandon the concept of ordinary versus middle burden of proof.

End of Document

THK Am., Inc. v. NSK, Ltd.

United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division

March 22, 1994, Decided ; March 23, 1994, DOCKETED

Case No. 90 C 6049

Reporter

157 F.R.D. 660 *; 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18174 ; 33 U.S.P.Q.2D (BNA) 1248 ***

THK AMERICA, INC., Plaintiff, v. NSK, LTD. and NSK CORPORATION, Defendants.

Subsequent History: [\[1\]](#) Reported at: 33 U.S.P.Q.2d (BNA) 1248 at 1260.

Costs and fees proceeding at, Application granted by, Objection overruled by THK Am., Inc. v. NSK Co., LTD, 157 F.R.D. 651, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21795 (N.D. Ill., 1994)

Prior History: THK Am. v. NSK Co., 151 F.R.D. 625, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19147 \(N.D. Ill., 1993\)

Core Terms

patent, counterclaims, discovery, antitrust, patent infringement, parties, linear, price-fixing, depositions, lawsuit, license, join, sham, translator, licensee, requests, alleges, motions, antitrust claim, motion to amend, pleadings

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > ... > Joinder of Parties > Compulsory Joinder > Necessary Parties

Civil Procedure > Parties > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Parties > Joinder of Parties > General Overview

HN1 Compulsory Joinder, Necessary Parties

Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 19\(a\), a party is necessary where: (1) the party's absence from the litigation will preclude the court from providing complete relief for those already parties in the action, or (2) the party claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and is situated such that the disposition of the action in the party's absence may (i) impair or impede the party's ability to protect that interest, or (ii) leave any of the existing parties subject to a substantial risk of multiple or inconsistent obligations as a result of the claimed interest. Where a party meets one of these criteria, the court is required to join the party unless the court lacks jurisdiction over the party or where joinder would destroy the court's jurisdiction over the existing litigants.

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Ownership > Conveyances > Assignments

Civil Procedure > ... > Joinder of Parties > Compulsory Joinder > Necessary Parties

Patent Law > Ownership > Conveyances > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Ownership > Conveyances > Licenses

HN2 Conveyances, Assignments

Generally, patent rights may be enforced in court only by the patent's owner or assignee. However, courts have recognized that an exclusive licensee having substantial patent rights qualifies as an assignee for enforcement purposes. Therefore, because the exclusive licensee has standing to sue on the patent in its own right, the patent's owner is not a necessary party under Fed. R. Civ. P. 19\(a\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Penalties

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Penalties

HN3 Clayton Act, Penalties

Section 2 of the Sherman Antitrust Act punishes every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several states. 15 U.S.C.S. § 2.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN4 Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Evidence of anti-competitive intent or purpose standing alone cannot transform otherwise legitimate activity, such as the filing of a lawsuit, into "sham" litigation.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN5 Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Litigation is not a sham unless it is objectively baseless. A lawsuit is objectively baseless if no reasonable litigant could realistically expect success on the merits. If an objective litigant could conclude that a lawsuit is reasonably calculated to elicit a favorable outcome, the suit is not subject to an antitrust challenge predicated on a charge of "sham" litigation. Only if the challenged litigation is objectively meritless may a court examine a litigant's subjective motivation. Under this second prong of the "sham" litigation analysis, a district court focuses on whether the baseless lawsuit conceals an attempt to interfere directly with the business relationships of a competitor. This two-tiered analysis requires a plaintiff to disprove the challenged lawsuit's legal viability, before a court will entertain evidence of the suit's economic viability.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Intellectual Property > Ownership & Transfer of Rights > Assignments

Patent Law > Infringement Actions > Exclusive Rights > Manufacture, Sale & Use

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Intellectual Property > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Intellectual Property > Ownership & Transfer of Rights > General Overview

Patent Law > Infringement Actions > Exclusive Rights > General Overview

HN6 Ownership & Transfer of Rights, Assignments

Congress gave inventors the right to obtain patents on their inventions and thereby gain the right to exclude others from making, using or selling the invention, without the consent of the patent owner, for a period of 17 years. Congress specifically granted patent owners the right to commence a civil suit in order to protect their inventions.

Patent Law > Infringement Actions > Infringing Acts > General Overview

Patent Law > ... > Defenses > Patent Invalidity > Presumption of Validity

HN7 Infringement Actions, Infringing Acts

As patents are cloaked in a presumption of validity, a patent infringement suit is presumed to be brought in good faith.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Amendment of Pleadings > General Overview

HN8 Pleadings, Amendment of Pleadings

Amendments to pleadings are liberally allowed under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. However, the general rule in favor of liberal amendment has been somewhat tempered in that Fed. R. Civ. P. 15\(a\) is not a license for carelessness or gamesmanship. Parties to litigation have an interest in speedy resolution of their disputes without undue expense. Generally, courts will deny leave to amend only where the party seeking leave is guilty of bad faith, dilatory motive, or undue delay. Rule 15\(a\) analysis must take into account the prejudice to the opposing party, the burdens on the judicial system, and the extent of the delay.

Civil Procedure > ... > Pleadings > Amendment of Pleadings > General Overview

HN9 Pleadings, Amendment of Pleadings

Prejudice in the context of Fed. R. Civ. P. 15\(a\) means undue difficulty in prosecuting or defending a lawsuit as a result of a change in tactics or theories on the part of the other party.

Counsel: For THK AMERICA INC, plaintiff: Robert Edward Wagner, James Joseph Jagoda, Alan L. Barry, Wallenstein, Wagner & Hattis, Ltd., Chicago, IL. William F. Westerman, Anderson, Kill, Olick & Oshinsky, P.C., New York, NY. John E. Daniel, Michael O'Shea, Lara Fetsco, Rogers & Wells, New York, NY. John E. Kidd, Walter G. Marple, Jr., Shea & Gould, New York, NY. James E. Armstrong, III, Armstrong, Nikaido, Marmelstein, Kubovcik & Murray, Washington, DC.

For NIPPON SEIKO K K, defendant: Daniel Michael Riess, Thomas D. Paulius, Lockwood, Alex, Fitzgibbon & Cummings, Chicago, IL. Allen H. Gerstein, Edward M. O'Toole, Anthony Nimmo, Edward M. O'Toole, Marshall, O'Toole, Gerstein, Murray & Borun, Chicago, IL. James William Teevans, Gardner, Carton & Douglas, Chicago, IL. Charles E. Miller, Scott D. Stimpson, Pennie & Edmonds, New York, NY. Daniel Robert Pastirik, Office of Intellectual Property Counsel, St. Paul, MN. For N.S.K. CORPORATION, defendant: Daniel Michael Riess, Thomas D. Paulius, Lockwood, Alex, Fitzgibbon & Cummings, Chicago, IL. Edward M. O'Toole, Marshall, O'Toole, Gerstein, Murray & Borun, Chicago, IL. James William Teevans, Gardner, Carton & Douglas, Chicago, IL. Charles E. Miller, Scott D. Stimpson, Pennie & Edmonds, New York, NY. Daniel Robert Pastirik, Office of Intellectual Property Counsel, St. Paul, MN.

For N.S.K. CORPORATION, counter-claimant: Thomas D. Paulius, Lockwood, Alex, Fitzgibbon & Cummings, Chicago, IL. James William Teevans, Gardner, Carton & Douglas, Chicago, IL. Charles E. Miller, Scott D. Stimpson, Pennie & Edmonds, New York, NY. For NIPPON SEIKO K K, counter-claimant: Thomas D. Paulius, Lockwood, Alex, Fitzgibbon & Cummings, Chicago, IL. Anthony Nimmo, Marshall, O'Toole, Gerstein, Murray & Borun, Chicago, IL. James William Teevans, Gardner, Carton & Douglas, Chicago, IL. Charles E. Miller, Scott D. Stimpson, Pennie & Edmonds, New York, NY.

For THK AMERICA INC, counter-defendant: Robert Edward Wagner, Wallenstein, Wagner & Hattis, Ltd., Chicago, IL. Michael O'Shea, Roger & Wells, New York, NY. John E. Kidd, Shea & Gould, New York, NY. For THK AMERICA INC, counter-defendant: Robert Edward Wagner, Wallenstein, Wagner & Hattis, Ltd., Chicago, IL. John E. Daniel, Michael O'Shea, Rogers & Wells, New York, NY. John E. Kidd, Shea & Gould, New York, NY.

Judges: W. Thomas Rosemond, Jr., United States Magistrate Judge

Opinion by: W. Thomas Rosemond, Jr.

Opinion

[1260] [*660] ORDER

This action was commenced on October 17, 1990 by plaintiff THK America ("THK"). In its complaint, THK charged defendants NSK, Ltd. and NSK Corporation (collectively "NSK") with infringement of two United States patents concerning linear guides with re-circulating ball bearings. These products [*661] are primarily used in the industrial arena for the linear movement of large and heavy objects or machinery, such as industrial robots, with great precision.¹ In the period since the case was commenced, the parties have filed scores of motions and discovery requests. This order addresses the latest of these motions, a motion made by NSK on November 30, 1992, for leave to file amended answers, to join THK Co. (hereinafter "THK Japan") as a party plaintiff, and to add substantive counterclaims alleging violations of federal and state antitrust law and common law tort causes of action. NSK's motion is denied in its entirety.

[2] A. NSK's Motion to Join THK Japan as a Necessary Party.

The first component of NSK's present motion seeks joinder of THK Japan as a necessary party under Rule 19(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. HN1 Under Rule 19(a), a party is necessary where: (1) the party's absence from the litigation will preclude the court from providing complete relief for those already parties in the action, or (2) the party claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and is situated such that the disposition of the action in the party's absence may (i) impair or impede the party's ability to protect that interest, or (ii) leave any of the existing parties subject to a substantial risk of multiple or inconsistent obligations as a result of the claimed interest.² Where a party meets one of these criteria, the court is required to join the [1261] party unless the court lacks jurisdiction over the party or where joinder would destroy the court's jurisdiction over the existing litigants.³

¹ United States Patent No. 4,040,679 expires in August of 1994, and United States Patent No. 4,253,709 expires in March of 1998.

[3] HN2⁴ Generally, patent rights may be enforced in court only by the patent's owner or assignee.⁵ However, courts have recognized that an exclusive licensee having substantial patent rights qualifies as an assignee for enforcement purposes.⁶ Therefore, because the exclusive licensee has standing to sue on the patent in its own right, the patent's owner is not a necessary party under Rule 19\(a\). In this case, the owner (THK Japan - who has relinquished the right to sell the product in the United States to the exclusive licensee - THK America) faces no threat of having its interests compromised in the litigation, and the existing parties (i.e., the exclusive licensee and the alleged infringer) are fully able to gain complete relief.⁶

[4] THK is an exclusive licensee of the patents at issue here. While NSK has gone to great effort to recharacterize the license granted THK by THK Japan as a "mere license,"⁷ the very language of the license clearly grants THK an exclusive right to "make, use and sell and otherwise practice the inventions covered by [the subject patents] and to sue others for past and future infringement thereof."⁸ As the language and validity of the agreement is plain and unambiguous, we decline to accept NSK's invitation to look behind the document for any ulterior motivation that might have prompted the parties to enter into it.

Furthermore, we cannot help but note that NSK's present position on the exclusivity of the license carries a strong scent of eleventh-hour litigation delay strategy. THK alleged in its complaint that it was the exclusive licensee of the subject patents.⁹ NSK raised no issue as to this fact in its answer.¹⁰ And we do not believe [5] that it would take two years of discovery to unearth new facts concerning the exclusivity of THK's license. [*662] For NSK to now submit a motion devoting sixteen pages to argue the exclusivity of THK's license - a point that it conceded without the slightest hesitation at the time the suit was commenced - strikes us as an eleventh-hour afterthought. In any event, we find that THK Japan is not a necessary party in this litigation under Rule 19\(a\). NSK's motion to join THK Japan is therefore denied.

B. NSK's Motion to Amend.

The second component of NSK's present motion involves an attempt to amend its pleadings to assert four counterclaims against THK and to raise an affirmative defense of patent misuse. As with its motion to join THK Japan, NSK claims that its discovery efforts have revealed new (unspecified) facts purportedly supporting the misuse defense and four counterclaims against THK. NSK argues that in light of the liberal amendment policy embodied in Rule 15(a), [6] these assertions provide an ample basis for the Court to permit its proposed amendments.

² Fed. R. Civ. P. 19\(a\).

³ Id.

⁴ Waterman v. Mackenzie, 138 U.S. 252, 255, 34 L. Ed. 923, 11 S. Ct. 334 (1891).

⁵ See, Vaupel Textilmaschinen v. Meccanica Euro Italia, 944 F.2d 870, 875 (Fed. Cir. 1991).

⁶ Id. See also, Surgical Laser Technologies, Inc. v. Laser Industries, Ltd., 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17191, 21 U.S.P.Q.2D (BNA) 1593 (E.D. Pa. 1991).

⁷ See, Def. Mem., at 15-16.

⁸ Pl. Exh. 3 (License Agreement).

⁹ Complaint P5.

¹⁰ Answer P5.

THK counters that the motions should be denied as a result of NSK's delay in raising the counterclaims, the potential for prejudice by allowing amendment at this late date, the potential burden on the judicial system, and the fact that NSK's counterclaims fail to state a cause of action. In light of the background facts and history of the litigation, it is clear that THK has the better of the argument.

NSK seeks to amend its answer to the complaint to include counterclaims charging THK with antitrust violations and various state-law infractions. NSK's first counterclaim alleges that THK has attempted to monopolize the linear guide market in violation of Section 2 of the Sherman Antitrust Act.¹¹ Particularly, NSK claims that from 1988 until the time this litigation was commenced, THK and THK Japan, through their founder and president, Mr. Hiroshi Teramachi, attempted to gain NSK's participation in a plan to reduce competition in the linear guide industry by raising prices in the United States and elsewhere. NSK also alleges that THK requested that NSK withdraw from the linear guide market in [\[7\]](#) return for THK's withdrawal from the ball screw market. NSK claims that THK attempted to coerce NSK's compliance with these anti-competitive schemes by threatening and commencing the present action, which NSK [\[1262\]](#) characterizes as "sham" litigation. Such charges will not support an antitrust claim.

HN4 [↑]

Evidence of anti-competitive intent or purpose - standing alone - cannot transform otherwise legitimate activity - such as the filing of a lawsuit - into "sham" litigation.¹² [\[8\]](#) Thus, even an "improperly motivated" lawsuit is not a sham unless such it is "baseless".¹³

HN5 [↑]

Litigation is not a sham unless it is "objectively baseless". Under the Real Estate Investors case, a lawsuit is "objectively baseless" if no reasonable litigant could realistically expect success on the merits.¹⁴ [\[9\]](#) If an objective litigant could conclude that a lawsuit is reasonably calculated to elicit a favorable outcome, the suit is not subject to an antitrust challenge predicated on a charge of "sham" litigation.¹⁵ Only if the challenged litigation is objectively meritless may a court examine a litigant's subjective motivation.¹⁶ Under this second prong of the "sham" litigation [\[*663\]](#) analysis, a district court focuses on whether the baseless lawsuit conceals "an attempt to interfere directly with the business relationships of a competitor."¹⁷ This two-tiered analysis requires a plaintiff to

¹¹ HN3 [↑] Section 2 of the Sherman Antitrust Act punishes "every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States." 15 U.S.C. § 2 (emphasis added).

¹² See, Professional Real Estate Investors, Inc. v. Columbia Pictures Industries, Inc., U.S. , 113 S. Ct. 1920, 1927, 123 L. Ed. 2d 611 \(1993\) ("an objectively reasonable effort to litigate cannot be sham regardless of subjective intent."). See also, Eastern R. Presidents Conference v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc., 365 U.S. 127, 81 S. Ct. 523, 5 L. Ed. 2d 464 \(1961\); and Mine Workers v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657, 669, 85 S. Ct. 1585, 1593, 14 L. Ed. 2d 626 \(1965\).

¹³ Real Estate Investors, 112 S.C. 1920 at 1927.

¹⁴ Id., at 1928.

¹⁵ Id.

¹⁶ Id.

¹⁷ Real Estate Investors, 113 S. Ct. at 1928, quoting, Eastern R. Presidents Conference v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc., 365 U.S. 127, 144, 81 S. Ct. 523, 533, 5 L. Ed. 2d 464 \(1961\).

disprove the challenged lawsuit's legal viability, before a court will entertain evidence of the suit's economic viability.
¹⁸

THK's suit easily satisfies the first prong, precluding the Court from entertaining NSK's invitation to scrutinize THK's underlying motivations. The first prong is met because THK lawfully enjoys exclusivity rights granted to it by the patent laws of the United States.

The patent laws were enacted by Congress pursuant to Article I, Section 8 of the United States Constitution:

The Congress shall have Power ... To promote the Progress of Science and useful Arts, by securing limited Times to Authors and Inventors the exclusive Right to their respective Writings and Discoveries ... ¹⁹

HN6[] Congress gave inventors the right to obtain patents on their inventions and thereby gain [10] the right to exclude others from making, using or selling the invention, without the consent of the patent owner, for a period of seventeen years.²⁰ And Congress specifically granted patent owners the right to commence a civil suit in order to protect their inventions.²¹ Accordingly, regardless of whether THK intended any monopolistic or predatory purpose in filing suit, THK has statutory patent rights which it may protect in American courts.²² Moreover, HN7[] as patents are cloaked in a presumption of validity, a patent infringement suit is presumed to be brought in good faith.²³

[11] Probable cause to institute this patent infringement suit requires no more than a reasonable belief on the part of THK that there is a chance that its claims may be held valid upon adjudication.²⁴ The patent laws of the United States grant THK the right to sue, and the presumption of the validity of patents provides THK with a reasonable expectation that its patent infringement claims may be held valid upon adjudication. That THK has an objectively reasonable expectation of success on the merits is further evidenced by the Magistrate Judge's February 1st, 1993 Order denying NSK's summary judgment motion on the issue of non-infringement.²⁵ Accordingly, since NSK's federal antitrust counterclaim appears not to state a claim upon which relief may be had, all the more reason exists for precluding its introduction into this case.

[12] The same considerations apply to NSK's second counterclaim, which realleges the same facts as a violation of § 3\(3\) of the [1263] Illinois Antitrust Act.²⁶ Therefore, like the federal antitrust counterclaim, NSK's state

¹⁸ Real Estate Investors, 113 S. Ct. at 1928.

¹⁹ U.S. Const. Art. I, § 8.

²⁰ 45 U.S.C. § 154.

²¹ 35 U.S.C. § 281.

²² Real Estate Investors, 113 S. Ct. at 1930.

²³ See, Handgards, Inc. v. Ethicon, Inc., 601 F.2d 986, 996, 202 U.S.P.Q. \(BNA\) 342, 351 \(9th Cir. 1979\), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1025, 100 S. Ct. 688, 62 L. Ed. 2d 659, 100 S. Ct. 689 (1980).

²⁴ Real Estate Investors, 113 S. Ct. at 1912.

²⁵ At the January 19th, 1993 oral argument on NSK's summary judgment motion, THK articulated numerous issues of fact which must be determined in order for the Court to decide whether or not infringement exists. The Court concurred in THK's assessment. Moreover, because the plain language of the patent claims, themselves, is subject to several interpretations, perforce expert testimony is needed to determine how one skilled in the art would read the claims.

²⁶ Ill. Rev. Stat. 1981 Ch. 38 par. 60-3. See, Ray Dancer, Inc., v. DMC Corp., 230 Ill. App. 3d 40, 54, 594 N.E.2d 1344, 1354, 171 Ill. Dec. 824 \(2d Dist. 1992\).

antitrust counterclaim would be subject to dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6), and should not be introduced into this litigation.

[*664] NSK's third and fourth counterclaims allege that THK committed two common law torts under Illinois law. The third counterclaim alleges that THK committed the torts of commercial disparagement and unfair trade practices by disseminating false information about NSK's products.²⁷ The fourth alleges intentional interference with business relations.²⁸ Like the antitrust claims, THK claims that these counterclaims as pled could not withstand a motion to dismiss under [13] Rule 12(b)(6). The Court agrees that NSK's skeletal allegations would wither under the scrutiny of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion. However, rather than dwell on the prospective merit of the common law claims, the Court turns to the heart of this dispute, to-wit: whether NSK should be foreclosed from amending its pleadings in light of its two-year delay.²⁹

NSK has noted correctly that HN8[↑] amendments to pleadings are liberally allowed under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.³⁰ However, the general rule in favor of liberal amendment has been somewhat tempered:

FRCP 15\(a\) is not a license for carelessness or gamesmanship. Parties to litigation have an interest in speedy resolution of their disputes without undue expense. Substantive amendments to the [Answer] just before trial are not to be countenanced [14] and only serve to defeat these interests.³¹

Generally, courts will deny leave to amend only where the party seeking leave is guilty of bad faith, dilatory motive, or undue delay.³² [15] The Seventh Circuit has explained that Rule 15(a) analysis must take into account the prejudice to the opposing party, the burdens on the judicial system, and the extent of the delay.³³ All of the factors to be considered weigh in favor of THK. These factors, coupled with the apparent lack of merit of NSK's counterclaims as pled, as well as the lack of a common factual predicate for the counterclaims and the claims and defenses in the patent infringement suit, compel denial of NSK's motion to amend.

NSK's motion to amend was filed on November 30, 1992. By this time, the litigation was already well over two years old.³⁴ At present, except for certain outstanding discovery motions still under advisement, fact discovery is closed, and the parties are nearly finished with expert discovery. The case is now very close to trial.

Granting NSK's motion to amend would result in considerable prejudice to THK:

HN9[↑] Prejudice in the context of Fed. R. Civ. P. 15\(a\) "means undue difficulty in prosecuting [or defending] a lawsuit as a result of a change in tactics or theories on the part of the other party."³⁵

²⁷ Counterclaim PP47-50.

²⁸ Counterclaim PP51-6.

²⁹ We do not decide whether any of NSK's four proposed counterclaims are compulsory or not. For purposes of NSK's motion, we assume that they are so.

³⁰ See, Fed. R. Civ. P. 15\(a\) (leave to amend pleadings shall be granted freely where justice requires); Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 182, 9 L. Ed. 2d 222, 83 S. Ct. 227 \(1962\).

³¹ Id., at 1379 (quoting, Feldman v. Allegheny Intern, Inc., 850 F.2d 1217, 1225 \(7th Cir. 1988\)).

³² Foman, 371 U.S. at 182.

³³ Fort Howard Paper Co. v. Standard Havens, 901 F.2d 1373, 1379-80 \(7th Cir. 1990\).

³⁴ THK's patent infringement action was filed on October 17, 1990.

³⁵ Tarkett, Inc. v. Congoleum Corp., 144 F.R.D. 289, 291 \(E.D. Pa. 1992\), quoting, Deakyne v. Commissioners of Lewes, 416 F.2d 290, 300 \(3d Cir. 1969\).

Adding NSK's proposed counterclaims will raise entirely new issues of law. In turn, plaintiff will necessarily advance new defenses not previously [16] raised in this litigation. That new discovery would be required is evident from NSK's numerous attempts throughout the discovery phase of this litigation to delve into matters related to its proposed counterclaim amendments, but unrelated to the pending patent infringement action.³⁶ Additionally, if leave of court is [*665] granted to NSK to file its proposed counterclaims, concurrent with that filing, NSK will serve upon THK "Counterplaintiffs' Requests (1-40) To THK America, Inc. For Production Of Documents And Things" containing 40 document requests.³⁷

[17] As reflected by the Magistrate Judge's June 30, 1993 Order regarding deposition [1264] discovery, the patent infringement action has already been unbearably long and tedious and extremely expensive for the parties. The June 30th Order essentially concerned the deposition discovery phase of the litigation. NSK had noticed nineteen depositions. The identity of all of the noticed deponents was obtained by NSK from THK answers to NSK interrogatories submitted by THK to NSK in 1991. Even with such knowledge, by June 30, 1993, NSK had only deposed two of the individuals identified in THK's interrogatory answers. After a discovery conference in open-court, the Magistrate Judge issued the June 30th Order which reduced the proposed nineteen depositions to seven. Over NSK's objections, the Magistrate Judge also set a discovery cut-off date for fact discovery. Issuance of the June 30th Order was necessary because "NSK had not utilized its time well"³⁸, thereby necessitating judicial intervention to add momentum to the discovery process. Permitting NSK's counterclaims would launch the parties upon another waive of discovery of unknown duration and destination.

[18] As we have noted in a number of orders, virtually all of the relevant documents produced in discovery are in Japanese and are required to be translated into English for American counsel. The translations take considerable time. In addition, virtually all of the key depositions are in Japanese. Most have been taken in Japan. For these depositions, a triumvirate of translators is used consisting of a translator for each party and a third translator agreed upon by both parties. Translation disputes are resolved by a majority of the triumvirate. Thus, depositions are considerably longer than normal and far more expensive.

Finally, the propensity of NSK to file overbroad discovery requests has resulted in a plethora of discovery motions being filed - which have "bogged down" the Court. NSK has won some, but lost most. And, even with respect to its few victories, the discovery sought was substantially narrowed by the Court. In any event, resolution of the motions consumed considerable judicial time. To permit the filing of NSK's proposed counterclaims would clearly unduly delay and complicate this case, and prejudice THK by imposing additional expensive and time-consuming new discovery. [19]³⁹

The 40 document requests which NSK seeks to serve upon THK concurrent with the filing of its proposed amended answer and counterclaims would bring the progress of this patent infringement litigation to a virtual stand-still. For example, Document Request No. 21 reads as follows:

Request 21.

All documents identifying or relating to patent applications, including the patent applications themselves (domestic or foreign) assigned to THK or Teramachi which relate to linear guides.⁴⁰ [20]

³⁶ See, e.g., the Magistrate Judge's February 9, 1993 Minute Order sustaining THK's objections to certain deposition questions put to a THK deponent "on the ground, among others, that the line of inquiry related to counterclaims not yet permitted by the District Court to be filed."

³⁷ Exhibit 7, "Exhibits To Plaintiff's Memorandum In Opposition To Defendants' Motion For Leave To File Answers, To Join THK Co., Ltd. As A Party Plaintiff, And To Add Counterclaims."

³⁸ Magistrate Judge's June 30, 1993 Minute Order, at 3 n. 2.

³⁹ Stoller v. Curtis Homes, Inc., No. 86 C 7817, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2637 (March 29, 1988, Williams, J.) [citations omitted].

Allegedly, "THK holds over 200 patents in Japan, the United States and elsewhere in the world, and has applied for over 400 additional patents." ⁴¹ Document production for between 200 and 400 patent applications [666] would bring the patent infringement action which is close to trial to a virtual stand-still.

Document requests similar to the above-quoted request were propounded by NSK to THK in the paper discovery phase of the patent litigation, but they were never allowed. They were always narrowed in scope to the patents at issue, to-wit: United States Patent No. 4,040,679 and United States Patent No. 4,253,709. ⁴² NSK makes no such effort with respect to proposed Document Request No. 21.

[21] Perforce, NSK's counterclaim amendments would result in considerable delay in the final disposition of the patent infringement action. While delay itself can be prejudicial, ⁴³ the delay in this case would have palpable and harmful effects on THK. As noted previously, one of the subject patents will expire in August of 1994. The other will expire in March of 1998. THK clearly has a compelling interest in obtaining the quickest possible resolution of its patent claims. [1265] Courts have found that even where money damages for lost royalties are available, infringement results in substantial harm. ⁴⁴ [22] The subject amendments, by requiring additional discovery, pleading, and briefing, will clearly delay resolution of this case, and have an adverse effect on THK. ⁴⁵

The filing of NSK's counterclaim motion at this juncture of the litigation when virtually all of the key facts underlying the antitrust claims were known at the time that the patent infringement suit was filed suggests that the filing of the motion is for dilatory purposes. This suggestion is buttressed by NSK's antitrust-complaint-filing odyssey begun in this Court on June 4, 1993.

On June 4, 1993, NSK filed a five-count complaint ⁴⁶ against THK, THK Japan, and Mr. Hiroshi Teramachi, the founder and president of both corporate defendants, essentially charging the same with monopolization and attempts to monopolize the linear guide market in the United States in violation of § 2 of the Sherman Act. ⁴⁷ Among the allegations of the complaint was the charge that THK's monopoly power had been [*23] achieved and maintained, not through lawful conduct or through lawful use of patent monopolies, but through defendants' unlawful efforts to fix prices for linear guides and to divide markets; deceptive, false, and unfair trade practices; disparagement of NSK products and services; tortious interference with NSK's business relations and expectations; misuse of patents; accumulation of blocking patents; sham predatory patent litigation; and threats of litigation to coerce defendants' price-fixing and market division schemes and to foreclose competitors from the market.

⁴⁰ "Counterplaintiffs' Request (1-40) To THK America, Inc. For Production Of Documents And Things", at 13, attached as Exhibit 7 to, "Exhibits To Plaintiff's Memorandum In Opposition To Defendants' Motion For Leave To File Answers, To Join THK Co., Ltd. As A Party Plaintiff, And To Add Counterclaims."

⁴¹ Counterclaim P16, attached as Exhibit 3 to, "Memorandum In Support Of Defendants' Motion For Leave To File Amended Answers; To Join THK Co., As A Party Plaintiff; And To Add Counterclaims."

⁴² See, e.g., the Magistrate Judge's September 17, 1991 Order limiting Document Request No. 2 of NSK's First Set Of Requests (1-5) To Plaintiff THK America, Inc. For Production Of Documents to the patents at issue. Due to NSK's propensity for re-litigating matters already ruled upon, the September 17th Order had to be re-affirmed by the Magistrate Judge's October 19, 1993 Order.

⁴³ See Fort Howard, 901 F.2d at 1380.

⁴⁴ Atlas Powder Co. v. Ireco Chemicals, 773 F.2d 1230, 1233 (Fed. Cir. 1985); Smith Int'l., Inc. v. Hughes Tool Co., 718 F.2d 1573, 1581 (Fed. Cir.), cert. denied 464 U.S. 996, 78 L. Ed. 2d 687, 104 S. Ct. 493 (1983).

⁴⁵ See Richardson v. Suzuki Motor Co., Ltd., 868 F.2d 1226, 1247 (Fed. Cir.) (harm to patentee increases as patent nears expiration), cert. denied 493 U.S. 853, 107 L. Ed. 2d 112, 110 S. Ct. 154 (1989).

⁴⁶ Case No. 93 C 3352 (Judge Kocoras).

⁴⁷ 15 U.S.C. § 2.

According to the allegations, all of the complained of antitrust conduct occurred "from at least as early as January 1988, until the commencement" of the present patent infringement suit on October 17, 1990. On July 19, 1993, before issue was joined, NSK voluntarily dismissed its antitrust complaint.⁴⁸ [24] By Minute Order dated July 22, 1993, the action was "dismissed without prejudice".⁴⁹

On August 5, 1993, in the United States District Court for the Western District of Louisiana (Shreveport, Louisiana), NSK filed a two-count complaint against THK America, THK Japan, and Mr. Hiroshi Teramachi, [*667] charging them with unlawful restraint of trade by illegally fixing the prices of linear guides through threats of patent litigation and the actual commencement of same.⁵⁰ More specifically, the antitrust complaint charged that beginning as early as January of 1988, Mr. Teramachi repeatedly proposed to THK's competitors in the linear guide market, including NSK, that they cooperate with THK in raising prices world-wide, including in the United States. The complaint charged further that Mr. Teramachi and THK used THK's patents as an integral part of their illegal price-fixing scheme. Injunctive and declaratory relief, as well as money damages, were sought.

[25] The above-recited antitrust filing saga reflects the expensive extremes to which NSK is prone. It also reflects NSK's litigious nature and its propensity for delay. Rather than press its antitrust claims in the forum originally selected, NSK chose to delay resolution of its antitrust claims until its antitrust action could be re-filed in another more favorable forum.⁵¹ Its litigation strategy in this regard was all for naught - for the United States District Court for the Western District of Louisiana transferred the antitrust action back to the Northern District of Illinois. However, time did pass. The transferred action bears Case No. 93 C 7032, and has been assigned to The Honorable Milton I. Shadur.

[26] According to NSK, its top management received a January 21, 1988 letter from Mr. Teramachi threatening them with patent litigation if they did not agree to the price-fixing proposals set forth therein.⁵² Allegedly, in April of 1988, Mr. Teramachi again sent [1266] NSK a letter proposing the same price-fixing scheme.⁵³ Additionally, from May 6, 1988 through June 26, 1990, Mr. Teramachi and other THK representatives met with NSK Japan's management on at least eight occasions.⁵⁴ At every meeting he attended - and he attended seven of the eight meetings - Mr. Teramachi demanded price-fixing and threatened NSK with patent infringement litigation if NSK did not cooperate.⁵⁵

NSK's delay in seeking leave of court [27] to file its proposed antitrust counterclaims remains unexplained - as perforce it must, given that NSK must be deemed to have knowledge of THK price-fixing correspondence admittedly received by NSK and of verbal price-fixing threats made at eight THK-NSK meetings admittedly attended by NSK top management. The facts simply do not permit absolving explanation.

⁴⁸ See, "Notice Of Dismissal Pursuant To Fed. R. Civ. P. 41\(a\)\(1\)\(i\)" (filed July 19, 1993).

⁴⁹ See, July 22, 1993 Minute Order, Case No. 93 C 3352 (N.D. Ill. Judge Kocoras).

⁵⁰ NSK Ltd. and NSK Corporation v. THK Co., Ltd., THK America, Inc., and Hiroshi Teramachi, Civil Action No. 93-1312 "S" (W.D. La. Judge Walter) (filed August 5, 1993).

⁵¹ The Western District of Louisiana had absolutely "no connection whatsoever to the [antitrust] dispute." Report and Recommendation, at 3, Civil Action No. 93-1312 (October 18, 1993) (Magistrate Judge Payne). The primary motivation for selecting that forum was the favorable case law of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals. Id.

⁵² Complaint, PP 7 and 8 (Civil Action No. 93-1312 "S").

⁵³ Id.

⁵⁴ "Memorandum In Support Of Plaintiff's Motion For (1) Summary Judgment Of Attempted Price-Fixing And Patent Misuse; And(2) Injunctive Relief," at 4 (filed August 27, 1993), Civil Action No. 93-1312 "S".

⁵⁵ Id.

In any event, to summarize, the factors weighing against the granting of NSK's motion - the likelihood of dismissal of the counterclaims, NSK's unexplained delay in pursuing its claims, the likelihood of prejudice to THK, and the considerable expansion of the scope of the litigation far outweigh the policy favoring free amendment of pleadings. Based on these factors, the Court denies NSK's motion to amend its answer to add counterclaims and a new defense.

C. NSK's Motion to Add THK Japan and Hiroshi Teramachi as Counterclaim Defendants.

Having ruled that NSK may not amend its pleadings to assert counterclaims, there is no basis for adding THK Japan and Mr. Teramachi as counterclaim defendants. This portion of NSK's motion is therefore denied.

[*668] Accordingly, it is adjudged, decreed, and ordered as [*28] follows:

"Defendants' Motion For Leave To File Amended Answers; To Join THK Co., Ltd. As a Party Plaintiff; And To Add Counter-claims" is denied.⁵⁶

So Ordered.

Dated: March 22, 1994

W. Thomas Rosemond, Jr.

United States Magistrate [*29] Judge

End of Document

⁵⁶ Pursuant to Rule 72\(a\) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the parties are given ten (10) days after being served with a copy of this order to file objections thereto with the Honorable Charles R. Norgle, Sr. Failure to file objections within the specified time period waives the right to appeal the Magistrate Judge's Order. Video Views, Inc. v. Studio 21, Ltd., 797 F.2d 538 (7th Cir. 1986). See also Provident Bank v. Manor Steel Corp., 882 F.2d 258, 261 (7th Cir. 1989) (when a matter has been referred to a Magistrate Judge acting as a special master or § 636(b)(2) jurist, a party waives his right to appeal if he has not first preserved the issues for appeal by presenting them to the District Judge as objections).

Segura v. Abbott Labs.

Court of Appeals of Texas, Third District, Austin

March 23, 1994, Filed

No. 3-93-319-CV

Reporter

873 S.W.2d 399 *; 1994 Tex. App. LEXIS 590 **

CRYSTAL SEGURA, TERI NORTON, SHERRI CHRETIEN, JANICE KIMLER, TESSIA INNOCENTI, ANGELA CHRISTINE MARONEY, MELISSA WHITTAKER DURAN, TRACEY FREEZIA LEUDEMAN, ON BEHALF OF THEMSELVES AND ALL OTHERS SIMILARLY SITUATED, APPELLANTS v. ABBOTT LABORATORIES, INC. (ROSS LABORATORIES DIVISION), BRISTOL-MYERS SQUIBB COMPANY, MEAD JOHNSON & COMPANY, AND AMERICAN HOME PRODUCTS CORPORATION (WYETH-AYERST LABORATORIES DIVISION), APPELLEES

Subsequent History: [1] Motion for Rehearing Overruled May 4, 1994. Released for Publication May 4, 1994.

Writ granted by, 11/03/1994

Cause set for submission by, 11/03/1994

Reversed by Abbott Lab. \(Ross Lab. Div.\) v. Segura, 907 S.W.2d 503, 1995 Tex. LEXIS 118 \(Tex., June 29, 1995\)

Prior History: FROM THE DISTRICT COURT OF TRAVIS COUNTY, 331ST JUDICIAL DISTRICT. NO. 91-13079-A, HONORABLE PETER M. LOWRY, JUDGE PRESIDING

Disposition: Reversed and Remanded

Core Terms

Antitrust, consumers, unconscionable, plaintiffs', products, infant formula, disparity, provisions, purchasers, pleadings, exempt, indirect-purchaser, indirect, summary judgment, defendants', cognizable, trial court, cause of action, grossly unfair, later-enacted, deprives, flagrant, damages, prices, light most favorable, value received, advertising, allegations, unmitigated, noticeable

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Purchasers > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Types of Damages > Consequential Damages > Actions for Price

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Types of Commercial Transactions > Sales of Goods > General Overview

Business & Corporate Compliance > ... > Remedies > Buyer's Damages & Remedies > General Overview

HN1 [] Private Actions, Purchasers

A "direct purchaser" is one who purchases goods or services directly from a manufacturer, wholesaler, or other provider who has violated § 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 15\(a\) \(1988\). An "indirect purchaser" is one who purchases such goods or services from a seller or provider who is down the marketing chain from the antitrust violator. The indirect-purchaser rule deprives indirect purchasers of standing to sue manufacturers or wholesalers for antitrust violations.

Governments > Courts > Court Personnel

Governments > Legislation > Enactment

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN2 [] Courts, Court Personnel

When two statutes conflict irreconcilably, the later-enacted statute controls. Tex. Gov't Code Ann. § 311.025\(a\) (1988). In addition, where there is a positive and clear repugnance between two statutes, courts are enjoined to harmonize and give effect to both enactments if at all possible by assigning to each a meaning that will permit both to stand in harmony. Courts may not create repugnance by implication. The repugnance between two statutes must be positive as well as clear from the terms of the statute itself. This rule is based on the assumption that a legislature enacts a statute with complete knowledge of the existing law and with reference to it.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > General Overview

HN3 [] Regulated Practices, Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

The Texas Free Enterprise and Antitrust Act of 1983, Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. §§ 15.01- .52, states that the provisions of the act are cumulative of each other and of any other provision of law of Texas in effect relating to the same subject. § 15.02(a).

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Remedies > General Overview

HN4 [] Private Actions, Remedies

See Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. § 17.43\(a\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Consumer Protection > Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Scope

HN5 Consumer Protection, Deceptive & Unfair Trade Practices

The Texas Supreme Court looks to the plain meaning of the provisions of the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act (DTPA), Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. §§ 17.41-63, and has refused to approve implied exceptions to, or adopt unwarranted limiting constructions of, those provisions. The Texas Supreme Court relies on two principles: (1) that the DTPA must be construed liberally, and (2) that the legislature expressly limits the DTPA when it so wishes.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Appellate Review > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Opposing Materials > General Overview

HN6 Summary Judgment, Entitlement as Matter of Law

In reviewing a summary judgment granted on the pleadings, an appellate court must consider the allegations in the pleadings in the light most favorable to the non-movant. It must accept as true every allegation of the pleadings against which the motion is directed. If the pleadings, when liberally construed, are sufficient to show a material fact issue the motion must be overruled. Moreover, all doubts as to the existence of a genuine issue of material fact must be resolved against the moving party, and the opposing party is entitled to the benefit of every reasonable inference that can properly be drawn in its favor.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Scope

HN7 Regulated Practices, Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

Section 17.50(a)(3) of the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act (DTPA), Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. § 17.41-63, provides that a consumer may maintain a cause of action where any unconscionable action or course of action by any person constitutes a producing cause of actual damages.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > General Overview

HN8 Regulated Practices, Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

See Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. § 17.45\(5\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Scope

HN9[] Regulated Practices, Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

The two acts delineated under Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. § 17.45\(5\) are the only means of engaging in an unconscionable action or course of action under the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act, Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. § 17.41-63.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > State Regulation > Scope

HN10[] Regulated Practices, Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

The Texas Supreme Court interprets the term "gross", for purposes of determining unconscionable conduct under § 17.45\(5\) of the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act, Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. § 17.41-63, as meaning glaringly noticeable, flagrant, complete and unmitigated.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > General Overview

HN11[] Regulated Practices, Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

In order to support a finding of unconscionable conduct under § 17.45\(5\) of the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act, Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. § 17.41-63, a slight disparity between the consideration paid and the value received is not unconscionable; a glaring and flagrant disparity is. The disparity between value and price must be determined at the time of the transaction.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Private Actions > General Overview

HN12[] Regulated Practices, Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade

In determining a claim of unconscionable conduct under § 17.45\(A\) of the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act, Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. § 17.41-63, the same standard of glaringly noticeable, flagrant, complete and unmitigated applies in determining whether plaintiff was subjected to gross unfairness. Further, there is no requirement that the unconscionable conduct take place at the exact time of the sale of the product; rather, a court must examine the entire transaction.

Counsel: For APPELLANTS: Mr. Philip K. Maxwell; Longley & Maxwell, L.L.P.--Austin.

Mr. Brian S. Greig; Fulbright & Jaworski, L.L.P.--Austin--Attorney for Abbott Laboratories and Ross Laboratories.

Mr. Louis P. Bickel; Akin, Gump, Hauer & Feld, L.L.P.--Dallas--Attorney for American Home Products Corporation and Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories.

Ms. D. L. (Lin) Hughes; McGinnis, Lochridge & Kilgore--Austin--Attorney for Bristol-Myers Squibb Company and Mead Johnson & Company.

Judges: Before Justices Powers, Jones and Kidd

Opinion by: J. WOODFIN JONES

Opinion

[*401] Crystal Segura and others,¹ on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated ("plaintiffs"), appellants, intervened as plaintiffs in an antitrust suit originally brought by the State of Texas against several defendants. Asserting claims of unconscionable conduct under the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act ("DTPA"), Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. §§ 17.41-63 [2] (West 1987 & Supp. 1994), plaintiffs sought damages from Abbott Laboratories, Inc. (Ross Laboratories Division), Bristol-Myers Squibb Company, Mead Johnson & Company, and American Home Products Corporation (Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories Division) ("defendants"), appellees. The trial court granted summary judgment for defendants, concluding that plaintiffs did not state a cognizable claim under the DTPA and, alternatively, that plaintiffs lacked standing to bring the suit. On appeal, plaintiffs assert that the trial court erred in both conclusions. We will reverse the trial court's judgment and remand the cause.

FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

In September 1991 the State of Texas brought an antitrust action against defendants Abbott, Bristol-Myers, and Mead Johnson, as well as the American Academy of Pediatrics, alleging a price-fixing conspiracy [3] and monopolization in the sale of infant formula. See Texas Free Enterprise and Antitrust Act of 1983 ("Texas Antitrust Act"), Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. §§ 15.01-52 (West 1987 & Supp. 1994). Among other claims, the State sought, on behalf of Texas consumers, injunctive relief and damages for alleged overcharges for infant formula. See Texas Antitrust Act § 15.21. In February 1992 the trial court dismissed these claims, concluding that when the Texas Antitrust Act was interpreted in harmony with federal antitrust law, the "indirect purchaser" doctrine deprived the State of standing to sue. See Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720, 52 L. Ed. 2d 707, 97 S. Ct. 2061 (1977).

Three months later, plaintiffs intervened in the action, dropping the American Academy of Pediatrics as a defendant but adding American Home Products. In alleging violations of the DTPA's unconscionability provisions, plaintiffs complained of the same conduct as that on which the State's antitrust [*402] causes of action were based. See DTPA § 17.50(a)(3). In response to defendants' special exceptions and plea to the jurisdiction, the trial court determined that plaintiffs had not [4] stated a cognizable cause of action under the DTPA and gave plaintiffs thirty days to amend their pleadings.

Plaintiffs subsequently amended their plea in intervention and petition. Alleging that defendants acted both independently and in conspiracy, plaintiffs summarized their allegations of unconscionable actions as follows:

- (A) Creating and maintaining the illusion that their infant formula products are somehow unique and different nutritionally when the infant formula products which they sell are generic formulations which are set and monitored by the U.S. Government;
- (B) Creating and maintaining dedicated franchise relationships with physicians and hospitals that endorse the purchasing of a particular brand name product of the Defendants while Texas consumers are kept ignorant of the monies and lavish promotional resources which these physicians and hospitals receive for these endorsements;
- (C) Selling their infant formula products at unconscionably high prices to Texas consumers when the costs of such products are very low;

¹ Other plaintiffs were Teri Norton, Sherri Chretien, Janice Kimler, Tessia Innocenti, Angela Christine Maroney, Melissa Whittaker Duran, and Tracey Freezia Leudeman.

- (D) Giving free samples of infant formula products to Texas consumers through their franchise physicians and hospitals during the [5] first months of their newborns' lives thereby creating an endorsement of the products and later grossly overcharging Texas consumers in the retail market for baby formula products;
- (E) Using their market dominance to prevent other companies from selling baby formula products to consumers through direct consumer advertising which would inform Texas consumers about the generic nature of these products and permit informed buying decisions based upon price and nutritional information;
- (F) Implementing price increases for more than twelve years which were nearly identical and grossly unfair to Texas consumers while giving false and misleading reasons for the price increases;
- (G) Taking unfair advantage of Texas consumers to a grossly unfair degree by preventing other sellers of infant formula products from entering the market and introducing competitive, lower prices for these generic foods [sic] products.

Defendants moved for summary judgment on two grounds. First, defendants argued that plaintiffs' claims were not cognizable under the DTPA. Second, defendants argued that plaintiffs lacked standing because: (1) the indirect-purchaser doctrine applies to the Texas Antitrust [6] Act under § 15.04 of that act; (2) the DTPA and the Texas Antitrust Act would be conflicting statutes if one provided a remedy for indirect purchasers while the other did not; and (3) the Texas Antitrust Act should exclusively control, because it is the later-enacted statute, and thus the indirect-purchaser rule deprives plaintiffs of standing to sue under the DTPA.

The trial court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment and dismissed plaintiffs' claims. The court concluded that plaintiffs' claims were not cognizable under the DTPA and, alternatively, that the indirect-purchaser doctrine deprived plaintiffs of standing under the DTPA. Plaintiffs' claims were severed from those remaining in the State's original suit, resulting in the final judgment from which plaintiffs now appeal.

Plaintiffs bring four points of error in this appeal, asserting that the trial court erred in (1) granting defendants' motion for summary judgment, (2) determining that plaintiffs have no standing to pursue their claims, (3) holding that the claims alleged by plaintiffs are not cognizable under the DTPA, and (4) concluding that, to the extent plaintiffs' claims may be cognizable under the DTPA, [7] the DTPA must be harmonized with the direct-purchaser rule applicable to the Texas Antitrust Act, the later-enacted and more specific statute; as indirect purchasers under that statute, plaintiffs lack standing under the DTPA to assert their claims. We will [*403] combine the points of error for purposes of discussion.

DISCUSSION

A. Indirect Purchaser Standing Under the DTPA

In the present context, HN1[] a "direct purchaser" is one who purchases goods or services directly from a manufacturer, wholesaler, or other provider who has violated section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15\(a\) \(1988\). An "indirect purchaser" is one who purchases such goods or services from a seller or provider who is down the marketing chain from the antitrust violator. The indirect-purchaser rule of Illinois Brick deprives indirect purchasers of standing to sue manufacturers or wholesalers for antitrust violations. As the United States Supreme Court explained, allowing indirect purchasers to recover against antitrust violators would create difficult issues of how much of the monopoly price was "passed on" to the end consumer by the middleman, usually a retailer. See Illinois Brick, [\[*8\]](#) 431 U.S. at 741-47.

Defendants assert that the indirect-purchaser rule should apply in Texas because the Texas Antitrust Act requires that "the provisions of this Act shall be construed . . . in harmony with federal judicial interpretations of comparable federal antitrust statutes to the extent consistent with" the purpose of maintaining and promoting economic competition in trade and commerce. Texas Antitrust Act § 15.04. Accordingly, defendants argue that the indirect-purchaser doctrine established in Illinois Brick deprives plaintiffs of standing to sue under the DTPA. Reaching this conclusion would require accepting the following propositions: (1) that the indirect-purchaser rule applies to the Texas Antitrust Act to deny indirect purchasers standing under that statute; (2) that, since plaintiffs allege some claims cognizable under both the Texas Antitrust Act and the DTPA, the two statutes must conflict; and (3) that this conflict must be resolved by concluding that the later-enacted statute, the Texas Antitrust Act, controls, thus depriving plaintiffs of standing under the DTPA. We decline to accept this reasoning. Assuming arguendo that the indirect-purchaser rule applies [9] to the Texas Antitrust Act,² we conclude that there is no conflict between that Act and the DTPA.

HN2[↑]

When two statutes conflict irreconcilably, the later-enacted statute controls. See Tex. Gov't Code Ann. § 311.025\(a\) (West 1988). In addition, "where there is a positive and clear [10] repugnance between two statutes, courts are enjoined to harmonize and give effect to both enactments if at all possible by assigning to each a meaning that will permit both to stand in harmony." Commissioners Court of Caldwell County v. Criminal Dist. Attorney, Caldwell County, 690 S.W.2d 932, 936 (Tex. App.--Austin 1985, writ ref'd n.r.e.) (citing Duval Corp. v. Sadler, 407 S.W.2d 493 (Tex. 1966); Standard v. Sadler, 383 S.W.2d 391 (Tex. 1964)); and State v. Standard Oil Co., 130 Tex. 313, 107 S.W.2d 550 (Tex. 1937)); see also State v. Jackson, 370 S.W.2d 797, 800 (Tex. Civ. App.--Houston 1963), aff'd, 376 S.W.2d 341 (Tex. 1964). Courts may not create repugnance by implication. The repugnance between two statutes must be "positive as well as clear from the terms of the statute itself." Commissioners Court of Caldwell County, 690 S.W.2d at 936. This rule is based on the assumption that a legislature enacts a statute "with complete knowledge of the existing law and with reference to it." Acker v. Texas Water Comm'n, 790 S.W.2d 299, 301 (Tex. 1990).

Both the Texas Antitrust Act and the DTPA have cumulative-remedies provisions. HN3[↑] [11] The Texas Antitrust Act states that "the provisions of this act are cumulative of each [*404] other and of any other provision of law of this state in effect relating to the same subject." Texas Antitrust Act § 15.02(a). Similarly, the DTPA states:

HN4[↑] The provisions of this subchapter are not exclusive. The remedies provided in this subchapter are in addition to any other procedures or remedies provided for in any other law; provided, however, that no recovery shall be permitted under both this subchapter and another law of both actual damages and penalties for the same act or practice. A violation of a provision of law other than this subchapter is not in and of itself a violation of this subchapter. An act or practice that is a violation of a provision of law other than this subchapter may be made the basis of an action under this subchapter if the act or practice is proscribed by a provision of this subchapter

DTPA § 17.43\(a\) (emphasis added). The emphasized portions of section 17.43 were added by the legislature in 1979. See Act of May 11, 1979, 66th Leg., R.S., ch. 603, § 1, 1979 Tex. Gen. Laws 1327, 1327 (codified as above). The effect of [12] this amendment was to "keep a violation of the DTPA from automatically resulting from the violation of another law and to preclude double recovery under the DTPA and another statute for the same act or practice." Frizzell v. Cook, 790 S.W.2d 41, 44 (Tex. App.--San Antonio 1990, writ denied). The existence of cumulative-remedies provisions in the two statutes indicates that the legislature did not, as a general matter, consider the DTPA and the Texas Antitrust Act to be conflicting statutes and did not intend one to supersede or preempt the other.

Other statutory enactments demonstrate that when the legislature wishes to exempt certain defendants or claims from the coverage of the DTPA, it does so in unequivocal terms. Several provisions of other acts have specifically exempted defendants from or limited claims under the DTPA. See Act of May 29, 1989, 71st Leg., R.S., ch. 1072, § 1, 1989 Tex. Gen. Laws 4338, 4338 (codified at Tex. Prop. Code Ann. § 27.002 (West Supp. 1994)) (stating in part that "to the extent of conflict between this chapter and any other law, including the Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act . . . , this chapter prevails"); Act of June 21, [13] 1987, 70th Leg., R.S., ch. 1122, § 20, 1987 Tex. Gen. Laws 3844, 3851 (codified at Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 8890, § 18C (West Supp. 1994)) (exempting veterinarians from DTPA claims for malpractice or damages resulting from negligence); Medical Liability and Insurance Improvement Act, 65th Leg., R.S., ch. 817, § 12.01\(a\), 1977 Tex. Gen. Laws 2039, 2053 (codified at Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 4590i, § 12.01\(a\) (West Supp. 1994)) (exempting physicians and health care providers from DTPA claims for damages resulting from death or personal injury caused by negligence). It is also clear that the legislature knows how to make provisions of the Texas Antitrust Act exclusive, as it did with the provisions regarding the enforceability of covenants not to compete. See Act of May 29, 1993, 73d Leg., R.S., ch. 965, § 3, 1993 Tex. Gen. Laws 4201, 4201-02 (codified at Texas Antitrust Act § 15.52) (providing that Texas Antitrust Act's new provisions regarding covenants not to compete are "exclusive and preempt any other criteria for enforceability of a covenant not to compete"). Finally, the legislature has created specific exceptions within the DTPA itself. Section 17.49 states [14] that the DTPA does not apply to advertisers and others who run advertisements under certain circumstances, see DTPA § 17.49(a), and does not apply to "acts or practices authorized under specific rules or regulations promulgated by the Federal Trade Commission under Section 5(a)(1) of the Federal Trade Commission Act [15 U.S.C. § 45\(a\)\(1\)]." DTPA § 17.49(b). Finally, the DTPA's definition of consumer exempts any business consumer that "has assets of $ 25 million or more, or that is owned or controlled by a corporation or entity with assets of $ 25 million or more." DTPA § 17.45\(4\). See also Act of June 14, 1989, 71st Leg., ch. 380, R.S., § 2, 1989 Tex. Gen. Laws 1490, 1491 (codified at DTPA § 17.50(b)(1)) (applying limitations of Tex. Civ. Prac. & Rem. Code chapters 33 & 41 to DTPA claims involving death, personal injury, and damage to property other than goods forming basis of claim).

² Since we conclude that the indirect-purchaser doctrine does not deprive plaintiffs of standing under the DTPA, we need not and do not determine whether the doctrine actually applies to the Texas Antitrust Act; nor do we determine whether, if the indirect-purchaser doctrine does apply to that Act, it deprives the court of subject matter jurisdiction or is simply a proper ground for judgment on the merits against the indirect purchaser. Cf. Texas Ass'n of Business v. Texas Air Control Bd., 852 S.W.2d 440, 444 (Tex. 1993) (holding that the standing requirement "is implicit in the open courts provision, [Tex. Const. art. I, § 13], which contemplates access to the courts only for those litigants suffering an in jury").

[*405] In light of the legislature's demonstrated ability to voice its intent with unmistakable clarity, defendants' argument that the two statutes conflict is not persuasive. Holding that a conflict exists between the DTPA and the Texas Antitrust Act would create a conflict by [15] implication and would force us to conclude that two statutes "conflict" any time they regulate the same activity. This we will not do. The fact that one statute makes certain conduct actionable while a later statute fails to make it actionable does not create a conflict requiring harmonization of the statutes. Such a holding would also require accepting the proposition that the DTPA is implicitly amended each time the legislature passes a statute that fails to give consumers a cause of action. We do not accept this proposition.

This case is not one in which one statute explicitly makes legal certain conduct that another statute makes illegal. See Jackson, 370 S.W.2d at 799-800 (holding that where later-enacted statute specifically makes certain conduct legal, regulation promulgated pursuant to earlier-enacted statute could not make that conduct illegal). Nor is it a case of two statutes imposing inconsistent obligations on defendants. See Texas State Bd. of Pharmacy v. Kittman, 550 S.W.2d 104, 105-06 (Tex. Civ. App.--Tyler 1977, no writ) (describing earlier-enacted statute's requirement that appeal from board's order must be made within twenty days of order and later-enacted [16] statute's requirement that motion for rehearing must be submitted to board issuing order as prerequisite to appeal).³

This conclusion is consistent with the Texas Supreme Court's repeated refusal to recognize exemptions from or exceptions to the DTPA except where clearly mandated by the legislature. HN5 Without fail, the supreme court has looked to the plain meaning of the DTPA's provisions and has refused to approve implied exceptions to, or adopt unwarranted limiting constructions of, those provisions. [17] See, e.g., Birchfield v. Texarkana Memorial Hosp., 747 S.W.2d 361, 368 \(Tex. 1987\) (holding that newborn baby was consumer of hospital's services); Chastain v. Koonce, 700 S.W.2d 579, 582-83 \(Tex. 1985\) (refusing to require intent or knowledge for defendant to be liable for unconscionable conduct); Kennedy v. Sale, 689 S.W.2d 890, 892 \(Tex. 1985\) (holding that "consumer" can be anyone who acquires goods that provide basis for DTPA complaint even if goods were paid for by someone other than plaintiff); Flenniken v. Longview Bank & Trust Co., 661 S.W.2d 705, 707 \(Tex. 1983\) (refusing to require that DTPA plaintiff be in privity with DTPA defendant and concluding that "the only requirement is that the goods or services sought or acquired by the consumer form the basis of his complaint"); Cameron v. Terrell & Garrett, Inc., 618 S.W.2d 535, 540-41 \(Tex. 1981\) (refusing to limit liable defendants to those who actually provided good or service that was basis of DTPA complaint). Such cases are based on two principles: (1) that the DTPA must be construed liberally, and (2) that the legislature expressly limits the DTPA when it so wishes. If the legislature had intended [18] to exclude indirect purchasers from coverage of the DTPA, "it could easily have done so by simply drafting the restriction into the definition of consumer or some other provision of the Act." Cameron, 618 S.W.2d 535 at 540.

³ It is important to note that the indirect-purchaser doctrine is not founded on the principle that the antitrust defendant's conduct is legal under the antitrust laws. Rather, it is founded on the principle that indirect purchasers are not the proper parties to seek enforcement of those laws. See Kansas v. Utilicorp United, Inc., 497 U.S. 199, 203-04, 111 L. Ed. 2d 169, 110 S. Ct. 2807 \(1990\). Thus the DTPA and the Texas Antitrust Act do not regulate defendants' conduct in an inconsistent manner.

This conclusion is consistent with the decision in Frizzell v. Cook, 790 S.W.2d 41 (Tex. App.--San Antonio 1990, writ denied). In Frizzell, the plaintiff asserted a DTPA claim involving a broker's failure to properly advise her regarding financial investments. The defendant asserted that the provisions of the Texas Securities Act ("TSA"),⁴ which establish a cause of action for misrepresentation in connection with a securities transaction, preempted the plaintiff's DTPA claim. *Id. at 1*406J 42.* Since the TSA did not have a provision exempting any conduct from the DTPA, the court looked to section 17.49 of the DTPA and concluded: "The only exemptions intended by the Legislature are those delineated in section 17.49, which do not exempt securities transactions." Frizzell, 790 S.W.2d at 44.

[19] Based on the absence of an express exemption in either the DTPA or the Texas Antitrust Act, combined with the presumption against finding statutes to be in conflict by implication, we decline to hold that the indirect-purchaser rule applies to the DTPA.

B. Plaintiffs' Cause of Action for Unconscionability

The trial court also based its summary judgment on the ground that plaintiffs had not stated a claim for unconscionable conduct under DTPA § 17.50(a)(3). We will, therefore, review the trial court's decision to grant defendants' motion for summary judgment directed solely at plaintiffs' pleadings.

HN6[↑] In reviewing a summary judgment granted on the pleadings, we must consider the allegations in the pleadings in the light most favorable to the non-movant.⁵ We must accept as true every allegation of the pleadings against which the motion is directed. Trunkline LNG Co.v. Trane Thermal Co., 722 S.W.2d 722, 724 (Tex. App.--Houston [14th Dist.] 1986, writ ref'd n.r.e.); Labbe v. Carr, 369 S.W.2d 952, 954 (Tex. Civ. App.--San Antonio 1963, writ ref'd n.r.e.). If the pleadings, when liberally construed, are sufficient to show a material fact issue the motion must [20] be overruled. Abbott v. City of Kaufman, 717 S.W.2d 927, 929 (Tex. App.--Tyler 1986, writ dism'd). Moreover, all doubts as to the existence of a genuine issue of material fact must be resolved against the moving party, and the opposing party is entitled to the benefit of every reasonable inference that can properly be drawn in its favor. Id. Taking all of plaintiffs' allegations as true, we must consider whether the acts alleged support a cause of action for unconscionability under the DTPA.

HN7[↑]

Section 17.50(a)(3) of the DTPA provides that a consumer may maintain a cause of action where "any unconscionable action or course of action by any person" constitutes a producing cause of actual [21] damages.

HN8[↑] Section 17.45\(5\) contains two alternative definitions of "unconscionable":

"Unconscionable action or course of action" means an act or practice which, to a person's detriment:

⁴ Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-1 to 581-41 (West 1964 & Supp. 1994).

⁵ Even then, such a summary judgment generally can be granted only after the non-movant has had an opportunity to amend his pleadings after special exceptions have been sustained. See Texas Dep't of Corrections v. Herring, 513 S.W.2d 6, 9-10 \(Tex. 1974\). In the present case, the trial court followed this procedure.

(A) takes advantage of the lack of knowledge, ability, experience, or capacity of a person to a grossly unfair degree; or

(B) results in a gross disparity between the value received and consideration paid, in a transaction involving transfer of consideration.

DTPA § 17.45\(5\). HN9[↑] These two acts are the only means of engaging in an unconscionable action or course of action under the DTPA. Griffith v. Porter, 817 S.W.2d 131, 136 (Tex. App.--Tyler 1991, no writ).

In Chastain, the HN10[↑] supreme court interpreted the term "gross" as meaning "glaringly noticeable, flagrant, complete and unmitigated." 700 S.W.2d at 583. Thus, plaintiffs must allege either (1) that defendants' course of conduct took advantage of plaintiffs' lack of knowledge, ability, experience, or capacity to a glaringly noticeable, flagrant, complete and unmitigated degree; or (2) that the disparity between the value and the price of the infant formula was glaringly noticeable, flagrant, complete and unmitigated. 22⁶

1. Gross Price Disparity

23 Plaintiffs allege that defendants overcharged infant formula consumers to the extent [\[*407\]](#) that a gross disparity existed between the value given and the value received. The court in Chastain stated that HN11[↑] "[a] slight disparity between the consideration paid and the value received is not unconscionable; a glaring and flagrant disparity is." 700 S.W.2d at 583. The disparity between value and price must be determined at the time of the transaction. Id. at 582.

Plaintiffs specifically alleged that defendants "have abused their overwhelming market dominance and, by direct action and by a conspiracy among them, have grossly overcharged Texas consumers." Plaintiffs further alleged that defendants coordinated their price increases, and they specifically set forth the following example of disparity in pricing: "The average wholesale cost for a can of Similac 13 ounce concentrate increased from $.54 in 1978 to $1.73 in August, 1990. During the same period, total manufacturing costs for that product increased from just 20 cents a can to 32 cents a can."

Construing these allegations in the light most favorable to plaintiffs, we believe plaintiffs have alleged a gross disparity 24 between the price charged and the value received.⁷ For example, plaintiffs allege that the price of Similac in 1990 was over five times its cost.⁸ This disparity could certainly be considered more than "slight."

⁶ The supreme court did not give much guidance as to whether these four terms should be construed in the conjunctive (i.e. glaringly noticeable, flagrant, complete, and unmitigated) or disjunctive (i.e. glaringly noticeable, or flagrant, or complete and unmitigated). Although the court's phrase contains the term "and," this usage is not conclusive, because the court quoted Webster's Third New International Dictionary 1002 (1976) for its definition of the term "gross." The fact that the court relied on a dictionary definition supports the argument that the phrase should be read in the disjunctive, since dictionaries often list several synonyms for a word when they define it. We believe there is a large difference between, for example, a price disparity that is "glaringly noticeable" or "flagrant" and one that is "complete and unmitigated." However, because we find that plaintiffs' allegations are sufficient under either construction, we do not decide this issue.

⁷ Determining value is not a simple task. Plaintiffs apparently assume that the wholesale cost per can of the infant formula is the "value" of the formula. Although this may or may not be true, defendants did not present summary judgment evidence to the contrary. Thus, reading the pleadings in the light most favorable to plaintiffs, for purposes of evaluating the pleadings' sufficiency, we assume that the wholesale cost per can is the "value" per can.

⁸ We do not hold that a mere price disparity alone, even a large one, is enough to meet the test of unconscionability. Rather, to be glaringly noticeable, flagrant, complete, and unmitigated, it may well be that there must be a gross price disparity "plus" some type of culpable conduct. See, e.g., LaChalet Int'l, Inc. v. Nowik, 787 S.W.2d 101, 105-06 (Tex. App.--Dallas 1990, no writ) (disparity in price and value received accompanied by several misrepresentations); Butler v. Joseph's Wine Shop, inc., 633 S.W.2d 926, 931-32 (Tex. App.--Houston [14th Dist.] 1982, writ ref'd n.r.e.) (gross disparity between price paid and value received caused by defendant's selling of goods to someone else and then refusing to return the money). In this case, plaintiffs [25] We do not accept defendants' argument that the gross-disparity cases reflect a rule that unconscionability exists only where there is a price charged for something of little or no value. See Wyatt v. Petrilta, 752 S.W.2d 683, 686 (Tex. App.--Corpus Christi 1988, writ denied) ("In reviewing other decisions in which the evidence supporting gross disparity was discussed, we find that in each the value received was none or nearly so."). It is important to note that simply because courts have found liability in such cases does not inexorably lead to the conclusion that liability cannot exist in less severe cases, and nothing in the definition of unconscionability supports the "little or no value" test as the exclusive test of gross disparity. For example, the supreme court recently stated that an allegation of unconscionability based on a price paid of $ 10,000 for equipment worth $ 2,000 was supportable. See Kinerd v. Colonial Leasing Co., 800 S.W.2d 187, 191 \(Tex. 1990\); see also Fort Worth Mortgage Corp. v. Abercrombie, 835 S.W.2d 262, 266 (Tex. App.--Houston [14th Dist.] 1992, no writ) (holding that, although "a case of a shockingly high price being paid for something [26] of little value" did not exist, "it is clear that the jury found a gross disparity between what appellees were led to believe they would receive and the benefits actually paid").

Plaintiffs' pleadings set forth claims of prices up to five times the alleged value of the product purchased. Mindful of our duty to construe the pleadings in the light most favorable to plaintiffs, we hold that plaintiffs have alleged a cognizable gross-disparity claim.

2. Taking Advantage of Plaintiffs to a Grossly Unfair Degree

Plaintiffs also alleged that defendants took advantage of their lack of knowledge and [*408] capacity to a grossly unfair degree. They allege in their petition that defendants, separately and in conspiracy, sought to ban direct advertising of infant formula in order to maintain high prices and prevent market entry; sought to maintain a system in which pediatricians, nurses, and hospitals recommended infant formula with the objective of maintaining high prices; and strove to create the false impression that their products were unique when in fact the contents of infant formula are regulated by the federal government and are essentially identical.

In Chastain, [27] the court stated that although unfairness is a "more nebulous term than disparity, . . . this is not a reason to create a new definition for gross." 700 S.W.2d at 583. Thus, HN12¹ the same standard of "glaringly noticeable, flagrant, complete and unmitigated" applies. Further, there is no requirement that the unconscionable conduct take place at the exact time of the sale of the infant formula; rather, we must examine the entire transaction. See id. at 583; Flenniken, 661 S.W.2d at 707.

As already noted, this case is before us on the pleadings and is in an embryonic stage of factual development. Plaintiffs' pleadings are occasionally somewhat conclusory, and the true facts as later developed may or may not bear them out. For example, the success of claims regarding physicians' and hospitals' use of defendants' products in efforts to encourage plaintiffs to buy and use the products may depend a great deal on the degree of influence the physicians had over plaintiffs and the degree of knowledge the average consumer possesses regarding infant formula. Similarly, the viability of claims regarding the generic nature of infant formulas may depend on the factual issues of what the [28] ingredients were, what specific efforts defendants made to create an "impression of uniqueness," and the plaintiffs' capacity to distinguish among the formulas. However, in light of our obligation to construe the pleadings in the light most favorable to plaintiffs, we hold that the allegations are sufficient to state a claim that defendants took advantage of plaintiffs' lack of knowledge and capacity to a degree that was glaringly noticeable, flagrant, complete and unmitigated. Plaintiffs alleged a course of conduct in which defendants conspired among themselves and with others to keep material information from consumers like plaintiffs by preventing direct advertising, by creating certain misimpressions, and by relying on a network of physicians, nurses, and hospitals to refer plaintiffs to certain infant formula. We hold that these claims are sufficiently alleged, especially in light of the early stage of factual development of this case.

have alleged that defendants conspired to raise prices and to prevent direct advertising and forestall market entry. Such allegations are enough to satisfy a "price disparity plus" standard.

CONCLUSION

There is no clear indication that the legislature intended in any way to limit the DTPA's coverage in the antitrust area. The legislature's failure either to amend the DTPA to exempt antitrust-type claims or to state explicitly [29] that the Texas Antitrust Act preempts other statutory enactments is significant in light of the legislature's proven ability to express itself clearly. Plaintiffs' pleadings, taken in the light most favorable to them, are sufficient to state causes of action for unconscionable price disparity and taking advantage of plaintiffs' lack of capacity, knowledge, and experience to a grossly unfair degree. We therefore sustain plaintiffs' four points of error. We reverse the trial court's summary judgment and remand the cause for further proceedings.

J. Woodfin Jones, Justice

Before Justices Powers, Jones and Kidd

Reversed and Remanded

Filed: March 23, 1994

End of Document

Caribe Bmw v. Bayerische Motoren Werke Aktiengesellschaft

United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit

March 25, 1994, Decided

No. 93-1653

Reporter

19 F.3d 745 *; 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 6057 ; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,548

CARIBE BMW, INC., Plaintiff, Appellant, v. BAYERISCHE MOTOREN WERKE AKTIENGESELLSCHAFT, ET AL., Defendants, Appellees.

Prior History: [1] APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF PUERTO RICO. Hon. Raymond L. Acosta, U.S. District Judge Disposition: Vacated and remanded.

Core Terms

retailers, Robinson-Patman Act, prices, district court, resale price, customers, dealers, subsidiary, maximum, antitrust, seller, anti trust law, purposes, selling, sales, wholly owned subsidiary, antitrust claim, competitors, ownership, contracts, terms, Sherman Act, termination, alleges, profits, reasons, forum selection clause, wholly owned, high prices, discriminated

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > Appeals > Standards of Review > De Novo Review

HN1 [down arrow] Standards of Review, De Novo Review

When reviewing the dismissal of the antitrust claims, the court takes the facts basically as stated in the complaint and make reasonable inferences that will help the plaintiff.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Price Discrimination > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Discrimination > Competitive Injuries > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

HN2 [down arrow] Robinson-Patman Act, Claims

The Robinson-Patman Act forbids "any person" to discriminate in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality where the effect of such discrimination may be to injure competition with any person who grants the discrimination, or with that granting person's customers. 15 U.S.C.S. § 13\(a\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Robinson-Patman Act > General Overview

HN3 Antitrust & Trade Law, Robinson-Patman Act

Whether or not a firm and its subsidiary amount to a single "person," or a "single seller," is answered by examining the extent of common ownership and the degree of control over pricing and distribution policies that the one exercises over the other.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN4 Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

The coordinated activity of a parent and its wholly owned subsidiary must be viewed as that of a single enterprise for purposes of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Vertical Restraints > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Scope > General Overview

HN5 Clayton Act, Claims

Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, forbids an agreement to fix maximum resale prices.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Standing > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

HN6 Private Actions, Standing

The requirement under § 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 15, that an injury result from an action that the antitrust laws forbid means the injury itself must be a special "antitrust injury," which is to say that it must amount to the type of harm that the antitrust laws were intended to prevent and must flow from that which makes the defendants' acts unlawful.

Counsel: Anne M. Rodgers with whom William R. Pakalka, Fulbright & Jaworski, L.L.P., Enrique J. Mendoza Mendez, Law Offices of Enrique J. Mendoza Mendez, Randall A. Hopkins, Randall A. Hopkins, P.C., Dahr Jamail, Jamail & Kolius, Thomas R. McDade, and McDade & Fogler, L.L.P., were on brief and reply brief for appellant.

Irving Scher and Manuel A. Guzman with whom Bruce A. Colbath, Weil, Gotshal & Manges and McConnell Valdes were on brief for appellees.

Judges: Before Breyer, Chief Judge, Coffin, Senior Circuit Judge, and Boudin, Circuit Judge.

Opinion by: BREYER

Opinion

[*747] BREYER, Chief Judge. This appeal raises two issues of antitrust law. First, do a firm's wholly owned subsidiary and the firm itself amount to a "single seller" under the Robinson-Patman Act? 15 U.S.C. § 13. Second, can a retailer's lost profit, brought about by a maximum resale price fixing agreement between that retailer and its supplier, amount to an "antitrust injury," thereby giving that retailer "standing" to obtain treble damages? Atlantic Richfield Co. v. USA Petroleum Co. ("ARCO"), 495 U.S. 328, 109 L. Ed. 2d 333, 110 S. Ct. 1884 (1990); [2] Albrecht v. Herald Co., 390 U.S. 145, 19 L. Ed. 2d 998, 88 S. Ct. 869 (1968). We answer both these questions in the affirmative. Because the district court's dismissal of the plaintiff's complaint rested upon negative answers to the same questions, we set its dismissal aside.

I

Background

From 1981 through 1990, Caribe BMW, Inc. ("Caribe"), through contracts with the German BMW manufacturer, Bayerische Motoren Werke Aktiengesellschaft ("BMW AG"), bought BMW automobiles from BMW AG in Germany, imported them into Puerto Rico, and sold them at retail. In February 1991, Caribe (the appellant here) brought this lawsuit against (the appellees) BMW AG and BMW's wholly owned North American subsidiary, BMW of North America, Inc. ("BMW NA"). Caribe's complaint (actually, its second amended complaint), with commendable simplicity, listed four counts.

[*748] Count I charged a violation of the Robinson-Patman Act. 15 U.S.C. § 13. It said that BMW AG sold cars to BMW NA, which resold those cars to other retailers who competed with Caribe, at prices lower than, or on terms more favorable than, those [3] at which BMW AG sold similar cars to Caribe. Count II charged a violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act. 15 U.S.C. § 1. It said that BMW AG had set maximum resale prices for the cars that it sold to Caribe by "threatening to terminate Caribe's contracts" unless Caribe would agree, in effect, to maintain low resale prices. Count III charged "breach of contract." It listed various ways in which BMW AG had allegedly broken its word. Count IV charged that, in terminating its contract with Caribe, BMW AG had violated Puerto Rico's Dealers' Contracts Act, more familiarly known as Act 75. P.R. Laws Ann. tit. 10, § 278 et seq.

The district court dismissed the complaint for two related reasons. First, it found that the complaint's two antitrust counts "failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Second, it noted that a forum selection clause in the contracts between Caribe and BMW AG provided for "exclusive jurisdiction" in "Germany" to resolve "disputes" about the "termination of" or "rights and duties arising out of" the agreement. It found this clause applicable to the remaining (non-antitrust) claims, and it dismissed [4] those claims "for improper venue" or, in the alternative, "on grounds of forum non conveniens." Caribe BMW, Inc. v. Bayerische Motoren Werke Aktiengesellschaft, 821 F. Supp. 802 (D.P.R. 1993). Caribe appeals.

HN1 When reviewing the dismissal of the antitrust claims we take the facts basically as stated in the complaint and make reasonable inferences that will help the plaintiff. Garita Hotel Ltd. Partnership v. Ponce Fed. Bank, F.S.B., 958 F.2d 15, 17 (1st Cir. 1992). After examining those facts, in light of the relevant law, we conclude that the district court should not have dismissed the antitrust claims. And, that conclusion requires the district court to reexamine dismissal of the other claims as well.

II

The Robinson-Patman Act Claim

HN2 [↑] The Robinson-Patman Act forbids "any person" to discriminate in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality . . . where the effect of such discrimination may be . . . to injure . . . competition with any person who . . . grants . . . the . . . discrimination, or with [that granting person's] customers . . .

15 U.S.C. § 13 [5] (a). Caribe's complaint alleges most of the essentials of a violation. It says that a "person" has "discriminated in price between different purchasers" (namely, Caribe and other retailers in competition with Caribe) of cars, with the effect that "competition with" that person's "customer" (namely, Caribe) is "injured." See FTC v. Morton Salt Co., 334 U.S. 37, 45, 92 L. Ed. 1196, 68 S. Ct. 822 \(1948\). But, it embodies an ambiguity in respect to the "person" who did the discriminating. It says that BMW AG sold cars directly to Caribe, which resold them at retail. It then says that BMW NA sold cars to other retailers, who compete with Caribe, at lower prices than BMW AG sold its cars to Caribe. At this point, there appear to be two "persons" selling BMWs to retailers, namely, BMW AG (selling them to Caribe) and BMW NA (selling them to Caribe's competitors). The complaint adds, however, that BMW NA is the wholly owned subsidiary of BMW AG. Thus, we must face the legal question of whether or not this last mentioned fact is sufficient to make of the two separately incorporated companies a single [6] "person" for Robinson-Patman Act purposes. If so, the complaint properly alleges that a single "person" has sold similar goods at two different prices (allegedly with the required statutory effect) . If not, there may be no "person" who has "discriminated." See id. ("discrimination" requires at least two sales by a single person at different prices to different customers in competition with each other); see also Phillip Areeda & Louis Kaplow, Antitrust Analysis P 601(c) (4th ed. 1988); 3 Earl W. Kintner & Joseph P. Bauer, Federal Antitrust Law § 21.11, at 192-93 (1983).

[*749] So far, when courts have faced this question -- HN3 [↑] whether or not a firm and its subsidiary amount to a single "person" (or a "single seller") -- they have answered it by examining the extent of common ownership and the degree of control over pricing and distribution policies that the one exercises over the other. See Acme Refrigeration of Baton Rouge, Inc. v. Whirlpool Corp., 785 F.2d 1240, 1243 (5th Cir.) (100% ownership, without control, not enough to create a "single seller"), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 848, 93 L. Ed. 2d 108, 107 S. Ct. 171 (1986); [7] Island Tobacco Co. v. R.J. Reynolds Indus., Inc., 513 F. Supp. 726, 734 \(D. Haw. 1981\) (same); Baim & Blank, Inc., v. Philco Corp., 148 F. Supp. 541, 543-44 \(E.D.N.Y. 1957\) (same); Massachusetts Brewers Ass'n v. P. Ballantine & Sons Co., 129 F. Supp. 736, 739 \(D. Mass. 1955\) (same); see also Kintner & Bauer, supra, § 21.16 at 212. In this case, the extent of ownership is 100%; Caribe's complaint alleges nothing about actual control. Thus, we must ask whether 100% ownership, by itself, amounts to a sufficient allegation that the "firm plus subsidiary" are a single Robinson-Patman Act "person." We conclude, for reasons that we shall now explain, that it does.

For purposes of clarity, we shall refer in our explanation to hypothetical entities whom we shall call 1) the Manufacturer (M), 2) its wholly owned Distributor (D), 3) the Retailer (R1) who buys from D, and 4) the Direct Buying Retailer (DBR), who buys directly from M and who resells in competition with R1. The distribution arrangement looks like the following:

[SEE DIAGRAM IN ORIGINAL]

In our case, BMW AG holds [8] the position of M; BMW NA, the position of D; Caribe, the position of DBR; and Caribe's unspecified retail competitors, the position of R1. The legal question, put in terms of the diagram, is whether or not M's 100% ownership of D makes M and D, together, a "single seller," say "MD." If so, a single "person" (allegedly) "discriminates" in price.

We now return to the reasons for our affirmative answer, which are three. First, in 1984, after many of the above-cited "single seller" cases were decided, the Supreme Court decided Copperweld Corp. v. Independence Tube Corp., 467 U.S. 752, 81 L. Ed. 2d 628, 104 S. Ct. 2731 \(1984\). The Court there considered the scope of Sherman Act § 1's word "conspiracy." It held that the word did not cover an agreement between a wholly owned subsidiary and its parent, because a wholly owned subsidiary could not "conspire" with the parent. That, the Court said, is because they have a complete unity of interest. Their objectives are common, not disparate; their general corporate actions are guided or determined not by two separate corporate consciousnesses, but one. . . . [And] they share [9] a common purpose whether or not the parent keeps a tight rein over the subsidiary

Id. at 771. The Court added that a "corporation has complete power to maintain" a portion of the enterprise either in the form of an unincorporated division, or in the form of a separately incorporated subsidiary. But, the economic, legal, or other considerations that lead corporate management to choose one structure over the other are not relevant to whether the enterprise's conduct seriously threatens competition.

Id. at 772. For these reasons, the Court held,

HN4[] the coordinated activity of a parent and its wholly owned subsidiary must be viewed as that of a single enterprise for purposes of § 1 of the Sherman Act.

Id. at 771.

Although the Court spoke of Sherman Act § 1 and of "coordinated activity," its reasoning applies here. See Areeda & Kaplow, supra, P 601(c), at 929. In essence, the Court saw an identity of economic interest between parent and wholly owned subsidiary [*750] that, considered [10] in terms of the economically oriented antitrust laws, warrants regarding them as one. See generally 7 Phillip E. Areeda, Antitrust Law P 1464 (1986). Any claimed instance of truly "independent," owner-hostile, subsidiary decisionmaking would meet with the skeptical question, "But, if the subsidiary acts contrary to its parent's economic interest, why does the parent not replace the subsidiary's management?" Given the strength of that joint economic interest, we do not see how a case-specific judicial examination of "actual" parental control would help achieve any significant antitrust objective. Those instances in which a wholly owned subsidiary would intend to act contrary to the economic interests of its owner are likely few and far between, and, if they ever exist, would seem hard to prove. Cf. Areeda & Kaplow, supra, P 215.

Second, there does not seem to be any special Robinson-Patman Act purpose that a case-specific "control" inquiry would further. To the contrary, one would not want a seller to be able to defeat the statute's clear objectives by transforming unlawful, into lawful, price discrimination through the creation of a separately incorporated subsidiary [11] "distributor" that sells to the disfavored customers, whether or not the parent retained "control" over the pricing decisions of the subsidiary. Suppose, for example, that M violates the Act by selling to one retailer (DBR) at $ 10 and another competing retailer (R1) at $ 12. M should not be able to avoid the law simply by creating a wholly owned, but "independent" D, to whom it sells at $ 10, knowing that "independent" D will (say, for profit-maximizing reasons) "independently" resell to R1 at the same $ 12 price.

We are aware that this area of the law is filled with difficulty. For example, should Robinson-Patman Act liability attach in the example just given if (contrary to our assumption) the wholly owned distributor, D, really fulfills an important distribution function, necessary to supply R1, but not needed in the case of sales to DBR, such that DBR "ought" to receive a lower price? Or, suppose M (perhaps as here) sets a higher price to direct buyers in order to discourage direct sales and thereby to encourage the creation of an independent distribution network? These problems arise, however, in part, because it is difficult to reconcile the Robinson-Patman Act's strictures [12] with traditional practices of corporations that seem to make sense from a practical viewpoint. See, e.g., Texaco Inc. v. Hasbrouck, 496 U.S. 543, 559-62, 110 L. Ed. 2d 492, 110 S. Ct. 2535 (1990); Kintner & Bauer, supra, § 22.14; James F. Rill, Availability and Functional Discounts Justifying Discriminatory Pricing, 53 Antitrust L.J. 929 (1985). And the complexity of Robinson-Patman Act law has increased as courts have tried to introduce a degree of flexibility into the Act as applied. See, e.g., Kintner & Bauer, supra, § 25.7, at 454-460 (discussing the availability defense); Hasbrouck, 496 U.S. at 561 (discussing functional discounts); 15 U.S.C. § 13\(a\) (cost justification defense); see also Rill, supra.

For present purposes, however, we need only note that these same problems exist, in one form or another, regardless of our holding in this case. That is to say, a contrary holding would nonetheless produce the same problems wherever M does "control" the pricing policies [13] of its wholly-owned subsidiary D (i.e., in most cases). And, in the remaining cases (where wholly-owned D is somehow nonetheless "independent"), various other, related, Robinson-Patman Act problems would often arise if DBR complained about differences in price between M's price to D and M's price to DBR. See pp. 12-14, infra. Thus, we find nothing special in the Robinson-Patman Act context that militates against Copperweld's reasoning or result.

Third, applying Copperweld avoids a potential anomaly. A majority of courts, using a Copperweld-type analysis, have held that a firm M's sale of a good to a wholly owned subsidiary D is not a "sale" for Robinson-Patman Act purposes; rather, it is simply a transfer; and that is so whether D is, or D is not, somehow "independent" in reality. See City of Mt. Pleasant v. Associated Elec. Coop., Inc., 838 F.2d 268, 278 (8th Cir. 1988); Russ' Kwik Car Wash, Inc. v. Marathon Petroleum Co., 772 F.2d 214, 221 (6th Cir. 1985) (per curiam) (quoting Copperweld, [751] 467 U.S. at 772 n.18); O'Byrne v. Cheker Oil Co., 727 F.2d 159, 164 (7th Cir. 1984); [14] Security Tire & Rubber Co. v. Gates Rubber Co., 598 F.2d 962, 965-67 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 942, 62 L. Ed. 2d 309, 100 S. Ct. 298 (1979). These holdings mean that D, the transferee, is not a "purchaser" from M, and, for that reason, M does not violate the Act even if he sells the same good to a direct buying retailer (DBR), or even a direct competitor of D, at a higher price than the price at which he "transfers" the good to D. Our holding today means that when the wholly-owned subsidiary D resells the good to R1, it must do so at a "nondiscriminatory" price, i.e., at a price that would be permissible under the Act had D's sale to R1 been made by M. Thus, if M sells to DBR at 14, D cannot sell to R1 for less than 14 (assuming, of course, that all other Robinson-Patman Act liability conditions are met and no defenses are available).

But, suppose we were to hold the contrary. Suppose that we were to hold that a wholly-owned subsidiary D and its owner M were not a "single seller" where D was somehow nonetheless "independent." Then, an anomalous difficulty might well prevent [15] DBR from bringing an action where M "transfers" to D at 10, D resells to R1 at 12, but M insists on charging DBR 14 (i.e., approximately the allegations before us). The doctrine just mentioned -- in effect finding that M and D are a single entity for purposes of the transfer between them -- would prevent DBR from complaining about the effect of the M-D "transfer." Cf. Hasbrouck, 496 U.S. at 569-71. At the same time, our (imagined) holding (the opposite of our actual holding) that M and D were not a single entity for purposes of D's sale to R1 would likely prevent DBR from complaining about the effect of that sale because of its inability to find a single "person" who discriminated (because M does not sell to R1, while D does not sell to DBR, see pp. 12-13, supra).

Perhaps one could somehow avoid this anomaly in other ways, but it seems undesirable to invent epicycles in an already too complex area of the law. It is simpler to hold in parallel fashion that ownership alone makes a "single seller" of a firm and its wholly owned distributor, just as ownership alone eliminates the possibility of a Robinson-Patman Act [16] "sale" between them.

We therefore find it appropriate to apply Copperweld's reasoning outside Sherman Act § 1. See, e.g., City of Mt. Pleasant, 838 F.2d at 278; Russ' Kwik Car Wash, 772 F.2d at 221; cf. United States v. Waste Management, Inc., 743 F.2d 976, 979 (2d Cir. 1984) (attributing subsidiary's activity to parent for purposes of Clayton Act § 7). We hold that BMW AG's ownership of BMW NA makes of those two entities, for Robinson-Patman Act purposes, a single seller.

We now turn to a second, independent reason the district court gave for concluding that the complaint did not adequately state a Robinson-Patman Act claim. The court correctly noted that if a seller makes its favorable prices and terms available to an otherwise disfavored customer, that customer has no legal right to complain. See, e.g., Bouldis v. U.S. Suzuki Motor Corp., 711 F.2d 1319, 1326, 1328-29 (6th Cir. 1983) (discussing availability defenses to §§ 2(a), 2(d), and 2(e)); Shreve Equip., Inc. v. Clay Equip. Corp., 650 F.2d 101, 105-06 (6th [17] Cir.) (discussing availability under § 2(a)), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 897, 70 L. Ed. 2d 213, 102 S. Ct. 397 (1981); Edward J. Sweeney & Sons, Inc. v. Texaco, Inc., 637 F.2d 105, 120-21 (3d Cir. 1980) (same), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 911, 68 L. Ed. 2d 300, 101 S. Ct. 1981 (1981); see also Kintner & Bauer, supra, § 25.7. The district court then concluded that Caribe, in a portion of its complaint, in effect conceded that BMW made its favorable prices and terms available to Caribe. That complaint portion says that in 1987

despite Caribe's remarkable success, BMW attempted to convert Caribe from being an importer-retailer purchasing directly from the factory to being a mere retail dealer purchasing from BMW N.A.

We do not believe, however, that one can draw from this statement the "availability" concession that the district court found. The complaint also says that [*752] unbeknownst to Caribe, and beginning by at least 1987, BMW began lowering its prices for BMWs sold to Caribe's competitors and offering those [*18] competitors other economic advantages while maintaining its prices to Caribe at a discriminatorily high level and not making the other economic advantages available to Caribe on proportionately equal terms.

The emphasized language says that Caribe did not know that its competitors were receiving favored treatment. And, we do not see how ordinarily one could say that a seller has made favored treatment "available" to a disfavored customer if the disfavored customer does not know about the favored treatment. See, e.g., Alterman Foods, Inc. v. FTC, 497 F.2d 993, 1001 (5th Cir. 1974); Mueller Co. v. FTC, 323 F.2d 44, 46-47 (7th Cir. 1963), cert. denied, 377 U.S. 923, 12 L. Ed. 2d 215, 84 S. Ct. 1219 (1964); Century Hardware Corp. v. Acme United Corp., 467 F. Supp. 350, 355-56 (E.D. Wis. 1979).

Caribe also argues that the favored treatment, as a practical matter, was not "available" because BMW AG insisted that it give up various advantages of its importer's contract in order to obtain it. We cannot tell from the complaint, [*19] however, just what those advantages were and how they related to the practical "availability" of the favorable treatment given other retailers. Thus, we cannot say, at this time, whether or not Caribe will be able to prove that the favorable price and terms, as a practical matter, were not available. At this stage, however, Caribe has sufficiently alleged that they were not.

Our conclusion is that Caribe's complaint states a valid Robinson-Patman Act claim, in respect to price discrimination under Robinson-Patman Act § 2(a), and for similar reasons, under the Robinson-Patman Act sections that deal with payments for services, furnishing services, and brokerage payments. 15 U.S.C. § 13\(b\), \(d\)-\(e\). Although Caribe's pleadings regarding these other Robinson-Patman Act sections are rather sparse, they are sufficient to give BMW AG and BMW NA notice of the substance of Caribe's complaint. Caribe also claimed that BMW NA violated § 2(f), which forbids knowingly inducing or receiving a discrimination in price. 15 U.S.C. § 13\(f\). In light of our holding that BMW NA is not a separate "person," however, that portion of the [*20] complaint must be dismissed.

III

The Sherman Act

Count Two of the Complaint says that

BMW has for years imposed as a secret condition of Caribe's contracts an agreement or understanding that Caribe charge its customers prices set by BMW. . . . More specifically, BMW threatened to terminate Caribe's contracts unless Caribe agreed not to raise its margins (i.e., and thus its retail prices) above levels fixed and set by BMW, and Caribe reluctantly agreed.

This complaint sets forth a claim that BMW and Caribe agreed to fix "maximum" resale prices. The Supreme Court has held that Sherman Act § 1 HN5 forbids this kind of agreement. See Albrecht v. Herald Co., 390 U.S. 145, 19 L. Ed. 2d 998, 88 S. Ct. 869 (1968). The complaint also alleges that the "agreement caused Caribe to lose additional profits." And, Clayton Act § 4 permits any "person" whose "business" is injured by "reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws" to recover treble damages. 15 U.S.C. § 15.

The district court nonetheless dismissed the complaint in light of Clayton Act § 4's requirement that the injury must [*21] result from an action that the antitrust laws forbid. The courts have held that HN6 this requirement means the injury itself must be a special "antitrust injury," which is to say that it must amount to "the type" of harm "the antitrust laws were intended to prevent," and it must flow "from that which makes [the] defendants' acts unlawful." Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 489, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701, 97 S. Ct. 690 (1977) (emphasis added). The district court thought that Caribe's lost profits were not the "type" of harm that the antimaximum-resale-price-fixing rule seeks to prevent. And, it rested that conclusion upon its reading of a Supreme Court case, *Atlantic Richfield Co. v. [753] USA Petroleum Co. ("ARCO"), 495 U.S. 328, 109 L. Ed. 2d 333, 110 S. Ct. 1884 \(1990\).

As the district court pointed out, in ARCO the Supreme Court considered the anticompetitive possibilities that had earlier led the Court to find maximum resale price agreements unlawful. The Supreme Court referred to three. First, the "maximum" resale price agreement [\[22\]](#) might be, in reality, a disguised "minimum" resale price agreement, in which case the agreement would threaten the very kinds of harm that led the Court, in Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. John D. Park & Sons Co., 220 U.S. 373, 55 L. Ed. 502, 31 S. Ct. 376 \(1911\), to find minimum resale price agreements unlawful per se. ARCO, 495 U.S. at 336. Second, a maximum resale price agreement might prevent a dealer from providing "services and conveniences" that customers would want to the point that the customers would accept (if necessary) the price increases needed to provide them. Id. at 335-36. If so, a supplier's judgment about the proper resale price (imposed through the supplier's maximum resale price agreement) would prevent consumers from obtaining what they want (higher quality product) from retailers who would like to supply it. Id. Third, a "maximum resale price agreement" might "channel distribution through a few large or specifically advantaged dealers," the only ones able to earn a profit at [\[23\]](#) the mandated, low resale price. Id. at 336 (quoting Albrecht, 390 U.S. at 153).

The Supreme Court went on to hold that the ARCO plaintiffs had not suffered "antitrust injury." But it noted, and we note, that, unlike Caribe, the ARCO plaintiffs were not dealers who themselves had entered into (or been forced to enter into) such agreements; rather they were the competitors of those dealers. They had claimed that the agreements had helped the ARCO dealers (who entered into the agreements) obtain more sales, thereby leaving them, the competitors of the ARCO dealers, with fewer sales for themselves. The Supreme Court held that, whatever else might be wrong with the plaintiffs' assertion, it did not allege harm of the type that Albrecht sought to prevent. That kind of harm would have taken the form of fewer ARCO dealers, or fewer sales for the dealers who had entered into the agreements (because those customers wanting higher prices and extra services could not get them), not more ARCO dealer sales. The Supreme Court then wrote that [\[24\]](#) the plaintiffs, being rival dealers, were benefited rather than harmed if [ARCO's] pricing policies restricted ARCO sales to a few large dealers or prevented [ARCO's] dealers from offering services desired by consumers such as credit card sales.

Id. at 336-37. The Court added that if an agreement lowers prices but maintains them above predatory levels, the business lost by rivals cannot be viewed as an "anticompetitive" consequence of the claimed violation.

Id. at 337 (emphasis added).

In this case, Caribe is not in the same position as the ARCO plaintiffs, for Caribe is the very firm that the alleged maximum resale price fixing agreement forced to keep its price below the level it preferred to set. At least in theory, if customers would have preferred a higher price and consequently better product quality or greater service, the agreement forced Caribe to provide less of what they wanted; the agreement thereby might have led to lower Caribe profits. And, at least in theory, if the agreement helped other, larger BMW dealers, Caribe is the firm that would have suffered. Thus, Caribe's complaint here alleges antitrust harm of the "type" that [\[25\]](#) Clayton Act § 4 authorizes it to assert. ARCO supports, it does not deny, Caribe's standing.

We recognize that Albrecht has proved a controversial case. That is, in part, because it seems to outlaw not only anticompetitive uses of maximum price fixing, but also procompetitive uses as well, namely, use of a maximum resale price agreement that protects consumers from the exercise of a retailer's monopoly power. See, e.g., 8 Phillip E. Areeda Antitrust Law § 1636 (1989). And insofar as Caribe's claim of "lost profits" refers to "losses" that occurred because the agreement prevented Caribe from raising prices above the competitive level, it is at [\[*754\]](#) least arguable that no "antitrust injury" occurred. See id. § 1640; Phillip E. Areeda, Antitrust Law § 340.3b, at 509-510 (Supp. 1993). But, at this stage of the proceeding, we must view Caribe's complaint in a favorable, not an unfavorable, light. We therefore read the complaint as implying that the agreement cost Caribe profits because it inhibited Caribe from selling to those potential BMW customers who would have preferred higher quality service, even if that meant somewhat higher Caribe prices.

We recognize that [26] one might also wonder, as did the district court, how Caribe could have been injured both by a Robinson-Patman Act violation and by a maximum resale price agreement. How could it have suffered lost customers attracted by the lower prices of retailers who bought cheaply from BMW NA and also have suffered lost profits because it could not increase its prices? One might answer this question, however, by inferring from the complaint that Caribe has two different kinds of customers. Some want to pay the lowest possible prices; others would pay more to receive special services that Caribe would offer only if it could charge higher prices. At least in principle, possibilities of this sort are not outlandish. And, it seems to us that Caribe is entitled to have a court draw these inferences at this complaint stage of the proceeding. Hospital Bldg. Co. v. Trustees of Rex Hospital, 425 U.S. 738, 746, 48 L. Ed. 2d 338, 96 S. Ct. 1848 (1976); Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46, 2 L. Ed. 2d 80, 78 S. Ct. 99 (1957); Tri-State Rubbish, Inc. v. Waste Management, Inc., 998 F.2d 1073, 1081 (1st Cir. 1993). [27]

We conclude that the district court should not have dismissed count II of the complaint.

IV

Puerto Rico Antitrust Claims

Caribe asserted claims under Puerto Rico's antitrust law that parallel its federal antitrust claims. As the parties seem to agree, courts interpret Puerto Rico's laws as essentially embodying the jurisprudence relevant to the parallel federal law. For that reason we reinstate the Commonwealth antitrust claims to the same extent that we have reinstated the federal claims. Cf. R.W. Int'l Corp. v. Welch Food, Inc., No. 93-1704, slip op. at 19-25 (1st Cir. Jan. 20, 1994); Mitsubishi Motors Corp. v. Soler Chrysler-Plymouth, 723 F.2d 155, 161 (1st Cir. 1983), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, on other grounds, 473 U.S. 614 (1985).

V

The Contract Claims and the Act 75 Claim

Our antitrust count decisions require the district court to reconsider its remaining dismissals, of Caribe's breach of contact claims and its Act 75 claim. The district court dismissed those counts because of a forum selection clause in the Caribe contracts, which says the exclusive jurisdiction for disputes concerning [28] the . . . termination of this agreement as well as all and any rights and duties arising out of this agreement is . . . Germany.

The court did not decide, however, whether or not this clause covers antitrust counts (for it had dismissed those counts for failure to state a valid claim). We cannot tell from the wording of the clause alone whether it does, or does not, cover antitrust claims -- whether such claims "concern" the "termination" of, or "rights and duties arising out of," the "agreement." And, it seems to us that the parties should have an opportunity to pursue that question further in the district court. Compare Mitsubishi Motors, 723 F.2d at 159-61 (analyzing numerous provisions in contract to determine intended scope of a forum selection clause) with Bense v. Interstate Battery Sys. of Am., Inc., 683 F.2d 718, 720 (2d Cir. 1982) (broadly worded forum selection clause includes antitrust claims).

The answer to this question, depending upon what it is, might add strength to (or weaken) plaintiff's argument that the forum selection clause cannot apply to the Act 75 claim. It also could affect the arguments [29] about the comparative "convenience" of Puerto Rico for a trial on the contract and Act 75 claims. Were it to turn out, for example, that an antitrust trial had to take place anyway in Puerto Rico, the comparative [*755] balance of conveniences might well change.

We do not mean to express any view, however, on the merits of these or other arguments (such as jurisdictional arguments) that the parties may make as the case proceeds further. We simply hold that the district court should not have dismissed the antitrust claims in the complaint. And, that holding, in turn, requires the court to reconsider its other dismissals.

The judgment of the district court is vacated and the case is remanded for further proceedings.

So ordered.

End of Document

Bell Atl. Business Sys. Servs. v. Hitachi Data Sys. Corp.

United States District Court for the Northern District of California

March 29, 1994, Decided ; March 29, 1994, Filed

Case No. C 93-20079 JW

Reporter

849 F. Supp. 702 *; 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5302 ; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,580; 94 Daily Journal DAR 6711

BELL ATLANTIC BUSINESS SYSTEMS SERVICES, Plaintiff, v. HITACHI DATA SYSTEMS CORPORATION, HITACHI AMERICA, LTD., and HITACHI LTD., Defendants.

Core Terms

subsidiary, conspire, wholly-owned, ego, summary judgment motion, antitrust, Sherman Act, conspiracy, allegations, purposes, restraint of trade, pleadings, reasons, parent corporation, unity of interest, legal incapacity, matter of law, entities

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > Pleading & Practice > Motion Practice > Content & Form

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Pretrial Judgments > Judgment on Pleadings

HN1 [Motion Practice, Content & Form]

Courts generally may not consider matters outside the pleadings to decide a motion to dismiss pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\). If parties present matters outside the pleadings, and the court is willing to consider those matters, the court should convert the motion to a motion for summary judgment. This standard also applies to motions for judgment on the pleadings.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Motions for Summary Judgment > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Appropriateness

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

849 F. Supp. 702, *702L^A1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5302, 5302

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Legal Entitlement

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Materiality of Facts

HN2 Summary Judgment, Entitlement as Matter of Law

Summary judgment is appropriate where there is no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(c\). To survive a motion for summary judgment, the non-moving party must show that the fact in contention is material and that it might affect the outcome of the suit under governing law. The non-moving party must also demonstrate that the factual dispute is genuine, or that the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could not find for the moving party.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN3 Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

See 15 U.S.C.S. § 1.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Penalties

Mergers & Acquisitions Law > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN4 Sherman Act, Penalties

Under the Copperweld rule, a parent and its wholly-owned subsidiary are legally incapable of conspiring with each other for purposes of § 1 of the Sherman Act (Act), codified at 15 U.S.C.S. § 1. A parent corporation and a wholly-owned subsidiary have a complete unity of interest because their acts do not bring together economic power that previously pursued divergent goals or separate interests. A parent corporation and its wholly-owned subsidiaries are the same entities for antitrust purposes and their coordinated activity must be viewed as that of a single enterprise for the purposes of § 1 of the Act.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Mergers & Acquisitions Law > General Overview

HN5 Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

The Copperweld rationale applies in situations between a parent corporation and a less than wholly-owned subsidiary. Parent corporations and wholly-owned subsidiaries share a common purpose whether or not the parent keeps a tight rein over the subsidiary; the parent may assert full control at any moment if the subsidiary fails to act in the parent's best interests. The entity with legal control effectively dictates the policies and direction of its subsidiary. Anytime the subsidiary ceases to act in the best interest of the parent, the parent can assert full control over the subsidiary. In this respect, the parent and subsidiary act with a unity of interest.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > ... > Corporate Finance > Initial Capitalization & Stock Subscriptions > Classes of Stock

Mergers & Acquisitions Law > General Overview

HN6 [down] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

A parent and a wholly-owned subsidiary are considered the "same entity" for antitrust purposes because the parent has the power to exercise full control over its subsidiary. For the same reasons, a parent and a subsidiary over which the parent has legal control cannot conspire to restrain trade. They share a unity of interest and common corporate consciousness because they work toward the same goal.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Mergers & Acquisitions Law > General Overview

HN7 [down] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Two wholly-owned subsidiaries of the same parent are legally incapable of conspiring with each other in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act, codified at 15 U.S.C.S. § 1.

Business & Corporate Law > ... > Shareholder Duties & Liabilities > Piercing the Corporate Veil > General Overview

Torts > Vicarious Liability > Corporations > General Overview

HN8 [down] Shareholder Duties & Liabilities, Piercing the Corporate Veil

Courts will "pierce the corporate veil" in situations where evidence exists that the subsidiary corporation is a "mere instrumentality" of the parent corporation, or when a parent corporation creates the subsidiary to shield it from liability rather than for reasons of business efficiency.

Business & Corporate Law > ... > Piercing the Corporate Veil > Alter Ego > General Overview

Torts > Vicarious Liability > Corporations > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > ... > Shareholder Duties & Liabilities > Piercing the Corporate Veil > General Overview

HN9 [down] Piercing the Corporate Veil, Alter Ego

In California, the necessary elements of an alter ego claim are: 1) unity of interest and ownership such that the separate personalities of the two corporations no longer exist; and 2) that an inequitable result will occur if the corporate veil is not pierced and the challenged conduct is treated as that of the subsidiary alone. A parent is not liable for the wrongful acts of its subsidiary simply because the parent wholly-owns the subsidiary.

Counsel: [\[1\]](#) For Plaintiff: Ronald S. Katz, Janet S. Arnold, COUDERT BROTHERS, San Francisco, CA.

For Defendants: Andrew E. Paris, KIRKLAND & ELLIS, Los Angeles, CA. Nathan Lane III, GRAHAM & JAMES, San Francisco, CA.

Judges: WARE

Opinion by: JAMES WARE

Opinion

[*704] ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANTS' MOTIONS FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Defendants Hitachi America Ltd. ("Hitachi America") and Hitachi, Ltd. ("Hitachi") move to dismiss Plaintiff's, Bell Atlantic Business Systems Services ("Bell Atlantic"), First Amended Complaint ("Complaint") pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12\(b\)\(6\). Defendant Hitachi Data Systems ("Hitachi Data") moves for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Federal Rule Civil Procedure 12\(c\) on Count I of the Complaint, which alleges conspiracy under § 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act. 15 U.S.C. § 1.

HN1 [↑] Courts generally may not consider matters outside the pleadings to decide a motion to dismiss pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12\(b\)\(6\). If parties present matters outside the pleadings, and the court is willing to consider those matters, the court should convert the motion to a motion for summary judgment. Bonilla v. Oakland Scavenger Co., 697 F.2d 1297 (9th Cir. 1982). [2] Similarly, the above standard applies to motions for judgment on the pleadings. Slevin v. Pedersen Assoc., Inc., 540 F. Supp. 437 (S.D.N.Y. 1982). The parties before the Court have gone beyond the "four corners" of the pleadings by submitting declarations and additional facts.

Accordingly, the Court will consider Defendants' motions as motions for summary judgment. For the reasons set forth below, the Court hereby GRANTS Defendants' motions for summary judgment with respect to the Count I conspiracy charge. Additionally, the Court DENIES Defendants Hitachi's and Hitachi America's motions for summary judgment with respect to Plaintiff's remaining claims, including Plaintiff's alter ego allegations.

BACKGROUND

Bell Atlantic is an independent service organization ("ISO") that services high technology computer equipment manufactured by other companies. Bell Atlantic claims that Hitachi, Hitachi Data and Hitachi America ("Defendants") conspired and engaged in anticompetitive conduct to keep Bell Atlantic out of the market of servicing equipment manufactured and sold by Defendants.

Hitachi, a Japanese corporation, manufactures direct access storage devices [3] ("Product") and exports them to Hitachi America. Hitachi America sells Product to Hitachi [*705] Data. Hitachi Data sells Product and competes with Bell Atlantic in the Hitachi Product service market. Although not directly pleaded in the complaint, it is undisputed that Hitachi America is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Hitachi and Hitachi Data is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Hitachi Data Holding Company, which is 80% owned by Hitachi. Def. Hitachi America's P. & A. at 2.

Bell Atlantic alleges that Hitachi, Hitachi America and Hitachi Data contracted with one another to unreasonably restrain trade and prevent competition with respect to servicing older Hitachi Product in the United States. Moreover, Defendants' conduct allegedly prevents companies such as Bell Atlantic from entering the market to service new Hitachi Product. Bell Atlantic claims that Defendants' agreements violate antitrust laws because they provide that certain products not be sold and certain information not be disclosed to third parties. Bell Atlantic alleges these restrictions prevent it from obtaining parts and materials necessary to service the Product.

LEGAL STANDARD

HN2[] Summary judgment is appropriate where there is [4] no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56\(c\). To survive a motion for summary judgment, the non-moving party must show that the fact in contention is material and that it might affect the outcome of the suit under governing law. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248-49, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 106 S. Ct. 2505 \(1986\). Additionally, the non-moving party must demonstrate that the factual dispute is genuine, i.e., the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could not find for the moving party. Id.

DISCUSSION

I. Count I: Conspiracy To Restrain Trade in Violation of Sherman Act § 1

A. Hitachi-parent and Hitachi America-wholly-owned subsidiary

HN3[] Section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act provides that "every contract, combination . . . or conspiracy, in restraint of trade . . . is hereby declared to be illegal." 15 U.S.C. § 1. In Copperweld Corp. v. Independence Tube Corp., 467 U.S. 752, 768-69, 81 L. Ed. 2d 628, 104 S. Ct. 2731 \(1984\), the United [5] States Supreme Court noted that § 1 targets concerted activity as opposed to unilateral activity because, "concerted activity is inherently fraught with anticompetitive risk. It deprives the marketplace of the independent center of decisionmaking that competition assumes and demands. In any conspiracy, two or more entities that previously pursued their own interests separately are combining to act as one for their common benefit."

Moreover, the Court held that HN4[] a parent and its wholly-owned subsidiary are legally incapable of conspiring with each other for purposes of § 1 of the Sherman Act. Copperweld, 467 U.S. at 779. The rationale behind this rule is that a parent corporation and a wholly-owned subsidiary have a "complete unity of interest" because their acts do not bring together economic power that previously pursued divergent goals or separate interests. Id. at 771. Consequently, a parent corporation and its wholly-owned subsidiaries are the same entities for antitrust purposes and their coordinated activity "must be viewed as that of a single enterprise for [6] the purposes of § 1 of the Sherman Act." Id. To hold otherwise, reasoned the Court, would penalize corporations for choosing to organize their operations into subsidiaries which creates efficiency and benefits customers. Id. at 773-74.

It is undisputed that Hitachi wholly-owns Hitachi America. Accordingly, as a matter of law, Hitachi and Hitachi America cannot conspire in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act.

B. Hitachi-parent and Hitachi Data-80% owned subsidiary Copperweld dealt directly with the relationship between a parent corporation and a wholly-owned subsidiary. Courts have found that HN5[] the Copperweld rationale also applies in situations between a parent corporation and a less than wholly-owned subsidiary. The [*706] Court in Copperweld reasoned that parent corporations and wholly-owned subsidiaries "share a common purpose whether or not the parent keeps a tight rein over the subsidiary; the parent may assert full control at any moment if the subsidiary fails to act in the parent's best interests." Copperweld, 467 U.S. at 771-72. In other words, [7] the entity with legal control effectively dictates the policies and direction of its subsidiary. Anytime the subsidiary ceases to act in the best interest of the parent, the parent can assert full control over the subsidiary. In this respect, the parent and subsidiary act with a unity of interest. Id.

Based on this reasoning, one court held that a corporation holding 51% ownership of a subsidiary, could not conspire with that subsidiary for antitrust purposes. Novatel Communications v. Cellular Tel. Supply, Inc., 1986-2 Trade Cas. \(CCH\) 67,412 \(N.D. Ga. 1986\). Similarly, General Electric could not conspire with its Canadian subsidiary since General Electric had a 91.9% ownership interest in the subsidiary. Leaco Enter., Inc. v. General Elec. Co., 737 F. Supp. 605, 608-09 \(D. Ore. 1990\). The court in Leaco relied on the reasoning that where the parent owns enough stock in the subsidiary to cause a merger, the subsidiary should be treated as a wholly-owned subsidiary with the same unity of interest to determine § 1 liability for conspiracy. Leaco, at 608-09, relying on Sonitrol of Fresno v. AT&T, 1986 Trade Cas. \(CCH\) 67,080 \(1986\).

Plaintiff urges [8] that a factual inquiry is necessary to assess whether Defendants can conspire in violation of federal antitrust law because Copperweld only extends to corporations "owned 100% in common, or a de minimis amount less than 100%." Aspen Title & Escrow, Inc. v. Jeld-Wen, Inc., 677 F. Supp. 1477, 1486 (D. Or. 1987). The Court disagrees.

Under the reasoning of Copperweld and its progeny, it is not necessary to conduct a factual inquiry to determine whether a parent and a subsidiary over which the parent has legal control can conspire in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act. Copperweld found that HN6[¹] a parent and a wholly-owned subsidiary are considered the 'same entity' for antitrust purposes because the parent has the power to exercise full control over its subsidiary. For the same reasons, a parent and a subsidiary over which the parent has legal control cannot conspire to restrain trade. They share a unity of interest and common corporate consciousness because they work toward the same goal. It is undisputed that Hitachi owns 80% of Hitachi Data Holding Company, which owns 100% of Hitachi Data. Accordingly, the Court finds that as a matter of [9] law, Hitachi could not conspire with Hitachi Data to restrain trade in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act.

C. Conspiracy between sister subsidiaries of the same parent - Hitachi Data and Hitachi America

Courts since Copperweld have found that HN7[¹] two wholly-owned subsidiaries of the same parent were legally incapable of conspiring with each other in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act. Advanced Health-Care Serv., Inc. v. Radford Community Hosp., 910 F.2d 139, 146 (4th Cir. 1990); Directory Sales Management Corp. v. Ohio Bell Tel. Co., 833 F.2d 606, 611 (6th Cir. 1987); Hood v. Tenneco Texas Life Ins. Co., 739 F.2d 1012, 1015 (5th Cir. 1984); Century Oil Tool, Inc. v. Production Specialties, Inc., 737 F.2d 1316, 1317 (5th Cir. 1984). Plaintiff cites one case, In re Ray Dobbins Lincoln-Mercury v. Ford Motor Co., 604 F. Supp. 203, 205 (W.D. Va. 1984), which held that sister corporations could conspire. However, as Defendants emphasize, the Fourth Circuit subsequently disapproved this decision with its decision in Advanced Health-Care Serv., Inc. v. Radford Community Hosp., 910 F.2d 139, 146 (4th Cir. 1990). [10]

Moreover, Plaintiff attempts to distinguish the cases cited above which extended Copperweld to sister corporations. Those cases found that two wholly-owned subsidiaries of the same parent could not conspire for the same reasons the parent and its wholly-owned subsidiary could not conspire. Plaintiff argues that the Court should not rely on these cases because the instant case does not involve two wholly-owned sister corporations since Hitachi America is 100% owned by Hitachi and Hitachi Data is 80% owned.

[*707] The Court disagrees with Plaintiff's distinction. As shown above, Hitachi and Hitachi America cannot conspire as a matter of law. Moreover, Hitachi and Hitachi Data cannot conspire as a matter of law. For the same reasons these companies cannot conspire, Hitachi Data and Hitachi America, sister subsidiaries of Hitachi, cannot conspire to restrain trade. They all act pursuant to the same interests and goals: the distribution of Hitachi products. Two sister subsidiaries of the same parent over which the parent has legal control are legally incapable of conspiring in violation of § 1 for the same reasons Copperweld found that a parent and its wholly-owned subsidiary could [11] not conspire. Accordingly, the Court hereby GRANTS Defendants' motions for summary judgment with respect to Count I which alleges conspiracy in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act.

II. Allegations of Alter-Ego Relationship between Hitachi, Hitachi America and Hitachi Data as basis for liability of Hitachi and Hitachi America

Bell Atlantic alleges Hitachi and Hitachi America are the alter egos of Hitachi Data and therefore, Hitachi and Hitachi America are legally responsible for Hitachi Data's wrongdoing.

A. Conspiracy under the Sherman Act and Alter Ego Theory

Bell Atlantic asserts that Defendants are attempting to "have it both ways." On the one hand, Hitachi and Hitachi America claim that they cannot be liable under § 1 of the Sherman Act because they are too closely related. On the other hand, Hitachi and Hitachi America claim that they cannot be liable under an alter ego theory because the corporations are separate entities engaging in separate activities.

Plaintiff's attempt to equate § 1 conspiracy liability with alter ego liability fails because § 1 deals with federal antitrust policies and the alter ego doctrine is governed by California corporation law. The [\[12\]](#) two legal principles have different purposes and policy considerations. It does not follow that because Hitachi, Hitachi America and Hitachi Data are legally incapable of conspiring in violation of federal antitrust laws, that Hitachi, the parent, is the alter ego of its subsidiaries. In United National Records, Inc. v. MCA, Inc., 616 F. Supp. 1429 \(N.D. Ill. 1985\) the court discredited an attempt to find an alter ego relationship between companies simply because they are legally incapable of conspiring for antitrust purposes. Id. at 1433.

B. Alter Ego Liability

HN8 Courts will "pierce the corporate veil" in situations where evidence exists that the subsidiary is a "mere instrumentality" of the parent. In other words, a parent creates the subsidiary to shield it from liability rather than for reasons of business efficiency. HN9 In California, the necessary elements of alter ego claim are 1) unity of interest and ownership such that the separate personalities of the two corporations no longer exist and 2) that an inequitable result will occur if the corporate veil is not pierced and the challenged conduct is treated as that of [\[13\]](#) the subsidiary alone. Mesler v. Bragg Management Co., 39 Cal. 3d 290, 300, 216 Cal. Rptr. 443, 702 P.2d 601. However, a parent is not liable for the wrongful acts of its subsidiary simply because the parent wholly-owns the subsidiary. United Nat'l Records, Inc. v. MCA, Inc., 616 F. Supp. 1429, 1432 \(N.D. Ill. 1985\).

Whether Hitachi America and Hitachi Data are "mere instrumentalities" of Hitachi and each other is a factual issue. Bell Atlantic is entitled to discovery on the alter ego issue. Genuine issues of material fact remain regarding its claim that the subsidiaries are "mere instrumentalities" of Hitachi. Accordingly, without further discovery on this issue, summary judgment is inappropriate at this stage. The Court will reserve ruling on the disposition of Plaintiff's remaining claims ¹ until the resolution of the alter ego issue because Bell Atlantic has not accused [\[*708\]](#) Hitachi America or Hitachi of any direct antitrust violations. The whole basis of Hitachi's and Hitachi America's liability is their connection to Hitachi Data.

[\[14\]](#) Accordingly, the Court hereby DENIES without prejudice Defendants Hitachi's and Hitachi America's motions for summary judgment on Plaintiff's remaining claims, including Plaintiff's alter ego allegations.

CONCLUSION

1. Defendants Hitachi's, Hitachi America's and Hitachi Data's motions for summary judgment are GRANTED on Count I of the Complaint.
2. Defendants Hitachi's and Hitachi America's motions for summary judgment with respect to Plaintiff's remaining claims, including Plaintiff's alter ego allegations, are DENIED without prejudice. Defendants are directed to renew their motion for summary judgment after Plaintiff has had a reasonable opportunity to conduct discovery with respect to its alter ego allegations.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

DATE: March 29, 1994

HONORABLE JAMES WARE

United States District Judge

¹ Plaintiff has also alleged the following claims: 1) Counts II - XI: Illegal Tying Arrangements; 2) Count XII: Monopolization - Sherman Act § 2; 3) Count XIII: Unfair Competition - Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200; and 4) Count XIV: Tortious Interference with Prospective Economic Advantage - California Common Law.

End of Document

Bieter Co. v. Blomquist

United States District Court for the District of Minnesota, Third Division

March 29, 1994, Decided

3-89 CIV 759

Reporter

848 F. Supp. 1446 *; 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4952 **

BIETER COMPANY, Plaintiff, v. BEATTA BLOMQUIST; FEDERAL LAND COMPANY; EAGAN TOWER OFFICE BUILDING PARTNERSHIP; EAGAN HEIGHTS COMMERCIAL PARK; ADVANCE DEVELOPERS, INC.; CLIFF ROAD PROPERTIES; HOFFMAN DEVELOPMENT GROUP, INC; HDG ASSOCIATES LIMITED PARTNERSHIP; EAGAN ASSOCIATES LIMITED PARTNERSHIP; CRP OF EAGAN, INC.; ROBERT L. HOFFMAN; PATRICK C. HOFFMAN; and JACK F. DALY, JR., Defendants, and CLIFF ROAD PROPERTIES; HOFFMAN DEVELOPMENT GROUP, INC.; ADVANCE DEVELOPERS, INC.; HDG ASSOCIATES LIMITED PARTNERSHIP; EAGAN ASSOCIATES LIMITED PARTNERSHIP; CRP OF EAGAN, INC.; ROBERT L. HOFFMAN; PATRICK C. HOFFMAN; and JACK F. DALY, JR., Third-Party Plaintiffs, v. DORSEY & WHITNEY, a Minnesota partnership; and RYAN CONSTRUCTION COMPANY OF MINNESOTA, Inc., a Minnesota corporation, Third-Party Defendants.

Core Terms

unclean hands, pari delicto, damages, affirmative defense, tortious interference, summary judgment, anti trust law, valid defense, defenses, Partial, courts, equitable defense, antitrust action, involvement, equitable, argues, antitrust, genuine

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Appropriateness

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > Evidentiary Considerations

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Materiality of Facts

HN1[] Entitlement as Matter of Law, Appropriateness

Summary judgment is to be used as a tool to isolate and dispose of claims or defenses that are either factually unsupported or are based on undisputed facts. Summary judgment is proper, however, only if examination of the evidence in a light most favorable to the non-moving party reveals no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. The test for whether there is a genuine issue of material fact is twofold. First, the materiality of a fact is determined from the substantive law governing the claim. Only disputes over facts that might affect the outcome of the suit are relevant on summary judgment. Second, any dispute of material fact must be "genuine." A dispute is genuine if the evidence is such that it could cause a reasonable jury to return a verdict for either party. It is the non-moving party's burden to demonstrate that there is evidence to support each essential element of his claim.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Defenses

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Affirmative Defenses > Unclean Hands

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Affirmative Defenses > General Overview

HN2 Clayton Act, Defenses

The general rule is that the defenses of unclean hands and in pari delicto are not available in antitrust cases.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Affirmative Defenses > General Overview

HN3 Private Actions, Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations

In pari delicto asserts that a plaintiff who participated in the wrongdoing cannot recover when he suffers injury as a result of that wrongdoing. The doctrine of in pari delicto, with its complex scope, contents, and effects, is not to be recognized as a defense to an antitrust action.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Defenses

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > Elements

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Defenses

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Penalties

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Actual Monopolization > Anticompetitive & Predatory Practices > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Affirmative Defenses > Unclean Hands

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Racketeering > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations Act > Penalties

HN4 Sherman Act, Defenses

The antitrust laws, like the Racketeer Influence and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), provide for criminal penalties. 15 U.S.C.S. §§ 3, 24. And RICO, like the antitrust laws, was designed at least partially to promote competition, in RICO's case through stemming the infiltration into legitimate businesses by organized crime and by outlawing certain predatory business practices.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations > General Overview

HN5 Private Actions, Racketeer Influenced & Corrupt Organizations

A private action for damages may be barred on the grounds of plaintiff's own culpability only where (1) as a direct result of his own actions, the plaintiff bears at least substantially equal responsibility for the violations he seeks to redress, and (2) preclusion of suit would not significantly interfere with the effective enforcement of the securities laws and protection of the in vesting public.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Affirmative Defenses > Unclean Hands

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Affirmative Defenses > General Overview

HN6 Affirmative Defenses, Unclean Hands

The equitable "clean hands" doctrine is not applicable to an action for damages.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Affirmative Defenses > Unclean Hands

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Affirmative Defenses > General Overview

HN7 Affirmative Defenses, Unclean Hands

Equitable proceedings are to be governed by equitable principles. Under Minnesota law, the doctrine of unclean hands will be invoked only to deny equitable relief to a party whose conduct has been unconscionable by reason of a bad motive or where the result induced by that party's conduct will be unconscionable either in the benefit to that party or in the injury to others.

Counsel: [\[1\]](#) Lindquist & Vennum by JAMES McCARTHY and MICHAEL OLAFSON of Minneapolis, Minnesota appeared for Plaintiff Bieter Company.

Fruth & Anthony by JOSEPH W. ANTHONY and NORMAN J. BAER of Minneapolis, Minnesota appeared for Advance Developers, Inc., Cliff Road Properties, Hoffman Development Group, Inc., HDG Associates Limited Partnership, Eagan Associates Limited Partnership, CRP of Eagan Inc., Robert L. Hoffman, Patrick C. Hoffman, and Jack F. Daly, Jr.

Hoff & Allen by GEORGE C. HOFF of Eden Prairie, Minnesota appeared for Defendant Beatta Blomquist.

Peterson, Bell, Converse & Jensen by ROBERT C. BELL and WILLARD CONVERSE of Minneapolis, Minnesota appeared for Defendant Federal Land Company.

Fredrikson & Byron by THOMAS S. FRASER and TODD A. WIND of Minneapolis, Minnesota appeared for Third-Party Defendant Ryan Construction Company of Minnesota, Inc.

Fabyanske, Svoboda, Westra & Davis by RICHARD G. JENSEN of Minneapolis, Minnesota appeared for Third-Party Defendant Dorsey & Whitney.

Judges: Alsop

Opinion by: DONALD D. ALSOP

Opinion

[*1447] ORDER

The above-entitled matter came on for hearing before this Court upon various motions by the parties in this case and upon the motions of the parties in several related [2] cases. Among the motions heard by the Court was the Motion of Plaintiff Bieter Company for Partial Summary Judgment striking Defendants' affirmative defenses of in pari delicto and unclean hands. The other motions heard are addressed in two separate Orders.

I. BACKGROUND

On April 15, 1993, Bieter filed a Third Amended Complaint against Defendants seeking damages pursuant to the Racketeer Influence and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"). The Complaint also contained a state law claim for tortious interference with business relations. In their answers, various Defendants raised the affirmative defenses of unclean hands and in pari delicto. Bieter now argues that these defenses "must be stricken as a matter of law." (Pl's. Mem. Supp. Mot. for Partial Summ. J. at 2.)

Specifically, Defendants Advance Developers, Inc., Cliff Road Properties, Hoffman Development Group, Inc., HDG Associates Limited Partnership, Eagan Associates Limited Partnership, CRP of Eagan, Inc., Robert L. Hoffman, Patrick C. Hoffman, and Jack F. Daly, Jr. (the "Cliff Road Defendants") have raised unclean hands and in pari delicto as affirmative defenses to Bieter's RICO and tortious interference [3] claims. Defendants Federal Land Company, Eagan Tower Office Building Partnership, and Eagan Heights Commercial Park (the "Federal Defendants") have asserted unclean hands and in pari delicto as affirmative defenses to Bieter's RICO claim.¹ Defendant Beatta Blomquist ("Blomquist") has asserted unclean hands as a defense to Bieter's RICO and tortious interference claims.

[*1448] II. DISCUSSION

A. THE SUMMARY JUDGMENT STANDARD

The Supreme Court has held that HN1 summary judgment is to be used as a tool to isolate and dispose of claims or defenses that are either factually unsupported or are based on undisputed facts. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323-24, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265, 106 S. Ct. 2548 \(1986\); Hegg v. United States, 817 F.2d 1328, 1331 \(8th Cir. 1987\). [4] Summary judgment is proper, however, only if examination of the evidence in a light most favorable to the non-moving party reveals no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 247, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 106 S. Ct. 2505 \(1986\).

The test for whether there is a genuine issue of material fact is two-fold. First, the materiality of a fact is determined from the substantive law governing the claim. Only disputes over facts that might affect the outcome of the suit are relevant on summary judgment. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. at 252; Lomar Wholesale Grocery, Inc. v. Dieter's Gourmet Foods, Inc., 824 F.2d 582, 585 \(8th Cir. 1987\), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1010, 98 L. Ed. 2d 658, 108 S. Ct. 707 (1988). Second, any dispute of material fact must be "genuine." A dispute is genuine if the evidence is such that it could cause a reasonable jury to return a verdict for either party. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. at 252. [5] It is the non-moving party's burden to demonstrate that there is evidence to support each essential element of his claim. Celotex, 477 U.S. at 324.

¹ The Federal Defendants' assertion of these defenses only applies to the RICO claim because this Court dismissed Bieter's tortious interference claim as it applied to the Federal Defendants in its June 14, 1991 Order.

B. RICO Claims

Plaintiff Bieter Company argues in support of its motion for partial summary judgment that the defenses of unclean hands and in pari delicto are not available, as a matter of law, in RICO actions. Because few courts have addressed this issue, Bieter contends that the Court should refer to the Clayton Act and antitrust law to determine whether in pari delicto and unclean hands are valid defenses to a RICO action. See 15 U.S.C. § 15. Defendants argue in response that such an analogy is improper and that these are appropriate affirmative defenses to a RICO action.

HN2[] The general rule is that the defenses of unclean hands and in pari delicto are not available in antitrust cases. As the court noted in Memorex Corp. v. International Business Machs. Corp., 555 F.2d 1379, 1381 \(9th Cir. 1977\):

"Unclean hands" is said to show that the plaintiff is in some way morally reprehensible [6] with respect to the subject matter of the action. The plaintiff therefore is not permitted to recover despite the wrongfulness of the defendant's action. "Unclean hands" has not been recognized as a defense to an antitrust action for many years.

Memorex, 555 F.2d at 1381. Regarding in pari delicto, the court stated:

HN3[] In pari delicto. . . . asserts that a plaintiff who participated in the wrongdoing cannot recover when he suffers injury as a result of that wrongdoing. As held in Perma Life Mufflers, Inc. v. International Parts Corp., 392 U.S. 134, 140, 20 L. Ed. 2d 982, 88 S. Ct. 1981 . . . (1968), "the doctrine of in pari delicto, with its complex scope, contents, and effects, is not to be recognized as a defense to an antitrust action."

Id. These defenses are not available in antitrust actions because "the purposes of antitrust laws are best served by insuring that the private action will be an ever present threat to deter anyone contemplating business behavior in violation of the antitrust laws." Perma Life Mufflers, Inc. v. International Parts Corp., 392 U.S. 134, 139, 20 L. Ed. 2d 982, 88 S. Ct. 1981 \(1968\), [7] overruled on other grounds by Copperweld Corp. v. Independence Tube Corp., 467 U.S. 752, 81 L. Ed. 2d 628, 104 S. Ct. 2731 \(1984\). Furthermore, "the plaintiff who reaps the reward of treble damages may be no less morally reprehensible than the defendant, but the law encourages his suit to further the overriding public policy in favor of competition." Id.

[*1449] Defendants argue that, "while the public interest in competition is implicated in every antitrust action, a similar public interest is not implicated in every private RICO action." (Cliff Road Def's. Mem. Opp. Pl's. Mot. for Partial Summ. J. at 12.) Several other courts, however, have looked to antitrust law to determine the availability of these defenses under RICO. In In re National Mortgage Equity Corp. Mortgage Pool Certificates Secs. Litig., 636 F. Supp. 1138, 1153 n.21 (C.D. Cal. 1986), the court rejected the defendant's argument that antitrust principles should not be applied to RICO. It stated:

HN4[] The antitrust laws, like RICO, provide for criminal penalties. 15 U.S.C. §§ 3, 24. And RICO, like the [8] antitrust laws, was designed at least partially to Promote competition, in RICO's case through stemming the infiltration into legitimate businesses by organized crime and by outlawing certain predatory business practices.

National Mortgage, 636 F. Supp. at 1153 n.21. The court noted that the logic underlying the unavailability of the defenses of unclean hands and in pari delicto in antitrust law, such as advancing the predominate public policy in favor of competition, is equally applicable to RICO actions. Id. at 1156. It therefore held that "unclean hands should not by itself prohibit . . . an action that otherwise advances RICO's broad anti-racketeering policies." Id. This Court agrees with the National Mortgage court that antitrust law is relevant to the determination of whether unclean hands and in pari delicto are valid defenses in a RICO action. The Court finds that unclean hands is not a valid defense to Bieter's RICO claims.

The availability of in pari delicto as a defense requires additional consideration. While the traditional in pari delicto defense is not available in antitrust suits, in [9] *Perma Life, the Supreme Court left open the question of whether "truly complete involvement and participation in a monopolistic scheme could ever be a basis, wholly apart from the idea of in pari delicto, for barring a plaintiff's cause of action." Perma Life, 392 U.S. at 140. Several circuits subsequently determined that "complete involvement" does, in fact, constitute a defense to a treble damages claim in an antitrust action. See, e.g., CVD, Inc. v. Raytheon Co., 769 F.2d 842 (1st Cir. 1985) (recognizing the "complete involvement" test, but finding it inapplicable to the facts of the case), cert denied, 475 U.S. 1016, 89 L. Ed. 2d 312, 106 S. Ct. 1198 (1986); Thi-Hawaii, Inc. v. First Commerce Fin. Corp., 627 F.2d 991, 995 (9th Cir. 1980) (holding that the plaintiff's recovery is not barred unless the defendant establishes that the illegal conspiracy would not have been formed but-for the plaintiff's participation); Wilson P. Abraham Const. Corp. v. Texas Indus., Inc., 604 F.2d 897, 902 (5th Cir. 1979) [10] (holding that Perma Life did not endorse a "wholesale rejection of the in pari delicto doctrine in an antitrust treble damages action" and recognizing "complete involvement" as a valid defense in an antitrust action), aff'd, 451 U.S. 630 (1981).

The Supreme Court again addressed the availability of the "complete involvement" defense in the antitrust context in Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards, Inc. v. Berner 472 U.S. 299, 310, 86 L. Ed. 2d 215, 105 S. Ct. 2622 (1985). The Court set forth the test as follows:

HN5 [↑] [A] private action for damages . . . may be barred on the grounds of plaintiff's own culpability only where (1) as a direct result of his own actions, the plaintiff bears at least substantially equal responsibility for the violations he seeks to redress, and (2) preclusion of suit would not significantly interfere with the effective enforcement of the securities laws and protection of the investing public.

Bateman Eichler 472 U.S. at 310-11.

The few courts that have addressed whether in pari delicto is applicable [11] as a defense to a RICO claim have applied the Bateman Eichler test. See, e.g., Cohen v. Wolgin, No. 87-2007, 1988 WL 65970, at *6-7 (E.D. Pa. 1988) (applying Bateman Eichler analysis to an in pari delicto affirmative defense raised against a RICO claim); Shulton, Inc. v. Optel Corp., No. 85-2925, 1986 WL 15167, at *25 (D. N.J. 1986) (finding the Bateman Eichler analysis appropriate for RICO claims); cf. [*1450] *National Mortgage, 636 F. Supp. at 1156 n.25 (noting that the "extent and nature of the [defendant's] participation in the alleged RICO violations may be relevant, assuming it turns out that defendants are entitled to raise the defense of 'complete involvement'").

Defendants in the instant case argue that application of Bateman Eichler, at the very least, raises a genuine issue of material fact and that summary judgment is therefore inappropriate. The Cliff Road Defendants argue that "once Bieter realized it could not obtain approval for its proposed Regional Shopping Center, through lawful means, it engaged in conduct that eliminated the possibility that its shopping center would ever be approved." (Defs'. Mem. Opp. Pl's. [12] Mot. Partial Summ. J. at 14.)² Thus, according to the Defendants, Plaintiff participated in the violation for which it now seeks relief.

² Specifically, Cliff Road Defendants argue the following regarding Bieter's RICO claim:

[Bieter] . . . deliberately refused to reapply even though it was urged to do so by the City Council and even though after the November 1987 elections the candidates who were beholden to Bieter controlled the City Council.

The first element of the Bateman Eichler test is not met in the instant case. [13] The violation Bieter seeks to redress under RICO is Defendants' alleged bribery of city officials in furtherance of competing developments. Bieter Co. v. Blomquist, 987 F.2d 1319, 1328 (8th Cir. 1993). Bieter argues that the bribery was intended to prevent its proposed development from receiving the necessary approvals and to assure approval of the competing Cliff Lake Centre. Bieter further argues that it was injured as a result of Defendants' conduct. Id.

Defendants do not claim that Bieter was involved in the same alleged bribery for which Bieter now seeks relief. Bieter and Defendants were competitors, not conspirators. Nor do they allege that Bieter was somehow working with Defendants during that time to achieve Bieter's own downfall. Even if, after it realized that all legitimate means of achieving its goals had failed, Bieter encouraged Defendants' success so that it could sue them, Bieter does not bear "at least substantially equal responsibility for the violations it seeks to redress." Bateman Eichler, 472 U.S. at 310. Assuming that all of Defendants' allegations are true, the Court nonetheless [14] finds that Defendants' in pari delicto defense must be dismissed as a matter of law.

This Court's holding is consistent with the second element of Bateman Eichler because it serves the policies underlying RICO and the public interest. This holding is also consistent with the Eighth Circuit's holding in Bieter, 987 F.2d at 1319. In that opinion, the Court explained that one purpose of RICO is to "root out public corruption." Id. at 1329. A rule that the affirmative defenses of unclean hands and in pari delicto are not valid in a RICO action, except as consistent with Bateman Eichler, will encourage competition and enable plaintiffs to root out public corruption.

C. TORTIOUS INTERFERENCE CLAIMS

(i) Unclean Hands

Bieter's claim for tortious interference is brought under Minnesota common-law. Bieter argues that unclean hands, which is an equitable defense, is not a valid defense to a claim for damages in Minnesota.³ Minnesota courts have not directly addressed this issue. The few Minnesota cases that have indirectly addressed this issue, interpreted together, lead the Court to the conclusion that unclean [15] hands is not a valid defense to a claim for damages in Minnesota.

[*1451] In Thorem v. Thorem, 188 Minn. 153, 155, 246 N.W. 674, 675 (1933), Chief Justice Wilson, concurring, stated that because a "divorce court is not a court of equity . . . Plaintiff should not have been turned away for want of clean hands." Similarly, in Hagberg v. Colonial & Pacific Frigidways Inc., 279 Minn. 396, 397, 157 N.W.2d 33, 35 (1968), the court explained in its syllabus that HN6[] "the equitable 'clean hands' doctrine is not applicable to an action for damages." Id. Another case indicating that Minnesota courts do not recognize equitable defenses in actions for damages is LaValle v. Kulkay, 277 N.W.2d 400, 403 n.3 (Minn. 1979). In that case, [16] the court stated, "Laches is an equitable defense and is not relevant to this action because defendants are requesting damages and not an injunction." Id. at 403 n.3. See also Fred. O. Watson Co. v. United States Life Ins. Co., 258 N.W.2d 776, 778 (Minn. 1977); Creative Communications Consultants, Inc. v. Gaylord, 403 N.W.2d 654, 657 (Minn. Ct. App. 1987).

The Eighth Circuit has, on several occasions, addressed the availability of equitable relief under Minnesota law. In Foy v. Klapmeier, 992 F.2d 774, 779 (8th Cir. 1993), the court stated, HN7[] "Equitable proceedings are to be (Cliff Road Defs'. Mem. Opp. Pl's. Mot. for Partial Summ. J. at 14-15.) In addition, regarding Bieter's RICO and tortious interference claims, they argue:

Once Bieter realized it could not obtain Target through legitimate means . . . it conspired with Dorsey to aid Cliff Road Properties in their solicitation and acquisition of Target as a tenant for [Cliff Lake Centre]. That way, Bieter could sue them for allegedly interfering with their relationship with Target.

(Id. at 17.)

³ In its Memorandum in Support of Motion for Partial Summary Judgment, Bieter states that it "does not seek equitable relief, but rather seeks damages." (Pl's. Mem. Supp. Mot. for Summ. J. at 7.)

848 F. Supp. 1446, *1451-994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4952, 16

governed by equitable principles. Under Minnesota law, the doctrine of unclean hands will be invoked only to deny equitable relief to a party whose conduct has been unconscionable by reason of a bad motive or where the result induced by that party's conduct will be unconscionable either in the benefit to that party or in the injury to others." Foy, 992 F.2d at 779. While the Foy court was not directly faced with the question now before this Court, the language in Foy is consistent [17] with this Court's interpretation of applicable Minnesota law. The court did not indicate that the defense of unclean hands was available in Minnesota, except in the context of equitable proceedings. See also Holmberg v. Morrisette, 800 F.2d 205, 211 \(8th Cir. 1986\), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1028, 95 L. Ed. 2d 526, 107 S. Ct. 1953 (1987) (finding it unnecessary to decide whether Minnesota law "permits application of the clean hands doctrine, traditionally an equitable defense, in an action at law for money damages"); Earle R. Hanson & Assoc. v. Farmers Co-op. Creamery Co., 403 F.2d 65, 70 \(8th Cir. 1968\).

Defendants correctly state in their memoranda that some courts, federal and state, permit equitable defenses to claims for damages. See, e.g., Associated Business Tel. Sys. Corp. v. Greater Capital Corp., 729 F. Supp. 1488, 1496 (D. N.J.) (holding that defense of unclean hands is not limited to suits in equity), aff'd, 919 F.2d 133 (3d Cir. 1990); Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp., 10 Cal. App. 4th 612, 619-20, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 741, 744 \(Cal. Ct. App. 1993\), [18] rev. denied, Jan. 14, 1993 (holding that unclean hands is a valid defense to an action at law for damages). Contra Marvin E. Nieberg Real Estate Co. v. Taylor-Morley-Simon, 867 S.W.2d 618, 626 \(Mo. Ct. App. 1993\) (holding that application of defenses of unclean hands and laches is erroneous in an action at law for damages); General Dev. Corp. v. Binstein, 743 F. Supp. 1115, 1133-34 \(D. N.J. 1990\) (holding that unclean hands is available as a defense to the plaintiff's claim for injunctive relief, but not to its claim for tortious interference). Because the Court finds no indication that Minnesota courts have expanded the availability of equitable defenses to actions for damages, it concludes that unclean hands is not a valid defense to Bieter's claim for tortious interference.

(ii) In Pari Delicto

Bieter argues that "for the same reasons that the in pari delicto defense does not apply to [its] RICO claims, the defense . . . does not apply to [its] tortious interference claims." (Pl's. Mem. Supp. Partial Mot. for Summ. J. at 10.) The Court agrees. See Brubaker v. Hi-Banks Resort Corp., 415 N.W.2d 680 \(Minn. Ct. App. 1987\). [19] Bieter claims that Third-Party Plaintiffs lured Target away from Bieter, causing Bieter injury. Bieter could not have participated in the same scheme that it now claims caused its injury.

Accordingly, based upon careful review of the record, files, and the proceedings herein,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED That:

1. Plaintiffs' Motion for Partial Summary Judgment Striking Defendants' Affirmative [*1452] Defenses of Unclean Hands and In Pari Delicto is GRANTED; and
2. Defendants' affirmative defenses of unclean hands and in pari delicto are dismissed.

DATED: March 29, 1994

DONALD D. ALSOP, Senior Judge

United States District Court

Automotive Prods. PLC v. Tilton Eng'g, Inc.

United States District Court for the Central District of California

March 30, 1994, Decided ; March 30, 1994, Filed

CV 90-5500 KN (Ex)

Reporter

855 F. Supp. 1101 *; 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13419 ; 33 U.S.P.Q.2D (BNA) 1065 ; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,656

AUTOMOTIVE PRODUCTS plc, Plaintiff and Counterdefendant, v. TILTON ENGINEERING, INC., Defendant and Counterplaintiff.

Subsequent History: Reported at: 33 U.S.P.Q.2d (BNA) 1065 at 1095.

Dismissed by Automotive Prods. plc v. Tilton Eng'g, 36 F.3d 1109, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 16851 (Fed. Cir., 1994)

Prior History: Automotive Prods. plc v. Tilton Eng'g, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20128, 33 U.S.P.Q.2d (BNA) 1065 (C.D. Cal., Mar. 1, 1994)

Core Terms

expenses, patent, antitrust, costs, attorney's fees, expert witness fees, fee request, charges, antitrust claim, billed, prevailing party, documentation, prevailing, awards, expended, damages, motions, reasonable attorney's fees, fee award, lawsuit, reasons

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Costs & Attorney Fees > General Overview

HN1 [down arrow] Remedies, Costs & Attorney Fees

Where a plaintiff has obtained excellent results, his attorney should normally recover a fully compensatory fee. Normally this will encompass all hours reasonably expended on the litigation, and indeed in some cases of exceptional success, an enhanced award may be justified. In these circumstances, the fee award should not be reduced simply because the plaintiff failed to prevail of every contention raised in the lawsuit.

Civil Procedure > ... > Costs & Attorney Fees > Attorney Fees & Expenses > Reasonable Fees

HN2 [down arrow] Attorney Fees & Expenses, Reasonable Fees

The trial judge should weigh the hours claimed against his own knowledge, experience, and expertise of the time required to complete similar activities.

855 F. Supp. 1101, *1101A1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13419, 13419A83 U.S.P.Q.2D (BNA) 1065, 1065

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications > Work Product Doctrine > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Costs & Attorney Fees > Attorney Fees & Expenses > Reasonable Fees

HN3 Privileged Communications, Work Product Doctrine

The trial judge should closely observe the attorney's work product, his preparation, and general ability before the court.

Civil Procedure > Remedies > Costs & Attorney Fees > General Overview

Patent Law > ... > Damages > Collateral Assessments > Attorney Fees

HN4 Remedies, Costs & Attorney Fees

Where a prevailing party has obtained excellent results, his attorney should recover a fully compensatory fee. Normally this will encompass all hours reasonably expended on the litigation.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Costs & Attorney Fees > Clayton Act

Civil Procedure > ... > Attorney Fees & Expenses > Basis of Recovery > Statutory Awards

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Costs & Attorney Fees > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Costs & Attorney Fees > Attorney Fees & Expenses > General Overview

HN5 Costs & Attorney Fees, Clayton Act

Section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 15, allows recovery of reasonable attorney's fees as costs. Furthermore, a prevailing antitrust plaintiff is entitled to recover a reasonable attorney's fee for every item of service which, at the time rendered, would have been undertaken by a reasonable and prudent lawyer to advance or protect his client's interest in the pursuit of a successful recovery of anti-trust damages.

Judges: [\[1\]](#) KENYON

Opinion by: DAVID V. KENYON

Opinion

[1095] [*1102] ORDER RE: TILTON'S MOTIONS FOR ATTORNEY'S FEES, COSTS, EXPENSES AND INTEREST

I. Introduction

In the partial judgment entered on November 3, 1993, this Court awarded Tilton its reasonable attorney's fees, costs, expenses, and prejudgment and postjudgment interest incurred in connection with its patent, antitrust, and intentional interference with prospective economic advantage claims. However, the Court did not set forth specific dollar amounts for these awards. See 11/3/93 Judgment.

Since the signing of the judgment, the Court has awarded Tilton its reasonable costs¹ [2] and has clarified the means of calculating its prejudgment interest on its patent claim.² This leaves only the attorney's fees, expenses,³ and postjudgment interest for the Court to consider. But because it cannot accurately calculate Tilton's postjudgment interest herein,⁴ the Court will only discuss and award Tilton its reasonable attorney's fees and expenses in this order as set forth below.

II. The Court's September 22, 1993 Order on Fees, Costs, and Expenses

Tilton first applied for reimbursement of its attorney's fees, costs, and expenses in July 1993. After a review of its submission and AP's objections thereto, the Court ordered that Tilton submit a more detailed bill of costs, carefully allocating its claimed costs between its patent and antitrust claims; the Court noted, however, that it did not expect Tilton to be perfectly accurate in its [3] accounting. See 9/22/93 Order, at 24 n.6. The Court also noted that Tilton could not recover its costs for any time expended purely attributable to the prosecution of its state law claims. Id. at 14.

In October 1993, in response to the Court's order, Tilton submitted over 1,700 [1096] pages of detailed invoices and timesheets documenting its bills for the period from October 1990 to September 1993. In November 1993, Tilton submitted a supplemental bill of costs for September and October 1993.

III. Attorney's Fees

A. AP's General Objections

AP challenges Tilton's attorney's fee submissions, asking this Court to deny or reduce Tilton's fee request for the three reasons discussed below.

1. Tilton's Allocation of Fees

First, AP claims that Tilton's bill makes no attempt to segregate out the time spent on the claims for which it is not entitled to attorney's fees. Specifically, AP claims that several of Tilton's time entries apply to all of Tilton's claims, and not just its patent and antitrust causes of action. Because of this, AP contends that Tilton's fee request should be reduced by 20 percent. See, e.g., H.J. Inc. v. Flygt Corp., 925 F.2d 257, 260-61 (8th Cir. 1991) [4] (affirming district court's percentage reduction).

Tilton responds that it complied with the Court's order by specifically indicating which fees were attributable to its patent versus its [*1103] antitrust claims, and that it did not include in its fee request any entries that were purely attributable to its state law claims.

The Court agrees with Tilton. Tilton has satisfied the Court's September 22, 1993 order by producing extensive and detailed documentation to support its fee request. Moreover, Tilton has adequately divided its time entries between ¹ In its March 1, 1994 order, the Court awarded Tilton costs in the amount of $ 119,316.46. See 3/1/94 Order on Motions to Re-tax Costs.

² See 11/2/93 Order Clarifying Judgment, at 2.

³ See 11/18/93 Order Re: Motion for Reconsideration on Clayton Costs, at 3-5 (distinguishing between "costs" and "out-of-pocket" expenses).

⁴ Postjudgment interest is not calculable at this time because it covers the period from the date of entry of judgment "until payment of the money judgment pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1961"; in this case, payment of money judgment has been stayed pending appeal. See 11/3/93 Judgment; 12/7/93 Stipulation and Order Re: Stay of Execution of Money Judgment Pending Post-trial Motions and Appeal.

the antitrust and patent claims. Also, Tilton has segregated out the time purely attributable to its state law claims. Accordingly, the Court believes that it would be improper to reduce Tilton's fee award by 20%.

2. Tilton's Award Reflecting Its Success

Second, AP contends that Tilton's fee request should be reduced by an additional 50% (over the 20% discussed above) because Tilton lost most of its claims and because the jury awarded Tilton only 16.5% of its requested patent damages and less than 40% of its requested antitrust damages.

In response, Tilton claims that because it was the prevailing party in this litigation, it is irrelevant [5] that it did not prevail on its other claims, many of which were alternative theories of recovery.

Again, the Court agrees with Tilton. In its March 1, 1994 order, the Court clearly declared that Tilton was the prevailing party for purposes of awarding Tilton its costs in this case; thus, Tilton is properly the prevailing party for purposes of its fee recovery as well. See 3/1/94 Order on Motions to Re-tax Costs, at 3. Indeed, the Supreme Court's statement regarding fee awards in the patent context in Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 435, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40, 103 S. Ct. 1933 (1983), supports such a holding:

HN1 [↑] "Where a plaintiff has obtained excellent results, his attorney should normally recover a fully compensatory fee. Normally this will encompass all hours reasonably expended on the litigation, and indeed in some cases of exceptional success, an enhanced award may be justified. In these circumstances, the fee award should not be reduced simply because the plaintiff failed to prevail of every contention raised in the lawsuit."

Accordingly, the Court rejects AP's argument and refuses to reduce Tilton's fee as AP [6] requests.

3. Tilton's Exercise of Billing Judgment

And third, AP asserts that Tilton failed to exercise billing judgment by overstaffing this case, thereby warranting a further 10% reduction (following the already rejected 20% and 50% reduction requests) in Tilton's fees. Specifically, AP claims that Tilton cannot justify its use of 25 attorneys, 4 law clerks, and 8 paralegals on this one case.

Tilton replies that AP overstates the staffing done by Tilton on this case: "Although 25 attorneys billed time to this case, eight of those attorneys, William Poms, Gary Lande, Bernard Gans, Edward O'Connor, Richard Campbell, Jan Weir, Alan Block, and Steven Smyrski billed 97% of all the time on the case. The other 17 attorneys represented only 3% of the hours billed and were attorneys brought in only occasionally for additional support when needed." Tilton's 10/26/93 Reply Memo, at 6. Moreover, Tilton clarifies that the four law clerks accounted for only 85.5 hours and that one paralegal, Nanette S. Footlick, accounted for over 70% of the total time expended, with additional paralegal support as needed.

The Court sides with Tilton once more. Tilton adequately explains the reasons behind [7] AP's perception that overstaffing occurred here; indeed, Tilton very reasonably prepared and staffed this case given its length and complexity. The reasonableness of Tilton's staffing is even more apparent 1097 when compared to AP's staffing of this case: for example, AP employed two law firms as compared to Tilton's one here. The Court therefore declines to reduce Tilton's fee request due to any perceived overstaffing by AP.

4. Conclusion

For all of the foregoing reasons, the Court rejects AP's general arguments for percentage reductions of Tilton's fee award. The only remaining issue is whether Tilton's fee requests are reasonable given the circumstances. The Court shall address that issue in detail below.

[*1104] B. Reasonableness of Tilton's Fee Request

1. The Kerr Factors

The Ninth Circuit has specifically stated that a Court must consider the various factors enumerated in Kerr v. Screen Extras Guild, 526 F.2d 67, 69-70 (9th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 951, 48 L. Ed. 2d 195, 96 S. Ct. 1726 (1976) (citing Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, Inc., 488 F.2d 714 (5th Cir. 1974)), [8] in determining whether a party's attorney's fees were reasonably incurred. Accordingly, the Court shall discuss each factor in turn:

a. Time and Labor Required

HN2[] "The trial judge should weigh the hours claimed against his own knowledge, experience, and expertise of the time required to complete similar activities." Johnson, 488 F.2d at 717. Upon reviewing the detailed timesheets submitted by Tilton's counsel, the Court finds that the time expended by the attorneys, law clerks, and paralegals on this case compare favorably, in this Court's experience, with the time other professionals would spend in this case. Moreover, as discussed above, the Court believes that Tilton did not overstaff this case, but rather properly exercised sound billing judgment in litigating its claims here.

b. Novelty and Difficulty of the Questions Involved

Patent and antitrust law are not new or novel, but often involve factually difficult issues. Such was the case here. In the patent phase of the case, for example, Tilton had to analyze the myriad of patent defenses raised by AP, including obviousness, best mode, indefiniteness, public use, inequitable conduct, and noninfringement. [9] As a direct result, Tilton was required to expend many hours on legal research and in drafting memoranda and briefs on these issues.

c. Customary Fee/Experience & Ability of Attorneys

In support of its fee request, Tilton presents detailed profiles on the attorneys at Poms, Smith, Lande & Rose ("PSLR"), a well-respected intellectual property firm in the Los Angeles area. All the PSLR attorneys have substantial patent and engineering backgrounds, with some having experience in antitrust lawsuits. The billing rates presented by PSLR are reasonable and in conformity with the rates charged by other intellectual property law firms in California. See Report of Economic Survey (1993), Exh. C to Tilton's 7/12/93 memo.

d. Skill Requisite to Perform Legal Service Properly

HN3[] "The trial judge should closely observe the attorney's work product, his preparation, and general ability before the court." Johnson, 488 F.2d at 718. Tilton's counsel, PSLR, demonstrated to this Court time and again that they had the requisite skill and ability to handle this complex lawsuit. Their written work product and performance before this Court have been uniformly good.

e. [10] Preclusion of Other Employment by Attorney Due to Acceptance of the Case

Tilton claims that some of its attorneys were precluded from accepting other legal work because of this case. They also claim that 97% of the work was performed by only eight of the twenty-five attorneys at PSLR. This factor does not weigh particularly heavily in Tilton's favor.

f. Time Limitations Imposed by Client or Circumstances

The time limitations in this case were substantial. As Tilton correctly points out, much of the billing in this case was driven by AP. AP filed many of its discovery motions ex parte, rather than on regular notice. Indeed, AP filed over twenty pre-trial motions, including many summary judgment motions on various issues. Moreover, Tilton had to review thousands of relevant documents in preparation for trial. Finally, during trial itself, Tilton often had to submit responsive briefs in very short time periods due to motions made by AP. In sum, Tilton was under considerable time pressure throughout the [1098] lawsuit, much of which was prompted by AP's consistently aggressive posture.

g. Amount Involved and Results Obtained

Tilton's potential liability in this case was extremely [11] large and if it had lost, it could [*1105] have very well ended up in bankruptcy. The fact that Tilton successfully defended against AP's suit and recovered a multimillion dollar verdict on its patent and antitrust counterclaims is particularly impressive given Tilton's large loss potential in this case.

h. Fee Arrangement/Undesirability of the Case

To a certain extent, this case was undesirable because of Tilton's difficult financial situation. It became readily apparent to PSLR that Tilton would be unable to pay PSLR's fees through the duration of this complex case. As such, Tilton negotiated a fee arrangement with PSLR whereby PSLR would not receive payments for fees and costs prior to the case's termination, although Tilton was ultimately responsible for these fees and costs. Both Tilton and PSLR therefore had every incentive to minimize PSLR's fees and costs wherever possible.

i. Nature and Length of Professional Relationship with Client

PSLR has been Tilton's counsel throughout the duration of this suit, and represents Tilton in other related patent matters.

j. Awards in Similar Cases

Attorney fee awards to prevailing parties in patent and antitrust cases are oftentimes [12] substantial. See, e.g., Mathis v. Spears, 857 F.2d 749, 752 (Fed. Cir. 1988) (in patent defense case: attorney's fee award: $ 580,183.50; expenses award: $ 83,421.91); Howes v. Medical Components, Inc., 761 F. Supp. 1193, 1202 (E.D. Pa. 1990) ($ 1.95 million in attorney's fees, costs, and expenses awarded in patent case); Seven Gables Corp. v. Sterling Recreation Organization Co., 686 F. Supp. 1418, 1428 (W.D. Wash. 1988) ($ 2.9 million in attorney's fees awarded in antitrust case). Therefore, Tilton's request for over $ 2.8 million in attorney's fees is not per se unreasonable.

The Court will examine the patent and antitrust requests separately below:

(1) Patent

The Court noted in its September 22, 1993 order that Tilton was entitled to its reasonable attorney's fees as the prevailing party in an "exceptional case" under 35 U.S.C. § 285. See 9/22/93 Order, at 22-23. The Court noted at that time that the only remaining question was whether Tilton's fee request was reasonable. HN4[ "Where, as here, a prevailing party 'has obtained excellent results, [13] his attorney should recover a fully compensatory fee. Normally this will encompass all hours reasonably expended on the litigation" Mathis, 857 F.2d at 755 (citing the Supreme Court in Hensley, 461 U.S. at 435).

Here, Tilton obtained excellent results in a very factually difficult, hard fought, and legally complicated case. Tilton obtained a jury verdict of $ 545,000 which was later trebled by this Court based on the jury's finding that AP willfully infringed Tilton's patent. Tilton's success is particularly impressive given that it apparently endured AP's "evasive and dilatory tactics during the prosecution of this case -- including its apparent withholding of certain key documents from Tilton during discovery." 9/22/93 Order, at 23.

(2) Antitrust

HN5[ Section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 15, allows Tilton to recover its reasonable attorney's fees as costs. See also 9/22/93 Order, at 13. Furthermore, "a prevailing antitrust plaintiff is entitled to recover a reasonable attorney's fee for every item of service which, at the time rendered, [14] would have been undertaken by a reasonable and prudent lawyer to advance or protect his client's interest in the pursuit of a successful recovery of anti-trust damages." Twin City Sportservice, Inc. v. Charles O. Finley & Co., 676 F.2d 1291, 1313 (9th Cir. 1982).

Tilton's attorney's fee request on its antitrust claims seems reasonable here. This was a complex case requiring that Tilton prove to the jury that AP had intentionally attempted to prevent Tilton from entering the carbon-to-carbon clutch market. Tilton's counsel was required to present extensive documentary and testimonial evidence regarding this claim; thus, the amount of time spent on such an arduous task appears reasonable.

[*1106] 2. Conclusion

After reviewing the Kerr factors and Tilton's documentation, and after rejecting AP's arguments to deny or reduce Tilton's request, the Court finds that Tilton's attorney's fee requests for both its patent and antitrust claims are reasonable. AP initiated [1099] this lawsuit, aggressively prosecuted this case, and in large part, caused Tilton to incur the attorney's fees it now claims in this case. Tilton achieved remarkable results in its defense of its [15] patent claim and its prosecution of its own antitrust action. Tilton should not be denied its reasonable fees here.

Accordingly, the Court GRANTS Tilton's motion for $ 1,841,906.00 in attorney's fees on its patent claim, and its request of $ 1,036,918.25 in attorney's fees on its antitrust claim.

IV. Expenses

In its September 22, 1993 and November 18, 1993 orders, the Court held that Tilton was entitled to the following "out-of-pocket" expenses aside from its reasonable costs: facsimile expenses, Lexis charges, long distance telephone charges, Federal Express charges, secretarial overtime charges, trial supply expenses, postage, messenger fees, hotel and travel expenses, parking expenses, teleconference expenses, and mock trial expenses. However, the Court specifically found that Tilton was not entitled to its air conditioning expenses because these are not of the type normally billed to clients. The Court then concluded that the only remaining issue with respect to these expenses was whether the specific amounts claimed by Tilton are reasonable.

A second issue the Court must resolve involves whether Tilton, as a prevailing antitrust plaintiff, is entitled to its actual expert [16] witness fees over the statutory maximum. In its September 22, 1993 order, the Court requested further briefing on this issue. The Court has reviewed the supplemental briefs and will set forth its ruling in its discussion of Tilton's antitrust expense award below.

A. AP's Objections to Expenses Request

In its opposition papers, AP contends that Tilton cannot recover any of its "out-of-pocket" expenses because it is only entitled to its statutory costs under 28 U.S.C. § 1920; alternatively, AP argues that Tilton's expenses request should be reduced because: (1) Tilton fails to show that such expenses were only incurred with respect to Tilton's patent and antitrust claims, and (2) that such expenses were reasonably incurred.⁵

The Court has already rejected AP's contention that Tilton may only recover [17] its Section 1920 costs. See 11/18/93 Order. As to AP's alternative arguments, the Court finds that Tilton has properly marked and segregated its expenses to include only those recoverable under its patent and antitrust claims for the same reasons discussed in Section III.A.1. & 2. above. However, the Court does believe that it must resolve the issue of the reasonableness of Tilton's expenses, and it does so below.

B. Reasonableness of Tilton's Expenses Request

1. Expenses Previously Approved by Court

In determining a "reasonable" award, the Court must balance a conservative approach towards Tilton's award against the fact that Tilton should be fully compensated for having to litigate this action against a willful infringer and antitrust violator such as AP. See Mathis, 857 F.2d at 757-58 ("Nothing in the [American] Rule or statutes impedes or precludes a district court from exercising its inherent equitable power to make whole a party injured by an egregious abuse of the judicial process.").

⁵ AP's argument that Tilton's requested expenses are not of the type normally billed to fee-paying clients was rejected previously by this Court. See 11/18/93 Order, at 4.

A review of the voluminous records submitted by Tilton in July and November 1993 reveals that Tilton has properly supported and documented its out-of-court [18] expenses, and such expenses appear to be reasonable given the exceptional circumstances of this case. See discussion of Kerr factors above. Specifically, the Court awards Tilton these expenses in the following amounts: [*107]

(1) facsimile expenses:	$ 5,471.50
(2) Lexis charges:	$ 35,120.50
(3) long dist. tel. charges:	$ 1,336.25
⁶ (4) Federal Express charges:	$ 2,242.18
(5) secretarial overtime:	$ 36,527.75
(6) trial supply expenses	$ 20,958.64
(7) postage:	$ 542.19
(8) messenger fees:	$ 14,642.93
(9) hotel and travel charges:	$ 58,487.17
(10) parking charges:	$ 3,626.16
(11) teleconference charges:	$ 12,720.61
(12) mock trial expenses:	$ 143.32
TOTAL AWARD	$ 191,819.20

2. Recoverability [19] of Expert Witness Fees in Patent Case

The Court held that, given the jury's finding of willfulness, "Tilton should be awarded [1100] its reasonable costs" with respect to its patent case. 9/22/93 Order, at 24-25. This included all of Tilton's reasonable expert witness fees except for the fees of Michael Burroughs. Id. at 25. Tilton resubmitted receipts for its patent experts in its October 1993 submission.

Upon reviewing the July and October 1993 documentation supporting its claim, the Court finds Tilton's expert witness fees to have been reasonably incurred given the factual and legal intricacy of Tilton's patent claim, which was further complicated by AP's having raised the many defenses discussed above. Moreover, the Court finds that the amounts charged by these experts are likewise reasonable. The Court therefore awards Tilton its expert witness fees as follows:

(1) Edward Brenner	$ 3,300.00
(2) Robert Tarroffi	$ 19,658.08

⁶ AP argues that Tilton should not recover these expenses because it could have used the regular mail instead. However, because of the numerous ex parte and emergency applications submitted in this case, the Court finds that Tilton's expenses on this item are reasonable.

(3) Carroll Smith	7 $ 0.00
(4) Donald Peterson	$ 62,787.74
(5) David Nolte	$ 116,069.50
GRAND TOTAL	$ 201,815.32

[20] 3. Recoverability of Expert Witness Fees in Antitrust Case

As the prevailing plaintiff in an antitrust case, Tilton argues that it is entitled to expert witness fees above and beyond the statutory limit of $ 40 per day. In support, Tilton cites Hasbrouck v. Texaco, Inc., 631 F. Supp. 258 (E.D. Wash. 1986), aff'd in relevant part and rev'd in part, 879 F.2d 632 (9th Cir. 1989). In Hasbrouck, the district court, having reviewed plaintiffs' expert witness fees, concluded that "the retention by plaintiffs of the experts . . . was necessary due to the defenses interposed by [defendant]. The court further finds the fees of these experts are reasonable." Id. at 268. Accordingly, the court awarded plaintiffs all their requested expert witness fees. Id.

In response, AP maintains that the Supreme Court in Crawford Fitting Co. v. J.T. Gibbons, Inc., 482 U.S. 437, 442, 96 L. Ed. 2d 385, 107 S. Ct. 2494 (1987), determined that 28 U.S.C. § 1821 and § 1920 statutorily limit the witness fees to be paid to a prevailing party. [21] AP next relies on a Tenth Circuit case, Reazin v. Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Kansas, 899 F.2d 951, 981 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 497 U.S. 1005, 111 L. Ed. 2d 752, 110 S. Ct. 3241 (1990), which held that, citing Crawford, a prevailing antitrust plaintiff may not be awarded expert witness fees beyond the $ 40 per day limit.

The Court agrees with Tilton on this issue. Tilton has cited Ninth Circuit authority providing for the award of expert witness fees if the expert was necessary to the litigation and if the expert's fees are reasonable. See Hasbrouck, 631 F. Supp. at 268. AP cites no contradictory Ninth Circuit cases limiting such an award to statutory damages only, and the Court has already held that Crawford does not specifically limit a prevailing antitrust plaintiff to statutory damages only. See 9/22/93 Order, at 16-17.

Applying Hasbrouck, the Court finds that Tilton's request for $ 90,123.50 in fees for David Nolte's services is reasonable in light of the fact that Nolte's testimony, as Tilton's only antitrust expert, was necessary [22] to provide the jury with a factual basis from which to ascertain the damages to Tilton from AP's anticompetitive conduct. Further, having previously found Nolte's billing rate to be [*1108] reasonable, the Court awards Tilton $ 90,123.50 in expert witness fees for the services of Nolte.

V. Conclusion

For all of the foregoing reasons, the Court AWARDS Tilton the following:

- (1) $ 1,841,906.00 in attorney's fees on its patent claim;
- (2) $ 1,036,918.25 in attorney's fees on its antitrust claim;
- (3) $ 191,819.20 in expenses previously awarded;
- (4) $ 201,815.32 in expert witness fees on its patent claim; and

⁷ Tilton submits documentation supporting the fact that it deposed Carroll Smith on October 23, 1992, but the Court has not been able to locate any separate document setting forth Smith's expert witness fee. Accordingly, the Court does not award Tilton any such fee.

855 F. Supp. 1101, *1108LÁ994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13419, 22LÁ3 U.S.P.Q.2D (BNA) 1065, 1100

(5) $ 90,123.50 in expert witness fees on its antitrust claim.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

DATED: March 30, 1994

DAVID V. KENYON

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

End of Document

Blackburn v. Sweeney

United States District Court for the Northern District of Indiana, Hammond Division

March 31, 1994, Decided

Civil No. 4:93cv0050AS

Reporter

850 F. Supp. 758 *; 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5382 ; 1994-2 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,744

THOMAS BLACKBURN and RAYMOND T. GREEN, Plaintiffs, v. CHARLES SWEENEY, JR., and DANIEL PFEIFER, Defendants.

Core Terms

advertising, partnership, parties, lawyers, discovery, motion to dismiss, Partner, rule of reason, magistrate judge, yellow pages, television, coverage, summary judgment, antitrust, damages, cases, attorney's fees, allegations, arbitrator, settlement, pleadings, commerce, rights

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > ... > Responses > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Motions to Dismiss

HN1 [down arrow] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

By moving under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) for dismissal, a defendant asserts that even assuming a plaintiff's allegations are true, the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > ... > Responses > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Motions to Dismiss

HN2 [down arrow] Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

A federal district court must be especially careful when faced with a motion for dismissal under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\). A court should accord the plaintiff's complaint a reasonably tolerant reading, because the dismissal of the suit under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) could preclude another suit based on any theory that the plaintiff might have advanced on the basis of the facts giving rise to the first action. A complaint almost barren of facts may comprise claims of a specific category if read liberally.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrs & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > ... > Responses > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss

HN3 Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

Dismissal of a complaint pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) is appropriate only if it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief. A federal district court deciding whether to grant dismissal under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) must accept the well-pleaded factual allegations of the complaint as true and construe such allegations in favor of the plaintiff. As a point of clarification, a federal district court is required to accept only factual allegations; it is not required to accept legal conclusions that may be alleged or that may be drawn from the pleaded facts.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > ... > Responses > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss

HN4 Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

To escape dismissal under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\), a plaintiff need not set out in detail the facts upon which a claim is based, but must allege sufficient facts to outline the cause of action. The complaint cannot be amended by the briefs filed by the plaintiff in opposition to a motion to dismiss.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > ... > Responses > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss

HN5 Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

A defendant may not attempt to refute the complaint or to present a different set of allegations in a Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) challenge. The defendant's attack must be against the sufficiency of the complaint; it must demonstrate that the plaintiff's claim, as set forth by the complaint, is without legal consequence.

Civil Procedure > ... > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss > Failure to State Claim

Civil Procedure > ... > Responses > Defenses, Demurrsers & Objections > Motions to Dismiss

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Summary Judgment > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Motions for Summary Judgment > General Overview

HN6 Motions to Dismiss, Failure to State Claim

Where a motion to dismiss is filed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\) and materials outside the motion to dismiss are presented to and not excluded by the court, then the motion to dismiss may be treated as a motion for summary judgment pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 56. Thus, where a party moves for dismissal upon the pleadings alone, it will be considered a Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) motion for dismissal. However, where a party files a Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) motion for dismissal and the court relies on materials outside the pleadings, it will be considered a Rule 56 motion for summary judgment.

850 F. Supp. 758, *7581994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5382, 5382

Civil Procedure > ... > Discovery > Methods of Discovery > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Legal Entitlement

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Materiality of Facts

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Supporting Materials > General Overview

HN7 Discovery, Methods of Discovery

Summary judgment under Fed. R. Civ. P. 56 is proper if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with any affidavits, show that there exists no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Supporting Materials > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Movant Persuasion & Proof

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

Civil Procedure > Trials > Jury Trials > Province of Court & Jury

HN8 Summary Judgment, Supporting Materials

In a Fed. R. Civ. P. 56 summary judgment motion, the initial burden is on the moving party to demonstrate, with or without supporting affidavits, the absence of a genuine issue of material fact and that judgment as a matter of law should be granted in the moving party's favor. A material question of fact is a question which will be outcome determinative of an issue in the case. The facts material in a specific case are determined by the substantive law controlling the given case or issue.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Opposing Materials > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Movant Persuasion & Proof

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > Nonmovant Persuasion & Proof

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

850 F. Supp. 758, *7581994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5382, 5382

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Supporting Materials > General Overview

HN9 [blue download icon] Summary Judgment, Opposing Materials

Once the moving party has met its initial burden in its Fed. R. Civ. P. 56 summary judgment motion, the opposing party must go beyond the pleadings and designate specific facts showing that there is a genuine material issue for trial. The nonmoving party cannot rest on its pleadings or upon conclusory allegations in affidavits.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

HN10 [blue download icon] Summary Judgment, Entitlement as Matter of Law

During its analysis of a Fed. R. Civ. P. 56 summary judgment motion, the federal district court deciding the motion must construe the facts and draw all reasonable inferences in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Furthermore, it is required to analyze summary judgment motions under the standard of proof relevant to the case or issue.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Private Actions > Costs & Attorney Fees > General Overview

Commercial Law (UCC) > Sales (Article 2) > Remedies > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Clayton Act > General Overview

HN11 [blue download icon] Private Actions, Costs & Attorney Fees

Section 4 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 15, specifies that any person who is in his business by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws may sue therefor in the district court of the United States in the district in which the defendant resides or is found or has an agent, without respect to the amount in controversy, and may recover three-fold the damages by him sustained, and the costs of suit including a reasonable attorney's fee.

Counsel: [1] For Plaintiff: Philip A. Whistler.

For Defendant: Ronald E. Elberger, George E. Purdy, Robert J. Konopa and Ann-Carol Simons.

Judges: Sharp

Opinion by: ALLEN SHARP

Opinion

[*759] MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

On or about July 15, 1993, the plaintiffs, Thomas Blackburn and Raymond T. Green, filed this complaint invoking this court's federal question jurisdiction under Title 15 U.S.C. § 1, commonly known as the Sherman Antitrust Act. The plaintiffs are lawyers, as are the defendants, Charles Sweeney Jr. and Daniel H. Pfeifer, and once upon a time, they were all in the same law firm with offices in South Bend, Indiana, Fort Wayne, Indiana, and elsewhere, which engaged extensively in television advertising focused principally on the solicitation of personal injury litigation.

On or about October 6, 1993, the defendants filed a motion to dismiss under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure (Fed.R.Civ.P.). Later, on February 24, 1994, the defendants filed a further motion to dismiss, or, in the alternative, for summary judgment, invoking both Rules 12\(b\)\(6\) and 56, Fed.R.Civ.P. The record in this case, while sounding in the high level concepts of antitrust law, has all of the [2] earmarks of a domestic relations dispute, since it involves the break-up of a small, tightly-compact law firm and the professional and personal relationships that inhere therein.

One of the principal responses by the plaintiffs to the dispositive motions filed by the defendants is to launch major discovery warfare, in which neither of these parties are wearing secular halos. It is somewhat amusing that a part of this discovery dispute involves an argument about where.

This court has very serious reservations as to the need for any further discovery in this case to deal with these pending motions. However, in the interest of the greatest caution, all of these parties, namely, Thomas Blackburn, Raymond T. Green, Charles Sweeney, Jr. and Daniel Pfeifer, are now ORDERED to appear personally in Fort Wayne, Indiana, before the Honorable Roger B. Cosby, United States Magistrate Judge, and all disputed discovery materials are to be presented to Magistrate Judge Cosby in camera, so that he can determine and file a Report and Recommendation as to what further discovery is relevant to the issues in this case as framed by the pending motions. It is the expressed desire of this court [3] that such proceeding go forward as soon as possible. This court expects these lawyer parties to fully comply with this Order and will accept nothing less than same. This court will use its full authority to see that both the letter and the spirit of this Order is fully complied with. IT IS SO ORDERED.

This record literally reeks with revenge, retaliation and retribution. To be sure these four lawyers, with the advice of other lawyers, negotiated vigorously and extensively [*760] to agree upon a final version of a written agreement with reference to the mutual withdrawal from partnerships. After elaborate and extensive negotiations, a final version was agreed upon and signed. See Appendix "A". This record is absolutely silent as to any improper coercion applied to these plaintiffs before they signed this agreement. The ink was hardly dry on this highly relevant written document until these plaintiffs were attempting to undermine it on the basis of federal antitrust law. The question to be answered in this case is whether there is a possible basis for them to do so under the so-called rule of reason. More on that later.

This court has read with some considerable interest the massive [4] discovery that has already taken place in this case, and realizing that especially in the area of economic proof, there are a vast number of details that might arguably be relevant. This court has read and examined the elaborate paper chase in this case, and the conduct of some counsel in some of the deposition transcripts stops just short of being oppressive harassment. There appears to be a propensity on the part of some simply to want to prolong the process and make it as agonizing for the adversary as possible.

Because of what has already happened in this case, this court intends to run a very tight rein on any further discovery and it is for that reason, among others, that these four lawyer parties, as well as their counsel, will appear at one time and personally before United States Magistrate Judge Roger B. Cosby, who will take a very firm hand in dealing with any further discovery in this case.

This court now takes up both the motions to dismiss filed by the defendants on October 6, 1993, and the motion to dismiss and in the alternative, for summary judgment, filed on February 24, 1994.

When this apparently lucrative lawyer partnership broke up, a written agreement was entered [5] into which was attached to the original complaint, and is now attached as Appendix "A" to this Memorandum and Order. After having signed this agreement, these plaintiffs now contend that it violates Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1. HN1 By moving under Fed.R.Civ.P. 12\(b\)\(6\) for dismissal, the defendant asserts that even assuming the plaintiff's allegations are true, the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. This rule contains only one of several "filters" used by the courts to separate "those suits that should receive plenary consideration from those that should not." Gomez v. Illinois State Bd. of Educ., 811 F.2d 1030, 1039 \(7th Cir. 1987\). The rule's capacity to save the parties' and the court's resources is obvious.

HN2 However, this court must be especially careful when faced with a motion for dismissal. The court should accord the plaintiff's complaint a reasonably tolerant reading, because the dismissal of the suit under 12(b)(6) could preclude another suit based on any theory that the plaintiff might have advanced on the basis of the facts giving rise to the first action.

[6] Id. (citing, American Nurses' Association v. State of Illinois, 783 F.2d 716, 726-27 (7th Cir. 1986)). See also, Wright v. Bosch Trucking Co., 804 F. Supp. 1069, 1071 (C.D.Ill. 1992); Stewart v. RCA Corp., 790 F.2d 624, 632 (7th Cir. 1986). As stated by the Stewart court, a complaint "almost barren of facts" may comprise claims of a specific category if read liberally. Stewart, 790 F.2d at 632.

HN3 Dismissal of a complaint is appropriate only if it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief. Hishon v. King & Spalding, 467 U.S. 69, 73, 81 L. Ed. 2d 59, 104 S. Ct. 2229 (1984) (citing Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46, 2 L. Ed. 2d 80, 78 S. Ct. 99 (1957)). See also, Dawson v. General Motors Corp., 977 F.2d 369, 372 (7th Cir. 1992). This court must accept the well-pleaded factual allegations of the complaint as true and "construe [7] such allegations in favor of the plaintiff." Roots Partnership v. Land's End, Inc., 965 F.2d 1411, 1416 (7th Cir. 1992). As a point of clarification, the court notes that it is required to accept only factual allegations; "it is not required to accept legal conclusions that may be alleged or that may be drawn from the pleaded facts." *Milwaukee v. I*7611 Saxbe*, 546 F.2d 693, 704 (7th Cir. 1976); see also, Reichenberger v. Pritchard, 660 F.2d 280, 282 (1981).

HN4 To escape dismissal " [a] plaintiff need not set out in detail the facts upon which a claim is based, but must allege sufficient facts to outline the cause of action." Marmon Group, Inc. v. Rexnord, Inc., 822 F.2d 31, 34 (7th Cir. 1987) (citations omitted). "The complaint cannot be amended by the briefs filed by the plaintiff in opposition to a motion to dismiss." Gomez, 811 F.2d at 1039.

HN5 Likewise, the defendant may not "attempt to refute the complaint or to present a different set of allegations" in its 12(b)(6) challenge. Id. The defendant's attack must be against the sufficiency [8] of the complaint; it "must demonstrate that the plaintiff's claim, as set forth by the complaint, is without legal consequence." Id.

HN6 Where a motion to dismiss is filed pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure (Fed.R.Civ.P.) and materials outside the motion to dismiss are presented to and not excluded by the court, then the motion to dismiss may be treated as a motion for summary judgment pursuant to Rule 56, Fed.R.Civ.P. See, First Interstate Bank, N.A. v. Chapman & Cutler, 837 F.2d 775, 776-777 (7th Cir. 1988); Cange & Stotler and Co., Inc., 826 F.2d 581, 583 (7th Cir. 1987); and Winslow v. Walters, 815 F.2d 1114, 1116 (7th Cir. 1987). Thus, where a party moves for dismissal upon the pleadings alone, it will be considered a Rule 12(b)(6) motion for dismissal. However, where a party files a Rule 12(b)(6) motion for dismissal and the court relies on materials outside the pleadings, it will be considered a Rule 56 motion for summary judgment.

HN7 Summary judgment is proper if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with [9] any affidavits, show that there exists no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed.R.Civ.P. 56; Russo v. Health, Welfare & Pension Fund, Local 705, 984 F.2d 762 (7th Cir. 1993).

A thorough discussion of Rule 56 by the Supreme Court of the United States can be found in a trilogy of cases decided in 1986. See, Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538, 106 S. Ct. 1348 (1986); Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265, 106 S. Ct. 2548 (1986);¹ and Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 106 S. Ct. 2505 (1986). Celotex addressed the initial burdens of the parties under Rule 56, and Anderson addressed the standards under which the record is to be analyzed within the structure of Rule 56.

¹ For the judicial epilogue of Celotex, see Catrett v. Johns-Manville Sales Corp., 263 U.S. App. D.C. 399, 826 F.2d 33 (D.C. Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1066, 98 L. Ed. 2d 992, 108 S. Ct. 1028 (1988).

[10] HN8[↑]

The initial burden is on the moving party to demonstrate, "with or without supporting affidavits," the absence of a genuine issue of material fact and that judgment as a matter of law should be granted in the moving party's favor. Celotex, 477 U.S. at 324 (quoting Fed.R.Civ.P. 56). A material question of fact is a question which will be outcome determinative of an issue in the case. The Supreme Court has instructed that the facts material in a specific case shall be determined by the substantive law controlling the given case or issue. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248.

HN9[↑] Once the moving party has met the initial burden, the opposing party must "go beyond the pleadings" and "designate 'specific facts showing that there is a genuine [material] issue for trial.'" Id. The nonmoving party cannot rest on its pleadings, Hughes v. Joliet Correctional Center, 931 F.2d 425, 428 \(7th Cir. 1991\), or upon conclusory allegations in affidavits. Cusson-Cobb v. O'Lessker, 953 F.2d 1079, 1081 \(7th Cir. 1992\). "The days are [11] gone, if they ever existed, when the nonmoving party could sit back and simply poke holes in the moving party's summary judgment motion." Fitzpatrick v. Catholic Bishop of Chicago, 916 F.2d 1254, 1256 \(7th Cir. 1990\).

HN10[↑] During its analysis, this court must construe the facts and draw all reasonable inferences in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Brennan v. Daley, 929 F.2d 346, 348 \(7th Cir. 1991\) Furthermore, it is required to analyze summary judgment motions [*762] under the standard of proof relevant to the case or issue. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 252-255.

The 1986 Supreme Court trilogy was recently re-examined in Eastman Kodak v. Image Technical Services, U.S., 112 S. Ct. 2072, 119 L. Ed. 2d 265 \(1992\), a case born in the context of antitrust law. The most that can be said for Kodak is that it did not tinker with Celotex and Anderson, and possibly involves an attempt to clarify Matsushita. This view is well supported by an in-depth academic analysis in Schwarzer, Hirsch, and Barrans, [12] The Analysis and Decision of Summary Judgment Motions, 139 F.R.D. 441 \(1992\).

At the outset of his administration, the number one item on President Woodrow Wilson's agenda was the Clayton Act, now found at 15 U.S.C. 15. HN11[↑] Section 4 of that Act provides as follows:

Any person who shall be injured in his business by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws may sue therefor in the district court of the United States in the district in which the defendant resides or is found or has an agent, without respect to the amount in controversy, and shall recover three-fold the damages by him sustained, and the costs of suit including a reasonable attorney's fee.

To be sure the 62nd Congress painted with a very broad legislative brush in what was considered to be remedial and reform legislation. However, the Supreme Court has not read the statute so generously. For example, in Brunswick Corp. v. Pueblo Bowl-O-Mat, Inc., 429 U.S. 477, 50 L. Ed. 2d 701, 97 S. Ct. 690 \(1977\), holding that the injury involved in an antitrust case should reflect the anti-competitive [13] effect either of the violations or of the anti-competitive acts made possible by the violation. There are serious causation problems of both kind and quality involved. More than a mere injury in fact is required. See Associated General Contractors, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519, 74 L. Ed. 2d 723, 103 S. Ct. 897 \(1983\).

One of the areas in which attempts are made by private individuals to invoke the blessings of § 4 of the Clayton Act involves staff physicians in disputes with hospitals about their staff privileges. An illustrative case in point is found in Robles v. Humana Hospital Cartersville, 785 F. Supp. 989 \(N.D. Ga. 1992\). Robles does not make it easy for plaintiffs in this regard, and the magic words seem to be wound up in the concept of "antitrust injury." See also Jefferson Parish Hospital District No. 2 v. Hyde, 466 U.S. 2, 31, 80 L. Ed. 2d 2, 104 S. Ct. 1551 \(1983\).

The centerpiece of this agreement that is here disputed appears to relate to agreed restrictions on advertising in three described [14] television marketing areas, namely, South Bend, Fort Wayne and Lafayette, Indiana. It needs to be emphasized that this agreement does not forbid any of the parties from engaging in the practice of law in South Bend, Indiana or any place where such is authorized. It only relates to an agreement with regard to advertising.

The parties in this case and their counsel would do well to revisit the landmark case decided by Judge Learned Hand a long time ago in United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, 148 F.2d 416 \(2d Cir. 1945\), dealing with relevant market. See also Abadir & Co. v. First Mississippi Corp., 651 F.2d 422 \(5th Cir. 1981\). This court can know judicially and from this record that in the entirety of the Northern District of Indiana, consisting approximately of the north third of the State of Indiana, drawing an east-west line through Lafayette, Indiana, and dealing with the territory in Indiana north of that line, there is widespread competition for plaintiffs' personal injury litigation involving lawyers and law who advertise on television, other electronic media, and by elaborate Yellow Page advertisements, as well [15] as roadside billboard advertisements. This court can and does take note of the number of pages given over to that kind of advertisements in the telephone directories which cover a large part of the territory of this district. There is a substantial television market emanating from within Indiana in South Bend, Elkhart, Fort Wayne, and Lafayette.

The plaintiffs here assert that paragraphs seven, nine and eleven are an agreement to allocate markets among horizontal competitors, [*763] and as such is subject to the per se rule rather than the rule of reason, as found in Standard Oil v. United States, 221 U.S. 1, 55 L. Ed. 619, 31 S. Ct. 502 \(1911\). A facial examination of this agreement on its face fails to disclose any price fixing agreement among horizontal competitors. It takes an extremely large jump in logic, as well as in law, to conclude from the agreed restrictions on advertisements to an agreement to allocate market territory. That is the heart of the dispute in this case. These provisions fall far short of the requirements of Northern Pacific Railway Co. v. United States, 356 U.S. 1, 2 L. Ed. 2d 545, 78 S. Ct. 514 \(1958\). [16] See also Consultants and Designers v. Butler Service Group, 720 F.2d 1553 \(11th Cir. 1983\).

As strange as it might seem to someone who would have dropped on this planet recently, the phenomenon of television advertising lawyers is a relatively new one, made possible by a generous reading of the First Amendment of the Constitution of the United States by the Supreme Court in Bates v. State Bar of Arizona, 433 U.S. 350, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810, 97 S. Ct. 2691 \(1977\). See also Shapero v. Kentucky Bar Assn., 486 U.S. 466, 100 L. Ed. 2d 475, 108 S. Ct. 1916 \(1988\). Although certainly lawyers such as Abraham Lincoln placed small ads in local newspapers in a day before mass media and mass markets, television advertising and indeed elaborate Yellow Page advertising is not the only way, nor even the primary way, by which most personal injury lawyers acquire clients. Traditionally, it was on the basis of such esoteric things as professional competence and reputation. But we live in a new world, and those of us who have lived long in the profession [*17] must understand the dynamic of change, and in the fashion of Henry Adams in his Education of Henry Adams, we have to understand that the society in which we live is not static. Neither is the legal profession, nor the means by which lawyers acquire clients.

Specifically, there is absolutely nothing in this agreement to prohibit any of the lawyers who are parties in this case from appearing in any state or federal court in which they are entitled to practice anywhere in the United States of America. Just because able and experienced plaintiffs' counsel calls this a market allocation agreement, invoking the per se rule of § 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1, does not make it so. Continental TV, Inc. v. GTE Sylvania, Inc., 433 U.S. 36, 53 L. Ed. 2d 568, 97 S. Ct. 2549 \(1977\), does not enure to the benefit of these plaintiffs.

This court has no difficulty whatsoever in holding that this agreement with reference to advertising restrictions is not a so-called per se agreement. See the reasoning and result in Abadir. That to this court is a fairly easy decision.

The more difficult [18] decision has to do with whether this record examined under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) or 56, Fed.R.Civ.P. would permit a trial on the merits under the rule of reason. Standard Oil v. United States, 221 U.S. 1, 55 L. Ed. 619, 31 S. Ct. 502 \(1911\). Abadir, supra.

This court is all too aware of Doe v. St. Joseph Hospital, 788 F.2d 411 \(7th Cir. 1986\), since it fell the task of this Judge to try this case on remand and notes that the plaintiff was unsuccessful in a trial before a jury, and that result was affirmed on appeal.

In examining the rule of reason claims, this court has been directed to the deposition of both plaintiff lawyers, which alone throws very serious doubts as to whether even under a generous reading of the rule of reason these two plaintiff lawyers can succeed at all.

The plaintiffs have also engaged in a frontal assault by filing their own motion for summary judgment on March 25, 1994. Their opening shot is that this agreement between competing advertising personal injury lawyers not to advertise in certain areas is per se illegal, and support the argument [19] that such is an allocation of territories in order to minimize competition, creating per se illegality. Easy to say. The cases cited are light years away from this factual setting. Compare Palmer v. BRG of Georgia Inc., 498 U.S. 46, 112 L. Ed. 2d 349, 111 S. Ct. 401 \(1990\), and United States v. Topco Assoc. Inc., 405 U.S. 596, 31 L. Ed. 2d 515, 92 S. Ct. 1126 \(1972\).

With all due deference, this court is very familiar and has read with historic interest [United States v. Gasoline Retailers Assoc. \[*764\] Inc., 285 F.2d 688 \(7th Cir. 1961\)](#), and the situation here is vastly different. This case does not involve in any way the advertising or restrictions of advertising on prices, since prices are not in any way the subject of the advertisements here involved. With all deference to the plaintiffs, the circumstances in this case do not even closely relate to those in Goldfarb v. Virginia State Bar, 421 U.S. 773, 44 L. Ed. 2d 572, 95 S. Ct. 2004 \(1975\). Goldfarb is authority [20] on the scope of the Commerce Clause here; it most certainly is not about bar association fee schedules and their enforcement.

The doctrine of ancillary restraint referred to by the plaintiffs in their March 25, 1994, brief is a most difficult concept. See Polk Bros. Inc. v. Forest City Enterprises, Inc., 776 F.2d 185 \(7th Cir. 1985\). But the real problem is to find whether it has anything to do with this case. There is something of a tacit admission by the plaintiffs that even if the ancillary restraint doctrine is not applicable to the per se claims but under a rule of reason analysis, there might still be a basis for the plaintiffs to recover, citing Sound Ship Building Corp. v. Bethlehem Steel Corp., 387 F. Supp. 252 \(Dist.N.J. 1975\), aff'd, 533 F.2d 96 \(3d Cir.\), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 860, 50 L. Ed. 2d 137, 97 S. Ct. 161 \(1976\).

The Contract Clause in Article I of the Constitution of the United States has gone through much judicial recycling since Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 17 U.S. 518, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. Ed. 629 \(1989\), [21] and the liberty of contract theory found in Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U.S. 578, 41 L. Ed. 832, 17 S. Ct. 427 \(1897\), has likewise been through the judicial shredder, there still remains perhaps, a very narrow slice of economic privacy by which persons, which includes lawyers, can engage in arms-length contractual agreements that do not fall afoul of either the Sherman or the Clayton Act.

This limited and narrow arrangement with regard to advertising just may fall within that narrow legal path through or around the thrust of the Sherman and Clayton Acts.

This court is totally confident that this case is not a per se violation case. This court is somewhat less confident in this proceeding under Rule 12\(b\)\(6\) and Rule 56 (Fed.R.Civ.P.), as to whether it is possible for these plaintiffs to make out a rule of reason case. One of the principal hang-ups of this court is the concept of relevant market so well defined 50 years ago by Judge Learned Hand in United States v. Aluminum Co. of America. It may well be that when the concept of relevant market is carefully dissected, all of these lawyers are truly bit players in [22] the relevant market, in spite of all of their advertising efforts. Notwithstanding the enormous problems, possibly insurmountable, that these plaintiffs must solve in presenting a rule of reason claim here, this court is constrained to let the case go forward, let the relevant discovery take place, permit the parties to again address the rule of reason issue under Rule 56, Fed.R.Civ.P., and then to proceed on to trial, if necessary.

In 1990, the Congress of the United States enacted the Civil Justice Reform Act of 1990, 28 U.S.C. §§ 471-482. Literally hundreds, if not thousands, hours involving judges, lawyers and academics are involved in adopting a so-called plan, the focus of which was to expedite the trial and disposition of civil cases at a minimal cost. It has never been the view of this Judge that the principal villain in the cost of litigation is at the doorstep to the federal judiciary. It is rather at the doorsteps of litigants and the legal profession. Nonetheless, this court did what it was required to do, and continues to have an ongoing concern in regard to the cost as well as to the promptness of disposition of civil cases.

This case [23] is going to be enormously costly and time-consuming to the parties and counsel. It may well drain time as well as fiscal resources to the breaking point for all concerned. Since these parties are lawyers, they, along with their respective counsel, all of whom are experienced and talented litigators, should be prepared to meet with Magistrate Judge Robin D. Pierce, in order to engage in in-depth, extensive settlement negotiations. This court should also state that its dividing certain functions between two of the magistrate judges in this district is quite intentional. It is the intent to have these parties and their counsel deal with Magistrate [*765] Judge Roger B. Cosbey, in regard to the discovery problems in the case, and to deal with Magistrate Judge Pierce in regard to settlement discussions, and to keep those two functions separate with two separate magistrate judges.

This court now GRANTS summary judgment and dismissal as to all of the plaintiffs' claims under the so-called per se doctrine. The motions to dismiss and for summary judgment as to the rule of reason claims are now DENIED with leave to renew the same after discovery has been completed. It is the hope, sans a settlement, [24] that the discovery process will be completed at an early time, since this case can be set for trial possibly as early as August this year in Lafayette, Indiana.

To the extent that these parties and counsel are quibbling over the existence or non-existence of interstate commerce, they should save their voices and paper. There can be no doubt that both the Sherman Act and the Clayton Act are based on the commerce authority of Congress in Article I of the Constitution of the United States. There also is no doubt that the Commerce Clause has been given a generous interpretation from the time of Chief Justice Marshall's opinion in Gibbons v. Ogden, 22 U.S. 1, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. Ed. 23 (1824). There was a brief glitch in that ongoing process in United States v. E.C. Knight, 156 U.S. 1, 39 L. Ed. 325, 15 S. Ct. 249 (1895), but that was only a brief detour from an ongoing and expansive view of interstate commerce. For example, see Southern Pacific Co. v. Arizona, 325 U.S. 761, 89 L. Ed. 1915, 65 S. Ct. 1515 (1945), [25] and Kassel v. Consolidated Freightways Corp. Delaware, 450 U.S. 662, 67 L. Ed. 2d 580, 101 S. Ct. 1309 (1981). So, given the present expansive view of the commerce power, there is absolutely no question that these defendant lawyers are engaged in interstate commerce activities. So, it is not necessary for the plaintiffs to go through the client records of the defendants just to find out where these clients live. No further discovery of that nature should be allowed by the magistrate judge.

If it is necessary for this case to go to trial on the rule of reason claims, it will be the intent of this court to bifurcate the issues of liability and try those issues first to verdict, and then and only if the plaintiffs prevail will the trier of fact be submitted relevant evidence on the issue of damages. If the only reason for requesting the income tax information from the defendants is on these damage issues, such will be stayed until a determination of liability has been made.

All of which is now ORDERED.

DATED: March 31, 1994

Allen Sharp, CHIEF JUDGE

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

APPENDIX "A"

AGREEMENT TO WITHDRAW FROM PARTNERSHIPS

[26] This Agreement made this 3 day of September, 1992, between Charles A. Sweeney (hereinafter "Sweeney"), Daniel H. Pfeifer (hereinafter "Pfeifer"), Thomas D. Blackburn (hereinafter "Blackburn"), and Raymond T. Green (hereinafter "Green"), witness that:

WHEREAS, Sweeney, Pfeifer and Blackburn are partners in the South Bend, partnership of Sweeney, Pfeifer and Blackburn (hereinafter "SPB"), the Fort Wayne partnership of SPB and the Lafayette partnership of SPB, and;

WHEREAS, Green is a partner in the Fort Wayne and Lafayette partnerships of SPB, and;

WHEREAS, the parties to this Agreement wish to settle certain disputes among them, and to restructure the three (3) partnerships;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the premises and the mutual agreements herein contained, the parties hereby agree as follows:

1. Blackburn hereby withdraws from the South Bend partnership of SPB and shall have no further rights in its business affairs or decisions. Blackburn will forego any rights he may have to any buy-out under the existing partnership agreement or to an accounting under common law or the Indiana Uniform Partnership Act.
2. Sweeney and Pfeifer hereby withdraw from the Fort Wayne and Lafayette [27] partnerships of SPB and shall have no further rights in its business affairs or decisions. They will forego any rights they may have to any buy-out [*766] under the existing partnership agreement or to an accounting under common law or the Indiana Uniform Partnership Act.
3. The lawsuit between the parties to this Agreement, now pending in the Allen Superior Court, will be dismissed with prejudice, and a stipulation made of record indicating that the conduct, actions and complaints involved private partnership matters involving contractual partnership issues only. This settlement shall be kept confidential among the parties and no disclosure of the terms hereof shall be made.
4. Blackburn and Green shall, within thirty (30) days of the date of signing of this agreement, pay attorney fees to Robert J. Konopa in the amount of $ 10,888.95 and to Leonard Eilbacher in the amount of $ 3,690.50 for representing Sweeney and Pfeifer in the litigation referenced in paragraph 3 above and for their work in restructuring the partnership.
5. Blackburn and Green will pay $ 37,856.50 each to Sweeney and Pfeifer as their share of monies spent for advertising pursuant to the accounting already provided relating [28] to the litigation referenced in paragraph 3. Payment shall be made no later than 12/31/92.
6. Blackburn and Green will pay any accounting fees for amending the 1990 and 1991 Fort Wayne partnership income tax returns, if they are amended. Blackburn and Green will indemnify Sweeney and Pfeifer for any penalties, interest, and additional taxes incurred, if any, for these amended returns.
7. Sweeney and Pfeifer shall not directly or indirectly, within the areas described on Exhibit "A" attached hereto, do any advertising, including but not limited to, television, radio, newspapers, billboards, direct mail or yellow pages. In consideration of the agreement contained in paragraph 2 herein, Blackburn and Green shall not directly or indirectly, within the areas described on Exhibit "B" attached hereto, do any advertising, including but not limited to, television, radio, newspapers, billboards, direct mail or yellow pages.
8. Sweeney and Pfeifer for their agreement not to advertise as set forth in paragraph 7 above will each be entitled to receive 25% of the net annual profits of the Fort Wayne and Lafayette offices through the remainder of 1992 as well as for an additional period of five [29] (5) calendar years. The final payment shall be made on or before the closing of books on December 31, 1997, an amount equal to 25% of the then existing amounts transferred into the advance account from the professional account. Sweeney and Pfeifer shall have the right to receive monthly and annual income statements through December 31, 1997. Sweeney and Pfeifer shall have the rights to an accounting of cases settled and monies disbursed during the period of January through April, 1998. The following information shall be provided, upon request:

Client Name, Insurer, Dates of offer, Dates of Acceptance, Amount of Settlement, Dates of Disbursement

9. The annual advertising budgets for television, radio and newspaper for the Fort Wayne and Lafayette offices for the years 1993 - 1997 shall not exceed:

Fort Wayne/Warsaw - $ 125,000

Lafayette/Kokomo - $ 45,000 (TV) and $ 12,000 (Radio and other media)

10. Blackburn and Green shall retain yellow page advertising in all TV coverage areas in the Fort Wayne and Lafayette markets that are currently in place i.e., all yellow pages in the TV coverage areas of such markets.

11. Blackburn and Green shall retain yellow page advertising [30] currently in place in the Marion, Indiana/Grant County areas even though it is partially outside of the Fort Wayne or Lafayette TV coverage areas.

12. Blackburn and Green shall retain the office located in Warsaw, Indiana, which is a part of the Fort Wayne partnership.

13. Sweeney and Pfeifer will receive an amount equal to their initial investment of approximately $ 8,000.00 each, in the building located at 3344 Mallard Cove Lane. Such amounts shall be due and payable on or before December 31, 1992. Sweeney and [*767] Pfeifer will quitclaim their interest in said building to Blackburn and Green and their spouses, upon receipt of said payment.

14. Blackburn and Green will assume and hold harmless Sweeney and Pfeifer on the following indebtedness:

- (a) The commercial line of credit at Summit Bank which has an approximate balance of $ 80,000.00.
- (b) The mortgage on the Mallard Cove property at Valley Bank.

15. The Fort Wayne and Lafayette offices will be allowed to advertise in the ordinary course of business as SPB at least until such time as the next edition of the yellow pages for the primary Lafayette and Fort Wayne areas are published. Such advertising shall be done in compliance [31] with all ethical requirements set forth in the Code of Professional Responsibility for the State of Indiana.

16. There are no pending malpractice claims against Blackburn or Green and there are pending malpractice claims against Sweeney and Pfeifer. Each partnership shall maintain until December 31, 1997 professional liability insurance coverage on a claims made basis insuring each partnership and the individual partners in an amount not less than current coverage. Proof of coverage shall be provided to any party to this agreement upon request.

Sweeney and Pfeifer shall be liable for all costs and damages on their pending claims as well as any future claims naming them or the South Bend Partnership. They shall indemnify the other parties from and against any and all claims, expenses (including any deductible payments required by the professional liability policies) or damages of any nature, related to any such claim.

Blackburn and Green shall be liable for all costs and damages on any future claims naming them or the Fort Wayne or Lafayette Partnership. They shall indemnify the other parties from and against any and all claims, expenses (including any deductible payments required [32] by the professional liability policies) or damages of any nature, related to any such claim.

17. All clients' files on pending matters have been transferred to the appropriate partnership. Blackburn will forego any interest in attorney fees to be received on the Saunders and Kunz cases, now pending. These cases will be handled by the South Bend office upon consent of the clients.

18. The financial books, records and accounts of the Fort Wayne and Lafayette partnerships of SPB shall be delivered to the office of the Fort Wayne partnership by September 4, 1992. All advertising files and personal checking account records shall be returned to Blackburn and neither Sweeney nor Pfeifer shall retain copies.

19. Except for a violation of paragraph 7, above any dispute arising from this agreement shall be resolved with the use of an arbitrator, to be agreed upon among the parties. If the parties are unable to agree to a single arbitrator, each side of the dispute shall chose one arbitrator and they shall choose a third whose decision shall be final. All arbitrators shall be affiliated with the American Arbitration Association or a similar organization. The parties to this agreement agree that [33] a violation of paragraph 7 above would create immediate and irreparable harm with no adequate remedy at law. Accordingly, all parties shall retain the right to seek a Temporary Restraining Order and Permanent Injunction with damages and attorney fees for any violation of paragraph 7. The prevailing party to any action under this paragraph shall be entitled to payment to attorney fees and litigation expenses incurred.

20. all parties release, acquit and forever discharge the other parties for any and all claims, charges, rights, demands, costs, pecuniary loss, damage (direct or consequential) actions or causes of action arising before the date of this agreement and not set out above.

21. This agreement constitutes the entire agreement between the parties concerning the subject matter expressed herein and any other communications, whether written or verbal, shall not be binding.

22. This agreement may be signed in counterparts, all of which shall have the effect of being an original.

[*768] 23. This agreement shall be governed by the laws of the State of Indiana.

24. This agreement shall be binding on any successors of any partnership, and where there are multiple parties incurring responsibilities [34] in any paragraph herein those responsibilities shall be joint and several.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties have caused this agreement to be executed.

SOUTH BEND PARTNERSHIP OF SWEENEY, PFEIFER AND BLACKBURN

Charles A. Sweeney, Partner

Daniel H. Pfeifer, Partner

Thomas D. Blackburn, Partner

LAFAYETTE PARTNERSHIP OF SWEENEY, PFEIFER AND BLACKBURN

Charles A. Sweeney, Partner

Daniel H. Pfeifer, Partner

Thomas D. Blackburn, Partner

Raymond T. Greene, Partner

Charles A. Sweeney, Individually

Daniel H. Pfeifer, Individually

Thomas D. Blackburn, Individually

Raymond T. Greene, Individually

FORT WAYNE PARTNERSHIP OF SWEENEY, PFEIFER AND BLACKBURN

Charles A. Sweeney, Partner

Daniel H. Pfeifer, Partner

Thomas D. Blackburn, Partner

Raymond T. Greene, Partner

EXHIBIT A

The T.V. coverage area of Fort Wayne shall include the following counties:

Adams

Allen

Huntington

Jay
Kosciusko
*La Grange
*Miami
*Noble
Steuben
Wabash
Wells
Whitley
Grant

*Exception: [769] Sweeney and Pfeifer may place yellow page advertising in LaGrange and Miami counties and in the city of Ligonier in Noble County

The T.V. coverage area of Lafayette shall include the following counties: [*35]

Benton
Boone
Carrol
Cass
Clinton
Fountain
Howard
*Miami
Montgomery
Tippecanoe
Warren
White

EXHIBIT B

The T.V. coverage area of South Bend shall include the following counties:

St. Joseph
Elkhart
Marshall
La Porte
Fulton
Starke
Porter

End of Document

Mfrs. Life Ins. Co. v. Superior Court

Court of Appeal of California, First Appellate District, Division Two

April 4, 1994, Decided

No. A052795, No. A055038.

Reporter

23 Cal. App. 4th 1629 *; 1994 Cal. App. LEXIS 294 ; 94 Cal. Daily Op. Service 2415; 94 Daily Journal DAR 4577; 1994-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P70,659

MANUFACTURERS LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, Respondent; WEIL INSURANCE AGENCY, INC., Real Party in Interest. WEIL INSURANCE AGENCY, INC., Petitioner, v. THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, Respondent; MANUFACTURERS LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY et al., Real Parties in Interest.

Notice: 1 NOT CITABLE - SUPERSEDED BY GRANT OF REVIEW

Subsequent History: Rehearing Granted May 2, 1994, Reported at: 1994 Cal. App. LEXIS 457.

Prior History: Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, No. 920327, Alex J. Saldamando, Judge.

Disposition: In number A052795, let a peremptory writ of mandate issue directing the superior court to set aside its order of January 25, 1991, insofar as that order overruled defendants' demurrers to the Third Cause of Action (Unruh Act), the Fourth Cause of Action (Ins. Code, § 790.03, subd. \(c\)), and the Fifth Cause of Action (Bus. & Prof. Code, §§ 17200 et seq.), and to sustain those demurrers to said causes of action without leave to amend. The alternative writ is otherwise discharged.

In number A055038, let a peremptory writ of mandate issue directing the superior court to set aside its order of July 23, 1991, insofar as that order sustained defendants' demurrers to the First and Second Causes of Action (Cartwright Act), and to overrule the demurrers to those causes of action. The alternative writ is otherwise discharged.

Core Terms

Cartwright Act, cause of action, superseded, remedies, counts, annuities, demurrers, review den, defendants', settlement, dictum, Practices, implied repeal, provisions, regulation, preserves, repeal, right of action, anti trust law, violations, displace, italics, Unfair, courts, antitrust, exemption, appears, Amend, cases, insurance industry

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Torts > ... > Settlements > Structured Settlements > General Overview

Torts > Procedural Matters > Settlements > General Overview

HN1 [] Settlements, Structured Settlements

A settlement annuity is an annuity purchased by a liability carrier to fund a structured settlement in a personal injury action. A structured settlement is one in which the injury claimant agrees to accept periodic payments (i.e., the proceeds of an annuity) rather than a single lump sum. An annuity is classified in this state as a form of life insurance, pursuant to Cal. Ins. Code § 101.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Horizontal Refusals to Deal > General Overview

HN2 Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Horizontal Refusals to Deal

The Cartwright Act, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16720 and 16721.5, states a general prohibition against conduct effecting a combination in restraint of trade, i.e., a trust. One common species of a trust is a concerted refusal to deal with other traders, or, as it is often called, the group boycott. The prohibition on such conduct extends to every type of business, including insurance.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Horizontal Refusals to Deal > General Overview

HN3 Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Horizontal Refusals to Deal

The Unfair Insurance Practices Act, Cal. Ins. Code §§ 790 through 790.10, prohibits acts of boycott, coercion, or intimidation resulting in or tending to result in unreasonable restraint of, or monopoly in, the business of insurance, pursuant to Cal. Ins. Code § 790.03\(c\).

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN4 Legislation, Interpretation

In dealing with any problem of statutory effect, the appellate court begins and often ends with the words of the statute. Courts are not at liberty to impute a particular intention to the legislature when nothing in the language of the statute implies such intention. The statute must be construed with reference to the whole system of law of which it is a part, so that each part may be harmonized and have effect. The different codes blend into each other and constitute a single statute for the purposes of statutory construction and legislative intent may be determined not only from an individual code but the whole body of law.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN5 Legislation, Interpretation

The Unfair Insurance Practices Act (UIPA), Cal. Ins. Code §§ 790 through 790.10, itself expresses an affirmative intention and expectation that it will preserve intact existing remedies for insurance industry misconduct. Cal. Ins. Code § 790.09 states that the commissioner's issuance of a cease-and-desist order shall not obstruct or impede the imposition of civil liability or criminal penalty under the laws of California arising from the same conduct.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade > Horizontal Refusals to Deal > General Overview

23 Cal. App. 4th 1629, *1629L 1994 Cal. App. LEXIS 294, 1

Governments > Legislation > Statutory Remedies & Rights

HN6 Price Fixing & Restraints of Trade, Horizontal Refusals to Deal

See Cal. Ins. Code § 790.09.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

Insurance Law > Industry Practices > Unfair Business Practices > General Overview

HN7 Legislation, Interpretation

The Unfair Insurance Practices Act, Cal. Ins. Code § 790.09, can only be given meaning by acknowledging a subsisting civil liability under the laws of California to which violators are already subject when the commissioner issues a cease-and-desist order, and from which no such order shall in any way relieve or absolve them.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

Insurance Law > Industry Practices > Unfair Business Practices > General Overview

HN8 Legislation, Interpretation

The Unfair Insurance Practices Act, Cal. Ins. Code §§ 790 through 790.10, does not supplant other remedies available under state law.

Evidence > Inferences & Presumptions > Presumptions > Conflicting Presumptions

Governments > Legislation > Expiration, Repeal & Suspension

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN9 Presumptions, Conflicting Presumptions

An implied repeal occurs when a later statute supersedes or substantially modifies an earlier law but without expressly referring to it. The law shuns repeals by implication. They are recognized only when there is no rational basis for harmonizing two potentially conflicting laws. The presumption against implied repeal is so strong that, to overcome the presumption the two acts must be irreconcilable, clearly repugnant, and so inconsistent that the two cannot have concurrent operation. The courts are bound, if possible, to maintain the integrity of both statutes if the two may stand together. There must be no possibility of concurrent operation. Implied repeal should not be found unless the later provision gives undebatable evidence of an intent to supersede the earlier.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN10 Legislation, Interpretation

Statutes are presumed to be consistent with the common law.

Governments > Legislation > Expiration, Repeal & Suspension

HN11[] Legislation, Expiration, Repeal & Suspension

The mere presence of administrative regulation, no matter how broad the regulatory authority, does not in itself create an irreconcilable conflict or otherwise warrant an inference of intent to repeal.

Governments > Legislation > Expiration, Repeal & Suspension

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN12[] Legislation, Expiration, Repeal & Suspension

Repeal by any other name is still repeal, and a claim of implied repeal is viewed with skepticism no matter how it is characterized.

Governments > Legislation > Statutory Remedies & Rights

Insurance Law > Industry Practices > Unfair Business Practices > General Overview

Insurance Law > Industry Practices > General Overview

Insurance Law > Industry Practices > Federal Regulations > General Overview

HN13[] Legislation, Statutory Remedies & Rights

Nothing in the Unfair Insurance Practices Act, Cal. Ins. Code §§ 790 through 790.10, suggests a purpose, unmistakable or otherwise, to displace existing state-law remedies. Rather the avowed purpose of the act was to displace federal law to the maximum extent possible in accordance with the offer of federal abstention embodied in the McCarran-Ferguson Act (McCarran), 15 U.S.C.S. §§ 1011-1015. Under McCarran, federal law is inapplicable to insurance insofar as the state generally proscribes (or permits) certain conduct. The condition of state regulation is satisfied by a state regulatory scheme possessing jurisdiction over the challenged practice. In other words, the mere assertion of state jurisdiction is sufficient to preclude the application of federal antitrust law under McCarran.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

Insurance Law > Industry Practices > Unfair Business Practices > General Overview

HN14[] Legislation, Interpretation

See Cal. Ins. Code § 790.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

Insurance Law > Industry Practices > Unfair Business Practices > General Overview

Insurance Law > Contract Formation > Offer & Acceptance

HN15 [blue document icon] Legislation, Interpretation

By enacting the Unfair Insurance Practices Act, Cal. Ins. Code §§ 790 through 790.10, the legislature explicitly accepted the federal offer of abstention on the broadest possible terms, using language designed to ensure that the entire insurance industry was brought under the state's jurisdiction. Nothing in the statute suggests an intent to shelter the insurance industry from state laws.

Governments > Courts > Judicial Precedent

HN16 [blue document icon] Courts, Judicial Precedent

Dictum is the statement of a principle not necessary to the decision.

Governments > Courts > Judicial Precedent

HN17 [blue document icon] Courts, Judicial Precedent

Dictum, of course, is not controlling authority even when it emanates from a supreme court. Nonetheless it carries persuasive weight and should be followed where it demonstrates a thorough analysis of the issue or reflects compelling logic.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

Governments > Legislation > Statutory Remedies & Rights

HN18 [blue document icon] Legislation, Interpretation

The Unfair Insurance Practices Act, Cal. Ins. Code §§ 790 through 790.10, like all statutes, is to be applied according to its terms. Its language neither creates new private rights nor destroys old ones.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN19 [blue document icon] Legislation, Interpretation

The rule of subsequent ratification applies to statutes which have previously been judicially construed.

Governments > Legislation > Interpretation

HN20 [blue document icon] Legislation, Interpretation

Courts are never bound by a legislative statement concerning the intent of a prior enactment.

Governments > Legislation > Statutory Remedies & Rights

HN21 [blue document icon] Legislation, Statutory Remedies & Rights

Before a court may imply a right of action based on violations of a substantive statute it must appear that (1) the plaintiff belongs to the class of persons the statute is intended to protect, (2) a private remedy will appropriately further the purpose of the legislation, and (3) such a remedy appears to be needed to assure the effectiveness of the statute.

Civil Procedure > ... > Justiciability > Standing > General Overview

Governments > Legislation > Statutory Remedies & Rights

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > Lanham Act > Standing

Governments > Legislation > Effect & Operation > General Overview

HN22 [blue icon] Justiciability, Standing

The Unfair Competition Act (UCA), Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200 through 17208, contains broad standing provisions, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17203 and 17204, and a declaration that its remedies are cumulative, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17205. Moreover, it has been applied to permit private actions based on violations of other statutes which did not themselves confer standing. However, the UCA cannot be utilized to plead around absolute barriers to relief by re-labeling the nature of the action as one brought under the unfair competition statute. The purpose of the UCA is to permit private enforcement of statutory prohibitions where to do so would not interfere with legislative objectives and limitations otherwise prescribed.

Governments > Legislation > Effect & Operation > General Overview

Trademark Law > ... > Federal Unfair Competition Law > Lanham Act > Standing

Governments > Legislation > Statutory Remedies & Rights

HN23 [blue icon] Legislation, Effect & Operation

It is settled that the Unfair Competition Act, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200 through 17208, cannot be utilized to confer private standing to enforce the Unfair Insurance Practices Act, Cal. Ins. Code §§ 790 through 790.10.

Counsel: Howard, Rice, Nemerovski, Canady, Robertson & Falk, Jerome B. Falk, Jr., 2 H. Joseph Escher III, Pauline E. Calande and Theresa M. Beiner for Petitioners and Real Parties in Interest.

No appearance for Respondent.

Khourie, Crew & Jaeger, Eugene Crew and Timothy F. Perry for Petitioner and Real Party in Interest.

Judges: Opinion by Benson, J., * with Smith, Acting P. J., and Phelan, J., concurring.

Opinion by: BENSON, J.

Opinion

* Retired Associate Justice of the Court of Appeal, First District, sitting under assignment by the Chairperson of the Judicial Council.

[*1634] Plaintiff Weil Insurance Agency, Inc. (Weil) brought this action for damages alleging primarily an unlawful boycott in the sale of annuities used to fund structured settlements of personal injury claims. Various defendants successfully demurred to the complaint, insofar as it asserted statutory causes of action, mainly on the ground that such causes of action are superseded by provisions of the Insurance Code. We have concluded that this contention is unsound and that plaintiff can state a cause of action under the [*3] Cartwright Act, Business and Professions Code sections 16720 and 16721.5. We have also concluded that plaintiff cannot state a private cause of action under the Unfair Insurance Practices Act or the Unfair Competition Act. We will direct the trial court to overrule the demurrers as to the Cartwright Act claims but to sustain the demurrers to the remaining counts at issue in this proceeding.

BACKGROUND

The action concerns plaintiff's attempt to engage in business as a broker of, and consultant in connection with, settlement annuities. HN1¹ A settlement annuity is an annuity purchased by a liability carrier to fund a structured settlement in a personal injury action. A structured settlement is one in which the injury claimant agrees to accept periodic payments (i.e., the [*1635] proceeds of an annuity) rather than a single lump sum. It appears to be conceded by all concerned that such an annuity is classified in this state as a form of life insurance. (See Ins. Code, § 101.)

The gist of the complaint's allegations contained in the four statutory counts with which we are now concerned is that defendants boycotted plaintiff's brokerage business because of opposition to plaintiff's [*4] conduct in providing injury claimants and their attorneys with information concerning the underlying features of settlement annuities, in particular their actual costs. Such disclosures were inimical to a plan defendants had formed to market settlement annuities as a way for liability carriers to settle injury claims below their cash settlement value. Therefore defendants schemed to prevent claimants from acquiring such information. They pursued this scheme, in part, by boycotting and disparaging plaintiff, as a broker and consultant supplying such information to injury claimants.

Plaintiff alleges it built a successful brokerage and consulting business based upon advising and educating claimants and their attorneys in connection with various aspects of settlement annuities including those which concerned defendants. This conduct, however, interfered with defendants' marketing scheme. Accordingly, defendants coerced or induced suppliers of annuities to stop doing business with plaintiff. As a result, plaintiff's settlement annuities business was destroyed.

The first four surviving counts ¹ allege violations of (1) Business and Professions Code section 16720, part of the Cartwright [*5] Act; (2) Business and Professions Code section 16721.5, also part of that act; (3) Insurance Code section 790.03, subdivision \(c\), part of the Unfair Insurance Practices Act; and (4) Business and Professions Code section 17200 et seq., the Unfair Competition Act. ² Three other counts sound in tort, and are not at issue in these writ proceedings.

¹ At oral argument plaintiff expressly abandoned a fifth statutory cause of action, based on the Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code, § 51.5). Our discussion of the complaint will, naturally, disregard this count. In light of plaintiff's abandonment, however, we will direct the trial court to sustain the demurrer to this court.

² Insurance Code sections 790-790.10 are often referred to as the "Unfair Practices Act." (See Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Companies (1988) 46 Cal.3d 287, 292 [250 Cal.Rptr. 116, 758 P.2d 58]; Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 23 Cal.3d 880, 883 [153 Cal.Rptr. 842, 592 P.2d 329], overruled in Moradi-Shalal, supra, 46 Cal.3d at pp. 292, 304.) The Legislature, however, has mysteriously labeled this portion of the Insurance Code the "Unfair Trade Practices Act." (Ins. Code, § 1620.2, subd. \(a\), italics added.) It has given the name "Unfair Practices Act" to sections 17000 through 17101 of the Business and Professions Code. (Bus. & Prof. Code, § 17000.) The Supreme Court has used that name to refer not only to those sections but also to section 17200 et seq. (Farmers Ins. Exchange v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal.4th 377, 395 [6 Cal.Rptr.2d 487, 826 P.2d 730]; State of California ex rel. Van de Kamp v. Texaco, Inc. (1988) 46 Cal.3d 1147, 1169 [252 Cal.Rptr. 221, 762 P.2d 385]; cf. Bank of the West v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal.4th 1254, 1260 [10 Cal.Rptr.2d 538, 833 P.2d 545] describing [section 17200 as part of "Unfair Business Practices Act"].).

[6] [*1636] In the earliest ruling before us, the trial court sustained demurrers to the Cartwright Act claims (counts 1 and 2) with leave to amend. However, it concluded that plaintiff had stated causes of action under the UIPA and the UCA (counts 4 and 5). Defendants filed petition No. A052795 seeking a writ of mandate directing the trial court to sustain the demurrers to these counts. We issued an alternative writ.

While that matter was pending, plaintiff amended the complaint and various defendants again demurred to the Cartwright Act counts. The trial court sustained those demurrers without leave to amend. Plaintiff filed petition No. A055038, seeking a writ which would direct the trial court to overrule the demurrers to those counts. We initially denied plaintiff's petition. Plaintiff sought review in the Supreme Court. That court granted the petition and retransferred the matter to us with directions to issue an alternative writ. We have done so.

I. CARTWRIGHT ACT

A. INTRODUCTION

HN2 [↑] The Cartwright Act states a general prohibition against conduct effecting a combination in restraint of trade, i.e., a "trust." (Bus. & Prof. Code, § 16720, 16721.5.) One common species [7] of a trust is a "concerted refusal to deal with other traders, or, as it is often called, the group boycott." ([Marin County Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Palsson \(1976\) 16 Cal.3d 920, 931 \[130 Cal.Rptr. 1, 549 P.2d 833\].](#)) The prohibition on such conduct extends to "every type of business," including insurance. ([Speegle v. Board of Fire Underwriters \(1946\) 29 Cal.2d 34, 43, 44, 46 \[172 P.2d 867\].](#) see Marin County Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Palsson, supra, 16 Cal.3d at pp. 927-928.)

At the same time, HN3 [↑] the UIPA prohibits acts of "boycott, coercion, or intimidation resulting in or tending to result in unreasonable restraint of, or monopoly in, the business of insurance." ([Ins. Code, § 790.03, subd. \(c\) \[section 790.03\(c\)\].](#)) The major issue before us is whether the UIPA supplants the Cartwright Act so as to provide the sole basis by which unlawful [*1637] conduct of the type alleged here may be subjected to legal restraint or may otherwise produce legal consequences.

HN4 [↑] In dealing with any problem of statutory effect, we begin and often end with the words of the statute. "[C]ourts are not at liberty to impute a particular intention to the Legislature when nothing [8] in the language of the statute implies such intention." ([Dunn-Edwards Corp. v. Bay Area Air Quality Management Dist. \(1992\) 9 Cal.App.4th 644, 658 \[11 Cal.Rptr.2d 850\].](#) review den. [rejecting claim of implied exemption from general statute]; see Code Civ. Proc., § 1858.) The statute "must be construed with reference to the whole system of law of which it is a part, so that each part may be harmonized and have effect." ([Yoffie v. Marin Hospital Dist. \(1987\) 193 Cal.App.3d 743, 748 \[238 Cal.Rptr. 502\].](#) review den.; see Code Civ. Proc., § 1858.) "This rule applies even if the statutes to be harmonized appear in different codes." (193 Cal.App.3d 743, 748.) "[T]he different codes blend into each other and constitute a single statute for the purposes of statutory construction and . . . legislative intent may be determined not only from an individual code but the whole body of law. ([Pesce v. Dept. Alcoholic Bev. Control \(1958\) 51 Cal.2d 310, 312 \[333 P.2d 15\].](#) [American Friends Service Committee v. Procurier \(1973\) 33 Cal.App.3d 252, 260 \[109 Cal.Rptr. 22\].](#))" ([Winzler & Kelly v. Department of Industrial Relations \(1981\) 121 Cal.App.3d 120, 125 \[174 \[9\] Cal.Rptr. 744\].](#))

As explained in the following discussion, we have concluded that the UIPA expressly preserves existing remedies for unlawful conduct in the business of insurance. Such preservation is consistent with the history of the UIPA and with the interpretational presumption against the implied repeal of statutory remedies. A contrary holding is not warranted by case law or by any claimed legislative ratification. Accordingly, the demurrers to the Cartwright Act claims should have been overruled.

B. EXPRESS PRESERVATION OF EXISTING REMEDIES

To avoid this confusion of terms we will adopt our own nomenclature for the affected statutes. Thus we refer to Insurance Code sections 790 through 790.10 as the Unfair Insurance Practices Act (UIPA), Business and Professions Code sections 17000 through 17101 as the Unfair Business Practices Act (UBPA), and Business and Professions Code sections 17200 through 17208 as the Unfair Competition Act (UCA).

[HN5] The UIPA itself expresses an affirmative intention and expectation that it will preserve intact existing remedies for insurance industry misconduct. Insurance Code section 790.09 states that the commissioner's issuance of a cease-and-desist order shall not obstruct or impede the imposition of "civil liability or criminal penalty under the laws of this State" arising from the same conduct.³

[10] Defendants have never offered a plausible interpretation of this statute consistent with the view that the UIPA supersedes the Cartwright Act. To be [*1638] sure, the statute only refers to situations in which the commissioner issues a cease and desist order. Numerous absurdities would arise, however, if we concluded that the UIPA supersedes other laws in most cases, but preserves existing remedies when the commissioner issues such an order. This would make the commissioner's jurisdiction exclusive only so long as it is not exercised--a result which would appear to maximize the potential for jurisdictional conflict without creating any discernible benefit. Under such a regime, mere administrative inaction would cloak all manner of insurance misconduct with immunity. Furthermore, there would be no textual basis for withholding this immunity from criminal prosecutions as well, since Insurance Code section 790.09 mentions criminal penalties in tandem with civil remedies.

At oral argument defendants' counsel appeared to agree that a cease and desist order could not have the effect of restoring liability from which an insurer had otherwise become immune. Yet if Insurance Code section 790.09 does not have that effect it becomes meaningless under defendants' regime, for there is no "civil remedy" for the statute to preserve; any such remedy has been superseded by the UIPA as a whole. [HN7] Section 790.09 can only be given meaning by acknowledging a subsisting "civil liability . . . under the laws of this State," to which violators are already subject when the commissioner issues a cease-and-desist order, and from which no such order "shall in any way relieve or absolve" them.

The history of the UIPA indicates that the original bill did not contain a provision preserving civil remedies, but only a section preserving the commissioner's powers under existing law.⁴ The first amended version of the bill, and each successive version, contained what is now Insurance Code section 790.09. (Assem. Amend. to Assem. Bill No. 1530 (1959 Gen. Sess.) Apr. 8, 1959; see Assem. Amend. to id., May 6, 1959; Sen. Amend. to Assem. Bill No. 1530 (1959 Gen. Sess.) June 11, 1959; Stats. 1959, ch. 1737, § 1, p. 4191.) This provision originated even earlier, however, in the 1947 "Chicago Draft" of the Model Unfair Insurance Practices Act proposed by the National Association [12] of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC).⁵ Its pointed adoption in California may have emphasized a legislative perception that the UIPA affected little if any change in existing law. Indeed, at the time [*1639] of the enactment of the UIPA the Legislative Analyst wrote that the bill would "make[] no substantive change in existing law." (Opn. of Legis. Analyst, "Analysis of Assembly Bill No. 1530" (May 20, 1959), p. 1; exhibit 1 to request for judicial notice filed Sept. 20, 1991, in A055038.) (Italics added.)

[13] If the Legislature wished to exempt the insurance industry from the Cartwright Act, it knew full well how to do so. The Insurance Code contains no fewer than four express exemptions of specified classes of insurance from other laws. (Ins. Code, § 795.7 [senior citizens' health insurance]; 1860.1 [casualty insurance]; 11758 [workers' compensation]; 12414.26 [title insurance].) All of these statutes would be superfluous if defendants' view of the

³ [HN6] Insurance Code section 790.09 provides: "No order to cease and desist issued under this article directed to any person or subsequent administrative or judicial proceeding to enforce the same shall in any way relieve or absolve such person from any administrative action against the license or certificate of such person, civil liability or criminal penalty under the laws of this State arising out of the methods, acts or practices found unfair or deceptive."

⁴ "§ 790.11. The powers vested in the commissioner in this article shall be additional to any other powers to enforce any penalties, fines or forfeitures authorized by law with respect to the methods, acts and practices hereby declared to be unfair or deceptive." (Assem. Bill No. 1530 (1959 Reg. Sess.), § 1; see now Ins. Code, § 790.08.)

⁵ "No order of the Commissioner under this Act or order of a court to enforce the same shall in any way relieve or absolve any person affected by such order from any liability under any other laws of this state." (Exhibit B to Rep. of Joint Com. on Fed. Legislation etc. (Jan. 24, 1947), § 8(d); Proceedings, 78th Ann. Sess., NAIC (1947), p. 398.)

UIPA were correct. Yet two of them were enacted well after the effective date of that Act. (Stats. 1973, ch. 1130, § 15, p. 2314 [§ 12414.26]; Stats. 1963, ch. 2055, § 1, p. 4301 [§ 795.7].)

Our view that the UIPA effects no displacement of general laws is consistent with the commissioner's interpretation of the UIPA, not only as amicus curiae in this proceeding but as adviser to the Governor and litigant in other proceedings. Beginning when the UIPA was initially adopted, the department repeatedly expressed the view that the act would have little or no effect on California law, but was enacted primarily, if not entirely, to conform to the actions of other states.⁶ Somewhat later, in Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Superior [14] Court, supra, 23 Cal.3d at page 897 (dis. opn.), Justice Richardson quoted the commissioner as flatly asserting that HN8⁷ the UIPA "does not supplant other remedies available under state law."

[15] Defendants assert that we should give no particular weight to the commissioner's interpretation. But the department's long-standing interpretation, first conveyed to the Governor at the time of the act's adoption and espoused [*1640] with apparently perfect consistency since, reinforces our view that the statute simply cannot support the interpretation defendants urge upon us. (See Truta v. Avis Rent A Car Systems, Inc. (1987) 193 Cal.App.3d 802, 814 [238 Cal.Rptr. 806], review den.; Gay Law Students Assn. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1979) 24 Cal.3d 458, 491 [156 Cal.Rptr. 14, 595 P.2d 592].)

Defendants' claim of implied supersession also runs afoul of the interpretational presumption against implied repeal. HN9⁸ An "implied repeal" occurs "[w]hen a later statute supersedes or substantially modifies an earlier law but without expressly referring to it." (Department of Personnel Administration v. Superior Court (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 155, 191 [6 Cal.Rptr.2d 714], review den., quoting Sacramento Newspaper Guild v. Sacramento County Bd. of Suprs. (1968) 263 Cal.App.2d 41, 54 [69 Cal.Rptr. 480].) Under this definition, defendants' argument must be viewed [16] as relying on an implied partial repeal of the Cartwright Act, i.e., a repeal insofar as that act would otherwise apply to the business of insurance.

"[T]he law shuns repeals by implication." (Board of Supervisors v. Lonergan (1980) 27 Cal.3d 855, 868 [167 Cal.Rptr. 820, 616 P.2d 802]; Kennedy Wholesale, Inc. v. State Bd. of Equalization (1991) 53 Cal.3d 245, 249 [279 Cal.Rptr. 325, 806 P.2d 1360].) They "are recognized only when there is no rational basis for harmonizing two potentially conflicting laws." (Fuentes v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1976) 16 Cal.3d 1, 7 [279 Cal.Rptr. 325, 806 P.2d 1360], italics added.) "The presumption against implied repeal is so strong that, 'To overcome the presumption the two acts must be irreconcilable, clearly repugnant, and so inconsistent that the two cannot have concurrent operation. The courts are bound, if possible, to maintain the integrity of both statutes if the two may stand together.' (Penziner v. West American Finance Co. [(1937)] 10 Cal.2d 160, 176 [74 P.2d 252].) There must be 'no possibility of concurrent operation.' (Hays v. Wood (1979) 25 Cal.3d 772, 784 [160 Cal.Rptr. 102, 603 P.2d 171, 19] . . .) . . . [I]mplied repeal should not be found unless ' . . . the later provision gives undebatable evidence of an intent to supersede the earlier . . .' (Ibid. . . .)" (Western Oil & Gas Assn. v. Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control Dist. (1989) 49 Cal.3d 408, 419-420 [261 Cal.Rptr. 384, 777 P.2d 157], first and second italics added; see Roberts v. City of Palmdale (1993) 5 Cal.4th 363, 379 [20 Cal.Rptr.2d 330, 853 P.2d 496].)⁹

⁶ In a memorandum to the Governor, the Chief Assistant Insurance Commissioner indicated that the UIPA had been enacted in all but one other state and that it was expected to add little if anything to California law. He concluded, "The Department is neither opposed to nor an advocate for this Bill. We know of nothing in the Bill which is detrimental to the public interest." (J. Thomas, Mem. from Dept. of Ins. to Hon. Edmund G. Brown (Jun. 30, 1959), pp. 1-2; exhibit 1 to request for judicial notice filed Sept. 20, 1991, in A055038.)

A few years later, the same author wrote that the Model Act "had only a psychological application to states, such as New York and California[,] which already had extensive laws regulating practically every phase of the business . . . [P] California and some of the other active states hesitated [to adopt the act] because it was difficult to justify the expense and time expenditure of enacting and having in the books an Act which, for all practical purposes, was unnecessary." (J. Thomas, Interdepartmental Mem. (May 17, 1960), pp. 1-2; exhibit 3 to request for judicial notice filed Sept. 20, 1991, in A055038.)

⁷ HN10¹⁰ Statutes are also presumed to be consistent with the common law. (Dry Creek Valley Assn., Inc. v. Board of Supervisors (1977) 67 Cal.App.3d 839, 844 [135 Cal.Rptr. 726]; see Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal.3d 65, 75 [276 Cal.Rptr. 130,

[18] Amici California Chamber of Commerce et al. suggest that the presumption against implied repeal does not fully apply where a general statute [*1641] overlaps an "administrative regulatory scheme." We find no support for this assertion in the case cited by amici ([Gordon v. New York Stock Exchange \(1975\) 422 U.S. 659 \[45 L.Ed.2d 463, 95 S.Ct. 2598\]](#)), or in any other authority. At most, schemes regulating in minute detail may produce such pervasive conflicts with preexisting laws that the two cannot coexist and are, for that reason, mutually repugnant. (See I.E. Associates v. Safeco Title Ins. Co., supra, 39 Cal.3d at p. 285.) HN11[↑] The mere presence of administrative regulation, no matter how broad the regulatory authority, does not in itself create an irreconcilable conflict or otherwise warrant an inference of intent to repeal.

Nor may defendants avoid the presumption against implied repeal by relying on different terminology. In particular we reject the claim that the UIPA presumptively provides an "exclusive remedy" for conduct covered by its terms. HN12[↑] Repeal by any other name is still repeal, and a claim of implied repeal is viewed with skepticism no matter how it [19] is characterized. (See [Physicians & Surgeons Laboratories, Inc. v. Department of Health Services \(1992\) 6 Cal.App.4th 968, 985-986 \[8 Cal.Rptr.2d 565\]](#), review den. [applying presumption against implied repeal in rejecting claim that new regulation superseded existing ones]; see Rojo v. Kliger, supra, 52 Cal.3d at p. 80 [new statutory remedy deemed exclusive only if it exhibits "a legislative intent to displace all preexisting or alternative remedies"]; [McKee v. Bell-Carter Olive Co. \(1986\) 186 Cal.App.3d 1230, 1244-1245 \[231 Cal.Rptr. 304\]](#), review den. [new statutory remedy generally regarded as cumulative, not exclusive]; [Hentzel v. Singer Co. \(1982\) 138 Cal.App.3d 290, 301 \[188 Cal.Rptr. 159\]](#); [Glaser v. Meyers \(1982\) 137 Cal.App.3d 770, 774 \[187 Cal.Rptr. 242\]](#); 3 Witkin, Cal. Procedure (3d ed. 1985) Actions, § 8, p. 39.)

We also observe a certain illogic in referring to the UIPA as providing an "exclusive remedy" when, as we conclude in the following section, it provides no private remedy at all. Nor does it empower the commissioner to redress private injuries. (See [Shernoff v. Superior Court \(1975\) 44 Cal.App.3d 406, 409 \[118 Cal.Rptr. 1201 680\]](#) [commissioner's authority "is limited to restraint of future illegal conduct . . . , and he possesses no authority to enter money judgments for past injuries"]; [Greenberg v. Equitable Life Assur. Society \(1973\) 34 Cal.App.3d 994, 1001 \[110 Cal.Rptr. 470\]](#) [. . . "the sole disciplinary authority of the commissioner would be to issue a cease and desist order or obtain an injunction to restrain the illegal conduct".] Courts are particularly reluctant to view a statute as affording an exclusive remedy when it appears inadequate to redress the wrong toward which it is directed. (3 Witkin, Cal. Procedure, Actions, op. cit. supra, § 9, at [*1642] p. 40; [Orloff v. Los Angeles Turf Club \(1947\) 30 Cal.2d 110, 113 \[180 P.2d 321, 171 A.L.R. 913\]](#); see Rojo v. Kliger, supra, 52 Cal.3d at pp. 80-82 [given various limitations, Fair Employment and Housing Act did not displace other remedies]; see Farmers Ins. Exchange v. Superior Court, supra, 2 Cal.4th 377, 391-392, fn. 9 [discretionary relief from "primary jurisdiction" doctrine where administrative remedy inadequate].) Here, the denial of a Cartwright Act claim would deprive plaintiffs, and others [21] in their position, of any remedy whatsoever for substantial damages resulting from concededly unlawful conduct. No justification for such a regime has been proposed and we discern none.

HN13[↑] Nothing in the UIPA suggests a purpose, unmistakable or otherwise, to displace existing state-law remedies. Rather the avowed purpose of the act was to displace federal law to the maximum extent possible in accordance with the offer of federal abstention embodied in the McCarran-Ferguson Act, 15 United States Code Annotated sections 1011-1015 (hereafter McCarran). ⁸ (See [Karlin v. Zalta \(1984\) 154 Cal.App.3d 953, 966 \[201 Cal.Rptr. 379\]](#); [American Internat. Group, Inc. v. Superior Court \(1991\) 234 Cal.App.3d 749, 756-758 \[285 Cal.Rptr. 765\]](#), review den.) Under McCarran, federal law is inapplicable to insurance insofar as the state "generally proscribes" (or permits) certain conduct. (Ohio AFL-CIO v. Insurance Rating Board \(6th Cir. 1971\) 451 F.2d 1178, 1181, 1184, cert. den. [\(1972\) 409 U.S. 917 \[34 L.Ed.2d 180, 93 S.Ct. 215\]](#); California League of Ind. Ins. Pro. v.

801 P.2d 373; [Lacher v. Superior Court \(1991\) 230 Cal.App.3d 1038, 1050 \[281 Cal.Rptr. 640\]](#), review den.; cf. [I.E. Associates v. Safeco Title Ins. Co. \(1985\) 39 Cal.3d 281, 285 \[216 Cal.Rptr. 438, 702 P.2d 596\]](#).) In this regard, we observe that plaintiff's antitrust claims have their roots in common law. (See Speegle v. Board of Fire Underwriters, supra, 29 Cal.2d at pp. 44, 45, 46.)

⁸ HN14[↑] The purpose of this article is to regulate trade practices in the business of insurance in accordance with the intent of Congress as expressed in the Act of Congress of March 9, 1945 (Public Law 15, Seventy-ninth Congress), by defining, or providing for the determination of, all such practices in this State which constitute unfair methods of competition or unfair or deceptive acts or practices and by prohibiting the trade practices so defined or determined." (Ins. Code, § 790.)

Aetna Cas. & S. Co. (N.D.Cal. 1959) 175 F.Supp. 857, 860.) "The condition of state regulation is satisfied by [22] 'a state regulatory scheme possess[ing] jurisdiction over the challenged practice.' " (In re Insurance Antitrust Litigation (N.D.Cal. 1989) 723 F.Supp. 464, 474, revd. on other grounds (9th Cir. 1991) 938 F.2d 919; quoting Feinstein v. Nettleship Co. of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1983) 714 F.2d 928, 933, cert. den. (1984) 466 U.S. 972 [80 L.Ed.2d 820, 104 S.Ct. 2346]; brackets in Antitrust.) In other words, the mere assertion of state jurisdiction is sufficient to preclude the application of federal antitrust law under McCarran.

[23] HN15

By enacting the UIPA, the Legislature explicitly accepted the federal offer of abstention on the broadest possible terms, using language designed to ensure that the entire insurance industry was brought under the state's jurisdiction. Nothing in the statute suggests an intent to shelter the insurance [*1643] industry from state laws.⁹ (See Rojo v. Kliger, supra, 52 Cal.3d at p. 81 [statute expressing intent to "occupy the field" displaced local regulation, not other state legislation].)

[24] C. CASELAW

Defendants' challenge to the Cartwright Act claims ultimately rests on a single sentence in Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. Great Western Financial Corp. (1968) 69 Cal.2d 305, 322 [70 Cal.Rptr. 849, 444 P.2d 481]: "These statutes and the common law which once constituted 'the protection of the public against combinations in restraint of the insurance trade' (Speegle v. Board of Fire Underwriters, 29 Cal.2d 34, 45 [172 P.2d 867]) are now expressly superseded and contravened by the specific provisions of the Insurance Code." After scrutinizing this statement in context, we have concluded that Chicago Title is neither compelling nor persuasive authority for a rule holding the Cartwright Act superseded by the UIPA.

The quoted statement is dictum. HN16  Dictum is the "statement of a principle not necessary to the decision." (People v. Squier (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 235, 240 [18 Cal.Rptr.2d 536], internal quotation marks omitted.) The holding of Chicago Title is that the complaint failed to adequately plead the elements of a Cartwright Act cause of action, or any other claim. The court undertook a painstaking count-by-count analysis of the complaint, [25] identifying numerous factual and legal deficiencies.¹⁰ [*26] If the Supreme Court had believed that the statutes cited by the plaintiffs (including the Cartwright Act) were superseded by the Insurance Code, there would [*1644] have been no occasion for this discussion. But the court explicitly identified factual insufficiency as the "determinative" issue.¹¹

⁹ Amici California Chamber of Commerce et al., describe the UIPA as "answer[ing] a concern expressed by the California Supreme Court" in Speegle v. Board of Fire Underwriters, supra, 29 Cal.2d 34, 45. It is true that the court noted the absence of "special legislation" in this state against combinations in restraint of the insurance trade. But the only "concern" expressed in the cited passage is the potential effect of denying enforcement of the Cartwright Act in the insurance business. Certainly the court had no intention of prognosticating upon the hypothetical preemptive effect of statutes which did not then exist.

¹⁰ For example: "We are persuaded . . . that appellants' vague and conclusionary pleadings fail to allege facts which might reasonably be construed to reveal a wrongful combination." (Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. Great Western Financial Corp., supra, 69 Cal.2d at p. 315.)

"[T]he factual allegations, as illustrated, fail in each instance to support the charge. Just as the earlier counts state facts insufficient to establish proscribed conduct on the parts of the alleged actors and thus cannot reach their purported conspirators, so the final counts charging antitrust infringements fall for similar reasons." (69 Cal.2d at p. 323, brackets original.)

"The allegation of boycott cannot be supported in this instance because everyone has the unrestricted right to select customers and sources of supply." (69 Cal.2d at p. 324.)

¹¹ "We must determine . . . whether the superior court has jurisdiction to entertain an action based upon appellants' theories, or any of them, and, if so, whether appellants have stated a cause of action against any of the various named defendants. The

HN17 [↑] Dictum, of course, is not controlling authority even when it emanates from the Supreme Court. ([Grange Debris Box & Wrecking Co. v. Superior Court \(1993\) 16 Cal.App.4th 1349, 1358 \[20 Cal.Rptr.2d 515\]](#); cf. [Auto Equity Sales, Inc. v. Superior Court \(1962\) 57 Cal.2d 450, 455 \[20 Cal.Rptr. 321, 369 P.2d 937\]](#); [Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. \(1989\) 48 Cal.3d 711, 734-735 \[257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406\]](#).) Nonetheless it " 'carries persuasive weight and should be followed where it demonstrates a thorough analysis of the issue or reflects compelling logic.' " (Grange, supra, at p. 1358.) Chicago Title's statement concerning Insurance Code [27] exclusivity satisfies neither of these requirements.

Like most of the opinion in Chicago Title, the quoted statement was authored by a court of appeal and "adopted" by the Supreme Court. (69 Cal.2d at p. 311.) This in itself does not warrant lessened deference, but the statement also betrays a certain lack of authorial attention. To begin with, it confuses the Cartwright Act with the UBPA. The subject dictum is immediately preceded by a citation to Business and Professions Code sections 17040- 17051. (69 Cal.2d at p. 322.) These statutes are part of the UBPA and not, as the author of the dictum seemed to believe, the Cartwright Act. (See ibid.; cf. id. at pp. 315, 322 [correctly defining Cartwright Act]; Food & Agr. Code, § 66524, 65521 [same]; Speegle v. Board of Fire Underwriters, supra, 29 Cal.2d at p. 42 [same]; cf. Bus. & Prof. Code, § 17000 [defining Unfair Practices Act].) ¹² The statement that "these statutes" have been superseded by the Insurance Code is thus burdened with a glaring anomaly.

[28] Moreover, the court never identified any provision of the Insurance Code which "expressly superseded and contravened" any other statute. In particular, the opinion never mentioned the UIPA. Instead it cited certain provisions of the Insurance Code involving the regulation of title insurance rates. (Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. Great Western Financial Corp., supra, 69 Cal.2d at pp. 322-323, citing Ins. Code, § 12404- 12412.) None of those provisions could be said to "expressly abrogate" any other statute. Indeed, some five years later the Legislature did enact an express exemption covering some of the activities authorized by the cited portion of the Code. (Ins. Code, § 12414.26, added by Stats. 1973, ch. 1130, § 15, p. 2314.) The absence of [*1645] such a statute in 1968 renders the Chicago Title dictum nearly unintelligible. Certainly the Legislature could not have given that case the meaning defendants do, or it would not have bothered to enact the cited statute.

The two paragraphs immediately following the subject dictum suggest that three of the complaint's 11 counts might intrude upon the commissioner's jurisdiction over title insurance [29] rates. (Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. Great Western Financial Corp., supra, 69 Cal.2d at pp. 322-323.) None of these three counts invoked the Cartwright Act. We note sharp historical and analytical distinctions between the regulation of rate-setting practices and the broad prohibitions in the UIPA. (See Karin v. Zalta, supra, 154 Cal.App.3d at pp. 973-977.)

The court thus seemed to say no more than that part of the complaint might intrude upon regulatory turf. Even with respect to that part of the complaint, however, the court ultimately returned to its holding, declaring that the factual allegations under scrutiny "fail in each instance to support the charge" and that the counts discussed to that point "state facts insufficient to establish proscribed conduct." (Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. Great Western Financial Corp., supra, 69 Cal.2d at p. 323.) The court only then turned to claims having any bearing here, declaring that "the final counts charging antitrust infringements fall for similar reasons." (Ibid.) On the next page, the Supreme Court itself inserted a declaration that the Cartwright Act counts failed "because plaintiffs' vague and conclusionary [30] pleadings fail to allege sufficient facts." (at p. 324.)

It thus appears that the subject dictum means at most that the three claims concerning rates were repugnant, or potentially repugnant, to the "specific provisions of the Insurance Code" concerning rate setting. The allusion to the Speegle case, and thus apparently to the Cartwright Act, was not only dictum, but unsound. (See 9 Witkin, Cal. Procedure, Appeal, op. cit. supra, § 795, at p. 768, quoting [In re Johnson \(1949\) 92 Cal.App.2d 467, 470 \[207 P.2d 123\]](#).)

latter finding, which is determinative, is in the negative." (Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. Great Western Financial Corp., supra, 69 Cal.2d at p. 313, italics added.)

¹² Concerning our use of the term "Unfair Business Practices Act," see footnote 2, ante.

Indeed, if we held California's general antitrust laws superseded by the UIPA, we would stand alone in opposition to "general law throughout the country." (9 Witkin Cal. Procedure, Appeal, op. cit. supra, § 799, at p. 772.) Every court to address the issue has concluded that its version of the UIPA does not displace general laws regulating unlawful trade restraints or unfair competition. (Mead v. Burns (1986) 199 Conn. 651 [509 A.2d 11, 18]; Dodd v. Commercial Union Ins. Co. (1977) 373 Mass. 72 [365 N.E.2d 802, 803-806]; Fischer, etc. v. Forrest T. Jones & Co. (Mo. 1979) 586 S.W.2d 310 [general antitrust law applied to claimed [31] conspiracy to withhold necessary [*1646] information from potentially competing brokers]; St. ex rel. Stratton v. Gurley Motor Co. (1987) 105 N.M. 803 [737 P.2d 1180, 1182-1184]; Ray v. United Family Life Ins. Co., Inc. (W.D.N.C. 1977) 430 F.Supp. 1353, 1356-1357, approved in Ellis v. Smith-Broadhurst, Inc. (1980) 48 N.C.App. 180 [268 S.E.2d 271, 273]; Skinner v. Steele (Tenn.App. 1987) 730 S.W.2d 335, 337-338 [purpose of act was to "oust federal antitrust jurisdiction as completely as possible," not to exempt insurance from other state statutes]; Attorney General of Tex. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (Tex.Civ.App. 1985) 687 S.W.2d 803, 805; Grams v. Boss (1980) 97 Wis.2d 332 [294 N.W.2d 473, 480].) Several of these courts expressly cited their states' respective versions of Insurance Code section 790.09. (See Mead v. Burns, supra, 509 A.2d at p. 17; Dodd v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., supra, 365 N.E.2d at p. 804; Skinner v. Steele, supra, 730 S.W.2d at p. 338; Attorney General of Tex. v. Allstate Ins. Co., supra, 687 S.W.2d at p. 805.)¹³

[32] Defendants cite Greenberg v. Equitable Life Assur. Society, supra, 34 Cal.App.3d 994, where the court stated in a footnote that under Chicago Title, the Cartwright Act was "superseded and contravened" by the Insurance Code. (34 Cal.App.3d 994, 999, fn. 2.) However, the court explained Chicago Title's lengthy discussion of pleading issues by attributing it to tacit recognition of a private right of action under Insurance Code section 790.03. This reading of Chicago Title is untenable. As previously noted, the court in Chicago Title never mentioned the UIPA. The only sections of the Insurance Code cited in proximity to the "superseded and contravened" language dealt with title insurance rates. (69 Cal.2d at pp. 322-323.)

Furthermore, the premise on which the Greenberg interpretation of Chicago Title rests--that the UIPA itself affords a private right of action has been flatly repudiated by the Supreme Court in Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Companies, supra, 46 Cal.3d at page 304. While rejecting the attempt to predicate new rights of action on the UIPA, the court in Moradi-Shalal emphasized that existing remedies were unaffected [33] by that Act. It "urge[d] the Insurance Commissioner and the courts to continue to enforce the laws forbidding [unlawful insurance] practices to the full extent consistent with our opinion," and declared that ". . . the courts retain jurisdiction to impose civil damages or other remedies against insurers in appropriate common law actions, based on such traditional theories as fraud, infliction of [*1647] emotional distress, and (as to the insured) either breach of contract or breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing." (at pp. 304-305, italics added.)

Defendants assert that Moradi-Shalal recognizes only the preservation of common law claims, not those based on statute. Such a scheme, however, would fail to protect the putative exclusivity of regulatory jurisdiction, while forcing prospective plaintiffs, for no apparent reason, to attempt to conform their claims to obsolete pre-Cartwright forms. We are no more willing to attribute such bizarre distinctions to the Supreme Court than to the Legislature.

We understand the reference to the common law in Moradi-Shalal to rest on the premise that the cause of action asserted there--unfair [34] claims practices--had no statutory basis outside the UIPA. Since the UIPA itself afforded no right of action, the plaintiff was relegated to such common law claims as might be available.

Moradi-Shalal marks a return to the fundamental principle that HN18 the UIPA, like all statutes, is to be applied according to its terms. Its language neither creates new private rights nor destroys old ones. This was the view of Justice Richardson, whose dissent in Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Superior Court, supra, 23 Cal.3d at pages 895-898, ¹³ Apparently failing to discover this solid edifice of adverse sister-state authority, defendants cite only Chick's Auto Body v. State Farm etc. (1979) 168 N.J.Super. 68 [401 A.2d 722], affd. (1980) 176 N.J.Super. 320 [423 A.2d 311]. That case is patently inapposite because it rests on an express exemption from that state's antitrust laws for the activities of insurers "to the extent that such activities are subject to regulation by the Commissioner of Insurance." (401 A.2d at p. 724, citing N.J. Stats. Ann. § 56:9-5, subd. (b)(4).) We can find no fault with the court's analysis. Nor can we find any guidance in it, for this state has no such statute.

was heavily cited in Moradi-Shalal. (46 Cal.3d at pp. 294-296.) He wrote that Insurance Code section 790.09 "preserves any preexisting civil or criminal liability which the insurer might face under other statutory or decisional law." (Royal Globe, supra, 23 Cal.3d at p. 893, some italics added; see id. at p. 896.) Similarly, the court in Shernoff v. Superior Court, supra, 44 Cal.App.3d 406, 409, acknowledged that section 790.09 "expressly reserves to litigants all civil and criminal remedies against persons who have violated the law." (Italics added.) These authorities are consistent with the language of the statute [35] and with the unanimous view of courts elsewhere. Insofar as Greenberg reached a contrary conclusion, it must be considered unsound.

For these reasons we are disinclined to follow later cases which, in dicta, uncritically accepted Greenberg's view of UIPA exclusivity. The court in Liberty Transport, Inc. v. Harry W. Gorst Co. ([1991\) 229 Cal.App.3d 417, 432 \[280 Cal.Rptr. 159\]](#), disapproved on another point in Adams v. Murakami ([1991\) 54 Cal.3d 105, 116 \[284 Cal.Rptr. 318, 813 P.2d 1348\]](#), followed Greenberg because, due to the limited retroactivity of Moradi-Shalal, it had to apply the law in effect under Royal Globe. (229 Cal.App.3d at p. 426, fn. 1) In Karlin v. Zalta, supra, 154 Cal.App.3d 953, the court ultimately concluded that the claims before it were not governed by the [*1648] UIPA but by the McBride-Grunsky Insurance Regulatory Act. (At p. 979.) It had no occasion to reconsider Greenberg's reading of Chicago Title since it found both cases (along with Royal Globe) inapposite. (Ibid.)

We reject any notion that defendants' claim of exemption from the antitrust laws, however unsound, rests upon a settled rule [36] and is therefore sheltered by the doctrine of stare decisis. (See 9 Witkin Cal. Procedure, Appeal, op. cit. supra, § 787, 795, at pp. 758, 768-769.) No court has ever held that insurance companies are immune from civil liability for antitrust injuries. Rather, some--cases notably Greenberg and Royal Globe--mistook the statute under which such remedy should be pursued. Defendants seek to blend those discredited cases with the anomalous and misleading dictum in Chicago Title, and the corrective holding of Moradi-Shalal, to fashion a new immunity made of odds and ends and resting neither on statute nor principle but on misconstrued precedents. We decline to adopt such a course based on the false invocation of stare decisis.

D. SUBSEQUENT RATIFICATION

Defendants contend that the Legislature ratified Chicago Title and Greenberg by amending the UIPA on several occasions "without altering the rule articulated in those opinions." This contention is unsound.

HN19 [↑] The rule of subsequent ratification applies to statutes which "have previously been judicially construed." (Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982\) 30 Cal.3d 721, 734 \[180 Cal.Rptr. 1371 496, 640 P.2d 115, 30 A.L.R.4th 1161), cert. den., [459 U.S. 858 \[74 L.Ed.2d 111, 103 S.Ct. 129\]](#).) (Italics added.) No case has construed the UIPA to bar Cartwright Act claims. The court in Greenberg merely cited Chicago Title for the proposition that unspecified provisions of the Insurance Code superseded the Cartwright Act. (Greenberg v. Equitable Life Assur. Society, supra, 34 Cal.App.3d at p. 999, fn. 2, citing 69 Cal.2d at p. 322.) As we have already noted, Chicago Title never so much as mentioned the UIPA. Ensuing cases repeated Greenberg's conclusion without seeking or offering any justification in the language of the UIPA or any other statute. Since none of the cases purports to "construe" a statute, an inference of legislative approval is wholly unwarranted.

Moreover, the holding in Greenberg, and then in Royal Globe, granted persons suffering antitrust injuries the substantial remedial equivalent of a Cartwright Act claim. These developments deprived the Legislature of any concrete reason to correct the courts' error. As the Supreme Court has acknowledged, the Legislature is concerned with " 'bottom-line' results" and is unlikely to fine-tune [38] judicial decisions. (Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991\) 52 Cal.3d 1142, 1157 \[278 Cal.Rptr. 614, 805 P.2d 873.)

[*1649] E. PROPOSITION 103

The parties devote considerable attention to Proposition 103, by which the voters in 1988 substantially revised the McBride-Grunsky Insurance Regulatory Act of 1947, Insurance Code sections 1850- 1860.3 (McBride-Grunsky). (See Stats. 1947, ch. 805, § 1 et seq., p. 1896 et seq.) That act previously authorized casualty insurers to cooperate in ratesetting and other matters in ways which might otherwise violate antitrust laws. (See Ins. Code, former § 1853-1853.8.) Proposition 103 repealed these provisions. It also added a declaration that the insurance industry "shall be subject to the laws of California applicable to any other business, including, but not limited to, the Unruh Civil Rights Act . . . , and the antitrust and unfair business practices laws" (Ins. Code, § 1861.03, subd. \(a\).)

If Insurance Code section 1861.03 stood by itself it would easily dispose of this case by explicitly subjecting defendants to state antitrust law. In context, however, it is unclear whether the statute reaches life insurance. [39] McBride-Grunsky is by its terms inapplicable to life insurance. (Ins. Code, § 1851, subd. \(b\).) On the other hand, if section 1861.03 does not subject defendants to the Cartwright Act, Proposition 103 appears to be irrelevant to this case.

Defendants point out that the ballot summary concerning Proposition 103 stated that under then-existing law, insurance companies were "not subject to the state's antitrust laws." However, such a summary "cannot supply language which does not appear [on the face of the initiative]." ([Sanford v. Garamendi \(1991\) 233 Cal.App.3d 1109, 1123 \[284 Cal.Rptr. 897\]](#), review den., brackets in original; quoting [Metropolitan Water District v. Dorff \(1979\) 98 Cal.App.3d 109, 115 \[159 Cal.Rptr. 211\]](#).) Obviously, it cannot supply language missing from existing laws. Indeed, HN20[] courts are never bound by a legislative statement concerning the intent of a prior enactment. ([Droeger v. Friedman, Sloan & Ross \(1991\) 54 Cal.3d 26, 44, fn. 14 \[283 Cal.Rptr. 584, 812 P.2d 931\]](#).)

We conclude that the UIPA does not pose an impediment to plaintiff's claims under the Cartwright Act.

II. UNFAIR INSURANCE PRACTICES ACT

As previously noted, the [40] Supreme Court has already determined that the UIPA does not create a private right of action for violations of its terms. (Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Companies, supra, 46 Cal.3d 287, 304.) Plaintiff asks us to distinguish that case on the ground that it [*1650] involved unfair claims practices prohibited by Insurance Code section 790.03, subdivision \(h\), whereas this case involves an unlawful boycott in violation of 790.03(c). We see no basis, however, for such a distinction here.

Moradi-Shalal's conclusion that the UIPA does not create private rights of action appears fully applicable to any unlawful conduct in the business of insurance. The court in effect concluded that Royal Globe had misconstrued section 790.09 to recognize a right of action, when in fact there was no textual basis for such a right. It may remain possible, at least theoretically, to judicially "imply" a right of action for some violations of the UIPA. Even were we to accept that theoretical possibility, however, the conditions for such an implied right of action are not satisfied here.

HN21[] Before a court may imply a right of action based on violations of a substantive statute [41] it must appear that (1) the plaintiff belongs to the class of persons the statute is intended to protect; (2) a private remedy will appropriately further the purpose of the legislation; and (3) such a remedy appears to be "needed to assure the effectiveness" of the statute. (Rest.2d, Torts, § 874A, quoted and applied in [Middlesex Ins. Co. v. Mann \(1981\) 124 Cal.App.3d 558, 570 \[177 Cal.Rptr. 495\]](#).)

In this case the third element of this test is not satisfied, if only because the Cartwright Act already grants plaintiff remedies which will "assure the effectiveness" of section 790.03\(c\). Accordingly, there is no occasion to "imply" a private remedy under the UIPA and plaintiff has not stated a cause of action under that statute. (See [Arriaga v. Loma Linda University \(1992\) 10 Cal.App.4th 1556, 1564 \[13 Cal.Rptr.2d 619\]](#), review den.)

III. UNFAIR COMPETITION

(11) Nor do we believe plaintiff has stated a cause of action under the UCA, Business and Professions Code section 17200 et seq. To be sure, HN22[] that act contains broad standing provisions (Bus. & Prof. Code, § 17203, 17204), and a declaration that its remedies are cumulative (, § 17205). Moreover, it has been [42] applied to permit private actions based on violations of other statutes which did not themselves confer standing. (E.g., [People v. McKale \(1979\) 25 Cal.3d 626, 632-634 \[159 Cal.Rptr. 811, 602 P.2d 731\]](#); Farmers Ins. Exchange v. Superior Court, supra, 2 Cal.4th 377, 382, 383, 400.) However, the UCA cannot be utilized to "plead around" absolute barriers to relief by relabeling the nature of the action as one brought under the unfair competition statute. ([Rubin v. Green \(1993\) 4 Cal.4th 1187, 1201 \[17 Cal.Rptr.2d 828, 847 P.2d 1044\]](#).) The purpose of the act is to permit [*1651] private enforcement of statutory prohibitions where to do so would not interfere with legislative objectives and limitations otherwise prescribed.

HN23 [+] It is settled that the UCA cannot be utilized to confer private standing to enforce the UIPA. In Rubin v. Green, supra, the Supreme Court cited approvingly three decisions which, as the court put it, "held that the bar on . . . implied private causes of action, imposed by our decision in Moradi-Shalal . . . may not be circumvented by recasting the action as one under Business and Professions Code section 17200." (4 Cal.4th at [43] p. 1202, citing Safeco Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1990) 216 Cal.App.3d 1491 [265 Cal.Rptr. 585]; Maler v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal.App.3d 1592 [270 Cal.Rptr. 222], review den.; Industrial Indemnity Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 209 Cal.App.3d 1093 [257 Cal.Rptr. 655]; see also American Internat. Group, Inc. v. Superior Court, supra, 234 Cal.App.3d at p. 768.)

Alternatively, plaintiff seems to suggest that it can state a cause of action under Insurance Code section 17200 because of its valid claim under the Cartwright Act. We fail to see the logic of this. If the predicate violation for the UCA claim is a violation of the Cartwright Act, then the UCA claim is merely redundant. If, on the other hand, the intent is to assert standing to enforce the UIPA, then as we have said, the claim is barred by Moradi-Shalal.

In other words, we decline to permit suit under the UCA when there is a valid regulatory scheme in place dealing with the specific wrong of which the plaintiff complains and the Legislature has made that scheme enforceable exclusively by a regulatory authority. The fact that the plaintiff has been injured by conduct violating the regulatory [44] scheme, and possesses a cause of action under another statute as a result of that wrong, does not confer standing under the regulatory statute or under the UCA.

Accordingly, plaintiff has not stated a cause of action under the UCA.

DISPOSITION

In No. A052795, let a peremptory writ of mandate issue directing the superior court to set aside its order of January 25, 1991, insofar as that order overruled defendants' demurrers to the third cause of action (Unruh Civil Rights Act), the fourth cause of action (Ins. Code, § 790.03, subd. (c)), and the fifth cause of action (Bus. & Prof. Code, § 17200 et seq.), and to sustain those demurrers to said causes of action without leave to amend. The alternative writ is otherwise discharged.

[*1652] In No. A055038, let a peremptory writ of mandate issue directing the superior court to set aside its order of July 23, 1991, insofar as that order sustained defendants' demurrers to the first and second causes of action (Cartwright Act), and to overrule the demurrers to those causes of action. The alternative writ is otherwise discharged.

Smith, Acting P. J., and Phelan, J., concurred. [45]

In re Belmac Corp. Sec. Litig.

United States District Court for the Middle District of Florida, Tampa Division

April 6, 1994, Decided ; April 11, 1994, Filed

CASE NUMBER: 92-1814-CIV-T-23C

Reporter

1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21584 *

IN RE BELMAC CORP. SECURITIES LITIGATION

Disposition: [*1] Judgment entered in accordance with the Order and Final Judgment entered by the Court on April 6, 1994. Plaintiffs' lead counsel, on behalf of all class counsel, awarded the sum of $ 650,000.00 as counsel fees, and $ 47,236.41 as reimbursement of expenses submitted to date.

Core Terms

securities litigation, graduate, district court, admitted to practice, settlement, Appeals, class action, law school, shareholder, class settlement, lead counsel, bar association, co-lead, law firm, joining, partner, cases, law clerk, antitrust, paralegals, participated, practiced, derivative, plaintiffs', matters, prosecuted, expenses, securities fraud, state court, chart

Counsel: For HAL FOGEL, plaintiff: Ira A. Schochet, Emily C. Komlossy, Goodkind, Labaton, Rudoff & Sucharow, New York, NY USA.

For HAL FOGEL, plaintiff: Michael J. Pucillo, Burt & Pucillo, West Palm Beach, FL USA.

For HAL FOGEL, plaintiff: Michael C. Addison, Law Office of Michael C. Addison, Tampa, FL.

For SUSAN STERN, consolidated plaintiff: Mary S. Scriven, Carlton, Fields, Ward, Emmanuel, Smith & Cutler, PA, Tampa, FL USA.

For PAUL H. HOCHISER, consolidated plaintiff: Michael C. Addison, Law Office of Michael C. Addison, Tampa, FL.

For FRED HART, MARTIN MICHAELOFF, consolidated plaintiffs: Michael J. Pucillo, Burt & Pucillo, West Palm Beach, FL USA.

Judges: Steven D. Merryday, United States District Judge.

Opinion by: Steven D. Merryday

Opinion

ORDER AND FINAL JUDGMENT

By Order dated December 22, 1993, (the "Implementing Order") this Court conditionally certified Plaintiffs as representatives [*2] of a class including all persons who purchased the common stock of Belmac Corporation ("Belmac") during the period (the "Class Period") from March 18 through November 16, 1992, inclusive, excluding defendants and certain others (the "Class"). Notice of said Class Certification was provided pursuant to the Implementing Order. On November 22, 1993, Plaintiffs, acting on behalf of themselves and the Class, entered into a Stipulation of Settlement (the "Settlement Stipulation") in settlement of all claims in the Action (the "Settlement") with Defendants Belmac, Jean-Francois Rossignol and Marc Ayers, and have applied to this Court for approval of the Settlement pursuant to Rule 23\(e\) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

Also pursuant to the Implementing Order, this Court scheduled a hearing for March 7, 1994 at 10:00 a.m. to determine, among other things, whether the proposed Settlement and compromise set forth in the Settlement Stipulation should be approved by the Court as being fair, reasonable and adequate and whether final judgment should be entered thereon, and to consider whether to approve the applications of All Class Counsel for awards of attorneys' fees, costs, and disbursements. [*3] This Court ordered that the Notice of Class Action Determination, Settlement of Class Action and Settlement Hearing, substantially in the form attached to the Settlement Stipulation as Exhibit "A1" (the "Class Settlement Notice"), be mailed by first-class mail, postage prepaid, on or before January 24, 1994, to each member of the Class who could be identified, and that a Summary Notice substantially in the form attached to the Settlement Stipulation as Exhibit "A2" be published in the national edition of The Wall Street Journal, one weekday within ten days after the mailing of the Class Settlement Notice.

As attested by the Declaration of Sherrie R. Savett, Esquire filed with this Court on March 3, 1994, the provisions of said Order as to notice were complied with. Moreover, the hearing on the proposed Settlement was duly held before this Court on March 7, 1994, at which time all interested persons were afforded the opportunity to be heard. This Court has duly considered all of the submissions and arguments presented with respect to the proposed Settlement.

After due deliberation, this Court hereby FINDS, CONCLUDES, AND ADJUDGES that:

1. This Order is binding on all members [*4] of the Class as described in the Court's Orders of December 22, 1993, excluding all persons who timely filed a request to be excluded from the Class, pursuant to Rule 23\(c\)\(2\) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, who are not bound by any of the terms of this Order.
2. The proposed Settlement of the Action on the terms and conditions set forth in the Settlement Stipulation is fair, reasonable and adequate, is in the best interests of the Class and should be approved, especially in light of the benefits to the Class and the complexity, expense and probable duration of further litigation, the substantial discovery and investigation conducted and the risks of establishing liability, causation and damages.
3. This Court hereby finds that the terms and conditions of the issuance of that certain number of shares of Belmac common stock into the Settlement Fund, as determined by paragraph 1 of the Stipulation of Settlement, and the subsequent distribution of those shares pursuant to the Stipulation of Settlement, are fair and adequate for purposes of exempting such shares from registration pursuant to section 3(a)(10) of the Securities Act of 1933.
4. The notification provided for and [*5] given to the Class constitutes the best notice practicable under the circumstances and is in full compliance with the notice requirements of due process and Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.
5. There is no just reason for delay in the entry of judgment as agreed upon in the Settlement Stipulation, pursuant to Rule 54\(b\) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.
6. Entry of final judgment and final approval of the Proposed Settlement will settle all claims alleged in the Action between Plaintiffs and the Class on the one hand and the Defendants on the other.
7. This Order and Final Judgment is final for purposes of appeal and may be appealed notwithstanding other matters presently pending, and the Clerk is hereby directed to enter judgment thereon.
8. Certification under Rule 54\(b\) will not result in unnecessary appellate review nor will review of the adjudicated claims moot any further developments in this Action. Even if subsequent appeals are filed, the nature of these claims are such that the appellate court would not have to decide the same issues more than once. The reservation of jurisdiction by the Court in this matter does not affect in any way the finality [*6] of this Order and Final Judgment.

It is further ORDERED as follows:

1. The Settlement Stipulation and the proposed Settlement are hereby approved and shall be consummated in accordance with the terms and provisions thereof.
2. All Class Claims alleged in this Action are hereby dismissed in their entirety on the merits, with prejudice, and without costs to any party.
3. The Consolidated Class Action Complaint is hereby dismissed in its entirety on the merits, with prejudice, and without costs to any party.
4. All members of the Class (including its, his, her, or their heirs, executors, administrators, predecessors, successors, affiliates and assigns), and each of them, for good and sufficient consideration, release, remise and forever discharge the Defendants in the Action (including each individual or entity and his, her, its, or their respective spouses, heirs, executors, administrators, assigns, past, present and former directors, partners, principals, officers, employees, agents, attorneys, accountants, insurers, subsidiaries, shareholders, parents, divisions, affiliates, predecessors or successors), and each of them, of and from any and all manner of actions and causes of [*7] actions, suits, obligations, claims, debts, agreements, promises, liabilities, controversies, costs, expenses and attorneys' fees whatsoever, whether in law or in equity and whether based on any federal law, state law, common law right of action or otherwise, foreseen or unforeseen, matured or unmatured, known or unknown, accrued or not accrued, which the members of the Class in the Action, or any of them, ever had, now have, can have or shall or may hereafter have, either individually or as a member of a class, by reason of, based upon, arising from or in any way related to, the alleged acts, failures to act, omissions, misrepresentations, facts, events, transactions, statements, occurrences or other subject matter which occurred prior to or during the Class Period and which either were or which could have been set forth, alleged, embraced, complained of or otherwise could have been consolidated or coordinated with the Action or could have been brought in any other forum.
5. The Defendants (including each individual or entity and his, her, its, or their respective spouses, heirs, executors, administrators, assigns, past, present and former directors, partners, principals, officers, [*8] employees, agents, attorneys, accountants, insurers, subsidiaries, shareholders, parents, divisions, affiliates, predecessors or successors), and each of them, for good and sufficient consideration, release, remise and forever discharge the Class Plaintiffs in the Action (including that individual and his or her respective spouses, heirs, executors, administrators or assigns), and each of them, of and from any and all manner of actions and causes of actions, suits, obligations, claims, debts, agreements, promises, liabilities, controversies, costs, expenses and attorneys' fees whatsoever, whether in law or in equity and whether based on any federal law, state law, common law right of action otherwise, foreseen or unforeseen, matured or unmatured, known or unknown, accrued or not accrued, which defendants or any of them, ever had, now have, can have or shall or may hereafter have, either individually or as a member of a class, by reason of, based upon, arising from or in any way related to, the alleged acts, failures to act, omissions, misrepresentations, facts, events, transactions, statements, occurrences or other subject matter, either in connection with the prosecution of this action [*9] or any other matter which could have been set forth, alleged, embraced, complained of or otherwise could have been consolidated or coordinated with the Action or could have been brought in any other forum.
6. This Judgment, the Settlement Stipulation, and all papers related to it are not, and shall not be construed to be, an admission by any of the Defendants of any liability or wrongdoing whatsoever, and shall not be offered as evidence of any such liability or wrongdoing in this or any future proceeding, and shall not be deemed as a concession or an admission by Class Plaintiffs or the Class of any lack of merit of their claims.

7. Plaintiffs' Lead Counsel, on behalf of All Class Counsel, are hereby awarded the sum of $ 650,000.00 ¹ as counsel fees and $ 47,236.41 as reimbursement of expenses submitted to date. The expenses shall be reimbursed from the cash portion of the Settlement Fund. Counsel fees shall be paid one-half from the cash Portion of the Settlement the Settlement Fund, and one-half from the stock portion of Fund.

[*10] 8. To the extent permitted by law, jurisdiction is hereby reserved over all matters relating to the consummation of the settlement in accordance with the Settlement Stipulation.

ORDERED in Tampa, Florida, on April 6th, 1994.

Steven D. Merryday

United States District Judge

JUDGMENT IN A CIVIL CASE - April 8, 1994

Decision by Court. This action came before the Court. A decision has been rendered.

IT IS ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that judgment is hereby entered in accordance with the Order and Final Judgment entered by the Court on April 6, 1994. Judgment is final for purposes of appeal and may be appealed notwithstanding other matters presently pending. Plaintiffs' lead counsel, on behalf of all class counsel, are hereby awarded the sum of $ 650,000.00 as counsel fees, and $ 47,236.41 as reimbursement of expenses submitted to date; the expenses shall be reimbursed from the cash portion of the settlement fund; counsel fees shall be paid one-half from the cash portion of the settlement the settlement fund, and one-half from the stock portion of fund.

April 8, 1994

Date

EXHIBIT

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

MIDDLE DISTRICT OF FLORIDA

TAMPA DIVISION

IN [*11] RE BELMAC CORP. SECURITIES LITIGATION

THIS DOCUMENT RELATES TO:

ALL ACTIONS

MASTER FILE NO. 92-1814-CIV-T-23(C)

EXHIBITS TO PLAINTIFFS' JOINT PETITION FOR AN AWARD OF ATTORNEYS' FEES AND REIMBURSEMENT OF LITIGATION COSTS AND EXPENSES

IN RE BELMAC CORP. SECURITIES LITIGATION

EXHIBIT NO.

¹ The Court reduced the maximum hourly rate to $ 350.00, resulting in a reduction in the total fee award of $ 10,000.00.

1 MICHAEL C. ADDISON FEE & EXPENSE AFFIDAVIT
2 BERGER & MONTAGUE, P.C. FEE & EXPENSE AFFIDAVIT
3 BURT & PUCILLO & PREDECESSOR FIRMS FEE & EXPENSE AFFIDAVIT
4 CARLTON, FIELDS, WARD, EMMANUEL, SMITH & CUTLER, P.A. FEE & EXPENSE AFFIDAVIT
5 GOODKIND LABATON RUDOFF & SUCHAROW FEE & EXPENSE AFFIDAVIT
6 KAUFMAN, MALCHMAN, KIRBY & SQUIRE FEE & EXPENSE AFFIDAVIT
7 SCHIFFRIN & CRAIG, LTD. FEE & EXPENSE AFFIDAVIT
8 COMPOSITE SUMMARY OF PLAINTIFFS' COUNSEL'S FEES & EXPENSES

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

MIDDLE DISTRICT OF FLORIDA

TAMPA DIVISION

IN RE BELMAC CORP. SECURITIES LITIGATION:

FOGEL, et al.

Plaintiffs, vs.

BELMAC CORPORATION, et al., Defendants.

Master File No.

Case No. 92-1814-Civ-T-23C

Civil Action

AFFIDAVIT OF MICHAEL C. ADDISON IN SUPPORT OF JOINT PETITION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES AND REIMBURSEMENT OF EXPENSES

[*12] STATE OF FLORIDA)

COUNTY OF HILLSBOROUGH)

I, Michael C. Addison, being duly sworn, depose and say:

1. I am a sole practitioner who practices law in Hillsborough County, Florida. I am submitting this Affidavit in support of my application for an award of attorneys' fees in connection with services rendered to the Plaintiff class and the reimbursement of expenses incurred by me in the course of this litigation.
2. I am local counsel of record for Plaintiffs Hal Fogel in Case No. 92-1814-Civ-T 23(C), Paul H. Hocheiser in Case No. 92-1880-Civ-T-23(A), and Fred Hart and Martin Michaeloff in Case No. 92-1895-Civ-T-23(C), and commenced these actions in this Court. Thereafter, I participated in the prosecution of this consolidated action in cooperation with other Plaintiffs' counsel. Specifically, my firm acted as local counsel in accordance with the local rules of the court. Initially, I was involved in drafting and filing the complaint on behalf of Plaintiffs Hal Fogel, Paul H. Hocheiser, Fred Hart and Martin Michaeloff.
3. The chart attached as Exhibit A presents a detailed summary indicating the time expended by me and a paralegal employed by me on the litigation, at our [*13] current rates. The chart includes the my name and that of my paralegal, our hourly billing rates and number of hours expended by me and my paralegal on this matter. The chart was prepared from contemporaneous daily time records maintained by my firm. The hourly rates for me and my paralegal are the regular rates charged for our services in litigation similar to this. In my opinion, my rate and the rate of my paralegal are reasonable. Time expended in preparing this Affidavit in support of my firm's application for fees and reimbursement of expenses has not been included in this request.

4. The total number of hours expended on this litigation by my firm is 78.80 hours. The total lodestar for my firm is $ 14,793.50, consisting of $ 14,298.50 for attorneys' time and $ 495.00 for paralegals' time.
5. With respect to the standing of counsel in this case, attached as Exhibit B is my brief biography.
6. My firm expended a total of $ 48.42 in unreimbursed expenses in connection with the prosecution of this litigation broken down as follows:

Description	Amount
Long Distance Telephone; Telecopier	$ 15.95
Postage	23.87
Photocopies	8.60
TOTAL	$ 48.42

7. The [*14] expenses incurred pertaining to this case are reflected on the books and records of my firm. These books and records are prepared from expense vouchers, check records and other source material and are an accurate recordation of the expenses incurred.

FURTHER AFFIANT SAYETH NAUGHT.

Michael C. Addison

STATE OF FLORIDA)

COUNTY OF HILLSBOROUGH)

BEFORE ME on this 16th day of February, 1994, personally appeared Michael C. Addison, who is personally known to me, and who, after being duly sworn, says that he executed the foregoing affidavit.

NOTARY PUBLIC, State of Florida

Name: Victoria Byrd

Serial No. __

My Commission Expires: NOTARY PUBLIC, STATE OF FLORIDA.

MY COMMISSION EXPIRES: Jan. 9, 1995.

BONDED THRU NOTARY PUBLIC UNDERWRITERS.

Exhibit A

MICHAEL C. ADDISON

ATTORNEY'S FEES

IN RE BELMAC CORP. SECURITIES LITIGATION

Timekeeper	Hourly Rate	Total Hours	Lodestar
Michael C. Addison, Attorney	$ 200.00	72.2	$ 14,298.50
Myrna D. Lesnek, Paralegal	75.00	6.6	495.00
Firm Totals		78.8	$ 14,793.50

EXHIBIT BBRIEF BIOGRAPHY OF MICHAEL C. ADDISON, ESQ.

Michael C. Addison was born on July 17, 1947. He [*15] attended Iowa State University where he received a B.S. in 1969. He received his J.D. from Georgetown University in 1972. After law school, he clerked for two years with Judge C. Clyde Atkins of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida. In 1974, he practiced law in Tampa with Trenam, Simmons, Kemker, Scharf, Barkin, Frye & O'Neill, P.A. He became a stockholder in that firm in 1978. In 1980, he resigned and established his own firm. In 1983 he formed Addison, Ketchey & Horan, P.A. In 1990, he resigned and joined Dykema Gossett. He left Dykema Gossett in December 1992, and currently practices as a sole practitioner in Tampa, Florida. Mr. Addison is a Board Certified Civil Trial Lawyer and practices exclusively in litigation, with a focus upon complex commercial matters. His current hourly billing rate is $ 195.00.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT MIDDLE DISTRICT OF FLORIDATAMPA DIVISION*IN RE BELMAC CORP. SECURITIES LITIGATION*THIS DOCUMENT RELATES TO:*ALL ACTIONS*MASTER FILE NO. 92-1814-CIV-T-23(C)*AFFIDAVIT OF SHERRIE R. SAVETT IN SUPPORT OF JOINT PETITION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES AND REIMBURSEMENT OF EXPENSES FILED ON BEHALF OF BERGER & MONTAGUE. [*16] P.C.*COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA:*COUNTY OF PHILADELPHIA:*ss.

I, SHERRIE R. SAVETT, being duly sworn, depose and say:

1. I am a shareholder and co-chairperson of the Securities Litigation Department of the law firm of Berger & Montague, P.C. I am submitting this Affidavit in support of my firm's application for an award of attorneys' fees in connection with services rendered to the Plaintiff class and the reimbursement of expenses incurred by my firm in the course of this litigation.
2. This firm, as counsel of record for Plaintiff Susan Stern, commenced an action in this Court. My firm was Co-Lead Counsel for the Class Action Plaintiffs in this action. We were intimately involved in every aspect of the case from its inception through the settlement. A more detailed description of the history of the litigation and the professional services provided by my firm appears in my extensive Affidavit in Support of the Proposed Class Action Settlement and Joint Petition for Attorneys' Fees and Reimbursement of Costs and Expenses. Specifically, my firm assisted lead counsel in formulating the theory and assisted in developing the facts of Plaintiffs' case. Initially, the [*17] attorneys of my firm were involved in investigation, factual analysis and drafting and filing the complaint on behalf of Plaintiff Susan Stern. Later, my firm finalized the Consolidated Complaint; coordinated the confirmatory discovery document review; and attended the confirmatory deposition. Further, with respect to settlement, our firm was involved in all aspects of negotiation, and also drafted the papers in support of the settlement.

3. The chart attached hereto as Exhibit A presents a detailed summary indicating the time expended by the attorneys, law clerks and paralegals of this firm on the litigation, at current rates. The chart includes the name of the attorneys who worked on the case, the hourly billing rates and number of hours expended by the attorneys, law clerks and paralegals on this matter. The chart was prepared from contemporaneous daily time records maintained by my firm. The hourly rates for the attorneys, law clerks and paralegals in my firm are the regular rates charged for their services in similar litigation such as this one. In my opinion, the rates charged by the various attorneys, the law clerks and the paralegals in my firm are reasonable. Time expended [*18] in preparing this Affidavit in support of my firm's application for fees and reimbursement of expenses has not been included in this request.

4. The total number of hours expended on this litigation by my firm is 384.8¹ hours. The total lodestar for my firm is $ 82,804.50, consisting of $ 70,803.50 for attorneys' time and $ 12,001.00 for law clerks' and paralegals' time.

[*19] 5. With respect to the standing of counsel in this case, attached hereto as Exhibit B is a brief biography of my firm and the attorneys of my firm who worked on this litigation.

6. My firm expended a total of $ 3,647.10² in unreimbursed expenses in connection with the prosecution of this litigation from inception through February 16, 1994 broken down as follows:

Description	Amount
Long Distance Telephone; Telecopier	$ 154.36
Travel & Living	1,237.79
Photocopying (in-house & outside)	1,341.03
Publications	13.46
Postage; Delivery & Freight	295.31
Computer Research	605.15
TOTAL	$ 3,647.10

7. The expenses incurred pertaining to this case are reflected on the books and records of my firm. These books and records [*20] are prepared from expense vouchers, check records and other source material and are an accurate recordation of the expenses incurred.

SHERRIE R. SAVETT

¹ Includes actual time spent through February 25, 1994 plus additional time as follows: 35 for myself estimated to be spent in connection with completing the briefs in support of the settlement, travel to, preparation for and attendance at the settlement hearing scheduled for March 7, 1994; 45 hours for A. Stock estimated to be spent in connection with completing the briefs in support of the settlement; and 30 hours for N.L. Vernick, the settlement coordinator of Berger & Montague, P.C., estimated to be spent in connection with responding to shareholder inquiries and communications with the accountants assisting in settlement administration.

² Includes estimated travel expenses in the amount of $ 915 for myself for travel to and attendance at the settlement hearing scheduled for March 7, 1994 and estimated additional miscellaneous expenses (photocopying, telephone, overnight mail service) of $ 250.00.

SWORN TO AND SUBSCRIBED

before me this [ILLEGIBLE TEXT] day of March, 1994.

Notary Public

EXHIBIT A

IN RE BELMAC CORP. SECURITIES LITIGATION

FIRM: BERGER & MONTAGUE, P.C.

Inception through February 25, 1994¹

[*21]

ATTORNEY	RATE	HOUR	TOTAL	LODESTAR
		LY	RS
S.R. Savett (P)	$ 395	86.5		$ 34,167.50
G.E. Cantor (P)	340	5.6		1,904.00
A. Stock (A)	190	182.8		34,732.00
TOTAL ATTORNEYS:
(P) - Partner, (A) - Associate		274.9		$ 70,803.50
LAW CLERKS/PARALEGALS
S.V. Pastino (LC)	$ 110	1.5		$ 165.00
P.V. Telang (Senior PL)	115	16.5		1,897.50
N.L. Vernick (Senior PL)	115	49.9		5,738.50
M.W. Berger (PL)	100	42.0		4,200.00
TOTAL LAW CLERKS/PARALEGALS:		109.9		$ 12,001.00

¹ Includes actual time spent through February 25, 1994 plus additional time as follows: 35 hours for S.R. Savett estimated to be spent in connection with completing the briefs in support of the settlement, travel to, preparation for and attendance at the settlement hearing scheduled for March 7, 1994; 45 hours for A. Stock estimated to be spent in connection with completing the briefs in support of the settlement; and 30 hours for N. L. Vernick, the settlement coordinator of Berger & Montague, P.C., estimated to be spent in connection with responding to shareholder inquiries and communications with the accountants assisting in settlement administration.

ATTORNEY	HOUR LY	TOTA L	LODESTAR
FIRM TOTAL:		384.8	$ 82,804.50

EXHIBIT B

BIOGRAPHY OF BERGER & MONTAGUE, P.C.

Berger & Montague, P.C. (formerly David Berger, P.A.) has been engaged in the practice of complex and class action litigation for over 20 years. The firm has been recognized by courts throughout the country for its ability and experience in handling major litigation, particularly in the fields of securities, antitrust and mass tort litigation brought as class and derivative actions. Currently, the Berger firm consists of 58 lawyers, of whom 24 are members of its Securities Litigation Department. Together with a support staff of paralegals, [*22] law clerks and others, the firm numbers over 100 individuals.

In the past 20 years, the Berger firm has successfully concluded many securities, antitrust and mass tort class and derivative actions wherein it played a principal or lead role. Examples are:¹

In Re PNC Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 90-0592 (W.D. Pa.) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 6.3 million, approved December 6, 1993.

Belman, et al. v. Warrington, et al., Civil Action No. H-91-3767 (S.D. Tex.) (Sanifill Securities Litigation) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 3.3 million, approved November 16, 1993.

In re Amdahl Securities Litigation, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15271, Master File No. C-92-20609-JW(EAI) (N.D. Cal.) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 13 million, approved on September 29, 1993.

In Re Melridge Securities Litigation, CV87-1426FR [*23] (D. Or.) -- the firm as lead counsel representing purchasers of Melridge common stock and convertible debentures secured partial settlements totaling $ 25 million. Following a four-month jury trial, the firm won a verdict on May 27, 1993 against the non-settling defendants for an additional $ 57 million.

In re Revco Securities Litigation: Arsam Company v. Salomon Brothers Inc., et al., Civil Action No. 89-00593 (N.D. Oh.) -- the firm as lead counsel obtained individual class settlements with defendants totaling $ 35,985,000 in the aggregate. The first class settlement was with defendant underwriter Salomon Brothers Inc. for $ 29,750,000. It was approved on April 1, 1992. The remaining settlements were approved on March 26, 1993.

In Re Rospatch Corporation Securities Litigation, Case No. 1:90-CV-806 et al. (W.D. Mich.) -- the firm as lead counsel obtained a class settlement of over $ 6.5 million, approved March 9, 1993.

¹ Unless otherwise indicated, all cases mentioned are securities class or derivative actions.

Masnik, et al. v. Bolar Pharmaceutical Co., Inc., Civil Action No. 90-4086 (E.D. Pa.) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of over $ 2.5 million, approved February 1, 1993.

In re Meridian Securities Litigation, [*24] Master File No. 90-6211 (E.D. Pa.) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 3.25 million, approved November 27, 1992.

In Re Kenbee Limited Partnerships Litigation, Civil Action No. 91-2174 (GEB) (D. NJ) -- the firm served as co-lead counsel in a class action involving 119 separate limited partnerships resulting in cash settlement and debt restructuring with as much as $ 100 million in potential wrap mortgage reductions, approved November 19, 1992.

In Re Surgical Laser Technologies, Inc. Securities Litigation, Master File No. 91-CV-2478 (E.D. Pa.) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 5.5 million, approved on October 29, 1992.

Swanick, et al. v. Flagship Financial Corp., et al., Civil Action No. 91-1350 (E.D. Pa.) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of over $ 2 million, approved October 1, 1992.

In Re Public Service Company of New Mexico Class and Derivative Actions, Master File No. 91-536-K-(M) (S.D. Cal.) -- the firm as lead counsel for class plaintiffs obtained a class and derivative settlement of $ 33 million, approved on June 29, 1992.

Cytryn, et al. v. Cook, et al., [*25] No. C-89-20801-RFP (N.D. Cal.) (Raychem Securities Litigation) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 19.5 million, approved on May 1, 1992.

In Re Tucson Electric Power Company Securities Litigation, Civ. 89-1274 PHX WPC (D. Ariz) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained class and derivative settlements of $ 30 million, approved on February 20, 1992.

In Re Lomas Financial Corporation Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. CA-3-89-1962-G (N.D. Tex.) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement in excess of $ 20 million, approved on January 28, 1992.

In Re RAC Mortgage Investment Corporation Securities Litigation, Master File No. K89-1796 (D. Md.) -- the firm as a member of plaintiffs' executive committee obtained a class settlement of $ 11 million, approved on December 4, 1991.

Berl v. The Southland Corporation, et al., Civil Action No. CA3-90-1254-H (N.D. Tex.) -- the firm as lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 5 million, approved on November 1, 1991.

In Re Home Shopping Network Securities Litigation -- Action I, Case No. 87-428-Civ-T-13(A) (M.D. Fla.) -- the firm as co-lead counsel [*26] obtained a class settlement of $ 18.2 million, approved on October 15, 1991.

In Re Kay Jewelers Securities Litigation, Civil Action Nos. 90-1663(A) through 90-1668(A) (E.D. Vir.) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 3 million during middle of trial, approved on September 26, 1991.

In Re Ames Department Stores Securities Litigation, Master File No. H-87-697 (AHN) (D. Conn.) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 3.295 million, approved on September 4, 1991.

In Re Seagate Technology Securities Litigation, Master File No. C-84-20756(A) -WAI (N.D. Cal.) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 9.3 million, approved on August 14, 1991.

Squitieri v. Gould, et al., Case No. 89-6832 (E.D. Pa.) (Commodore International Securities Litigation) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 3.25 million, approved on March 1, 1991.

In re Genentech, Inc. Securities Litigation, Master File No. C-88-4038-DLJ (N.D. Cal.) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 29 million, approved on February 21, 1991.

In Re: Subaru of America, Inc. [*27] Shareholder Litigation, Superior Court of New Jersey, Chancery Division, Camden County, Master Docket No. C-00016-90 -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement with benefits to the class of over $ 70 million, approved on February 14, 1991.

Malanka v. de Castro, et al., [1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18171] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P95,657 (D. Mass. 1990) (Data General Securities Litigation) -- the firm as lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 6 million, approved on November 20, 1990.

In Re Smithkline Beckman Corporation Securities Litigation, [751 F. Supp. 525] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P95,686 (E.D. Pa. 1990) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 22 million, approved on October 29, 1990.

In Re Telesphere International Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 89 C 1875 (N.D. Ill.) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 1.425 million, approved on October 23, 1990.

In Re: Philadelphia Electric Company Derivative Litigation, Court of Common Pleas, Philadelphia County, March Term, 1987, No. 7090 -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a settlement in excess of $ 34 million, approved on September 14, 1990.

[*28] David Stein, et al. v. James C. Marshall, et al., No. CIV 89-66 PHX-CAM (D. Ariz.) (In Re Residential Resources Mortgage Investment Corporation Securities Litigation) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement in excess of $ 10 million, approved on September 7, 1990.

In Re Sunrise Securities Litigation, [131 F.R.D. 450] MDL No. 655 (E.D. Pa.) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a partial class settlement of approximately $ 11 million, approved on May 29, 1990.

Heideman, et al. v. Toreson, et al., Civ. No. C-86-20024-SW (N.D. Cal.) (Xebec Securities Litigation) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 7.15 million, approved December 20, 1989.

Geist v. Arizona Public Service Company, C.A. No. 87-1172 (PHX) CLH -- the firm as lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 7 million, approved on June 6, 1989.

Isidore Kallus and Faye Kallus, et al. v. General Host Corporation, C.A. No. B-87-160 (TFGD) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 2.15 million, approved on March 29, 1989.

In re American Integrity Securities Litigation, Master File No. 86-7133 (E.D. Pa.) -- the firm as lead [*29] counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 6.5 million, approved on March 13, 1989.

In re LILCO Securities Litigation, 84 Civ. 0588 (LDW) (E.D.N.Y.) -- the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a settlement of $ 48.5 million, approved on October 11, 1988.

Silver Diversified Ventures Limited Money Purchase Pension Plan v. Barrow, et al., C.A. No. B-86-1520-CA (E.D. Tex.) (Gulf States Utilities Securities Litigation), the firm as lead derivative counsel obtained a combined class and derivative settlement of $ 6.5 million, approved on June 30, 1988.

Bank-America Securities Litigation, Master File No. CV 85-4779 WDK (Bx) (C.D. Cal.) - the firm as lead counsel obtained a settlement of $ 39.25 million in this derivative action, approved on April 6, 1988.

Engel v. Elsner (Tandon Securities Litigation), CV 86-4566-RS WL (Kx) (C.D. Cal.) - class settlement of in excess of $ 16 million, approved March 15, 1988.

The Southland Corporation Securities Litigation, Cause No. 87-8834-K (Dist. Ct., Dallas County, Tex.) - class settlement of at least $ 20 million, approved on October 20, 1987.

Iomega Securities Litigation, C.A. No. B-86-260 (D.C.Ct.) [*30] the firm as lead counsel obtained a class settlement in excess of $ 2.5 million in cash plus securities, approved on October 1, 1987.

In re Fiddler's Woods Bondholders Litigation, C.A. No. 83-2340 (E.D. Pa.), the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 6.4 million, approved on September 10, 1987.

In re MCorp Securities Litigation, C.A. No. H-85-5894 (S.D. Tex.), the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement in excess of $ 4 million, approved on July 6, 1987.

In re Computer Input Services, Inc. Securities Litigation, Master File No. 83-1393 (E.D. Pa.), the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 4.6 million, approved on June 18, 1987.

In re First Jersey Securities Litigation, C.A. No. 85-6059 (E.D. Pa.), the firm as lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 10 million, approved on May 29, 1987.

Naye v. Boyd, C83-771R (W.D. Wash.) (Seafirst Securities Litigation), the firm as lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 13.6 million approved on March 24, 1987.

AM International, Inc. Securities Litigation, Master File No. M-21-31 (S.D.N.Y.), the firm as co-lead counsel obtained class [*31] settlements of approximately $ 20 million, approved on February 20, 1987.

Continental-Illinois Securities Litigation, C.A. -No. 84-C-8596 (N.D. Ill.), the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 17.5 million, approved on January 21, 1987.

American Savings and Loan Securities Litigation, C.A. No. 85-0659 (S.D. Fla.), the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 4 million, approved on January 9, 1987.

Houston Oil Securities Litigation, C.A. No. H-82-551 (S.D. Tex.), the firm had major participation in obtaining a class settlement of $ 45 million approved on December 16, 1986.

In re Coleco Securities Litigation, Master File No. 83 Civ. 9199 (S.D.N.Y.), the firm as lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 15.75 million, approved October 2, 1986.

In re Oak Industries Securities Litigation, No. 83-0537-G(M) (S.D. Cal.), where the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement in excess of $ 33 million approved on August 29, 1986.

Lundy v. InterFirst Corporation, No. 3-84-0952-H (N.D. Tex.), the firm as lead counsel obtained a class settlement of $ 6.7 million, approved July 3, 1986.

In [*32] re Cincinnati Gas & Electric Securities Litigation, Master File No. C-1-83-1721 (S.D. Ohio), the firm as co-lead counsel obtained a class settlement of almost $ 14 million approved on January 2, 1986.

In re Baldwin United Annuity Litigation, No. M-21-35 (S.D.N.Y.), where the firm was co-lead counsel in a consolidated proceeding on behalf of purchasers of annuities which has been partially settled, for $ 135 million.

In re Warner Communications Securities Litigation, 618 F. Supp. 735 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) -- class settlement of $ 18.4 million.

In re Crocker Shareholder Litigation, Cons. C.A. No. 7405, Court of Chancery, State of Delaware, New Castle County -- class settlement in the range of $ 35 to $ 70 million.

Vukovich v. McCormick Oil & Gas Company, et al., C.A. No. H-82-3094 (S.D. Tex.) -- class settlement $ 4.7 million, approved March 12, 1984.

In re Louisville Explosions Litigation, Master File No. 81-0080-L(B) (W.D. Ky.) -- first trial of mass tort class action settled on a formula basis for approximately $ 26 million.

Jerozal, et al. v. Cash Reserve Management, 81 Civ. 1579 (CES), 81 Civ. 1726 (CES), 82 Civ. 3338 [*33] (CES), (S.D.N.Y. November 28, 1983) -- derivative settlement benefits to the Fund of $ 3.75 million assuming asset levels of the fund remain constant.

In re Corrugated Container Antitrust Litigation, M.D.L. No. 310 (S.D. Tex.) -- antitrust class settlement of $ 366 million plus interest.

In re Caesars World Shareholder Litigation, Master File No. 81-3442, M.D.L. No. 496 -- derivative settlement where $ 7 million was paid to the corporation.

Robbins v. Steinberg, CV-6506, Delaware Court of Chancery (Reliance Securities Litigation) -- class settlement of "going private" case where approximately $ 10 million of additional value went to the shareholders.

Spilove v. Anderson, CV-81-833-R (C.D. Cal.) (Mattel Securities Litigation) -- class settlement of $ 3.9 million.

In re First Pennsylvania Securities Litigation, C.A. No. 77-1610 (E.D. Pa.) -- class settlement in excess of $ 11 million.

In re Food Fair Securities Litigation, M.D.L. No. 368 (E.D. Pa.) -- class settlement of $ 2.5 million.

Charal v. Andes, et al., C.A. No. 77-1725; Hubner v. Andes, et al., C.A. No. 78-1610 (E.D. Pa.) (Franklin Mint Corporation) -- class settlement [*34] of over $ 6 million.

In re Magic Marker Securities Litigation, C.A. No. 77-3155 (E.D. Pa.) -- class settlement of $ 1.6 million.

Mazza v. Fidelcor, Inc., et al., C.A. Nos. 78-1349 and 78-1527 (E.D. Pa.) -- class settlement of $ 2.4 million.

In re: Three Mile Island Litigation, C.A. No. 79-0432 -- settlement of $ 25 million in this mass tort class action.

Waldman v. Fidelco Growth Investors, C.A. Nos. 78-623 and 78-796 (E.D. Pa.) -- class settlement of $ 1.3 million plus substantial benefits to FGI in settlement of the derivative action.

In re Consolidated Pretrial Proceedings in Ampex Securities Cases, Master File No. C-72-360-SW (N.D. Cal.) - - class settlement of $ 9 million.

Seiden v. Nicholson, (CNA Corporation), 74-C-3117 and related cases (N.D. Ill.) -- class settlement of $ 9.5 million.

Penn Central Securities Litigation, M.D.L. Docket No. 56 -- total settlement for all plaintiff entities including shareholder class in excess of $ 10.5 million.

The standing of Berger & Montague, P.C., in successfully conducting major securities and antitrust litigation has been recognized by numerous courts. In Re: Subaru of [*35] America, Inc. Shareholder Litigation, where Sherrie R. Savett served as co-lead counsel, Judge Lowengrub stated:

I think that the settlement achieved through the very skillful and diligent work of counsel on behalf of the shareholders was excellent. I cannot just say that it was -- it is fair and reasonable. It's an excellent result.

It was done without the intervention of the Court. The Court was not burdened with a multiplicity of motions, management conferences, et cetera, that generally raise their head in this type of litigation or in any complex litigation.

In In Re American Integrity Securities Litigation 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9207, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P94,738 at p. 93,989 (E.D. Pa. 1989), where Berger & Montague was sole lead counsel and the litigation was conducted by a team headed by Sherrie R. Savett and Gary E. Cantor, Judge Shapiro cited "the excellent results obtained" and awarded lead counsel an additional multiplier "warranted by the high quality of work including the management and coordination to avoid duplication of effort and insure a prompt and efficient resolution of the litigation."

At the June 5, 1987 hearing in In re E.F. Hutton Banking Practices Litigation, [*36] where Sherrie R. Savett was lead counsel, Judge Knapp stated in his opinion at pp. 35-36:

[I] will say without question that I think the work was highly competent.... I will state unequivocally, I think the work has been extraordinarily competent.

In In re AM International Securities Litigation, approving an approximate $ 20 million settlement in cash and warrants, Judge Sprizzo addressed Lead Counsel, including Messrs. Wolfe and Stiefel of the Berger firm, as follows:

Obviously you are all able lawyers. And I think the case was handled -- and I will say it for the record so you can put it in your next set of papers -- at least in my view, competently and expertly....

In approving a $ 33 million cash settlement where Sherrie R. Savett was one of the lead counsel in In re Oak Industries Securities Litigation, the Honorable Harry R. McCue stated in his opinion at pp.24-30:

This is an outstanding achievement, and it has been rarely achieved or equaled anywhere in the United States in similar class action securities litigation.

* * *

There can be no doubt that the public good was fully served by the attorneys for the plaintiffs in this case, [*37] because they invested their own time, their own money, they invested their special skills and knowledge to vindicate the rights and interests of the thousands of investors who invested their money and placed their trust in the integrity of the securities market.

* * *

I conclude that the achievement of plaintiffs' counsel under any of those tests was superior.

* * *

I think that the manner in which this case was handled and litigated by counsel for each of the defendants and counsel for the plaintiffs, this litigation, the way this was conducted, should serve as a textbook example of how these cases should be conducted.

* * *

I think this is an example of how, with the combined skill, wisdom and experience of attorneys representing the plaintiffs and attorneys who are similarly skilled and experienced and wise representing the defendants, they sat down and resolved a very difficult situation; and if this case was in the hands of less-experienced, less-skilled, less-wise attorneys, I predict that this could have turned into a disaster.

In In re Coleco Securities Litigation, Master File No. 83 Civ. 9199 (S.D.N.Y.), where Stanley R. Wolfe was the lead counsel, [*38] the court in approving the settlement stated in its opinion at pp. 28-29.

... I just want to comment on one thing and that is the point that has been made that the litigation has been conducted without unnecessary frills or consumption of time. And I must say that apart from my own observations of the progress of this case I have consulted with the magistrate who shares the same view. * * * I am satisfied that able and sophisticated counsel on both sides have pursued the case on the merits and the fact that they are being generously compensated for their efforts is entirely as it should be.

In In re Warner Communications Securities Litigation, 618 F. Supp. 735 (S.D.N.Y. 1985), where Sherrie R. Savett was one of the lead counsel, the court stated in its opinion at pp. 748-49.

... The quality of the work of plaintiffs' counsel on this case is also demonstrated by the efficient manner of prosecution. Rather than engaging in long months of extensive motion practice... plaintiff's counsel were able to successfully negotiate these issues with defendants and proceed directly to discovery on merits... This efficient prosecution enabled the plaintiffs' counsel [*39] to concentrate their energy on the complex issues of the lawsuit.

Judge Keenan further commented in his opinion:

The quality of work of plaintiffs' counsel on this case is also demonstrated by the efficient manner of prosecution.... At the settlement hearing, defense counsel conceded that plaintiffs' counsel constitute the "cream of the plaintiffs' bar." The court cannot find fault with that characterization. Id.

In Charal v. Andes, 88 F.R.D. 265, 267 (E.D. Pa. 1980), Judge Bechtle noted:

... Counsel in this case are highly experienced in securities litigation and have enjoyed nationwide respect in this area....

In Gross, et al. v. National Liquid Reserves, Inc. et al., 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20791, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P99,618, the court found that:

Counsel...are highly respected members of the bar and have substantial experience in shareholder class and derivative actions.

at p. 97,424.

Furthermore, the court stated that "the actions were resolved with great efficiency..." at p. 97,426.

In Wolgin v. Magic Marker Corporation, 82 F.R.D. 168, 175 (E.D. Pa. 1979), where the Berger firm was lead counsel, Chief [*40] Judge Luongo stated:

... I am fully satisfied that [counsel for the named plaintiffs] are capable of conducting the proposed class action in a vigorous and efficient manner.

In awarding fees in the Magic Marker case, Judge Luongo noted that the settlements achieved in that action represented "an outstanding result by any standard" and that the application of the contingency and quality factors to the Berger firm's hours, the bulk of which "[were] attributable to the services of Sherrie R. Savett and Gary E. Cantor," would warrant increasing the Berger firm's lodestar "by a multiple of two." In re Magic Marker Securities Litigation, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9777, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P97,116 at p. 96,195 (E.D. Pa. 1979).

In In re Master Key Antitrust Litigation, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12948, 1978-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P61,887 (D. Conn. 1977), where Berger & Montague was co-lead counsel, Judge Blumenfeld expressly found:

. . . The work of the Berger firm showed a high degree of efficiency and imagination, particularly in the maintenance and management of the national class actions.

at pp. 73,725-73,726.

Similar statements appear in City of Detroit v. Grinnell Corporation, 1976 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15479, 1976-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P60,913 at p. 68,981 [*41] (S.D.N.Y. 1976) (where Judge Metzner favorably commented on the skill of the predecessor firm to Berger & Montague); In re Anthracite Coal Antitrust Litigation, 81 F.R.D. 499, 502-03 (M.D. Pa. 1979) (Judge Muir); Hedges Enterprises, Inc. v. Continental Group Inc., 81 F.R.D. 461, 466 (E.D. Pa. 1979) (Judge Bechtle); Lindy Bros. Builders, Inc. of Philadelphia v. American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp., 382 F. Supp. 999, 1974-2 Trade Cas. (CCH) P75,361 (E.D. Pa. 1974) (Judge Harvey). In Lindy Bros. Builders, Inc. of Philadelphia v. American Radiator Standard Sanitary Corp., 382 F. Supp. 999, 1974-2 Trade Cas. (CCH) P75,361 (E.D. Pa. 1974), Judge Harvey found that David Berger "has an unequalled national reputation as a plaintiffs' class action attorney" (at p. 98,157), that his "experience in national class action litigation . . . can hardly be equalled by any attorney in the country" (at p. 98,165), and that he "... was not only capable of successfully conducting a national class action litigation, but was also possessed of a visible track record which demonstrates his successes in this field" (at p. 98,157). See also, PASA v. GAB, 352 F. Supp. 648, 651 (E.D. Pa. 1972); [*42] Lindy I, 341 F. Supp. 1077, 1090-91 (E.D. Pa. 1972); Philadelphia Electric Company v. Anaconda American Brass Co., 47 F.R.D. 557, 559 (E.D. Pa. 1969).

The Berger firm has been responsible for obtaining many favorable opinions which have broken new ground in the class action or securities fields or which have promoted shareholder rights in prosecuting these actions. Among them are:

1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21584, *42

Delgocco v. Kenny, 266 N.J. Super. 169, 628 A.2d 1080 \(1993\).

[In re U.S. Bioscience Securities Litigation, \[806 F. Supp. 1197\]](#) Fed. Sec. L. Rep. [(CCH)] P97,226 (E.D. Pa. 1992).

[In re Genentech, Inc. Securities Litigation, \[1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11389\]](#) Fed. Sec. L. Rep. [(CCH)] P95,347 (N.D. Cal. 1990).

[In re Genentech, Inc. Securities Litigation, \[1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13424\]](#) Fed. Sec. L. Rep. [(CCH)] P94,813 (N.D. Cal. 1989).

[In re Genentech, Inc. Securities Litigation, \[1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14819\]](#) Fed. Sec. L. Rep. [(CCH)] P94,544 (N.D. Cal. 1989).

[Cytryn v. Cook, \(Raychem Securities Litigation\), \[1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14371\]](#) Fed. Sec. L. Rep. [(CCH)] P95,409 (N.D. Cal. 1990).

In re School Asbestos Litigation, 789 F.2d 996 (3d Cir.), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 852, 107 S. Ct. 182, 93 L. Ed. 2d 117 (1986). [*43]

Blackie v. Barrack, 524 F.2d 891 \(9th Cir. 1975\), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 816, 50 L. Ed. 2d 75, 97 S. Ct. 57.

Bogosian v. Gulf Oil Corp., 561 F.2d 434 \(3rd Cir. 1977\), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1086, 55 L. Ed. 2d 791, 98 S. Ct. 1280 (1978).

[In re LILCO Securities Litigation, \[625 F. Supp. 1500\]](#) CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P92,777 (E.D. N.Y. 1986).

[In re Gulf Oil Tender Offer Litigation, \[112 F.R.D. 383\]](#) CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P92,931 (S.D.N.Y. 1986)

[In re Coleco Securities Litigation, \[591 F. Supp. 1488\]](#) Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P91,617 (S.D.N.Y. 1984).

[Lewis v. Berry, \[1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19585\]](#) Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P92,354 and 92,355 (W.D. Wash. 1985)

[Lewis v. Berry, \[1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12265\]](#) Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P99,550 (W.D. Wash. 1983)

[Lewis v. Arthur Andersen & Co., \[101 F.R.D. 706\]](#) Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P91,403 (W.D. Wash. 1984).

Ferber v. Morgan Stanley Co., Inc., [1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20639] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P99,634 and P99,684. (E.D. Pa. 1984).

In re McDonnell Douglas Corp. Securities Litigation, [1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15481] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P98,838 (E.D. Mo. 1982).

In re McDonnell Douglas Corp. Securities Litigation, [98 F.R.D. 613] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P98,737 (E.D. Mo. 1982). [*44]

In re McDonnell Douglas Corp. Securities Litigation, 92 F.R.D. 761 (E.D. Mo. 1981).

Kaplan v. T. Rowe Price & Associates, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8280, 28 Fed. R. Serv. 2d (Callaghan) 743 (D. Md. 1979).

Wolgin v. Magic Marker Corp., 82 F.R.D. 168 (E.D. Pa. 1979).

BIOGRAPHIES OF INDIVIDUAL ATTORNEYS

Set forth below are the biographies of the attorneys who worked on the Belmac matter and who are individually listed on the chart attached to the accompanying affidavit as Exhibit A.

1. Sherrie R. Savett

Sherrie R. Savett is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania (B.A. 1970 summa cum laude; J.D. 1973) and a member of Phi Beta Kappa. She is Co-Chairperson of the firm's Securities Litigation Department. She has served as a lead counsel in the following representative cases, all of which were successfully resolved for plaintiff classes:

In Re PNC Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 90-0592 (W.D. Pa.) -- (class settlement of $ 6.3 million);

Belman, et al. v. Warrington, et al., Civil Action No. H-91-3767 (S.D. Tex.) (Sanifill Securities Litigation) -- (class settlement of $ 3.3 million); [*45]

In re Amdahl Securities Litigation, Master File No. C-92-20609-JW(EAI) (N.D. Cal.) -- (class settlement of $ 13 million);

Masnik, et al. v. Bolar Pharmaceutical Co., Inc., Civil Action No. 90-4086 (E.D. Pa.) -- (class settlement in excess of $ 2.5 million);

In Re Public Service Company of New Mexico Class and Derivative Actions, Master File No. 91-536-K-(M) (S.D. Cal.) -- (class and derivative settlement of $ 33 million);

Cytryn, et al. v. Cook, et al., No. C-89-20801-RFP (N.D. Cal.) (Raychem Securities Litigation) -- (class settlement of $ 19.5 million);

In Re Lomas Financial Corporation Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. CA-3-89-1962-G (N.D. Tex.) -- (class settlement in excess of $ 20 million);

In Re Home Shopping Network Securities Litigation -- Action I, Case No. 87-428-Civ-T-13(A) (M.D. Fla.) (class settlement of $ 18.2 million);

In Re Kay Jewelers Securities Litigation, Civil Action Nos. 90-1663 (A) through 90-1668(A) (E.D. Vir.) -- (class settlement of $ 3 million obtained during middle of trial);

In Re Seagate Technology Securities Litigation, Master File No. C-84-20756 (A) -WAI (N.D. Cal.) -- [*46] (class settlement of $ 9.3 million);

Squitieri v. Gould, et al., Case No. 89-6832 (E.D. Pa.) (Commodore International Securities Litigation) (class settlement of $ 3.25 million);

In re Genentech, Inc. Securities Litigation, Master File No. C-88-4038-DLJ (N.D. Cal.) (class settlement of $ 29 million);

In Re: Subaru of America, Inc. Shareholder Litigation, Superior Court of New Jersey, Chancery Division, Camden County, Master Docket No. C-00016-90 (class settlement with benefits to the class of over $ 70 million);

Malanka v. de Castro, et al., [1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18171] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P95,657 (D. Mass. 1990) (Data General Securities Litigation) (class settlement of $ 6 million);

In Re Smithkline Beckman Corporation Securities Litigation, [751 F. Supp. 525] CCH Fed. Sec. L. Rep. P 95,686 (E.D. Pa. 1990) (class settlement of $ 22 million);

In re Long Island Company Securities Litigation, 84 Civ. 0588 (LDW) (class settlement of $ 48.5 million);

In re American Integrity Securities Litigation, Master File No. 86-7133 (E.D. Pa.) (class settlement of $ 6.7 million);

BankAmerica Securities Litigation, CV 85-4779 (C.D. Cal.) (settlement [*47] of $ 39.25 million, believed to be the largest derivative settlement ever obtained in a securities action);

Engel v. Elsner (Tandon Securities Litigation), CV 86-4566 (C.D. Cal.) (class settlement of $ 16 million);

Fiddler's Woods Securities Litigation, C.A. 83-2340 (E.D. Pa.) (settlement of $ 6.4 million obtained after trial had commenced);

Naye v. Boyd, C83-771R (W.D. Wash.) (Seafirst Securities Litigation) (class settlement of $ 13.6 million);

In re Warner Communications Securities Litigation, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 92, 272 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) (class settlement of $ 18.4 million);

Oak Industries Securities Litigation, No. 83-0537-G(M) (S.D. Cal.) (class settlement of $ 33 million);

Spilove v. Anderson, CV-81-833-R (C.D. Cal.) (Mattel Securities Litigation -- class action settled for $ 3.9 million shortly before trial);

First Pennsylvania Securities Litigation (class settlement of $ 11 million);

Charal v. Andes, C.A. Nos. 77-1725 and 78-1610 (E.D. Pa.) (class litigation involving Franklin Mint Corporation which resulted in a $ 6 million settlement); and Magic Marker Securities Litigation, [*48] C.A. No. 77-3155 (E.D. Pa.) (class settlement of $ 1.6 million).

Mrs. Savett has lectured at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania and at the Stanford Law School on prosecuting shareholder class actions. She has participated as a panelist in numerous professional seminars and is the author of several papers on various aspects of securities and complex litigation. Her writings include "Everything David Needs to Know to Battle Goliath - The Preparation and Trial of a Securities Class Action Fraud Case" published by The Brief, an American Bar Association magazine issued twice a year from the Tort and Insurance Practice Section, "Mass Accident/Mass Products Liability Tort Litigation" published by The Association of Trial Lawyers of America, and the following papers published by The Practicing Law Institute ("PLI") in their Securities Litigation series, each of which she presented at PLI seminars from 1984 through 1992: "The Fraud on the Market Theory Today: The Courts' Recognition of Reality in Securities Trading", "Prosecution of Derivative Actions: A Plaintiff's Perspective", "THE DERIVATIVE ACTION: An Important Shareholder Vehicle for Insuring Corporate Accountability [*49] in Jeopardy" and "Trial and Preparation of a Securities Class Action Fraud Case from a Plaintiff's Standpoint." The last paper was also presented by Mrs. Savett at the American Bar Association Annual Meeting, held in Toronto in Summer, 1988. In February, 1990, she participated in a PLI seminar entitled "Advanced Workshop on Problems in Securities Disclosures."

2. Gary E. Cantor

Gary E. Cantor is a graduate of Rutgers College (B.A. 1974) and the University of Pennsylvania (J.D. 1977), where he was a member of the Moot Court Board and the author of a law review comment on computer-generated evidence, 126 U. Pa. L. Rev. 425 (1977). Since joining the Berger firm in 1977, he has concentrated on complex litigation, particularly securities litigation. Among others, he has played a major role in In Re Kenbee Limited Partnerships Litigation, Civil Action No. 91-2174(GEB) (class action involving 119 separate limited partnerships resulting in cash settlement and debt restructuring with as much as $ 100 million in potential wrap mortgage reductions); In Re Richard J. Dennis & Co. Litigation, 88 Civ. 8928 (MP) (S.D.N.Y.) ($ 2.5 million commodity class action settlement [*50] approved November 20, 1990); American Integrity Securities Litigation, Seafirst Securities Litigation; Vukovich v. McCormick Oil & Gas Co.; Charal v. Andes, C.A. No. 77-1725 (E.D. Pa.) (Franklin Mint) and Wolgin v. Magic Marker class actions previously cited, and his work was recognized by Judge Luongo in his Magic Marker Opinion at Fed. Sec. L. Rep. \(CCH\) P 97,116 at pp. 96,193 and 96,195.

3. Arthur Stock

Arthur Stock is a graduate of Yale University (B.A. 1984, with distinction in economics) and the Duke University School of Law (J.D. 1990, with high honors), where he served as Articles Editor of the Duke Law Journal and published a Note. From 1990 to 1991, he served as a law clerk to the Honorable Jackson L. Kiser in the United States District Court for the Western District of Virginia. Since joining the Berger firm, Mr. Stock has concentrated in securities class action professional malpractice, and derivative litigation. He has been heavily involved in U.S. Bioscience Securities Litigation, Interfund v. Stroock & Stroock & Lavan, and Salomon, Inc. Securities Litigation.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

MIDDLE DISTRICT OF FLORIDA

TAMPA DIVISION

IN [*51] RE BELMAC CORP. SECURITIES

LITIGATION

THIS DOCUMENT RELATES TO:

ALL ACTIONS

MASTER FILE NO. 92-1814-CIV-T-23-(C)

AFFIDAVIT OF MICHAEL J. PUCILLO IN SUPPORT OF JOINT PETITION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES AND REIMBURSEMENT OF EXPENSES

I, MICHAEL J. PUCILLO, being duly sworn, depose and state as follows:

1. I am a Partner with the law firm of Burt & Pucillo which was formed on January 1, 1994. Previously, I was Partner with the firm of Chimicles, Burt & Jacobsen which was formed on June 26, 1994, and the firm of Greenfield & Chimicles which dissolved pursuant to its partnership agreement on June 26, 1993.
2. I am submitting this Affidavit in Support of Plaintiffs' Counsel's Petition for an Award of Attorneys' Fees in Connection with Services rendered to Plaintiffs' class and reimbursement of expenses incurred by my firm in the course of this litigation.
3. My current firm and former firms participated in the prosecution of this action in cooperation with other Plaintiffs' counsel. Specifically, my firm served as a member of Plaintiffs Executive Committee and assisted lead counsel in formulating the theory and developing the facts of Plaintiffs' case and assisted in discovery at [*52] the request of lead counsel. Initially, the attorneys of my firm were involved in investigation, factual analysis and drafting and filing the complaint on behalf of the Plaintiff class. We also assisted in preparing drafts of the Amended Complaint for review by lead counsel.
4. With respect to the standing of counsel in this case, attached as Exhibits "A", "B" and "C" are brief biographies from each firm and the attorneys who worked on this litigation.
5. The total number of hours expended in this litigation by Burt & Pucillo from January 1, 1994 through February 18, 1994, is 6.25 and the total amount of lodestar is $ 1,281.23, as reflected in the chart attached as Exhibit "D". The total number of hours expended in this litigation by Chimicles, Burt & Jacobsen from July 31, 1993 through December 31, 1993 is 21.0 hours and the total lodestar is $ 4,837.50, as reflected in the chart attached as Exhibit "E". The total number of hours expended in this litigation by Greenfield & Chimicles from inception through July 26, 1993, is 200.75 hours and the total lodestar is $ 43,797.50, as reflected in the chart attached as Exhibit "F".
6. The total lodestar for the services performed by Burt [*53] & Pucillo, Chimicles, Burt & Jacobsen and Greenfield & Chimicles is from the time of inception through February 18, 1994, on current hourly billing rates is $ 49,916.23 as reflected in Exhibits D, E & F. The charts were prepared from contemporaneous daily time records maintained by each firm and the hourly rates for the attorneys and paralegals are the regular rates charged for their services in similar litigation such as this one. In my opinion, the rates charged by the various attorneys and the paralegals are reasonable.
7. Attached hereto as Exhibit "G" and "H" and "I" are lists of expenses advanced and incurred by Burt & Pucillo, Chimicles, Burt & Jacobsen and Greenfield & Chimicles through February 18, 1994. The charts are compiled from the records regularly maintained by both firms. These records are prepared from expense vouchers, check records, and other source material, and are an accurate record of expenses incurred. The total unreimbursed expenses incurred from both firms in connection with the prosecution of this litigation is $ 3981.75.

Dated: February 19, 1994

Michael J. Pucillo

The foregoing instrument was acknowledged before me this [ILLEGIBLE WORDS] by [*54] [ILLEGIBLE WORDS] who is personally known to me and who did take an oath.

OFFICIAL SEAL

JERRI K. AWBREY

My Commission Expires

Aug. 17, 1996

Comm. No. CC 222029

[ILLEGIBLE WORDS]

NOTARY PUBLIC

FIRM BIOGRAPHY OF BURT & PUCILLO

Burt & Pucillo was formed on January 1, 1994, by C. Oliver Burt, III and Michael J. Pucillo. The firm maintains its principal office in West Palm Beach, Florida, and has an office in Haverford, Pennsylvania. Prior to the formation of Burt & Pucillo, C. Oliver Burt and Michael J. Pucillo were partners in a major firm specializing in securities and class action litigation with offices in four states.

Burt & Pucillo concentrates its practice in the area of class action securities and consumer litigation. The firm has, in addition to its two partners, two associates and one of counsel attorney. The firm's goal is to achieve quality results for its clients, and, in the case of class litigation, for members of the class generally. The firm is also committed to taking on cases of a complex, high risk nature, often on a contingent fee basis. This is particularly true in the area of shareholder litigation.

Since its formation on January 1, 1994, the [*55] firm has been appointed lead counsel in the Blockbuster shareholder litigation pending in the Delaware Chancery Court, an action challenging the consideration given to Blockbuster shareholders in a proposed merger with Viacom, Inc. In addition, Messrs. Burt and Pucillo have and continue to serve as lead counsel in numerous securities class actions more fully described below.

C. OLIVER BURT, III, graduated from Swarthmore College in 1964 with a Bachelor of Arts Degree in History. In 1967 he graduated from the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania. Upon graduation from law school, he was an associate with a major Philadelphia law firm working primarily in the litigation department where he participated, among other things, in antitrust litigation. In May, 1971 he was appointed Assistant U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. As an Assistant U.S. Attorney he tried a number of criminal cases, and participated in several major Grand Jury investigations including an investigation in 1971-72 involving the Health and Welfare Fund of the Carpenter's Union of Philadelphia and Vicinity which led to several indictments, including United States v. John McCrae, Criminal [*56] No. 71-684. McCrae was charged with embezzling funds from two employee benefit plans established by the Carpenter's Health and Welfare Fund. Mr. Burt tried the case in March of 1972 and obtained the conviction of Mr. McCrae. The Court's opinion denying post-trial motions is reported at 344 F. Supp. 942.

As an Assistant U.S. Attorney, Mr. Burt prosecuted white-collar criminal cases involving securities fraud, mail fraud, wire fraud, "check-kiting," embezzlement of bank funds, interstate transportation of stolen motor vehicles, income tax evasion and other offenses. Mr. Burt was appellate counsel in United States v. George Hykel, 461 F.2d 721 (3d Cir. 1972), a criminal case involving misapplication of bank funds. In United States v. Bertram Lazar, Mr. Burt prosecuted and secured a guilty plea from a stock-broker for engaging in a "Ponzi Scheme" and selling unregistered securities. He also represented the Government in a number of civil matters, and in May, 1973 he was appointed Chief of the Civil Division of the United States Attorney's Office. Thereafter, in addition to serving as

Chief of the Civil Division and trying civil cases, he conducted the [*57] Grand Jury investigation concerning the bankruptcy of the Penn Central Railroad, and tried other criminal and civil cases. In connection with the Penn Central Grand Jury proceedings he appeared in and participated in hearings in the Princely Provincial Court of Liechtenstein seeking to compel the production of records of secret Liechtenstein bank accounts. In January, 1977, he returned from private practice briefly as a Special Assistant U.S. Attorney to try United States v. Rosenbaum, 439 F. Supp. 176 (E.D. Pa. 1977), the criminal case arising out of the Penn Central Grand Jury investigation.

Previously, Mr. Burt was a partner in a Philadelphia law firm where he was primarily engaged in commercial litigation including antitrust, securities litigation, unfair competition, white collar criminal cases, and general business litigation. While with that firm, Mr. Burt tried, among other cases, Callan, et al. v. State Chemical Manufacturing Company, decision on pretrial motions reported at 584 F. Supp. 619 (E.D. Pa. 1984); a civil RICO case, The Mader Group, Inc. v. Gekoski, et al., 6 Phila. 556 (1981), involving unfair competition and violation [*58] of corporate fiduciary duties by former employees; General Business Services, Inc. v. Rouse, et al., 495 F. Supp. 526 (E.D. Pa. 1980), involving alleged trademark infringement, unfair competition and unlawful tying arrangements; Beta Consultants & Administrators v. Centennial Life Ins. Co., unreported opinion by Judge Newcomer (E.D. Pa. 1980), an alleged antitrust conspiracy case, United States v. Natale, et al., a criminal RICO and mail fraud case, opinion on post-trial motions reported at 494 F. Supp. 1114 (E.D. Pa. 1979), aff'd, 631 F.2d 726 (3d Cir. 1980); Commonwealth of Pennsylvania v. Richard Wolf, a white collar criminal case involving alleged corporate scheme to defraud city by tampering with pollution control devices, case resolved by plea agreement before trial after extended preliminary hearing, Pennsylvania Supreme Court opinion reported at 495 Pa. 211, 433 A.2d 18 (1981). He also participated as counsel for plaintiff in Levin v. Barish, et al., litigation arising out of a law firm dissolution, opinion by Supreme Court of Pennsylvania reported at 505 Pa. 514, 481 A.2d 1183 (Pa. 1984).

From 1972 [*59] through 1985, Mr. Burt was Chairman of the Criminal Law Committee of the Philadelphia Bar Association Young Lawyers' Section Basic Legal Practice Course. He authored course materials on federal criminal practice for that Course, and during the years 1972 through 1985 lectured on the subject of federal criminal practice as part of the Basic Legal Practice Course, sponsored by the Philadelphia Bar Association.

Since 1985, Mr. Burt has participated actively in securities and class action litigation. In August 1992 he was plaintiff's lead trial counsel in Upp v. Mellon, (E.D. Pa. C.A. No. 91-5219), a class action brought on behalf of trust beneficiaries in which the Court found in favor of the class and ordered Mellon to refund all "sweep fees" collected from the trust accounts of class members together with interest. The Court's opinion is reported at 799 F. Supp. 540 (1992). That opinion was later reversed by the Third Circuit Court of Appeals on the grounds that the trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction.

Mr. Burt acted as trial co-counsel in Peil v. Speiser, Civil Action No. 82-1289 (E.D. Pa.), a "fraud on the market" case, which was tried in April, 1985. [*60] Mr. Burt was also appellate counsel in that case and presented oral argument in the case in the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. In its landmark opinion in that case, the Court adopted "Fraud on the Market" as the law of the Circuit, reported as Peil v. Speiser, 806 F.2d 1154 (3d Cir. 1986). Mr. Burt was also plaintiff's lead trial counsel in Kumpis v. Wetterau, 586 F. Supp. 152 (E.D. Mo.), a securities fraud class action which was settled in the course of trial in December, 1985.

Mr. Burt was Lead Derivative Counsel in Pacific Gas & Electric Shareholder Derivative Litigation, Master File No. 893849, (Superior Court, San Francisco County, Cal.), a case which settled for $ 21,000,000 in 1990; PSFS Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 85-4978 (E.D. Pa.) and in First Peoples Bank Shareholder Litigation, Civil Action No. 83-2713 (D.N.J.). He was plaintiffs' Co-Lead Counsel in Duguesne Light Shareholder Litigation, Civil Action No. 86-1046 (W.D. Pa.). He is currently active in numerous cases in which the Firm is counsel including First American Bank and Trust Litigation, Civil Action No. 88-0638 (S.D. Fla.); and AmeriFirst [*61] Bank Litigation, Civil Action No. 89-2614 (S.D. Fla.), in which he and his partner, Michael J. Pucillo, serve as Lead Counsel; and Hoexter v. Simmons, CIV 89-1069-PHX-RCB (D. Ariz.), a securities fraud class action involving Valley National Bank.

Mr. Burt was principal plaintiffs' counsel in Bell Atlantic v. Bolger, et al., 771 F. Supp. 686 (E.D. Pa.), a combined proxy fraud derivative case against the Bell Atlantic Board of Directors which was settled in June 1992. The settlement was approved in an opinion by the Third Circuit Court of Appeals issued on August 18, 1992. Mr. Burt was also one of plaintiffs' lead counsel in U.S. West, Inc. v. MacAllister, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22695 (D. Col.), a proxy fraud derivative case in the District of Colorado involving claims against the Board of Directors with respect to a $ 10 million civil penalty imposed by the Department of Justice, and the company's disclosures to shareholders concerning that subject. Settlement of that case was approved by the District Court in Denver on December 18, 1992.

Mr. Burt is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the Third [*62] Circuit Court of Appeals, the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, the District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the District Court for the Northern District of New York, and the District Court for the District of Arizona.

MICHAEL J. PUCILLO has been a member of the Florida Bar since 1978, and is admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth and Eleventh Circuits and the United States District Courts for the Southern and Middle Districts of Florida. Mr. Pucillo is a member of the Southern District of Florida Trial Bar. During 1989-1990, he served as President of the Gold Coast Chapter of the Federal Bar Association. He is a graduate of Williams College (1975), and Georgetown University Law School (1978). From 1978 to 1979, Mr. Pucillo served as Law Clerk to the Honorable Charles B. Fulton, United States District Judge for the Southern District of Florida. From 1979 to 1981, Mr. Pucillo served as Law Clerk to the Honorable William J. Campbell, Senior United States District Judge for the Northern District of Illinois. From 1983 to 1984, Mr. Pucillo was a Staff Attorney at the Division of Enforcement of the [*63] United States Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington, D.C. Upon returning to Florida, he practiced Commercial Litigation with an emphasis on Securities.

Since 1989, Mr. Pucillo has been active in numerous class actions and shareholder derivative actions throughout Florida. Mr. Pucillo was lead derivative counsel in the FPL Group Shareholder Derivative Action, Case No. 91-3563-AC (15th Judicial Circuit), a case that settled for $ 7,000,000 plus significant corporate governance changes. He and Mr. Burt currently serve as lead counsel in In Re Amerifirst Bank Securities Litigation, Case No. 89-2614-HOEVELER (S.D. Fla.), an action in which partial settlements in excess of $ 10 million have been achieved to date. The balance of the case is expected to go to trial in mid-1994. Mr. Pucillo was lead counsel in Charles v. Levy, Case No. 91-8177-CIV-GONZALEZ (S.D. Fla.), a class and derivative action brought on behalf of shareholders of a Real Estate Investment Trust traded on the New York Stock Exchange. The settlement of approximately $ 2.5 million in this case resulted in class members receiving approximately 50% of their losses after deducting attorneys' fees.

Mr. [*64] Pucillo is also currently acting as co-lead counsel, with other firms, in In Re Southeast Bank Securities Litigation, Case No. 90-0760-CIV-ZLOCH (S.D. Fla.) ($ 5 million settlement pending); Dycom Securities Litigation; Case No. 91-8395-CIV-GRAHAM (S.D. Fla.); In Re C&S/Sovran Securities Litigation, Case No. 1:91-CV-1354-JEC (N.D. Ga.); Tapken v. Brown, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11744 (S.D. Fla.), a shareholder action arising out of the collapse of General Development Corporation; and in In Re Sheffield Industries Securities Litigation, Case No. 93-1068-CIV-MORENO (S.D. Fla.); and several other actions pending in the Southern and Middle Districts of Florida. Mr. Pucillo has also prosecuted Cameon v. Posner, Case No. 1:92 CV 1164 (N.D. Ohio), an action seeking equitable relief under federal regulations governing proxy solicitations, which was ultimately settled by a change in control of DWG Corporation.

Mr. Pucillo is a member of the Academy of Florida Trial Lawyers. He has lectured on Class Actions and on recent developments in Commercial and Business Tort Litigation for the Academy.

Mr. Pucillo was recently invited to become a member of the faculty of the College [*65] of Advanced Judicial Studies where he will teach "Managing the Complex Civil Case" to Florida judges.

WENDY H. ZOBERMAN is an associate in the Firm in its West Palm Beach, Florida office. She is admitted to practice before the United States District Court for the Middle and Southern Districts of Florida, as well as all Florida State Courts. Ms. Zoberman is a 1981 graduate of Wellesley College, where she was a Durant Scholar, and was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa Society. She received her law degree from Columbia University in 1984. At Columbia she served as an Articles Editor of the Columbia University-Volunteer Lawyers for the Arts Journal of Art and the Law, and is a co-author of "An Introduction to the New York Artists' Authorship Rights Act," appearing at Vol. 8, No. 3 Columbia - VLA Journal of Art and the Law 369.

ANDREW H. KAYTON is an associate of the Firm in its West Palm Beach office. He is admitted to practice in the States of California and Florida, and for the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit as well as the United States District Courts for the Central District of California, Southern District of Florida and Middle District of Florida. Mr. Kayton [66] received his bachelor's degree from Amherst College in 1983 and is a 1988 graduate of the Law School at the University of Chicago. From 1988 to 1989, he served as a law clerk to the Honorable Charles L. Levin of the Michigan Supreme Court.

CAROL MCLEAN BREWER is Of Counsel to Burt & Pucillo. She is a 1979 graduate of the University of Florida School of Law and a 1976 honors graduate of the University of Florida, College of Business Administration. Ms. Brewer has been active in commercial litigation in Palm Beach County since 1979 when she joined a major South Florida firm. She has also been active in various committees of the Florida Bar and currently serves as Secretary of the 2,200 - member Palm Beach County Bar Association. Ms. Brewer specializes in litigation in which state issues also underlie the federal securities law claim. She actively participated in discovery in C.V. Reit, Inc., et al., v. Irwin Levy, et al., Case No. 91-8177-CIV-GONZALEZ (S.D. Fla.) and also Dycom Securities Litigation, Case No. 91-8395-CIV-GRAHAM (S.D. Fla.)

Esperante Building

222 Lakeview Avenue

Suite 960

West Palm Beach, Florida 33401

Telephone: (407) 835-9400

Telecopier: (407) 835-0322

[67] and

339 West Lancaster Avenue

Post Office Box 135

Haverford, Pennsylvania 19041-0135

Telephone: (610) 658-0900

Telecopier: (610) 658-0770

CHIMICLES, BURT & JACOBSEN

Firm Biography

Chimicles, Burt & Jacobsen has offices in Haverford, PA, West Palm Beach, FL, Wilmington, DE and Los Angeles, CA. The Firm's practice is concentrated in the area of complex litigation, especially securities litigation. The Firm is also involved from time to time in significant consumer rights, antitrust and environmental matters. Chimicles, Burt & Jacobsen (formerly Chimicles, Burt, Jacobsen & McNew) was formed in June, 1993, upon the termination of Greenfield & Chimicles, with which the Firm's Partners had previously been affiliated. As a group, the Partners in Chimicles, Burt & Jacobsen have significant substantive experience in the prosecution of class action litigation in general, and securities litigation in particular. The Firm is comprised of eleven Partners, three Of Counsel and twenty-nine Associates. The Firm also has a Financial Specialist on staff.

NICHOLAS E. CHIMICLES is a senior partner and Chairman of the Firm's Executive Committee. Mr. Chimicles is a 1970 graduate of the University [*68] of Pennsylvania, where he received a Bachelor of Arts Degree with Honors. Mr. Chimicles graduated in 1973 from the University of Virginia School of Law, where he was a member of the Editorial Board of the University of Virginia Law Review and was the author of several published comments. While attending law school, he co-authored a course and study guide entitled "Student's Course Outline on Securities Regulation," published by the University of Virginia School of Law. Upon graduation from law school, Mr. Chimicles joined a major Philadelphia law firm where he practiced for eight years and specialized in litigation including complex commercial, antitrust and securities fraud cases and served as principal or assistant trial counsel in United States v. Pfizer, Inc., (Antibiotics Antitrust Litigation), Civil Action No. 78-1155 (E.D. Pa.); Penn Galvanizing Co. v. Lukens Steel Co., Civil Action No. 71-1777 (E.D. Pa.); Wolgin v. State Mutual Investors, 265 Pa. Super. 525, 402 A.2d 669 (1979); Beta Consultants & Administrators v. Centennial Life Ins. Co., unreported opinion by Judge Newcomer (E.D. Pa. 1980); and R. & M. Musselman, Inc., et al. v. Line Lexington [*69] Lumber & Millwork, Inc., C.A. 727458-02-1 (Bucks Co. 1981).

Mr. Chimicles has actively prosecuted major complex litigation, antitrust and securities fraud suits. He is serving as a Lead Counsel in the Scott Paper Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 906192 (E.D. Pa.) and the PNC Financial Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 90-592 (W.D. Pa.). He has served as the Lead Counsel in the Storage Technology Corp. Securities Litigation, Master File No. 84-F-1981 (D. Colo.) (recovery of $ 18 million in cash and stock); a Lead Counsel for the shareholder class in the Continental Illinois Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 82 C 4712 (N.D. Ill.) (one aspect of which involved a twenty-week jury trial conducted by Mr. Chimicles that concluded in July, 1987; ultimate recovery of nearly $ 40 million for the class); a Lead Counsel in In re: Fiddler's Woods Bondholders Litigation, Civil Action No. 83-2340 (E.D. Pa.), a bondholders' class action arising out of a default on a $ 33 million industrial development bond issue (recovery of more than $ 7 million for the class), and Lead Counsel in the Charter Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 84-448 Civ-J-12 (M. [*70] D. Fla.) (recovery of $ 7.75 million).

By virtue of the Fiddler's Woods litigation (in which Mr. Chimicles also represented the court-appointed Receiver), his representation of the Bondholders' Protection Committee for the Baptist Estates Life Care Facility (Doylestown, PA), a $ 15 million tax-exempt bond issue which defaulted, and his representation of bondholders in other litigation pending in Atlanta, Orlando and New Jersey arising from defaulted bond issues aggregating over $ 135 million, Mr. Chimicles has established a significant reputation for representing the interests of bondholders in default situations.

Mr. Chimicles has also represented stockholders in numerous suits brought in courts across the country arising from proposed mergers, acquisitions and hostile takeovers. For example, in Garlands, Inc. Profit Sharing Plan et al. v. The Pillsbury Company, a Delaware corporation, et al., State of Minnesota, County of Hennepin, Fourth Judicial District, Court File No. 88-17834, Mr. Chimicles was a lead counsel in a suit brought to compel Pillsbury's board of directors to negotiate in good faith with Grand Metropolitan and persuaded the court to enjoin a proposed spin-off [*71] of Burger King, a device sought to be used by Pillsbury's board to ward off Grand Metropolitan's takeover. In numerous other cases, Mr. Chimicles has represented shareholders in obtaining enhanced consideration for their stock in the context of a takeover or going private transaction. Randee L. Shantzer, et al. v. Charter Medical Corp., et al., Court of Chancery, State of Delaware, New Castle County, Consolidated Civil Action No. 9530. In Re Interstate Bakeries Corporation Shareholders Litigation, Court of Chancery, State of Delaware, New Castle County, Consolidated Civil Action No. 9263.

As an appellate advocate, Mr. Chimicles has handled cases which have protected the rights of victims of securities fraud in bankruptcy proceedings. In cases that he successfully argued before the Courts of Appeals for the Tenth and Eleventh Circuits, due process and notice principles were extended to protect securities purchasers filing claims in bankruptcy cases, In re Standard Metals Corp., 817 F.2d 625 (10th Cir.), rev'd in part on rehearing, 839 F.2d 1383 (1987), and it was established that class proofs of claim are allowable in bankruptcy proceedings, [*72] In re the Charter Company, 876 F.2d 866 (11th Cir. 1989).

Mr. Chimicles has also actively prosecuted suits involving public utilities constructing nuclear plants. He was Lead Counsel in the Philadelphia Electric Company Securities Litigation, Master File No. 85-1878 (E.D. Pa.) and a Lead Counsel in the Consumers Power Company Derivative Litigation, Master File No. 84-CV-3788 AA (E.D. Mich.). Mr. Chimicles was co-lead counsel in the stockholder derivative suit arising from mismanagement claims against former officers of Philadelphia Electric Company involved in the closing of the Peach Bottom Nuclear Plant, a suit which Mr. Chimicles was authorized to bring by a PECO board of directors resolution. In re Philadelphia Electric Company Derivative Litigation, Case No. 7090, Court of Common Pleas, Philadelphia County, PA. That case resulted in a recovery of $ 35 million for the utility company in November 1990.

Mr. Chimicles was also a Co-Lead Counsel in a major environmental litigation, Ashland Oil Spill Litigation, Master File M-14670 (W.D. Pa.), involving the claims of residents and businesses for damage arising from the largest inland waterway oil spill [*73] in history that occurred on January 2, 1988 in Pittsburgh. In 1990, the case was settled upon creation of a claims fund of over $30 million for the class. This and similar environmental suits in which the Firm is involved were the subject of a program, "Toxic Torts May Not Be Hazardous To Your Health: A Lawyer's Guide to Health Survival in Mass Tort Litigation," in which Mr. Chimicles was a principal speaker at this program which was held at the American Bar Association's 1989 Convention in Honolulu.

Mr. Chimicles has acted as Special Counsel for the City of Philadelphia and the Philadelphia Housing Authority in an action seeking to hold lead pigment manufacturers liable for federally mandated abatement of lead paint in properties owned, managed or operated by the plaintiffs. City of Philadelphia, et al. v. Lead Industries Ass'n, et al., Civil Action No. 90-7064 (E.D. Pa.), appeal pending, No. 92-1420 (3rd Cir.).

Mr. Chimicles is admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of the United States, numerous federal district and appellate courts, as well as the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. He is a member of the American Bar Association (Sections of Litigation; Antitrust; and Corporation, [*74] Banking and Business Law), the Pennsylvania Bar Association, the Philadelphia Bar Association (Federal Courts Committee and various subcommittees). Mr. Chimicles has lectured frequently on securities law at the Rutgers University Law School - Camden, the Wharton School Graduate Division of the University of Pennsylvania, New York University, the University of Virginia, and for Prentice Hall Law and Business Publications. Mr. Chimicles has addressed several professional conferences, including the Pennsylvania Bond Counsel Association and the Pennsylvania Institute of Public Accounts, and has also frequently appeared as a speaker in several state and national bar association sponsored seminars on topics involving federal securities laws, RICO, class actions, hostile corporate takeovers, and professional ethics. Mr. Chimicles also is a contributor to and member of the advisory boards of various professional publications involving the securities law field. Mr. Chimicles is a member of the Board of Overseers of the School of Arts and Sciences of the University of Pennsylvania and was recently elected President-Elect of the National Association of Securities and Commercial Law Attorneys, [*75] a Washington, D.C. based organization comprising nearly 100 member law firms interested in a strong system of federal and state legal protection for investors and consumers.

C. OLIVER BURT, III, a partner, graduated from Swarthmore College in 1964 with a Bachelor of Arts Degree in History. In 1967 he graduated from the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania. Upon graduation from law school, he was an associate with a major Philadelphia law firm working primarily in the litigation department where he participated, among other things, in antitrust litigation. In May, 1971 he was appointed Assistant U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. As an Assistant U.S. Attorney he tried a number of criminal cases, and participated in several major Grand Jury investigations including an investigation in 1971-72 involving the Health and Welfare Fund of the Carpenter's Union of Philadelphia and Vicinity which led to several indictments, including United States v. John McCrae, Criminal No. 71-684. McCrae was charged with embezzling funds from two employee benefit plans established by the Carpenter's Health and Welfare Fund. Mr. Burt tried the case in March of 1972 and obtained [*76] the conviction of Mr. McCrae. The Court's opinion denying post-trial motions is reported at 344 F. Supp. 942.

As an Assistant U.S. Attorney, Mr. Burt prosecuted white-collar criminal cases involving securities fraud, mail fraud, wire fraud, "check-kiting," embezzlement of bank funds, interstate transportation of stolen motor vehicles, income tax evasion and other offenses. Mr. Burt was appellate counsel in United States v. George Hykel, 461 F.2d 721 (3d

Cir. 1972), a criminal case involving misapplication of bank funds. In United States v. Bertram Lazar, Mr. Burt prosecuted and secured a guilty plea from a stockbroker for engaging in a "Ponzi Scheme" and selling unregistered securities. He also represented the Government in a number of civil matters, and in May, 1973 he was appointed Chief of the Civil Division of the United States Attorney's Office. Thereafter, in addition to serving as Chief of the Civil Division and trying civil cases, he conducted the Grand Jury investigation concerning the bankruptcy of the Penn Central Railroad, and tried other criminal and civil cases. In connection with the Penn Central Grand Jury proceedings he appeared in [*77] and participated in hearings in the Princely Provincial Court of Liechtenstein seeking to compel the production of records of secret Liechtenstein bank accounts. In January, 1977, he returned from private practice briefly as a Special Assistant U.S. Attorney to try United States v. Rosenbaum, 439 F. Supp. 176 (E.D. Pa. 1977), the criminal case arising out of the Penn Central Grand Jury investigation.

Previously, Mr. Burt was a partner in a Philadelphia law firm where he was primarily engaged in commercial litigation including antitrust, securities litigation, unfair competition, white collar criminal cases, and general business litigation. While with that firm, Mr. Burt tried, among other cases, Callan, et al. v. State Chemical Manufacturing Company, decision on pretrial motions reported at 584 F. Supp. 619 (E.D. Pa. 1984); a civil RICO case, The Mader Group, Inc. v. Gekoski, et al., 6 Phila. 556 (1981), involving unfair competition and violation of corporate fiduciary duties by former employees; General Business Services, Inc. v. Rouse, et al., 495 F. Supp. 526 (E.D. Pa. 1980), involving alleged trademark infringement, [*78] unfair competition and unlawful tying arrangements; Beta Consultants & Administrators v. Centennial Life Ins. Co., unreported opinion by Judge Newcomer (E.D. Pa. 1980), an alleged antitrust conspiracy case, United States v. Natale, et al., a criminal RICO and mail fraud case, opinion on post-trial motions reported at 494 F. Supp. 1114 (E.D. Pa. 1979), aff'd, 631 F.2d 726 (3d Cir. 1980); Commonwealth of Pennsylvania v. Richard Wolf, a white collar criminal case involving alleged corporate scheme to defraud city by tampering with pollution control devices, case resolved by plea agreement before trial after extended preliminary hearing, Pennsylvania Supreme Court opinion reported at 495 Pa. 211, 433 A.2d 18 (1981). He also participated as counsel for plaintiff in Levin v. Barish, et al., litigation arising out of a law firm dissolution, opinion by Supreme Court of Pennsylvania reported at 505 Pa. 514, 481 A.2d 1183 (Pa. 1984).

From 1972 through 1985, Mr. Burt was Chairman of the Criminal Law Committee of the Philadelphia Bar Association Young Lawyers' Section Basic Legal Practice Course. He authored course materials on federal [*79] criminal practice for that Course, and during the years 1972 through 1985 lectured on the subject of federal criminal practice as part of the Basic Legal Practice Course, sponsored by the Philadelphia Bar Association.

Since 1985, Mr. Burt has participated actively in securities and class action litigation. In August 1992 he was plaintiff's lead trial counsel in Upp v. Mellon, (E.D. Pa. C.A. No. 91-5219), a class action brought on behalf of trust beneficiaries in which the Court found in favor of the class and ordered Mellon to refund all "sweep fees" collected from the trust accounts of class members together with interest. (The total of all sweep fees collected from all accounts was approximately $55 million.) The Court's opinion is reported at 799 F. Supp. 540 (1992). That opinion was later reversed by the Third Circuit Court of Appeals on the grounds that the trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction. He also acted as trial co-counsel in Peil v. Speiser, Civil Action No. 82-1289 (E.D. Pa.), a "fraud on the market" case, which was tried in April, 1985. Mr. Burt was also appellate counsel in that case and presented oral argument in the case in the Court [*80] of Appeals for the Third Circuit. In its opinion in that case, the Court adopted "Fraud on the Market" as the law of the Circuit, reported as Peil v. Speiser, 806 F.2d 1154 (3d Cir. 1986). Mr. Burt was also plaintiff's lead trial counsel in Kumpis v. Wetterau, 586 F. Supp. 152 (E.D. Mo.), a securities fraud class action which was settled in the course of trial in December, 1985.

Mr. Burt was Lead Derivative Counsel in Pacific Gas & Electric Shareholder Derivative Litigation, Master File No. 893849, (Superior Court, San Francisco County, Cal.), a case which settled for $ 21,000,000 in 1990; PSFS Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 85-4978 (E.D. Pa.) and in First Peoples Bank Shareholder Litigation, Civil Action No. 83-2713 (D.N.J.). He was plaintiffs' Co-Lead Counsel in Duquesne Light Shareholder Litigation, Civil Action No. 86-1046 (W.D. Pa.). He is currently active in numerous cases in which the Firm is counsel including First American Bank and Trust Litigation, Civil Action No. 88-0638 (S.D. Fla.); and AmeriFirst Bank Litigation, Civil Action No. 89-2614 (S.D. Fla.), in which he and his partner, Michael J. Pucillo, serve [*81] as Lead Counsel; and Hoexter v. Simmons, CIV 89-1069-PHX-RCB (D. Ariz.), a securities fraud class action involving Valley National Bank.

Mr. Burt was principal plaintiffs' counsel in Bell Atlantic v. Bolger, et al., 771 F. Supp. 686 (E.D. Pa.), a combined proxy fraud derivative case against the Bell Atlantic Board of Directors which was settled in June 1992. The settlement was approved in an opinion by the Third Circuit Court of Appeals issued on August 18, 1992. Mr. Burt was also one of plaintiffs' lead counsel in U.S. West, Inc. v. MacAllister, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22695 (D. Col.), a proxy fraud derivative case in the District of Colorado involving claims against the Board of Directors with respect to a $10 million civil penalty imposed by the Department of Justice, and the company's disclosures to shareholders concerning that subject. Settlement of that case was approved by the District Court in Denver on December 18, 1992.

Mr. Burt is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, the District [*82] Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the District Court for the Northern District of New York, and the District Court for the District of Arizona.

KENNETH A. JACOBSEN, a partner, is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the United States Supreme Court, the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the United States District Court for the Northern District of California and the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey. Mr. Jacobsen is a 1979 cum laude graduate of the Villanova University School of Law, where he was the Managing Editor of the Villanova Law Review and was elected to the Order of the Coif. From 1979 to 1980, he served as the Law Clerk for a Judge of the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey. Following his clerkship, Mr. Jacobsen was an associate at a major Philadelphia law firm for three years, where he participated actively in the handling of complex commercial litigation matters, including [*83] claims arising out of the bankruptcy of O.P.M. Leasing Services, Inc. In the area of securities litigation, Mr. Jacobsen has played a leadership role in the prosecution of the Petro-Lewis Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 84-C-326 (D. Colo.), in which a settlement valued in excess of $ 137 million was recovered on behalf of shareholders and limited partners; in the Baldwin United SPDA Litigation, MDL No. 581 (S.D.N.Y.), in which a settlement of more than $ 170 million in cash and other benefits was obtained on behalf of purchasers of annuities; and in several other substantial securities and consumer class actions and derivative litigation, including In re Coleco Securities Litigation, Master File No. 83 Civ. 9199 (LBS) (S.D.N.Y.) (Derivative Counsel--global settlement of $ 16 million obtained on behalf of security holders and corporation); In re Petro-Lewis Broker-Dealer Litigation, Consolidated Civil Action File No. 1:85-cv-172-RLV (N.D. Ga.) (Lead Counsel--global settlement of $ 17 million obtained from six broker-dealers on behalf of investors in oil and gas partnerships); In re Rohm & Haas Company Litigation, Master File 89-2724 (E.D. Pa.) ($ 5 million [*84] settlement of consumer class action arising out of contaminated anti-cholesterol drug). Drawing on his extensive experience in bank litigation, Mr. Jacobsen recently served as Lead Counsel in a massive securities fraud case involving First RepublicBank, a Texas bank holding company, in which settlements totalling more than $ 75 million were obtained on behalf of stock and bond purchasers, and was instrumental in negotiating multi-million dollar settlements in cases involving such other banks as Goldome, MCorp, Home Unity and Trustcorp. Mr. Jacobsen also has been responsible for establishing appellate precedents in the securities area, most notably Hayes v. Gross, 982 F.2d 104 \(3d Cir. 1992\); Shapiro v. UJB Financial Corp., 964 F.2d 272 \(3d Cir.\), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 934, 113 S. Ct. 365, 121 L. Ed. 2d 278 (1992); and Kirkpatrick v. J. C. Bradford & Co., 827 F.2d 718 \(11th Cir. 1987\), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 959 (1988).

MICHAEL J. PUCILLO, a partner resident in the Firm's West Palm Beach, Florida office, has been a member of the Florida Bar since 1978, and is admitted to practice before the United [*85] States Court of Appeals for the Fifth and Eleventh Circuits and the United States District Courts for the Southern and Middle Districts of Florida. Mr. Pucillo is a member of the Southern District of Florida Trial Bar. During 1989-1990, he served as President of the Gold Coast Chapter of the Federal Bar Association. He is a graduate of Williams College (1975), and Georgetown University Law School (1978). From 1978 to 1979, Mr. Pucillo served as Law Clerk to the Honorable Charles B. Fulton, United States District Judge for the Southern District of Florida. From 1979 to 1981, Mr. Pucillo served as Law Clerk to the Honorable William J. Campbell, Senior United States District Judge for the Northern District of Illinois. From 1983 to 1984, Mr. Pucillo was a Staff Attorney at the Division of Enforcement of the United States Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington, D.C. Upon returning to Florida, he practiced Commercial Litigation with an emphasis on Securities, and from 1986 to 1990, was a partner in a major South Florida law firm.

Since 1989, Mr. Pucillo has been active in numerous class actions and shareholder derivative actions throughout Florida. Mr. Pucillo was lead derivative [*86] counsel in the FPL Group Shareholder Derivative Action, Case No. 91-3563-AC (15th Judicial Circuit), a case that settled for $ 7,000,000 plus significant corporate governance changes. He currently serves as lead counsel (with Oliver Burt) in In Re Amerifirst Bank Securities Litigation, Case No. 89-2614-HOEVELER (S.D. Fla.); and in Charles v. Levy, Case No. 91-8177-CIV-GONZALEZ (S.D. Fla.), a class and derivative action brought on behalf of shareholders of a Real Estate Investment Trust traded on the New York Stock Exchange; and co-lead counsel in In Re Southeast Bank Securities Litigation, Case No. 90-0760-CIV-ZLOCH (S.D. Fla.); Dycom Securities Litigation; Case No. 91-8395-CIV-GRAHAM (S.D. Fla.); Tapken v. Brown, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11744 (S.D. Fla.), a shareholder action arising out of the collapse of General Development Corporation; and in In Re Sheffield Industries Securities Litigation, Case No. 93-1068-CIV-MORENO (S.D. Fla.); and several other actions pending in the Southern and Middle Districts of Florida. Mr. Pucillo has also prosecuted Cameleon v. Posner, Case No. 1:92 CV 1164 (N.D. Ohio), an action seeking equitable relief under federal regulations [*87] governing proxy solicitations, which was ultimately settled by a change in control of DWG Corporation.

Mr. Pucillo is a member of the Academy of Florida Trial Lawyers. He has lectured on Class Actions and on recent developments in Commercial and Business Tort Litigation for the Academy.

PAMELA S. TIKELLIS, a partner and resident attorney in the Firm's Wilmington, Delaware office, is admitted to practice before all courts in the State of Delaware and the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. Ms. Tikellis is a graduate of the Delaware Law School of Widener University (1982) where she served as Managing Editor of The Delaware Journal of Corporate Law. She is also a graduate of Manhattanville College (B.A. - 1974), and the Graduate Faculty of the New School for Social Research (M.A. - 1976). From 1982 to 1983, Ms. Tikellis served as a law clerk in the Court of Chancery in Wilmington, Delaware. Upon completion of her clerkship, Ms. Tikellis has engaged in significant shareholder litigation practice.

KEVIN M. PRONGAY, a resident partner in the Firm's Los Angeles office is admitted to practice in the states of California (1979), New York (1975) and New Jersey (1973). [*88] Mr. Prongay is also admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court, the United States Court of Appeals for the Second, Third and Ninth Circuits and before the United States District Court for the Northern, Central and Southern Districts of California and the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York, as well as the District of New Jersey. Mr. Prongay is a member of the American Bar Association (Sections on Antitrust, Business Law, International Law and Practice and Litigation) and the California State Bar Association. Mr. Prongay is a 1970 graduate of Rutgers University, where he received an A.B. degree in Economics and a 1973 graduate of Seton Hall University School of Law. In addition, Mr. Prongay was awarded an LL.M. in Trade Regulation from New York University School of Law in 1974. From 1974 to 1976, Mr. Prongay served as counsel to a private civil rights organization, funded by the Ford Foundation, for which he prosecuted numerous class actions challenging institutional discrimination in the housing and real estate industries. From 1976 to 1979, Mr. Prongay served as litigation counsel to a major multi-national pharmaceutical company where he actively managed complex [*89] and protracted antitrust, commercial, product liability and intellectual property litigation. From 1979 to 1983, Mr. Prongay worked for an American subsidiary of a major European based electronics firm where he directed the company's international and domestic technology transfer program, and structured and negotiated licensing agreements, joint venture agreements and international capital formation agreements. From 1983 to 1984 Mr. Prongay served as a partner in a New York and New Jersey based law firm where he handled a variety of corporate and securities transactional matters and commercial litigation. In 1984, Mr. Prongay relocated to San Diego, California and joined a nationally prominent securities litigation firm where he handled a variety of security class actions and stockholder derivative suits on behalf of investors, participating in the prosecution of In Re Oak Industries Securities Litigation, Master File No. 83-0537 G(m) (S.D. Cal.) (Settled for $ 33 million); In Re Cousins Securities Litigation, Master File no. 84-1821-D(IEG) (S.D. Cal.) (settled for $ 13.5 million). Van de Walle v. Slutsky, Civil No. 82-5669 (AHS) (JRx) (C.D. Cal.) (settled for $ 5.2 million). [*90] From 1988-1990, Mr. Prongay served as a Los Angeles resident partner of a New York based national law firm where he was responsible for a variety of securities class actions, stockholder derivative suits, civil RICO, antitrust, copyright, trademark and unfair competition litigation.

Since October, 1990, Mr. Prongay has concentrated his practice in securities, derivative and environmental litigation. Mr. Prongay served as co-lead counsel in In Re De Laurentiis Securities and In Re De Laurentiis Film Partners Securities Litigation, Master File No. CV 88-01582 MRP (Bx) (C.D. Cal.) which resulted in recovery in excess of $ 16.5 million for defrauded investors. He also served as lead counsel in In Re Union Exploration Partners Ltd., Case No. CV 90-3125 RSWL (Kx) consolidated with 90-5149 RSWL (Kx) and 91-0306 RSWL (Kx) (C.D. Cal) which resulted in a recovery of $ 9 million on behalf of limited partners of Union Oil Co. whose interests were "rolled-up" by Unocal.

In Almeida v. Peat Marwick Mitchell & Company, et al., Consolidated Actions: No. 668436-9 and No. 668491-6 (Super. Ct. California, County of Alameda). Mr. Prongay was instrumental in developing theories of liability [*91] against Bank of the West ("BOW"), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Banc Nationale de Paris, in its acquisition of Central Banking Systems, Inc., which resulted in BOW's contribution in excess of $ 6 million to settle claims of the class of Central Banking shareholders.

Mr. Prongay has been actively involved in prosecuting In re the Exxon Valdez, Civil Consol. No. A 89-095 (D. Alaska) and Exxon Valdez Oil Spill Litigation, Civil Consol. No. 3AN-89-2533 (Super. Ct. Alaska 3rd J.Dist.) since 1991, including coordination of depositions of the Exxon Board of Directors and Exxon's senior officers. He is also responsible for coordinating all expert discovery related to oiling of the Alaska shoreline and the persistence of such oiling.

Mr. Prongay is currently serving as co-lead counsel in In re ALZA Corp. Securities Litigation, Case No. C-93-20290 RMW(PVT) (N.D. Cal.). He is also serving as co-lead counsel in In re Sierra Semiconductor Corp. Securities Litigation, Master File No. C-93-20286 JW(PVT) (N.D. Cal.).

JAMES R. MALONE, JR., a partner, is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the Supreme Court of the United States, the United States Courts of [*92] Appeal for the Third, Ninth and D.C. Circuits and the United States District Courts for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the District of Arizona and the Northern District of California. Mr. Malone is a 1984 cum laude graduate of the Villanova University School of Law where he was a staff member on the Villanova Law Review and was elected to the Order of the Coif. Upon graduation from law school, Mr. Malone was associated with a major Philadelphia law firm where he specialized in bankruptcy and commercial litigation. Since January, 1987, Mr. Malone has been active in the prosecution of a number of class and derivative actions, and he has actively represented the interests of defrauded investors in bankruptcy proceedings.

MARTHA A. EVANS, a partner resident in the Firm's Los Angeles office, is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States, as well as in the States of California and Texas, Federal District Courts for the Southern District of California, Central District of California, Northern District of Texas, Southern District of Texas, Eastern District of Texas, and the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth and Eleventh Circuits. Ms. Evans is [*93] a member of the California State Bar, Texas State Bar Association and the American Bar Association. Ms. Evans graduated from the University of Texas in 1973 with honors and from the University of Texas School of Law in 1977. Immediately after graduation from law school, Ms. Evans served as a law clerk to a federal district judge in Houston, Texas. Ms. Evans previously practiced commercial litigation in Houston and Dallas, Texas, and prosecuted securities fraud class actions and derivative suits while with a firm in San Diego, California.

Ms. Evans has particular experience in suing financial institutions, accountants and limited partnerships for securities fraud associated with a declining real estate market and/or a depressed oil and gas industry, e.g. In re First Republic Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 3-88-0641-H (N.D. Tex.) involving First Republic Bank of Texas, and In re Sunderman Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 3-87-0612-H (N.D. Tex.) and Odmark v. Mesa Limited Partnership, Civil Action No. 3-91-CV2376-G (N.D. Tex.). Ms. Evans also has experience with lender liability actions, e.g. Hunt, et al., v. Bankers Trust Company, et al., (N.D. Tex.), [*94] wherein the Hunt brothers sued their banks for, inter alia, breach of oral and written loan agreements. Ms. Evans co-authored the following paper with

Stephen D. Susman about lender liability cases: "Prosecuting the Common Law Lender Liability Case -- Evaluation of a Claim", Practicing Law Institute, 1989.

EUGENE MIKOLAJCZYK, a resident partner in the Firm's Los Angeles office, is admitted to practice in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (1978) and the State of California (1982). Mr. Mikolajczyk is also admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals to the Third and Ninth Circuits and before the United States District Courts in the Northern, Central and Southern Districts of California, as well as the State Bar of the State of California and Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Mr. Mikolajczyk is a 1974 graduate of Elizabethtown College and in 1978 graduated the Dickinson School of Law where he was Managing Editor of the Dickinson Law Review. From 1978 through 1980 Mr. Mikolajczyk served as a Law Clerk to the Honorable Gwilym A. Price, Jr. of the Superior Court of Pennsylvania and from 1980 through 1983 was an associate member of the Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania law firm of [*95] Reed Smith Shaw & McClay. In 1983 Mr. Mikolajczyk located to San Diego, California where he served first as an associate and then a partner (1988 through 1992) of Milberg Weiss Bershad Specthrie & Lerach where he handled a variety of securities, class action and stockholder derivative suits on behalf of investors. Mr. Mikolajczyk participated in the prosecution of In re Nucorp Energy Securities Litigation, 772 F.2d 1486 \(9th Cir. 1985\) (settled for total recovery of $ 55 million), Heckmann v. Ahmanson, 168 Cal. App. 3d 119, 214 Cal. Rptr. 177 \(1985\) (corporate greenmail actions settled for total class and derivative recovery of $ 45 million after two weeks of trial) and Ackerman v. Kassar, No. 91-1468 M (BTM) (S.D. Cal.) (corporate derivative action settled for total recovery of approximately $ 45 million).

MICHAEL D. DONOVAN, a partner, is admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court, the United States Courts of Appeals for the Second, Eighth, Ninth and Tenth Circuits, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the United States District Courts for the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York as [*96] well as the state courts of Pennsylvania and New York and the courts of Washington, D.C. He is a graduate of Vermont Law School (J.D. cum laude 1984) and Syracuse University (A.B. 1981). He was the Head Notes Editor and a staff member of the Vermont Law Review from 1982 through 1984. While on the Law Review, he authored Note, Zoning Variance Administration in Vermont, 8 Vt.L.Rev. 370 (1984). Following graduation from law school, Mr. Donovan was an attorney with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington, D.C., where he prosecuted numerous securities cases and enforcement matters, including injunctive and disciplinary actions against public companies, broker/dealers and accounting firms. Mr. Donovan has co-authored "The Overlooked Victims of the Thrift Crisis, "Miami Review, Feb. 13, 1990 and "Conspiracy of Silence: Why S&L Regulators Can't Always Be Trusted," Legal Times, Feb. 5, 1990.

Mr. Donovan has served as co-lead counsel in the following securities class actions: Lines v. Marble Financial Corp., Nos. 90-23 and 90-100 (D. Vt. 1991) (settled for $ 2 million together with substantial changes to the company's loan loss reserve procedures); [*97] Jones v. Amdura Corp., No. 90-F-167 (D. Colo. 1991) (action against directors settled for $ 4,962,500); In re Columbia (Del. Ch. 1991)(merger case settled for $ 2 per share increase in amount paid to shareholders). In addition, Mr. Donovan has had a substantial role in the prosecution of the following cases, among others: In re Trustcorp Securities Litigation, No. 3:89-CV-7139 (N.D. Ohio 1990) (settled for $ 5,600,000); Moskowitz v. Lopp, 128 F.R.D. 624 \(E.D. Pa. 1989\) (opinion certifying class of stock and option purchasers in fraud on the market and insider trading case); In re Hercules Corporation Securities Litigation, No. 90-442 (D. Del. 1992) (settled for $ 17.25 million). In the area of consumer rights, Mr. Donovan has appeared on behalf of Bankcard Holders of America in numerous friend of the court briefs concerning federal preemption of state consumer protection statutes. He has also played an active role in several credit card class actions challenging the authority of out-of-state banks to impose default charges on residents of states where such charges are prohibited. In this regard, Mr. Donovan has appeared as a panel speaker at the Consumer [*98] Credit Regulation Forum of the New Jersey Bar Association. Mr. Donovan is a member of the American Bar Association (Litigation and Business Law Sections), the Pennsylvania Bar Association, the New York Bar Association, the District of Columbia Bar Association and the American Association of Individual Investors.

LISA J. RODRIGUEZ, a partner, is admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania and the Supreme Court of New Jersey. Ms.

Rodriguez is a graduate of The George Washington University Law School (1983, with honors). From 1983 to 1984 she served as a Law Clerk to the Honorable Mitchell H. Cohen, Senior Judge of the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey. Following her clerkship, Ms. Rodriguez was an associate at a New Jersey law firm where she was involved in a wide variety of litigation matters.

R. BRUCE McNEW, formerly a Partner and now Of Counsel to the Firm, is admitted to practice in the States of Delaware, Pennsylvania and California, the Federal [*99] District Courts for the District of Delaware, the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and the Northern and Central Districts of California, the United States Court of Appeals for the Third, Tenth and Eleventh Circuits and the Supreme Court of the United States. He is a member of the Delaware Bar Association, the Pennsylvania Bar Association, the California State Bar and the American Bar Association. Mr. McNew is a 1975 graduate of the University of Virginia where he received a Bachelor of Arts Degree with Distinction and a 1979 graduate of Marshall Wythe School of Law, the College of William and Mary, where he served as the Research Editor of the William and Mary Law Review. From 1979 to 1980 Mr. McNew served as law clerk to the Honorable John J. McNeilly, Justice of the Supreme Court of Delaware. For three years after serving as a clerk to the Delaware Supreme Court, Mr. McNew was an associate at a major Wilmington, Delaware law firm where his practice focused primarily on commercial litigation. Mr. McNew has been on the Editorial Boards of the M&A and Corporate Governance Law Reporter and the Corporate Counsel Law Reporter.

Mr. McNew has played a leadership role in numerous class actions [*100] on the west coast including acting as: a member of the Executive Committee for In re American Continental Corporation/Lincoln Savings & Loan Securities Litigation, M.D.L. 834; lead counsel in In re American Medical International Shareholder Litigation, Consol. Action No. C718957 (LA County Super. Ct. Cent.Dist. Cal.); lead counsel in In re Cineplex Shareholders Litigation, Civil Action No. CV 89-2461 WJR (Tx) (C.D. Cal.); co-lead counsel in Ackerman, et. al. v. Kassar, et. al., Master File No. BC015018 (LA County Super. Ct. Cent.Dist. Cal.) involving Caroico Pictures; and co-lead counsel in Vogel, et al. v. First Interstate Bancorp, et al., Civil Action No. 91-3643 JGD(Tx) (C.D. Cal.).

Mr. McNew has represented classes of investors as both lead and co-lead counsel in the prosecution of major securities fraud and derivative litigation. Mr. McNew has prosecuted litigation on behalf of bondholders in various actions including: In re: Fiddler's Woods Bondholders Litigation, Civil Action No. 83-2340 (E.D. Pa.); Sheftelman v. NL Industries, Inc., et al., Civil Action No. 84-3199 (D. N.J.); Ockerman, et al. v. King & Spalding, et al., Civil Action No. 85-2958 (N. [*101] D. Ga.); Sheftelman v. Jones, et al., Civil Action 84-472A (N.D. Ga.); and Anderson v. Bank South, Civil Action No. 84-1562 (M.D. Fla.). Mr. McNew has represented classes of equity security holders in various actions including: In re: Winchell's Donuts Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 9478 (Del. Ch.); In re: AFG Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 9688 (Del. Ch.); and In re Ivan F. Boesky Securities Litigation, M.D.L. 732. In addition, he has been involved in the prosecution of cases pertaining to defense contractor fraud such as: Liebman, et. al. v. Zable, et. al., Civil Action No. 88- 1195B(M) (S.D. Cal.) involving Cubic Corp.; Wildflower Partnership, et. al. v. Hoch, et al., Civil Action No. 89-1967 RG(Sx) (C.D. Cal.) involving Litton Industries, Inc., In re Lockheed Securities Corporation Litigation, Master File No. CV-89-6745 TJH (C.D. Cal.); and Citron, et. al. v. Beall, et. al., Civil Action No. C728809 (LA County Super. Ct. Cent.Dist. Cal.) involving Rockwell International Corporation.

Mr. McNew also has experience in cases involving financial institutions such as: Almeida, et. al. v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Company, et al., [*102] Action No. 668436-9 (Alameda County Super. Ct. Oakland Branch) involving Central Banking System; Koehler, et. al. v. Martin, et. al., Action No. BC025112 (LA County Super. Ct. Cent.Dist. Cal.) involving Coast Savings Financial, Inc.; and Goldman, et. al. v. Belzberg, et. al., Civil Action No. C754698 (LA County Super. Ct. Cent.Dist. Cal.) involving Farwest Financial Corp. Mr. McNew's environmental and consumer experience includes: McAleer, et. al. v. Prodigy Services Company, et. al., Master File No. 91-1517 KN (GHKx) (C.D. Cal.); In re Hanford Nuclear Reservation Litigation, Master File No. CY-91-3015 AAM (E.D. Wash.); Medley, et. al. v. Southern Pacific Trans. Company, et. al., Civil Action No. CV-S 91-1073 WES-JMF (E.D. Cal.) and In re Sacramento River Spill Cases I and II, J.C.C.P. Nos. 2617 and 2620 (Sac. County Super. Ct. Cal.); Nguyen v. FundAmerica, Inc., a California Corp., C90-2090 MHP (N.D. Cal.); and In re the Exxon Valdez, Civil Consol. No. A 89-095 (D. Alaska) and Exxon Valdez Oil Spill Litigation, Civil Consol. No. 3AN-89-2533 (Super. Ct. Alaska 3rd J.Dist.)

MORRIS M. SHUSTER, Of Counsel, is admitted to practice before the United [*103] States Supreme Court, United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and all other Pennsylvania Appellate and trial courts.

Mr. Shuster is a graduate of the Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania (B.S. in Economics, 1951), and of the University of Pennsylvania Law School (J.D., 1954).

Prior to joining the Firm, Mr. Shuster was an active civil litigator as an associate and partner in a major Philadelphia litigation firm, as a named-partner in his own firm, and as special litigation counsel to a large Philadelphia, full-service firm. Over the last 20 years, he has concentrated his practice in consumer class actions against banks and insurance companies. He has been successful in obtaining multi-million dollar recoveries in these cases:

Mr. Shuster is currently a faculty member at the University of Pennsylvania Law School where he teaches Trial Advocacy. In 1981, he was a full-time faculty member at the University of Pennsylvania Law School and taught a course in The Lawyering Process. He also has been a guest lecturer on various legal subjects at the University [*104] of Pennsylvania Law School, Medical School, and Dental School, and at Drexel University. He is a member of the Advisory Committee for the Public Service Program at the University of Pennsylvania Law School where he developed the mentor/student pro bono project.

Mr. Shuster is a past president of The Philadelphia Trial Lawyers' Association. He was appointed by the Third Circuit Court of Appeals as Chairperson of the Bankruptcy Judge Search Committee. He was appointed by the District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania as Chairperson of a Panel to consider reappointment of a U.S. Magistrate.

In the Philadelphia Bar Association, Mr. Shuster has served as a member of the Board of Governors, Chairperson of the Judicial Commission, Committee on Judicial Selection and Reform, Committee on Civil Legislation/Legislative Liaison, and Committee on Civil Judicial Procedure (state courts). He is listed in Who's Who in American Law.

BRENDA M. NELSON, Of Counsel, is admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court, the United States Court of Appeals for the Third and Eleventh Circuits, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and the Supreme [*105] Court of Pennsylvania. Ms. Nelson is a graduate of Oglethorpe University (B.B.A. with a major in accounting, 1980, summa cum laude) and of Harvard Law School (J.D., 1983). Upon graduation, she was an associate at a major Philadelphia law firm for two years, where she participated actively in a broad variety of litigation matters. Ms. Nelson has played a lead role in the prosecution of a number of securities class actions and shareholder derivative suits, including Bally Shareholder Litigation, Master File No. 87-0373 (JFG) (D.N.J.); CBS v. Paley, 86 CIV 9140 (JMC) (S.D.N.Y.); and Booth v. Connelly Containers, Inc., No. 89-8280 (E.D. Pa.). Ms. Nelson was also a featured speaker on RICO and securities fraud cases at the 1990 Civil RICO Seminar sponsored by the Pennsylvania Bar Institute.

MICHAEL J. BONI is admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the United States District Court for the Northern District of California and all Pennsylvania state courts. Mr. Boni received his B.A. in 1977 from Albright College, his M.A. (psychology) in 1980 from the University [*106] of Connecticut, and his J.D. in 1988 from the University of Pennsylvania Law School. Mr. Boni previously practiced with a major Philadelphia law firm concentrating in labor and employment litigation.

CYNTHIA A. CALDER is an associate in the Firm's Wilmington, Delaware office. She is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Delaware, the United States District Court for the District of Delaware, and the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. She graduated from the University of Delaware in 1987 with a Bachelor of Arts degree cum laude in International Relations and Russian. In 1991, she received her Juris Doctor degree from the Villanova University School of Law, where she was a Founding Member and Managing Editor of the Villanova Environmental Law Journal. From 1991 to 1992, she served as a judicial law clerk to the Honorable Maurice A. Hartnett, III, Vice Chancellor of the Delaware Court of Chancery.

LISA CHANOW DYKSTRA is admitted to practice before the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and the Supreme Court of New Jersey. She is a 1992 cum [*107] laude graduate of the Villanova University School of Law where she served as Managing Editor of Student Work on the Villanova Law Review. She is a 1989 cum laude graduate of New York University, where she received a B.A. in Russian language and political science.

FRANCIS J. FARINA is admitted to practice in the States of New York and Pennsylvania. He is a graduate of Georgetown University Law Center (J.D., 1983), The George Washington University (M.B.A., 1975), and Suffolk University (B.S., 1973). Mr. Farina held positions as Deputy Auditor for Goldome Federal Savings Bank and Director, Internal Audit for Georgetown University and Medical Center. From 1975 to 1978, Mr. Farina was a Senior Auditor for a Big Eight accounting firm in Washington, D.C. He is licensed as a Certified Public Accountant in Virginia, New York and Pennsylvania and, in addition, is a Chartered Bank Auditor. Mr. Farina has served on the Editorial Advisory Board of the Journal of Accountancy and the Editorial Board of the Pennsylvania CPA Journal. He has served on numerous committees of state and national professional accounting organizations and been a frequent lecturer on accounting and audit matters. [*108] Mr. Farina has also been a member of the business school faculties at George Washington University and Georgetown University, teaching numerous courses at both undergraduate and graduate levels.

BARBARA M. FRIEND is admitted to practice before the Bar of the State of New York. She is a graduate of Brooklyn Law School (J.D., 1975) and Georgetown University (B.S. in Japanese, 1970). Before becoming associated with the Firm, Ms. Friend worked on a broad variety of legal matters, including acting as counsel to the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee in 1979-80 and Director of the U.S. Bobsled & Skelton Federation, 1984-85. She continues to be very active, as both an interpreter and legal advisor, in United States Olympic activities; State Committee Person, New York State Republican Committee; past Chairperson, Saranac Lake Republican Committee. Since she joined the Firm, Ms. Friend has worked on a number of securities class actions.

J. PAUL GIGNAC is an associate in the Firm's Los Angeles office. Mr. Gignac is admitted to practice in the State of California and before the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit as well as the United States District Courts for the Northern, [*109] Central and Southern Districts of California. Mr. Gignac is a 1983 cum laude graduate of Dartmouth College where he majored in government and a 1986 graduate of the UCLA School of Law. While at UCLA, Mr. Gignac served as a judicial extern to the Honorable A. Wallace Tashima, United States District Court Judge for the Central District of California.

Following graduation, Mr. Gignac was an associate with a major Los Angeles law firm. As an associate there, Mr. Gignac was certified as a trial attorney project ("tap") attorney by the Los Angeles County Bar and prosecuted three felony trials as a deputy district attorney in Los Angeles Superior Court. Mr. Gignac is a member of the Los Angeles County Bar Association and the State Bar of California.

MICHAEL D. GOTTSCH is admitted to practice before the Supreme Courts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey and the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. He is a graduate of Temple University School of Law (J.D. 1983) and Marquette University (B.S. 1977). From 1986 to 1987 he served as a Law [*110] Clerk to the Honorable Joseph H. Rodriguez, Judge of the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.

PATRICK J. GRANNAN is an associate in the Firm's Los Angeles office. Mr. Grannan is admitted to practice in the State of California and before the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit and the United States District Courts for the Central, Northern and Southern Districts of California and the District of Arizona. Mr. Grannan is a 1981 graduate of Haverford College where, as a Magill-Rhoads Scholar, he majored in psychology. Mr. Grannan is a 1984 magna cum laude graduate of New York Law School, where he was a John Ben Snow Scholar and served as an Articles Editor of the New York Law School Law Review. Mr. Grannan is the author of "California ex rel. State Lands Commission v. United States - Riparian Rights - Competing State and Federal Claims to Coastal Accretions" appearing at 29 N.Y.L. Sch. L. Rev. 491. Prior to joining the Firm, Mr. Grannan was employed by a Los Angeles firm practicing in the area of civil RICO and securities fraud litigation. While at his prior firm, Mr. Grannan was counsel for petitioner in a successful petition [*111] for extraordinary writ clarifying the law in the State of California relating to the use of evidence related to one party consensual tape recordings in civil trials. Frio v. Superior Court, 203 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 250 Cal. Rptr. 819 (1988). Since 1989, Mr. Grannan has been actively involved in the prosecution of a number of class and derivative actions on behalf of investors and consumers, including acting as a member of the plaintiff trial team in In re American Continental Corporation/Lincoln Savings and Loan Securities Litigation, MDL 834, which resulted in a substantial verdict for plaintiffs and Almeida v. Peat Marwick, No. 668436-9, a class action pending in the Superior Court of Alameda, State of California, which resulted in an $ 8 million settlement with Peat Marwick believed to be among the first post-Bily settlements of a California state law claim with a major accounting firm.

TRUDY D. JOHNSON is an associate in the Firm's Los Angeles office, and is admitted to practice before all California State Courts and the United States District Courts for the Central, Northern and Southern Districts of California. Ms. Johnson is a 1986 graduate of Buena [*112] Vista College, Storm Lake, Iowa, where she majored in Business Management and graduated summa cum laude. Ms. Johnson received her law degree from the University of Iowa College of Law, where she was elected to the Order of the Coif. Prior to joining the Firm, Ms. Johnson practiced with a major Los Angeles firm in the areas of Environmental and General Commercial Litigation. Ms. Johnson is a member of the American Bar Association, the Los Angeles County Bar Association and the State Bar of California.

ANDREW H. KAYTON, is an associate in the Firm's West Palm Beach office. He is admitted to practice in the States of California and Florida, and for the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit as well as the United States District Courts for the Central District of California, Southern District of Florida and Middle District of Florida. Mr. Kayton received his bachelor's degree from Amherst College in 1983 and is a 1988 graduate of the Law School at the University of Chicago. From 1988 to 1989, he served as a law clerk to the Honorable Charles L. Levin of the Michigan Supreme Court. Prior to joining the Firm, Mr. Kayton was an associate at a downtown Los Angeles law firm, [*113] where he worked on a wide range of civil litigation matters, including securities fraud, civil RICO, construction, employment and general corporate litigation.

ROBERT J. KRINER, JR. is an associate in the Firm's Wilmington, Delaware office. He is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Delaware and the United States District Court for the District of Delaware. Mr. Kriner is a 1983 graduate of the University of Delaware with a degree in chemistry, and a 1988 graduate of the Delaware Law School of Widner University, where he was managing editor of The Delaware Journal of Corporate Law. From 1988 to 1989, Mr. Kriner served as law clerk to the Honorable James L. Latchum, Senior Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Delaware. Following his clerkship and until joining the Firm, Mr. Kriner was an associate with a major Wilmington, Delaware law firm, practicing in the areas of corporate and general litigation.

FREDRIC I. LAZARUS is admitted to practice in the States of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and before the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit and the United [*114] States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. He is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Law School (J.D. cum laude 1990) and Drexel University (B.S. 1987) (electrical engineering). Mr. Lazarus is a member of Tau Beta Pi (the National Engineering Honor Society) as well as several local, state and national bar associations. Prior to joining the Firm, Mr. Lazarus practiced with a major Philadelphia law firm concentrating in the areas of creditors' rights litigation and real estate law.

JORDAN L. LURIE received his law degree in 1987 from the University of Southern California Law Center where he was Notes Editor of the University of Southern California Law Review. He received his undergraduate degree from Yale University in 1984 (Cum Laude). Prior to joining the Firm, Mr. Lurie practiced with a major Los Angeles law firm and specialized in complex litigation. Mr. Lurie is the author of "Rx for Pharmacy Malpractice: California's New Duty to Consult," CEB Civil Litigation Reporter, December 1991; co-author of "Chapter 54 - Consent Judgment" and "Chapter 55 - Submitted Case" Civil Procedure Before Trial (1990) published by California Continuing [*115] Education of the Bar; and co-author of "Postponing a Municipal Court Election: The November Election Provision of Government Code Section 71180(b)," California Courts Commentary, November 1989. Mr. Lurie is a member of the Los Angeles County Bar Association, the American Bar Association and the State Bar of California and is admitted to practice before all California state courts and the United States District Court for the Central District of California.

CAROLYN D. MACK, an associate in the Firm's Wilmington, Delaware office, is admitted to practice before all of the courts located in the State of Delaware and before the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. She was graduated from the University of Maryland in College Park, Maryland in 1981, where she received a Bachelor of Arts degree cum laude in Government and Politics and was elected to the Phi Kappa Phi and Phi Beta Kappa national honor societies. In 1984, Ms. Mack was graduated from the National Law Center of George Washington University and received her Juris Doctor degree with honors. From 1984 to 1985, Ms. Mack served as judicial law clerk to Vice Chancellor Maurice A. Hartnett, III of the Delaware [*116] Court of Chancery. Since completion of her clerkship, she has engaged in significant shareholder litigation practice.

MARY KATHERINE MEERMANS graduated cum laude from the Law School of University of Pennsylvania in 1982. She served as a law clerk to the Honorable Paul M. Chalfin, Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas, from September 1982 to January 1984, and to the Honorable Phyllis W. Beck from January 1984 to October 1984. She is a member of the Pennsylvania Bar.

KATHLEEN E. MORAN is an associate in the Firm's Los Angeles office. She is admitted to practice before all California state courts and the United States District Court for the Central District of California. Ms. Moran is a 1983 graduate of the University of Southern California, where she majored in Business Administration and graduated magna cum laude. Prior to attending law school, Ms. Moran worked as a Senior Auditor at a Big Eight accounting firm in Los Angeles, California and is licensed as a Certified Public Accountant in California. In 1990, Ms. Moran received her law degree from the University of California at Davis, where she was elected to the Order of the Coif and served as the Business Editor of the U. [*117] C. Davis Law Review. Prior to joining the Firm, Ms. Moran practiced with a major Los Angeles law firm where she worked on venture capital and securities transactions as well as bankruptcy matters. Ms. Moran is a member of the State Bar of California.

DEBRA N. NATHANSON is admitted to practice in the States of Pennsylvania and Georgia. She is a 1988 graduate of the University of Pennsylvania School of Law and received a Bachelor of Arts Degree from Bryn Mawr College in 1984. Ms. Nathanson was previously associated with the Atlanta office of a major Chicago law firm where she handled bankruptcy and commercial litigation matters.

TINA BAILER NIEVES is an associate in the Firm's Los Angeles office. Ms. Nieves is admitted to practice in the State of California and before the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit as well as the United States District Court for the Central District of California. Ms. Nieves is a 1983 graduate of the University of California Berkeley, where she majored in Rhetoric. Ms. Nieves is a 1987 graduate of the University of California, Davis School of Law. While at U.C. Davis, Ms. Nieves participated in the trial practice program and was an active member [*118] in Law Students for the Arts. Prior to joining the Firm, Ms. Nieves was an associate with a major Los Angeles law firm, where she practiced in the areas of Civil RICO, Maritime, Insurance Coverage, and Contract Litigation.

MELANIE PIECH, an associate with the Firm's Los Angeles Office, is admitted to practice before all California State Courts, the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, and United States District Court for the Northern and Central Districts of California. Ms. Piech was graduated magna cum laude with a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Political Science from Loyola Marymount of Los Angeles in 1986. She received her law degree from Hastings College of the Law in San Francisco in 1989, having attended Vermont Law School for one semester. Prior to joining the Firm, she practiced with a major Los Angeles firm in the areas of Maritime, Employment and Insurance Litigation. Ms. Piech is a member of the American Bar Association and the State Bar of California.

ROBIN RESNICK is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Ms. Resnick is a 1986 cum laude graduate of the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania where she was elected to the [*119] Order of the Coif and a 1983 summa cum laude graduate of the College of Arts and Sciences of the University of Pennsylvania. She served as a law clerk to the Honorable Frank A. Kaufman, Senior Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Maryland. Ms. Resnick is also affiliated with the Disabilities Law Project, a non-profit law firm in Philadelphia.

CHRISTOPHER T. REYNA graduated from the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania in June, 1986. Mr. Reyna received his Bachelor's Degree from Harvard University in 1983. He is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the United States Courts of Appeals for the Third and Ninth Circuits and the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

IRA NEIL RICHARDS is admitted to practice in the States of New York and Pennsylvania and in the United States District Courts for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and the Southern District of New York, as well as the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. He is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania School of Law (J.D. magna cum laude, 1986) where he served as special Project Director of the University of Pennsylvania Law Review. He was [*120] elected to the Order of the Coif and received the Philadelphia Trial Lawyers Association Award and the Wapner, Newman & Associates Award, both for trial advocacy. He is a 1983 graduate of Cornell University, where he received a B.S. in industrial and labor relations. Mr. Richards previously practiced with a major Philadelphia law firm concentrating in complex civil litigation.

STEVEN A. SCHWARTZ is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, and the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. He is a graduate of the Duke University School of Law (J.D. 1987) where he served as senior editor of Law & Contemporary Problems. He is a 1984 cum laude graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, where he received a B.A. in political science. Mr. Schwartz previously practiced with a major Philadelphia firm concentrating in complex civil litigation.

DENISE DAVIS SCHWARTZMAN is admitted to practice in Pennsylvania, Florida, Texas and the District of Columbia. She is admitted to practice before all the State Courts in these jurisdictions and is admitted to the United States Courts of Appeals [*121] for the Third, Fifth, Eleventh and District of Columbia Circuits as well as United States District Courts within each Circuit. Ms. Schwartzman is a graduate of the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania (L.L.B. 1969) and Temple University (A.B. 1966). She holds a Master of Laws in Taxation from the Villanova University Law School. Ms. Schwartzman has practiced extensively at the trial and appellate levels before Federal and State Courts and before various administrative agencies. Ms. Schwartzman was appellate counsel on the brief in In re Charter Company, 876 F.2d 866 \(11th Cir. 1989\), a case which established that class proofs of claim are allowable in bankruptcy proceedings. Prior to relocating in Philadelphia, she was associated with a major law firm in San Antonio, Texas.

JONATHAN SHUB is admitted to practice in Pennsylvania and in the District of Columbia. He is a 1983 graduate of The American University with a degree in public communications, and a 1988 graduate of the Delaware Law School of Widener University (cum laude), where he was an articles editor of The Delaware Journal of Corporate Law. Mr. Shub served as a law clerk to the Honorable Joseph [*122] T. Walsh of the Supreme Court of Delaware while a student at Widener University. Mr. Shub previously practiced in the Washington, D.C. office of a major New York law firm concentrating in civil litigation.

JEFFREY T. SPANGLER is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the United States District Courts for the Middle and Eastern Districts of Pennsylvania and the Third Circuit Court of Appeals. Mr. Spangler is a 1973 graduate of Lehigh University (B.A. in Biology) and a 1978 graduate of The Dickinson School of Law. Mr. Spangler has served as a Prosecuting Attorney for Pennsylvania's Medical Board and as a law clerk for The Honorable William W. Lipsitt of the Dauphin County Court of Common Pleas in Harrisburg. He is a member of the Philadelphia Bar Association.

J. DAVID STONER is admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, the United States District Courts for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and the District of New Jersey. He is also admitted to practice in the state courts of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Indiana. Mr. Stoner is a graduate of Harvard College (A.B. 1951, cum laude) and of Harvard Law School [*123] (J.D. 1955, cum laude), where he was a member of the Board of Student Advisers and an oralist on the moot court team that won the Harvard Moot Court Competition. After three years as an associate at a major Philadelphia law firm and three years teaching at Rutgers Law School, Camden, New Jersey, he worked in the Legal Adviser's Office in the United States Department of State, first serving the Bureau of Economic Affairs and then as Assistant Legal Adviser for Administration. He has also worked as an attorney in the Philadelphia poverty law program and in the legal departments of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, a Philadelphia bank holding company, the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania and AT&T. While at AT&T he participated in the antitrust defense of AT&T in United States v. AT&T, 552 F. Supp. 131 (D.D.C. 1982), aff'd, 460 U.S. 1001, 75 L. Ed. 2d 472, 103 S. Ct. 1240 (1983) (settled after trial); Southern Pacific Communications Company v. AT&T, 556 F. Supp. 825 (D.D.C. 1982) (as amended Jan. 10, 1983), aff'd, 238 U.S. App. D.C. 309, 740 F.2d 980 (D.C. Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1005, 84 L. Ed. 2d 380, 105 S. Ct. 1359 (1985); [*124] and 567 F. Supp. 326 (D.D.C. 1983), aff'd, , 238 U.S. App. D.C. 340, 740 F.2d 1011 (D.C. Cir. 1984); and in the multidistrict In re Long Distance Telephone Service Antitrust Litigation, MDL No. 550 S.W. (N.D. Cal.).

JAMES C. STRUM, an associate in the Firm's Wilmington, Delaware office, is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Delaware, the United States District Court for the District of Delaware, and the Third Circuit Court of Appeals. Mr. Strum is a 1982 graduate of Brown University and a 1986 graduate of Marshall-Wythe School of Law, the College of William and Mary. Mr. Strum practiced for four years in a major Wilmington, Delaware law firm in the area of corporate litigation, primarily in mergers and acquisitions.

WENDY H. ZOBERMAN is an associate in the Firm's West Palm Beach, Florida office. She is admitted to practice before the United States District Court for the Middle and Southern Districts of Florida, as well as all Florida State Courts. Ms. Zoberman is a 1981 graduate of Wellesley College, where she was a Durant Scholar, and was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa Society. She received her law degree from Columbia University in 1984. At Columbia she served [*125] as an Articles Editor of the Columbia University-Volunteer Lawyers for the Arts Journal of Art and the Law, and is a co-author of "An Introduction to the New York Artists' Authorship Rights Act," appearing at Vol. 8, No. 3 Columbia - VLA Journal of Art and the Law 369.

KATHLEEN P. BALON, ASA, the Firm's Financial Specialist, is a graduate of Drexel University (B.S. Finance 1983) and Villanova University (Master of Taxation 1992). Ms. Balon is a Senior Member of the American Society of Appraisers. Prior to joining the Firm, Ms. Balon was a Vice President of the investment bank, Howard, Lawson & Co., where she had responsibility for a broad range of corporate finance assignments. Ms. Balon has co-authored several articles, including "Giving the Company Away (While Keeping the Benefits)," Lawyer's Digest, March 1987 and "Leveraged ESOPs - Buyers of Companies," Lawyer's Digest, May 1988. Ms. Balon has also served as a panelist at various seminars and conventions regarding financing and valuation issues.

GREENFIELD & CHIMICLES

Firm Biography

Greenfield & Chimicles, with offices in Haverford, PA, West Palm Beach, FL, Wilmington, DE and Los Angeles, CA, specializes in [*126] complex litigation and, particularly, in securities litigation. Other substantive areas of significant litigation are consumer rights, antitrust and environmental matters. As a direct result of the Firm's efforts, many millions of dollars have been recovered for defrauded shareholders and other persons injured by illegal corporate activities. The Firm has also been responsible for obtaining a number of particularly noteworthy judicial opinions which have not only strengthened shareholder rights generally, but substantially aided in the prosecution of complex litigation to preserve such rights. In addition, the Firm has represented litigants in various pro bono suits, including Title VII litigation and prisoners' rights cases. The Firm is an active supporter of The Public Interest Law Center of Philadelphia of which Mr. Greenfield was a Director for a number of years.

Greenfield & Chimicles is currently Lead Counsel or Co-Lead Counsel for plaintiffs in major securities, derivative, and class action suits pending in, inter alia, the United States District Courts for the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York, the Eastern and Western Districts of Pennsylvania, the Northern [*127] District of Illinois, the Northern District of Ohio, the District of New Jersey, the Central District of California, the District of Delaware, the Southern District of Florida, the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware, and elsewhere. The Firm is rated "AV" by Martindale-Hubbell.

RICHARD D. GREENFIELD is a senior partner and a member of the Firm's Executive Committee. He is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States, the Courts of Appeals for the Second, Third, Fifth, Ninth and Eleventh Circuits, various federal district courts as well as the Courts of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New York. Mr. Greenfield is a 1965 graduate of The Cornell Law School. In addition, he has earned degrees in Accounting (B.S. Queens College) and Business Administration (M.B.A. Columbia University Graduate School of Business).

Mr. Greenfield is thoroughly experienced in securities and consumer litigation, having served as Lead or Co-Lead Counsel for plaintiffs in shareholder class and derivative actions alleging violations of the federal securities laws such as In re First Pennsylvania Securities Litigation, Master File No. 80-1643 (E.D. Pa.), in which [*128] a $ 12 million settlement was approved, and Cohen v. Uniroyal, Inc., 77 F.R.D. 685 (E.D. Pa. 1977) (certifying class actions) and 80 F.R.D. 480 (E.D. Pa. 1978) (overruling defendants' objections to discovery). Mr. Greenfield was Lead Counsel in In re Caesars World Shareholder Litigation, M.D.L., Civil Action No. 81-3442 (D.N.J.), in which more than $ 7 million and other benefits were recovered derivatively for the company and in Wolfson v. Riley, Civil Action No. 79-642 (N.D. Ohio) where $ 3.2 million was recovered in a class action on behalf of certain purchasers of the common stock of Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. More recently, Mr. Greenfield has been Lead Counsel in In re First Peoples Bank Share-holder Litigation, Civil Action No. 83-2713 (SSB) in the District of New Jersey, where a settlement of over $ 6 million was approved, in the Crocker Bank Shareholder Litigation, No. 7405 (Del. Ch.), where a settlement valued at $ 70 million was obtained for plaintiffs, and in Lepow Equities Corp., et. al. v. First Maryland Corp., Civil Action No. 88-260070, (Cir. Ct. Balt. City) where a settlement valued at $ 36 million was obtained. [*129]

Mr. Greenfield has been or is Lead Counsel for the Class in BankAmerica Securities Litigation, Master File No. CV 85-4779 (WDK) (C.D. Cal.) (settled for $ 21.1 million); Mellon Bank Shareholder Litigation, Civil Action No. 87-0755 (W.D. Pa.) (settled for $7.5 million); In re Matthews & Wright Bondholders Litigation, MDL No. 739 (E.D. Pa.); Resorts International Shareholder Litigation, No. 9470 (Del. Ch.) (Recovery for shareholders of more than $ 40 million); Broadview Savings Bank Shareholder Litigation, Civil Action No. C86-3522 (N.D. Ohio) (combined class and derivative recovery of more than $ 2 million); Allegheny International Shareholder Litigation, Civil Action No. 86-1651 (W.D. Pa.) (settled for $ 6.25 million); Trilogy Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. C-84-20617 (A) (N.D. Cal.) (settlement of cash and securities valued at approximately $ 8 million); and trial counsel in a class action arising out of the fraudulent sale of interests in a "tax shelter" limited partnership, which led to a leading opinion in the area of liability of auditors and attorneys for violation of the federal securities laws, Eisenberg v. Gagnon, 766 F.2d 770 [*130] (3d Cir.), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 946, 88 L. Ed. 2d 290, 106 S. Ct. 343, 106 S. Ct. 342 (1985), as well as trial counsel in other Litigation. Mr. Greenfield is also Co-Lead Counsel in Martin Fox, et. al. v. The Chase Manhattan Corporation et. al., Civil Action No. 8192 (Del. Ch.) where a partial recovery of $ 32.5 million in a derivative suit has already been obtained.

In the area of consumer litigation, Mr. Greenfield has represented and is representing victims of consumer fraud in numerous cases including: In Re Beechnut Apple Juice Litigation, Civil Action No. 86-6608 (E.D. Pa.) (involving fraudulent sale of sugar water as apple juice); Kenneth Eric Gross, et. al. v. The Hertz Corp., Civil Action No. 88-0661 (E.D. Pa.) (involving over-charges on accident-damaged rental vehicles); Troncelliti v. Minolta, Civil Action No. B-86-3848 (D. Md.) (involving resale price maintenance in connection with fixing retail prices of cameras); In Re Alamo Car Rental Litigation, Civil Action No. 89-0121 (E.D. Pa.) (involving deceptive practices employed in the rental of cars).

Mr. Greenfield has achieved national and international recognition for his and the Firm's achievements, including features on the British [*131] Broadcasting Corporation's Money Programme; American Broadcasting Company's Business World; a front-page article in The Wall Street Journal; and a substantial article in The New York Times; a cover story in Banker's Monthly; and profile articles in Florida Trend, The American Lawyer, Philadelphia Business Journal, The Philadelphia Inquirer, Dagens Industri (Sweden's equivalent of The Wall Street Journal) and American Banker. He is often sought by the business and legal media for comment on a wide variety of corporate, securities and shareholder rights topics and has been frequently quoted in every major business and law newspaper and periodical. In 1989, he was selected by The National Law Journal as one of 50 lawyers under the age of 50 who have achieved national recognition for their professional accomplishments.

Mr. Greenfield has been a member of the faculty of the Practicing Law Institute and has participated as a lecturer and panelist in the program New Trends in Securities Litigation. He has also been a guest speaker at the Annual Meeting of the Conference of Actuaries in Public Practice held in Seattle, Washington, where he presented [*132] a paper entitled The Noose Tightens - Disclosure of Pension Liabilities Under The Federal Securities Laws, which was subsequently published. He has addressed Annual Conventions of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America and various programs of ALI-ABA and the Litigation Section of the American Bar Association, where he has spoken on various topics including class actions, securities fraud litigation, corporate governance, discovery in commercial litigation, attorneys fees and RICO litigation against accountants and lawyers, among others.

In 1985, Mr. Greenfield was a lecturer on bank fraud litigation at the Eighth Annual Banking Law Institute sponsored by the Texas Tech School of Law in Houston, and on securities litigation in 1985 and 1986 at the Minnesota Institute of Legal Education's annual "Lying, Cheating and Stealing" Seminar in Minneapolis. He organized and presented a program on Federal Class Actions for the Federal Bar Association in May, 1986. In 1987, he was the featured speaker at Institutional Investor Institute's "Spring Pension Fund Roundtable" in New York and at the Inner Circle of Advocates' Annual Meeting in San Diego. Mr. Greenfield is a member of the Board [*133] of Advisors of the Banking Law Review and has authored a chapter on class actions and other representative litigation in a desk book published by the New York State Bar Association entitled Federal Civil Practice.

Mr. Greenfield is a member of the Editorial Advisory Board of Class Action Reports, for which he authored an article entitled "Rewarding The Class Representative: An Idea Whose Time Has Come," which appeared in the First Quarter, 1986 issue. He also authored "No More Chastity Belts: U.S. Needs Federal Corporate Code" for the March 9, 1987 issue of Legal Times, as well as other articles for this publication and its affiliates in the American Lawyer Newspaper Group and he is a member of its National Board of Contributors. He is a member of the Federal Courts Committee of the Philadelphia Bar Association and the Complex Litigation Subcommittee thereof. He is also active in the Class and Derivative Action and Securities Litigation sub-committees of the American Bar Association's Section on Litigation, the Philadelphia Chapter of the Federal Bar Association and the Federal Bar Council of New York City. Mr. Greenfield has also served as a Director of Equimark Corporation, [*134] a $ 2.5 billion, New York Stock Exchange listed bank holding company and two of its subsidiaries, Equibank (Delaware) N.A. and Liberty Savings Bank.

NICHOLAS E. CHIMICLES is a senior partner and member of the Firm's Executive Committee. Mr. Chimicles is a 1970 graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, where he received a Bachelor of Arts Degree with Honors. Mr. Chimicles graduated in 1973 from the University of Virginia School of Law, where he was a member of the Editorial Board of the University of Virginia Law Review and was the author of several published comments. While attending law school, he co-authored a course and study guide entitled "Student's Course Outline on Securities Regulation," published by the University of Virginia School of Law. Upon graduation from law school, Mr. Chimicles joined a major Philadelphia law firm where he practiced for eight years and specialized in litigation including complex commercial, antitrust and securities fraud cases and served as principal or assistant trial counsel in United States v. Pfizer, Inc., (Antibiotics Antitrust Litigation), Civil Action No. 78-1155 (E.D. Pa.); Penn Galvanizing Co. v. Lukens Steel Co., Civil Action [*135] No. 71-1777 (E.D. Pa.); Wolgin v. State Mutual Investors, 265 Pa. Super. 525, 402 A.2d 669 (1979); Beta Consultants & Administrators v. Centennial Life Ins. Co., unreported opinion by Judge Newcomer (E.D. Pa. 1980); and R. & M. Musselman, Inc., et al. v. Line Lexington Lumber & Millwork, Inc., C.A. 727458-02-1 (Bucks Co. 1981).

Mr. Chimicles has actively prosecuted major complex litigation, antitrust and securities fraud suits. He is serving as a Lead Counsel in the Scott Paper Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 906192 (E.D. Pa.) and the PNC Financial Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 90-592 (W.D. Pa.). He has served as the Lead Counsel in the Storage Technology Corp. Securities Litigation, Master File No. 84-F-1981 (D. Colo.) (recovery of $ 18 million in cash and stock); a Lead Counsel for the shareholder class in the Continental Illinois Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 82 C 4712 (N.D. Ill.) (one aspect of which involved a twenty-week jury trial conducted by Mr. Chimicles that concluded in July, 1987; ultimate recovery of nearly $ 40 million for the class); a Lead Counsel in In re: Fiddler's Woods

Bondholders Litigation, [*136] Civil Action No. 83-2340 (E.D. Pa.), a bondholders' class action arising out of a default on a $ 33 million industrial development bond issue (recovery of more than $ 7 million for the class), and Lead Counsel in the Charter Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 84-448 Civ-J-12 (M.D. Fla.) (recovery of $ 7.75 million).

By virtue of the Fiddler's Woods litigation (in which Mr. Chimicles also represented the court-appointed Receiver), his representation of the Bondholders' Protection Committee for the Baptist Estates Life Care Facility (Doylestown, PA), a $ 15 million tax-exempt bond issue which defaulted, and his representation of bondholders in other litigation pending in Atlanta, Orlando and New Jersey arising from defaulted bond issues aggregating over $ 135 million, Mr. Chimicles has established a significant reputation for representing the interests of bondholders in default situations.

Mr. Chimicles has also represented stockholders in numerous suits brought in courts across the country arising from proposed mergers, acquisitions and hostile takeovers. For example, in Garlands, Inc. Profit Sharing Plan et al. v. The Pillsbury Company, a Delaware corporation, et al. [137] al., State of Minnesota, County of Hennepin, Fourth Judicial District, Court File No. 88-17834, Mr. Chimicles was a lead counsel in a suit brought to compel Pillsbury's board of directors to negotiate in good faith with Grand Metropolitan and persuaded the court to enjoin a proposed spin-off of Burger King, a device sought to be used by Pillsbury's board to ward off Grand Metropolitan's takeover. In numerous other cases, Mr. Chimicles has represented shareholders in obtaining enhanced consideration for their stock in the context of a takeover or going private transaction. Randee L. Shantzer, et al. v. Charter Medical Corp., et al., Court of Chancery, State of Delaware, New Castle County, Consolidated Civil Action No. 9530. In Re Interstate Bakeries Corporation Shareholders Litigation, Court of Chancery, State of Delaware, New Castle County, Consolidated Civil Action No. 9263.

As an appellate advocate, Mr. Chimicles has handled cases which have protected the rights of victims of securities fraud in bankruptcy proceedings. In cases that he successfully argued before the Courts of Appeals for the Tenth and Eleventh Circuits, due process and notice principles were extended to [138] protect securities purchasers filing claims in bankruptcy cases, In re Standard Metals Corp., 817 F.2d 625 (10th Cir.), rev'd in part on rehearing, 839 F.2d 1383 (1987), and it was established that class proofs of claim are allowable in bankruptcy proceedings, In re the Charter Company, 876 F.2d 866 (11th Cir. 1989).

Mr. Chimicles has also actively prosecuted suits involving public utilities constructing nuclear plants. He was Lead Counsel in the Philadelphia Electric Company Securities Litigation, Master File No. 85-1878 (E.D. Pa.) and a Lead Counsel in the Consumers Power Company Derivative Litigation, Master File No. 84-CV-3788 AA (E.D. Mich.). Mr. Chimicles was co-lead counsel in the stockholder derivative suit arising from mismanagement claims against former officers of Philadelphia Electric Company involved in the closing of the Peach Bottom Nuclear Plant, a suit which Mr. Chimicles was authorized to bring by a PECO board of directors resolution. In re Philadelphia Electric Company Derivative Litigation, Case No. 7090, Court of Common Pleas, Philadelphia County, PA. That case resulted in a recovery of $ 35 million [139] for the utility company in November 1990.

Mr. Chimicles was also a Co-Lead Counsel in a major environmental litigation, Ashland Oil Spill Litigation, Master File M-14670 (W.D. Pa.), involving the claims of residents and businesses for damage arising from the largest inland waterway oil spill in history that occurred on January 2, 1988 in Pittsburgh. In 1990, the case was settled upon creation of a claims fund of over $ 30 million for the class. This and similar environmental suits in which the Firm is involved were the subject of a program, "Toxic Torts May Not Be Hazardous To Your Health: A Lawyer's Guide to Health Survival in Mass Tort Litigation," in which Mr. Chimicles was a principal speaker at this program which was held at the American Bar Association's 1989 Convention in Honolulu.

Currently, Mr. Chimicles is Special Counsel for the City of Philadelphia and the Philadelphia Housing Authority in an action seeking to hold lead pigment manufacturers liable for federally mandated abatement of lead paint in properties owned, managed or operated by the plaintiffs. City of Philadelphia, et al. v. Lead Industries Ass'n, et al., Civil Action No. 90-7064 (E.D. Pa.), appeal [140] pending, No. 92-1420 (3rd Cir.). The action seeks class certification on behalf of all cities and housing authorities of communities in excess of 100,000 residents.

Mr. Chimicles is admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of the United States, numerous federal district and appellate courts, as well as the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. He is a member of the American Bar Association (Sections of Litigation; Anti-trust; and Corporation, Banking and Business Law), the Pennsylvania Bar Association, the Philadelphia Bar Association (Federal Courts Committee and various subcommittees). Mr. Chimicles has lectured frequently on securities law at the Rutgers University Law School - Camden, the Wharton School Graduate Division of the University of Pennsylvania, New York University, and for Prentice Hall Law and Business Publications. Mr. Chimicles has addressed several legal conferences, including the Pennsylvania Bond Counsel Association, and has also frequently appeared as a speaker in several state and national bar association sponsored seminars on topics involving federal securities laws, RICO, class actions, hostile corporate take-overs, and professional ethics. Mr. Chimicles also [*141] is a contributor to and member of the advisory boards of various professional publications involving the securities law field. Mr. Chimicles is a member of the Board of Overseers of the School of Arts and Sciences of the University of Pennsylvania and was recently elected President-Elect of the National Association of Securities and Commercial Law Attorneys, a Washington, D.C. based organization comprising nearly 100 member law firms interested in a strong system of federal and state legal protection for investors and consumers.

C. OLIVER BURT, III, a partner, graduated from Swarthmore College in 1964 with a Bachelor of Arts Degree in History. In 1967 he graduated from the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania. Upon graduation from law school, he was an associate with a major Philadelphia law firm working primarily in the litigation department where he participated, among other things, in antitrust litigation. In May, 1971 he was appointed Assistant U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. As an Assistant U.S. Attorney he tried a number of criminal cases, and participated in several major Grand Jury investigations including an investigation in 1971-72 involving [*142] the Health and Welfare Fund of the Carpenter's Union of Philadelphia and Vicinity which led to several indictments, including United States v. John McCrae, Criminal No. 71-684. McCrae was charged with embezzling funds from two employee benefit plans established by the Carpenter's Health and Welfare Fund. Mr. Burt tried the case in March of 1972 and obtained the conviction of Mr. McCrae. The Court's opinion denying post-trial motions is reported at 344 F. Supp. 942.

As an Assistant U.S. Attorney, Mr. Burt prosecuted white-collar criminal cases involving securities fraud, mail fraud, wire fraud, "check-kiting," embezzlement of bank funds, interstate transportation of stolen motor vehicles, income tax evasion and other offenses. Mr. Burt was appellate counsel in United States v. George Hykel, 461 F.2d 721 \(3d Cir. 1972\), a criminal case involving misapplication of bank funds. In United States v. Bertram Lazar, Mr. Burt prosecuted and secured a guilty plea from a stock-broker for engaging in a "Ponzi Scheme" and selling unregistered securities. He also represented the Government in a number of civil matters, and in May, 1973 he was appointed Chief [*143] of the Civil Division of the United States Attorney's Office. Thereafter, in addition to serving as Chief of the Civil Division and trying civil cases, he conducted the Grand Jury investigation concerning the bankruptcy of the Penn Central Railroad, and tried other criminal and civil cases. In connection with the Penn Central Grand Jury proceedings he appeared in and participated in hearings in the Princely Provincial Court of Liechtenstein seeking to compel the production of records of secret Liechtenstein bank accounts. In January, 1977, he returned from private practice briefly as a Special Assistant U.S. Attorney to try United States v. Rosenbaum, 439 F. Supp. 176 \(E.D. Pa. 1977\), the criminal case arising out of the Penn Central Grand Jury investigation.

Prior to joining Greenfield & Chimicles, Mr. Burt was a partner in a Philadelphia law firm where he was primarily engaged in commercial litigation including antitrust, securities litigation, unfair competition, white collar criminal cases, and general business litigation. While with that firm, Mr. Burt tried, among other cases, Callan, et al. v. State Chemical Manufacturing Company, decision on pretrial motions [*144] reported at 584 F. Supp. 619 \(E.D. Pa. 1984\); a civil RICO case, The Mader Group, Inc. v. Gekoski, et al., 6 Phila. 556 \(1981\), involving unfair competition and violation of corporate fiduciary duties by former employees; General Business Services, Inc. v. Rouse, et al., 495 F. Supp. 526 \(E.D. Pa. 1980\), involving alleged trademark infringement, unfair competition and unlawful tying arrangements; Beta Consultants & Administrators v. Centennial Life Ins. Co., unreported opinion by Judge Newcomer (E.D. Pa. 1980), an alleged antitrust conspiracy case, United States v. Natale, et al., a criminal RICO and mail fraud case, opinion on post-trial motions reported at 494 F. Supp. 1114 \(E.D. Pa. 1979\), aff'd, 631 F.2d 726 (3d Cir. 1980); Commonwealth of Pennsylvania v. Richard Wolf, a white collar criminal case involving alleged corporate scheme to defraud city by tampering with pollution control devices, case resolved by plea agreement before trial after extended preliminary hearing, Pennsylvania Supreme Court opinion reported at 495 Pa. 211, 433 A.2d 18 \(1981\). He also participated as counsel [*145] for plaintiff in Levin v. Barish, et al., litigation arising out of a law firm dissolution, opinion by Supreme Court of Pennsylvania reported at 505 Pa. 514, 481 A.2d 1183 \(Pa. 1984\).

From 1972 through 1985, Mr. Burt was Chairman of the Criminal Law Committee of the Philadelphia Bar Association Young Lawyers' Section Basic Legal Practice Course. He authored course materials on federal criminal practice for that Course, and during the years 1972 through 1985 lectured on the subject of federal criminal practice as part of the Basic Legal Practice Course, sponsored by the Philadelphia Bar Association.

Since joining the Firm of Greenfield & Chimicles, Mr. Burt has participated actively in securities and class action litigation, including acting as trial co-counsel in Peil v. Speiser, Civil Action No. 82-1289 (E.D. Pa.), a "fraud on the market" case, which was tried in April, 1985. Mr. Burt was also appellate counsel in that case and presented oral argument in the case in the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. In its opinion in that case, the Court adopted "Fraud on the Market" as the law of the Circuit, reported as Peil v. Speiser, 806 F.2d 1154 \(3d Cir. 1986\). [*146] Mr. Burt was also plaintiff's lead trial counsel in Kumpis v. Wetterau, 586 F. Supp. 152 (E.D. Mo.), a securities fraud class action which was settled in the course of trial in December, 1985.

Mr. Burt was Lead Derivative Counsel in Pacific Gas & Electric Shareholder Derivative Litigation, Master File No. 893849, (Superior Court, San Francisco County, Cal.), a case which settled for $ 21,000,000 in 1990; PSFS Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 85-4978 (E.D. Pa.) and in First Peoples Bank Shareholder Litigation, Civil Action No. 83-2713 (D.N.J.). He was plaintiffs' Co-Lead Counsel in Duguesne Light Shareholder Litigation, Civil Action No. 86-1046 (W.D. Pa.). He is currently active in numerous cases in which the Firm is counsel including First American Bank and Trust Litigation, Civil Action No. 88-0638 (S.D. Fla.); and AmeriFirst Bank Litigation, Civil Action No. 89-2614 (S.D. Fla.), in which he and his partner, Michael J. Pucillo, serve as Lead Counsel; Hoexter v. Simmons, CIV 89-1069-PHX-RCB (D. Ariz.), a securities fraud class action involving Valley National Bank; In Re Perrier Bottled Water Litigation, MDL 844 (TFGD) (D. Conn. [*147]); and Zitin v. Hurley, CIV 89-2061-PHX-CAM (D. Ariz.), a derivative case involving Pinnacle West Corporation.

Mr. Burt is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, the District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the District Court for the Northern District of New York, and the District Court for the District of Arizona.

KENNETH A. JACOBSEN, a partner, is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the United States Supreme Court, the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the United States District Court for the Northern District of California and the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey. Mr. Jacobsen is a 1979 cum laude graduate of the Villanova University School of Law, where he was the Managing Editor of the Villanova Law Review and was elected [*148] to the Order of the Coif. From 1979 to 1980, he served as the Law Clerk for a Judge of the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey. Following his clerkship, Mr. Jacobsen was an associate at a major Philadelphia law firm for three years, where he participated actively in the handling of complex commercial litigation matters, including claims arising out of the bankruptcy of O.P.M. Leasing Services, Inc. Since joining the Firm, Mr. Jacobsen has played a leadership role in the prosecution of the Petro-Lewis Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 84-C-326 (D. Colo.), in which a settlement valued in excess of $ 137 million was recovered on behalf of shareholders and limited partners; in the Baldwin United SPDA Litigation, MDL No. 581 (S.D.N.Y.), in which a settlement of more than $ 170 million in cash and other benefits was obtained on behalf of purchasers of annuities; and in several other substantial securities and consumer class actions and derivative litigation, including In re Coleco Securities Litigation, Master File No. 83 Civ. 9199 (LBS) (S.D.N.Y.) (Derivative Counsel--global settlement of $ 16 million obtained on behalf of security holders and [*149] corporation); In re Petro-Lewis Broker-Dealer Litigation, Consolidated Civil Action File No. 1:85-cv-172-RLV (N.D. Ga.) (Lead Counsel--global settlement of $ 17 million obtained from six broker-dealers on behalf of investors in oil and gas partnerships); In re Rohm & Haas

Company Litigation, Master File 89-2724 (E.D. Pa.) ($ 5 million settlement of consumer class action arising out of contaminated anti-cholesterol drug). Drawing on his extensive experience in bank litigation, Mr. Jacobsen presently serves as Lead Counsel in a massive securities fraud case involving First RepublicBank, a Texas bank holding company, and was instrumental in negotiating multi-million dollar settlements in cases involving such other banks as Goldome, MCorp, Home Unity and Trustcorp. Mr. Jacobsen also has been responsible for establishing appellate precedents in the securities area, most notably Kirkpatrick v. J. C. Bradford & Co., 827 F.2d 718 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 959 (1988), which is one of the leading cases in the Eleventh Circuit discussing the prerequisites for class certification.

R. BRUCE McNEW, a partner, is admitted to practice in [*150] the States of Delaware, Pennsylvania and California, the Federal District Courts for the District of Delaware, the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and the Northern and Central Districts of California, the United States Court of Appeals for the Third, Tenth and Eleventh Circuits and the Supreme Court of the United States. He is a member of the Delaware Bar Association, the Pennsylvania Bar Association, the California State Bar and the American Bar Association. Mr. McNew is a 1975 graduate of the University of Virginia where he received a Bachelor of Arts Degree with Distinction and a 1979 graduate of Marshall Wythe School of Law, the College of William and Mary, where he served as the Research Editor of the William and Mary Law Review. From 1979 to 1980 Mr. McNew served as law clerk to the Honorable John J. McNeilly, Justice of the Supreme Court of Delaware. For three years after serving as a clerk to the Delaware Supreme Court, Mr. McNew was an associate at a major Wilmington, Delaware law firm where his practice focused primarily on commercial litigation. Since joining Greenfield & Chimicles, Mr. McNew has been on the Editorial Boards of the M&A and Corporate Governance Law Reporter [*151] and the Corporate Counsel Law Reporter.

Mr. McNew has played a leadership role in numerous class actions on the west coast including acting as: a member of the Executive Committee for In re American Continental Corporation/Lincoln Savings & Loan Securities Litigation, M.D.L. 834; lead counsel in In re American Medical International Shareholder Litigation, Consol. Action No. C718957 (LA County Super. Ct. Cent.Dist. Cal.); lead counsel in In re Cineplex Shareholders Litigation, Civil Action No. CV 89-2461 WJR (Tx) (C.D. Cal.); co-lead counsel in Ackerman, et. al. v. Kassar, et. al., Master File No. BC015018 (LA County Super. Ct. Cent.Dist. Cal.) involving Carolco Pictures; and co-lead counsel in Vogel, et al. v. First Interstate Bancorp, et al., Civil Action No. 91-3643 JGD(Tx) (C.D. Cal.).

Mr. McNew has represented classes of investors as both lead and co-lead counsel in the prosecution of major securities fraud and derivative litigation. Mr. McNew has prosecuted litigation on behalf of bondholders in various actions including: In re: Fiddler's Woods Bondholders Litigation, Civil Action No. 83-2340 (E.D. Pa.); Sheftelman v. NL Industries, Inc., et al., [*152] Civil Action No. 84-3199 (D. N.J.); Ockerman, et al. v. King & Spalding, et al., Civil Action No. 85-2958 (N.D. Ga.); Sheftelman v. Jones, et al., Civil Action 84-472A (N.D. Ga.); and Anderson v. Bank South, Civil Action No. 84-1562 (M.D. Fla.). Mr. McNew has represented classes of equity security holders in various actions including: In re: Winchell's Donuts Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 9478 (Del. Ch.); In re: AFG Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 9688 (Del. Ch.); and In re Ivan F. Boesky Securities Litigation, M.D.L. 732. In addition, he has been involved in the prosecution of cases pertaining to defense contractor fraud such as: Liebman, et. al. v. Zable, et. al., Civil Action No. 88-1195B(M) (S.D. Cal.) involving Cubic Corp.; Wildflower Partnership, et. al. v. Hoch, et. al., Civil Action No. 89-1967 RG(Sx) (C.D. Cal.) involving Litton Industries, Inc.; In re Lockheed Securities Corporation Litigation, Master File No. CV-89-6745 TJH (C.D. Cal.); and Citron, et. al. v. Beall, et. al., Civil Action No. C728809 (LA County Super. Ct. Cent.Dist. Cal.) involving Rockwell International Corporation.

Mr. McNew also has experience in [*153] cases involving financial institutions such as: Almeida, et. al. v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Company, et al., Action No. 668436-9 (Alameda County Super. Ct. Oakland Branch) involving Central Banking System; Koehler, et. al. v. Martin, et. al., Action No. BC025112 (LA County Super. Ct. Cent.Dist. Cal.) involving Coast Savings Financial, Inc.; and Goldman, et. al. v. Belzberg, et. al., Civil Action No. C754698 (LA County Super. Ct. Cent.Dist. Cal.) involving Farwest Financial Corp. Mr. McNew's environmental and consumer experience includes: McAleer, et. al. v. Prodigy Services Company, et. al., Master File No. 91-1517 KN (GHKx) (C.D. Cal.); In re Hanford Nuclear Reservation Litigation, Master File No. CY-91-3015 AAM (E.D. Wash.); Medley, et. al. v. Southern Pacific Trans. Company, et. al., Civil Action No. CV-S 91-1073 WES-JMF (E.D. Cal.) and In re

Sacramento River Spill Cases I and II, J.C.C.P. Nos. 2617 and 2620 (Sac. County Super. Ct. Cal.); Nguyen v. FundAmerica, Inc., a California Corp., C90-2090 MHP (N.D. Cal.); and In re the Exxon Valdez, Civil Consol. No. A 89-095 (D. Alaska) and Exxon Valdez Oil Spill Litigation, Civil Consol. No. 3AN-89-2533 (Super. Ct. Alaska 3rd J.Dist.)

MICHAEL J. PUCILLO, a partner resident in the Firm's West Palm Beach, Florida office, has been a member of the Florida Bar since 1978, and is admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth and Eleventh Circuits and the United States District Courts for the Southern and Middle Districts of Florida. Mr. Pucillo is a member of the Southern District of Florida Trial Bar. During 1989-1990, he served as President of the Gold Coast Chapter of the Federal Bar Association. He is a graduate of Williams College (1975), and Georgetown University Law School (1978). From 1978 to 1979, Mr. Pucillo served as Law Clerk to the Honorable Charles B. Fulton, United States District Judge for the Southern District of Florida. From 1979 to 1981, Mr. Pucillo served as Law Clerk to the Honorable William J. Campbell, Senior United States District Judge for the Northern District of Illinois. From 1983 to 1984, Mr. Pucillo was a Staff Attorney at the Division of Enforcement of the United States Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington, D.C. Upon returning to Florida, he practiced Commercial Litigation with an emphasis on Securities, and from 1986 to [*155] 1990, was a Partner in a major South Florida law firm. In 1990 Mr. Pucillo joined Greenfield & Chimicles and opened the Florida Office of the Firm at West Palm Beach.

Since joining the firm of Greenfield & Chimicles, Mr. Pucillo has been active in numerous class actions and shareholder derivative actions throughout Florida. Mr. Pucillo was lead derivative counsel in the FPL Group Shareholder Derivative Action, Case No. 91-3563-AC (15th Judicial Circuit), a case that settled for $ 7,000,000 plus significant corporate governance changes. He currently serves as lead counsel (with Oliver Burt) in In Re Amerifirst Bank Securities Litigation, Case No. 89-2614-HOEVELER (S.D. Fla.); and co-lead counsel in In Re Southeast Bank Securities Litigation, Case No. 90-0760-CIV-ZLOCH (S.D. Fla.); Dycom Securities Litigation; Case No. 91-8395-CIV-GRAHAM (S.D. Fla.); Tapken v. Brown, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11744 (S.D. Fla.), a shareholder action arising out of the collapse of General Development Corporation; and several other actions pending in the Southern and Middle Districts of Florida. Mr. Pucillo has also lectured on class certification and class actions for the Academy of Florida Trial [*156] Lawyers.

PAMELA S. TIKELLIS, a partner and resident attorney in the Firm's Wilmington, Delaware office, is admitted to practice before all courts in the State of Delaware and the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. Ms. Tikellis is a graduate of the Delaware Law School of Widener University (1982) where she served as Managing Editor of The Delaware Journal of Corporate Law. She is also a graduate of Manhattanville College (B.A. - 1974), and the Graduate Faculty of the New School for Social Research (M.A. - 1976). From 1982 to 1983, Ms. Tikellis served as a law clerk in the Court of Chancery in Wilmington, Delaware. Upon completion of her clerkship, Ms. Tikellis has engaged in significant shareholder litigation practice.

KEVIN M. PRONGAY, a resident partner in the Firm's Los Angeles office is admitted to practice in the states of California (1979), New York (1975) and New Jersey (1973). Mr. Prongay is also admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court, the United States Court of Appeals for the Second, Third and Ninth Circuits and before the United States District Court for the Northern, Central and Southern Districts of California and the Southern [*157] and Eastern Districts of New York, as well as the District of New Jersey. Mr. Prongay is a member of the American Bar Association (Sections on Antitrust, Business Law, International Law and Practice and Litigation) and the California State Bar Association. Mr. Prongay is a 1970 graduate of Rutgers University, where he received an A.B. degree in Economics and a 1973 graduate of Seton Hall University School of Law. In addition, Mr. Prongay was awarded an LL.M. in Trade Regulation from New York University School of Law in 1974. From 1974 to 1976, Mr. Prongay served as counsel to a private civil rights organization, funded by the Ford Foundation, for which he prosecuted numerous class actions challenging institutional discrimination in the housing and real estate industries. From 1976 to 1979, Mr. Prongay served as litigation counsel to a major multinational pharmaceutical company where he actively managed complex and protracted antitrust, commercial, product liability and intellectual property litigation. From 1979 to 1983, Mr. Prongay worked for an American subsidiary of a major European based electronics firm where he directed the company's international and domestic technology transfer [*158] program, and structured and negotiated licensing agreements, joint venture agreements and international capital formation agreements. From 1983 to 1984 Mr. Prongay served as a partner in a New York and New Jersey based law firm where he handled a variety of corporate and securities transactional matters and commercial litigation. In 1984, Mr. Prongay relocated to San Diego, California and joined a nationally prominent securities litigation firm where he handled a variety of security class actions and stockholder derivative suits on behalf of investors, participating in the prosecution of In Re Oak Industries Securities Litigation, Master File No. 83-0537 G(m) (S.D. Cal.) (Settled for $ 33 million); In Re Cousins Securities Litigation, Master File no. 84-1821-D(IEG) (S.D. Cal.) (settled for $ 13.5 million). Van de Walle v. Slutsky, Civil No. 82-5669 (AHS) (JRx) (C.D. Cal.) (settled for $ 5.2 million). From 1988-1990, Mr. Prongay served as a Los Angeles resident partner of a New York based national law firm where he was responsible for a variety of securities class actions, stockholder derivative suits, civil RICO, antitrust, copyright, trademark and unfair competition litigation. [*159] Mr. Prongay joined the Firm of Greenfield & Chimicles in October, 1990.

JAMES R. MALONE, JR., a partner, is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the Supreme Court of the United States, the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit and the United States District Courts for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the District of Arizona and the Northern District of California. Mr. Malone is a 1984 cum laude graduate of the Villanova University School of Law where he was a staff member on the Villanova Law Review and was elected to the Order of the Coif. Prior to joining the Firm in January, 1987, Mr. Malone was associated with a major Philadelphia law firm where he specialized in bankruptcy and commercial litigation. Since he joined the firm, Mr. Malone has been active in the prosecution of a number of class and derivative actions, and he has actively represented the interests of defrauded investors in bankruptcy proceedings.

MARTHA A. EVANS, a partner resident in the Firm's Los Angeles office, is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States, as well as in the States of California and Texas, Federal District Courts for the [*160] Southern District of California, Central District of California, Northern District of Texas, Southern District of Texas, Eastern District of Texas, and the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth and Eleventh Circuits. Ms. Evans is a member of the California State Bar, Texas State Bar Association and the American Bar Association. Ms. Evans graduated from the University of Texas in 1973 with honors and from the University of Texas School of Law in 1977. Immediately after graduation from law school, Ms. Evans served as a law clerk to a federal district judge in Houston, Texas. Before joining Greenfield & Chimicles in April 1992, Ms. Evans practiced commercial litigation in Houston and Dallas, Texas, and prosecuted securities fraud class actions and derivative suits while with a firm in San Diego, California.

Ms. Evans has particular experience in suing financial institutions, accountants and limited partnerships for securities fraud associated with a declining real estate market and/or a depressed oil and gas industry, e.g. In re First Republic Securities Litigation, Civil Action No. 3-88-0641-H (N.D. Tex.) involving First Republic Bank of Texas, and In re Sunderman Securities [*161] Litigation, Civil Action No. 3-87-0612-H (N.D. Tex.) and Odmark v. Mesa Limited Partnership, Civil Action No. 3-91-CV2376-G (N.D. Tex.). Ms. Evans also has experience with lender liability actions, e.g. Hunt, et al., v. Bankers Trust Company, et al., (N.D. Tex.), wherein the Hunt brothers sued their banks for, inter alia, breach of oral and written loan agreements. Ms. Evans co-authored the following paper with Stephen D. Susman about lender liability cases: "Prosecuting the Common Law Lender Liability Case -- Evaluation of a Claim", Practicing Law Institute, 1989.

EUGENE MIKOLAJCZYK, a resident partner in the Firm's Los Angeles office, is admitted to practice in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (1978) and the State of California (1982). Mr. Mikolajczyk is also admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals to the Third and Ninth Circuits and before the United States District Courts in the Northern, Central and Southern Districts of California, as well as the State Bar of the State of California and Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Mr. Mikolajczyk is a 1974 graduate of Elizabethtown College and in 1978 graduated the Dickinson School of Law where he was Managing [*162] Editor of the Dickinson Law Review. From 1978 through 1980 Mr. Mikolajczyk served as a Law Clerk to the Honorable Gwilym A. Price, Jr. of the Superior Court of Pennsylvania and from 1980 through 1983 was an associate member of the Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania law firm of Reed Smith Shaw & McClay. In 1983 Mr. Mikolajczyk located to San Diego, California where he served first as an associate and then a partner (1988 through 1992) of Milberg Weiss Bershad Specthrie & Lerach where he handled a variety of securities, class action and stockholder derivative suits on behalf of investors. Mr. Mikolajczyk participated in the prosecution of In re Nucorp Energy Securities Litigation, 772 F.2d 1486 (9th Cir. 1985) (settled for total recovery of $ 55 million), Heckmann v. Ahmanson, 168 Cal. App. 3d 119, 214 Cal. Rptr. 177 (1985) (corporate greenmail actions settled for total class and derivative recovery of $ 45 million after two weeks of trial) and Ackerman v. Kassar, No. 91-1468 M (BTM) (S.D. Cal.) (corporate derivative action settled for total recovery of approximately $ 45 million). Mr. Mikolajczyk joined the Firm of Greenfield & Chimicles in January 1993.

[*163] MICHAEL D. DONOVAN, a partner, is admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court, the United States Courts of Appeals for the Eighth and Ninth Circuits, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the United States District Courts for the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York as well as the state courts of Pennsylvania and New York and the courts of Washington, D.C. He is a graduate of Vermont Law School (J.D. cum laude 1984) and Syracuse University (A.B. 1981). He was the Head Notes Editor and a staff member of the Vermont Law Review from 1982 through 1984. While on the Law Review, he authored Note, Zoning Variance Administration in Vermont, 8 Vt.L.Rev. 370 (1984). Prior to joining the Firm in November, 1987, Mr. Donovan was an attorney with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington, D.C., where he worked on numerous securities cases and enforcement matters, including injunctive and disciplinary actions against public companies, broker/dealers and accounting firms. Mr. Donovan has co-authored "The Overlooked Victims of the Thrift Crisis," Miami Review, Feb. 13, 1990 and "Conspiracy of Silence: [*164] Why S&L Regulators Can't Always Be Trusted," Legal Times, Feb. 5, 1990.

LISA J. RODRIGUEZ, a partner, is admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania and the Supreme Court of New Jersey. Ms. Rodriguez is a graduate of The George Washington University Law School (1983, with honors). From 1983 to 1984 she served as a Law Clerk to the Honorable Mitchell H. Cohen, Senior Judge of the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey. Following her clerkship, Ms. Rodriguez was an associate at a New Jersey law firm where she was involved in a wide variety of litigation matters.

MORRIS M. SHUSTER, Of Counsel, is admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court, United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and all other Pennsylvania Appellate and trial courts.

Mr. Shuster is a graduate of the Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania [*165] (B.S. in Economics, 1951), and of the University of Pennsylvania Law School (J.D., 1954).

Prior to joining the firm on May 1, 1993, Mr. Shuster was an active civil litigator as an associate and partner in a major Philadelphia litigation firm, as a named-partner in his own firm, and as special litigation counsel to a large Philadelphia, full-service firm. Over the last 20 years, he has concentrated his practice in consumer class actions against banks and insurance companies. He has been successful in obtaining multi-million dollar recoveries in these cases.

Mr. Shuster is currently a faculty member at the University of Pennsylvania Law School where he teaches Trial Advocacy. In 1981, he was a full-time faculty member at the University of Pennsylvania Law School and taught a course in The Lawyering Process. He also has been a guest lecturer on various legal subjects at the University of Pennsylvania Law School, Medical School, and Dental School, and at Drexel University. He is a member of the Advisory Committee for the Public Service Program at the University of Pennsylvania Law School where he developed the mentor/student pro bono project.

Mr. Shuster is a past president of The Philadelphia [*166] Trial Lawyers' Association. He was appointed by the Third Circuit Court of Appeals as Chairperson of the Bankruptcy Judge Search Committee. He was appointed by the District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania as Chairperson of a Panel to consider reappointment of a U.S. Magistrate.

In the Philadelphia Bar Association, Mr. Shuster has served as a member of the Board of Governors, Chairperson of the Judicial Commission, Committee on Judicial Selection and Reform, Committee on Civil Legislation/Legislative Liaison, and Committee on Civil Judicial Procedure (state courts). He is listed in Who's Who in American Law.

BRENDA M. NELSON, of counsel, is admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court, the United States Court of Appeals for the Third and Eleventh Circuits, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Ms. Nelson is a graduate of Oglethorpe University (B.B.A. with a major in accounting, 1980, summa cum laude) and of Harvard Law School (J.D., 1983). Upon graduation, she was an associate at a major Philadelphia law firm for two years, where she participated actively in a broad variety [*167] of litigation matters. Since joining the Firm in September 1985, Ms. Nelson has played a lead role in the prosecution of a number of securities class actions and shareholder derivative suits, including Bally Shareholder Litigation, Master File No. 87-0373 (JFG) (D.N.J.); CBS v. Paley, 86 CIV 9140 (JMC) (S.D.N.Y.); and Booth v. Connelly Containers, Inc., No. 89-8280 (E.D. Pa.). Ms. Nelson was also a featured speaker on RICO and securities fraud cases at the 1990 Civil RICO Seminar sponsored by the Pennsylvania Bar Institute.

MICHAEL J. BONI is admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the United States District Court for the Northern District of California and all Pennsylvania state courts. Mr. Boni received his B.A. in 1977 from Albright College, his M.A. (psychology) in 1980 from the University of Connecticut, and his J.D. in 1988 from the University of Pennsylvania Law School. Prior to joining the firm, Mr. Boni practiced with a major Philadelphia law firm concentrating in labor and employment litigation.

CYNTHIA A. CALDER is an associate in the Firm's [*168] Wilmington, Delaware office. She is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Delaware, the United States District Court for the District of Delaware, and the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. She graduated from the University of Delaware in 1987 with a Bachelor of Arts degree cum laude in International Relations and Russian. In 1991, she received her Juris Doctor degree from the Villanova University School of Law, where she was a Founding Member and Managing Editor of the Villanova Environmental Law Journal. From 1991 to 1992, she served as a judicial law clerk to the Honorable Maurice A. Hartnett, III, Vice Chancellor of the Delaware Court of Chancery.

LISA CHANOW DYKSTRA is admitted to practice before the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and the Supreme Court of New Jersey. She is a 1992 cum laude graduate of the Villanova University School of Law where she served as Managing Editor of Student Work on the Villanova Law Review. She is a 1989 cum laude graduate of New York University, where she received a B.A. in Russian language [*169] and political science.

FRANCIS J. FARINA is admitted to practice in the States of New York and Pennsylvania. He is a graduate of Georgetown University Law Center (J.D., 1983), The George Washington University (M.B.A., 1975), and Suffolk University (B.S., 1973). Prior to becoming associated with the Firm in 1986, Mr. Farina held positions as Deputy Auditor for Goldome Federal Savings Bank and Director, Internal Audit for Georgetown University and Medical Center. From 1975 to 1978, Mr. Farina was a Senior Auditor for a Big Eight accounting firm in Washington, D.C. He is licensed as a Certified Public Accountant in Virginia, New York and Pennsylvania and, in addition, is a Chartered Bank Auditor. Mr. Farina has served on the Editorial Advisory Board of the Journal of Accountancy and the Editorial Board of the Pennsylvania CPA Journal. He has served on numerous committees of state and national professional accounting organizations and been a frequent lecturer on accounting and audit matters. Mr. Farina has also been a member of the business school faculties at George Washington University and Georgetown University, teaching numerous courses at both undergraduate and graduate levels.

[*170] BARBARA M. FRIEND is admitted to practice before the Bar of the State of New York. She is a graduate of Brooklyn Law School (J.D., 1975) and Georgetown University (B.S. in Japanese, 1970). Before becoming associated with the Firm, Ms. Friend worked on a broad variety of legal matters, including acting as counsel to the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee in 1979-80 and Director of the U.S. Bobsled & Skelton Federation, 1984-85. She continues to be very active, as both an interpreter and legal advisor, in United States Olympic activities; State Committee Person, New York State Republican Committee; past Chairperson, Saranac Lake Republican Committee. Since she joined the Firm, Ms. Friend has worked on a number of securities class actions.

J. PAUL GIGNAC is an associate in the firm's Los Angeles office. Mr. Gignac is admitted to practice in the State of California and before the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit as well as the United States District Courts for the Northern, Central and Southern Districts of California. Mr. Gignac is a 1983 cum laude graduate of Dartmouth College where he majored in government and a 1986 graduate of the UCLA School of Law. [*171] While at UCLA, Mr. Gignac served as a judicial extern to the Honorable A. Wallace Tashima, United States District Court Judge for the Central District of California.

Prior to joining the firm, Mr. Gignac was an associate with a major Los Angeles law firm. As an associate there, Mr. Gignac was certified as a trial attorney project ("tap") attorney by the Los Angeles County Bar and prosecuted three felony trials as a deputy district attorney in Los Angeles Superior Court. Mr. Gignac is a member of the Los Angeles County Bar Association and the State Bar of California.

MICHAEL D. GOTTSCH is admitted to practice before the Supreme Courts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey and the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. He is a graduate of Temple University School of Law (J.D. 1983) and Marquette University (B.S. 1977). From 1986 to 1987 he served as a Law Clerk to the Honorable Joseph H. Rodriguez, Judge of the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.

PATRICK J. GRANNAN is an associate in the Firm's Los Angeles office. [*172] Mr. Grannan is admitted to practice in the state of California and before the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit and the United States District Courts for the Central, Northern and Southern Districts of California and the District of Arizona. Mr. Grannan is a 1981 graduate of Haverford College where, as a Magill-Rhoads Scholar, he majored in psychology. Mr. Grannan is a 1984 magna cum laude graduate of New York Law School, where he was a John Ben Snow Scholar and served as an Articles Editor of the New York Law School Law Review. Mr. Grannan is the author of "California ex rel. State Lands Commission v. United States - Riparian Rights - Competing State and Federal Claims to Coastal Accretions" appearing at 29 N.Y.L. Sch. L. Rev. 491. Prior to joining the Firm, Mr. Grannan was employed by a Los Angeles firm practicing in the area of civil RICO and securities fraud litigation. While at his prior firm, Mr. Grannan was counsel for petitioner in a successful petition for extraordinary writ clarifying the law in the State of California relating to the use of evidence related to one party consensual tape recordings in civil trials. Frio v. Superior Court, 203 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 250 Cal. Rptr. 819 (1988). [*173] Since joining Greenfield & Chimicles in 1989, Mr. Grannan has been actively involved in the prosecution of a number of class and derivative actions on behalf of investors and consumers, including acting as a member of the plaintiff trial team in In re American Continental Corporation/Lincoln Savings and Loan Securities Litigation, MDL 834, which resulted in a substantial verdict for plaintiffs and Almeida v. Peat Marwick, No. 668436-9, a class action pending in the Superior Court of Alameda, State of California, which resulted in an $ 8 million settlement with Peat Marwick believed to be among the first post-Bily settlements of a California state law claim with a major accounting firm.

TRUDY D. JOHNSON is an associate in the Firm's Los Angeles office, and is admitted to practice before all California State Courts and the United States District Courts for the Central, Northern and Southern Districts of California. Ms. Johnson is a 1986 graduate of Buena Vista College, Storm Lake, Iowa, where she majored in Business Management and graduated summa cum laude. Ms. Johnson received her law degree from the University of Iowa College of Law, where she was elected to the Order [*174] of the Coif. Prior to joining the Firm, Ms. Johnson practiced with a major Los Angeles firm in the areas of Environmental and General Commercial Litigation. Ms. Johnson is a member of the American Bar Association, the Los Angeles County Bar Association and the State Bar of California.

ANDREW H. KAYTON, is an associate in the Firm's West Palm Beach office. He is admitted to practice in the States of California and Florida, and for the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit as well as the United States District Courts for the Central District of California, Southern District of Florida and Middle District of Florida. Mr. Kayton received his bachelor's degree from Amherst College in 1983 and is a 1988 graduate of the Law School at the University of Chicago. From 1988 to 1989, he served as a law clerk to the Honorable Charles L. Levin of the Michigan Supreme Court. Prior to joining the Firm, Mr. Kayton was an associate at a downtown Los Angeles law firm, where he worked on a wide range of civil litigation matters, including securities fraud, civil RICO, construction, employment and general corporate litigation.

ROBERT J. KRINER, JR. is an associate in the Firm's Wilmington, [*175] Delaware office. He is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Delaware and the United States District Court for the District of Delaware. Mr. Kriner is a 1983 graduate of the University of Delaware with a degree in chemistry, and a 1988 graduate of the Delaware Law School of Widner University, where he was managing editor of The Delaware Journal of Corporate Law. From 1988 to 1989, Mr. Kriner served as law clerk to the Honorable James L. Latchum, Senior Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Delaware. Following his clerkship and until joining the Firm, Mr. Kriner was an associate with a major Wilmington, Delaware law firm, practicing in the areas of corporate and general litigation.

FREDRIC I. LAZARUS is admitted to practice in the States of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and before the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit and the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. He is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Law School (J.D. cum laude 1990) and Drexel University (B.S. 1987) (electrical engineering). Mr. Lazarus is [*176] a member of Tau Beta Pi (the National Engineering Honor Society) as well as several local, state and national bar associations. Prior to joining the Firm, Mr. Lazarus practiced with a major Philadelphia law firm concentrating in the areas of creditors' rights litigation and real estate law.

JORDAN L. LURIE received his law degree in 1987 from the University of Southern California Law Center where he was Notes Editor of the University of Southern California Law Review. He received his undergraduate degree from Yale University in 1984 (Cum Laude). Prior to joining the Firm, Mr. Lurie practiced with a major Los Angeles law firm and specialized in complex litigation. Mr. Lurie is the author of "Rx for Pharmacy Malpractice: California's New Duty to Consult," CEB Civil Litigation Reporter, December 1991; co-author of "Chapter 54 - Consent Judgment" and "Chapter 55 - Submitted Case" Civil Procedure Before Trial (1990) published by California Continuing Education of the Bar; and co-author of "Postponing a Municipal Court Election: The November Election Provision of Government Code Section 71180(b)," California Courts Commentary, November 1989. Mr. Lurie is a member of the [*177] Los Angeles County Bar Association, the American Bar Association and the State Bar of California and is admitted to practice before all California state courts and the United States District Court for the Central District of California.

CAROLYN D. MACK, an associate in the Firm's Wilmington, Delaware office, is admitted to practice before all of the courts located in the State of Delaware and before the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. She was graduated from the University of Maryland in College Park, Maryland in 1981, where she received a Bachelor of Arts degree cum laude in Government and Politics and was elected to the Phi Kappa Phi and Phi Beta Kappa national honor societies. In 1984, Ms. Mack was graduated from the National Law Center of George Washington University and received her Juris Doctor degree with honors. From 1984 to 1985, Ms. Mack served as judicial law clerk to Vice Chancellor Maurice A. Hartnett, III of the Delaware Court of Chancery. Since completion of her clerkship, she has engaged in significant shareholder litigation practice.

MARY KATHERINE MEERMANS graduated cum laude from the Law School of University of Pennsylvania in 1982. [*178] She served as a law clerk to the Honorable Paul M. Chalfin, Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas, from September 1982 to January 1984, and to the Honorable Phyllis W. Beck from January 1984 to October 1984. She is a member of the Pennsylvania Bar.

KATHLEEN E. MORAN is an associate in the Firm's Los Angeles office. She is admitted to practice before all California state courts and the United States District Court for the Central District of California. Ms. Moran is a 1983 graduate of the University of Southern California, where she majored in Business Administration and graduated magna cum laude. Prior to attending law school, Ms. Moran worked as a Senior Auditor at a Big Eight accounting firm in Los Angeles, California and is licensed as a Certified Public Accountant in California. In 1990, Ms. Moran received her law degree from the University of California at Davis, where she was elected to the Order of the Coif and served as the Business Editor of the U.C. Davis Law Review. Prior to joining the Firm, Ms. Moran practiced with a major Los Angeles law firm where she worked on venture capital and securities transactions as well as bankruptcy matters. Ms. Moran is a member of the State [*179] Bar of California.

DEBRA N. NATHANSON is admitted to practice in the states of Pennsylvania and Georgia. She is a 1988 graduate of the University of Pennsylvania School of Law and received a Bachelor of Arts Degree from Bryn Mawr College in 1984. Prior to becoming associated with the Firm in October 1989, Ms. Nathanson was an associate with the Atlanta office of a major Chicago law firm where she handled bankruptcy and commercial litigation matters.

TINA BAILER NIEVES is an associate in the Firm's Los Angeles office. Ms. Nieves is admitted to practice in the State of California and before the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit as well as the United States District Court for the Central District of California. Ms. Nieves is a 1983 graduate of the University of California Berkeley, where she majored in Rhetoric. Ms. Nieves is a 1987 graduate of the University of California, Davis School of Law. While at U.C. Davis, Ms. Nieves participated in the trial practice program and was an active member in Law Students for the Arts. Prior to joining the firm, Ms. Nieves was an associate with a major Los Angeles law firm, where she practiced in the areas of Civil RICO, Maritime, [*180] Insurance Coverage, and Contract Litigation.

MELANIE PIECH, an associate with the Firm's Los Angeles Office, is admitted to practice before all California State Courts, the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, and United States District Court for the Northern and Central Districts of California. Ms. Piech was graduated magna cum laude with a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Political Science from Loyola Marymount of Los Angeles in 1986. She received her law degree from Hastings College of the Law in San Francisco in 1989, having attended Vermont Law School for one semester. Prior to joining the Firm, she practiced with a major Los Angeles firm in the areas of Maritime, Employment and Insurance Litigation. Ms. Piech is a member of the American Bar Association and the State Bar of California.

ROBIN RESNICK is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Ms. Resnick is a 1986 cum laude graduate of the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania where she was elected to the Order of the Coif and a 1983 summa cum laude graduate of the College of Arts and Sciences of the University of Pennsylvania. She served as a law clerk to the Honorable Frank [*181] A. Kaufman, Senior Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Maryland. Ms. Resnick is also affiliated with the Disabilities Law Project, a non-profit law firm in Philadelphia.

CHRISTOPHER T. REYNA graduated from the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania in June, 1986. Mr. Reyna received his Bachelor's Degree from Harvard University in 1983. He is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the United States Courts of Appeals for the Third and Ninth Circuits and the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

IRA NEIL RICHARDS is admitted to practice in the states of New York and Pennsylvania and in the United States District Courts for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and the Southern District of New York, as well as the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. He is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania School of Law (J.D. magna cum laude, 1986) where he served as special Project Director of the University of Pennsylvania Law Review. He was elected to the Order of the Coif and received the Philadelphia Trial Lawyers Association Award and the Wapner, Newman & Associates Award, both for trial advocacy. He is a 1983 graduate [*182] of Cornell University, where he received a B.S. in industrial and labor relations. Prior to joining the Firm, he practiced with a major Philadelphia law firm concentrating in complex civil litigation.

MARK C. RIFKIN is admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the Supreme Court of New Jersey, the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, and the United States District Courts for the Eastern and Western Districts of Pennsylvania and the District of New Jersey. Mr. Rifkin received his A.B. degree from Princeton University, where he was awarded the Roper Trophy for academic excellence and athletic proficiency. He received his J.D. degree from the Villanova University School of Law, where he was a contributor to Packel and Poulin, Pennsylvania Evidence (1987). Prior to joining the Firm, Mr. Rifkin was associated with a major Philadelphia law firm, practicing complex commercial litigation. Since joining the firm, Mr. Rifkin has been actively involved in the prosecution of several class and derivative actions, including In re FPL Group Consolidated Litigation, C.A. No. 90-8461 (S.D. Fla.), and In re Midlantic Corp. [*183] Shareholder

Litigation, C.A. No. 90-1275 (D.N.J.). Recently, he was one of plaintiff's trial counsel in Upp v. Mellon Bank, N.A., C.A. No. 91-5229 (E.D.Pa.), where the class was awarded more than $ 60 million in damages. Mr. Rifkin has represented clients in a wide variety of litigation involving financing, real estate, and business matters. He has also represented clients in disciplinary and administrative proceedings. Mr. Rifkin is a member of the American, Pennsylvania, and Philadelphia Bar Associations and the Association of Trial Lawyers of America.

MILES B. RITTMMASTER is admitted to practice in Pennsylvania, the District of Columbia, the United States District Courts for the Eastern and Western Districts of Pennsylvania, and the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. Mr. Rittmaster is a 1980 graduate of Yale Law School and a 1977 summa cum laude graduate of the University of Missouri in Columbia, Missouri, where he was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa honor society. Prior to joining the Firm in January 1990, Mr. Rittmaster was associated with a major Philadelphia law firm where he concentrated in antitrust and commercial litigation. From 1980 to 1983, [*184] Mr. Rittmaster was a Trial Attorney in the Honors Program of the Antitrust Division, United States Department of Justice in Washington, D.C., where he specialized in civil, criminal and regulatory matters involving transportation companies.

STEVEN A. SCHWARTZ is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, and the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. He is a graduate of the Duke University School of Law (J.D. 1987) where he served as senior editor of Law & Contemporary Problems. He is a 1984 cum laude graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, where he received a B.A. in political science. Prior to joining the Firm, he practiced with a major Philadelphia firm concentrating in complex civil litigation.

DENISE DAVIS SCHWARTZMAN is admitted to practice in Pennsylvania, Florida, Texas and the District of Columbia. She is admitted to practice before all the State Courts in these jurisdictions and is admitted to the United States Courts of Appeals for the Third, Fifth, Eleventh and District of Columbia Circuits as well as United States District Courts within each Circuit. [*185] Ms. Schwartzman is a graduate of the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania (L.L.B. 1969) and Temple University (A.B. 1966). She holds a Master of Laws in Taxation from the Villanova University Law School. Ms. Schwartzman has practiced extensively at the trial and appellate levels before Federal and State Courts and before various administrative agencies. Ms. Schwartzman was appellate counsel on the brief in In re Charter Company, 876 F.2d 866 (11th Cir. 1989), a case which established that class proofs of claim are allowable in bankruptcy proceedings. Prior to relocating in Philadelphia, she was associated with a major law firm in San Antonio, Texas.

JONATHAN SHUB is admitted to practice in Pennsylvania and in the District of Columbia. He is a 1983 graduate of The American University with a degree in public communications, and a 1988 graduate of the Delaware Law School of Widener University (cum laude), where he was an articles editor of The Delaware Journal of Corporate Law. Mr. Shub served as a law clerk to the Honorable Joseph T. Walsh of the Supreme Court of Delaware while a student at Widener University. Prior to joining the Firm, he practiced [*186] in the Washington, D.C. office of a major New York law firm concentrating in civil litigation.

JEFFREY T. SPANGLER is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the United States District Courts for the Middle and Eastern Districts of Pennsylvania and the Third Circuit Court of Appeals. Mr. Spangler is a 1973 graduate of Lehigh University (B.A. in Biology) and a 1978 graduate of The Dickinson School of Law. Mr. Spangler has served as a Prosecuting Attorney for Pennsylvania's Medical Board and as a law clerk for The Honorable William W. Lipsitt of the Dauphin County Court of Common Pleas in Harrisburg. He is a member of the Philadelphia Bar Association.

J. DAVID STONER is admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, the United States District Courts for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and the District of New Jersey. He is also admitted to practice in the state courts of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Indiana. Mr. Stoner is a graduate of Harvard College (A.B. 1951, cum laude) and of Harvard Law School (J.D. 1955, cum laude), where he was a member of the Board of Student Advisers and an oralist on the [*187] moot court team that won the Harvard Moot Court Competition. After three years as an associate at a major Philadelphia law firm and three years teaching at Rutgers Law School, Camden, New Jersey, he worked in the Legal Adviser's Office in the United States Department of State, first serving the Bureau of Economic Affairs and then as Assistant Legal Adviser for Administration. He has also worked as an attorney in the Philadelphia poverty law program and in the legal departments of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, a Philadelphia bank holding company, the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania and AT&T. While at AT&T he participated in the antitrust defense of AT&T in United States v. AT&T, 552 F. Supp. 131 (D.D.C. 1982), aff'd, 460 U.S. 1001, 75 L. Ed. 2d 472, 103 S. Ct. 1240 (1983) (settled after trial); Southern Pacific Communications Company v. AT&T, 556 F. Supp. 825 (D.D.C. 1982) (as amended Jan. 10, 1983), aff'd, 238 U.S. App. D.C. 309, 740 F.2d 980 (D.C. Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1005, 84 L. Ed. 2d 380, 105 S. Ct. 1359 (1985); and 567 F. Supp. 326 (D.D.C. 1983), aff'd, 238 U.S. App. D.C. 340, 740 F.2d 1011 (D.C. Cir. 1984); [*188] and in the multidistrict In re Long Distance Telephone Service Antitrust Litigation, MDL No. 550 S.W. (N.D. Cal.).

JAMES C. STRUM, an associate in the Firm's Wilmington, Delaware office, is admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Delaware, the United States District Court for the District of Delaware, and the Third Circuit Court of Appeals. Mr. Strum is a 1982 graduate of Brown University and a 1986 graduate of Marshall-Wythe School of Law, the College of William and Mary. Prior to joining the Firm in November 1990, Mr. Strum practiced for four years in a major Wilmington, Delaware law firm in the area of corporate litigation, primarily in mergers and acquisitions.

JOHN N. ZARIAN is an associate in the Firm's Los Angeles Office. Mr. Zarian is admitted to practice in the State of California and in all of the United States District Courts located in California, as well as in the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Mr. Zarian is also admitted to practice in the District of Columbia. Mr. Zarian is a 1989 graduate of the University of Southern California Law Center, where he was a member of the Southern California Law Review. While at USC, Mr. Zarian participated [*189] in numerous moot court competitions and was elected Class President. Mr. Zarian is also a graduate of the University of Utah, from which he received a bachelor's degree in Political Science (1984) and a master's degree in Finance (1989). While at Utah, Mr. Zarian was active in a number of civic and fraternal organizations, and was elected Student Body President in 1982. Prior to joining the Firm, Mr. Zarian was an associate in the Los Angeles office of a major New York City law firm. Mr. Zarian currently serves as a member of the Legion Lex Board of Directors and as president emeritus of the University of Utah Alumni Association, Los Angeles Chapter. Mr. Zarian is a member of the State Bar of California and the District of Columbia Bar.

WENDY H. ZOBERMAN is an associate in the Firm's West Palm Beach, Florida office. She is admitted to practice before the United States District Court for the Middle and Southern Districts of Florida, as well as all Florida State Courts. Ms. Zoberman is a 1981 graduate of Wellesley College, where she was a Durant Scholar, and was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa Society. She received her law degree from Columbia University in 1984. At Columbia she served [*190] as an Articles Editor of the Columbia University-Volunteer Lawyers for the Arts Journal of Art and the Law, and is a co-author of "An Introduction to the New York Artists' Authorship Rights Act," appearing at Vol. 8, No. 3 Columbia - VLA Journal of Art and the Law 369.

KATHLEEN P. BALON, ASA, the Firm's Financial Specialist, is a graduate of Drexel University (B.S. Finance 1983) and Villanova University (Master of Taxation 1992). Ms. Balon is a Senior Member of the American Society of Appraisers. Prior to joining the Firm, Ms. Balon was a Vice President of the investment bank, Howard, Lawson & Co., where she had responsibility for a broad range of corporate finance assignments. Ms. Balon has co-authored several articles, including "Giving the Company Away (While Keeping the Benefits)," Lawyer's Digest, March 1987 and "Leveraged ESOPs - Buyers of Companies," Lawyer's Digest, May 1988. Ms. Balon has also served as a panelist at various seminars and conventions regarding financing and valuation issues.

Exhibit "D"

BURT & PUCILLO

Time Chart

TIMEKEEPER	*	HOU RS	HOURLY RATE	TOTAL LODESTAR
Michael J. Pucillo	P	3.25	325.00	1,056.25
Janis D. Herzig	PL	3.00	75.00	225.00
TOTALS		6.25		1,281.25

[*191] * Idicates: P=Parnter; A=Associate; and PL=Paralegal

Exhibit "E"

CHIMICLES BURT & JACOBSEN

Time Chart

TIMEKEEPER	*	HOU RS	HOURLY RATE	TOTAL LODESTAR
Michael J. Pucillo	P	2.25	325.00	731.25
Wendy H. Zoberman	P	18.00	225.00	4,050.00
Judith L. Putnam	PL		75.00	56.25
		0.75
TOTALS		21.00		4,837.50

* Idicates: P=Parnter; A=Associate; and PL=Paralegal

Exhibit "F"

GREENFIELD & CHIMICLES

Time Chart

TIMEKEEPER	*	HOUR S	HOURLY RATE	TOTAL LODESTAR
Michael J. Pucillo	P	31.50	325.00	10,237.50
Carol M. Brewer	A	119.00	215.00	25,585.00
C. Oliver Burt	P	1.25	400.00	500.00
Nicholas Chimicles	P	0.50	400.00	200.00
Richard Greenfield	P	1.00	450.00	450.00
Wendy H. Zoberman	A	21.75	225.00	4,893.75

TIMEKEEPER	*	HOUR S	HOURLY RATE	TOTAL LODESTAR
Dawn M. Mehler	PL	24.25	75.00	1,818.75
Judy L. Putnam	PL	1.50	75.00	112.50
TOTALS		200.75		43,797.50

* Indicates: P=Partner; A=Associate; and PL=Paralegal

Exhibit "G"

BURT & PUCILLO

Expense Chart

EXPENSE	AMOUNT
Federal Express	14.00
Telephone	7.62
Photocopying - Firm	22.50
TOTAL	44.12

Exhibit "H"

[*192] CHIMICLES, BURT & JACOBSEN

Expense Chart

EXPENSE	AMOUNT
Federal Express	12.72
Telephone/Telecopy	109.86
Photocopying - Firm	95.00
Photocopying - Outside	47.82
Travel, Food, Lodg.	1,222.81
TOTAL	1,488.21

Exhibit "I"

GREENFIELD & CHIMICLES

Expense Chart

EXPENSE	AMOUNT
Telephone/Telecopy	704.32
Photocopying - Firm	312.50
Photocopying - Outside	386.50
Clerical Overtime	120.00
Filing Fees	360.00
Lexis/Comp. Research	316.20
Messenger/Courier	140.10
Postage/Express Mail	8.20
Subpoena Witness Fee	36.00
Subpoena Service	60.00
Travel, Food, Lodg.	5.60
TOTAL	2,449.42

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT MIDDLE DISTRICT OF FLORIDA

TAMPA DIVISION

SUSAN STERN, Plaintiff,

vs.

JEAN-FRANCOIS ROSSIGNOL, MARC AYERS, and BELMAC CORP., Defendants.

Case No. 92-1823-Civ-T-21(B)

AFFIDAVIT OF CHRIS S. COUTROULIS IN SUPPORT OF JOINT PETITION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES AND REIMBURSEMENT OF EXPENSES FILED ON BEHALF OF BERGER & MONTAGUE, P.C.

STATE OF FLORIDA

COUNTY OF HILLSBOROUGH:

I, CHRIS S. COUTROULIS, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

1. I am a shareholder of the law firm of [*193] Carlton, Fields, Ward, Emmanuel, Smith & Cutler, P.A. I am submitting this Affidavit in support of Goodkind, Labaton, Rudoff & Schochet's application for an award of attorneys' fees in connection with services rendered to the Plaintiff class and the reimbursement of that firm for fees paid to my firm for expenses incurred by my firm in the course of this litigation.

2. This firm, as special local counsel of record for Plaintiff, Susan Stern, provided limited assistance in the prosecution of this action in cooperation with other plaintiffs' counsel. Specifically, we agreed to act as local counsel in this matter to shepherd the initial filing and service of this suit in Federal Court in Tampa.

3. The chart attached hereto as Exhibit A presents a detailed summary indicating the time expended by the attorneys and paralegals of this firm on the litigation, at applicable rates. The chart includes the name of the attorneys who worked on the case, the hourly billing rates and number of hours expended by the attorneys and paralegals on this matter. The chart was prepared from contemporaneous daily time records maintained by my firm. The hourly rates for the attorneys and paralegals in my [*194] firm are the regular rates charged for their services in similar litigation such as this one. In my opinion, the rates charged by the various attorneys and the paralegals in my firm are reasonable. Time expended in preparing this Affidavit in support of my firm's application for fees and reimbursement of expenses has not been included in this request.

4. The total number of hours expended on this litigation by my firm is 13.6 hours. The total bill for my firm is 2295.62, consisting of $ 1,963.00 for attorneys' time and $ 48.00 for paralegals' time.

5. With respect to the standing of counsel in this case, attached hereto as Exhibit B is a brief biography of my firm and the attorneys of my firm who worked on this litigation.

6. My firm expended a total of $ 284.62 in expenses in connection with the prosecution of this litigation broken down as follows:

Disbursements	Amount
Service of Process -- Rossignol and Ayers Summons	$ 24.00
Service of Process -- Robert McKee Summons	$ 18.00
Messenger Services	$ 8.33
Secretary Overtime	$ 18.00
Copies	$ 15.50
Postage	$ 7.84
Telephone Charges	$ 8.95
Telecopy Charges	$ 64.00
Complaint Filing Fee	$ 120.00
TOTAL	$ 284.62

[*195] 7. The expenses incurred pertaining to this case are reflected on the books and records of my firm. These books and records are prepared from expense vouchers, check records and other source material and are an accurate recordation of the expenses incurred.

CHRIS S. COUTROULIS

STATE OF FLORIDA

COUNTY OF HILLSBOROUGH

The foregoing instrument was acknowledged before me this 25TH day of February, 1994, by CHRIS S. COUTROULIS, who is personally known to me or has produced as identification.

My Commission Expires

Yvonne M. Putzek

Notary Public (Signature)

Yvonne M. Putzek

(Printed Name)

(Serial Number, if any)

SUSAN STERN V. BELMAC

Firm: CARLTON, FIELDS, WARD, EMMANUEL, SMITH & CUTLER, P.A.

ATTORNEY	HOURLY RATE	TOTAL HOURS	TIME VALUE
M.S. Scriven (A)	$ 135.00	7.2	$ 972.00
N.J. Faggianelli (P)	$ 170.00	4.4	$ 748.00
M.V. McKay (P)	$ 195.00	.4	$ 78.00
A.B. Livingston (P)	$ 215.00	.4	$ 86.00
C.S. Coutroulis (P)	$ 197.50	.4	$ 79.00
TOTAL ATTORNEYS:		12.8	$ 1,963.00

(P) = Partner, (A) = Associate

PARALEGAL	HOURLY RATE	TOTAL HOURS	TIME VALUE
D. Dickey	$ 60.00	.8	$ 48.00
FIRM TOTAL:		13.6	$ 2,011.00

[*196] EXHIBIT A

FIRM PROFILE

CARLTON, FIELDS, WARD, EMMANUEL, SMITH & CUTLER, P.A.

INTRODUCTION

Carlton, Fields, Ward, Emmanuel, Smith & Cutler, P.A. was established in 1901 and is one of Florida's oldest and largest law firms. Since our inception, the firm has grown to 160 lawyers with a nationwide practice featuring offices in Tampa, Orlando, Tallahassee, Pensacola, West Palm Beach, and St. Petersburg.

The firm has an extensive client base of national and local corporations, state and local public bodies as well as individuals. Our practice encompasses all aspects of civil law in local, state, national and international jurisdictions.

SERVICES

Carlton, Fields' practice includes all the fields traditionally provided by large general civil practice firms. The firm also maintains specific areas of practice, including: Admiralty, Antitrust, Banking, Business and Real Estate Financing, Business Transactions, Construction, Employment Law, Environmental and Land Use Planning, General Litigation and Dispute Resolution, Governmental Representation, Health Care, Insolvency and Creditors Rights, International Trade and Transactions, Real Property, Taxation, Transactions, Workouts [*197] and Reorganizations.

EXHIBIT B

When the services of more than one practice area are required by a client, one designated attorney coordinates and supervises these activities. The attorney is aware of the capabilities of each area as well as his client's particular needs. Depending upon the client's individual requirements, we have the flexibility to work individually or in teams. This approach enables us to address clients' needs in the most timely, efficient manner while giving the most attention to quality.

LAWYERS

Our lawyers share outstanding academic backgrounds and the sincere desire to improve the communities in which they practice law. The firm's approach to superior client service has attracted people of the highest caliber to our team.

In addition, firm attorneys have served in positions of responsibility in federal and state governments, as well as civic, community and bar leadership positions. Carlton, Fields lawyers proudly participate in work for a variety of pro bono projects.

PHILOSOPHY

The attorneys of Carlton Fields devote their professional energies not only to solving clients' problems but to anticipating them. We continually develop the creative [*198] solutions required to turn present circumstances to future advantage. Our focus is long term, going beyond the matter at hand to emerging trends and opportunities that may affect our clients for many years to come.

We practice preventative law that helps our clients avoid problems before they arise. We not only seek to be an adviser, counsellor, and advocate for our clients, but also a team member dedicated to achieving mutual goals. Whether providing counsel to an individual or putting together an international corporate transaction, our attorneys have one overall goal: to get results for our clients by providing the best possible job in terms of quality work, timely service and sensitivity to cost.

CARLTON FIELDS ATTORNEY BIOGRAPHY

Mary S. Scriven

Mary S. Scriven (Tampa) graduated cum laude from Duke University in 1984 with an A.B. degree in Political Science. She was on the Dean's List and received the President's Leadership Award. In 1987, she graduated with high honors from the Florida State University College of Law where she was a member of the Moot Court and a recipient of the William Blank-David Miller Scholarship. She was also the First Annual Student Graduation [*199] Speaker.

Ms. Scriven joined Carlton, Fields, Ward, Emmanuel, Smith & Cutler, P.A. in 1987. Her practice has been focused on the areas of failed banking, fidelity bond litigation, title insurance litigation, general corporate, antitrust, local government, and civil forfeiture. She has had experience working with the FDIC/RTC and has developed a thorough working knowledge of applicable provisions of the FDIC Act as amended by FIRREA. She has prosecuted a major accountant's malpractice case for FDIC and is familiar with relevant statutory and applicable common law principles. She has also been a lead team member in the prosecution of directors and officers and attorney malpractice actions for FDIC and RTC arising from the failure of Florida Centre Bank, Park Bank of Florida and Nile Valley Savings & Loan. In addition, she has garnered substantial knowledge in insurance coverage issues.

She has also done extensive research in defending 1983 allegations against local government bodies. She has successfully defended against a civil forfeiture action brought by the U.S. Attorney against a bank holding security interest in property seized in connection with a narcotics prosecution. Ms. Scriven [200] has litigated in Federal Court and has an extensive familiarity with Federal Discovery Practice as it relates to both non-parties and parties and with major document discovery.

In addition to practicing law, Ms. Scriven is active in community and professional organizations. She is on the Board of Directors, Executive Committee and the Law Student Assistance Committee of The Florida Bar Foundation, the Board of the Tampa Bay Regional Planning Council. She is President-Elect of the Hillsborough Association for Women Lawyers; a member of the Florida Association for Women Lawyers; secretary of the George Edgecomb Bar Association; a member of the American Bar Association; The Florida Bar; and the Hillsborough County Bar Association, Inc.; a member of The Athena Society and a member of the Junior League of Tampa and the First Baptist Church of West Tampa. Ms. Scriven is married to Lansing C. Scriven and has three children: Tyler, age 11, Jessica, age 3, and Sarah, age 1.

Ms. Scriven is admitted to practice in state of Florida and the United States District Court for the Middle District of Florida.

Nancy J. Faggianelli

Nancy J. Faggianelli (Tampa) graduated in 1976 from the [201] University of Florida with a bachelor of arts degree in History and Education. In 1982, she received her juris doctor degree with honors from the University of Florida where she was member of the Order of the Coif and was student works editor for the University of Florida Law Review.

Ms. Faggianelli joined Carlton, Fields, Ward, Emmanuel, Smith & Cutler, P.A. in 1982. She practices in the area of general corporate litigation with an emphasis in business torts, civil theft, fraud, and interference with contract. She has also had experience in cases involving securities fraud and accountant's liability.

Ms. Faggianelli is also active in community and professional organizations. Her community activities include being on the Board of Trustees of the Leukemia Society and volunteering for Metropolitan Ministries. She is also a member of The Florida Bar.

She is admitted to practice in Florida.

Malcolm V. McKay

Malcolm V. McKay (Tampa) graduated from Duke University with an A.B. degree in History in 1963. After four years of service in the United States Air Force, he attended Columbia University Law School. In 1970 he received his juris doctor degree, graduating cum laude, [202] with honors.

Prior to joining Carlton, Fields, Ward, Emmanuel, Smith & Cutler, P.A. in 1989, Mr. McKay clerked for a United States Circuit Judge in the United States Court of Appeals, Fifth Circuit. Mr. McKay practices in the areas of general commercial litigation and commercial real estate transactions. He has extensive experience in both areas. His litigation experience includes: major involvement in environmental matters, claims arising under both state and federal securities laws, and employment matters concerning mostly employment contracts and covenants not to compete. His commercial real estate practice includes: the representation of both developers and lending institutions. He also has broad experience in eminent domain litigation and in the representation of shopping center owners and managers.

In the environmental area of his commercial litigation practice, Mr. McKay has developed an expertise in the prosecution and defense of claims arising under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (CERCLA). He is also experienced in handling environmental claims under Florida state law. In the securities area of his commercial litigation practice, [*203] he has handled a variety of securities law matters in federal and state courts as well as in front of the New York Stock Exchange and the NASD.

Mr. McKay's commercial real estate practice is also quite broad. He has many years of experience representing developers, syndicators, condominium builders, and office park developers. He has also represented financial institutions, both banks and insurance companies, in complex real estate financing transactions. Mr. McKay has appeared frequently before city and county governmental agencies in connection with land use and zoning matters.

In addition to practicing law, Mr. McKay dedicates his time to the community. He volunteers at the public schools and for the Chi Chi Rodriguez Youth Foundation, a Clearwater, Florida organization that aids disadvantaged youths.

Mr. McKay is also a member of the American Bar Association, The Florida Bar, and the Hillsborough County Bar Association, Inc. He is admitted to practice in the United States District Court for the Middle District of Florida, the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals, and in all Florida State Courts.

A. Broaddus Livingston

A. Broaddus Livingston (Tampa) graduated from Vanderbilt [*204] University in 1952 with a bachelor of arts degree. In 1955, he graduated from the University of Florida College of Law with an LL.B. He converted his degree to a juris doctor in 1967.

Mr. Livingston joined Carlton, Fields, Ward, Emmanuel, Smith & Cutler, P.A. in 1955. He has engaged in civil trial practice in state and federal courts throughout Florida. His trial practice has been broad, and has included, in part, the following areas: contracts, product liability, professional negligence, environment, defamation, discrimination, eminent domain, and selected insurance fields. He has tried jury cases in every metropolitan area in Florida in addition to many small communities. He has also tried non-jury cases of almost every type.

In the product liability field, Mr. Livingston has represented a variety of clients including a number of pharmaceutical companies, soft drink companies, brewing companies, and cigarette manufacturers. His work in the professional negligence field has involved such clients as law firms, doctors, clinical laboratories, hospitals, and accountants. He has extensive experience in the medical malpractice field primarily representing claims against hospitals. In [*205] the area of attorney malpractice, he has defended many cases and is often called as an expert witness on the standard of care for attorney conduct.

While representing major oil companies, he has defended cases arising from claims concerning torts, mineral rights, the environment, and eminent domain. He has also been involved in cigarette litigation.

In addition to practicing law, Mr. Livingston, a fifth generation Floridian, is an active and respected member of his community.

Mr. Livingston is also a devoted member of many professional organizations. In 1979, he was elected to fellowship in the American College of Trial Lawyers and in 1972 to membership in the Federation of Insurance and Corporate Counsel. He is also a past president of the Florida Defense Lawyers Association and a former chairman of the Trial Lawyers Section of The Florida Bar. In addition, the Trial Lawyers Section of The Hillsborough County Bar Association, Inc. honored him in 1988 with the Herbert G. Goldburg Memorial Award for his demonstration of legal acumen, fairness, integrity, courtesy, respect for fellow lawyers, and his devotion to the legal system.

Mr. Livingston is a member of the Hillsborough County [*206] Bar Association, Inc., The Florida Bar, and the American Bar Association. He is admitted to practice in the United States District Courts of Florida, and the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals.

Chris S. Coutroulis

Chris S. Coutroulis (Tampa) graduated magna cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa with a bachelor of arts degree in Economics from Wesleyan University in 1975. While at Wesleyan, he was twice awarded the University's White Prize for Proficiency in Economics. In 1979, he earned his juris doctor degree from Columbia University where he was named a Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar and then a James Kent Scholar for highest academic distinction. Prior to entering Columbia, he worked for a year as a research economist with National Economic Research Associates, New York, New York.

Mr. Coutroulis joined Carlton, Fields, Ward, Emmanuel, Smith & Cutler, P.A. in 1980, and currently is the co-chairman of the firm's Business Litigation and Trade Regulation Department in Tampa. Prior to joining the firm, he was an associate at Milbank, Tweed, Hadley, & McCloy (New York). His areas of practice currently include: antitrust litigation and counseling, accountants and professional malpractice [*207] litigation on behalf of federal regulatory agencies stemming from the failure of financial institutions, and general business disputes. He has had significant involvement in arbitration and alternative dispute resolution, as well as jury and bench trials.

In the antitrust context, Mr. Coutroulis is experienced in litigation involving horizontal and vertical restraints of trade, monopolization, price discrimination, federal state investigations, and antitrust counseling. Some of the industries in which he has experience include fast food, credit cards, replacement batteries, advertising, sports telecasting, professional bridge, electric utilities, maritime, and petroleum. He has represented both plaintiffs and defendants at the trial and appellate levels in both federal and state courts.

In the accountants malpractice area, Mr. Coutroulis has worked extensively on litigation brought on behalf of public entity investors in the failed firm, ESM Government Securities, against their former auditors. In the failed financial arena, Mr. Coutroulis' work has involved litigation against financial institutions' former auditors, consultants, directors, and officers.

Mr. Coutroulis is also an [*208] active member of the Antitrust Section of the American Bar Association and a member of the American Bar Foundation. He has lectured, served on faculty panels, and written on various aspects of antitrust law. He is the co-author of the ABA Antitrust Section's Treble Damage Monograph, the author of articles entitled "The Increasingly Pivotal Competitive Injury Requirement in Secondary Line Cases Under the Robinson-Patman Act: Relevant Factors in Today's Environment," 57 Antitrust L.J. 935 (1989), "Developments in Robinson-Patman Law," 58 Antitrust L.J. 443 (1989), and "Collaboration Prompted by Competitive Concerns," 61 Antitrust L.J. 391 (1993), and a contributing writer to Antitrust Law Developments (Third).

Mr. Coutroulis is a member of the American Bar Association, The Florida Bar, and the Hillsborough County Bar. Mr. Coutroulis is admitted to practice in the United States Supreme Court, the United States District Courts for the Middle and Southern Districts of Florida, the Eighth and Eleventh Circuits Courts of Appeal, and all the state courts of Florida.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT MIDDLE DIVISION OF FLORIDA

TAMPA DIVISION

[*209] FOGEL, et al., Plaintiffs,

- v. -

BELMAC CORPORATION, et al., Defendant.

Case No. 92-1814-Civ-T-23C

AFFIDAVIT OF IRA A. SCHOCHET IN SUPPORT OF JOINT PETITION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES AND REIMBURSEMENT OF EXPENSES FILED ON BEHALF OF GOODKIND LABATON RUDOFF & SUCHAROW

STATE OF NEW YORK

COUNTY OF NEW YORK

ss.

I, IRA A. SCHOCHET, being duly sworn, depose and say:

I am a member of the law firm of Goodkind Labaton Rudoff & Sucharow ("GLRS").

1. I am submitting this Affidavit in support of my firm's application for an award of attorneys' fees in connection with services rendered to the Plaintiff class and the reimbursement of expenses incurred by my firm in the course of this litigation.

2. This firm, as counsel of record for Plaintiff Hal Fogel, commenced an action in this Court. Thereafter, we participated in the prosecution of this action as co-lead counsel in cooperation with other Plaintiffs' counsel. The work performed by GLRS included factual investigation into Mr. Fogel's claims, drafting and serving a complaint and request for documents on behalf of Mr. Fogel; conferences with source and attending a meeting of securities analysts regarding Belmac; drafting pre-trial order; [*210] participating in drafting the amended complaint, drafting class certification brief, analysis of damage calculation, negotiation of settlement, participating in drafting of memorandum of understanding and settlement papers, reviewing and analyzing documents produced by defendants, and taking deposition of defendant Rossignol.

3. The chart attached hereto as Exhibit A presents a detailed summary indicating the time expended by the attorneys and paralegals of this firm on the litigation, at current rates. The chart includes the name of the attorneys who worked on the case, the hourly billing rates and number of hours expended by the attorneys and paralegals on this matter. The chart was prepared from contemporaneous daily time records maintained by my firm. The hourly rates for the attorneys and paralegals in my firm are the regular rates charged for their services in similar litigation such as this one. In my opinion, the rates charged by the various attorneys and the paralegals in my firm are reasonable. Time expended in preparing this Affidavit in support of my firm's application for fees and reimbursement of expenses has not been included in this request.

4. The total number of [*211] hours expended on this litigation by my firm is 386.8 hours. The total lodestar for my firm is $ 99,255.50, consisting of $ 88,952.50 for attorneys' time and $ 10,303.00 for paralegals' time.

5. With respect to the standing of counsel in this case, attached hereto as Exhibit B is a brief biography of my firm and the attorneys of my firm who worked on this litigation.

6. My firm expended a total of $ 37,111.71 in unreimbursed expenses in connection with the prosecution of this litigation broken down as follows:

Description
Duplicating	$ 480.40
Fax/Telephone	223.88
Word Processing	969.65
Dow Jones	1,844.36
Service of Process	20.00
Disclosure	712.81

Description
Meals/Carfare/Local Taxis	228.55
Messengers	143.50
Federal Express/AirBorne Express	163.70
Lexis/Westlaw	408.70
Expert Fee	31,045.26
Court Reporter Fee	870.90
 TOTAL	 $ 37,111.71

7. The expenses incurred pertaining to this case are reflected on the books and records of my firm. These books and records are prepared from expense vouchers, check records and other source material and are an accurate recordation of the expenses [212] incurred.

IRA A. SCHOCHET

SWORN TO AND SUBSCRIBED before me this 25th day of February 1994

-Notary Public

RANDY S.A. RAZACK

Notary Public, State of New York

No. 41-4928750

Qualified in Queens County

Commission Expires April 25, 1994

EXHIBIT A

FOGEL, ET AL. V. BELMAC CORP. ET AL.

Firm - GOODKIND LABATON RUDOFF & SUCHAROW

ATTORNEY		HOURLY	TOTAL
		RATE	HOUSRS	LODESTAR
Labaton, E.	(P)	$ 440.00	2.0	$ 880.00
Sucharow, L.	(P)	410.00	30.1	12,341.00
Plasse, J.	(P)	385.00	1.1	423.50
Brachtl, H.	(P)	375.00	14.6	5,475.00
Schochet, I.	(P)	320.00	177.9	56,928.00
Chittur, K.	(A)	265.00	2.0	530.00
Komlossy, E.	(A)	250.00	40.0	10,000.00
Khaghan, M.	(A)	210.00	2.0	420.00
Baum, J.	(A)	170.00	11.5	1,955.00
 *2*TOTAL ATTORNEYS		281.2	$ 88.95 2.50

(P) Partner (A) Associate

PARALEGAL

Pariselli, A.	125.00	8.4	$ 1,050.00
Goldberg, H.	100.00	1.2	120.00
Guilio, L.	100.00	2.6	260.00
Razack, R.	95.00	93.4	8,873.00
 TOTAL PARALEGALS:		105.6	10,303.00
 FIRM TOTAL:		386.8	$ 99,255.50

EXHIBIT BRESUME OF GOODKIND LABATON RUDOFF & SUCHAROW

Goodkind [*213] Labaton Rudoff & Sucharow ("GLR&S") is a firm consisting of 36 lawyers and 8 paralegals located in New York, New York. Formed in 1963, the firm is now in its thirty-first year of practice. Since its inception GLR&S has been engaged in major complex litigation throughout the country. GLR&S has successfully prosecuted and is presently actively prosecuting representative actions (principally class and derivative actions in the securities area) -- usually as lead counsel or member of the Executive Committee -- in such major matters as litigation involving Dun & Bradstreet Corporation, General Motors Corporation, PepsiCo, Sambos's, NYC Housing Development Corporation, Equity Funding Corporation of America, Boeing Company, International Telephone & Telegraph Corporation, LTV Corporation, Financial Corporation of America, Petro-Lewis Corporation, Time Warner, Inc., Square D Corporation and Revlon Inc., among many others.

Numerous courts have had occasion to comment upon the expertise and experience of the firm. Among these is the decision of Judge Lasker in Rosengarten v. International Telephone & Telegraph Corp., summarized at [1981 Transfer Binder] 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11047, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P97,876 (S.D.N.Y. 1981). [*214] In the full text of his opinion, Judge Lasker says, with respect to the firm, "Counsel are attorneys of experience and of good repute in the fields of stockholder actions . . ." and "they served the corporation and its stockholders with professional competence as well as admirable diligence, imagination and tenacity". Another such decision is by Judge Haight in Greene v. Emersons Ltd., 86 F.R.D. 47, 62 (S.D.N.Y. 1981) (wherein the court had occasion to characterize the firm as "effective, vigorous and experienced in the field . . ."). In his order in 1987 approving the settlement of a class action brought against Gambio AB (Abbey v. Gambio AB, 85 Civ. 1717(EW) (S.D.N.Y. 1987) the "Gambio action"), the late Judge Edward Weinfeld of the Southern District of New York commented favorably on the high quality of the work performed by GLR&S.

Similarly, in approving a settlement, which was arrived at after seven weeks of trial before a jury and resulted in a recovery of $ 7 million on behalf of purchasers of stock of Sambo's Restaurants, Inc., Judge Whitman Knapp of the Southern District of New York characterized the work of GLR&S in that case as "spectacular." [*215] Kreindler v. Sambo's Restaurants, Inc., 79 Civ. 4538(WK) (S.D.N.Y.). On the record of the public hearing on the proposed settlement in Peter Stuyvesant, Ltd. v. Druz, 89 Civ. 3611(MCG), held October 31, 1991, Judge Miriam Goldman Cedarbaum of the Southern District of New York took the occasion to compliment the work of both GLR&S and Edward Labaton, a partner of the firm, commenting "you have done a fine and effective job of representing the class here."

In Park Lane Hosiery Co., Inc. v. Shore, 439 U.S. 322, 58 L. Ed. 2d 552, 99 S. Ct. 645 (1979), a class action, GLR&S succeeded in obtaining the landmark Supreme Court decision relating to the offensive use of the collateral estoppel. GLR&S obtained another landmark decision in the area of class actions in Boeing Company v. Van Gemert, 444 U.S. 472, 62 L. Ed. 2d 676, 100 S. Ct. 745 (1980). GLR&S acted as lead counsel in the General Motors Diesel Litigation, 81 Civ. 1252(HB) (E.D.N.Y.), which was prosecuted on behalf of owners of certain diesel automobiles manufactured by General Motors Corporation. That action resulted in a settlement of more than $ 18 million, one of the largest settlements [*216] ever obtained in a consumer class action. As co-lead counsel in the class actions involving Petro Lewis Corp., 84 Civ. 326 (D. Colo.), GLR&S succeeded in obtaining a settlement valued by the court at $ 113.5 million. GLR&S also served as co-lead counsel in a class action brought on behalf of purchasers of the common stock of PepsiCo, Inc., 82 Civ. 8403(ADS) (S.D.N.Y.). The class recovered $ 21.5 million as a result of the vigorous prosecution of that action. In Weckstein v. Breitbart, Index No. 19639/83, GLR&S tried an action in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, County of New York, on behalf of limited partners alleging gross breaches of fiduciary duty by the general partner. After the trial, the court rendered a verdict removing the general partners, appointing a receiver and awarding damages of more than $ 7.5 million. GLR&S chaired the Executive Committee of Plaintiffs' Counsel which prosecuted the In re Todd Shipyards Securities Litigation, Master File No. 88-2580(DRD) (D.N.J.), to a $ 12.6 million settlement on behalf of the class.

GLR&S has discharged its responsibilities as lead and co-lead counsel in complex cases in an efficient, effective and cooperative [*217] manner. In In re Energy Systems Equipment Leasing Securities Litigation, MDL-637(LDW) (E.D.N.Y.), a multi-faceted, multi-district litigation in which GLR&S acted as co-lead counsel for the plaintiffs, Judge Wexler of the Eastern District of New York, complimented the firm for the efficient manner in which the complex litigation proceeded and has cited the cooperation and efficiency of plaintiffs' counsel as an example to be emulated by counsel in other actions.

GLR&S is presently prosecuting numerous representative actions in a leadership capacity on behalf of investors. Class actions in which GLR&S currently has an active role include: In re Zenith Laboratories Securities Litigation, 86 Civ. 3241A(DRD) (D.N.J.); Trief, et al. v. The Dun & Bradstreet Corp., et al., Master File No. 89-1741(DNE) (S.D.N.Y.); In re ZZZZ Best Securities Litigation, 87 Civ. 3574(RSWL) (C.D. Cal.); CMH Capital Management Corp. v. Eljer Industries Inc. Securities Litigation, CA 3-91-1273-G (N.D. Tex.); In re Prudential-Bache Energy Income Partnerships Securities Litigation, MDL-888(ML) (E.D. La.); In re Nord Resources Corporation Securities Litigation, Master File No. C-3-90-380 (Rice, [*218] J.) (S.D. Ohio); and In re Granada Partnerships Securities Litigation, MDL-837(MH) (S.D. Tex.).

Among the attorneys at GLR&S who are involved in the litigation area are:

Edward Labaton is admitted to practice in the State of New York, the United States District Courts for the Southern and Eastern District of New York, the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, and the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Ninth and Tenth Circuits, and the Supreme Court of the United States. Mr. Labaton graduated from Yale Law School in 1955 and has specialized in the areas of securities and corporate litigation since 1957. He has prosecuted numerous securities actions as well as other class and derivative actions, and was lead attorney and chief trial counsel in Kriendler v. Sambo's and Weckstein v. Breitbart and acted as lead counsel on behalf of GLR&S in the Financial Corporation of America, Petro Lewis, PepsiCo, Jim Walter, American Brands, GAF Co., and Revlon law suits.

Prior to joining GLR&S in February 1979, Mr. Labaton had participated as lead counsel in a number of other securities class and derivative actions, including [*219] Lyons v. Marrud, 66 Civ. 415 (S.D.N.Y.) (in which Chief Judge Edelstein of the Southern District of New York characterized plaintiffs' counsel as both "experienced and competent" - Lyons v. Marrud, Inc., [1972-73 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 93,525 (S.D.N.Y. 1972)), and Feder v. Harrington, 67 Civ. 1531 (S.D.N.Y.) (in which Judge Tenney certified the class, finding that vigorous prosecution was assured by the qualified counsel - Feder v. Harrington, 52 F.R.D. 178, 183 (S.D.N.Y. 1970) - and in which Judge MacMahon approved the settlement citing the existence of experienced counsel who he knew to be able and respected members of the bar of the court whose integrity and professional skill were unquestioned and who had successfully appeared in many actions brought under Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act - 58 F.R.D. 171, 175 (S.D.N.Y. 1972)). In approving the settlement in Feder, and in overruling an objection, Judge MacMahon noted that there was no hint that counsel would shy away from going to trial if that were in the best interest of the class. Id.

Also prior to joining GLR&S, Mr. Labaton briefed [*220] and argued the motion in Tucker v. Arthur Andersen, 67 F.R.D. 468 \(S.D.N.Y. 1975\), in which the Court approved the fraud on the market theory. The Tucker v. Arthur Andersen decision was, in large part, relied upon by Blackie v. Barrack, 524 F.2d 891, 906 \(9th Cir. 1975\), in which the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit adopted the fraud on the market theory.

Mr. Labaton has had substantial trial experience including experience in the class and derivative actions noted above. He was chief trial counsel in the Sambo's litigation tried in January and February 1986 before Judge Whitman Knapp and a jury. He has also acted as trial counsel in other cases in the Southern District of New York, Western District of Oklahoma and in the state courts of New York. Mr. Labaton has argued numerous appeals including appeals in the Second, Sixth, Seventh, Ninth and Tenth Circuits and in the New York State appellate courts. Two of the appeals which he argued in the Second Circuit Court of Appeals involved particularly important issues, in securities law in one case and federal procedure in the other. These issues were ultimately resolved by the Supreme Court [*221] of the United States, which adopted the rationale of or substantially relied upon the cases in which Mr. Labaton had argued and prevailed: Parkinson v. April Industries, 520 F.2d 650 \(2d Cir. 1975\), and Golden v. Garafalo, 678 F.2d 1139 \(2d Cir. 1982\).

Mr. Labaton has served as lecturer in the Federal Civil Practice and Corporate Governance programs for ALI/ABA and PLI programs on the subjects of federal civil practice, securities litigation, and class actions. He served as a member of the Board of Directors of the New York County Lawyers' Association from 1984 through 1987 and was Chairman of its Federal Courts Committee from 1980 through 1984. Mr. Labaton has served as a member of the Federal Courts Committee (1971-1974 and 1987-1990) and the Federal Legislation Committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York. He is presently a member of the Committee on Second Circuit Courts of the Federal Bar Council and a member of the Committee on Securities Regulation of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York. Former Chief Judge Weinstein of the Eastern District of New York appointed Mr. Labaton a member of the Court's Discovery [*222] Oversight Committee. Former Chief Judge Motley appointed him to serve on a special committee of the Southern District of New York chaired by Judge Goettel dealing with the problems of discovery abuse. Mr. Labaton is also a member of the American Law Institute.

Lawrence A. Sucharow was admitted to practice in the states of New York and New Jersey, the United States District Courts for the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York, the District of New Jersey, and the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. Mr. Sucharow graduated cum laude from the City College of New York in 1971, and cum laude from Brooklyn Law School in 1975 and has specialized in complex securities and consumer class action litigation since that date. He has prosecuted and is currently prosecuting numerous securities actions and other class and derivative actions both as sole lead counsel and as a member or co-chair of executive committees of plaintiffs' counsel. Mr. Sucharow has successfully prosecuted actions on behalf of shareholders of PepsiCo, Gambio AB, Time Warner, Emersons Ltd., Todd Shipyards, Computer Microfilm, Vernitron and others, and on behalf of bondholders of New York City [*223] Housing Development Corporation. He is currently leading the prosecution of claims against American Express, Dun & Bradstreet, Eljer Industries, Inc., Ames Department Stores, El Paso Refinery, L.P., NCR Corporation, and Guaranty Security Life Insurance Company.

Mr. Sucharow is chairman of the Class Action Committee of the Commercial and Federal Litigation Section of the New York State Bar Association, a long-time active member of the Federal Courts Committee of the New York County Lawyers Association, a member of the Litigation Committee of the American Bar Association, and a member of the Securities Law Committee of the New Jersey State Bar Association. Mr. Sucharow lectures on class actions and related topics and has received an "a v" rating from Martindale Hubbell Law Directory.

Henry A. Bracht, who joined the firm as a partner in early 1991, was admitted to practice in 1968 and has been involved throughout his career in complex litigation, including more than a decade conducting class and corporate derivative actions representing investors. Mr. Bracht received a Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Wisconsin at Madison in 1964 and a Juris Doctor degree from [*224] the U. of W. Law School in 1968. In 1971-1976, Mr. Bracht was Assistant U.S. Attorney and Deputy Chief of the Civil Division, Office of the U.S. Attorney, in the Eastern District of New York. He served as an adjunct instructor at New York University School of Law 1974-1979, and as a member (1973-1981) and as Chairman (1982-1984) of the Committee on Federal Courts of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York.

Ira A. Schochet graduated from the Duke University School of Law in 1981 and has had extensive experience in securities and corporate litigation during his career. Mr. Schochet played an active role in litigating the class action, Steiner v. Becor Western, Inc., Del. Ch., Civ. Action No. 8859, which resulted in a shareholder class receiving $ 33 million in enhanced merger consideration, as well as in many others, including In re American Brands, Inc. Shareholders Litigation, Del. Ch., Consolidated Civ. Action No. 9586, Mindich v. Walbro Corp., Del.Ch., Civ. Action No. 9315, and Lubliner v. Maxtor Corp., No. C-89-1807-WHO (N.D. Cal.). Presently, Mr. Schochet is actively litigating, as either sole or lead counsel, Klotz v. PCS Data Processing, Inc., [*225] Index No. 12688/90 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), and Kamarasy v. Coopers & Lybrand, No. 591 Civ. 00124(TFGD) (D. Conn.), and, as co-lead counsel, Margolis v. Caterpillar, Inc., No. 90-1242 (C.D. Ill.), and Fernicola v. Mizlou, No. 91 Civ. 1624(JES) (S.D.N.Y.).

Emily C. Komlossy graduated from New York Law School in 1989 and has devoted substantially all of her time to the practice of securities and class actions. Prior to her association with GLR&S, Ms. Komlossy was an associate at Abbey & Ellis. She is admitted to practice in the State of New York and the United States District Courts for the Southern District of New York and the Western District of Michigan.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT MIDDLE DISTRICT OF FLORIDA

TAMPA DIVISION

IN RE BELMAC CORP.

SECURITIES LITIGATION

THIS DOCUMENT RELATES TO:

ALL ACTIONS

MASTER FILE No. 92-1814-CIV-T-23-(C)

AFFIDAVIT OF NADEEM FARUQI IN SUPPORT OF JOINT PETITION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES AND REIMBURSEMENT OF EXPENSES FILED ON BEHALF OF KAUFMAN MALCHMAN KIRBY & SQUIRE

STATE OF NEW YORK

COUNTY OF NEW YORK

ss.

I, NADEEM FARUQI, being duly sworn, depose and say:

1. I am a partner of the law firm of Kaufman Malchman [*226] Kirby & Squire. I am submitting this Affidavit in support of my firm's application for an award of attorneys' fees in connection with services rendered to the Plaintiff class and the reimbursement of expenses incurred by my firm in the course of this litigation.
2. This firm, as counsel of record for Plaintiff Susan Stern, commenced an action in this Court. Thereafter, we participated in the prosecution of this action in cooperation with other Plaintiffs' counsel. Specifically, my firm contributed with participation in the area of assisting lead counsel in formulating the theory and assisting in developing the facts of Plaintiffs' case. Initially, the attorneys of my firm were involved in investigation, factual analysis and drafting and filing the complaint on behalf of Plaintiff Stern.
3. The chart attached hereto as Exhibit A presents a detailed summary indicating the time expended by the attorneys and paralegals of this firm on the litigation, at current rates. The chart includes the name of the attorneys who worked on the case, the hourly billing rates and number of hours expended by the attorneys and paralegals on this matter. The chart was prepared from contemporaneous daily [*227] time records maintained by my firm. The hourly rates for the attorneys and paralegals in my firm are the regular rates charged for their services in similar litigation such as this one. In my opinion, the rates charged by the various attorneys and the paralegals in my firm are reasonable. Time expended in preparing this Affidavit in support of my firm's application for fees and reimbursement of expenses has not been included in this request.

4. The total number of hours expended on this litigation by my firm is 21.25 hours. The total lodestar for my firm is $ 6,736.25, consisting of $ 6,641.25 for attorneys' time and $ 95.00 for paralegals' time.

5. With respect to the standing of counsel in this case, attached hereto as Exhibit B is a brief biography of my firm.

6. My firm expended a total of $ 604.65 in unreimbursed expenses in connection with the prosecution of this litigation, broken down as follows:

Description	Amount
Copies, Fax &
Velabind	$ 87.00
Dow Jones &
Lexis Research	$ 342.65
Secretarial Overtime &
Word Processing	$ 175.00
TOTAL	$ 604.65

7. The expenses incurred pertaining to this case are reflected on the books [*228] and records of my firm. These books and records are prepared from expense vouchers, check records and other source material and are an accurate recordation of the expenses incurred.

Nadeem Faruqi

SWORN TO AND SUBSCRIBED before me this 11th day of February, 1994.

Notary Public

RABINDRA N. MAHABIR

Notary Public, State of New York

No. 41-4961924

Qualified in Queens County

Commission Expires Feb. 5, 1996

EXHIBIT A

KAUFMAN MALCHMAN KIRBY & SQUIRE BELMAC TIME REPORT FROM INCEPTION THROUGH FEBRUARY 10, 1994

Attorney	Hours	Rate	Lodestar
Roger W. Kirby	.75	$ 385	$ 288.75
Jeffrey H. Squire	7.50	$ 375	2,812.50
Nadeem Faruqi	12.00	$ 295	3,540.00
Paralegal:
Diantie Persaud	1.00	$ 95	95.00
*3*TOTAL LODESTAR		$ 6,736.25

EXHIBIT B

KAUFMAN MALCHMAN KIRBY & SQUIRE

Kaufman Malchman Kirby & Squire specializes in class action and other shareholder litigation. A biographical sketch of its partners and schedule of some of its achievements follow.

Irving Malchman graduated from Harvard College and Harvard Law School, class of 1950. He was on the Editorial Board of the Harvard Law Review. Upon graduation [*229] from law school, Mr. Malchman worked for several years as an attorney in the General Litigation Section of the Civil Division of the United States Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. Mr. Malchman has had extensive experience in stockholders and class action litigation.

As an example, Mr. Malchman successfully litigated the appeal in Green v. Wolf Corporation, 406 F.2d 291 \(2d Cir. 1969\), cert. denied, 395 U.S. 977, 23 L. Ed. 2d 766, 89 S. Ct. 2131 (1969), a landmark decision upon the maintainability of class actions in federal securities actions. Mr. Malchman obtained a jury verdict for $ 18.2 million in November 1983 in Stepak v. Heineman (N.D. Ill.). More recently, Mr. Malchman successfully litigated the question of standing under Section 16(b) of the Exchange Act of 1934 through the United States Supreme Court, expanding the standing of a shareholder to sue under Section 16(b). Gollust v. Mendell, 501 U.S. 115, 111 S. Ct. 2173, 115 L. Ed. 2d 109 \(1991\).

Roger W. Kirby graduated from Columbia College and Columbia Law School, class of 1972. He attended The Hague Academy of International Law in 1971 and was an International [*230] Fellow at Columbia Law School. Thereafter, he was law clerk to Honorable Hugh H. Bownes, then judge for the United States District Court for New Hampshire, now on the Court of Appeals for the First Circuit. Mr. Kirby has written articles on litigation and the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure that have been published by the ALI-ABA course of study on litigation under the federal securities laws and by Class Action Reports, of which he is on the Board of Editors. He has also given lectures on aspects of securities litigation at seminars sponsored by ALI-ABA and PLI.

Jeffrey H. Squire graduated from Amherst College (B.A. cum laude, 1973) and the University of Pennsylvania Law School (J.D., 1976). Following graduation, Mr. Squire was associated with a large New York City law firm. In 1985, he became associated with Wolf Popper Ross Wolf & Jones, specializing in shareholder litigation, and in 1988, became a member of that firm. In February, 1990 he joined Kaufman Malchman Kirby & Squire as a partner in the firm. Mr. Squire has actively participated in numerous cases in federal and state courts which have resulted in significant recoveries for shareholders. Mr. Squire is the co-author [*231] of "The Cenco Defense", included in Accountants Liability: 1988, published by the Practicing Law Institute.

-Prior to joining the Kaufman firm, Mr. Squire actively participated in such cases as, In re Standard Oil Company/British Petroleum Litigation, Consolidated Case No. 126760, Court of Common Pleas, Cuyahoga County,

Ohio, in which plaintiffs' counsel negotiated and obtained a benefit to the class in excess of $ 600 million, a result the Court described as "unprecedented"; Traub v. Barber, No. 25341/80 (Sup. Ct., N.Y.Co.) (Asarco, Inc.), settled by certain defendants for $ 5.65 million; and Seidman v. Stauffer Chemical Co., Civil No. B-84-543 (TFGD), settled for $ 11.6 million. In 1982, Mr. Squire was co-trial counsel in an action on behalf of Bethlehem Steel Corporation against Universal Gas & Oil Co., in Supreme Court, New York County, New York. Following trial, Bethlehem was awarded judgment in its favor in excess of $ 2.7 million, and all counterclaims against it were dismissed. That judgment was unanimously affirmed on appeal. In November and December 1987, Mr. Squire served as co-trial counsel for a plaintiff class for seven weeks in Odmark v. Westide [*232] Bancorporation, Inc. No. C85-1099R (W.D. Wa.). Chief Judge Rothstein characterized the results achieved for the class as "excellent" and wrote that "because of the extensive pretrial motions and discovery, along with seven weeks of trial, the court had a first-hand opportunity to observe that class counsels' reputation for high quality legal work is well deserved."

Nadeem Faruqi has been with the firm since 1988, and a partner since January 1, 1993. Mr. Faruqi graduated from McGill University (B.Sc., 1981), York University (M.B.A., 1984) and New York Law School (J.D., cum laude, 1987). He was on the Editorial Board of New York Law School's Journal of International and Comparative Law.

The Kaufman Malchman Kirby & Squire firm has repeatedly demonstrated its expertise in the field of securities litigation and its expertise has been repeatedly recognized. For example:

- Colaprico v. Sun Microsystems, No. C-90-20710 (SW) (N.D. Cal. 1993), co-lead counsel ($ 5 million settlement).
- Steinfink v. Pitney Bowes, Inc., No. B90-340 (JAC) (D. Conn. 1993), lead counsel ($ 4 million settlement).
- In re Jackpot Securities Enterprises, Inc. Securities Litigation, CV-S-89-805-LDG [*233] (RJJ) (D. Nev. 1993), lead counsel ($ 3 million settlement).
- In re Nordstrom Inc. Securities Litigation, No. C90-295C (W.D. Wa. 1991), co-lead counsel ($ 7.5 million settlement).
- United Artists Litigation, No.CA 980 (Sup. Ct., L.A., Cal.), trial counsel ($ 35 million settlement).
- In re A.L. Williams Corp. Shareholders Litigation, Consolidated, C.A. No. 10881 (Del. Ch. 1990), lead counsel (benefits in excess of $ 11 million).
- In re Triangle Inds., Inc., Shareholders' Litigation, C.A. No. 10466 (Del. Ch. 1990), co-lead counsel (recovery in excess of $ 70,000,000).
- Schneider v. Lazard Freres, (N.Y. Sup. 1990), co-lead counsel (landmark decision concerning liability of investment bankers in corporate buyouts; $ 55 million settlement).
- Rothenberg v. A.L. Williams, C.A. No. 10060 (Del. Ch. 1989), sole counsel (benefits of at least $ 25,000,000 to the class).
- Kantor v. Zondervan Corporation, C.A. No. 88 C5425 (W.D. Mich. S.D. 1989), sole counsel (recovery of $ 3.75 million).
- King v. Advanced Systems, Inc., C.A. No. 84 C10917 (N.D. Ill. E.D. 1988), lead counsel (recovery of $ 3.9 million representing 90% of damages).
- Straetz v. Cordis, [*234] 85-343 Civ. (SMA) (USDC, S.D. Fla., September 23, 1988), lead counsel:

"I want to commend counsel and each one of you for the diligence with which you've pursued the case and for the results that have been produced on both sides. I think that you have displayed the absolute optimum in the method and manner by which you have represented your respective clients, and you are indeed a credit to the legal profession, and I'm very proud to have had the opportunity to have you appear before the Court in this matter."

-In re Flexi-Van Corporation, Inc. Shareholders Litigation, C.A. No. 9672 (Del. Ch. 1988), Co-lead counsel ($ 18.4 million settlement).

-In re Carnation Company Securities Litigation, No. CV84-6913 (FW) (C.D. Cal. 1987), Co-lead counsel ($ 13 million settlement).

-In re Data Switch Securities Litigation, B84 585 (RCZ) (USDC CT July 2, 1985) Co-lead counsel ($ 7.5 million settlement).

-Malchman, et al. v. Davis, et al., 77 Civ. 5151 (SDNY, June 8, 1984) (TPG):

"It is difficult to overstate the far-reaching results of this litigation and the settlement. Few class actions have ever succeeded in altering commercial relationships of such magnitude. [*235] Few class action settlements have even approached the results achieved herein.... In the present case, the attorneys representing the class have acted with outstanding vigor and dedication.... Although the lawyers in this litigation have appeared considerably more in the state courts than in the federal court, they have appeared in the federal court sufficiently for me to attest as to the high professional character of their work. Every issue which has come to this court has been presented by both sides with a thoroughness and zeal which is outstanding.... In sum, plaintiffs and their attorneys undertook a very large and difficult litigation in both the state and federal courts, where the stakes were enormous. This litigation was hard fought over a period of four years. Plaintiffs achieved a settlement which altered commercial relationships involving literally hundreds of millions of dollars."

-Stern v. Steans, 80 Civ 3903 (GLG), the Court characterized the result for the class obtained during trial to jury as "unusually successful" and "incredible" (Jun 1, 1984).

-In re Datapoint Securities Litigation, SA 82 CA 338 (WD Tex): Designated Lead Counsel for a Class, December 29, 1983. $ [*236] 22.5 million aggregate settlement.

-In re Compact Video Securities Litigation, C 82 4782 AWT (Bx) (CD Cal): Designated Co-Lead Counsel, December 19, 1983. $ 7.5 million settlement.

-Stepak v. Heineman, 82 C 1599 (ND Ill ED): favorable jury verdict, November 21, 1983 and settlement for $ 10,000,000 during appeal (September 1984).

-Judge Thomas P. Griesa, United States District Judge, Southern District of New York: "The important thing is that thoroughly competent counsel have been retained to act as attorneys for the plaintiff class". Kahn v. Wien, 81 Civ 4818 (TPG) (Dec 29, 1982).

-Judge Robert J. Ward, United States District Judge, Southern District of New York, characterized the firm as being "among the most skillful in its field" and described Mr. Kirby of the firm as a "bright and tenacious" trial lawyer. Weisman v. Darneille, 77 Civ 2110 (RJW) (Sept 20 1982).

-Judge Mishler, United States District Judge, Eastern District of New York, said of the Kaufman firm: "Plaintiff's counsel has demonstrated skill, expertise and diligence in the preparation and presentation of the papers so far submitted in this action". Kamerman v. Miyahara, 82 Civ 0689 (JM) (June 11, 1982).

[*237] -Judge Brieant, United States District Judge, Southern District of New York, said of the Kaufman firm: "In view of the novel theory on which the case was brought and all relevant factors, this Court believes that counsel have been highly successful in their prosecution of the lawsuit to settlement". Feiler v. Sonderling, 79 Civ. 6826 (CLB) (Feb 26, 1981).

-The Kaufman firm was on The Executive Committee of the In re Ocean Shipping Antitrust Litigation. MDL 395, M21 26 (CES) (SDNY), which achieved a $ 51 million settlement in 1983.

TAMPA DIVISION

IN RE BELMAC CORP. SECURITIES LITIGATION

THIS DOCUMENT RELATES TO:

MASTER FILE NO. 92-1814-CIV-T-23-(C)

AFFIDAVIT OF RICHARD S. SCHIFFRIN IN SUPPORT OF JOINT PETITION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES AND REIMBURSEMENT OF EXPENSES FILED ON BEHALF OF SCHIFFRIN & CRAIG, LTD.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania

County of Montgomery

ss.

I, Richard S. Schiffrin, being duly sworn, depose and say:

1. I am a partner of the law firm of Schiffrin & Craig, Ltd. I am submitting this Affidavit in support of my firm's application for an award of attorneys' fees in connection [*238] with services rendered to the plaintiff class and the reimbursement of expenses incurred by my firm in the course of this litigation.
2. This firm, as counsel of record for plaintiff Paul Hocheiser, commenced an action in this Court. Thereafter, we participated in the prosecution of this action in cooperation with other plaintiffs' counsel. Specifically, my firm participated in drafting the consolidated amended complaint and in document discovery.
3. The chart attached hereto as Exhibit "A" presents a detailed summary indicating the time expended by the attorneys and paralegals of this firm on the litigation, at current rates. The chart includes the names of the attorneys who worked on the case, the hourly billing rates and number of hours expended by the attorneys and paralegals on this matter. The chart was prepared from contemporaneous daily time records maintained by my firm. The hourly rates for the attorneys and paralegals in my firm are the regular rates charged for their services in similar litigation such as this one. In my opinion, the rates charged by the various attorneys and the paralegals in my firm are reasonable. Time expended in preparing this Affidavit in support [*239] of my firm's application for fees and reimbursement of expenses has not been included in this request.
4. The total number of hours expended on this litigation by my firm is 153 hours. The total lodestar for my firm is $ 39,025.00.
5. With respect to the standing of counsel in this case, attached hereto as Exhibit "B" is a brief biography of my firm and the attorneys of my firm who worked on this litigation.
6. My firm expended a total of $ 1,558.16 in unreimbursed expenses in connection with the prosecution of this litigation broken down as follows:

Description	Amount
Travel	$ 287.00
Telephone/Telecopier	212.40
Duplicating	180.00
Database charges	357.86
SEC filings	215.90
Overtime/clerical	230.00
Postage/Federal Express	75.00

Description	Amount
TOTAL:	$ 1,558.16

7. The expenses incurred pertaining to this case are reflected on the books and records of my firm. These books and records are prepared from expense vouchers, check records and other source material and are an accurate recordation of the expenses incurred.

RICHARD S. SCHIFFRIN

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 15th day of February, 1993.

Mary Claire Wright

Notary Public

ANALYSIS [*240] OF TIME

CATEGOR	HOURS BY	RSS	MDC	ALB	TOTAL S
1	15	5	39	59
2			2	2
3			10	10
4	21	3	42	66
5	2		14	16
6
7
8
9
TOTAL
HOURS	38	8	107	153
TOTAL
LODESTA R	12,350	2,600	24,075	39,025

ATTORNEYS:

RSS - Richard S. Schiffrin

$ 325 p/hour

MDC - Michael D. Craig

$ 325 p/hour

ALB - Andrew L. Barroway

$ 225 p/hour

TIME CATEGORIES:

- 1 - Pleadings and Briefs, including research
- 2 - Taking and defense of depositions; including preparation
- 3 - Preparing responses to discovery; including class discovery
- 4 - Taking document discovery from defendants and third parties
- 5 - Factual investigations; consultations with client and experts
- 6 - Settlement
- 7 - Class and settlement administration
- 8 - Court appearances
- 9 - Preparation for court appearances

EXHIBIT "A"

EXHIBIT "B"

SCHIFFRIN & CRAIG, LTD.

FIRM BIOGRAPHY

Schiffrin & Craig, Ltd. was formed in 1987 by two attorneys engaged in stockholder class and derivative actions, as well as general business litigation. Since its inception, Schiffrin & Craig, Ltd. has been engaged in major complex litigation throughout the country, [*241] consisting of class and derivative corporate and securities litigation, as well as class litigation involving misleading business practices. The firm now operates out of offices in Pennsylvania and Illinois.

The firm has, in the past five years, in a lead or liaison position, successfully prosecuted or settled cases involving E.F. Hutton Group, Inc., Northwestern Steel & Wire Co., Trans-Lux Corp., Charter Medical Corp., Interactive Technologies, Inc., Envirodyne Industries, Inc., Hart Holdings, Inc., Apple Computer, Inc., Telesphere International, Inc., Commodore Computer, Inc., Home Shopping Network, Inc. and Stotler Group, Inc.

Each of these cases has provided shareholder-class members with substantial relief. In Rosen, et al. v. E.F. Hutton Group, Inc., et al., Del. Ch., C.A. No. 9467 (settlement approved Aug. 18, 1988), following discovery and while a motion for preliminary injunction was pending, the defendants agreed to settle plaintiffs' claims of unfair price and breach of the duty of candor in the Hutton-Shearson merger by increasing the value of certain debentures issued as part of the tender offer consideration by approximately $ 3.5 million and issuing a supplemental [*242] disclosure statement revealing the prices proposed by the principals during previous negotiations.

In Shantzer, et al. v. Charter Medical Corp., et al., Del. Ch., C.A. No. 9530 (settlement approved Aug. 5, 1988), the plaintiffs challenged a going-private transaction by the company's chairman/controlling shareholder and other members of senior management. The plaintiffs agreed to settle their claims of unfair dealing in exchange for improvements in the offering price totalling over $ 85 million. In a separate action against Charter, its directors and its auditors, In re Charter Medical Bondholder Litigation, C.A. No. 90-221-1-MAC (JRE) (settlement approved April 30, 1992), the plaintiffs alleged that the defendants misstated certain material facts in connection with the transaction for the purpose of selling debt in the company to the public. The plaintiffs settled this case for $ 3.25 million in cash, plus improvements in Charter's plan of reorganization worth approximately $ 40 million to bondholder class members.

In Dana v. Trans-Lux Corp., et al., Del. Ch., C.A. No. 9755 (settlement approved Aug. 4, 1988), aff'd sub nom., Nottingham Partners v. Dana, 564 A.2d 1089 (Del. 1989), [*243] the plaintiff challenged the board of directors' adoption of anti-takeover provisions in the company's by-laws and certificate of incorporation. The plaintiff agreed to settle his claims that the by-laws violated specific provisions of Delaware law, and their adoption constituted a breach of fiduciary duty, in exchange for a nullification of certain certificate amendments, a change in the by-laws, and an expansion of the company's stock repurchase program. The Chancery Court noted that "a good part of the Dana lawsuit is being settled on a hundred percent basis . . . It wouldn't be inaccurate to say that the settlement would represent a complete victory for the Dana plaintiffs."

In Baden, et al. v. Northwestern Steel & Wire Co., et al., Ill. Cir., No. 88 CH 55 (settlement approved Oct. 31, 1988), the plaintiffs challenged a going-private transaction by management, pursued with the agreement of the company's majority shareholders. Following discovery and denial of defendants' motion to dismiss, the defendants agreed to settle plaintiffs' claims of unfair dealing in exchange for an increase of nearly $ 18 million in the merger consideration (one of the largest shareholder [*244] class action settlements in Illinois history). Plaintiffs also obtained legal recognition, for the first time by an Illinois court, of remedies other than statutory shareholder appraisal for shareholders subjected to a cash-out merger.

In Schickler, et al. v. Interactive Technologies, Inc., et al., Minn. Dist., File No. C7-88-8254 (temporary restraining order issued January 15, 1989), the plaintiffs were responsible for creating new and favorable law in Minnesota in support of procedural and substantive rights for minority shareholders when the majority shareholder attempts to cash out the minority. The plaintiffs temporarily restrained completion of a tender offer until the majority owner substantially amended its false and misleading disclosures in the Offer to Purchase.

In re Envirodyne Industries, Inc. Shareholder Litigation, Del. Ch., C.A. No. 10702 (preliminary injunction issued April 20, 1989), the plaintiffs successfully enjoined a tender offer on the grounds that the offeror had access to material, confidential information which it used in structuring its offer and which was not available to shareholders. The Court enjoined the tender offer until the defendants amended [*245] their tender offer and disclosed this information.

In Zeid, et al. v. Apple Computer, Inc., et al., N.D. Cal., C-89-2827-WHO (settlement approved Sept. 12, 1990), the plaintiffs alleged that all purchasers of Apple Computer, Inc. common stock during a ten-day period were misled by certain company statements subsequently determined to be untrue. After over a year of motions and discovery, defendants agreed to settle the case for $ 5.65 million.

In Michael and Sandra Chalfin, et al. v. Hart Holding Company, Incorporated, et al., Del. Ch., C.A. No. 11611 (transaction terminated July 9, 1990), plaintiffs successfully challenged as unfair an attempted 1-for-100 reverse stock split and cash-out of certain minority stockholders. In awarding attorneys' fees to plaintiffs' counsel, the court favorably referred to counsels' "professional standing and ability."

In re Telesphere International Securities Litigation, N.D. Ill., No. 89 C 1875 (settlement approved Oct. 23, 1990), the plaintiffs alleged that the defendants materially understated uncollectible receivables -- income from (900)-line telephone calls which the telephone company refused to collect. After over a year-and-a-half [*246] of motion practice and discovery, defendants agreed to settle the case for $ 1.3 million. In approving an award of attorneys' fees and expenses, the court specifically referred to this firm's credentials as "impressive," found the firm's historical (1989) hourly rate of $ 250 per hour to be "reasonable," and used its hourly rates as a basis for setting the rates of all attorneys in the case.

In Squitieri v. Gould, et al., E.D. Pa., No. 89-6832 (settlement approved March 1, 1991), the plaintiff alleged that Commodore Computer, Inc. and certain top officers issued positive earnings forecasts despite knowledge of materially negative facts making such forecasts unattainable. Following extensive motion practice and completion of discovery, this action settled two weeks before trial for $ 3.25 million.

In re Home Shopping Network Securities Litigation -- Action II, M.D. Fla., No. 89-1084 Civ.-T-15(b) (settlement approved October 15, 1991), the plaintiffs alleged that Home Shopping Network, Inc. had misled investors as to the nature and extent of certain adverse developments. Following the completion of substantial discovery, this action settled for $ 4 million.

In Guthrie County [*247] State Bank, et al. v. Mahlmann, et al., N.D. Ill., 90 C 4901 (settlement approved January 22, 1993), the plaintiffs alleged that the principals and accounting firm of the commodities trading company Stotler Group, Inc. had purposely engaged in unlawful transactions designed to hide Stotler's failure to meet the minimum capital requirements of the Chicago Board of Trade. Although Stotler was forced to liquidate after the CBOT learned that the company was not complying with regulations, plaintiffs were able to obtain a settlement of $ 4.5 million for purchasers of common stock, commercial paper and debentures.

In addition, the firm's hours, expenses and lodestar have been approved in full on numerous occasions, including the following: Dana v. Trans-Lux Corp., et al., Del. Ch., C.A. No. 9755 (approved August 4, 1988); Rosen, et al. v. E.F. Hutton Group, Inc., et al., Del. Ch., C.A. No. 9467 (approved August 18, 1988); Baden, et al. v. Northwestern Steel & Wire Co., et al., Ill. Cir., No. 88 Ch. 55 (approved October 31, 1988); In re Envirodyne Industries, Inc. Shareholder Litigation, Del. Ch., C.A. No. 10702 (approved October 5, 1989); Zeid, et al. v. [*248] Apple Computer, Inc., et al., N.D. Cal., C-89-2827-WHO (approved September 14, 1990); In re Telesphere International Securities Litigation, 753 F. Supp. 716 (approved November 28, 1990); Squitieri v. Gould, et al., E.D. Pa., No. 89-6832 (approved March 1, 1991); In re Home Shopping Network Securities Litigation -- Action II, M.D. Fla., No. 89-1084 Civ.-T-15(b) (approved October 15, 1991); In re VMS Securities Litigation, N.D. Ill., No. 89 C 9448 (approved November 19, 1991); In re Charter Medical Bondholder Litigation, C.A. No. 90-221-1-MAC (JRE) (approved April 30, 1992); Guthrie County State Bank, et al. v. Mahlmann, et al., 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1962 (approved February 22, 1993).

Schiffrin & Craig, Ltd. consists of the following attorneys:

Richard S. Schiffrin received his law degree from DePaul University College of Law in 1979, where he was a member of the DePaul Law Review. He is licensed to practice law in Illinois and Pennsylvania and has been admitted to practice before the United States District Courts for the Northern District of Illinois, the Central District of Illinois, the Middle District of Pennsylvania and the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. [*249] He obtained seven years of experience in bench trials, jury trials and appeals with the Office of the Public Defender of Cook County, Illinois. He has taught legal writing at John Marshall Law School.

Michael D. Craig received his law degree from the University of Michigan Law School, where he was Editor-in-Chief of the University of Michigan Journal of Law Reform. He is licensed to practice law in Illinois, in the United States District Courts for the Northern District of Illinois and the Central District of Illinois and in the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit. He has taught legal writing at Chicago-Kent College of Law.

Andrew L. Barroway received his law degree from the University of Pennsylvania Law School, where he was a member of the ABA Negotiation team. He is licensed to practice law in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and has been admitted to practice before the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

Steven L. Popuch received his law degree from Loyola University of Chicago in 1977. He is licensed to practice law in Illinois and in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. He obtained five years [*250] of experience in bench trials, jury trials and appeals with the Office of the Public Defender of Cook County, Illinois. Mr. Popuch is Of Counsel to the firm, and he also maintains a civil and criminal litigation practice.

FIRM	HOURS	LODESTAR	EXPENSES
MICHAEL C. ADDISON	78.80	$ 14,793.50	$ 48.42
BERGER & MONTAGUE, P.C.	384.80	82,804.50	3,647.10
BURT & PUCILLO & PREDECESSOR FIRMS	228.00	49,916.23	3,981.75
CARLTON, FIELDS, WARD, EMMANUEL, SMITH & CUTLER, P.A.	13.60	2,011.00	284.62
GOODKIND LABATON RUOFF & SUCHAROW	386.80	99,255.50	37,111.71
KAUFMAN, MALCHMAN, KIRBY & SQUIRE	21.25	6,736.25	604.65
SCHIFFRIN & CRAIG, LTD.	153.00	39,025.00	1,558.16
TOTAL	1,266.25	$ 294,541.98	$ 47,236.41

End of Document

Schueller v. Norman

United States District Court for the Western District of Arkansas, El Dorado Division

April 6, 1994, Decided ; April 8, 1994, FILED, ENTERED

Civil No. 92-1075

Reporter

1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20969 *; 1995-2 Trade Cas. (CCH) P71,064

DR. STEVEN C. SCHUELLER, M.D., PLAINTIFF v. CLAIR NORMAN et al., DEFENDANTS

Disposition: [*1] Defendants' motion for summary judgment granted and this action is dismissed.

Core Terms

peer review, antitrust, conspiracy, staff, proceedings, monopolize, medical staff, antitrust claim, contends, immunity, patients, Sherman Act, anti-competitive, recommendations, defendants', clinical privileges, relevant market, competitors, federal court, counterclaim, disruptive, conspire, reasons, medical practice, summary judgment, emergency room, res judicata, effects, allegations, privileges

LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Materiality of Facts

HN1[] Entitlement as Matter of Law, Genuine Disputes

Summary judgment is appropriate only when there is no genuine issue of material fact, so that the dispute may be decided on purely legal grounds. The inquiry performed is the threshold inquiry of determining whether there is a need for trial - whether, in other words, there are genuine factual issues that properly can be resolved only by a finder of fact because they may reasonably be resolved in favor of either party.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Appropriateness

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Burdens of Proof > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > Genuine Disputes

HN2 Entitlement as Matter of Law, Appropriateness

The burden on the party moving for summary judgment is only to demonstrate, that is, to point out to the district court that the record does not disclose a genuine dispute on a material fact. It is enough for the movant to bring up the fact that the record does not contain such an issue and to identify that part of the record which bears out his assertion. Once this is done, his burden is discharged, and, if the record in fact bears out the claim that no genuine dispute exists on any material fact, it is then the respondent's burden to set forth affirmative evidence, specific facts, showing that there is a genuine dispute on that issue. If the respondent fails to carry that burden, summary judgment should be granted.

Civil Procedure > ... > Summary Judgment > Entitlement as Matter of Law > General Overview

HN3 Summary Judgment, Entitlement as Matter of Law

The court, in ruling on the motion for summary judgment, must give the non-moving party the benefit of the reasonable inferences that can be drawn from the underlying facts.

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Full Faith & Credit > Full Faith & Credit Statutes

Governments > Federal Government > Employees & Officials

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Full Faith & Credit > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > Res Judicata

HN4 Full Faith & Credit, Full Faith & Credit Statutes

The preclusive effect of a state court judgment in a subsequent federal lawsuit generally is determined by the full faith and credit statute, which provides that state judicial proceedings shall have the same full faith and credit in every court within the United States as they have by law or usage in the courts of such state from which they are taken. 28 U.S.C.S. § 1738. This statute directs a federal court to refer to the preclusion law of the state in which judgment was rendered. Section 1738 does not allow federal courts to employ their own rules of res judicata in determining the effects of state judgments. Rather, it goes beyond the common law and commands a federal court to accept the rules chosen by the state from which the judgment is taken.

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Jurisdiction Over Actions > Exclusive Jurisdiction

Civil Procedure > ... > Jurisdiction > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Jurisdiction Over Actions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > Res Judicata

HN5 Jurisdiction Over Actions, Exclusive Jurisdiction

With respect to matters that were not decided in a state proceedings, claim preclusion generally does not apply where the plaintiff was unable to rely on a certain theory of the case or to seek a certain remedy because of the limitations on the subject matter jurisdiction of the courts. Thus, if state preclusion law includes this requirement of jurisdictional competency a state judgment will not have claim preclusive effect on a cause of action within the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal courts.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > Res Judicata

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > General Overview

HN6 [down] Preclusion of Judgments, Res Judicata

Res judicata, or claim preclusion, bars subsequent action on the same claim where a final judgment has been rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction. Four elements must be met for res judicata to apply: (1) the first suit must have resulted in a final judgment on the merits, (2) the first suit must be based on proper jurisdiction, (3) both suits must involve the same cause of action, and (4) both suits must involve the same parties or their privies.

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > Collateral Estoppel

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > General Overview

HN7 [down] Estoppel, Collateral Estoppel

Collateral estoppel, or issue preclusion, bars relitigation of issues, law or fact, actually litigated in the first suit. For collateral estoppel to apply, the following elements must be met: (1) the issue sought to be precluded must be the same as that involved in the prior litigation, (2) that issue must have been actually litigated, (3) the issue must have been determined by a valid and final judgment, and (4) the determination must have been essential to the judgment.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > Res Judicata

Constitutional Law > ... > Fundamental Rights > Procedural Due Process > General Overview

HN8 [down] Preclusion of Judgments, Res Judicata

If, under Arkansas law, a plaintiff is precluded from litigating his claims in state court, he cannot pursue them in federal court unless the prior state proceeding did not provide plaintiff with a full and fair opportunity to present his claims. A party receives a fair opportunity to present the claims allegedly precluded if the party could have brought the claims in a proceeding that would satisfy the minimal procedural requirements of the due process clause.

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > Res Judicata

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > General Overview

HN9 [down] Preclusion of Judgments, Res Judicata

Arkansas' preclusion law requires that the state court have proper jurisdiction over a claim before an adjudication of that claim precludes subsequent litigation.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Jurisdiction

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > Collateral Estoppel

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Subject Matter Jurisdiction > Federal Questions > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > General Overview

Civil Procedure > ... > Preclusion of Judgments > Estoppel > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Judgments > Preclusion of Judgments > Res Judicata

HN10 [blue icon] Sherman Act, Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction over Sherman Antitrust Act claims lies exclusively within federal court.

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Governmental & Nonprofit Liability > Health Care Quality Improvement Act

Public Health & Welfare Law > Healthcare > General Overview

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Peer Review > General Overview

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Peer Review > Peer Review Statutes

HN11 [blue icon] Governmental & Nonprofit Liability, Health Care Quality Improvement Act

The Health Care Quality Improvement Act of 1986 provides only for limited immunity from civil damages incurred as the result of professional peer review action and does not provide for an independent, private right of action.

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Peer Review > General Overview

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Governmental & Nonprofit Liability > Health Care Quality Improvement Act

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Hospital Privileges > Professional Review

HN12 [blue icon] Business Administration & Organization, Peer Review

"Professional review action" is defined as an action or recommendation of a professional review body which is taken or made in the conduct of a professional review activity, which is based on the competence or professional conduct of an individual physician (which conduct affects or could affect adversely the health or welfare of a patient or patients), and which affects (or may affect) adversely the clinical privileges, or membership in a professional society, of the physician. Such term includes a formal decision of a professional review body not to take an action or make a recommendation described in the previous sentence and also includes professional review activities relating to a professional review action. 42 U.S.C.S. § 11151\(9\).

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Peer Review > General Overview

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Governmental & Nonprofit Liability > Health Care Quality Improvement Act

HN13 [blue icon] Business Administration & Organization, Peer Review

"Professional review body" is defined as a health care entity and the governing body or any committee of a health care entity which conducts professional review activity, and includes any committee of the medical staff of such an entity when assisting the governing body is a professional review activity. 42 U.S.C.S. § 11151\(11\).

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Governmental & Nonprofit Liability > Health Care Quality Improvement Act

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Peer Review > General Overview

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Peer Review > Peer Review Statutes

HN14 [blue icon] Governmental & Nonprofit Liability, Health Care Quality Improvement Act

A defendant can qualify for immunity under the Health Care Quality Improvement Act of 1986 (HCQIA) if he can demonstrate that the (1) professional review actions complied with the standards set forth in 42 U.S.C.S. § 11112, (2) results of the peer review were reported properly to the state authorities in compliance with 42 U.S.C.S. §§ 11131\(c\)\(1\), 11151\(2\), and (3) professional review actions occurred after November 14, 1986, the effective date of the HCQIA.

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Governmental & Nonprofit Liability > Health Care Quality Improvement Act

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Peer Review > General Overview

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Peer Review > Peer Review Statutes

HN15 [blue icon] Governmental & Nonprofit Liability, Health Care Quality Improvement Act

For a professional review body to be protected by the Health Care Quality Improvement Act of 1986's immunity, the action of that body must be taken, (1) in the reasonable belief that the action was in the furtherance of quality health care, (2) after a reasonable effort to obtain the facts of the matter, (3) after adequate notice and hearing procedures are afforded to the physician involved or after such other procedures as are fair to the physician under the circumstances, and (4) in the reasonable belief that the action was warranted by the facts known after such reasonable effort to obtain facts and after meeting the requirements of paragraph (3). A professional review action shall be presumed to have met the preceding standards necessary for the protection set out in 42 U.S.C.S. § 11111\(a\) of this title unless the presumption is rebutted by a preponderance of the evidence. 42 U.S.C.S. § 11112\(a\).

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Governmental & Nonprofit Liability > Health Care Quality Improvement Act

Public Health & Welfare Law > Healthcare > General Overview

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Peer Review > General Overview

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Peer Review > Peer Review Statutes

HN16 [blue icon] Governmental & Nonprofit Liability, Health Care Quality Improvement Act

The immunity available under the Health Care Quality Improvement Act of 1986 is limited to protection from damages under any law of the United States or of any state, excepting any civil rights proceedings. 42 U.S.C.S. § 11111\(a\)\(1\).

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Governmental & Nonprofit Liability > Health Care Quality Improvement Act

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Peer Review > General Overview

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Peer Review > Peer Review Statutes

HN17 [blue icon] Governmental & Nonprofit Liability, Health Care Quality Improvement Act

The objective "reasonable belief" standard is satisfied if the peer reviewers, with the information available to them at the time of the professional review action, would reasonably have concluded that their action would restrict incompetent behavior or would protect patients.

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Hospital Privileges > General Overview

Healthcare Law > ... > Actions Against Facilities > Governmental & Nonprofit Liability > Health Care Quality Improvement Act

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Peer Review > Peer Review Statutes

HN18 [blue icon] Business Administration & Organization, Hospital Privileges

Failure to comply with the specific notice and hearing requirements of 42 U.S.C.S. § 11112\(b\)\(1\), without more, does not constitute failure to meet the standards of 42 U.S.C.S. § 11112 \(a\)\(3\).

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Inchoate Crimes > Conspiracy > Elements

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

HN19 [blue icon] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, states, in part, that every contract, combination, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states, is hereby declared illegal. 15 U.S.C.S. § 1. Proof of two essential elements is required in any action under § 1: (1) a contract, combination, or conspiracy, which results in (2) an unreasonable restraint of trade.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Commercial Law (UCC) > Sales (Article 2) > Form, Formation & Readjustment > General Overview

Criminal Law & Procedure > ... > Inchoate Crimes > Conspiracy > Elements

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN20 [] Conspiracy to Monopolize, Sherman Act

A conspiracy imports a plurality of persons acting in concert to attain a common goal or purpose. Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1, prohibits only unreasonable restraints of trade effected by a contract, combination, or conspiracy between separate entities. Thus, § 1 applies only to concerted action; unilateral action is excluded from its purview. Proof of concerted action requires evidence of a relationship between at least two legally distinct persons or entities.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN21 [] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

The coordinated activity of a parent and its wholly owned subsidiary must be viewed as that of a single enterprise for the purposes of § 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 1.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > ... > Duties & Liabilities > Causes of Action & Remedies > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > Agency Relationships > General Overview

Business & Corporate Law > ... > Duties & Liabilities > Causes of Action & Remedies > Unauthorized Acts

HN22 [] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

When the interests of principal and agents diverge, and the agents at the time of the conspiracy are acting beyond the scope of their authority or for their own benefit rather than that of the principal, they may be legally capable of engaging in an antitrust conspiracy with their corporate principal.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Elements

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Monopolies & Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Elements

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Conspiracy to Monopolize > Sherman Act

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Claims

HN23 [] Conspiracy to Monopolize, Elements

Section 2 of the Sherman Act subjects to prosecution every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce. 15 U.S.C.S. § 2. To establish monopolization in violation of § 2 the plaintiffs must show: (1) the possession of monopoly power in the relevant market, and (2) the willful acquisition or maintenance of that power as distinguished from growth or development as a consequence of superior product, business acumen, or historic accident.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Monopolies & Monopolization > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN24 [] Regulated Practices, Monopolies & Monopolization

Monopoly power is defined as the power to control prices and exclude competition with respect to a particular product and within a particular geographic market. Thus, a plaintiff must show that the defendants have dominant market share in a well-defined relevant market. The court is required, therefore, to define the relevant market by reference to both the product market and the geographic market. The essential test for ascertaining the relevant product market involves the identification of those products or services that are either (1) identical to or (2) available substitutes for the defendants' products or services. This comparative analysis has been characterized as the "reasonable interchangeability" standard. Furthermore, a competitor may possess monopoly power in a sub-market. A market can be divided into sub-markets and may be determined by examining (1) the industry or public recognition of the sub-market as a separate economic entity; (2) the product's peculiar characteristics and uses; (3) unique production facilities; (4) distinct customers; (5) distinct prices; (6) sensitivity to price changes and (7) specialized vendors.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Market Definition > Relevant Market

Healthcare Law > Healthcare Litigation > Antitrust Actions > Facilities

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Monopolies & Monopolization > General Overview

Healthcare Law > Business Administration & Organization > Covenants not to Compete > General Overview

HN25 [] Market Definition, Relevant Market

A mere showing of monopoly power in the relevant market, unaccompanied by evidence of anti-competitive behavior, is insufficient to support a claim for monopolization.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > Claims

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

HN26 [L] Sherman Act, Claims

The second element of a 15 U.S.C.S. § 2 claim requires proof of either (1) specific intent to monopolize or (2) anticompetitive effects that result from the monopolist's actions. One need not prove both specific intent and anticompetitive effects; either alone is sufficient basis for the imposition of liability for an actor possessing monopoly power. However, liability based upon specific intent may be negated where valid business justifications exist for the monopolist's actions.

Antitrust & Trade Law > Sherman Act > General Overview

Antitrust & Trade Law > Regulated Practices > Trade Practices & Unfair Competition > General Overview

HN27 [L] Antitrust & Trade Law, Sherman Act

Anti-competitive conduct is conduct without a legitimate business purpose. Acts which are ordinary business practices typical of those used in a competitive market do not constitute anti-competitive conduct violative of 15 U.S.C.S. § 2. The exercise of business judgment cannot be found to be anti-competitive. To be labeled anti-competitive, the conduct involved must be such that its anticipated benefits were dependent upon its tendency to discipline or eliminate competition and thereby enhance the firm's long term ability to reap the benefits of monopoly power. Rather, acts which would constitute an unlawful use of monopoly power are those derived from the monopolist's power in the market or its size, acts which could have been performed by one with the requisite power.

Antitrust & Trade Law > ... > Monopolies & Monopolization > Attempts to Monopolize > General Overview

HN28 [L] Monopolies & Monopolization, Attempts to Monopolize

An antitrust plaintiff, alleging an attempted monopolization, must prove the existence of methods, means, and practices which would, if successful, accomplish monopolization, and which, falling short, nevertheless approach so close as to create a dangerous probability of it.

Judges: H. Franklin Waters, United States District Judge

Opinion by: H. Franklin Waters

Opinion

MEMORANDUM OPINION

Currently before the court for consideration is defendants' joint motion for summary judgment and plaintiff's response and supplement response thereto. Also before the court is defendants' reply to those responses. As counsel is aware, the court is considering this case upon the district reassignment from Judge Hendren to Judge Barnes and Judge Barnes' subsequent recusal in the matter. The court carefully has considered the motion and is now ready to rule. For the reasons set forth below, the court finds that the motion for summary judgment should be and hereby is granted.

A. Statement of Facts

The undisputed material facts reveal the following: The plaintiff, Steven C. Schueller, is a board certified member of the American College of Surgeons who was granted staff privileges at Ashley Memorial Hospital in April, 1983. Defendants Clair Norman, Herman Hamilton, Jr., William S. Arnold, Ned Hastings, and Roosevelt Early are members and trustees of the Crossett Health Foundation, an unincorporated, [*2] non-profit organization which owns and operates Ashley Memorial Hospital. Defendant Ashley Memorial is a primary care hospital located in Crossett, Arkansas, which serves as the only hospital within a circular geographic area within twenty-five miles of Crossett. Defendants doctors Burt, Gresham, Garcia, Rankin, Ripley (deceased), Walsh and Toon all practice, or at relevant times, practiced in Ashley County, Arkansas. Defendant Dr. Birriel joined the Ashley Memorial staff in 1989.

The events giving rise to this cause of action were initiated in June, 1985, when Mr. Norman Reynolds, who was then the hospital administrator at Ashley Memorial, told Al Smith, a nurse anesthetist, that the hospital intended to let Dr. Schueller "die on the vine" and bring in another surgeon, Dr. Posey. Sometime later in 1985, this statement was related by Smith to Dr. Schueller. In 1986, Ashley Memorial sued Dr. Schueller on a debt in Ashley County Circuit Court, and on April 24, 1987, Dr. Schueller filed a counterclaim, alleging, inter alia, that the agents, servants, and employees of Ashley Memorial tried to force him out of the gainful employment of his medical practice and force him to abandon [*3] his medical practice by putting unreasonable and restrictive restraints on his practice of medicine and use of the hospital. On October 13, 1987, Dr. Schueller amended his counterclaim, adding that to evidence this unlawful conduct on behalf of Ashley Memorial, he would show that Smith was told by the hospital administrator "don't worry about Schueller. The plan is to let him die on the vine and bring in Dr. Posey." Thereafter, on November 14, 1988, a judgment was entered in the case in favor of Ashley Memorial on both its complaint and Dr. Schueller's counterclaim. The counterclaim was dismissed with prejudice and costs were assessed against Dr. Schueller.

It is then alleged by defendants that on or about January 24, 1991, Dr. Schueller notified Jim Watters, administrator of Ashley Memorial that he would no longer examine or treat patients of defendant physicians in the hospital's emergency room and on January 28, 1991, Dr. Schueller allegedly refused to see a patient of Dr. Garcia in the emergency room. The following day Dr. Schueller was informed by Mr. Watters and Dr. Toon, chief of staff, that his refusal to see patients of other physicians was a deviation from accepted on-call [*4] practices and a special meeting of the medical staff was held on January 31, 1991, to address the emergency room physician on-call policy.

It is alleged that on March 20, 1991, Dr. Schueller sent a letter to Thomas Bartlett, Ashley Memorial administrator at that time, in which he stated his opinion that based on his review of a chart, another physician had made an incorrect diagnosis that led to "negative unnecessary exploratory laparotomy." On May 20, 1991, a committee of the medical staff met to consider eleven allegations of possible disruptive conduct by Dr. Schueller which might adversely affect patient care. Dr. Schueller was present for a portion of that hearing. In June, the medical staff adopted the findings of the committee and recommended to the Board of Governors that Dr. Schueller be reprimanded for conducting an unauthorized and inaccurate peer review and for making unauthorized disclosures of patients' names. The Board of Governors approved the recommendations and admonished Dr. Schueller to cooperate more closely with the staff and the board, be less divisive in his behavior and to follow staff guidelines for emergency room duties. Dr. Schueller was advised of this [*5] reprimand by letter on June 19, 1991.

Then on August 6, 1991, Dr. Schueller and Dr. Garcia had an altercation at Ashley Memorial which stemmed from Dr. Garcia's removal of beehives owned by Dr. Schueller from Dr. Garcia's premises.¹ [*6] Each doctor swore out arrest warrants against each other with the Crossett police. On August 7, 1991, Dr. Schueller was advised by letter from Dr. Toon and Mr. Bartlett that his staff privileges at Ashley Memorial had been summarily suspended.² Five days later, at a specially called meeting, the medical staff voted to recommend to the Board of Governors that Dr. Schueller's clinical privileges be revoked. On August 14, 1991, Dr. Schueller requested a hearing before the executive committee of the medical staff to review his summary suspension. In August 28, 1991, the medical staff voted to recommend a continuation of Dr. Schueller's suspension and a letter was mailed by Mr. Bartlett to Dr. Schueller advising him of this action and his right to a hearing. On September 3, 1991, Dr. Schueller requested a hearing.

¹ It is alleged by Dr. Schueller that Dr. Garcia was carrying a weapon and "pulled it" on Dr. Schueller during this confrontation.

² Dr. Garcia was also suspended and subsequently reinstated.

On September 20, 1991, a committee of the medical staff met to address six charges of improper conduct and disruptive behavior brought against Dr. Schueller. Dr. Schueller was in attendance during a portion of that meeting. Subsequent to the hearing, the committee voted to continue the summary suspension and revocation of Dr. Schueller's clinical privileges. The medical staff adopted these recommendations and referred the recommendations to the Board of Governors. On December 16, 1991, the Board of Governors at Ashley Memorial conducted a hearing to consider whether Dr. Schueller's privileges should be revoked at which Dr. Schueller was present with counsel. At the completion of the hearing, the Board voted to revoke Dr. Schueller's clinical privileges.

Plaintiff filed his action on June 16, 1992, alleging, inter alia, that defendants (1) have engaged in a continuing contract, combination, conspiracy, and/or concert of action to unreasonably restrain interstate trade and commerce in the area served by Ashley Memorial Hospital [*7] and have engaged in, or aided and abetted, a collective boycott of and refusal to deal with plaintiff, including the "professional peer review" proceedings instituted against plaintiff, in a successful attempt to deny surgical services to consumers in the geographic market in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act; and (2) have engaged in the monopolization of the practice of medicine at Ashley Memorial, denying plaintiff access to a facility which is essential to plaintiff's continued practice of medicine in violation of section two of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Plaintiff also contends that defendants have revoked plaintiff's clinical privileges at Ashley Memorial in violation of the Health Care Quality Improvement Act of 1986. Plaintiff contends that these actions have an adverse effect on competition in the geographic area and have completely and totally destroyed the value of plaintiff's medical practice. Plaintiff seeks damages, a permanent injunction enjoining defendants from further action, and reinstatement of his rights and privileges at Ashley Memorial.

B. Summary Judgment

HN1[] Summary judgment is appropriate only when there is no genuine issue of material fact, [*8] so that the dispute may be decided on purely legal grounds. Holloway v. Lockhart, 813 F.2d 874 (8th Cir. 1987); Fed. R. Civ. P. 56. The Supreme Court has issued the following guidelines for trial courts to determine whether this standard has been satisfied.

The inquiry performed is the threshold inquiry of determining whether there is a need for trial--whether, in other words, there are genuine factual issues that properly can be resolved only by a finder of fact because they may reasonably be resolved in favor of either party.

Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 106 S. Ct. 2505 (1986). See also Agristor Leasing v. Farrow, 826 F.2d 732 (8th Cir. 1987); Niagara of Wisconsin Paper Corp. v. Paper Industry Union-Management Pension Fund, 800 F.2d 742, 746 (8th Cir. 1986).

The Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals has advised trial courts that summary judgments should be cautiously invoked so that no person will be improperly deprived of a trial of disputed factual issues. Inland Oil & Transport Co. v. United States, 600 F.2d 725 (8th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 991, 62 L. Ed. 2d 420, 100 S. Ct. 522 (1979). The Court [*9] has recently reviewed the burdens of the respective parties in connection with a summary judgment motion. In Counts v. M.K.-Ferguson Co., 862 F.2d 1338 (8th Cir. 1988), the court stated:

HN2[] The burden on the party moving for summary judgment is only to demonstrate, i.e., '[to] point[] out to the District Court,' that the record does not disclose a genuine dispute on a material fact. It is enough for the movant to bring up the fact that the record does not contain such an issue and to identify that part of the record which bears out his assertion. Once this is done, his burden is discharged, and, if the record in fact bears out the claim that no genuine dispute exists on any material fact, it is then the respondent's burden to set forth affirmative evidence, specific facts, showing that there is a genuine dispute on that issue. If the respondent fails to carry that burden, summary judgment should be granted.

Id. at 1339, quoting, City of Mt. Pleasant v. Associated Elec. Coop., 838 F.2d 268, 273-74 (8th Cir. 1988) (citations omitted) (brackets in original).

However, the Court of Appeals for this circuit has also held that HN3 the court, in ruling on the motion [*10] for summary judgment, must give the non-moving party "the benefit of the reasonable inferences that can be drawn from the underlying facts." Fischer v. NWA, Inc., 883 F.2d 594, 598 (8th Cir. 1989) (citing Trnka v. Elanco Products, 709 F.2d 1223 (8th Cir. 1983)).

1. Crossett Health Foundation

As a preliminary matter with respect to defendant Crossett Health Foundation, defendants assert that plaintiff's complaint is fatally deficient as to the trustees of the foundation on several grounds. First, defendants contend that none of the above individuals are physicians or medical care providers. Second, defendants assert that plaintiff's complaint makes no specific allegations with respect to these individuals and that discovery has not uncovered any such evidence. And last, defendants contend that none of the foundation trustees had any involvement with respect to the revocation of plaintiff's medical staff privileges. Thus, defendants contend that the trustees of the Crossett Health Foundation are entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

In response, plaintiff first contends that there is no law requiring that conspirators be physicians to incur liability under the Sherman [*11] Act as defendants have implied. Plaintiff also notes that if their status is relevant, there is no evidence that the trustees either are or are not physicians or medical care providers and thus a question of fact remains as to their status. Plaintiff then contends that the trustees are capable of conspiring with the hospital under the theory that a corporation can conspire with directors, officers or employees when they act on their own behalf rather than in their capacities as agents for the corporation.

In reply, defendants contend that plaintiff has churned up "unsubstantiated, self-serving facts to suggest" that the trustees were involved in the alleged misconduct, missing the point that his complaint states no facts, claims or causes of action against these individuals. Since all of plaintiff's claims seem to be aimed at Ashley Memorial and the defendant physicians, defendants contend that the trustee defendants should be dismissed.

The court agrees with defendants, finding no facts pled by plaintiff in his complaint and no evidence in the record that the named trustees of the Crossett Health Foundation were in any way involved in the alleged unlawful conduct. Moreover, there [*12] has been no allegation that the trustees of the unincorporated, non-profit organization have incurred liability under any other theory. The court finds, therefore, that defendants Clair Norman, Herman Hamilton, Jr, William S. Arnold, Ned Hastings and Roosevelt Early should be and hereby are dismissed from this action.

2. Collateral Estoppel and Res Judicata

Defendants then contend that plaintiff's antitrust claims are barred by collateral estoppel and res judicata, stating that on April 24, 1987, plaintiff filed a counterclaim in the Ashley County Circuit Court case of Crossett Health Foundation d/b/A Ashley Memorial Hospital v. Steven C. Schueller, No. 86-249-1 (the "state court action"). Defendants contend that plaintiff's allegations in this lawsuit are plainly identical to those issues raised in the state court action, as reflected in plaintiff's amended counterclaim filed on October 13, 1987. Defendants further contend that on November 14, 1988, an Ashley County jury found against plaintiff on his breach of contract counterclaim, noting that the Ashley County Circuit Court previously had directed a verdict against plaintiff on the remainder of his counterclaims. [*13] Thus, defendants argue that plaintiff has done nothing more than "window dress" his prior state law claims as violations of the Sherman Antitrust Act in a blatant attempt to relitigate his claims. Defendants request that plaintiff's claims be dismissed under the theory of either collateral estoppel or res judicata.³

In his response, plaintiff contends that his counterclaim and participation in the 1987 state court action has no preclusive effect upon his current antitrust claims as these claims could not have been raised in the state court action as a matter of the "jurisdictional competency requirement." Plaintiff argues that in light of Supreme Court precedent, Arkansas' preclusionary law is inapplicable to plaintiff's Sherman Antitrust Act claims because [*14] jurisdiction over those claims is vested exclusively within federal courts. Plaintiff argues that as the Ashley County Circuit Court never had jurisdiction of plaintiff's antitrust claims, any ruling in the underlying state court action could have no preclusive effect in this action.

Defendants have replied to this response, citing a decision of the Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit as support for their conclusion that plaintiff cannot simply restyle as federal claims the claims which he previously lost in state court. Requesting that the court put form over substance when reviewing plaintiff's federal complaint and state law counterclaims, defendants again argue that plaintiff's action should be dismissed under the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel.

In Marrese v. American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons, 470 U.S. 373, 105 S. Ct. 1327, 84 L. Ed. 2d 274 (1985), the Supreme Court stated that HN4[] the preclusive effect of a state court judgment in a subsequent federal lawsuit generally is determined by the full faith and credit statute, which provides that state judicial proceedings "shall have the same full faith and credit in every court within the [15] United States . . . as they have by law or usage in the courts of such State . . . from which they are taken." 28 U.S.C. § 1738. This statute directs a federal court to refer to the preclusion law of the State in which judgment was rendered. "It has long been established that § 1738 does not allow federal courts to employ their own rules of res judicata in determining the effects of state judgments. Rather, it goes beyond the common law and commands a federal court to accept the rules chosen by the State from which the judgment is taken." Kremer v. Chemical Constr. Corp., 456 U.S. 461, 481-82, 72 L. Ed. 2d 262, 102 S. Ct. 1883, (1982); see also Allen v. McCurry, 449 U.S. 90, 96, 66 L. Ed. 2d 308, 101 S. Ct. 411 (1980).

470 U.S. at 380. Like the case presently before the court, Marrese involved federal antitrust claims and the Marrese opinion directly addressed plaintiff's contention that since exclusive jurisdiction over antitrust claims lies within federal court, such claims cannot be barred, as a matter of law, by previous state court judgments:

The fact that petitioner's antitrust claim is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal courts does [*16] not necessarily make § 1738 inapplicable to this case. Our decisions indicate that a state court judgment may in some circumstances have preclusive effect in a subsequent action within the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal courts. . . . § 1738 requires a federal court to look first to state preclusion law in determining the preclusive effects of a state court judgment.

Id. at 380-81. However, the Court found that HN5[] "with respect to matters that were not decided in the state proceedings, we note that claim preclusion generally does not apply where 'the plaintiff was unable to rely on a certain theory of the case or to seek a certain remedy because of the limitations on the subject matter jurisdiction of the courts.'" Id. at 382, citing Restatement (Second) of Judgments § 26(1)(c) (1982). Thus, "if state preclusion law includes this requirement of jurisdictional competency, which is generally true, a state judgment will not have claim preclusive effect on a cause of action within the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal courts." Id. at 382.

³ Defendants note that although the individual defendants in this case were not parties to the previous state court action, defendants argue that the doctrines still apply because the other defendants were in privity with the Ashley Memorial Hospital.

In determining what Arkansas' preclusion law provides, the court looks to the decision of Crockett & Brown, P.A. v. J*17 Wilson, 314 Ark. 578, 864 S.W.2d 244 \(1993\), where the Arkansas Supreme Court discussed res judicata and collateral estoppel as follows:

HN6[] Res judicata, or claim preclusion, bars subsequent action on the same claim where a final judgment has been rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction. Toran v. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co., 297 Ark. 415, 764 S.W.2d 40 \(1989\) (citing Restatement of Judgments, 2d, § 19 (1982)). Four elements must be met for res judicata to apply: (1) the first suit must have resulted in a final judgment on the merits, (2) the first suit must be based on proper jurisdiction, (3) both suits must involve the same cause of action, and (4) both suits must involve the same parties or their privies. Robinson v. Buie, 307 Ark. 112, 817 S.W.2d 431 \(1991\).

HN7[] Collateral estoppel, or issue preclusion, bars relitigation of issues, law or fact, actually litigated in the first suit. See Toran v. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co. supra. For collateral estoppel to apply, the following elements must be met: (1) the issue sought to be precluded must be the same as that involved in the prior litigation, (2) that issue must have been actually [*18] litigated, (3) the issue must have been determined by a valid and final judgment, and (4) the determination must have been essential to the judgment. Fisher v. Jones, 311 Ark. 450, 844 S.W.2d 954 \(1993\).

HN8[] If under Arkansas law, plaintiff is precluded from litigating his claims in state court, he cannot pursue them in federal court unless the prior state proceeding did not provide plaintiff with a full and fair opportunity to present his claims. Gahr v. Trammel, 796 F.2d 1063, 1066 \(8th Cir. 1986\) (citations omitted). A party receives a fair opportunity to present the claims allegedly precluded if the party could have brought the claims in a proceeding that would satisfy the minimal procedural requirements of the due process clause. Kremer v. Chemical Constr. Corp., 456 U.S. 461, 481, 102 S. Ct. 1883, 72 L. Ed. 2d 262 \(1981\).

The court agrees with plaintiff that he cannot be precluded from pursuing a claim that he neither could nor did raise in the prior state proceeding. The doctrine of res judicata seeks to put an end to vexatious litigation; it does not seek to prevent an injured party from reaching the courthouse doors on a claim neither litigated nor litigable [*19] in the prior lawsuit. See Gahr, 796 F.2d at 1067. HN9[] Arkansas' preclusion law requires that the state court have proper jurisdiction over a claim before an adjudication of that claim precludes subsequent litigation. Clearly, as HN10[] jurisdiction over Sherman Antitrust Act claims lies exclusively within federal court, the state court did not have proper jurisdiction and thus plaintiff's antitrust claims were not litigable in the prior lawsuit. The court finds, therefore, that plaintiff's claims are not barred by either res judicata or collateral estoppel and summary judgment on this theory is hereby denied.

3. Health Care Quality Improvement Act of 1986

The court notes that this appears to be a case of first impression in the Eighth Circuit in which defendants in a federal antitrust action seek judgment by asserting immunity under provisions of the Health Care Quality Improvement Act of 1986 ("HCQIA"). Stating that the HCQIA was enacted as a means of encouraging professional peer review by protecting participants from private civil litigation - specifically federal antitrust claims - defendants contend that the basis of plaintiff's antitrust lawsuit is the peer review which [*20] ultimately resulted in the revocation of plaintiff's hospital privileges. Alleging that the professional peer review action met all of the standards specified by the HCQIA as required for immunity and alleging further that the peer review is entitled to a statutory presumption of compliance with the standards, defendants contend that they are immune from any potential antitrust liability under provisions of the HCQIA.⁴

⁴ Defendants also contend that count four of plaintiff's complaint, brought against only Ashley Memorial Hospital, asserting that the hospital violated the HCQIA, fails to state a claim for which relief can be granted because the HCQIA does not provide for an

[*21] Plaintiff's first contention in response is that the immunity provided by the HCQIA is limited only to liability for money damages and does not bar plaintiff's request for injunctive relief. Plaintiff then contends that under the facts and circumstances of this case there is no immunity under HCQIA for liability for money damages, stating that the basis of his claims are not "peer review" as characterized by defendants.

Instead, plaintiff urges that the basis for his complaint is defendants' continuing, uninterrupted pattern of unlawful conduct from 1985-1991 in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Plaintiff contends that the "peer review" conducted in 1991 was nothing more than the final step in a series of mutually dependent acts beginning in 1985 with the "die on the vine" statement. Plaintiff further argues that defendants may not use the HCQIA to insulate themselves from antitrust liability for unlawful conduct occurring in 1985-1991 by conducting the professional "peer review" proceedings in 1991. In support, plaintiff refers the court to the legislative history of the HCQIA, stating the HCQIA provides immunity only for those instances where physicians injure their patients [*22] through incompetent or unprofessional service and does not provide immunity from prior unlawful conduct. Plaintiff argues that the alleged "peer review" was nothing more than a part of a continuing, integrated pattern and plan of unlawful conduct in violation of the antitrust laws. Plaintiff contends that this unlawful conduct on behalf of defendants cannot, under the facts and circumstances of this case, be immunized by the HCQIA.

Plaintiff also challenges defendants' assertion that the alleged "peer review" proceedings were adequate under the provisions of the HCQIA, stating that the hearing procedures must be "fair under the circumstances." Plaintiff contends that the panel which recommended revocation of plaintiff's clinical privileges was composed of his direct economic competitors, persons with the ability to take significant amounts of business away from each other, and was therefore tainted. Thus, plaintiff argues that he has more than adequately satisfied the standards to overcome the statutory presumption of professional peer review legitimacy. Plaintiff concludes that there are genuine issues of fact regarding whether plaintiff's clinical privileges were terminated by his [*23] direct economic competitors for reasons of professional competency or for anti-competitive purposes.

By way of reply, defendants again contend that the HCQIA bars plaintiff's request for relief, restating their position that plaintiff's action rests upon the "peer review" proceedings and that those proceedings, first entitled to a presumption of validity, met each of the statutory requirements for immunity. Defendants contend that plaintiff has presented no facts which rebut the statutory presumption of validity with respect to those proceedings. Additionally, defendants criticize plaintiff's characterization of the peer review panel as "direct economic competitors," noting plaintiff's prior argument that he was the only member of the Ashley Memorial staff board certified in surgery. Nevertheless, assuming that other physicians at Ashley Memorial performed limited surgical procedures, defendants contend that these physicians are not "direct economic competitors" of plaintiff and thus the peer review panel was not tainted. Even if the panel had contained such competitors, defendants contend that this alone does not bar the immunity found within the HCQIA.

First, the court finds plaintiff's [*24] argument that his action is not based upon the professional peer review conducted by members of the Ashley Memorial staff to be completely without merit. Examination of plaintiff's complaint immediately reveals that plaintiff is challenging not only the peer review process and proceedings but also the final decision of the Board of Governors to revoke his clinical privileges at Ashley Memorial, characterizing

